Be yourself when you plan your rooms!

Mrs. M. J. B.'s favorite colors are red and chartreuse. So we chose as a base for the color scheme a floor of Armstrong's No. 027 Red Marbelle, set off by rows of chartreuse stars. Wall is Armstrong's No. 705 Peach Linowall, joined to floor by easy-to-clean, round cornered linoleum cove base. Tones of these same colors complete the scheme. Like it?

Mrs. R. M. told us her favorite colors are blue and yellow... so aptly expressed in this Armstrong's No. 5702 Embossed Inlaid Linoleum floor. Wall is Armstrong's No. 772 Daisy Yellow Linowall, a durable material that, like linoleum, saves work. A damp cloth keeps it spick-and-span. Easy-to-clean rounded cove base is Armstrong's No. 30 Midnight Blue.

BEFORE we planned this bathroom, we asked three different women to tell us their favorite colors. Then we decorated the same room three different ways, to show how your own rooms can express your individuality.

For your best guide in decorating your home is—yourself! Start with the colors you like. And start with a floor of Armstrong's Linoleum that lets you carry out your color scheme in correct good taste. Armstrong's Linoleum today offers you the widest range of color and pattern. You can even design your own floors if you wish!

Your local linoleum merchant will tell you the whole story—and demonstrate how Armstrong floors last for years when permanently cemented over cushioning felt.

For additional help in planning rooms that express you, write for "Tomorrow's Ideas in Home Decoration," a new, 30-page book of personality rooms illustrated in color. Sent for 10¢ (outside U. S. A., 40¢). Armstrong Cork Company, Floor Div., 4106 Pine St., Lancaster, Pa. (Makers of cork products since 1860)

Look for the name Armstrong's on the back of the goods you buy.

Mrs. C. L. S. likes blue and black. So we started this color scheme with Armstrong's No. 0475 Straight Line Inlaid Linoleum, set off by two wide black strips. Cove base is Armstrong's No. 27 Black Linoleum. Note the rounded corners for cleaning ease. Our second key color is found on the wall—Armstrong's No. 771 Light Azure Linowall, another clean-easy feature. Complete listing of this room's furnishings sent to you free on request. Just write.

THE AMERICAN HOME, JUNE, 1941

“Well, everyone was doing it... so...”

I inspected Grace's new guest room and saw 'em—

I spent the weekend with Mary and she had 'em, too—
Jean built her whole linen closet around 'em.

Everyone was buying percale sheets! Everyone—luxuriating in those smart, smooth, gleaming percale sheets! Except me!

“My friends can't all be getting rich enough to buy percale,” I figured. So I looked—and learned. These sheets were genuine Cannon Percale sheets, yet they actually cost about the same as heavy-duty muslin! No wonder everybody has stepped up to percale. No wonder I joined the wise ones—and got lovely, luxurious Cannon Percale sheets for every bed in my house!

Consumers' guide for sheet buying in the May-June white sales

What is the difference between muslin and percale? There is a difference both in “thread count” and in the quality of cotton used. For example, Cannon Percale Sheets are woven with 25% more threads to the square inch than the best-grade muslin. A better grade of cotton is used in Cannon Percale. The threads are finer and more highly twisted. The sheet is lighter, and has a smoother, more luxurious texture than muslin.

How does percale wear in comparison to muslin? We talked with a large number of women who had used both muslin and Cannon Percale Sheets. Of these women, 14.2% thought muslin wore better than percale. But 40.5% thought Cannon Percale wore better than muslin! The rest were not sure.

Can I save any money with Cannon Percale Sheets? If you send your sheets to a laundry, Cannon Percale Sheets, because they're lighter, can actually save you about $3.25 a year for each bed, at average pound rates.

If I do my washing at home, will I find any advantage in Cannon Percale? Definitely. You'll find these lighter sheets easier to handle and to iron, than muslin. They launder beautifully, and always keep their dazzling whiteness.

For FREE booklet—“What do you know about sheets?”—write to Cannon Mills, Inc., 70 Worth St., New York, N. Y.

Your store also has big-value Cannon Muslin Sheets at a low popular price.

"Hooray! I want to shout from the House-Tops!"

Hooray — why so excited?

Why, Sue — that's my cousin — she just got engaged!

Oh, bless your heart, I know that! I brought the proposal myself, when Jim was half a continent away!

Well, for goodness sakes! And now how loud shall I shout so every one will know?

Don't shout at all! With me in the house, good news travels everywhere. Sue's already told her best friends — and Granny, first of all!

Well, I do declare — you're the biggest help we have!

Your mother says so, too! She says I have brought you so much fun and have solved so many problems that she just couldn't do without me. Especially when it costs so little to have me handy all the time.

GRADUATION DAY

An Old American Institution

NOW, in June—at the time when the whine of the scythe-sharpener is heard across the fields and the sweet smell of clover drifts through open windows—all over America, graduation exercises are being held in High School Auditoriums.

You hear the glee club singing and the measured voice of the Reverend Doctor saying the invocation. You see yourself as you were years ago standing in the same kind of group, on the same sort of stage—holding the ribboned white diploma in your hand. Festooned overhead were the class colors in gay crepe paper—white for purity, blue for loyalty! And in big cardboard letters, tufted with moss and field flowers, hung the class motto—"Onward and Upward," perhaps, or "The Will To Do and Dare."

How very stern and grand the young men looked in their Sunday suits and tall, stiff collars! But after all, they were merely a background for the girls. Slim priestesses before the altar of learning, they seemed, in their long, full-skirted organdie frocks, garlanded with row on row of lace and touched off with elegant silver-spangled white fans.

AND what mighty problems were solved on the platform that night! "Is life worth living?" thundered Tommy Pearson. "Hitch your wagon to a star," advised shy Nellie Watson for thirty terrified minutes. And even prim Effie Sharp was heard to snifle when "Red" Waples, in a deep, hushed voice, ended his valedictory with—"Classmates, we must part. With quivering lips, trembling hands, tearful eyes and sorrowful hearts, we say a s-a-a-d, s-a-a-d farewell."

TIMES have changed . . . but Graduation Day, as an old American institution, has lost no whit of its glamour, charm and deep significance. Here at the House of Heinz, these picturesque memories serve to recall our own long history, and the many generations of graduates, and mothers and grandmothers of graduates we have been privileged to serve for more than 70 years.

TO THEIR intelligence and fine creative talent in the arts of home cooking, we owe many a prized recipe—many exquisite nuances of spicing and flavor that have made our 57 Varieties renowned throughout the world.

LOOK back far enough into the history of our delicious home-style soups, our oven-baked beans, or the crispy jade slices of cucumber pickle that bear our name—and somewhere along the line you'll find a sunny home kitchen where these delicacies were first made extra toothsome . . . and where our own chefs first learned the ABC's of simple, wholesome American cookery at its best.

Dear Reader,

LET'S go exploring, you and I. Why leave all the fun and thrill of discovery to the experts and professionals in the field? If you think that the job has been done so thoroughly that there are no hinterlands left to conquer, or that this is no time for overseas travel, my answer is . . .

Let's stay right at home and rediscover America! Perhaps, as a conscientious newspaper and magazine reader and a faithful listener to your favorite radio commentator, you feel that you have a pretty fair picture of this country of ours. It may at times look to you like a hectic mix-up of Congress, selective service rookies, strikes, Hollywood, war relief drives, taxes, and baseball. But those are only a part of it, albeit a very articulate and journalistogenic part—if only there were such a word.

But the America I'm thinking of is the part that means home to a hundred and thirty million people. It is the houses they live in—and the way they live in them; the things they and their families do; the things or places they go to see, or set their hearts on seeing; the way they work and play; the way they make money and spend it, waste it, or give it to others. To discover that America you start right in your own neighborhood; in its houses, stores, streets, buses, subways. You study the people around you, those you know and those you don't. You open your eyes wider, listen more carefully, rely more upon your own powers of observation, deduction, and analysis. You view things more impersonally—not because you are less interested, but because, on the contrary, you are more concerned—because you are viewing them as they affect you and your living.

So we've chosen that theme song for this issue: REDISCOVERING AMERICA. Frankly, we cannot think of anything more important right now to us Americans or, for that matter, to the rest of the free world. And we are confident that those who follow this trail will find that it leads, not to a fabulous pot of gold, but to inestimable treasure of another kind—an inexhaustible mine of Faith and Freedom.

We cannot hope to guide you throughout your rediscovery tour. You wouldn't want us to. You will want to blaze your own trail. But we do want in these pages to set up a few sign posts, reveal a few vistas, fit you out with some charts, set you on your course, and call your attention to some of the things that America is doing to broaden and enrich the home life of its people.

Right at the beginning, which means the acquisition or the building of a home, the F.H.A. and other helpful modern agencies are functioning to make home investments increasingly available and safe. No doubt the perfect house has yet to be designed; however, good design and intelligent planning are playing a larger part than ever before, especially in the development of small, moderate-cost properties. Simplicity, compactness, charm, and common sense are increasingly evident, both indoors and out, with the result that upkeep is easier and cheaper, and families find time to really enjoy their homes instead of having to devote most of their energies to maintaining them.

There has been more progress in architecture and interior design, they say, than in home landscaping which is, perhaps, natural, horticulture being a conservative craft. Yet landscape architects and garden designers are also gaining new heights of skill, fitness, and good taste. And the increasing number of consultants ready to undertake small jobs for very nominal fees and the growing realization of the wisdom of budgeting and planning in advance for landscape work mark the advent of a new era of essentially American gardens and harmoniously developed home settings.

Walter L. Greene

Much has been said of late about the magnificent job done in the United States in the field of fashion since Paris abdicated as style center. As much can and should be said about what has happened in decorating and furnishing. True, those industries never leaned quite as heavily upon foreign sources, but whereas owners were wont to say proudly, "This is imported," when showing off some lovely new printed linen draperies or a new shaggy rug, today we can say, with even greater pride, "This was made in the United States"—and let us not forget to say it. Thousands of citizens are devoting their lives and abilities to the task of providing for American homes fabrics to drape our windows and cover our furniture, floor coverings and furniture to suit our rooms and our moods, lighting fixtures that are as scientifically correct as they are charming, mirrors, ornaments, clocks, china, tableware, and countless other things, all both useful and beautiful. Along with this beauty has come greater ease and opportunity to enjoy it. American housewives are no longer domestic slaves. Modern kitchen and housekeeping equipment not dreamed of a century ago gives equally unprecedented freedom for recreation, self-improvement, and useful service activities. The modern kitchen is arranged and equipped to really assist in the performance of daily tasks and the use of time-saving, automatically controlled devices is doubly justified because they mean a saving in dollars and cents as well as in energy. The blue has been taken out of Monday; the day of the rightly named sad-iron has gone; cleaning day has lost much of its former, sinister meaning. Amazing, too, the progress made in connection with the production and transportation of food for the home, and its preparation for use with a minimum of effort, waste, and expense. The freezing of vegetables, fruits, meats, and fish is but one of the recently perfected methods of providing the housewife with superior products and delicacies out of season but not out of reach of the average homemaker's purse.

That's the America we're thinking of. Come on, let's rediscover it!

In order for you to appreciate what THE AMERICAN HOME means to me, please let me indulge in a little autobiography.

I have been married for ten years. For about seven of those ten years I have been scared to death. Frightened by insecurity . . . by those things that frighten anybody who is unprepared for the collapse of a wall; of responsibility brought on by a family of four youngsters and a pinch-hit job that seems to be a grand port after a storm.

One of the most difficult problems with children is finding a place to rent in the lower priced group where children are tolerated. Like millions of other people, I was turned down dozens of times because of the children, and the poor children were blamed for most everything. Like millions of others, it seemed that we just couldn't do any better than keep the children well fed, clothed, and reasonably happy on my husband's salary. The hope of ever saving enough to make a payment on a house just seemed too, too much. Like everybody else in our circumstances, I do all my own work and I honestly love it.

For several years I have kept a scrapbook. In it are pasted pictures cut from your own little book. Sometimes going through the pages of your brain child, I could boot people who try to tell us that something can be got for nothing. Sometimes, I'd like to know the people. Sometimes I feel bitter over it because those people seem to know so little about really living on a shoe-string and trying to fight for dreams. I am jealous of them because they have managed to get what they wanted when we worked so hard and things seemed in such a confounded rut.

Well, the chance came. We bought the house we've been dreaming about. We didn't have a down payment but we are paying it off the first year with the other payments. It is a little salt-box Colonial about two hundred and fifty years old. It will be a year before we can do any repairs. We are very much delighted, because by that time we will be ready to make them. Taking paint off takes time, and then there are twelve more issues of THE AMERICAN HOME, with new suggestions, in the offing.

When we got in we made many discoveries. In the first place there were two beams in mid-air left by the plumber when the bathroom was put in two years ago. We had a contractor out and he said it would cost twenty dollars to jack them up and rebuild the foundation. We didn't have twenty dollars. My husband borrowed a contractor's jack and got a little sand and a bag of cement. The contractor told us it would cost fifty dollars to put clapboards across the back and fix a corner. My husband fixed the corner and, come the time we have fifteen dollars, he is going to put the clapboards up himself. A mason said it would cost us ten dollars to repoint the chimney. My husband climbed up, with his chest expanded over the beam experience, and did the chimney.

If I were editing your magazine I would write like this:

"Dear Reader:

"I know you will find lots of pictures in my little book that make you dream and scheme. Don't let any of those dreams go. Don't let the lack of money frighten you because it is our heritage to be resourceful. There are so many things we can do for ourselves that we never dreamed we could do. If you long for a little place of your own with all your heart, don't be afraid to start from scratch. Don't be afraid to do without things you have always taken for granted. Create within your mind and heart

Gilbert Stuart

THE SNUFF MAKER'S SON

THE Land and Title Records of North Kingstown, R. I. show that on November 5th, 1751 Gilbert Stuart, a Scotch millwright, entered into partnership with two gentlemen of Newport for the purpose of erecting a snuff mill on the Petaquamscott in the vicinity of Narragansett. Here the snuff maker built his home, a two-story frame house with a gambrel roof. It was in the northeast bedroom that Gilbert Stuart, the portrait painter, was born on December 3rd, 1755.

Gilbert's father sold his interest in the snuff mill about 1761 and moved with his family to Newport, where they lived in what the artist later referred to as "a hovel on Bannister's Wharf". At the age of thirteen Gilbert was drawing portraits in black lead and one of his pastels, made in his early teens, may be seen at the Essex Institute at Salem. His first really serious work was done in the studio of the Scotch artist, Cosmo Alexander, who came to Newport to paint portraits of several of the city's well-to-do citizens. Later Stuart accompanied his instructor to Scotland and failing to support himself, after his master's death, worked his passage home aboard a collier.

Soon after his return to Newport and while Gilbert was pursuing his art and studying music, his father, who was a Royalist, fled to Nova Scotia leaving his family behind. His property was soon confiscated, and Gilbert, sailing for England just before the Battle of Bunker Hill, found himself penniless walking the streets of London. He appealed to Benjamin West for assistance and was put to work, copying, in the latter's studio. Here he remained for several years, helping West in the painting of some of his huge canvasses.

Upon reaching the age of thirty, Stuart married and in 1788 went to Ireland where he painted a number of successful portraits. In 1793 he returned to America. His success was immediate and he worked diligently in New York and Philadelphia, executing the many commissions given him by some of the great men and beautiful women of those early days.

Stuart was extravagant in his expenditures and upon his death left little but some half-finished portraits. His body lies somewhere in Boston Common, the exact spot being unknown. A tablet upon the railing of the Common, shown at the left, identifies the artist as the "Painter of the portraits of Washington, Louis XVI and George III" and contains also the following words: "This tablet placed by the Paint and Clay Club 1897".

what you are denied outwardly and somehow those dreams can be real. . . ."

And so, dear editor, if you have got this far, it is over. I just hope you continue writing about people who are trying to live on a low income. I hope you continue to publish pictures of rooms and furniture that can be built by the handy husband. After all, our kind knows a good bit more of living than those who are less blessed by having everything handed them on that silver platter.—K. A. B., Haverhill, Mass.

—And now, a sequel to the foregoing. . .

Early last week, I brought home some little decorated flower pots to fill for my next door neighbors—an aged couple from England. On returning them, I was invited to have a cup of tea and see what the leaves had to say. "In a span of three days you will receive a letter from a stranger containing a gift of money. It will be a complete surprise and, while not a large sum, it will mean more in happiness to you than a large sum." So the teacup said only a few days ago.

And then this morning came your letter! I am so excited over it, there was no sense in trying to get the cleaning done before I answered it. I wandered from room to room looking at the dust and disorder as though I didn't know anything about it. Of course, you may use that letter, but I do hope you will delete my slang, as I am prone to chat along without any dignity. The check is that "gift" and it will pay for the five bundles of clapboards that my husband will put up. Imagine my "busting into print"! And the local lumber company won't feel so bad about it, either. Thank you very much, Mrs. Austin, for your kind reception of my letter, for wanting to use it, and for the five bundles of clapboards.—K. A. B.

DEAR EDITOR,

In several editions of your very excellent magazine, I have read articles captioned, "Live In The Country—If," or "Build In The Country—But." For the benefit of some of your more timid readers who desire a rural life, I should like to add some arguments in their behalf.

Twenty-two years ago, my father purchased a pretty brown house and three acres of ground about eighteen miles out of Detroit; and a more enthusiastic family could not be found than the three people who moved into that little house. Three years later, when the little house had to be sold, three heavier hearts would have been hard to find. And through the years of growing from a sixteen-year-old girl to a thirty-four-year-old mother I have had the desire to return some day with my own children to another little brown house in the country.

I should like to follow, paragraph by paragraph, an article in your February issue and, drawing facts from my memories of the past and plans for the future, give a picture of country life as it can be.

Twenty-two years ago, the well-paved roads were few and narrow. Today broad highways reach to all parts of our state, with well-garveled roads branching in all directions. I can remember dad crawling from the driver's seat and stepping knee deep in snow-drifts to help the obliging farmer hitch his team to our bumper. For the last five years, my husband, who drives over half of Michigan, has yet to be pulled out of drifts.

