There's no "mother-in-law problem" in this happy home

Harry and I talked things over after his father died. His mother certainly couldn't manage that big old house by herself. The only sensible thing to do was to have her live with us.

I urged her to come. She was grateful but hesitantit would be a heart tug to give up her own home. And then, that old bugaboo, two women under one roof-

"But we really have a nice big bedroom," I told her. "You can have a lot of your own things . . . your desk . . your pictures . . . whatever else you'd like. Just ship them on ahead and we'll have everything ready."

We were clearing the bedroom when I had my idea. "Harry," I said, "there's enough space here for a little apartment. It'll cost something, but we won't always have your mother with us and ...

He squeezed my hand. "I'm a lucky guy," he said softly. "Not every wife would be so sweet about having her mother-in-law come to live with her. What would you like to do?"

"We could partition off a corner of the room," I told him. "Put a little bathroom here, a compact kitchen over there, and maybe a glassed-in flower porch in the other corner. You know how she loves flowers.'

Harry worked with the plumber and carpenter. I planned the furnishings. A new floor of Armstrong's Linoleum came first. I wanted a floor that was beautiful, yet easy to care for. I knew mother would insist on doing her own cleaning. With the Armstrong Floor selected, the rest of the decorating was easy.

Mother was hardly inside the door when she said something about "not visiting for too long." I just took her up to the apartment. She stood a minute looking around. Then she turned to us and swallowed hard. "It's so nice to be home again," she whispered.

Seeing mother's expression at that moment was worth a thousand times everything we had done.

Send for your decorating book, "Ideas for Every Room," by the noted interior decorator, Hazel Dell Brown. Its 32 pages are packed with full-color illustrations and ideas for new homes and old. For your copy, send 10¢ (outside U. S. A., 40¢) to Armstrong Cork Company, 4907 Pine Street, Lancaster, Penna. Here's a home within a home. What was once a seldom-used bedroom has been made a charming apartment with its own bathroom, a kitchen that can be hidden away at the pull of a drawstring, and an attractive flower-room porch. Apartments need practical, easy-to-clean floors, so the natural choice is beautiful Armstrong's Linoleum. The design is Armstrong's Embossed Linoleum, Style No. 6421. LET THE WHOLE FAMILY ENJOY THIS

HOT WATER DISCOVERY

There's new living pleasure, every day, when everyone in the family can enjoy all the hot water he wants at the turn of a tap. And plenty on washdays, too, even for showers!

All household chores go faster—dishes, laundry, cleaning—when there's ever-ready automatic hot water and plenty of it!

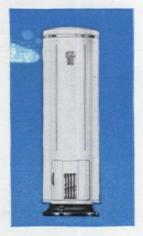

With an automatic gas water heater in your home you have nothing to turn on, nothing to turn off, and no waiting. Automatic hot water is pure convenience, every day, for your whole family!

This New Kind of Water Heater

GIVES YOU BUILT-IN RUST PROTECTION BECAUSE Glass CANNOT RUST!

Permaglas Automatic Water Heaters give you all the convenience features you expect—proved in daily use in hundreds of thousands of American homes. Most important, they give you built-in protection against damaging rust. The special tank of glass-surfaced steel . . . smooth as a mirror inside . . . CANNOT rust because GLASS cannot rust. That's the reason why, when you buy a new Permaglas Gas Water Heater, you won't have to worry about replacing your automatic water heater every few years.

SIZES FOR ALL HOMES, for all types of gas, including liquid ("bottle" or "tank") gas.

d GLASS THAT BENDS! This mechanical man has flexed a ring of glass-surfaced steel over 2 million times without harm to the glass!

FOR PROOF IN PERSON, see your dealer who displays the "Permaglas" emblem—merchant plumber, appliance dealer, or public utility. Let him demonstrate all the features of this true-economy gas water heater. Or write to us for your dealer's name, and illustrated folder.

New Pepsodent Guarantees Brighter Teeth and Cleaner Breath!

Wonderfully Improved Formula SWEEPS FILM AWAY!

- FILM collects stains that make teeth look dull
- FILM harbors germs that breed bad breath
- 3. FILM glues acid to your teeth
- FILM never lets up it forms continually on everyone's teeth

Now faster foaming! Make this 7-day Pepsodent Test!

Use new improved Pepsodent Tooth Paste for one week . . . and if you don't agree it keeps your breath fresher, your teeth brighter—we'll return twice what you paid!

No other tooth paste can duplicate New Pepsodent's film-removing formula! It foams wonderfully—goes to work faster, fighting film: (1) Pepsodent routs discoloring stains that collect on film. (2) It checks film's "bad breath" germs that cause food particles to decay. (3) Pepsodent helps protect you from acid produced by germs in film. This acid, many dentists agree, is the cause of tooth decay. (4) Film forms continually. Remove it regularly and quickly with Pepsodent. No other tooth paste contains Irium* or Pepsodent's gentle polishing agent. For the safety of your smile use Pepsodent twice a day—see your dentist twice a year.

*Irium is Pepsodent's registered trade mark for purified alkyl sulfate.

Start your Pepsodent 7-day test today. If you're not completely convinced Pepsodent gives you cleaner breath and brighter teeth, mail unused portion of tube to Pepsodent Division, Lever Bros. Co., Dept. G, Chicago, Ill. Besides postage you'll receive—

A Garden of South African Flowers by K. C. Stanford. (Maskew Miller Ltd., Cape Town) Price 15s. ($3.00) . . A charming account of a year in a South African garden (where September is spring and April early autumn) that we can both enjoy and benefit from because African plants are more common in our gardens and homes than many of us realize. Gladiolus, freesias, arctotis, dimorphotheca, mesembryanthemums, ixia, red-hot pokers, gazania, gerberas, bird-of-paradise flowers, and agapanthus are only a few of the things that we ought to know better-and can -thanks to Miss Stanford.

Pruning Is Simple by John and Carol Grant. (Frank McCaffrey) Price $2.50 . . . A gratifyingly concise and easy-to-grasp discussion of the "whys" and "wherefores" of pruning ornamental trees and shrubs, made clearer by excellent diagrammatic sketches and a highly useful index. Decorative sketches and carefully studied typography and format contribute to an attractive and unusual book. The authors' Trees and Shrubs for Pacific Northwest Gardens is an authority there, where Mr. Grant is a leading progressive landscape teacher and practitioner.

How to Restore Antique Furniture by M. Campbell Lorini and Henry Lionel Williams. (Pellegrini & Cudahy) Price $3.95 . . . This is an excellent book for the amateur as well as the professional and could almost be used as a text book for cabinetmakers. The "how-to's" are clear and concise, and the chapter on chairs is one of the finest this reviewer has ever read.

"THE INSIDE STORY"

about telephone wires

Here's the real secret of good telephone planning for your new home. Make sure that provisions are made for running telephone wires inside the walls. This way, you'll protect the beauty of fine walls and woodwork.

Simply mark on your plans the places where you'll want telephones. Then, while your home is being built, your builder can place a few lengths of pipe or tubing inside the walls, leading to the outlets. When telephones are installed, the wires are run through these raceways. Result: neat, efficient telephone arrangements without exposed wires.

You can find out all about this important home feature by calling your local Bell Telephone Business Office and asking for "Architects and Builders Service."

Democracy at Work

Megro and white, Catholic and Jew, Italian and Chinese live peaceably together in these co-operative living quarters in Los Angeles—a lesson in democracy from which we all could learn.

It all began back in November, 1946, when thirty-two photography students at the Art Center School in Los Angeles, banded together to do something about the abominable housing situation which found many of them sleeping four and five to a room and paying as much as $35 a month for the privilege of sleeping space on stair landings.

After a great deal of searching and pooling of modest funds, they were able to secure leases on two down-at-the-heel apartment houses next door to each other. Though in bad repair, both houses were roomy—each contained four apartments or "flats," each house had two separate entrances.

The first group had thirty-two charter members, including three married couples with their four children and the rest single students. Passage of time has replaced some with new members who are required to pay in advance the first month's rent of $24 and to buy one share in the co-operative at a cost of $25. When and if the student leaves, a pro-rated division of his share is returned to him, which may be more or less than the original amount. The "share" financing takes care of crises in plumbing and other general household repairs. Occupants furnish their own living requirements, while the "co-op" pays utility bills and rents an electric refrigerator for each establishment.

All of the boys are on the lookout for odd jobs which will supplement their veteran's allowance of $75 per month. Some have reduced food bills to fifty cents a meal, which, after rent is paid, leaves only six dollars for incidentals and furnishings. Bachelor flats are, therefore, bare and drab. Army cots and packing boxes are the rule, not the exception. Four single men share each of the larger (four- and five-room) flats. Married couples tenant the smaller apartments. Since the students are majoring in photography, there is in each flat a closet or an alcove that is transformed into a darkroom.

Democracy is rigorously practiced in the "co-op" through the medium of the group council. Anything that affects policy or costs more than a few cents is voted on—and the majority rules.