In choosing a location, it is only sensible to take into consideration one's work. Living in the country does not need to mean miles from nowhere; rather, just into the breathing space which can be found not far from any large city if one really looks for it.

Last-minute flat tires never bothered mother and dad, perhaps because they did not wait until the last minute to start. Dad always allowed an extra half hour for the unforeseen, and I have noticed that when one is prepared for emergencies, they seldom arise.

Paragraph number five mentions the loss of friends. If this, to a certain extent, could only be true! There is nothing more enticing to the city-dweller than a friend in the country, and they come in hordes, especially if one has a lake near. I can see mother put on her company smile, somewhat strained, as the seventh carload would drive in on Sunday, to bring our total of guests to twenty-five or thirty. Sometimes they brought their own lunch, more often our own well-stocked cupboard supplied their needs. Some were old friends and were always welcome; many were acquaintances, and some were just friends of friends of friends of ours.

As for the child of the rural home-owner, I hardly know where to begin. My own two boys are past the kindergarten stage, being seven and ten years of age. But they have had experience with both city and country schools. True, our younger did not do well in the rural school and were I to do it over again, I would not send him until he was past the baby stage. I would teach him as much as possible at home and when he was ready, with the co-operation of the country school teacher—and from experience I have found these girls eager to help—my son would soon find his rightful place. Country children may be rough and tumble, but their fun is healthy. Mother's little precious may get his curls mussed up a bit, but he will never be hurt by the sophisticated snobbery that is all too prevalent in our city schools. My oldest boy was inclined to be a "nice boy," and when I had to turn him over to the country boys, I, too, had qualms. But my son is still a "nice boy," and his circle of friends embraces many of those boys he learned to like.

SUGAR-CURING

BIG DIFFERENCE!

And now for minor annoyances, such as softened water, garbage, etc. I have used hard water for many years and lived in the city while doing so. So that will not bother me, and when we have the necessary funds there is nothing to stop us from having our own water softener. Dad always buried our garbage in a deep hole. Clean vegetable parings made good fertilizer for our garden. As for one delivery of mail a day, one receives enough at one time to make other deliveries unnecessary.

One important item overlooked in your article is electricity. If it is used for cooking, be sure to purchase a small kerosene stove for that rare occasion when an electrical or sleet storm may temporarily disrupt your comfort. I can well remember the morning dad made coffee and toast in the furnace. Neither was much good but we didn't care, for the whole countryside was sparkling with diamonds. It was a feast of beauty and a few hours later the lines had been repaired. We did not even have to miss our evening dinner, and all this took place twenty-two years ago.

The things that are gratis—the apple tree in full bloom—a full moon on a summer's night, turning commonplace views into enchanted fairy-lands—the first spring morning—a midsummer morning when all the world is full of bird song—these are not free, they are yours only when you feel their beauty and love and cherish them.

Our garden was small and compact, and I hope to have one like it. Dad did not plant at random but studied our small plot until every inch of it was planted wisely. We had berries, fruits, vegetables, and melons.

And so to the timid readers I shall say, there will be annoyances no matter where you live. But you will never find in the city with its advantages, the thrill of crawling into your soft bed, with your windows opened wide to the fragrant, clean, country air, and your tired mind lulled to sleep by a bullfrog lullaby.—A. M. J., Lansing, Mich.

DEAR EDITOR,

The attached really started out to be a billet-doux but took on airs in the composing.—PAUL S. LEEPER, Denison, Texas.

In the incredulous days just before our entry into the first World War, Woodrow Wilson, trying to probe the mind of America, said rather wearily that he would give anything to know just what the people were thinking about. With the promptness of a rebound a Chicago newspaper was accommodated him with: "Probably Mary Pickford's next picture."

Today, for obvious reasons, no such quip would apply. The nation knows that sacrifice is ahead, even though there is yet an air of unreality about it. Because we have from our very beginnings the legend of Doomsday, every great war has whispered of the end of the world.

What must we give up? Who at this moment knows the answer to that? Who at its beginning knows the ultimate extent of any storm? But in any cataclysm reality acts like an acid, eating through pretense until it meets the foundation of our life, and there a test is made which determines the destiny of a people, so that at length even so honest a question as the one above may come to sound rhetorical. It may become: What must we keep?

And the true answer to that cannot come from the mere political theorist or the mere profiteer. It can come only from the simplicity of a great man like Cobbett, who urged the early American squires to maintain honor, courage, and hospitality; or it can come in chorus from nostalgic men—for Ivor Novello must have known that his Keep the Home Fires Burning was in reality the voice of an almost infinite host and that he was but the amanuensis.

We remember the classic tragedy of the Greek conqueror who returned to discover his native scene unbearably changed, and we know how much happier was Pierre Loti, back from the seas in the autumn of his life, to find inviolate the little stone fountain in the garden of his childhood.

As one, then (to put a point on it), for whom the home is first because it came so near to being last, I think that if I were reduced in meat to a commonality with Fido I should still want to read about the remembering Down Easter who reproduced in a western land something of his native New England; or about the fine fanatic who forced a house to compromise with a tree; or about the young couple who, to the shame of so many of us, raised a dwelling with their own bare hands, achieving thereby something that startles the architect and stirs to warmth a folk memory; or about the exquisite accomplishment of remodeling a gracious old house without driving away the household gods. All these things and many more. And those yet to come.

For these are adventures in the illimitable realm of the human spirit; they are of the first and last, the smallest and the greatest, domain; they are in the highest humor of which our race is capable, and they make a neighborhood of a continent.

So—even if the baker's tenth part of a dollar should be terribly hard to come by—I'll keep their journal!

What's Your PLEASURE?

Your rediscovery of America should start in your own dooryard. But it can lead you far afield. And, following it, you can indulge your vacation wanderlust

Ewing Galloway

WHEN you start planning or thinking about a vacation, what does the word really mean to you? How do you finally decide on where you will go, how you will get there, how long you will stay? What objectives do you have in mind? What do you hope and expect to bring back with you on your return? How do you finally measure its success? On what do you base your decision whether you will do it again next year, or try something else?

One quite popular theory seems to be that, above all, a holiday should bring change, variety, a break in the routine pattern of existence; new scenes, new faces, new activities, new interests. But that might mean, for a commuting business man, a fortnight's opportunity to do nothing more than stay quietly at home, puttering in garden, garage, or workshop, freed from the necessity for traveling, the nag of an hourly schedule, the sense of servitude to a job or anything but his own inclinations. And why shouldn't it? Is that much to ask after fifty weeks of toil in office or shop?

On the other hand, where does that sort of vacation get his wife, whose routine centers around the home that he sees and enjoys mostly around the edges of the day and at week ends? How about her chance to get away from housekeeping, daily ordering, dusting, mending, and cooking, afternoons of bridge, meetings, and the everlastingly same—no matter how neighborly—neighbors? And how about the youngsters? Will it be the right sort of change for them just to be home from boarding school and among a different group of playmates, or do they definitely need and deserve a trip to green fields and pastures new—supplied, perhaps, by an exposition in a distant big city, a cottage on lake or seashore, a shack or tent in the woods, a fascinating fortnight at some nature camp or Boy or Girl Scout convocation? And shall the vacation be arranged to get them all away from the enervating heat of summer, or the harsh cold of winter; so they can swim or so they can ski; so as to coincide with a family Christmas reunion or so as to bring the family closer together by itself, in peaceful, independent isolation?

The answer? . . . Of course, there isn't any one answer for every individual and every family. The solution in every case, like life itself, is a compromise—a compromise of interests, desires, physical resources, financial means, responsibilities, and all the other factors that fashion our days and our doings. And yet, this rediscovering America idea (you remember, we told you it was going to crop up every now and then through this issue) offers something in the way of a general solution; a sort of common denominator interest for everyone concerned in a family vacation.

TAKE the Frisbies, for example, a typical (oh, well, a representative, if you like it better) American family of four. They're all good American citizens, yet the chances are that the sum total of all their real knowledge concerning the America they live in doesn't bulk so very large. Not that they aren't patriotic, proud, interested in what the country is like, what it is doing, what makes it go, and what it has to offer its people—but they just don't get many chances to draw close to it, to look at it face to face, to hear it hum and feel it vibrate, to realize that it needs the sympathetic, intelligent cooperation of all its population no less than they need the sustaining contact with its mighty powers if they are going to live their lives to the full and really make them count.

They may plan a few weeks at the ocean, or in the mountains, or woods, but do they realize that, whatever surroundings they choose, they are likely to find there camp sites, cabins, lodges, hotels—all kinds of clean, commodious accommodations established and maintained, or supervised, by Federal, state or other governmental agencies for their comfort and enjoyment? Do they know of the highways, parkways, trails, and paths built and cared for so they can conveniently cover great distances, reach remote and once inaccessible places, and share the thrills of the pioneers who first came upon them? Have they listened to the interesting, lucid explanations of Forest Rangers, Park officials, trained public servants in many fields, as they tell the impressive story of the work of their departments or of the history of mountain range, glacier, canyon, or wind-carved mesa? Have they noticed, from speeding train or auto, the changing vegetation of the countryside and been able to interpret the constant variation; have they viewed with indignation and dismay the results of man's thoughtlessness and greed in the many cruelly eroded hillsides and devastated timberlands, then rejoiced at the increasing evidences of man's ability to heal wounds as well as cause them, to preserve and restore the beauty of our country as well as to destroy it?

One of the richest rewards of traveling with an open eye and inquiring mind is the gaining of first-hand knowledge of the natural resources of a country, in which lie its strength as well as much of its charm. Natural resources, according to Dr. Richard M. Field's admirable, thought-provoking manual, are, in the order of their importance, "climate, water-power, topography, and available raw materials," that is, soil, agricultural products, fuels, and minerals. Think how they combine to determine the nature of a region, the beauty of its countryside, its livability, the density of its population, the extent to which it becomes the scene of such human activities as industry, commerce, transportation, and distribution. Think how they are inseparably linked with the efforts and needs and aspirations of mankind. Do the Frisbies see the country they travel through as the vast, complex, interlocking organism it really is? Do any of us?

Probably they sat, those Frisbies, in breathless amazement when, at the World's Fair, the futuramas and cities of tomorrow passed before their eyes. Probably they marveled that such plans for the coming generations could be conceived and executed even in miniature. Perhaps they looked forward with excited anticipation to the day when they might actually see the realization of those dreams. But have they ever stopped to think how wonderful and how magnificent, notwithstanding its faults and weaknesses, is this land in which they live and work and are given such glorious opportunities to play?

Oh yes, they play, do Americans. "During reasonably prosperous times," says Dr. Field, "it is estimated that the people of the United States spend over ten billion dollars annually for recreation," approximately four billion of this for motor camping and vacation travel. Why? Largely because of the abundance of some of those natural resources we were talking about. Partly because of other resources, intangible, perhaps, in comparison with earth or rain, forests or coal or ores, but responsible to no small extent for the nation's stability and character. They are not easy to describe but we have tried to suggest them pictorially on the following pages—the sort of resources that build up the minds and bodies of men; that intensify their reverence for the past and strengthen their faith in the present, their hope for the future, their ability to recognize, appreciate, and gain inspiration from beauty.

Bountiful indeed, and awaiting every last one of us, are the fruits of what we mean when we speak of rediscovering America—your America, our America. Rediscovering it and, in doing so, coming to know it better, understand it more clearly, enjoy it more fully, love and honor it more deeply, and learn to give more of ourselves to the splendid task of making sure that it is strong, and everlastingly free.

Do you know your National Parks and Forests?

Philip R. Noble

WHEN, early this spring, Jeff Davis, so-called "hobo king," proclaimed May 10 to 17 as "National Hobo Week, when men should get out and rough it for a few days," he undoubtedly struck a note that set many a heart vibrating in unison. "The idea," he said, "is that husbands should go out camping, or mix with their sons on a hiking trip. In fact, let the whole family go. The trouble with America today is that we're too timid, too soft."

As a generalization, that may or may not be true. But, notwithstanding increasing interest in all kinds of sports, it can hardly be denied that there would be a vast increase in health, vigor, and efficiency throughout the nation if more of us spent more time actively outdoors on our own feet; wearing out shoes instead of automobile tires, burning our own energy instead of gasoline, putting more free air into our lungs, and sleeping sounder o' nights instead of using them as recreational bridges between hectic days of furious concentration on little things. Perhaps the principal reason why more people don't get out into the open, close to the woods, waters, rocks, and flowers, amid the sights, sounds, smells, and silences of nature, is that they don't know where to go or how to get there, or how exceedingly possible it is, no matter where they start from. Our hope, in this issue, is to point the way.

Your national parks, for instance—and you can rightly call them so because they are yours, the people's, preserved for all time by law, skillfully and efficiently administered by the Government, and faithfully, tactfully, and helpfully cared for and conducted by hundreds of trained rangers. Dotted over the country from the coast of Maine to the tip of Florida, the Rio Grande in Texas, the Montana-Canada border, the Big Tree country of California, the Olympic Peninsula in Washington and even up into Alaska and westward to Hawaii, these parks provide more places to visit, camp, fish, hike, and indulge other outdoor hobbies than can be explored in the holidays of an average lifetime. In addition there are the many national monuments and historical sites, also under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Interior, from which one can study the country's history in a way as graphic and intriguing as it is different from the dusty old textbook method. In her admirable "Romance of the National Parks" (Macmillan, 1939), which is an inspiring expression of the national park philosophy as well as a comprehensive panorama of the parks themselves, Harlean James tells of meeting on Mt. Ranier "a business man and his wife crowding fifty, who had been spending their vacations for twenty-five years in the National Parks—only one or two in a season. . . . They evidently felt," she observes, "that they were visiting each summer one or two of their fine summer estates in which their collective ownership made possible excellent facilities for their pleasure and profit."

Perhaps you have shared that mistaken impression that the national parks are all far up in the Rockies or miles from any ordinary beaten track of travel. Then check on the nearest United States map the following principal parks and write for detailed information about any of them to their

Frankly, you can't fool the women of America—and their families. (Not that we'd ever try to!) They are quick to taste improvement in the foods they eat. Lately they've been saying: "What have they done to Campbell's Soups? They taste more delicious than ever!"

Here's what has happened: With every day devoted to the making of soup, it would be just about impossible for us not to grow more skillful over the years. Wouldn't you agree? What's more, each day we are working deliberately to improve our soups—and we have made definite improvements. Naturally, folks are bound to notice their even finer flavor. And what's more, they tell their friends about it.

We invite you to try Campbell's Soups now! See if you don't agree with families everywhere who are saying: "They're better than ever!"

*Rooms have new glamour—and something more—when you re-do them
this “Never Before” way*

FRAMES FOR YOUR RUGS! See how effectively the three-color circle—set right in this new Nairn Linoleum floor—frames the fabric rug! The floor pattern is No. 7228 in Nairn Veltone Linoleum. The circle is made with “Dusty Pink,” (No. 1133 Nairn Linoleum) outlined with white and gray feature strips. The classical motif set in the four corners of the floor is cut from “White,” No. 1113 in Nairn Linoleum. Notice how deftly it echoes the Regency style of the furnishings!

“Never Before” a linoleum combining such a strong installation and long wear

“Never Before” such lovely linoleum colors—all chosen to harmonize with new home furnishings

“Never Before” such opportunities to create your own designs for inlaid linoleum floors

A SYMPHONY OF COLOR—without one false note—that’s what the “Never Before” way of re-doing rooms means to you! Decorators will tell you it’s due to Nairn, the pioneer linoleum maker!

WHY? Because Nairn designers have keyed their new linoleum colors to the hues of all other new home furnishings, from draperies to breadboxes! No longer need you waste hours trying to match “off shades.” Choose for your floor one of the enchanting new Nairn Linoleum patterns, Veltone or Karnean—base your color scheme upon it—and the rest is easy!

THAT’S NOT ALL! There’s a great new practical development, too—Nairn’s unique adhesive back, applied at the factory. It insures an extra-strong, long-wearing installation at no extra cost to you! Laid direct to the floor, it stays smooth and easy to clean for years! Just use Nairn Self-Polishing Wax now and then to keep it shining.

GIVE YOUR ROOMS this “Never Before” beauty and practicality—make Nairn Linoleum the starting point of all your redecorating. Your local store has dozens of patterns to show you. See them soon.

LINOLEUM

YOU NEW BEAUTY, NEW ECONOMY, LONGER WEAR

LOVELY, LIFETIME WALLS! Yes, these walls will stay fresh and beautiful as long as the house itself, for they’re covered with washable, stain-proof Nairn Wall Linoleum! Two patterns are used, in the modern way—glowing “Gladiolus Red,” No. 7952 on the door and the alcove over the range—and creamy “Parchment,” No. 7973 on the rest of the walls. Peep into the breakfast room—you’ll see a third Nairn Wall Linoleum, “Mint Green,” No. 7951!

IT ALL “GREW” OUT OF THE FLOOR! Now you can see clearly that the whole color scheme of this kitchen was drawn from the gay Nairn Linoleum pattern selected for the floor—No. 7557. Its hues are all repeated in the cabinet paint, curtains, dishes, and in the Nairn Wall Linoleum described in the paragraph above. A Nairn Plain Linoleum, “Mahogany,” No. 1104 appears on the counter-tops and in the floor border. Note also the emerald green feature strip. . . . Remember, all Nairn colors are keyed to other new home furnishings, to make “Never Before” decorating possible!

respective superintendents or to the National Park Service in Washington. In addition to what they will send, the American Planning and Civic Association (Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.) can supply an inexpensive but illuminating four-part National Park Portfolio): Arcadia, on the rocky shore of Maine. Shenandoah in Virginia, with its breath-taking skyline drive and grand accommodations for stopping for a day or a month. The Great Smokies in Tennessee, bordering North Carolina and offering some of the finest mountain scenery in the East. Abraham Lincoln and Mammoth Cave in Kentucky, one a memorial to a great man, the other an impressive example of subterranean architecture. The Everglades Project, in the heart of southern Florida. Hot Springs in Arkansas and Carlsbad Caverns in New Mexico. Rocky Mountain and Mesa Verde in Colorado, completely different, but each rich in evidences of ancient life of the earth and of mankind. Wind Cave in South Dakota, Grand Teton in Wyoming, and the far-famed Yellowstone at the junction of that state, Idaho, and Montana. Glacier Park on Montana's northern boundary and, in Washington, Mt. Ranier, with its majestic namesake, and the recently established Olympic Park on the brink of the Pacific Ocean. Bryce and Zion Parks in Utah; Yosemite and General Grant parks in California, and the unmatched Grand Canyon in Arizona. Remember that these are names not merely of phenomena to look at and then leave, but, in most cases, of great tracts of land varying tremendously in topography, climate, geology, altitude, and plant and animal life; in which one can live, rest or explore in comfort, safety, and whatever degree of isolation one desires. "Superlative natural areas," they have been called, "set apart and conserved for the inspiration and benefit of the people."