"How is it so silent?" I asked. "Our refrigerator's not very old, but what noise! And what repair bills!" The boys' mother smiled, "Ours is a Servel. My mother has had hers 20 years!"

Next morning I stopped by our Gas Company, and picked up a booklet about Servel. It told why Servel is permanently silent...lasts longer, too. There are no moving parts in the freezing system. No machinery to wear, no motor to cause noise. Just a tiny gas flame does the work. Right then and there, I phoned my neighbor, "No more noise and trouble for us. We're getting a Servel, too!"

This story is typical. Writes Margaret Wheeler of Jackson Heights, N. Y., "Twenty years ago I bought my Servel-and it's still quiet, efficient, perfect!"

FIX UP THAT OLD BARN-YOUR FRIENDS WILL HELP! FRIGHTFULLY AMUSING FURNITURE! ORGANIZE YOUR CHILD! How Chi-Chi EXPRESS YOURSELF! Can Life Be? 50 EASY TO SWING TWO JOBS! Dear Article Writers: couldn't live without you, darlings, but must everything be so darn chi-chi and easy? Whether it's collecting antiques or making over your house and/or family, the job is so smooth and effortless. Oh, yes, occasionally you do present a few hurdles to overcome, perhaps to heighten the sense of achievement, but it all seems so gay and turns out so well. You don't know how you would cheer us readers if just once you showed one of your adept young couples completing a house that cos: twice as much as expected-and looked half as good. I'd even settle for something realistic like a picture of the slip cover I turned out for our wing chair. With its hem lifting a bit in front and sagging oddly in back, it makes the chair look slightly pregnant. Your articles about "typical" women are delightful and, so far as I am concerned, largely escape literature. Without too obvious an effort many of your heroines manage a beautiful home, TREASURES IN care for a few photogenic children, and admit coyly to holding down a job that helps them ex-THE ATTIC! press themselves. Most of my friends, when they've tried to manage all this, have expressed PLEASE TURN TO PAGE 80

"Wouldn't mind having this one myself"

"YE WORKED on a lot of houses. Some I'd want, some I wouldn't. This one is O.K. The way it's built makes sense."

Yes, this is sensible construction the kind of construction that gives you extra value for the same cost. Armstrong's Temlok® Sheathing costs no more than ordinary sheathing materials, yet it makes a stronger house and gives you insulation at the same time.

Armstrong's Temlok Sheathing is strong because it's made of tough pine fibers, sealed tightly together with asphalt to form these big boards. The asphalt also helps keep out moisture.

This insulating sheathing is nailed right over the framework of the house. It adds "bracing strength" that keeps the frame firm and rigid. You can use Armstrong's Temlok with any style of architecture. Whether the exterior is finished in brick, stone, wood, or stucco, it will keep your house as strong and secure as the day it was built. The insulation value of Armstrong's Temlok Sheathing is an important, moneysaving "extra." By stopping most of the passage of heat through the wall, it saves fuel each winter and makes your whole house cooler and more comfortable in summer.

Armstrong's Temlok Sheathing saves you money right from the start. It saves time and labor because it goes up so easily and covers large areas quickly. Since there is very little cutting to do, there's almost no waste of material. Before you build or remodel, be sure to ask your lumber dealer for the full details about Armstrong's Temlok Sheathing and all of the other Armstrong Building Materials.

How Simple Can Life Be?

A summer home should not be a miniature replica of town living nor so primitive that it means more work than staying at home. In fact, vacation spots like Fisherman's Village might easily inspire a more relaxed everyday form of living ver a century ago Henry David Thoreau took to Walden Woods in search of the simple life, thereby sharing an ambition that has stirred the hearts of men from time immemorial. Today, in our supercharged world, the goal seems even more desirable and, paradoxically, more within our grasp than ever it has been before.

Whether we want it or not, our future homelife is bound to be less complicated. Smaller houses, more mechanical aids point the direction, and, although Thoreau's ultimate rainbow's end-one workday a week-may never actually be achieved, a more leisurely existence is in the cards for all of us.

Simplicity is neither a matter of style nor size but a philosophy and, as such, its interpretation rests with the individual. The simple life can be enjoyed equally in penthouse or cottage though, for most of us, the physical limitations of our smaller homes are bound to have their effect. Floor space will be at a premium; the oversize, ornamental trappings of another era can result in nothing but a healthy case of claustrophobia if crowded into limited cubage. Furnishings must be smaller, decoration cut to the bone when every square inch works overtime to pay its way. Just how far the pendulum can swing in this new direction will depend on the individual homeowner. Simplicity can be utterly charming or coldly austere; it can have the appeal of a simple farm cottage or the ascetic look of a monastery cell. The latter certainly won't provide a happy background for enjoying the many hours of leisure brought us by our housekeeping machines. Ten-to-one, the majority vote will be for a middleof-the-road form of uncluttered living, including a minimum of functional, easy-to-take-care-of home furnishings with just the right touch of heart-tug, that completely necessary ingredient for magically changing a house into a home. Well, where to find proper inspiration for this charming, efficient household-in-a-nutshell? Is it too unreasonable to think that summer vacation homes might not come up with a healthy solution to the problem? Their atmospheres are conducive to easy living and, certainly, housekeeping is never strenuous. What more could we ask of permanent homes?

That's why we're offering, as one answer to the simple life, Fisherman's Village, a rambling group of shacks set along a picturesque marshlined stream on Cape Cod, Massachusetts. They offer a life so simple as to be practically primitive, yet filled to the brim with restful charm. Here doctors, professors, bankers, artists, and writers have found refuge from routine of everyday life. For some reason, PLEASE TURN TO PAGE 25 these humble little houses were able to do a job that was completely lacking in year-round dwellings. What is this secret? Surely no abracadabra went into their physical makeup. The matter goes beyond mere sticks and stones, encompassing, rather, a whole new philosophy of informal living. Let's then adapt some of this charmed quality to our year-by-year living patterns.

Lester and Nina Wolff were responsible for bringing Fisherman's Village into existence. They are inordinately proud of their accomplishment and well might they be. When the property was bought in 1938, the only house on the site was aptly named "Lone Spot." Almost at once Lester Wolff conceived the general plan of the village with its main house and dock, and five small stretched the budget by building most of it himself

ETHEL McCALL HEAD

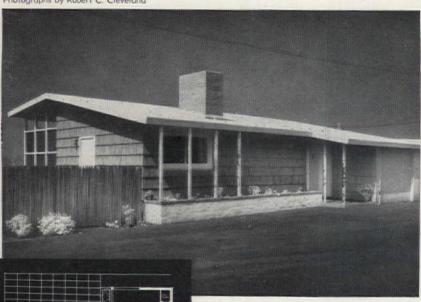

This is the story of how one architect took the luxury out of summer living! No miracles or sleight-of-hand were necessary. Oh no, it was much simpler than that! He built his "holiday house" himself with the help of two carpenters, thereby supplementing professional "know-how" with plenty of elbow grease. The result—a trim little house built solidly on the sand and equally suited to long, lazy summer vacations or a week end snatched from the hot city's rush.

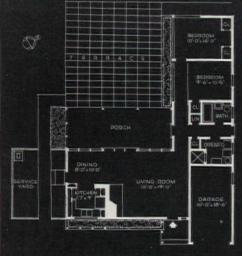

First, let's introduce you to this ingenious designer. His name is Adrian Wilson, and he shares with the rest of his family a deep-rooted love for fishing, sailing, puttering around boats, and just plain lolling at the water's edge. He knew too well the problems of high building costs and the dearth of reasonable rentals on summer cottages. He took the bull by the horns, put his week ends to good use, and gained an escape house on a limited budget.

It was tough going for a while, since only a few days at a time could be used for the project, but looking back on days spent with hammer and saw makes lolling now so much more enjoyable.

Because his lot faced water on south and west, Mr. Wilson placed the house right up on the street, thereby blanketing an existing house on the north and exposing all principal rooms to a bay view. The L-shaped plan proved an excellent solution, for it produced a living-dining area with an unobstructed western exposure and a bedroom wing facing south. Amazingly enough there are but 850 square feet in the entire plan! From the beginning the owner didn't pretend for a moment that summer houses run themselves, never get sandy, and provide nothing but long, blissful days that drop, like ripe figs, PLEASE TURN TO PAGE 84 ur first view of the lodge was dramatic to say the least. We approached from the main road and looked across the still waters of Lake Massawippi just as the sun was making its exit behind a fringe of evergreen tops. Everywhere there was silence. The sky, aglow with that cold luminosity long associated with fall sunsets, set off the building in sharp relief. Every log was clearly etched by dark, horizontal shadows; the heavy overhang of its many gables had a special significance, for it not only brought the rambling roof down naturally into the sloping plot, but added a definite decorative note. The chimneys, too, had taken on an extra-massive, rugged quality. We especially liked the wide sweep of the L-shaped open porch, well located for the best view of lake and surrounding countryside and, in addition, quite unique in construction. Its foundations rested on concrete piers and were enclosed underneath with narrow pieces of natural timber loosely set for ventilation.

The lodge and its companions around the lake are part of a community, Hatley Acres, just thirty-five miles from the Vermont border in the Province of Quebec, Canada. Present lodges are built of virgin timber found on the individual lots and all future ones will be, by agreement, of log construction. Mr. Lester W. Ellerbrock, whose house we visited, was one of the first to build and was fortunate enough to acquire 200 feet of lake front. However, for those with property away from the water, there'll be a community beach, dock, and boathouse.

The three prime ingredients in John Astin Perkins' idyllic setup are his pool, his big screened porch . . . and Eddie Robinson who keeps the small establishment in working order. We can vouch for the cooling influence of all three; we spent a lazy Saturday there last summer to get these pictures.

The swimming pool is elbow-shaped, has a flagstone lip which enlarges to a terrace at one end the setting for Saturday and Sunday swimming parties and outdoor meals. Just beyond the terrace the land drops away sharply into a ravine. Because of its top-deck location, the pool catches the breeze.

Also perched on the edge of the ravine is the screened porch—though annexed to the house, it is almost as big as the house is small. Screened on three sides, there is a tree growing right up through the middle of the roof. Another tree stump, cut off at a good height, has a wooden top fixed on, functions as a serving table.

Eddie Robinson manages the two-by-four kitchen (see page 83). A typical luncheon for a crowd of ravenous swimmers: fried chicken kept hot in an old copper peanut roaster, shoe-string potatoes, a big salad, wedges of pie served up on copper platters.

One man's meat is another man's poisson, as the French say. John Astin Perkins is quick to say that his particular bailiwick might not fit everyone—the point being, however, that it does fit his way of life to a T. His working hours are apt to be long and irregular—it is Eddie Robinson's job to maintain order and schedule wherever possible.

The swimming pool is out of proportion in size and cost to the modest frame house—which is made up of living room, one bedroom, kitchen and bath, all small. Again, there is a reason: the pool was constructed on its permanent site, is part of a well-planned building scheme. The house, on the other hand, is quite a few years old, exists today only beplease TURN TO PAGE 82 over hill, over dale, on the hot and dusty trail, the vacationers go rolling along. You'll want to clean up and rest. But even before you unpack the car you should get the electric and water service in operation. Then, with everyone pitching in, unload the luggage from the car, clean away the dust that has been collecting all winter, and prepare beds for the night after airing mattresses, blankets, and pillows to chase dampness. If time permits, you can also clean the kitchen equipment, turn on the refrigerator or put ice in the icebox, and be ready for those ravenous appetites induced by fresh air, and the excitement and activity of your arrival. Before starting a fire in the hearth to cut the evening chill, be sure to check the chimney. You may have to haul a few logs and cut some dry kindling, too, before starting the fire.

After a good night's rest you'll be ready to tackle and complete the other ceremonies or tasks of opening the season. Put screens up to ward off the flies and mosquitoes that have undoubtedly heard of your arrival and are hurrying to welcome you. For the sunny windows and porch you'll want the awnings up right away, too. Check the roof for winter damage, and make needed repairs. Get the lawn furniture and boat or canoe ready for use.

With the major items out of the way, lay out the bathing suits, fishing tackle, and other fun equipment, and start rebuilding your winter-worn body and nerves. While developing your sun tan you can mow the lawn, tend the shrubs and garden, clear out poison ivy, oak, and sumac, and even polish the car. Painting the house, if it needs it, can be done in easy stages, between the periods of usual summer activity, relaxation, and writing those cards: "Having a wonderful time. Wish you were here."

Abandon the Dining Room!

GERTRUDE BROOKS DIXSON

t's your smartest move toward true economy of work hours! In the summer a dining room ceases to be a necessity—becomes a sheer luxury.

Limited in use to but one phase of daily living, it exacts too great an energy toll in maintenance. Shift the scene for summer meals to your living room; your recreation room; work out a special spot for the children close to your own work center—but by all means abandon the work-making dining room.

For simple day-to-day living, the builtin unit is your answer. Install it to communicate directly with your kitchen. Dinner for two comes piping hot through a sliding panel opening. Use its close-athand top as server for family meals and buffet suppers for the crowd.

Be sure to provide your buffet guests with small tables of a good height and size to hold a tray. Inexpensive, folding, painted ones come in racked sets that take no room at all to store. Put one by a relaxed guest in any chair in any room—except the dining room.

Shown on the opposite page are some interesting versions of the snack bar. Study particularly the panels used to close off the kitchen area. They are a must and can be designed to fit architecturally and decoratively into your room. Behind-scenes shelves, wall cupboards where possible provide step-saving storage.

Where space is at its highest premium, why not a table built into the wall? If you plan a storage area behind it (see photograph, page 35) you'll save more than space. There's that premium on time and effort!

Gone are the days of the groaning board. Such fare is too heavy to suit our present-day standard of living. Heavier still is the task-load of maintaining a dining room. Get out from under it! Live simply this summer.

boon to the dollar-conscious homemaker are the new linoleum tiles, now appearing on the market. Much of the cumbersome labor of handling large heavy rolls of linoleum is eliminated by these easy-to-use nine-inch squares. Since labor accounts for a large share of new linoleum installations, you stand to save about half what a new floor would cost you if you lay these linoleum tiles yourself.

Several manufacturers are making them, and they endorse the homelaying method. We can vouch from our own experience that, even if you have never laid linoleum before, you can do a pretty good job of it with this new method of application.

Our editors found a typical kitchen about twenty years old, moved in, and took these step-by-step pictures of the entire process of putting down a new linoleum-tile floor.

A note of caution: Before laying, tiles should be kept overnight at room temperature, should be laid in a warm room.

eet the hot summer sun with a cold war on work! To some a cold war may mean no war at all. To us it implies strategy—utilizing a few simple tactics to block demands of extra household chores, thus defeating the fuss and bother that make warm weather warmer. You can relieve washtubs of heavy damask cloths by lending place mats to the table. You can even paint motifs on the table. Lighter dressing for your house means lighter work for you.

Your best ally in the war on work is the season itself, the informality that goes with sunshine sports and coatless living. Rigid formality is incongruous with the warm beach sands and cool lawn chairs that beckon you, your family, and your guests towards lazier living. So replace care-consuming dinnerware with simple table settings placed in the path of a cool summer breeze. Eliminate cleaning by closing off the dining room if you have a breakfast nook, a porch, terrace, or spreading elm.

Arm yourself with the bright color of the season to decorate mats, table tops, kitchen cabinets, or even crewel-embroidered chair seats. Let American Home Patterns help you replace winter's heavy linen with designs that bring the outdoors in, that carry the flowers under the sun into the shade of the house. The pattern of summer color and informality can be your strategy in the cold war on work.

Used vertically, the egg-crate framing supports the protective screen, holds potted plants

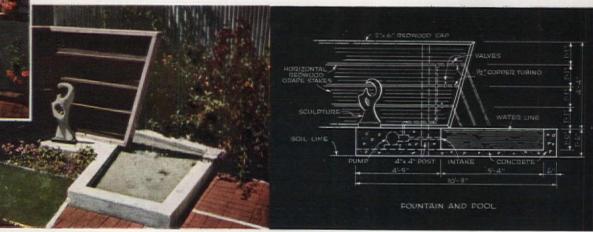

Fountain jets issue from hidden pipes in horizontal members of this inclined wall which repeats the straight lines of the pool or every person who asks bluntly, "What does 'modernism' mean in the garden?", there are probably hundreds who wonder in silence. They hear terms like "functionalism," "modular design," and so on, visualize the simple colorful beauty and informality of gardens they have seen or come to know and like, and then try—often unsuccessfully—to reconcile the two, so widely different, ideas involved.