Their establishment under the National Park Policy that took form when Yellowstone National Park was created in 1872, and that gave rise to the National Park Service in 1917, has been a brilliant demonstration of the practical application of the theory of putting land to its best and most fruitful use. Many of these areas, unduplicable and irreplaceable, might have temporarily been made tremendously profitable for a fortunate few, through lumbering, mining, farming, or exploitation as power sources or sites for commercial tourist centers—in fact, their acquisition by the Government has often been achieved in spite of the opposition of selfish interests seeking to develop them along just those lines. As it is, they have been permanently withdrawn beyond the reach of all such exploitation so they can be forever utilized, in as nearly as possible their original condition, by successive generations of all American people, for the broadening and enriching of their lives.

with this FIREPLACE that Circulates Heat!

Build a Heatilator Fireplace and enjoy the extra comfort of circulated heat that warms every corner of the room—and even adjoining rooms. It saves the waste of furnace fires on cool spring and fall days—cuts dollars from fuel bills.

This proved fireplace gives all the heat needed by most homes in mild climates. Architects recommend it for quick and uniform heating of basement rooms. It makes camps usable weeks longer—earlier in spring, later in fall, and for winter week-ends. Thousands in use all over America.

WILL NOT SMOKE

Concealed inside the masonry, the Heatilator is a double-walled steel form around which any style of fireplace is correctly built. It eliminates faults of design that commonly cause smoking. Greatly simplifies construction, saves materials. Adds but little to fireplace cost. Send a postcard for complete details.

developed as to hotels, cabins, and other refinements, the National Forests offer another broad field for the vacationist or recreation seeker. Similarly reclaimed and set aside for the benefit of all the people, they have been, since 1905, under the jurisdiction of the Forest Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, rather than the Interior Department. Although carefully controlled lumbering and grazing are permitted in them (which is not the case in the parks), they, too, are being conserved and maintained essentially as recreation zones. If you are seeking new possibilities, surprisingly accessible and inexpensive, in the field of hunting, fishing, tramping, camping, or any of the simple, health-giving pleasures that wooded country can afford, get from the Government Printing Office in Washington a copy of "Forest Outings" (75 cents in paper covers), a 310-page, exceedingly readable compilation of National Forest facts. Still other outstanding Federal Government works for the public benefit are the communities, camp sites, and recreational opportunities built and operated in connection with huge new water-power projects, such as are making the Tennessee Valley region so popular with both seasonal and year 'round visitors.

Of course, in addition to these publicly-owned meccas for vacationists, there are hundreds of beauty spots and sources of interest, information, and pleasure thoroughly worth while but likely to be more publicized. Many states are following the Nation's lead in making and maintaining historical and scenic parks. Everywhere communities, organizations, institutions, commercial establishments, and groups of citizens are giving thought and attention to the resources and attractions of their countryside, making them more available for study and enjoyment by visitors, and providing reference books about them. A few of these aids are: the excellent volumes of the American Guide Series, a W. P. A. project, each dealing

Nothing to do with the price of gasoline!

IF YOU have a car, a family, and gasoline, the chances are that you often go "somewhere in the country." But do you just act as if the car had been dropped from heaven, complete with all comforts, fill her up with gas and oil, and take off? Well, you aren't at all unique. I hadn't thought much about cars when we thumped our way down the street in our first jalopy, but by the time we puffed and snorted our way into the garage, I had plenty of ideas. The package compartment was responsible for it all. As I pushed gadgets and pulled knobs, I eventually arrived at that part of the instrument board which is usually the depository for stale cigarettes, broken sunglasses, torn road maps, dusters, and candies on the loose. The inside of ours was as bare as Mother Hubbard's cupboard. And I decided to do something about it.

Out of the Christmas debris came an assortment of small boxes which I fitted into this compartment. Into one went sunglasses in good condition, and a scarf to save a new hair-do. A smaller box inside the large one seemed a fitting place for bobby pins, assorted mending threads and a needle for that unexpected run, and a little tin of aspirin. A small comb, a pencil, and a pad of scratch paper completed the first box. I sat back with smug satisfaction while I snapped a heavy rubber band around the box and chucked it into place. No more tiresome family feuds that begin when someone remarks about how bright the sun is, then someone else follows with one about the sunglasses. Then comes a pawing around until you remember that the new glasses are in a bureau drawer at home, and the ones in the car are no good.

A chunky little silver box held an amazing assortment of gum and small hard candies—the imperishable kind. A wad of flavorsome gum, at the psychological moment instead of fifty miles beyond, will do more to keep you in an upright and dignified position than anything else. But why clutter up the inside of the car with all this stuff when it takes only a few minutes to get the same things at a roadside stand? Have you ever carried gasoline from the nearest station to a stalled car? Besides, it's rather fun when going hell-bent-for-election to remember the private stock instead of commanding, "Stop at the next stand and I'll hop out and see if they have any chocolate bars." Then, "You went right by that one." Chances are they were fresh out of them anyway, had only an ample stock of things you detest.

The corner drug store supplied a neat tin box filled with ready-made little bandages, gauze, scissors, cotton, adhesive, and an ointment for insect bites and burns, and a small applicator bottle of iodine. We had no visions of saving lives on the highway with this outfit. It was just for minor accidents, bumps and scratches. The man of the family also finds it useful for keeping certain parts of the car with us until we limp into the nearest service station for repairs. Those who ride in swank new cars may not appreciate this, but we do!

At the same drug store I became the owner of a hardy little magazine, digest size, which is too expensive to appear often among our reading material but which contains a wealth of reading matter ranging from fiction to excellent art work. This went into the compartment against the day when a long and tiresome wait in the car would only sharpen the temper and dull the appetite. A sealed tin of favorite cigarettes

You don't have to believe this, but there is more room left in the compartment after these useful articles are stowed away than can be found in the average car on top of the accumulation of useless debris.

Let us now consider the case of the useless Indian blanket, which no self-respecting Indian would claim, ignored by wives and beloved by practically all husbands. When a beautiful spring day suddenly turns raw and passengers stripped of their winter under- and over-wear shiver in the unexpected cold, forgotten robes contribute little to their comfort. So there was that horrid Indian blanket. Warm, if nothing else. Perhaps a shivering passenger might appreciate it almost as much as wool and beaver. To the cleaners it went and from there into a stout, new shopping bag. In our old jalopy it may rub elbows with the jack but it is under the seat and will stay clean until it is needed. In one section of our countryside there are stands of citrus fruits, home-cured olives, honey, and freshly pressed fruit juices. They become more and more tempting as mealtime approaches, but it is scarcely the thing to stop and get juices at one stand, pick up a pint of olives to munch on at another, and stare for hours at a golden bottle of honey purchased at another. Hence the box.

In it we are sure of finding powdered coffee in capsules, a small tin of canned heat and the frame and

UNCLE NED SAYS:

ANYONE CAN

PATCHING PLASTER

Mix Rutland with water—apply with knife—and your wall is as smooth and firm as new.

pan into which it all fits, a small can of evaporated milk, salt and sugar in shakers with strips of scotch tape over the holes, a can of pork and beans, another of sardines, can openers, paring knife, butcher knife, two knives, forks, and spoons, and a supply of paper plates, napkins, cups, and extra cloths. Some of these things are packed in a round, tin cracker box with a tight-fitting lid. This box has any number of extra uses, from carrying water from the nearest safe source to the picnic grounds, to holding a crushable, juicy pie. Thus we are equipped with the basic tools for building an unplanned picnic wherever the inspiration strikes us.

Have you ever bought a loaf of homemade bread, crackly and crunchy on top but soft and white and warm inside, and eaten it with lumps of sweet butter and Idaho white-clover honey, when you were miles and miles from nowhere and as hungry as a pack of wolves? Have you ever passed a little seaside shack where fresh lobster, shrimp, and crab were for sale and where the ocean lapped clean and blue against the white sands and jutting rocks? Did you drive right by, then pull up at the nearest respectable-looking eating place and order sea-food—only to have it taste disappointingly flat? You should have stopped, ordered a lobster put in the pot, cooked him over your own fire, and eaten in the peace and quiet of a cranny on the shore. A stolen moment from the busyness of modern life.

Now, all this may sound very complicated and tiresome, but it isn't, really. An hour or less of shopping will be all you'll need to allow, for you can find practically everything you want in the five-and-dime. And, aside from the small investment involved here, another of the advantages is the fact that everything is put up in small packages, enough for your needs, not too much for the space available in the car. Just keep in mind that you're managing four "departments." One is good grooming (cosmetics, mending things, etc.); one is first aid; another is leisure (enforced by a flat tire, perhaps, but just the time when you need reading matter and cigarettes to keep your mind off the minor catastrophe); and the last is the always-important food department.

Naturally your family may be different from ours and want different things in each "department." But there won't be much variation and our system has been so satisfactory that we don't hesitate to pass it on to others.

Not a great deal of bother. But it makes possible the fun of the unexpected and the joy of those all-too-rare moments for which we seldom take the time but which pay such large dividends in relaxation, inspiration, and memories.

HOW DO YOU GET A PAINT WITH Gumption?

WE MINERS DIG THE LEAD GOOD PAINTERS USE IN LONG-WEARING PAINT

THERE'S one sure way to obtain a paint that won't crumble under the poundings of weather—find out how much white lead it contains.

It's a safe rule to follow: the more white lead the better the paint! For experience proves—paints made with pure white lead resist weather better. You can't, for example, get a more durable paint than a 100% white lead paint. This is the kind good painters mix from lead-in-oil.

As a matter of fact, white lead pigment is made from lead—and everybody knows there's no tougher metal when it comes to fighting off weather.

White lead, too, battles heat, cold and moisture—without cracking and scaling. White-lead-painted jobs stay neat and attractive because the paint wears down slowly and evenly.

And that means there's no need to burn and scrape when applying a new coat—it goes on right over the old one.

Best of all, you pay no more for white lead than for regular quality paints. Beauty—economy—long life—no other paint gives you so much for so little. Here's one case where the best is cheapest!

Dear Mother and Dad:

It's happened! Jim, little Bobby and I are all settled (well, almost) in a home of our very own. And I'm as happy and excited as I was on my wedding day.

Wait till you see it—a white gem in a green emerald of a hillside lot. Really, it's beyond words! And I feel so secure because it's concrete, firesafe concrete, under the rugs, behind the wall paper and in the foundation. Mr. Richards (he's our architect) says it's the ideal way to get a thrifty, comfortable, enduring home that will stay young for a lifetime.

AT LEAST half the fun of a vacation trip, we think, is working out the itinerary. So we aren't offering to do that for you. Nor would we think of suggesting or urging where you ought to go in the first place. If you and your family cannot decide that important, basic detail, we certainly wouldn't want to assume the responsibility. But when you have finally settled on a trip, be it through New England, up the Redwood Highway, deep into the Old South, around the Corn Belt, into the pueblo country, across the Great Smokies, over the Ozarks, or wherever; or even if you have merely determined in which general direction you are going to trek, we will be glad to contribute suggestions about some points of special interest that you might hate to miss if you were going to be in their vicinity. This is how we figure on doing it:

We first divided the country into ten zones, as shown on the map above. The division was an arbitrary one in a way, yet we think it is at least logical from a geographical and travel basis. For example, New England, New York, and a considerable part of New Jersey make up a sort of unit with Boston and New York City as focal centers. Similarly, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, and West Virginia make a compact group with such key cities of interest as Philadelphia, Washington, Pittsburgh, and Richmond. To the west, Ohio is a natural companion for Illinois and Michigan, from which one so easily reaches Wisconsin to the north, and Indiana to the west that there you have another convenient expanse of country without attempting to take in the real Corn Belt, still farther west. And so it goes all the way to the Coast, the Gulf, and the Canadian border.

you what to see!

Let us know which of these ten zones you are going to travel in, and enclose a stamped, addressed envelope and we will send you a list of interesting things to see

Of course, in the Far West, a portion of any one zone will provide generous territory and a wealth of thrills for an average vacation.

Next we asked all our editorial department heads to prepare, for each zone, lists of places, institutions, natural phenomena, or man-made things that they think would be especially worth a visit from anyone particularly interested in the respective fields they are engaged in—building, museums and collections, nature study, domestic science, home decoration, gardening, and all the subjects that can and should contribute to a rich and varied home and family life. These lists are being combined and arranged, and mimeographed sheets are being prepared, each carrying an enlarged, more detailed map of one of the zones and the corresponding list of places there that we feel are really worth going to. We will be glad to send these sheets to our readers on request, provided they comply with these simple provisions: Simply write us, addressing your letter to "Rediscovering America," THE AMERICAN HOME, 444 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y., stating which zone or zones you are interested in and enclosing an addressed, stamped envelope (preferably a large No. 10) in which we can send you the information you wish.

This does not mean that you will receive a detailed itinerary, a road map, a list of recommended hotels, tourist camps, or anything of that sort. Such things are obtainable from many other sources—gas stations, travel agencies, tourist bureaus, and the like. Nor will we be able to write personal letters giving advice, travel directions, cost estimates, or answers to specific questions. We do hope, however, that we will be able to supplement any plans you have made and any hopes you are cherishing with hints and reminders. May they add to the value, interest, and enjoyment of your vacation trip; may they help you realize the maximum pleasures and possibilities that can be had from what we have been recommending throughout this vacation issue of ours—Rediscovering America.

"Home Defense!"

Many an old Colonial dwelling that echoed to the midnight cry of Paul Revere still stands today... an eloquent reminder that our forefathers defended their homes not only against mortal foes but against the very elements themselves. Safely through the storms of two centuries these historic homesteads have come down to us, guarded every year of the way by the sturdy paint of the Minute Man—Pure White Lead.

...and again
PURE WHITE LEAD
is Ready to Protect American Homes!

Today not only "every Middlesex village and farm" but a whole nation of homes knows Pure White Lead as its first line of defense against the elements. And it has learned that Dutch Boy White Lead means paint that sturdily resists the onslaughts of rain and snow and sun... keeping homes young in appearance and guarded well. Paint that wears slowly, smoothly—instead of cracking and scaling—thus saving the expense of burning and scraping off old paint when it finally becomes time to repaint.

And into the front ranks of America's Home Guard the Dutch Boy's famous Paste form of White Lead now welcomes its new ally, Dutch Boy White Lead Paint.

*Now, a New Form...
Ready for the Brush!*

Here's the Home Defense of the Minute Man in its new, up-to-the-minute form—the new Dutch Boy Pure White Lead Paint. It's pure white lead, all ready to spread—offering, in ready-to-use paint form, the proven protection and extra quality of white lead. Yet it costs no more than regular quality paint.

When you buy a paint job for your home, remember three things: 1. Whichever goes on your house—the famous Dutch Boy Paste White Lead or the new Dutch Boy Paint—you're getting the historic home defense of pure white lead. 2. "You're money ahead when you paint with White Lead!" 3. It pays to hire a good painter.

Get smart about buying that paint job. Send for our free booklet, "Styling with Paint the Dutch Boy Way"... 32 color illustrations point up everything you need know about buying paint. Address Dept. 375 in care of the nearest branch office listed at the right.

with no lasting settlements. Vermont's brief pioneer period began with Fort Dummer, built in 1724 just east of present-day Brattleboro, at a time when New York and Philadelphia were already cities building brick Georgian houses. Of the state's earliest structures only a solitary cabin at Lake Champlain is left. Many early inhabitants pushed on to the west while those who remained evolved a frugal, self-sufficient way of life, a mold from which Vermont character is still cast today—courteous but grave, faintly resentful of intrusion, and with a certain impenetrable reserve. In a state with no sea coast for commerce or ship building, no rich deposits of coal, oil, or metal, with ribs and ranges of mountains to bar easy commerce cial transportation, the early settlers amassed no great wealth, developed no de luxe way of living. Not even large-scale agriculture was feasible since so little of the land was arable, so brief were its summers, so short its summer days. Having had no boom eras, no days of great cotton or clipper wealth, it also had no shabby periods of poverty and decay. Today, Vermont's remote hamlets and villages still present a simon-pure picture of 18th century Colonial America with nothing added, nothing taken away. Preserved intact by the even course of life in the state, the houses still function in much the same manner as when they were built and the people still pursue the same unhurried but active life. These aren't ghost towns or "restored" stage sets either, but living, self-possessed communities of old churches, white or rose-colored houses clustered around village greens—in many instances having neither telephones, gas stations, gift shops, or tourist homes to shatter their quiet. It's a setting kindly in its natural beauty, gracious in its individual, architectural charm of fragile, simple farm and village houses, delicately spired churches. It's a world which affords time out to lie back in a garden chair over your morning coffee with your mind washed empty of everything except the beauty of the pale-colored transparent mountains, a world in which to live simply without forgetting to live gracefully and to enjoy such small pleasures as the hot, sweet fragrance of wild strawberries in the noonday sun, China tea from thin cups when summer shadows lengthen in the garden.

The Vermont scene is a pastoral landscape and its most characteristic houses are simple, farmhouse types. But there are notably distinguished homes and public buildings and whole villages of fine architecture. It is 18th and early 19th century architecture generally, which came into being after early American types were fully developed elsewhere. You'll encounter many familiar types: the rectangular Noah's Ark type with either its broad side facing the south or its gable end to the street; the square house with a hood roof; the balustraded roof characteristic of Bulfinch or Latrobe, and occasional octagonal houses and beautiful, pillared, Greek Revival houses of later periods. The simple rectangular house, with the well-pitched roof to which heavy Vermont snows do the least damage and with a clapboard frame built close to the soil on a stone foundation, is the earliest and the most general. Driving over the Massachusetts state line on Route 7, Old

Noble proportions, finely spun details, throughout the Summer-Steele mansion at Hartland, a Federal house which crowns a knoll Bennington is the logical place to start a pilgrimage, for it is a distinguished old village. The Parson Dewey house, built in 1763, is reputedly the state's oldest frame house. Facing the green, it's an excellently proportioned rectangular house with a large center chimney, double-pilastered doorway and no other ornamentation. The General Robinson house (1), 1795, attributed to Lavius Fillmore, is an aristocratic house with graceful, elegantly detailed cornice, pediment and two-story Ionic pilasters. It shows the post-revolutionary abandonment of center chimney for a center hall and fine staircase, introduction of higher ceilings permitting a delicate front door fanlight, an imposing triple-arched window in the upper story. The Museum containing Ethan Allen's banner, the first flag carried in the Revolution, shouldn't be missed and try to include one of the evening services in the beautiful Federal church where you'll see candles flickering in the pewter holders of the crimson-cushioned box pews. The state publicity bureau at Montpelier can give you the date of these services and also the date of Colonial day, when Castleton, further up in the state, keeps open house.

Leaving Old Bennington and returning to route 7, you go north. At South Shaftsbury the Monroe-Hawkins house (4), by Lavius Fillmore, is another of the gentry's handsomely detailed, generously scaled mansions of the turn of the 18th century. Going through Arlington, notice Dorothy Canfield Fisher's home with the Vermont feature of stepped, brick gable ends. A few miles past Arlington is Manchester Street, surrounded by estates, golf courses, and the atmosphere of wealth. There are many genuine old houses and the real beauty of the imposing street, with lovely white-pillared, iron-urned, "befo'-de-war"-looking Equinox House, is impressive even if it's just not "Vermont" in its essential spirit. From here a road forks west to Dorset, a lovely village setting of rather sweet old houses, not too important architecturally.

Route 30 takes you on to Pawlet and to Poultney. Pawlet's Sargent-Leach house (11) has clapboards over a hewn frame, end pilasters supporting an entablature with delicate triglyphs. The main door is unusual with its fanlight stretched out to cover wide paneled pilasters and leaded sidelights. The Barnes house, also 1800, is of rose-red bricks with a

Where there's PELAGE there's warmth!

At 30° below zero... what keeps the polar bears from freezing? Their pelage... the thick, short, downy "under-wool" that Nature supplies furry animals for extra protection in winter. Now, Esmond applies this "pelage" principle to blankets!

Short lines show pelage in fur

How Esmond adopts the pelage principle to blankets. See how shorter fibres form millions of air cells! Added "insulation" —without weight!

More Warmth per Dollar ... thanks to "Pelage"*

FEEL the springy texture of an Esmond Blanket! See how thick it feels... yet how gloriously soft! How amazingly light... for the cozy warmth it brings!

Inside every Esmond Blanket are millions of tiny air cells! They are formed by thick, soft, downy fibres which are firmly locked, so washing can't undo them. This thick Esmond "pelage" does not add one ounce of weight. It keeps cold out, keeps warmth in, by insulation. Just as Nature "insulates" animals from bitter cold with pelage. Just as air spaces in your walls insulate your home.

All Esmond Blankets are pelage-processed... and only Esmonds. So, for warmer sleep... with less weight... for less money, insist on Esmond.

white wood, rosette cornice. Rope mouldings are featured in the delicate, charming woodwork, which is simpler than in the Sargent-Leach house. The 1819 red-brick Hopkins house, with the exquisitely ornamented arch, has marble details. In East Poultney, a typical unspoiled Vermont village on Route 30, see the fine church, early tavern, and substantial Federal period houses facing the green and the Whitton home (6) which also turns its gable end of flush white boarding, fine end pilasters, and delicate cornice in that direction. (Its Greek Revival wings were undoubtedly later additions.) From here, a side road will take you to Middletown Springs, where the stately old Jonas Clark mansion (3), commands a knoll, each of its stepped gables carrying two chimneys high above the roof and white fanlights looking out between them from the enormous attic. Built in 1814, it shows plentiful use of white marble for window caps, lintels, porches, fireplace panels carved in sunflower designs, even ground drains.

Retrace your way to Route 30, then turn sharp east at Bomoseen (Alexander Woolcott and the Marx brothers occupy opposite ends of an island in the lake here during the summer) to Route 4 for Castleton. This is the village which keeps open house on Colonial Day and it has a delightfully gracious and unique effect because it's almost entirely the work of Thomas Royal Dake, a carpenter-builder who belongs in the company of those better known fellow craftsmen-architects, Bulfinch, McIntire, and Asher Benjamin. His work was chiefly confined to one small section of Vermont and he used Adam style decorations chiefly—delicate swags, festoons, ornamental medallions and arches, etc.—on simple, rectangular houses. The Meacham-Ainsworth house (13), built between 1810 and 1820, shows his earlier style, particularly in the triple-arch treatment of the small front porch. The house, built for the Hon. John Meacham, passed from Meacham to his daughter who married Hiram Ainsworth, a carding mill owner. There have been several alterations; a white, picket fence with an arched gate and Corinthian pillars at the front and side entrances have been removed and the side porch has been added. No stairs in the house are the original ones. Characteristic of Dake's work is another Castleton house, shown in illustration 14, with its three arches at the front doorway, its Adam ornament in the gable ends, the general refinement of its detail. The plan of this house, with a parlor on either side of a center hall, additional rooms behind, much resembles Jane Austen's description of the Bennet cottage in one of her novels.

Unique for Vermont is the Langdon-Cole house (8), built in 1823 for Benjamin Langdon, a Castleton lawyer, and now in possession of

Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Cole, who have restored the interior to nearly its original state, using modern reproductions of the wallpaper and new, hand-cut mouldings. A two-story house, it has the usual gable and ell, but across the front are a pair of two-story bays with a shallow, slender-columned porch between them. Slender pilasters are used on the corners of the bays, matched boarding covers the front of the house, with regular clapboarding used on the other sides. Elliptical windows are in the gable ends, which are also sheathed in matched boarding. A fine doorway and Palladian window over it are distinguished details. The Lake house (10), built for Samuel Skinner in 1832, has been attributed to Dake also but it has a strong "Hudson Valley" style which challenges this; its decorative features suggest that it was done by masons and carpenters under Dake's influence. The workmanship is notable in any case. The brickwork is especially fine with massive chimneys in the gables providing for the immense fireplaces. The beautiful, recessed doorway, framed by slender, coupled columns, has sidelights and a semi-circular headlight with leaded tracery.

The Greek Revival Justin Ransom mansion with massive pillars, acanthus carving, and delicate iron work, now a parsonage, is later work. The Granger-Ransom house, a two-and-a-half-story structure with a front adorned with four pilasters and decorated friezes and lintels, is practically unchanged, except the front porch added after 1900, and remains well preserved. Its beautiful stairway (12) is an example of Dake's finest work and was designed for Granger, Dake's employee. Tradition has it that Granger and his son used sixteen years of their spare time doing the woodwork.

From Castleton, a trip up to Middlebury, the seat of the college, is worthwhile to see this substantial town moulded in a fine pattern and maintaining a fine integrity and tradition in its dignified homes. Or you can go to Woodstock directly from Castleton on Route 4. Woodstock will undoubtedly hold you awhile for it's difficult to leave this perfect, tranquil Georgian village, its famous green and breath-taking houses, all so perfectly groomed. The town abounds in more enchanting homes, sweet gardens, and lovely doorways than we can name here but look for those grand Georgian mansions, the Bailey and Johnson houses, the Dana house (9), the imposing brick houses on the road to South Woodstock, and the hospitable White Cupboard Inn (5) which includes the interesting old Hutchinson house built in 1794. Route 4 continues to White River Junction, where you can turn north on Route 5 to St. Johnsbury and search out the Paddock mansion (2), dignified and important with its balustraded roof, good window and door details, or go south where you should see the finest Vermont work of Asher Benjamin, author of "A Country Builder's Assistant," text book of early carpenter-joiners. Benjamin lived at Windsor from 1800 to 1804, and a number of houses in the vicinity are ascribed to him. The beautiful Federal, Sumner-Steele mansion at Hartland, (7) a squarish, hip-roofed, superbly detailed, nobly proportioned structure crowning the knoll on which it stands, may very possibly have been designed by him.

ANNA B. ROLLER, Canfield, Ohio

HOOK away, but use good material and do a good rug. It takes more planning but no more work in the doing. Your first venture will probably be with a stamped piece of burlap, just to see how one works a hook and combines colors. After that "try your own wings" at design and color and your own ideas of beauty, not those of someone else. Make the rug belong to you. The great price of the machine age is that it has deprived us of the right to design for a particular place and this, after all, is the true appeal of handwork. So, while you are about it, do turn your time and work into something really worthwhile and definitely your own.

Let me describe a room and the rug I decided to do for it. In a small room off my bedroom there is a collection of Early American flower prints. No timid pinks here, but shades of red and rose which defy description. The walls are aqua with a small figure. This and the old cherry frames of the prints were all I had to consider, so I made the center of the rug a pale gray-beige in shaded blocks. In the border are the background shades, from the deepest wine-red to American beauty. A stylized leaf is the border design, in shades of blue-green, from vivid to its palest at the leaf tip. The scale of shades is very effective. Although the room is small, I used a bordered rug which in no way decreases the apparent size of the room because of the distribution of color.

You will wonder how to plan a rug, to arrive at its size, and then how to make the pattern. Large papers pinned together will give a concrete idea of the size you need and will also do to block out your design. Here is where you can give vent to all the originality you possess. Something you've liked very much will probably begin to take form for your inspiration. A star figure in an old Norse tapestry (my own ancestry) is really the basic motif of one of my rugs. The spacing and coloring make it my very own. Its geometric design is not unlike that of a patchwork quilt. (Symmetrical patterns are the easiest for beginners.) The stars are coral rose, amethyst, and peacock blue on a blue-green background.

When you have your cloth ready and hemmed, and have decided upon your pattern, cardboard and children's drawing crayons are good tools for transferring your homemade design in correct proportions from your sketch to the material. If floral patterns and free-hand drawings are beyond your ability, a young art student can make your own idea into a concrete design. Just give him an idea of what you want.

The small, half-oval rug in front of a corner cupboard, opposite, took its pattern from a collection of china within, the Adams rose and another of the Adams ware with a seashell motif in the border. Seldom is so literal a transcription of a motif desirable, but it is offset by the great variation in the material of both. The color of the rug is that same lovely red, really an American beauty, that has made this Adams rose a beloved pattern of early America. Many tones of mulberry, purple, and amethyst are in the seashell border, and all on a pale beige background. Every house should have at least one red room—it's good for your disposition. I dare anyone to come into my boys' room and come out with a grouch! In this room, where red is used freely, the hooked rug is the climax. Small diamond blocks build up a star which is easily recognized as the familiar star of the quilts. There are alternate rows of red and white on a black background. Simple furnishings and red calico (or percale) curtains make the setting just right. In planning a rug it is well to remember that simple design and furnishings will take the primary colors best and that the more subtle shades should be used in rooms to which they will be more appropriate.

For a small rug, any frame—

sary jibes. Here's a favorite one. A man who was taking a suit to the tailor for some fixings turned to his fellow passenger and, pointing to the suit, said, "You see my wife is making a hooked rug and if I don't take my clothes with me in the morning, she'll have them in the rug by night." Here's another: At a clubhouse overlooking a golf course one spectator said to another, "What a beautiful color your husband's socks are!" The other replied, "Well, you know I'm planning another hooked rug and I thought I might just as well get the right shade to begin with."

Don't count on your friends to give you rags. She's a friend indeed who would part with them for you. She's probably going to make a even an old picture frame will do, but for a large one the best equipment is a quilting frame. The foundation of the hooked rug of the old days was homespun linen and it will probably never be surpassed. Monk's cloth of the four-ply weave will be found much more durable than the burlap which is commonly used.

THE RIGHT WAY TO PAINT YOUR HOME

It doesn't pay to take chances—not when you're painting your home.

Choose a paint you know will wear and wear and wear.

Choose a paint that will still be good-looking after the second year.

Choose a paint that leaves a smooth, even, easy-to-repaint surface for economical maintenance.

You don't have to be a paint expert to choose such a paint. It's easy.

For 97 years, Eagle White Lead mixed with linseed oil has been proving itself a reliable, economical paint for American homes.

This pure white lead paint creates an elastic paint film that safeguards against cracking and sealing. It wears down gradually and evenly so re-painting is simple.

Next time you paint—employ a good painting contractor and ask him to use Eagle Pure White Lead.

NEW BOOKLET! Contains valuable information on painting, including how to figure the real cost of a paint job. Write for free copy. The Eagle-Picker Lead Company, Dept. A-61, Cincinnati, Ohio.

rug herself as soon as she gets around to it. Yes, you'll need all the wiles you possess to get those rags, for when you think that you have enough, then it takes just that many more. Because you can buy at reclamation centers and rummage sales, you can afford to be choosy and buy only the best wool garments. Finely-knitted sweaters, bathing suits, and jerseys are the best materials. Leave the heavy coats for braided rugs. Not only is this type of material softer to hook with, but a superior quality of wool will shed the dirt. Fabrics of a higher quality have a better grade of color. Though called sun-fast, time will tone them, and wear mellows any color pleasantly.

Do not feel that colors must exactly match. Harmonizing several shades of the same color will give a vibrant effect that will have far more life than one solid mass. If you have ambitions for a large hooked rug, try this experiment first. Buy half a yard of old, bleached linen. It's almost a parchment shade. Pull a thread every three or four inches apart. This will make a stripe and help to keep your work straight. Get mercerized floss in as many shades as the brand offers, for instance, blue-green to green. Through a tapestry needle draw four threads. Take a short running stitch, almost a seed stitch, but let the long stitch show on the right side. Fill in each section, closely shading each stripe in your desired colors. You'll have a lovely piece of useful needlework and you'll learn to shade effectively. Then on to the big rug!

The hooking is simple. I like an old-fashioned small hook the best. The width of the rag strips will be determined by the weight of the fabric. The usual weight of jersey will cut to an eighth of an inch. The narrower the fabric is cut and the closer the loops, the finer the texture of the rug will be, and therefore the greater its value. For some reason the monk's cloth will hold closer hooking than burlap—another of its advantages.

There is no better cure for the jitters than this age-old craft. You can do your thinking while your hook flies in and out. A young couple, friends of mine, furnished a smart, city apartment in which a hooked rug was to be the keynote. And they both made it! Coming home from an evening out, the young husband would say, "Let's work on the rug awhile." I hope he forgives me for telling this if he happens to read these lines, but it is here related in the hope of encouraging others to do likewise. For, when most men get started on such a craft, they not only enjoy doing it, but they have a sincere appreciation of the article when it's completed. And when a rug is finished and laid, just who do you think will strut the more? I'll bet on the man of the house!

AS COMPLETE as a family history book and just as informative, but far more colorful, is my interesting Hoyt family quilt. The Hoyt family first settled in America in 1628 and one member of the family served in the Revolutionary War, one in the War of 1812, one in the Civil War, and one in the World War. The names of the first three appear on the quilt, each block of which represents the progressive development of the family through eight generations. In the middle block is found the family name of Hoyt and the year 1936, when the quilt was started. And it was not until 1939 that I finished it.

The color scheme is worked out in red, brown, yellow, and green. Each figure or design tells something of the family history or is a symbol for a family characteristic, and together they represent the activities of the family through the years. Some figures show the emblems of lodges to which members of the family have belonged,

Nor do American women

stop at "fancy work"

Isn't this garden pool, made, with its ingenious waterfall, at a cost of $2, convincing proof of their versatility?

G. E. ALTREE COLEY
Victoria, B. C.

there was no near-by pipe or faucet, and plumbing work was beyond me. Yet I made my pool and even embellished it with a waterfall!

I decided on a pool five feet across and ten inches deep, with a three-inch concrete bottom on a six-inch layer of stones, the water level to be a foot above the ground. So I dug a hole seven inches deep and seven feet across, piling the dirt and my largest rocks at the back. On top I cemented a flat rock which shows up white in the upper picture. On top of it I cemented a four-gallon can, in the bottom of which I had punched a tiny hole; this I arranged so it would come just at the edge of the "cliff," then I camou-

I HAD always had pools in previous gardens, but here there was none. Though I saw the very place for one, I could not pay to have it built so I dismissed the idea with a sigh—until, early last spring, I decided to build one myself, little by little. I wanted it raised to bring the interest nearer the eye; also, I longed for the tinkle of falling water. I had rocks aplenty from an old rockery, but flaged the can with mossy stones. When it was filled with a bucket, the water would trickle musically for a whole afternoon. To form the pool I laid a double row of rocks with good soil between and an occasional crosswise rock to bind them. In the saucer-like center I put pebbles, some chicken wire, a piece of old bed spring and the concrete, which took one-third of a cubic yard each of sand and gravel, and a bag of cement. I used a one-two-three mixture, first mixing the "dry ingredients" (as one does in cooking) in a wheelbarrow, then adding water slowly and stirring to make a "thick batter." At this point I thankfully accepted the aid of an old neighbor who mixed a second batch while I shoveled the first into the pool and worked it into place with a trowel and, finally, my bare hands. Batch by batch I built it up, testing the thickness here and there with a stick. My arms ached that night, but the job was practically done. A week later, I applied a three-quarter-inch finishing coat of a one-two cement-sand mixture, then left it to set, sprinkling it now and then to prevent too rapid drying. Then, one fine morning, I filled the pool, waited and watched anxiously to see how well I had done the concrete work, and rejoiced when the water level stayed steady, showing no leakage.

But I was not yet satisfied. I had placed the pool against a lovely background of foliage and this I wanted reflected in the water. I knew that, to get reflections, the pool must be dark, so I siphoned off the water and, after allowing the concrete to dry, painted it a deep, rich brown with some asphalt paint that I bought at the supply store where I got the cement. This completely did away with the raw concrete effect and made the pool look like a woodland tarn. Then I planted the rim with sweet alyssum and, here and there, a Strawberry Festival petunia. The woman-made pool, which cost $1.90 for the cement, sand, and gravel, and 10 cents for the paint, was a complete success. I had enjoyed the work. And my friends so admire the pool that some of them are already copying it!