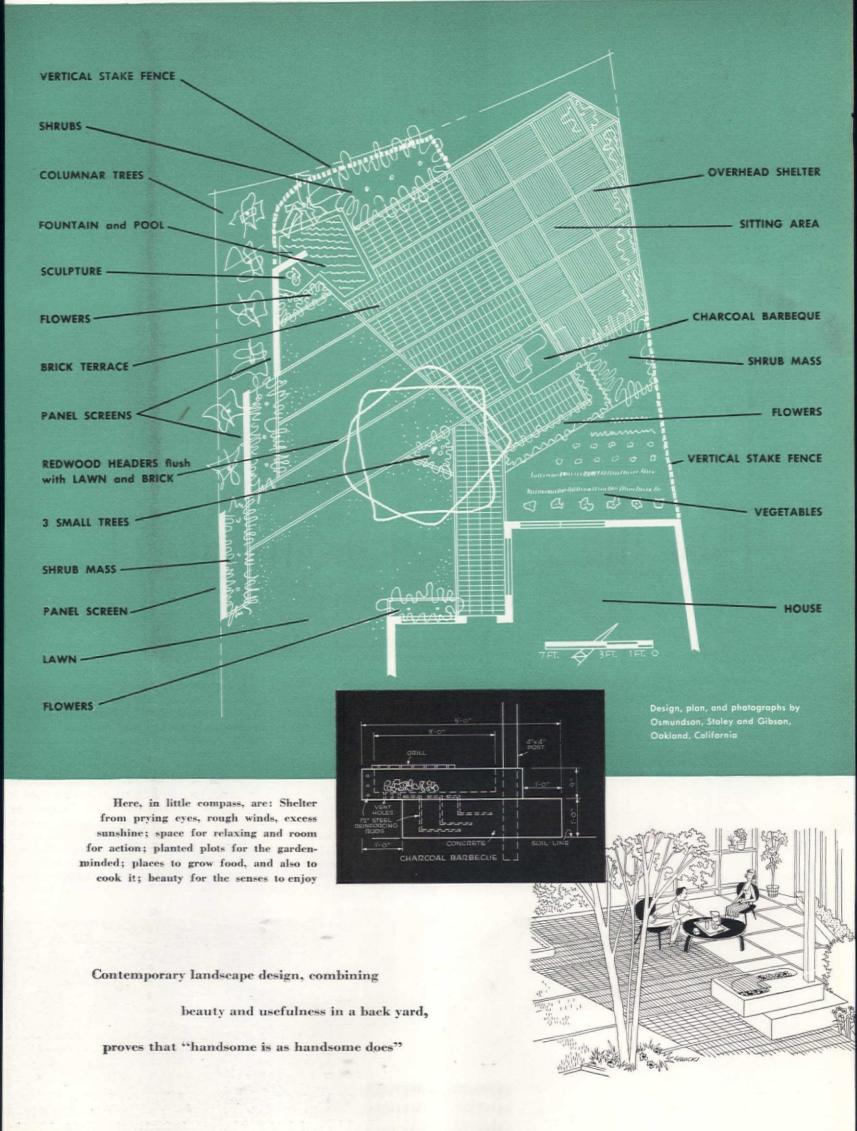

Perhaps the answer lies in that old, but wellremembered saying that, "Handsome is as handsome does." Given something—whether house, lawn mower, washing machine or garden—that does its job supremely well, that serves a useful purpose and fits the needs and habits of its users, doesn't it, for that very reason, merit praise and popularity? After all, modern is only a relative term. What was modern a decade ago, is hardly that now; what is modern today, will be old-fashioned a generation hence.

But suppose a garden is truly "useful" so it can be generously enjoyed by the people it is meant to serve. Is it not, therefore, "handsome" in both senses of the old saying? And will it not continue to be good as long as it continues to be useful? All this, we think, justifies our conviction that "contemporary" is a more accurate term than "modern."

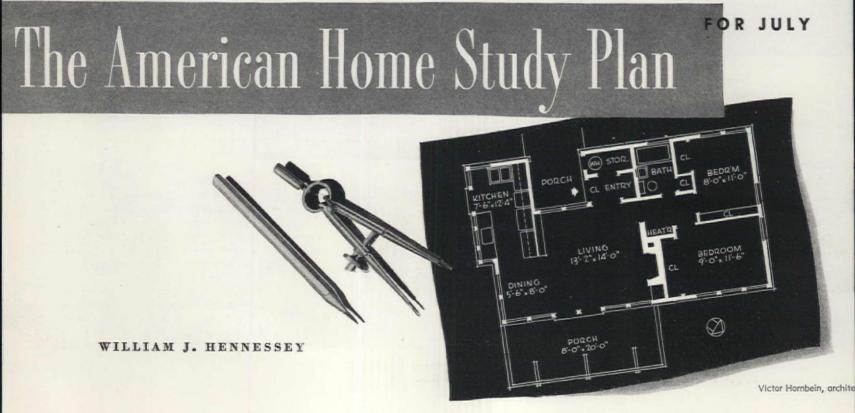

All that is implied in the above title and the garden spot here illustrated and described is an effective demonstration of it. Designed by John H. Staley, Jr., one of California's younger landscape architects, it won top honors at the 1948 Spring Garden Show in Oakland. Living-room fireplace wall shows honest use of natural materials, lack of superficial decoration that keynotes house both inside and out. Entrance is at left, bedroom wing with bath just beyond

Windows placed high on wall to gain light from entrance porch allow plenty of uninterrupted space for locating sofa. Spaciousness has been gained by below-ceiling bookcase wall dividing kitchen from living room and a series of large windows running around corner in dining area. Ponderosa pine ceilings were left exposed in all rooms ow about having the ease and comfort of a vacation house all year round? Sounds wonderful, doesn't it, and it's exactly what the W. H. Stewarts got when they built their permanent home high on a mountain top overlooking Denver, Colorado. The design does away with expensive excavation work and could be adapted easily to any sloping property.

In fact from beginning to end, the owners, wisely aided by architect Victor Hornbein, aimed their sights at economy of construction, materials, and upkeep. The result is a house, flexible of plan, informal in appearance, and taking full advantage of the site with its breathtaking views.

Common brick and Ponderosa pine were used almost exclusively throughout the house, the latter left natural for easy maintenance. Since the main approach is from the north and west, windows on these exposures were made small to guarantee privacy, although from the kitchen there's an unobstructed view of the adjacent play yard.

On the other hand, a great deal of glass was used on the southern wall to gain full advantage of the mountainous countryside. A wide, open porch faces this direction, too, and is protected from direct sun by the wide overhang of a low-pitched roof. Shiplap siding and common brick combine to cover the exterior walls, the former treated naturally with just an oil coating for protection.

A definite air of rustic informality continues into the interiors where walls and ceilings are finished with Ponderosa pine, first given a coat of shellac and then one of wax. Though the kitchen opens directly into the living-dining room, it is partially concealed from the entrance view by a jutting bookcase wall with cupboards below. Everything points to economy. For instance, the heater, just off the bedroom corridor, is centrally located and convenient to the fireplace chimney. Asphalt flooring, used throughout, makes for minimum upkeep and gives a unified effect to all rooms. A deep entrance porch, covered by the main roof, acts as refuge from wind and storm and is certainly a very necessary adjunct in this location.

Death Takes No Vacation

Millions of us are preparing to enjoy that fine old institution known as the summer vacation. For many, a holiday away from regular routines will result in toned-up muscles, a healthier outlook. For some, unfortunately, it will mean tragedy and sudden death.

This year, if records of the past hold true, several thousand vacationists will die in preventable accidents during July and August. Hundreds more will be seriously injured and maimed for life—on the highways, in the mountains, at the beach, and even in their own back yards.

This year's crop of vacationists will do well to study the case of Mr. N., one of thousands who didn't "play safe" on vacation last year. Normally a careful man, Mr. N. lost all sense of caution when he left his Maryland home to spend a month in Vermont. Driving north, he committed every traffic sin known to safety experts—burned up the road, passed cars on hills, hogged the road, passed red lights—but managed to come through it all alive. Late at night, after an exhausting day, he fell asleep. Out of control, the car hurtled over an embankment, and Mr. N. was quickly killed.

Mr. N. didn't need to die. Because he tried to cover too much distance in one day, because he disobeyed safety rules, he didn't live to enjoy the very real benefits of a long vacation. Recklessness and carelessness like this cause traffic-accident deaths to increase ominously during the summer

"City slickers" piled into one small boat. While shifting places, craft capsized. Recklessness in boats accounts for many of the 1,200 drownings each July

"Look, no hands!" he cried—then plunged headlong into an oncoming car. In '48, 500 died, many more were injured in collisions between bikes and autos

"I wish he'd mind his manners!"

Photographs taken especially for THE AMERICAN HOME by Giles

Obviously, Dave is no Fauntleroy. Mother learns that good manners can't be forced—they must spring from a genuine liking of people Voung Dave Norman was a "model" five-year-old who always said "Please" and "How do you do" at the right moments—until one day last month. At that time, his fine manners were abandoned, and he was suddenly rude to an adult caller.

Mrs. Norman was shocked by her son's behavior. Like many parents, she did not understand that it's not always possible for children to practice good manners under all circumstances.

The simple reason for Dave's rudeness was the fact that he did not like his mother's guest. For this feeling of dislike, his mother could blame only herself—because she did not like the lady in question and had never hesitated to say so in the past within earshot of the youngster. When the child was impolite, he was expressing the animosity toward the guest which he had learned from his mother. Eventually, Mrs. Norman found that true courtesy is based on a genuine liking of people—and that if parents feel friendly toward others, chances are their youngster will feel the same way.

Good manners cannot be pressured into a child. They must be learned gradually as he grows and develops.

A child learns how to get along in society and in his family from everyone with whom he comes in contact. In the early years, most of the learning comes from observing the manners of members of the family, and later on it is supplemented by what he learns from observing the behavior of persons with whom he is associated outside his home.

It is possible, of course, to force a child into a pattern of behavior which will win adult approval. A parent whose four-year-old child says "Excuse me" every few sentences is often considered a beautifully behaved young gentleman. However, his use of the phrase does not indicate social maturity since it is unlikely that he has any real understanding of what the words mean.

calm any sweltering brow. Pickles and olives and cucumbers, by their very name, have a cooling effect. After you have made your choice, it's only the work of a few minutes to arrange the platter when mealtime comes.

Any day is a salad day in our lexicon, but summer days are those that see the promotion of the salad course up the ladder to the main course. There are the tossed green salads, the carefully arranged fruit salads, the hearty chef's salad, and, of course, the queen of them all, potato salad. We hope you'll like our recipe for Dutch Potato Salad; the recipe, itself, isn't too unusual. The secret is in the dressing. Thrifty Dressing

cover girl shortcake

2¼ cups sifted cake flour 1½ cups sugar 3¼ tsp. baking powder 1 tsp. salt

½ cup vegetable shortening 1 tsp. vanilla flavoring Preparation time: 45 min.

1 cup milk

1/3-1/2 cup unbeaten eggs
(2 medium eggs)

1 pt. heavy cream, whipped
1 pt. strawberries, raspberries, peaches, or other fruit

Sift together the dry ingredients into a bowl. Add shortening, flavoring, and 2/3 cup of the milk. Beat vigorously with a spoon for 2 minutes by clock (about 150 strokes per minute). Or mix with electric mixer on slow to medium speed for 2 minutes. Add the remainder of the milk and the eggs. Beat 2 more minutes. Pour batter into 2 greased 8- or 9-inch round layer pans. Bake in a moderate oven (350°F) 30-35 minutes. Cool layers and put together with whipped cream and sliced berries or fruit. Cover outside and top of cake with whipped cream and top with berries.

4 cups all-purpose flour 6 tsp. baking powder 1 tsp. salt ½ cup vegetable shortening 1 cup milk Preparation time: 40 min.

½ cup light cream 2 tbs. melted butter or margarine

2 tbs. sugar 1 nt. strawberries or raspberries, peaches, or other fruit

Sift flour, measure and resift with baking powder and salt three times. Cut in shortening with two knives or a pastry blender until particles are the size of rice grains. Add milk and cream all at once and mix lightly and quickly with a fork. Divide dough into two equal parts. Place the portions of the dough into 2 lightly greased 9-inch round layer pans and pat out to uniform thickness. Brush each layer with 1 tbs. melted butter and sprinkle with the sugar. Bake in a hot oven (450°F) for 20-22 minutes or until nicely browned. Turn out layers onto cake racks. While layers are still warm, place sliced berries between them and on top. Serve plain or with light or whipped heavy cream.

gives potato salad the tang and sweetness that's just right for summer suppers, luncheons, picnics, and dinners. You probably know that from earliest times it has been the dressing that has made the difference in salads. That's the just due of a dish concocted originally to satisfy taste instead of hunger.

To satisfy thirst, you'll be having iced tea often this summer. Some tips for short cuts: Make it fresh, make it doubly strong, pour it hot over cracked ice-and do have plenty of extra ice on hand. Some tips for extra flavor: Squeeze a few drops of fresh lemon juice into each glass before the tea is poured into the glass (this, indeed, in addition to the slice of lemon which goes into the glass after the tea has been poured), add a sprig of mint for a cool decoration but don't forget that mint has a flavorful pungency that is best brought out by bruising a few leaves in the bottom of the glass. Have you discovered woodruff yet? It's lovely and fragrant, delicately so. You'll like it as a change from lemon or mint; don't combine it, the flavor's too delicate. You need to develop a taste for woodruff, and you may even grow it in your own garden! But it's worth time and work as anything connected with cooking is, we think,

 green peas with mushrooms

Preparation time: 25 min.

1/2 lb. fresh mushrooms, sliced 2 tbs. butter or margarine 1/2 cup water 2 cups fresh or frozen green peas

½ tsp. salt
Dash of pepper
½ tsp. powdered marjoram

Place mushrooms in a 9-inch skillet and cook in butter until tender. Add water. Then add peas, spreading evenly over the bottom of pan. Sprinkle with salt, pepper, and marjoram. Cover and cook peas over low heat until barely tender, about 6-8 minutes. Frozen peas require a shorter cooking time, about 4-6 minutes. Remove cover and increase heat to evaporate any remaining liquid in necessary. Serve immediately. Note: If you wish to use canned sliced broiled mushrooms, place contents of a (3 oz.) can mushrooms in a skillet, cover and bring to a boil over moderate heat. Add peas and proceed as-directed above.

· Dutch potato salad

Preparation time: 1 hr.

3–4 medium potatoes 1 cup Thrifty Salad dressing Salt 1½ cups celery, sliced 1/3 cup finely chopped onion 2 or 3 sweet pickles, chopped 3 hard cooked eggs, sliced

Wash potatoes, cook with jackets on in enough water to cover until they are just done. Allow to cool, slip off jackets and cut into ½-inch cubes (there should be about ½ to 3 cups). Add ¼ cup salad dressing, salt to taste, and allow to stand in refrigerator for about 30 minutes. Add celery, onion, pickles, eggs, and remainder of salad dressing and mix carefully so that potatoes and eggs will not be broken up.

Thrifty Salad Dressing: Mix together 3 tbs. flour, 1 tbs. sugar, 34 tsp. dry mustard, 1/2 tsp. salt and 1/8 tsp. paprika in a small saucepan. Add one egg and beat well until blended. Combine 1/4 cup vinegar and 3/4 cup water and add slowly to the above mixture, while cooking over low to medium heat. Stir constantly until the mixture thickens. Remove from heat and let stand a few minutes. Add 2 tbs. butter and beat well until butter melts.

There's an answer for this problem—a grill of some kind. For picnic food prepared on a grill will lull the dissenters and convert them into the most enthusiastic picnickers.

There are a number of commercial charcoal grills on the market. The homemade grill performs magnificently and, if well designed, is practically foolproof. Either is within even a modest budget. One of the best homemade grills I've seen in ages is made from a discarded kitchen sink. A friend bought it at a bargain, made some small holes in the bottom to give a draft to the fire, made a folding frame to hold the sink, bought a grill cover. The grill fits neatly in the back of the family car. It can be set up at a picnic ground in a jiffy. It also functions in the back yard. Like all grills, it's easy and simple to operate. A little kindling in the bottom is lighted, charcoal is placed over the flame and presently glowing heat works magic with a lot of common foods. And, what can beat a hot outdoor meal? The grill has served to make picnics popular again, and it can be used in the privacy of your own back yard, on the terrace, or in a country setting of your own selection.

The grill enables you to boil, broil or fry—and, while the cooking surface is small, it is sufficient. The ideal outdoor meal must be simple, easy to prepare—and easy to eat!

Take Country Style steak, for example, a glorious and uplifting dish. You'll need the biggest frying pan in the house for this rare concoction of steak, mushrooms, and onions, cooked with sour cream, grated cheese,

steak, country style

Preparation time: 11/4 hrs.

2 lbs. round steak Seasoned flour 1/2 cup butter or margarine 2 medium onions, sliced ½ lb. peeled mushrooms, sliced 1/2 cup water

2 tbs. grated cheese 1 tsp. salt Dash of pepper 1/4 tsp. paprika 1/2 cup sour cream

Have steak cut into serving pieces and dredge in flour seasoned with salt and pepper. Melt 1/4 cup of the butter in a large skillet and add onions and mushrooms. Cook until onions are tender and mushrooms are lightly browned. Remove onions and mushrooms from pan or push to the side. Add the remaining ½ cup butter and brown steak on both sides. Stir in the remaining ingredients. Cover skillet and cook until meat is tender enough to cut with a fork.

and seasonings. You'll find the meat superlative, with a truly fine combination of flavors and real taste-appeal.

A few minutes before the meat is ready to serve, rub the surfaces of a split loaf of French bread with a cut onion and place cut side down on the grill to toast. Brush with melted butter and serve with the piping hot steak-a very happy combination, I assure you.

You might care to try barbecued pork chops on your grill. You won't be sorry, unless there's a shortage of pork chops! The aroma, as they are being prepared, will cause a certain amount of impatience on the part of the customers, but that's always on the plus side.

Mix your barbecue sauce at home. Easy, too! It's a happy combination of condensed tomato soup with seasonings that are a little unusual as you'll see when you read the recipe.

The chops are quickly seared, then drenched. The drenching is repeated as the chops are turned, and continued until each chop is brown and tender. The aroma is heavenly, appetite-tickling. With these fine chops, you may want to serve scalloped potatoes, cooked at home and heated on the grill, and applesauce which is treated the same way. A grand and completely satisfying meal.