YOU hostesses who often have guests staying for more than one meal will find these attractive napkin rings a help in keeping down the amount of linens to do on wash day. They will make it easier for you to use linen napkins instead of paper ones and most of your guests will appreciate the difference.

The rings are made from deviled meat cans or from small mushroom cans. Both top and bottom are cut out with the type of can-opener that banishes sharp edges. The cans are then enameled with either white or colored paint and decorated. If you are clever at painting flowers or bows on the tins, do this. Otherwise use real ribbon and artificial flowers which have been stiffened with the application of orange shellac. The shellac will also glue the ribbons and flowers to the cans. The cans may be left ring shape or flattened—the latter shape can be put into a drawer more easily. The flattening process is a simple one. Place a wooden block through the ring and bend the can around the block into shape. Paint each ring a different color and assign one color to each guest—he'll feel that it's all his own.

Decalcomanias may also be used for decorating the rings. These are so simple to apply that the children would enjoy doing their own. Use fruit decalcomanias or you may use bright-colored Scotch tape and write each person's name across his napkin ring.

Guests or no guests, napkin rings are handy for keeping the family napkins sorted and when every person has his own to keep clean for himself you can bet that there will be lots fewer to do on wash day.

What's happening in the U.S.A.?

America is building more homes this year than in any of the past twelve, calling on old styles and new for brighter, better-looking houses. We show a regular New England farmhouse type recently built in a Chicago suburb, a handsome modern home in traditional Massachusetts, a California ranch house in Texas

ILLINOIS, not New England!

Frank Wilming

THE good news today is that home building continues in good health. More than a billion and a half dollars' worth of residential construction was contracted for in this country during 1940, principally for moderate-size homes. This is the highest total since 1929, and 1941 is now estimated to go even higher. We are turning to the bedrock worth of home and land in these parlous times and this spring hammers and saws are at work from one end of the country to the other on hundreds of new dwellings.

New homes never showed more sparkle in design, either, nor more common sense in planning, nor better value per dollar. There are spunky, sunny, snug little houses, fresh as daisies, and there are handsome larger ones, too, with dignity, grace, and generous space for full family life. There's charm in their appearance, livability in their planning, the advantages of 1941 equipment and materials in their structure. And there is also a special, soul-satisfying pride in their possession and ownership today. America is "digging in," getting its own roof over its head wherever possible and its own land underfoot. Without sentimentality or jingoism about it, we are going ahead with strong belief in the future of this country which we all love so well, building each new home as an additional stake in that future, another stronghold of the American dream.

What's happening to houses in the U. S. A. is stimulating news today, too, because all over the country new designs are being developed, old styles are being reshuffled and revised. Right on these pages you can see the Middle West borrowing from New England, New England finding modern not inappropriate, Texas mixing Colonial and California ranch-house characteristics. Rigid rules on house styles, fixed notions of how they should be laid out and built, are changing everywhere. If you doubt this, just thinking back twenty years will be a good eye opener. California and Florida were undergoing rashes of pseudo-Spanish houses then, the Middle West was still floundering amid phony English timber houses, left-over Gothic and Swiss architectural ideas, and mangled bungalow adaptations of Frank Lloyd Wright's style. The East was copying French farmhouse and English manor house styles with a pompous hand. Today that whole picture is changed. Our own, our simpler, more appropriate Early American styles have been taken up and adapted for present-day needs, ideas, and various climates.

Today, for example, the New England Colonial house is the nucleus of much small-house design everywhere, but it is done differently in different localities; as an instance, the over-size windows, outdoor living features, delightful, original details of California Colonial houses form one version, the sturdier general aspect, color, and larger size of Colonial houses in Indianapolis, Milwaukee, and other Mid-West cities form another. Eventually, wholly distinct local styles of American homes will be created from these versions because that's the way architecture evolves. And more significant still are the new houses in California, the Northwest, Florida, the Mid-West, and New England which follow none of the familiar forms or features of traditional house styles. Varied in their treatments and materials, they are already creating distinctive new regional types of domestic architecture.

In its crisply simple design, its use of unadorned features and materials, this modern house is as happily at home, as rooted to its New England setting, as are the older, traditional-style houses. But instead of being a closed-in, compact box, it's open to sun, air, and view

NEW ENGLAND, famed for its picturesque Cape Cod cottages, salt box houses, and other Early American types, is not merely resting on those historic laurels. Here's a new home which happily incorporates the essence of fine, old New England tradition and the best contemporary ideas of house design, and knocks into a cocked hat any argument that modern houses are something wholly alien to an American setting, with no roots in our past. It uses building materials and features which are long familiar, which have always been logical and appropriate to this part of the country. The narrow clapboard walls and their rich barn-red and slate brown colors, the simple details, plain white window and door trim, the shed roofs, natural boarding on interior walls, stone terrace wall, all these could be found on a New England country house of the 18th century. But the form of this house, its shape and plan, are totally different from the traditional New England house. That's because household arrangements are very different today. To keep warm, the early New Englander arbitrarily planned his house with small, square rooms huddled around the chimneys and with few and tiny window openings. Today, controlled central heating permits a variety of interior arrangements so these rooms are planned in their most useful and agreeable shape, size, and relation, are located for their pleasantest position and outlook; window openings are big and bountiful, placed for their advantage inside the home, not just for symmetrical effect on the outside. result is a new kind of exterior, which is akin to the old, however, in the enduring satisfaction of its simple lines, its clear-cut distinction.

As you come upon the house set in woods, meadows, and pastures, you notice first its appealing color and the crisp forthrightness of its outline. The barn-red color is on the two story section, the slate brown on the extended single story. The colors, emphasized by the white trim, give effective life and variety to the wide front. For easy drainage, sloping roofs are used; a shed roof covers the body of the house and another, sloping forward in contrasting direction, covers the living-room wing, which opens on three sides. The wing isn't just an appendage but extends around the front as an integral part of the house and includes the entrance doorway. Like the broad windows and other details, the entrance has a generous width and simplicity, in character with the whole scheme. The triple garage is under the bedrooms and its broad doors and the overhang of the upper floor give it the agreeably rustic effect of carriage sheds, or a barn. The back of the house has the choice view down "Long Hill" across Newburyport toward the ocean and every advantage is made of it. Bands of windows are carried straight across this entire north side, bringing maximum view, sun, and air to every major room in the house except one front bedroom. There's a flagged terrace off this side, too, which is convenient to both the living and the dining rooms.

All first-floor rooms are entered from the larger-than-average hall so there is no cross traffic through rooms. Living and dining rooms are completely separate and each has a fireplace; they are a generous size, each with wide windows across the better part of two sides. There's a pantry, lavatory, partial basement, and a large kitchen lighted from front and back. Upstairs there are five bedrooms, three baths, ample closets, and storage, with two of the Natural-wood boarding is used on the walls of all principal rooms and brilliant color on the ceilings. Painted plywood is used for walls of service rooms. ## WHILE DOWN IN TEXAS ~

SPREADING your home out comfortably seems a good notion when you're building in a state as big and broad as Texas. Land is open around Weslaco so Mr. Waters planned his home long and low when he built there. It's west of Brownsville, in the southernmost part of Texas, down Mexico way, on an orange and grapefruit ranch, so without any excuses, he could have built a Mexicano, hacienda type of home. But we're glad he didn't. Somehow, this lighter looking frame house, much in the manner of new California ranch houses, looks much gayer, brighter, and airier. There's something heavy-handed and stage-effected about many new copies of old Mexican and Spanish dwellings. This home seems more typical of the up-and-coming idea of the new home-building, happening today in the vigorous young state of Texas. It's truly American, too.

Horizontal boarding and vertical boards and battens, painted white, are used for the outside walls, windows have attractive modern casings.

Maynard L. Parker

No dramatic tricks about this Texas living room but dark, warm, wood walls, invitingly large fireplace in dead white contrast, and snooze-inviting chairs, create a mellow, cheerful air

ment sash with horizontal panes, there are engaging small features like the plant shelf outside the garage windows and the small bay window in the bathroom. Open porches on both of the long sides of the house are extremely important for practical as well as decorative benefit in this climate, which is semi-tropical with exceptionally high humidity. The long, screened porch at the back is the second living room during hot months and also provides a convenient means of passage from the front rooms to the bedrooms at the back of the house without going through the living room proper. Both the front and back porches offer a main entrance to the house with a protecting hall, a thoughtful feature not often provided in such informal house schemes. The living room is in the center of the house with the bedroom wing stretching out behind it, the dining room, service quarters and nursery in front of it; the nursery could lend itself readily as a guests' or servants' suite, independent of the rest of the house, if its nearness to the pantry should bring on too many food-foraging expeditions by the children. Closet and storage provision is particularly well planned and short hallways between all main rooms block the transmission of sound and afford a comfortable privacy.

The living room is a comfortable, good-size spot, designed and furnished in a way which proves that a room can be rustic without losing dignity or getting too much of an arts and crafts look to it. It has a broad, well-proportioned brick fireplace painted white (another fireplace opens on the living porch behind this room) contrasting in an effective way with the knotty pine boarding on surrounding walls and exposed ceiling rafters and underflooring. High bookshelves are built in one end wall, and the window wall is partly plastered and painted white. Oak planks set with hand-cut V grooves form the finished flooring, and tones of rose and soft blue are used in the sofa, the brightly patterned draperies, the mellow pictures and broadloom rug. An interesting feature of the interior of this house is the fact that all of the closets are equipped with electric ceiling lights which burn three hundred and sixty-five days in the year as a means of combatting the excessive humidity in this region.

The climate makes irrigation necessary, too, but the grounds of the house are kept up handsomely with well-sodded lawns spread out generously around the house. They set off its low, rambling outline with special effectiveness and so do the picturesque low trees and bushy shrubbery, such as the native ebony trees, mesquite, sage, and yucca. A pleasantly meandering brick path leads up to the open front porch, which has plain farmhouse posts and rails and is fitted up comfortably with easy chairs.

LOOKING very much like an old-timer, like one of the stately gracious old homes of New England, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Lindsay 3rd's home turns out to be of recent vintage and not New England at all but at St. Charles, Illinois. Such a successful transfer of New England simplicity is another sign of the diversity and skill of national home-building today. It's a remarkably sure copy of bygone house style, one it's easy to grow nostalgic over, a scheme broad-spaced and commodious, serene and restful, dignified without presumption or self-consciousness. It's still as sensible and practical as ever, too, its use of unpretentious building materials, in the economy of its rectangular shape and the plain hip roofs typical of New England.

Wood siding and clapboards painted a light stone color, windows which are both broad and long and have deep green shutters, twin chimneys built inside the end walls, and a handsome, arched front doorway with fanlight, side-lights, white paneled door and a red brick path leading up to it, are the uncomplicated elements making up the exterior. It is copied from the home of Mrs. Lindsay's great grandmother in New Hampshire and its doorway is an exact duplicate, the kind of big-hearted entrance which looks as if it really offered a welcome. The site is open country and there is considerable acreage around the house, particularly at the rear, which slopes back to a natural, winding brook in a ravine and continues to uncultivated, unspoiled woods, which add so much to the place's charm.

The inside of the house also follows tradition but there's sound functionalism in its layout, just the same wise planning for family activities necessary in any satisfyingly livable house, new style or old style. It has provision for full and comfortable family life in its ample proportions. Upstairs and down, a broad hall runs right through the house and gives each room the kind of independence which seems to be always welcome—the upkeep of halls may be bemoaned today but there is no getting around the convenience they can often provide. Downstairs, the center hall has a rear door which is a handy exit to the garden from all first-floor rooms; the cellar-stair door is located here, too, which is a pleasant way of getting down to the basement recreation room, a pleasanter way probably than going through kitchen quarters, the only approach in many houses. Another door in this center hall provides a second exit

You don't have to heat water that way any more! In fact, today you don't even have to think about hot water—except to open the faucet when you want it! And here's why:

1 RUUD COSTS LESS TO BUY!

Today the famous Ruud Gas Water Heater not only costs less to buy, but gives you far more than ever before! Today it offers you a "Lifetime" tank of rust proof MONEL—and costs less with a MONEL tank than it did 10 years ago without one! This MONEL tank can't rust or "dirty" hot water...

2 RUUD COSTS LESS TO USE!

Gas-heated water is way down in cost—and Ruud heats with gas. Gas is definitely faster—that means plenty of hot water from less fuel and a smaller tank! And Ruud's tank is MONEL—that means no rust scales to collect in the tank and wet-blanket the gas flame. Result: lower fuel bills!

3 MONEL TANK GUARANTEED AGAINST RUST FAILURE!

And this guarantee holds water—hot water! Read it...no leaks or loopholes! Absolute protection against repairs or replacements due to rust or corrosion for 20 years! And that's just a start...

4 GUARANTEE BACKED BY PERFORMANCE!

The guarantee says 20 years but actual performance records prove MONEL will last a lifetime! This miracle metal has licked rust in industry's toughest jobs—for example, the roof of Penn Station, New York. Despite the worst that weather and corrosive fumes can do, engineers say this vast marvel of MONEL will last 300 years!

Take a tip from them. Ask your gas company, plumber or dealer in bottled or tank gas (butane or propane) about RUUD—the Automatic GAS Water Heater with the Lifetime MONEL Tank!

The woman whose loveliness of skin is always noticed is often told that she is fortunate. And of course she is.

But credit is due her, too. For she knows that a naturally lovely skin can be kept lovely only by her own efforts.

It requires constant care to guard against such blemishes as enlarged pore openings, blackheads, oily shine, or rough scaly skin due to dryness.

Thousands of girls and women have found the very help they need in daily care with Phillips' Creams. These creams are unique because they contain the famous Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA TEXTURE CREAM. Put this beneficial cream to work on your skin! It softens and neutral-izes accumulations often acid in nature in the external pore openings of your skin. It also contains cholesterol which, by holding moisture in the skin, helps to keep it softer and more supple.

A smooth working foundation. Phillips' Texture Cream is a marvelous base for make-up. It removes excess oiliness and softens roughness and dryness so that powder and rouge go on evenly and adhere for hours.

PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA CLEANSING CREAM. You'll be delighted with the way this cream cleanses! It not only loosens and absorbs the surface dirt and make-up but cleanses accumulations from the outer pore openings and leaves the skin fresh and clean. from the living room, which is undoubtedly useful. And a closet at the back of the hall is deep enough for all the velocipedes, roller skates or other paraphernalia a family with two children can collect. In the service quarters at the back of the house, there's a full-size pantry with ample cupboard space for glass and china—a satisfying feature in any home, relieving overtaxed kitchen cupboards and cutting down those round trips between dining room and kitchen. The maid's room and bath are right next to the well-planned kitchen, completely apart from the rest of the house so there is privacy and freedom from friction for both family and servants.

The dining room, set with few but fine pieces, has excellent spaciousness, is really long and wide enough for comfortable serving around the table or for pushing chairs back after dinner without banging into wall or furniture. The chief feature of the living room, on the other side of the house, is an enormous picture window taking up most of one wall and offering an ever changing, seasonal view of natural woodland behind the house.

The Mop that wiped out an Army

WHEN this fair warrior wields her mop, she wipes out not thousands—but millions—of dangerous enemies.

Her foes may be potential killers—and doubly dangerous because they are invisible. They swarm on every floor and wall surface—lurk in dark closets, on stair rails, furniture, door knobs—even on the children's innocent toys.

They are the unseen armies of germs, that threaten any home with the dread menace of Infection.

To conquer this enemy, your most effective weapon is regular disinfection. Use "Lysol". In thousands of leading hospitals, where war against germs is waged ceaselessly, the use of "Lysol" is one of the established practices.

Throughout your home, make it a regular practice, too, to disinfect as you clean. It's so easy, and so economical. Just add 2½ tablespoonfuls of "Lysol" to each gallon of cleaning water.

In the bathroom, wipe out germs and ringworm (Athlete's Foot fungus), which spawn on warm, moist bathroom floors. Disinfect floors, bath mats, tiling, bath tubs, wash bowls and toilet seats rigorously and regularly with "Lysol" solution.

Wipe out the germs that may swarm on pantry shelves, in sinks, on kitchen drainboards—in clothes closets and storage shelves. Always get the germs as well as the dirt. Add "Lysol" to all cleaning water.

"Lysol" costs you less, because it is so highly concentrated. The 14-ounce bottle actually makes 11 gallons of "Lysol" solution of potent germ-killing strength.

IF YOU serve breakfast on a set of bright American earthenware, or if a domestic pottery vase or bowl or figurine makes a spot of color in your home, you're one of the women who have helped America's potters achieve success. It's a different kind of modern success story, achieved with the tools of centuries ago—clay, a potter's wheel, and a red-hot kiln.

Down in Moore County, North Carolina, works one group of outstanding potters. Jacques Busbee is the genius behind this Jugtown pottery of exceptional beauty, color and individuality. From San Francisco comes the work of Jalandivich and Olsen, two potters who work in their own back yard and produce things considered in the fine art class by such stores as Gump's and Marshall Field's. Meanwhile, pottery and earthenware for everyday use have become a thriving business, with Zanesville, Ohio, where there are fine clays, as headquarters for four large plants. Success began when a group of California potters gave up copying the old, English ideas and made bright, typically American ware that the public rushed out to buy. The amazing thing is that many large companies still follow the primitive Jalandivich and Olsen methods—hand rather than machine skill for the important processes. The "throwers" still use the potter's wheel to fashion dishes out of clay; glazes are applied by dipping or spraying, but girl artists paint decorations by hand, each one applying a single color in an assembly-line manner; 25% of the decorated and 10% of the solid-color line still are discarded for imperfections, many caused by human error.

the U.S.A.?

Typical of the finest in American ceramics are the pieces on these two pages. At the top of page 62 you see Beatrice Wood at the wheel, and just below two photographs showing the interesting texture, glaze, and form in her work. Below them are some prize winners in the Syracuse Museum's national ceramic exhibition, and next a group of excellently fashioned vases that were exhibited at the San Francisco Fair. These and the other photographs show the exciting things being done today—sound, satisfying, useful objects of art well suited to their medium of expression and also to our American life today.