One of the most delightful of grilled picnic dishes is Hawaiian Ham cooked in a bean pot at home. Follow our recipe, as given on this page-any convenient time before your picnic. Then when you reach the picnic grounds, all that is necessary is to place the bean pot on the back of the cheerful grill until the contents are piping hot.

A little touch of distinction! That's what makes a picnic dish have a special significance, gives the food a new flavor, a savor that calls for some refined smacking of appreciative lips. Suppose you plan to serve those old favorites, baked beans and frankfurters. Why not combine them as in "Picnicana," our recipe using canned baked beans and canned frankfurters with barbecue sauce--those shelf dwellers that are always on hand and ready for a picnic? If possible, heat a can of Boston brown bread and serve it with the beans. Sliced tomatoes, a bunch of tiny, crisp young onions, radishes-and there you are! If you happen to have along an ice-cold, deadripe watermelon, you'll look a long way for a better or more appropriate dessert.

I've purposely overlooked the function the grill can perform in broiling a steak-or how nicely a lobster grills and how marvelous it tastes as it is eaten. Most of us know what to do with a steak or a lobster, if we have one!

A picnic should be fun for all concerned. Especially for the cook! Use paper napkins, paper plates, and cups, if possible. When the picnic is over, pile them up neatly and burn them. Thus, the premises are kept clean and sanitary for the next picnic invasion.

The portable grill, whether it's homemade or a factory-designed affair, is just about foolproof. When the cooking is done, pour water over the charcoal-it can be salvaged and re-used when dry. The grill itself cools quickly and can be packed in the car by the time the meal is over.

A little planned homework lessens what must be done at the picnic site. Almost any stew can be partially or fully cooked at home, the job completed at the place where the grill is set up.

Even prosaic dishes become perfect meals when they are cooked on the outdoor grill. For example, ham and eggs served with a liberal helping of raw-fried potatoes! Hamburg, fried in loaf-form, served with a big platter of grill-fried onions, may sound heavy, but, once you smell the perfume of the cookery, you'll want not one, but two helpings!

Preparation time: 40

2 tbs. molasses 2 (1 lb.) cans baked beans 6-8 frankfurters

Sauté onion in a little fat in a skillet until tender, add tomato and a dash of Tabasco. Add the molasses and the beans and mix well. Pour into a casserole, top with frankfurters and bake in a moderate oven (350°F) for 30 minutes. If desired, beans can be cooked in a skillet over the grill or on top of stove burner and topped with grilled frankfurters just before serving. For a quickie dish: mix canned beans with the prepared barbecue sauce that is packed with canned frankfurters. Place in a casserole and top with frankfurters and very thin slices of onion. Bake in a moderate oven (350°F) for 30 minutes.

Dear Sirs:

I am using your new Swans Down Instant Cake Mix for all my cakes these days, and I want to say it is "the" finest product of its kind on the market today. It is definitely a "homemade" cake in a package.

> Mrs. Delbert Boostrom, Victoria, Ill.

That "homemade" quality in Swans Down Instant Cake Mix comes from using ingredients as fine as you'd use yourself, Mrs. Boostrom. Egg whites that taste farm-fresh, prepared by an exclusive process. Long-keeping, all-vegetable shortening. Delicate, hometype flavoring. And most important of all, Swans Down Cake Flour.

Dear Sirs:

I just felt I should write you a note to tell you how much I like your Swans Down Instant Cake Mix.

I had used two boxes and baked a big cake to take to a reunion. Everyone raved about my wonderful cake, and a lot of women came to me for the recipe. It sure didn't take me long, as I said to them, "Just go to the store and buy two boxes of Swans Down Instant Cake Mix."

Mrs. Glenn B. Barner, Lemoyne, Pa.

We hope, Mrs. Barner, that your friends won't all start using two boxes at a time. We have a hard time keeping stores stocked!

Dear Sirs:

I am a mother with two children and one is just a baby. So you see, it's hard to make cakes the old way, as it takes away valuable time. But now it's 1-2-3 and you have a cake, and I must say it's even better than one can make herself.

> Mrs. John Yanuzzi, Cleveland, O.

When you say it beats your own, Mrs. Yanuzzi, you're in good company—a lot of prize-winning cakemakers say the same.

every requirement as far as size and type of closures are concerned.

- 8. Large tray will save steps and energy.
- 9. Small teapot is perfect for melting paraffin. The spout avoids spilling over when sealing jellies, and melted paraffin can be kept fresh and clean because it is covered. Place teapot in pan of water to melt paraffin.
- 10. Canning tongs to help prevent burns and breakage when lifting hot jars.
- 11. Thermometer for jelly making greatly reduces chances of failure.
- 12. Spatula of stainless steel when placed down the inside of filled jar allows air to escape and gives better pack.
- 13. Jell Meter will tell you how much sugar to use when making jelly.
- 14. Pot holders of spongy plastic material. Easily washed with damp cloth. Just wipe dry.

"Ironing is 3 times easier with Satina in my starch!

WRITES MRS. DONALD BUTLER, WAYNE, ILLINOIS

"SATINA WORKS LIKE MAGIC!" Writes Mrs. Butler. "Satina in my starch makes ironing 3 times easier and gives the clothes a lovely fragrance. I like it very much for dresses."

Satina is a wonderful ironing aid that you use with boiled or un-boiled starch. It dissolves easily in boiling water or the boiling starch solution.

It not only makes ironing lots easier, it makes clothes smell fresher, look newer, and stay clean long-

We're so sure you'll love Satina, if we can just get you to try it once, that we're offering you a free full-size package. Enough for 4 big starchings. Just try it and judge Satina for yourself!

The Stork Didn't Bring You, by Lois Pemberton. (The Hermitage Press) Price, $2.75 . . . Written for the teen-ager in his own lingo, this book tackles the facts of life in a straightforward fashion which will appeal to youngsters and their parents as well. Besides presenting the facts of reproduction and birth in simple language, the book discusses the many emotional and physical problems which crop up in adolescence. A book to clear away doubts and confusions among teen-agers.

The Young Folk's Cook Book by Harriet and Laurence Lustig. (The Citadel Press) Price $1.50... Here is an excellent "how-to" cook book for the young who aspire to culinary mastery. Written in simple style and punctuated with humorous drawings of food and utensils, the recipe directions for both everyday and party foods are easy to follow.

The Story of Plants by John Asch. (Putnam's) Price $5.00 . . . Though encyclopedic in scope and thoroughness, this 408-page book, the result of years of study, travel, reading, observation, and work with plants, is absorbingly interesting and readable. If you have wondered about, or doubted, the vital importance of plant-and-man relations, it will answer many questions; if you haven't, it will reveal wonderful, fascinating facts. Tabea Hofmann's drawings would be even more helpful if the lettering were not so small. (John Asch also wrote "May Facts and Fancies" in the May AMERICAN HOME.)

How to Lay Linoleum Tile

Use square ruler to be sure felt is absolutely straight when cutting to fit under radiator. Cut slits for legs with linoleum knife

Push felt under radiator, then cut around legs with linoleum knife

After felt has been all cut and laid out on entire floor, fold back in half. Apply paste to floor area 3 feet square, using special notched spreader, available at local stores

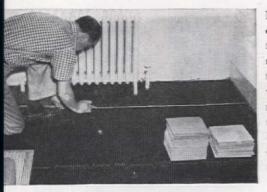

Be absolutely sure there is no overlap by carefully butting seams. Smooth down felt from center toward outer edges. Continue until one half of floor is finished, then do other half of floor. finishing entire felt process

Smooth all seams and air bubbles with common kitchen rolling pin, using pressure. Roll from center out to edges

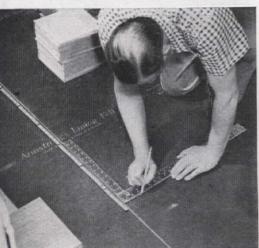

egins on page 36)

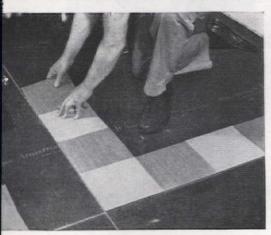

Most important step of all: Marking off felt to assure straight laying of tile. Measure width at one end of room with folding rule. Divide width in half to determine center point. Hammer small nail here

Repeat measuring process on wall directly opposite. Fasten well-chalked cord to one nail, then stretch across length of floor, fasten to other nail. Hold tautly, snap quickly twice, to mark off center line of felt

Using folding ruler along chalked line, measure, and mark midpoint. Using square rule, draw line at right angle to midpoint. This should be exact center of room. Mark crosswise with chalked cord process. If room is L-shaped or irregular in plan, determine center point of largest room area

Starting at exact center lay tiles dry along chalked lines, alternating direction of stripes in tiles. Cover area 3 feet square. Stand off and view to be sure tiles are placed correctly—you can't correct after pasting

CORROSION-PROOF . CAN'T STAIN THE HOUSE . AMAZINGLY STRONGER

Name the enemies of ordinary screening:—salt air and salt fog . . . industrial smoke . . . rain or snow. Not one of these has any effect on LUMITE.