It is interesting to know something of the true ceramist's approach to his art. For example, Jacques Busbee urges his assistants to take their time, to treat each jug or jar as a masterpiece. Workers "kick" ancient potters' wheels and fashion the clay by hand. Two firings of from ten to twelve hours each are required, with intense heat increased very gradually. Mr. Busbee considered it highly complimentary when a well-known writer remarked that he was "willfully inefficient."

It took Jalandivich and Olsen three years to perfect some of their marvelous glazes, three years to find a chemical harmony between the glazes and the body of their pieces, and three more years before they found their market. Still, and always, of course, they have technical problems. For example, you have to be a mystic to guess what color a glaze will be when it's on the finished product. When the big moment comes and the kiln is opened, Jalandivich and Olsen pull out red-hot pottery pieces, dance with excitement over the successes and console themselves over the failures while the glazes, cooling faster than the bodies, are breaking into tiny crackles and

That is a small report on our ceramics. It is especially interesting to realize that we have such American art—really useful things. And it is even more interesting to know that with ancient tools, just like those used centuries ago, we are making modern things. That the ceramists are contributing great things to American culture is evidenced by the exhibitions of such progressive museums as the Syracuse. Art critics all over the country are excited by this real art meant to go with everyday living in everyday American homes.

Why we do NOT sell house plans

MANY and mixed are the subjects of home interest, home activity which we scurry around to get, edit, and show you on these pages. But none is truly closer to our hearts and minds than the homes we publish. Finding and selecting really good houses, getting pictures and plans for the magazine, studying and boiling down the facts for your rapid digest, and presenting all the information finally with a flourish in some issue has always been a seriously considered and satisfying job to us. Actual homes have always been one of the prime interests of our readers, too, judging by the gratifying numbers of truly interesting, stimulating letters about them which come in to us. Recently these letters have been increasing by leaps and bounds, probably because of the increased number of home pictures in our new make-up, probably because of the widespread increase in home building all over the country. An appreciable number of these letters, however, say just about this—"Send me the complete working plans and specifications for the house shown on Page so and so."

Now, that is something we cannot do because we do not sell house plans, specifications, or lists of materials. To be blunt about it, we don't think we ought to. We think the building business is one job and getting out a magazine is another. We think it's our job to scare up the best, the brightest, the soundest new homes all over the country and show them to you in the pages of our magazine and in our two books of house plans. We think they will offer you the ideas, suggestions, and stimulus to go and do likewise. And we think that local architectural and building men are the ones to help you do likewise and put these ideas and schemes into the concrete shape of working drawings. For only someone at first hand can discuss the many individual problems you will have in building your home, will be able to adapt a scheme to your particular lot, will be able to fit in the exact number of rooms, the equipment, and the details you want, or will be able to reckon exactly in terms of local building materials, estimates, labor, and costs. If we were in the building business, selling plans, we probably couldn't be doing this magazine job at all—we'd want to be right out on the spot with you, revising plans for your needs, supervising construction, seeing that any plans we sold you and you and you were done right by. But the building business is one job, getting out our magazine is another. Dear Reader, we can't do both these things and do them well, and we don't believe that anybody else can.

We don't think this is any lack of service on our part, either. We think it is the soundest kind of service to refer you specifically to the architect who did the original house instead of selling you the kind of general plans and vague, elastic, general specifications and materials which can be got out for a few dollars. If the architect can sell you the exact working drawings, he will probably be glad to do so. But please remember that he is also a man in business, a man who has the right to charge for his services. You wouldn't read in a magazine of a doctor's successful diagnosis or a lawyer's brilliant handling of a case and then write to him asking him to send you his detailed formulas or procedures free of charge or for a few dollars. You know a doctor or a lawyer must see his client, study the case, prescribe for the individual, and charge accordingly. Well, the architect is a professional man, too, with technical skill and training worth reasonable payment. Of course we realize that in many areas of this country there isn't any architectural service available at first hand; we realize, too, that there are many persons whose building budgets couldn't possibly be stretched to include an architectural fee. We'll be only too glad to refer such inquiries to some of the national building materials associations and government agencies and the like, who are in a position to help with your specific problems.

Here are the Answers to the May Quiz

(Illustrated on page 96, May issue)

1. All single handles should always be turned to the right on dinner table or serving table, no matter whether they are handles of pitchers, teapots, or cups.
2. Secretary should be on other side of sofa to balance door. Obviously, when you have a long wall you should use it for your large pieces of furniture.
3. Picture is too small for the wall space and is hung too high. Pictures should preferably be hung at eye level. If your pictures are small, use a group of two or three to take up space of large picture.
4. If you have half-dormer windows, use down spouts around them for drainage. Don't carry gutter across the window.
5. If you have a hacienda or rancheria, these open supports for awnings would be appropriate. With a typical stone Colonial house, however, they are incongruous.
6. The foundation planting combines plants demanding an acid soil (azalea and rhododendron) and others that insist on a sweet or alkaline soil. These, for best results, should not be planted together.
7. Bananas should not be stored in refrigerator as it turns them dark. Leafy vegetables should be stored in hydrator or vegetable bags to prevent dehydration and wilting. Butter should always be covered to prevent its absorbing the odors of other foods and as a means of preserving its flavor.

AMAZING PROFESSIONAL MOTHPROOFING METHOD now available for home use!

NO ODOR...NO WRAPPING...NO STORING AWAY!

YESTERDAY Bill Johnson bought this new suit. When it arrived, Mrs. Johnson immediately sprayed it all over with LARVEX. That took only a few minutes and cost less than a single "pressing"—yet gave Bill's suit the positive LARVEX protection against moth damage that has been used for years by leading woolen mills, laundries and dry cleaners.

As a result of spraying all their clothes—old and new—once a year with LARVEX, the Johnsons will never find a moth hole. For moths starve to death rather than eat LARVEXED clothes, sofas, rugs and drapes.

LARVEX IS DIFFERENT . . .

SURE: Not even dry cleaning will impair the positive year-round protection LARVEX gives to woolens.

QUICK: With Larvex, it takes only a few minutes to mothproof a suit, or a dress and jacket for 12 months.

EASY: The Larvex bottle sprayer is so simple to use.

CHEAP: Only 79¢ per pint, $1.19 per quart, so it costs less than a single "pressing" to mothproof a man's suit for a whole year.

PLENTY, we say. And the beautiful part of it is that it's not only the Colonel's Lady who can enjoy what's going on, but Judy O'Grady, or, in other words, you and I and all the thousands like us. There have always been quantities of people who wanted pleasant homes, pleasantly furnished and decorated. But, in the old days, if they did not have abundant wherewithal, they just couldn't do a job that satisfied their desires. They could not go to a decorator for help; draperies and upholstery materials and carpets and rugs here were far too expensive. They could go to department and furniture stores, of course, but here, in the past, they could find only a limited assortment and this of a mediocre variety, dull and lifeless and usually lacking in any element of fine design or fine coloring.

This was true as recently as fifteen years ago. What a different story there is today! There is still the same desire for charming homes; even, we hope, a greater desire among a greater number of people. But today this desire can be satisfied even though the decorating must be planned on a budget.

For all across the land the finest and most skilled of designers and the most progressive manufacturers have gotten together to produce, not fine silks and satins so high in price that they are within reach of only a limited few, but wallpapers and fabrics and floor coverings that are of almost miraculous fineness at any price, and certainly at the prices at which they are offered today to Mrs. U.S.A. When you can buy glazed chintz in a decorator's color, designed from rare old documents, at 69¢ a yard; a beautiful 9 x 12 carpet for around $50, and smart wallpaper anywhere from 25¢ or 30¢ up, that's real achievement. Stop and think what this means compared to prices fifteen years ago. Printed chintzes and linens at $7.50 and up a yard (they were imported, hence their price), carpets and rugs starting at $15 or thereabouts, wallpaper from $1.50 a roll up. (We are speaking of really good design and good coloring, of course.)

It's an achievement, looking at it only from the standpoint of price, irrespective of the design quality. But when you realize that this merchandise at today's prices is really decorator-styled, the kind of thing offered only by decorator

How to make a room look twice its size!

IT'S ALL DONE WITH MIRRORS! No matter how narrow or how cramped a room may seem, you can give it the appearance of spacious luxury if you know the secret of mirrors. A long, built-in mirror panel like this is new and attractive, especially when combined with smart, overhanging book-shelves. It decorates and enlarges your room at the same time. And the mirror panel between the windows adds spaciousness. John Tavis, designer.

MULTIPLY BY 2 is the motto of Pittsburgh Mirrors. Use them on large wall areas like this . . . and you have a room that seems double its size. Without them, you have only a confining wall that's hard to make interesting. Pittsburgh Mirrors make your rooms seem lighter, gayer, and bigger. Designed by Studios of Serge Sacknoff.

WALLS OF GLASS in your bathroom make it seem larger, too. Carrara Structural Glass has a lustrous, reflective surface. What's more, Carrara walls are so colorful, permanent, and easy to clean, that you'll never be satisfied with any other kind once you've had them. Note the mirrored vanity, the Plate Glass tub enclosure, and the panel of cheerful PC Glass Blocks.

fifteen years ago, at prices beyond the reach of most of us, then "achievement" is an understatement!

Here's another aspect that makes us pretty proud of what's happening in the U.S.A. Once upon a time it was practically impossible to find draperies to "go with" upholstery or slip covers or vice versa. The decorator could do it for you, because he or she had entree to dozens of wholesale sources. But even the decorator had to work awfully hard to find the right fabrics to put together in one room or one house, and of course they were always expensive. Now, in America, manufacturers are turning out "ensembles"; combinations of two or three or even more fabrics all definitely planned for use together; planned in scale of design, in coloring, in texture. And this is something that was never done even in Europe, in the centers from which we expected the most in textile design. It's pretty exciting to find these ensembles right here, in the U.S.A., at popular prices!

When you figure the progress that has been made, it is pretty remarkable that Mrs. Consumer can buy such talent, perspicacity and judgment for so small an amount of money. As we say, once these qualities were confined to what the decorator had to offer the Colonel's Lady but now they are available to all of us thousands of Judy O'Gradys!

Dorothy W. Liebes

Cyrus Clark, Bigelow Sanford, Robert Alder, Imperial

Definitely on the luxury side, and as beautiful as skilled craftsmen and artists can make them, are the modern, hand-loomed fabrics at top right. Left, an exquisite, artist-designed dresser set, typical of many things bringing real art to useful, practical objects

We are excited, too, at the amazing skill and craftsmanship that have developed in the United States within comparatively recent years, in the fields of ceramics, textiles, and floor coverings, that really belong in the field of fine arts. Some of them already have, and more of them will, we predict, find their way into our museums. Obviously these things are not for the budget-minded; they are individually designed and created; usually there is only one of a kind in existence; and they are, truly, works of art and as such are recognized. Unfortunately the names of the artists doing these fine things are not so well known as they should be. We in this country have been accustomed to remember easily the names of talented craftsmen and designers abroad, but it's the old story of "a prophet in his own country —" here in America. We trust it will not be so much longer. Not merely for patriotism's sake, but because our own people are doing work that deserves recognition. We must give them that to which they are entitled if we can expect them to strive on, and if we are to encourage other native talent, still young and inexperienced, to continue to carry the torch for the United States in the realms of both the fine and the applied arts.

MAJOR & minor IDEAS for a GAYER SUMMER LIFE

Grade A example for slim budgets—

Mrs. Eva G. Armstrong's gay summer cottage on the Mohawk River

RIGHT at the top of our list of ideas for gay summer living comes something we'd all like to have: a cottage snuggled down beneath tall trees, near water, and away from the heat and bustle of the city. And most of us can have just such a place if we make our imaginations and budgets work hard enough for us. Mrs. Armstrong turned a gloomy, abandoned old cottage into the bright, cheerful place shown here. And there's no good reason why you couldn't do just about the same thing yourself. You'll soon see that this is more than a delightful little Swedish peasant and Early American style cottage. It's a Grade A example of what can be done on a very small budget—and of course nearly all summer house budgets are small, no doubt about that. It also proves that you don't have to be anything like a combined master craftsman, carpenter, seamstress, and union painter to accomplish such miracles.

The cottage had sagging porches, rickety railings, window panes that were completely broken or partly covered with imitation stained-glass paper. Patches of paint in half a dozen different colors gave extra proof that no one had even looked at the place for ten years. Inside, the walls were covered with layers upon layers of equally sad wallpapers. Ceilings, which had been painted with green water-paint, were discolored and stained. Briefly, the present owners bought a magnificent view, complete privacy, and a structurally sound but neglected cottage. That was all.

What they did with the abandoned old place is another story, and a good one. For example, look at the wonderful Swedish dining room, above, and try to believe that it used to be a sagging porch.

Two large windows on the south wall are flanked by cupboards—but definitely not just regular cupboards. These have "scalloped" shelves, and across the tops are merry little painted Swedish designs with a big red heart in the center of each one. A peasant print in bright blue, vermillion, and green made delightful curtains for the large windows, and

This famous label is a symbol of Bigelow quality and craftsmanship. It identifies all Bigelow rugs and carpets (and there are many other grades, weaves and styles besides Beauvais, to fit any budget). Look for this label at the edge of the rug or carpet.

Beauvais "Cathedral Pines" pattern (No. 1673) was the inspiration for this lovely Modern room, which was created for you by McCall's Magazine. The color scheme and furnishings are clever and imaginative, but moderately priced, in scale with the rug. Note to brides: why not suggest Beauvais to fond gift-inquiring relatives, or use one of the wedding checks?

inspired the best idea we've seen in a long time. Mrs. Armstrong enlarged this fabric design to scale and painted it on the back of an ugly but commodious old cupboard, making it serve as a right smart partition between dining room and kitchen! That idea is a new one to us, but the owners say that it was a photograph in THE AMERICAN HOME that showed them how to paint the wainscoting vibrant blue, topped off by a red chair rail. The sawbuck table and matching bench are painted blue, the floor is covered with linoleum in red, white, and black, and at the small windows are dotted swiss curtains on rods at top and bottom, tied smack in the middle with big bows of the peasant print.

Adjoining the dining porch is the kitchen—once gloomy and dark, now as gay as any room in the cottage. Its color scheme is the same bright, pleasant one, with two-tier calico curtains as a starting point. The cupboard mentioned above opens halfway on the kitchen, showing vermilion painted shelves full of colorful pottery. A graceful scallop was put on top to soften its harsh squareness.

In the living room is all the quaint charm you've ever wanted. It has a pitched ceil-

One porch made the bedroom above, with old dresser and spool bed painted a shining white. Other porch was turned into dining room at right. In the children's room, Venetian blinds are adapted to make neat closet and toy chest. Red hearts painted on the dresser knobs factory clothes closets along the back wall. A box between the units, made from the back and top of an old refrigerator, makes a fine toy chest. The wooden window valance, toy-box top, and window frames are painted red, and the dresser knobs are decorated with red hearts. Double-decker beds are stained a light maple to match a Swedish clock, and inexpensive peasant print toweling was used for curtains.

ing with open rafters stained brown, nice contrast against shining white walls. Small windows in the peaks give glimpses of green tree tops, blue skies, and sometimes a full summer moon. The six-paneled Colonial door and the small-paned windows are way beyond the general simplicity, and probably were bought years ago as just "old wood." Calico curtains sprinkled with tiny flowers on a red background add to the color accents of red and blue upholstery, cushions, and lamp shades. In keeping with the Early American character of the cottage, there are soft-toned braided and hooked rugs on the sand-colored floor.

Happily, there is no set period consistency throughout this informal little cottage, but the living room furnishings are mostly mellow old maple and pine. The owners are especially proud of Welch cupboard-like bookshelves that cover an opening left by the removal of a large window. The cupboard shelves were discovered in a secondhand shop for three dollars; the lower half was built from a broken-down oak table found on the cottage porch. Opposite, the window sash is flush with the outside wall, thus creating a recess for a collection of bottles in glowing blues, greens, and amber. Thin maple linings rescued from the drawers of a dresser beyond hope of repair made the shelves. Look at this living room again, shown in full glory on our cover, and you'll wish you could spend your vacation in just such an atmosphere. It's made to order for relaxation. In contrast, the bright dining room is gay as they make them and lots of fun. Between them, the two rooms provide the perfect ingredients for an ideal summer vacation—relaxation and fun.

All of the bedrooms were kept as simple as possible. The new bedroom, Victorian in flavor, is merely the old south porch neatly enclosed.

MAJOR & minor IDEAS for a GAYER SUMMER LIFE

WELL, by now you know what we meant by saying that almost anyone could accomplish such miracles. Is there anything hard about buying a few yards of bright, printed toweling and hemming it up into curtains? And, at least with the aid of a stencil, don't you think you could paint a simple design on the back of an old cupboard? (If not, we know you could find a cheap but wonderfully bright peasant wallpaper and paste it on!) And, as for finding secondhand furniture and painting it, we know that's easy. So you haven't an excuse for either doing without a cottage or, much worse, putting up with one of those dreary old-timers that are lined up by lakes and mountains all over the country. As for us, we'd rather go to the office every day than live with sagging furniture, faded fabrics, and dreadfully dreary colors.

And just to round out our plea for vacations that really count as vacations we're showing you on the following pages some wonderful ideas that can be bought ready made and at a price. You don't have to sew, paint, or hammer. You don't even have to shop much, because these things are typical of what you find in progressive stores.

We're beginning with the bedroom problem, to be sure you read our piece on it. (Last week end we stayed in such a fresh and charming guest room—hope yours is as nice!) Anyway, the point is that you can have a pretty summer bedroom, and washable, too, for the smallest "fee" ever: printed cotton comfortables like those on the following page for about $3, bed-

BACK now to page 68 to tell you about exciting things created in the U.S.A. for you.

NOW TO PAGE 70 and our lovely colors. We have thought of a room with that really wonderful chintz (less than $1.25 a yard) for draperies, against dark green, painted walls with either the lilac textured carpet, or the rayon-and-wool which you order in your own special colors. The former is about $9.50 a square yard, the latter about $11.75, and, mind you, these are exquisite decorator-style rugs.

The three fabrics grouped together are hand-loomed, again in the realm of fine decorative arts. Made to order, their prices vary according to size. Cotton and raffia are hand-woven together for stripe, center is a geometric pattern in bas-relief technique, and last is a fringed stripe.

Just below these are two suggestions for a room primarily blue. A subtle steel-blue wallpaper tint ($1.25 a roll) goes equally well with "Valley Forge," cotton print, about 45¢ a yard and 36" wide, or with the flowered chintz, about 85¢. The carpet is known as "Moroccan," and is about $100 for a 9 x 12. The little dressing table on the same page carries an exquisite set made of enamel on metal, done by an artist, Mitzi Otten, another of the "fine arts" that show such exciting progress.

ON PAGE 71: the ceramics are photographed from a group at the New York Ceramic Show. The techniques, left to right in top row, are slip decoration before firing, unglazed terra cotta, green crystalline glaze on a porcelain body, brown crystalline glaze, and a high-fired porcelain, by Gordon, Artis, the Bacher brothers, Rushmore, and Von Tury, in the same order. Below are a vase and a small bowl in blue and brown crackle, a shining, highly-glazed penguin, a porcelain-decorated bowl, and a terra cotta figure, by Soini, Willetts, Haile, and Schmitz.

The fabrics in the large group are all planned to go together, and we suggest them with a chartreuse wallpaper tint, and any one of the three floor coverings shown. These include a lime-tone "caracul" carpet, about $125 for 9 x 12, an exciting fringed cotton rug, which comes in rectangles, rounds or ovals, at about $6 a square yard, and Moroccan, about $100 for 9 x 12. The fabrics include a cotton satin stripe, about $2, an embossed cotton, about $2.75, a multi-colored stripe, about $2, a striking cotton hand print, and chevron texture, both about $2.75. Mind you, all these materials are full 54" wide, except the print, which is 50".

Wall papers, too, come in ensembles so your rooms may be harmoniously colored. The "Virginia" includes a picturesque scenic, about 75¢ a roll, a stripe, and a two-tone floral, each 90¢ a roll. Another wallpaper ensemble includes a stripe, an all-over foliage pattern with its border, each $1.50 a single roll, and a solid color to match, at 90¢ a roll.

One of the most useful ensembles we've seen in fabrics includes a medium-size floral cotton print, a striped floral, and a large floral. These are all about $1.50. The green carpet shown with them is known as Chantilly, and costs about $105 for a 9 x 12 size.

ON THIS PAGE: "China Pigs" is $3.90 a roll, and "Seed Store" $9.

Got any secret longings?

Daydreams are just as important as diplomas! So hang on to yours. After all, who knows . . .

Someday you (yes, little you!) may keep a theatre spellbound while you play a great love scene. Or you might be a celebrated writer, fashion designer, or top-flight radio star!

Or maybe the altar is your goal. And you dream of sweeping up an aisle in a cloud of tulle and lace . . . to take the name of a man who is yet unknown . . . a man who will cherish you always.

Well—daydreams can come true!

But it takes more than wishing to get what you want! For one thing—it takes plenty of self-confidence and poise. On trying days of the month, especially!

Jittery fears needn't ruffle your poise though, if you use Kotex* sanitary napkins. (Not with the moisture-resistant safety-shield that's inside every Kotex pad!)

You needn't worry about embarrassing, tell-tale outlines, either! For Kotex has flat, pressed ends that never show. Never give your secret away!

And how grateful you'll be on strenuous days that Kotex doesn't chafe!

You'll sail through days crowded with work and social engagements . . . scarcely conscious of wearing a pad. For Kotex is less bulky (so naturally more comfortable).

Now you know why Kotex can help you career girls take difficult days in your stride . . . can help you forget the "grim business" and concentrate on your work and play!

And because millions of other women also know this . . . Kotex is the most popular of all napkins. More popular, actually, than all other brands added together!

This is just to remind you that Kotex comes in three different sizes: Super—Regular—Junior. And all three sizes sell for the same low price!

JUST turn us loose with a bunch of travel circulars, and we're off to the land of glamor, romance, and adventure. Why, it took only rounding up travel conveniences to put us in a fine mood. Luggage comes fit for a king and your budget. The group at top left is tweedy looking, below it is a dull blue with white pin-stripe, and at right below are two designed for automobile travel. All are exceedingly durable, have wonderful pockets and hangers and such. In top row below, left to right, we're reminding you to take a clothes brush and collapsible iron so you can be your own valet, guest-size soap or a terry cloth bath mitt with soap sewn inside, a neat little manicure kit, a sewing kit for rips and runs. Beauty being important as ever, take the cosmetic kit that could double for a purse, or the slightly larger one that has room for a nightie, too. Between them is the perfect set-up for all motor trippers: a motoring log, the map to end all maps—in a case, and you just wind it instead of spreading it out all over the car floor—a combination key ring and change gadget so you don't have to dive into your bag for a dime bridge toll. Our prize for an amusing and practical idea goes to the tiny zipper bag of miniature clothespins and clothesline on suction cups (bottom row) so you can hang up the undies and hose to dry over night. Smartest trick is the enormous navy-blue canvas beach hat with red-and-white striped crown that, believe it or not, folds to fit in a pocket of the matching striped beach bag—and at $1 each! Well, we wish we were going with you. We wish it so much we'll even help you pack. Write us, and we'll send our best personal tips on what and how to pack painlessly, quickly and minus all the wrinkles.

This month it's The Favorite American Meal

FAMILY SUNDAY DINNER combines fried chicken and strawberries—the luscious old stand-bys—but with an entirely NEW effect!

Photographs by F. M. Demarest

WHAT is sweeter than the perfume of sun-ripened strawberries and what so stirs remembrance in the heart? Perhaps it is memories of tea in an old English garden with a wreath of crimson, unhulled strawberries on a white and gold Staffordshire plate with little silver bowls of sugar and clotted cream. Or it may be of dinner under a hedge of white lilacs in Normandy, ending with a wicker basket of wild, wood strawberries nested in beech leaves and eaten with cream slightly turned by the first thunder of summer. Or, and most poignant of all, perhaps, it brings back the memory of the strawberry festival of other days, the mid-summer gala night of nearly every town and village of the America of fifty years ago. It would be a soft June night, sweet with syringa and roses; candle-light orange lanterns would swing from dark trees, turning the leaves of oak and maple into bronze and flooding with gold the white-draped tables beneath. Pompadoured women—their rustling taffeta skirts protected by stiffly starched, lace-trimmed white aprons tied about their ample waists—presided at enormous cut-glass bowls overflowing with great, luscious strawberries, ruby red and flecked with gold. Heaped high on a dinner plate in a crimson juicy mound, flanked by a liberal helping of velvety, home-made vanilla ice cream, the berries were dusted with pulverized sugar and deluged with thick, unbeaten country cream.

And, as if that were not enough, still more highly pompadoured girls their throats enclosed in boned white net, above balloon-sleeved, beruffled dresses of flowered organdie, offered silver baskets of the cakes which, their fond mammas assured the attendant high-collared, straw-hatted swains in pointed patent leather boots, they had baked all by their very own selves: Moonlight, peach blossom, marble, angel food, gold, silver, hickory, and black walnut, ribbon, jelly, and chocolate cakes—more kinds of cake than even a hungry youngster had the courage or the capacity to undertake.

Um-m-m! What Grand Summer PIES!

These pies will really win praise from the family. The crust (baked or graham cracker) will be crisp and crunchy. And they "cook" to delicious perfection in the ice-box. Besides, they have less calories than ordinary pies.

VELVET-SMOOTH CHOCOLATE TREAT! A real man's pie, but  $\frac{1}{3}$  less calories than ordinary chocolate pie. The secret is Knox...it's all gelatine. Flavored gelatine dessert powders are  $\frac{7}{8}$  sugar and  $\frac{1}{8}$  gelatine!

look what Shredded Ralston can do for you!
It adds zest to tomato juice, a new touch of flavor to soups, and makes the most dainty and delicious appetizers.

it's Bite Size
NO MUSS • NO CRUMBLING

SHREDDED RALSTON

HERE'S a cereal with lots of uses! First and foremost, of course, as a glorious breakfast dish! Nourishing whole wheat... ready-to-eat... in a convenient "bite size" form... with a flavor that's oh-so-grandly different! It's really quite a miracle how, served with fruit and milk or cream, it coaxes lazy appetites. Digests so easily, too, it acts to give you quick energy for work or play!

But wait, that's just a "starter." There isn't any finer treat than this: Shredded Ralston, prepared like salted nuts, to go with soups, tomato juice, or as appetizers. Dainty — different — delicious — these morsels "hit the spot" with everyone... at any hour!

So make a note to order Shredded Ralston today! Much thrifter to use because it can be served so many ways... thrifter, too, because Shredded Ralston costs less per ounce than most nationally advertised ready-to-eat cereals — only half as much as some!

Money-back guarantee is printed on every package!

If Shredded Ralston doesn't make an instant "hit" with your family, the purchase price will be promptly refunded.

At the end of the festival, the minister said a few words, the ladies preened themselves, the sweethearts whispered, and a hymn was sung. Then the horses were untied from the long row of posts behind the church and all drove home, too full for utterance of marvelous food and romance.

The rite of the strawberry festival still lingers in New England and the Middle West. It is still held there, reviving a memory which cannot, must not, die. So why not blend the glamorous past with the busy present in a strawberry festival of your own? Our little table shows a glimpse of a sunny Sunday breakfast, built around America's favorite fruit, the most magnificent of all the berries with which our land is blessed. Perhaps we are all thinking more closely and fondly of the things that seem native and our own these days. Perhaps we are puffing out our chests a bit over our own traditions and strutting slightly at the thought of our dearly-loved customs. At any rate, when it comes to the pride of our hearts in summer, that noble fruit, the strawberry, we can wax as eloquent and poetic as you please. It isn't humanly possible to say too much in its praise.

It doesn't make sense to be dull, it doesn't take money to be gay—

If you're feeling awfully summery and sort of lazy, too—slightly like a cat in the sun—here's a little breakfast table to pamper all the luxury-loving instincts in you. It looks so cool and waited on and, yet, what is there really to it? The strawberries are just washed like little boys' Sunday School faces, the sugar's in neat little mounds—each on its own big green leaf—and all you have to do is eat. (Don't serve finger bowls. They're too genteel for this breakfast. You ought to lick your fingers after strawberries in the sun at breakfast—and not hurry, either.) It's the space on the table that makes it look inviting and cool and lazy, too. You don't have to have all of the actual plates and linen and the glass table that we have shown you on page 84—it's the idea of strawberries and yellow-green and plenty of room. But, it is pretty, isn't it?

And right now is a good time to say frankly that, when we show table settings and party plans and so on, we never want you to feel just that they are attractive but that, since you don't have identical plates or linen or whatever, you could never do anything like them. The real point, of course, of any picture is to make you want to do similar things and to show you new things available in the shops, true—but, unless there is an idea, a really truly constructive idea there, as well as the charm of the arrangement—the whole thing is pretty useless. Hence, with this little table we think the colors are unusual and that perhaps the idea of a strange yellow-green and strawberry red for a June combination would make people think and perhaps work out new color schemes of their own. Perhaps, if you're planning to buy some new plates anyway, these delicate glass ones, which can easily double for salads, fruits, and desserts, may be just the thing you are looking for.

At the big table, by keeping the ends open and seating people on the sides only, the ends can be advantageously used for serving—in our favorite family style—and then, too, we think it's fun to use two big whooshy bouquets on the family table. Why save them just for guests?

The Family Gala ~

Without any effort at all you can combine another great American custom with your strawberry festival—Sunday dinner, the family gala, everybody home from school and work. Maybe everybody has gathered at home just before starting out on all sorts of vacations. With a little bow, we present this table in a slightly red, white, and blue color scheme and the pièce de résistance of the meal is, but naturally, fried chicken. It is, however, Mr. Herman Smith's fried chicken and that is something else again.

It's an all-American family gala—the works, served with assurance that "everything will be really nice." On crackling white damask are huge red roses and white lilacs, the pride and joy of thousands of gardens and hedgerows, growing like everything at thousands of back doors, and come to Sunday dinner in a pair of fine white vases from the local five-and-ten. The china is blue and gold—blue like the sky and all that—and long, long stemmed crystal goblets because it's a party—the nicest kind since it is "just the family," not too formal and yet so festive.

For this occasion, a sort of hail and farewell party with American food served in the American manner in the American home, we are having a lobster cocktail, and it is, believe us please, no ordinary cocktail sauce that is served on New England's prize this time. Then the chicken and fixings galore—only ones that make sense, not just twenty kinds of relish, pickles, and jams and jellies. One sublime sauce for the chicken—a sauce of strawberries—and what do you think of that? It's not too tart, nor too sweet, and it's one of the best recipes in our festival. With fried chicken, we think there should always be mashed potatoes. But they shouldn't be just the usual kind for our family gala, so behold feather-bed potatoes—and be quick about it because they won't remain visible long, once you have tasted them, for anyone to do much beholding. Corn, tomatoes, and asparagus, now there's a trio of vegetables for you!

When it came to selecting a dessert, even Mr. Smith hesitated just for a moment. The right ending to this menu had to look opulent and very strawberry festival, but it could not be too much. We hold with the theory that strawberries, while amenable in the extreme to all manner of treat-

Mrs. Walker wins a prize for inventing this "Paradise" Cake!

Mrs. E. M. Walker just can't resist experimenting with recipes. Her prize-winning Paradise Cake combines an old family cake recipe with a be-avenly new filling of her own. We think little blue-eyed "Peaches" Walker is mighty lucky to have such a good cook for a mother!

PARADISE CAKE

To duplicate the prize-winning results with this recipe you must use Royal Baking Powder as Mrs. Walker did. Its action is different than others, and to help get delicious prize-worthy cakes every time you bake, rely on Royal—the steady action baking powder, made with wholesome Cream of Tartar.

- 2 1/2 cups cake flour
- 2/3 teaspoon salt
- 3 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder
- 3/4 cup milk

- 2 cups freshly cooked, frozen, or canned lobster
- 1/2 cup stiff mayonnaise
- 1/2 cup cream stiffly whipped

Cream shortening; add sugar slowly, beating in well. Add unbeaten eggs, one at a time, beating well after each egg is added. Add lemon extract. Sift together dry ingredients and add alternately with milk to first mixture. Bake in 2 greased nine-inch layer cake pans in moderate oven at 375° F. about 25 minutes. Cool. Put layers together and cover top and sides with Paradise Filling. Sprinkle top and sides with 1 cup shredded coconut. Makes 1 two-layer cake.

PARADISE FILLING

- 1 cup dried apricots
- 1 1/2 cups warm water
- 1 1/2 cups powdered sugar
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice

Soak apricots in warm water for 1 hour; bring to boil and cook 2 minutes. Put through sieve. Drain pulp of excess juice, reserving 1 cup pulp for filling. Mix powdered sugar, cornstarch and salt; add apricot pulp. Cook in double boiler about 15 minutes or until thick, stirring occasionally. Peel and slice bananas; add to apricot mixture; cook 10 minutes longer or until bananas are softened. Add lemon juice. Remove from heat. Beat until smooth. Cool.

IF YOU WANT "PRIZE-WINNING" RESULTS—

Follow recipe carefully, using level measurements! Oven temperature is important, and above all—remember the important part baking powder plays in cake results. Steady action baking powder, like Royal, begins expansion the moment it is stirred into the batter. Royal cakes have a fine, even texture . . . do not dry out quickly . . . keep their delicious flavor and moisture longer. For four generations outstanding cooks have relied on dependable Royal for all their baking. They knew what Royal could do. Why not follow their example to help you get delicious prize-winning results, every time!

YOU SHOULD KNOW

that Royal is the only nationally distributed baking powder made with Cream of Tartar—a product of fresh, wholesome grapes. Pure Cream of Tartar makes Royal cost more per can—but the difference per baking between Royal and ordinary baking powders is only a fraction of a cent. Use dependable Royal whenever you bake—it's well worth the difference in price.

FREE—ROYAL COOK BOOK. If you bake at home you'll want a copy of the Royal Cook Book which tells how to make delicious cakes, biscuits, muffins, pies, puddings and main dishes. Send your name and address to Royal Baking Powder, 691 Washington St., New York City, Dept. 56.

ment and to all sorts of combinations, are still stars in their own right—raw, scrubbed, and shining. So, our dessert is strawberries, au naturel, with a few excellent companions such as oranges and a fluff of meringue and a suggestion of brandy and sugar. We like it so much that we are giving it a special place as our Bridge Dessert this month. When this menu was tried here in the office, the members of the staff who tested it all said just one thing, "Mmmnnn . . . ah!"—short and concise and so exactly what we meant. And this will be your reaction, too, or we miss our guess.

You see, when it came to selecting the kind of party we wanted for this month—the kind of recipes we thought were really American, and from all over the countryside, too—we had quite a little time. Americans like parties. They like good food and know it, serve it, and appreciate it, if they get it. But busy women will fuss only so much. So, why not do the most usual party in everybody's family so well it turns into a gala—and remember the season and the strawberries and the wonderful times everybody has at church socials. We've combined them all and we liked it—

THE opening of the strawberry season is one in which every lover of good food revels. Many a meal will be based entirely on a mammoth old-fashioned strawberry shortcake, such as suggested in our Gourmet's Menu of the Month. Many a good New England housewife will raise her eyebrows at the thought of a cheese sauce on baked beans—but watch the men ask for seconds and even thirds.

- 1 tsp. dry mustard
- 1 tsp. brown sugar

- 1/2 cup sliced almonds
- 2 whole cloves
- 4 tbsp. red jelly
- 1 tsp. grated orange peel
- 1 tsp. grated lemon peel
- 1 1/2 cups port wine
- 5 tbsp. orange juice
- 2 tbsp. lemon juice

- Whole strawberries
- 8 large navel oranges

Pile meringue between oranges, garnish with whole strawberries. Serve half or whole bridge dessert, to which each person would enjoy helping himself. A lovely bridge dessert, to which each person would enjoy helping himself. Serve your favorite cake as an accompaniment. This dessert is so attractive it may be used as the centerpiece for the table. Serves 8-12.