Here at last is a screening that can be unconditionally guaranteed never to rust, rot or corrode... guaranteed never to stain your house. Yet this new miracle plastic screening costs only 11½¢-12¢ per square foot—little more than the cheapest... less than any other quality screening.

It's easy to frame . . . and so strong that when properly framed it will never sag nor bulge. Punch it. You'll see it give, then regain its original tautness.

Insist on LUMITE for your new house or when replacing old screens. On sale at leading hardware, lumber and building supply dealers.

For free sample and further information, write Dept. AH-3, LUMITE DIVISION, Chicopee Manufacturing Corporation of Georgia, 47 Worth Street, New York 13, N. Y.

Facts for Architects and Builders:

Effects of acids, alkalies and solvents— Essentially none.

Effect of age—Independent scientific tests indicate that LUMITE is more durable than any other type of screen cloth under all climatic conditions that might normally be encountered.

Non-inflammable — Will not support flame
... is self-extinguishing. Softening point,

Tensile strength—Up to 40,000 lbs. per square inch.

Impact strength — Greater than conventional screening.

Installation—Cut with ordinary scissors. Fold cut edges under one-half inch. Tack or staple the screening smoothly and evenly every 1½". Because of inherent characteristics, LUMITE will gradually draw itself into a snug, firm fit. For correct methods of machine framing, consult LUMITE engineers.

How to Lay Linoleum Tile (Begins on page 36)

Put aside tiles, then paste floor area 3 feet square, or as far as you can comfortably reach. Use same notched spreader and paste you used for felt. Do not use brush; paste is too thick to brush

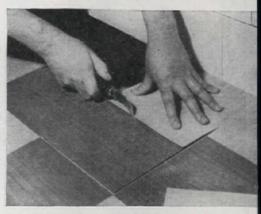

Starting at center corner, press tiles down firmly into paste, snugly together.

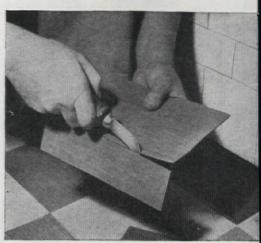

Do not stand on pasted tiles. Kneeling lessens danger of tiles sliding. Do one quarter of room, to within one (or part of one) tile from wall. Then lay border (see next caption)

Borders are nearly always part of one tile. To cut correct size, place full loose tile directly on top of pasted down tile nearest wall. Check order of Jaspe stripes. Using yet another loose tile place it tightly against wall or baseboard, partly over other loose tile. Holding top loose tile firmly in place, use its edge as guide. Score lower loose tile with knife. Cut scored tile, keeping edge smooth

After all border tiles are cut for first quarter of floor, flip back on to laid area. Paste up border and press tiles down firmly

To fit tiles under radiator, raise leg with jimmy or similar tool. To fit around pipe, measure distance of pipe from edge of last laid tile. With carpenter's dividers mark on tile to be laid a circle same diameter as pipe

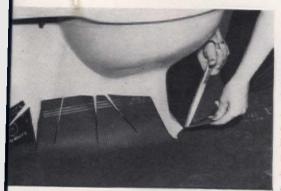

Cut out circle with linoleum knife. Make slit from hole to edge of tile. Fit tile around pipe and cement in place

After one quarter section of floor has been completely laid, glide smooth head of heavy claw hammer down all seams, using pressure. Wipe off excess paste with damp cloth as you go along. Continue to second quarter of floor. Then on other side of chalk line start third quarter from exact center as before

How to cut tile around a toilet base

Cut strip of felt long enough to cover one section of floor. Lay dry from wall up to front of bowl. Then holding upright against bowl, slit felt downward to floor. Now cut felt in segments all around bowl as you would curved armhole of dress

Use linoleum knife to trim off excess felt around toilet bowl, making sure of close fit

Use felt pattern hole cut for bowl to mark off linoleum tile squares, which have been laid out to size on floor of another room. Process is similar to cutting a dress

Tiles will be laid exactly as for kitchen sequence, except for cutting around toilet bowl. The result is an accurate fit heir appeal is indefinable. Hurryby at forty miles an hour, one ht catch a fleeting glimpse of soft curtains at a many-paned winor a lovely old jug on the sill d with pink cosmos. Everywhere e are flowers in diminutive oldioned gardens, miniature walks of white sand bordered by seals and gray dusty-miller.

he sun-deck at the rear of one of largest shacks is filled with a ht array of lounging chairs. Caregroups of men and women fish the lazy stream in rowboats.

ocal point of the village is the main se, once an old boathouse, which contains a large living room, e bedrooms, bath, and old-fashed kitchen. It is here that the ers live and act as gracious hosts. 'he Wolffs' love of primitive igs is honest and sincere and rything is put to good use. An old ow pudding dish is often used for centerpiece on the dining-room le. Two tall, glistening apothecary are filled with red stick candy at holiday season. Nothing is used t can't serve a decorative as well useful purpose. This reasoning uld be the essence of all contemary thinking; utilitarianism need er smack of the machine world. The Wolffs feel real affection for all their little shacks, although the "Studio" is their special pride and joy. This is largely because it is a perfect replica of a true salt-box house. Here there's a living room and bedroom combined plus dressing room and bath. Walls are of soft blue, the floor an antique red. Red-and-black plaid corduroy spreads cover the two beds while other furnishings include a stenciled blanket chest, kidney table, a decorated card table, boudoir chair, and rose-colored Brussels carpet.

Even more primitive are the furnishings in the "Red House" which boasts a tiny narrow kitchen at its rear. Cooking utensils hang from the walls and a long counter, covered with red linoleum, serves as an eating bar above which windows afford view of dock and river. In its two rooms "Rusty Deck" provides sleeping quarters for four while "Poop Deck" has the distinction of a butler's wine chest to serve as icebox.

Away from the gaudy, blatant advertising so associated with tourist camps on main highways, Fisher-man's Village is, literally, "out of this world." It is Cape Cod in miniature and as such fits naturally into its coastal surroundings. Of course no one advocates living quite so primitively all year round but, since such an atmosphere is conducive to gaining a new lease on life, the formula might be well adapted to life in permanent homes. No one would accuse these little houses of austerity. They have charm, cut worry and drudgery to the bone, and are completely devoid of pretense. Let them point the way to a simpler, more relaxed future.

Clams, taters, and onions will soon be stewing in their creamy broth providing a savory chowder for the Fisherman's Village folk in this protected sandy sun-spot the patio as part of a home landscape, rather than an exhibit, integrating it into a small lot without changing its overall design, so as to suggest one solution of the typical home owner's back-yard problem.

"Since the lot is small and closed in," he says, "I have tried to create a feeling of freedom and yet have it livable and pleasant. The panel screens and grape-stake fence afford ample privacy from neighbors or passing traffic. The brick deck and the lawn (introduced to soften the area) give sufficient space for any recreational activity of a small family. For this congenial climate, I have emphasized a fountain and pool, a shelter, an adequate sitting area, and a barbecue. This last mentioned item is patterned after the old-fashioned bonfire, at which one can roast a wiener or toast a marshmallow and still enjoy it by not having to stand up all the time, or freeze to death.

The construction involved in all these features is comparatively simple and the installation cost is within the average family's budget. To help reduce some of the expense, it would be possible for the man of the house -if he were handy with tools-to do most of the construction himself.

"The shelter or pergola is of 'eggcrate' design and could be covered with vines, or even with a roofing material to protect from the elements. The overhead pattern of squares is carried down the side wall to provide shelves for potted plants and flowers, with plastic mesh screen on the outside to cut off the wind but allow plenty of light to come through. The panels, of plywood and 2 x 4 redwood vertical strips, provide a solid backing for the shelter.

"As to costs, here are prices for the materials used, and an overall contractor's figure for the garden:

| 1350 brick @ $27 per M | $30.45 |
|--------------------------------|----------|
| 3 lbs. grass seed | 5.25 |

"The planting includes shrub masses of evergreen stock, three deciduous trees planted as one in the lower center of the plan, flowering perennials and annuals, and the lawn, which is the largest item. Maintenance, other than the usual lawn mowing and watering, is kept at a minimum through the use of controlled planting in permanent edged beds."

PLUMBING FIXTURES

If you wish you had a lawn roller but don't feel justified in buying one, you can easily make one using these materials: One 3 ft. length of 10-in. (inside diameter) vitrified-clay, plain ring pipe; 3½ ft. of 1-in. or 1½-in. gas pipe; about 12 ft. of 2 x 4-in. lumber (less if you have an old lawn-mower handle); four 6-in. bolts; half a bag of cement, one of sand, two of gravel; an old box or smooth surface to mix in or on.