Note: Egg whites beaten when at room temperature are lighter; about 2 tbsp. brandy or sherry may be poured over fruit before serving.

MAKE ELECTRICITY
WORK for you!

HERE'S WHAT IT WILL COST:

WILLIAM WEST
Elmhurst, N. Y.

HAVE you thought of the many time-saving devices and conveniences electricity now offers to you?

Appliances are so fully automatic that leisure is gained by the use of them. Laundering is now so simplified that after the clothes are put in the machine, they are soaked, washed, rinsed, and spun dry enough for ironing by the turning of a switch. Simpler Yes, and an easy way to gain a free afternoon. Time out of the kitchen, without neglecting the family's meal, can be arranged by placing the meal in the oven or electric roaster, setting the time clock and then you are on your way, returning home later to find your meal ready to serve.

If you're the average housewife, taking care of your home with only occasional help, preparing healthful meals for the family, and doing the weekly laundry, you'll want to investigate these many conveniences and find whether they will justify their cost in your budget. And have you really given any thought to just how much that kitchen light bulb is costing you to light the dark corners in your kitchen, lessen eye strain, and give you added comfort in performing your duties?

Just for fun, let's have our own little quiz program—find how much it costs to operate certain appliances and what you get in return.

I began by asking 100 electric-bill-payers how much they paid to operate their vacuum cleaners, clocks, toasters, and so on. Half of my informants are men, half of them women. Mostly they're married people, though some are single. Most of them make $2500 to $5000 a year, though a few make $1500 or less and a few earn $15,000 or more. Most of them live in New York, New Jersey, or Connecticut. A majority live in apartments, many in suburban homes, a few in "private houses"; and one lives the year round on a houseboat. Lawyers, office managers, bankers, secretaries, salesmen, housewives, accountants, editors were questioned. With answers as much as 60,000% incorrect, it seems high time that users and prospective users of electricity know how much work they can really get done for their well-earned dollar. Answers by the first ten persons I questioned are typical:

Q. How much to run an electric clock for one month?

A. (in order questioned) 50¢, 1/10¢, 10¢, 2¢, 70¢, 3¢, 50¢, 10¢, 20¢, 10¢.

Actual monthly cost of current for a clock is 8¢. (Information and actual costs are from the Consolidated Edison Co. These rates may vary somewhat in other parts of the country, of course, but it is interesting to note the comparative costs of the different appliances.)

Q. How much to shave with an electric razor for 10 minutes each morning for an entire month?

A. 15¢, 20¢, 3 1/2¢, 20¢, 10¢, 3¢, 10¢, 10¢, 20¢, 20¢.

Well, the 20¢ estimate would take care of ten years of shaving. Consolidated Edison says that 1¢ pays for "26 hours, 56 minutes of shaving." Allowing 10 minutes per shave, this is equal to five months' shaving. Some of the answers, as shown above, are as much as 50,000 to 60,000% high.

Q. How much to use a combination mixer-juicer to squeeze your breakfast oranges daily for an entire month?

A. 30¢, 3¢, 25¢, 3¢, 15¢, 25¢, 3¢, 15¢, 10¢, 15¢.

Actual cost of current, 2/3¢ per month, says Consolidated Edison.

Here the reader may interrupt to say: "But in these days of cheap electricity, who cares about its cost?" I'd say about 85% of the nation cares. Consider that after a half-century of experience, more-miles-per-gallon is still the No. 1 selling point of automobile manufacturers. Consider typical apartment houses of a big city. They rent for from $30 to $50 a month, and "electric refrigerators are supplied by landlord," the swinging signs advise. But look overhead: hundreds of miles of window-sills crowded with dusty packages of food prove that countless tenants won't pay 5 cents a day to keep that free refrigerator cold!

Q. How much to run a heating pad (90% of those questioned had heating pads) for 7 hours?

A. 7¢, 5¢, 3¢, 7¢, 5¢, 5¢, 6¢, 2¢, 3 1/2¢, 7¢.

Actual cost for 7 hours is 1/5¢.

Q. Monthly cost of operating an electric range?

A. $10, $1.50, $3, $1.50, $2, $2, $15, $4, $4.50.

So it went—through 30 appliances. Refrigerator estimates ranged from 50¢ a month to $5—900% apart. All but one of the radio guesses were too high. Sewing machine operation was suspected to be 5¢ or 10¢ an hour; one guess was 1/20¢ while another was 20,400% higher which would make it 12¢ an hour. Actual cost is 3/4¢.

These 100 Americans of more than average intelligence did not estimate, they made wild conjectures. For years each has been paying a monthly bill of from $2 to $35 for "kilowatt hours." Yet not one of the first 22 questioned "had the slightest idea" of what a KW is! (A watt is 1/746 of a horse power; a kilowatt is 1000 watts. Try it on your friends.)

Here is a classified table prepared by Consolidated Edison which may be very enlightening to you and helpful if you should want to stage your own quiz program at some future time:

OUTLETS FOR ELECTRICAL CONVENIENCE

Your home will be more convenient if you have G-E special purpose outlets installed. For instance, G-E wall clock outlets permit electric clocks to be hung on the wall in kitchens, halls, etc. with no cord showing. G-E outdoor outlets enable lamps and appliances to be used on terraces and open porches.

Advantages from other G-E wiring materials are dramatically portrayed in a booklet, "The Poor Wife's Revenge."

"My son was allergic to parties, but now . . ."

NELL BATES PENLAND, Waycross, Ga.

MY CHILD disliked parties as heartily as his mother before him, once—Bob gets along well with other children. Our back yard has always been the gathering place for the neighborhood, and since we live near three schools and there is always a crowd of children in this immediate vicinity, Bob has lots of companionship. But "parties" were another matter. Each time Bob was invited to one I bought two presents, one for him to take, and one for him to have when he came home! A bribe, but effective. He went to the parties.

As the years passed we used every possible method to widen our son's horizon—Sunday school, kindergarten, music school, and their social activities. Finally, when he became a Scout, and interested in Scout cooking and outdoor meals, we built an outdoor fireplace in the garden. The Scout troop was invited over often for its supper meetings.

After this start we gave actual parties for him. One was a stamp collectors' party. About twenty of his school friends, collectors, were invited to bring their albums, to dress in foreign costumes or to bring some curio to exhibit, and to tell something about one of the countries represented or about his or her favorite stamp. We had contests about the various countries and gave albums and packages of stamps as prizes. Our refreshments consisted of foreign dishes, Chinese chow mein, American and Swiss cheese, Irish potato chips, French bread, Russian tea, and Scotch scones.

Another successful party was an indoor prom. I invited eight couples to play games, dance, or sit and talk anywhere they liked (I reserved my bedroom for myself, since I didn't want to appear to chaperone). They could play the three radios, eat anything they found (I left peanuts and fruit in the kitchen but put away the refreshments, fortunately), but they could not go outside, this was strictly indoors!

About ten-thirty I put paper plates, cups, punch, platters of sandwich fillings, bread, potato chips, and cake on the kitchen tables, and let the crowd make their own sandwiches and clean up the kitchen.

These efforts to make our son a social being have not always been easy, of course. But when Bob rushes home now to tell us of some invitation, or to ask if he can't invite his gang in for the evening, we feel that our time and effort could not have been better expended.

JEAN COWLES

were stored in drawers. Cellophane covers went over the lamp shades, as they could be easily dusted and would save time, since it would not be necessary to remove the shades for brushing and cleaning. Even in the kitchen, many things, such as the big bread box, were cleaned out and put away. One of my large refrigerator dishes served as a temporary bread box right out on the kitchen table. This was much easier to wash out than the big box. I cleared shelves of spice boxes, bowls, pitchers, and odds and ends of china which, I am ashamed to say, had accumulated over the winter. An old kitchen clock which no longer functioned, I threw away. Down came the kitchen curtains. And later down came all the curtains in the house, for that matter. The rooms looked cooler, and certainly the curtains were not collecting dust for me to brush off. I even got so lazy that I put away the bedspreads and made up the beds in the morning all ready for night. This gave me a mental chuckle though it may not have saved me many minutes. Anything that makes you feel free has, in a measure, freed you from a sense of being tied down by a house.

Since I knew approximately how much time it took me ordinarily to clean my rooms, I allowed myself just half that amount, and cleaned as far as that time took me. I was strict with myself about this, for it is far too easy to clean just a little more, then a little more, until before you know it your free hours are gone and so is your vacation. In this way, I got out of the house when I had planned, and was off for an afternoon of freedom at the beach, or to the library for a long afternoon of reading up on some of the subjects which had haunted me during the winter.

As for the culinary achievements of this new regime, I think my family could not complain. Marketing, which is apt to be a time-consuming process, I reduced to a minimum. By keeping a day-by-day inventory in the kitchen, I soon learned what I needed in the way of staple groceries and cleansers for a week, and these I bought on Monday mornings when the store was not crowded. Fresh fruits and vegetables I got three times a week, usually over the telephone, but sometimes, as I was sallying forth on some excursion, I would stop at the market and have my purchases delivered the next morning. I made it a strict rule never to go to a store on Saturday, buying everything needed for the week end on Friday. If I did not want this all in the house on Friday, the grocer would deliver an order on Saturday

Tired? Need a rest? I cut MY work in half —write your own variations to it!

THIS is the confession of a woman who worked to be lazy. When the number of my family was cut in half last summer, I evolved a plan to cut the housework in half, also. I had a good reason for this, for I had to vacation at home last year and I needed some good long hours to myself during the daytime. So when I got my travelers off for a month, and had three to cater to instead of six, I began to look over my house with a calculating eye to see how I could arrange for my own time off. Ordinarily, I keep pretty closely to a household schedule, but what I wanted to do now was to cut this schedule in half. Since I knew I would still have to clean, to cook, and to wash, I decided that I would find a way to do half as much of each job, and take the other half of the time for my own personal enjoyment.

The first evening I spent an hour going over the whole house and putting away unnecessary accessories that we wouldn't really need during the summer. I knew I could save time by eliminating the dusting and care of these little objects. Pictures, vases, superfluous smoking accessories all which I had selected on Friday. Here, I must give credit to the telephone, for I used it more than ever before. Not only the grocery, but the drug store, the fish dealer, and the stationery store were frequently called. Since ice cream is a favorite dessert at our house in summer, I often phoned the druggist to send me some for dinner. Sometimes, I would telephone for a pound of mixed candies for dessert, or for salted nuts to eat along with the appetizers. One rainy afternoon when I felt like reading at home, I called up the stationery store to see what new magazines were in, and had half a dozen sent up. You may think I pampered myself, but after all this was my vacation.

I discovered that my fish dealer would cook shrimps, or lobster, or pick out fresh crab meat, if I telephoned him in plenty of time, so here again the telephone scored a hit with the cook and the family. Boiling lobster is something I would rather leave to someone else, and it makes a delicious summer salad. With a box of potato chips, relishes, iced coffee, and fresh fruits, my family asks for nothing more on a hot summer evening.

1 "Something's got to be done!" fumes Mary. "This is the last night I'm having Junior awakened by that old clatterbox refrigerator of ours. Tomorrow, I'm—" "Tomorrow," I bust in, "you and I are finding out about this Servel refrigerator they claim can't make a noise!"

2 "You see, a tiny gas flame does the work," explained the salesman who called. "Servel couldn't keep you awake, even if you slept inside it. There's not a single moving part in the whole freezing system. Nothing to make a sound. Nothing to wear, either!"

3 Folks who've had experience with other makes of automatic refrigerators are quick to find that Servel Electrolux has all those big operating advantages they want most... has all the latest features and conveniences, too. Survey after survey shows that, among owners of other-type refrigerators, the trend is to the Gas Refrigerator for their second automatic.

If you look at one refrigerator, look at Servel—If you look at more than one, look at Servel to see the difference

4 "We've learned our lesson," smiles Mary the other day. "Junior hasn't missed a wink of sleep since we changed to Servel. And his Ma and Pa have done all right, too!" "You bet we were smarter," I agree. "Imagine putting up with any other kind of box! Especially when the Gas Refrigerator pays the installments with what it saves on running cost and upkeep and in other ways!"

I made a thorough investigation into sandwich fillings of all sorts, and always had a supply of both homemade and commercial ones on hand. This is not a new idea, but the variety I managed to find was new to me. On some hot nights, a tray of really assorted sandwiches, supplemented by a large bowl of salad, made a satisfactory porch supper. I never gave myself more than half an hour to get dinner ready and, as we eat late, that gave me a long afternoon to myself. Canned and frosted foods helped me out many a night when I had overstayed my kitchen leave. Having a supply of foods in the refrigerator and on the pantry shelf always made the meal problem easier, too. I served many of the meals on trays, which eliminated setting the table and much dish washing.

To wash for a family is often a never-ending summer job. I went at this part of halving my work by looking with a critical eye at every piece that went into the washer, wondering if we could have done without using it. Paper household products I used as never before. All the table linen, hand towels, and roller towels were put away for the summer. Bureau covers went into the drawer. The laundry was the hardest item to cut in half, because of our need of fresh clothes in the hot weather, but I did reduce materially the hours it took me to wash and iron.

This half-time housekeeping earned me a good vacation and I began to wonder why I could not make use of it at other times of the year when outside community duties demanded a good deal of my time. So this last winter, I again put vacation plans into effect, warning the family what to expect, and earned the free hours I needed in the same way I earned my vacation hours in the summer. It's surprising how much time can be saved by making out a schedule and organizing your work. Steps and motions saved are time gained—and I was utterly amazed when I discovered the needless hours I had been putting into housekeeping during all these years, for I could still do full justice to my important job of homemaking. I found I had become so engrossed in my daily routine that I had forgotten a house was meant to be lived in and really enjoyed.

which were formerly wasted as I waited for them to be delivered.

I found that my release of time made me a much more enjoyable member of the family as I could now contribute some interesting news of the activities I was finding time to participate in. After all, it is certainly an important part of every homemaker's job to keep herself mentally alert. The family became tremendously interested in my project and our family relationships were so much improved—everybody benefiting—that they helped in every possible way to make it work.

An American custom we're NOT really proud of!

ISABEL WILEY GREAR
Webster Groves, Mo.

IS THAT you, Katie"? you ask over the phone. "We've decided to go to a show tonight. Will you come over and stay with the children"? Every night in neighborhoods throughout the country young girls receive such calls. "Oh, yes"! they answer eagerly. An extra fifty or seventy-five cents! Why, with that they can buy. . . .

An easy way to earn money—just "staying with children"? Yes, it is—sometimes. But more often than not a very troubled Katie goes home later that evening, and as she pours out her problems to her mother, she always ends with a wail, "If only they'd tell me"!

Katie and all the other fifteen to eighteen-year-old neighborhood helpers like her are inexperienced, of course. They are shy, earnest, but inarticulate. They go to a work which has no rules. And because of the haphazard meaning given to the phrase "staying with the children," they are often imposed upon—treated as no adult would treat another adult. But they make no protest, lured into silence by the orgy of "gadget-buying" their earnings will provide. They're just at the "gadget" age.

If these girls could band together and fashion a set of rules, their first

The young girl who "stays with the children" while you go out in the evening—do you give her adequate instructions, pay her promptly for the number of hours she works, see that she gets home safely? If you don't, you should be ashamed, too!

one would be, "Please spend a few minutes giving us definite instructions." Too often the parents, off for an impromptu party, meet the girl at the front door with a hasty, "Thank goodness you could come! Just keep 'em alive until we get home." A fifteen-year-old girl—three young children. She is supposed to "keep them alive." But what about bed-time hours? What about the "something to eat" they claim they always have? What about Jimmy who announces, "That's my medicine. I get some every night," and climbs up toward several bottles on a shelf? What about the radio thrillers they glibly say they are always allowed to hear? What about covers, and open windows? Little Betty has a bad cold and—oh, why didn't the parents wait long enough to explain some of these things?

The second rule would be, "Please tell us ahead of time if staying with the children is going to include a casual, '—and you might wash the children's supper dishes.'" Katie's new dress had to go to the cleaner's after she was left one night with some dishes and a broiler to wash. "But," she protested to her mother, "when they asked me to come over they said just, 'Can you do your home-work over here while we run out to see the Franklins' new house?' They never mentioned the dishes."

Another protest may startle you, but it is needed. Sometimes two couples leave their children together in one house or the other, and calmly expect the young girl to take care of them all. "They can go to bed just anywhere. We'll sort them out when we come home." Oh, no? But it does happen. It's not hard to imagine—the running, the climbing, and shrill yelling, the fights and the tears before the fledgling neighborhood helper can separate and quiet these children who are made excitable by the complete disruption of their routine. This doubling-up is unfair to the children, and to the girl who receives merely the usual pay.

That pay is another disturbing factor. The girls ask—but just each other and their own mothers—if they haven't the right to expect more pay for a six-hour period than for a four-hour evening. And that is undeniable. But most home-coming parents seem to think that "staying with the children" involves no time limits for them, while the girl's pay remains fixed. "And we wish," Katie and her friends sigh, "that they wouldn't fumble through their purses and pockets and then tell us that forty-one cents is all they have left, and will that be enough, or that they'll send over the money tomorrow. 'Tomorrow' is often forgotten."

Most important of all, though—wiping out all thoughts of pay or spattered clothes or a house that grows entirely too chilly around eleven o'clock—is the lack of a telephone number to call in an emergency. Croup or an asthmatic attack strikes in the home, or a short circuit leaves the house in darkness. Where are the parents? Why didn't they say, "We're going to Mr. and Mrs. Greenes' on Hawthorne Street," instead of just, "We're going to a card party"?

Katie and her friends and the girls like her throughout the country deserve a better introduction into the business world. They are eager to do what is right. But they are handicapped by the seemingly indifferent attitude of the parents.

True, Katie, for instance, may have stayed several times in the house next door, and may be praised as "perfectly capable." But what Mrs. Robinson wants done for her children and when, and how, may not be at all like the routine you have established in your home. Take time out to tell her

And now, a plea from the mothers of all these neighborhood helpers. Do bring our daughters home to us. Don't send them out into the night alone. To us they are still little girls, and need protection, tall and strong as they seem in comparison with your three-year-olds. You will understand later—when your daughters are asked to stay with someone's children