Set clay pipe on end on spot of hard, level ground and secure with stakes. Place gas pipe exactly in center, drive it 3 in. into ground, and brace it. Mix gravel and sand, add cement and continue mixing, adding water little by little until mass is evenly moist, not sloppy. Fill form, tamping and floating until gas pipe protrudes 3 in. at top, and leave for several days to set; sprinkle occasionally if weather is hot and dry.

Cut and bore wood pieces for handle as shown; fit and bolt together. Clay pipe can be cracked off with sledge or left on as part of roller until it breaks or chips badly.

A Weekend of Work ...a Summerful of Fun

st spring, after digging the stump of an old dead pear tree out of my back yard, I looked glumly at hole it left, thinking of the work nd soil-it would take to fill it. Why fill it?" asked my wife. hy not leave it there and make rading pool for the children?"

Vhy not, indeed. So I made a ch, and one week end later the l was finished. The rest of the mer, two-year-old Andrea and -year-old Jimmy spent part of ry warm day splashing in it, and ctically every child in the neighborhood shared the fun. The materials needed were: 1 bag cement, 225 bricks, 1/2 cu. yd. each of gravel and sand, coarse fill for drainage pit, a sink drain, and, of 3/4" pipe, 2 elbows, I 4" nipple, and I Io' length.

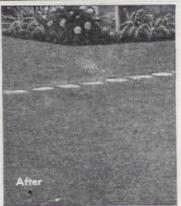

The pool is filled with the garden hose and empties into its own drainage pit; this avoids expensive connections.- I made it of used, smoothfaced brick instead of cement so I wouldn't have to build forms and mix a ton or so of concrete, and though I had never laid a brick, the construction took only two days.

To build a similar pool of your own, dig the excavation about 8" deeper and 18" greater in diameter than the desired dimensions. Put drainage pit at least 10' away from it with its top about a foot lower than the bottom of the pool. Slope the trench for the connecting pipe evenly. Next, partly fill the drainage pit with broken stone or bricks and coarse gravel; assemble the pipe and lay it in position with the nipple at the center of, and some 3" below, the pool floor, and cover both ends to keep out dirt and cement during construction operations. Finally, fill pit and connecting trench.

Now, getting back to the pool, lay a 3" or deeper layer of coarse gravel as a sub-foundation, then 2" of fine gravel, and a surface of dirt and sand to form a smooth bed for the bricks. For mortar, mix I part cement and 11/2 parts clean, fine sand (by volume) and add enough water to make a stiff consistency; mix it in small batches-a pail of cement and one and a half of sand is ample.

Smooth-faced brick is essential. Also take care to avoid rough mortar joints that might cut children's feet. Lay the pool floor one course of brick at a time, sloping it toward the drain. Before cementing the bricks around the drain pipe, uncap it and place a screen or perforated plate over it to keep out debris when the pool is emptied. The best arrangement is a sink drain with a removable metal strainer underneath a regulation rubber stopper.

Make the sides of the pool three courses high of bricks laid on edge, then top these off with a course laid flat to make a rim. Of course, for a deeper pool than I built, more courses could be used under the rim. When the mortar has set, fill in with gravel around the pool to within a couple of inches of the top (for drainage) then finish off with soil and grass or, as I did and as is shown in the picture on page 77, by laying a surrounding walk of brick on a level sand bed.

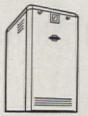

Such a pool may not be entirely watertight, but the leakage will not be serious, and may not even be noticeable. Since my pool was intended for small children, half a foot of water was plenty for them to splash in. That, too, you can determine to suit your own conditions. It is important, however, to insist that the pool should never be used unless there is an adult watching. A twoyear-old becomes panicky when its face is submerged, and can drown in a few inches of water. Also the pool should be emptied immediately after being used so no child can stray alone into it; rain water should not be allowed to collect in it. With these precautions, no child's life need be endangered in this back-yard fun spot.

ARTHUR M. ARMSTRONG

Each of Mr. Armstrong's back-yard chrysanthemum shelters has two frames; the outer one supports the aster cloth, the inner one, black sateen. Right, the kind of flowers he grows—and shares

Mums in the Dark

The secret of bringing outdoor chrysanthemums into bloom before frosts destroy them is to force the formation of buds by increasing the hours of irkness in each day. The chrysanthemum, being hat is called a "short day" plant, will turn from just towing to developing flowers only when the days ecome shorter. So each year I advance the blossoming of my back-yard 'mums by covering them with lack sateen from 5 p. m. to 8 a. m., starting about ally 15 and keeping it up until September 1, when he buds are beginning to show color.

The plants are grown in wood-frame enclosures creened with aster cloth which gives partial shade, uts down wind force by 50 per cent, and affords projection against destructive insects and roaming cats and dogs. I set out the new plants (rooted cuttings) or divisions of the old plants) about the middle of May and feed them frequently with liquid cow manure until they are about ten inches high. Early in June, I cut all stems back to four inches; from every short stalk come two stems, which are allowed to bear only one flower each. After this first cutting back, the plants are watered daily, if necessary, and fed with a solution of two handfuls of Vigoro plant food in eight quarts of liquid cow manure. As a rule, they come into full bloom by October 1. The varieties I grow are Masterpiece (pink), Seagull (white), and Mefo (yellow and white, pictured above).

I am 82 years old and in excellent health except for deafness which led to my retiring from business in 1930. I have learned the art of staying at home, and my flower and vegetable gardens are my delight.

At 5 o'clock each evening the cloth is spread across supporting wires and pulled down on all sides

Here is the house shown above with the shade cloth down to let the chrysanthemums sleep longer

At 8 each morning it is rolled back, thus. In practice, the shading is discontinued while flowers are still in bud themselves somewhat profanely and retired to sulk in a den of diapers.

The clever bride you write about graduates from one of the better progressive colleges. She knows how to keep her hair gleaming, her slip and complexes from showing. She may even have had a course or two in marriage or home management. Jane, a friend of mine who fits into this pattern very neatly so far, showed me the loopholes in it when I went to see her and her first baby.

Her apartment looked as if a stork had woven a nest of diapers there and settled down. From her once stark mantelpiece gleamed a bottle of baby oil and an ornament of safety pins planted in a bar of soap. I hardly had time to make the usual remarks as to how the baby was the spittin' image of its father before she launched into a tirade: "Real life situations! That is what they called them in my home economics course. In a sweet little apartment, five of us took care of one baby. One was laundress for a week, one the cook, one the baby nurse, one the house slavey, and one the budgeteer. But here am I, not quintuplets in real life, and I have the whole works to manage at one swat!'

Not content with making baby care seem a snap, many of the articles suggest that you can hold down your job with one hand and baby with the other. All you need to do is organize.

But have you tried organizing a baby? Or worse still a two- or threeyear-old? Children in the tote-andtoddle stage can't be neatly pigeonholed. It isn't so bad when all they do is sleep and slurp, but wait till they get to the stage of learning to dress.

Marge, another friend, is an efficient young mama who thought her personality and budget would balance neatly if she worked and put her moppet, Susan, in nursery school. She tried it out, but it was something less than a total success. She hired an energetic lady to come in half an hour before Susan's return from school, whisk through the apartment, prepare a good hot supper. All Marge had to do was to drop the little girl off at school on her way downtown.

But Susan couldn't learn to manage those buttons and bows fast enough to dress herself. It was Marge who wound up cramming Susan into her little garments before the hectic rush to nursery school.

The lovely energetic lady left in a week. The next bonne à tout faire wore a pink flower in her hair and was just "one of the family." The next one was a dour soul who recounted tales of her pain-racked relatives, all of whom suffered with gusto.

Finally the day came, as it always does, when instead of cooing the child was kerchooing. Her face was hot, and so was Marge's—with ap prehension. Marge couldn't leave the child, so she called the office at ar inopportune time to tell them so. Re sult: one jobless mama. Being jobless wouldn't be so bad if you glit writers hadn't convinced her that it would be so easy to swing two jobs

In fact, there are ladies, you say who swing their jobs and lots of kids. The patter of many feet is being heard on the best rugs—so help me even lots of children is chi-chi.

Furnishing an apartment is invariably tagged as being frightfully amusing. Can you understand that for people like me, who aren't nimble thimbles, it's frequently frightful?

My parents do not have an attic bulging with things like an old oak table that could be cut down to make a superbly roomy coffee table, or a Victorian whatnot which a hammerhappy husband could convert into the sweetest bar, or even a picture frame which could be mounted on sawhorses to produce a tricky table.

Even the antique shops which yield such treasures in abundance to the people mentioned in the articles seem to offer me only such articles as German guns, ukuleles with fringy strings, jewelry with missing stones.

But perhaps it's just as well I don't acquire these treasures. My husband hates furniture that's "frightfully amusing" and insists on solid comfort, which comes only at solid prices. Thus I'm grateful to those writers who show magnificent rooms at unabashedly magnificent prices.

And what do the people in the articles do to deserve such friends? It seems that anyone who is making over a barn in the country always has wonderful friends. There is the artist who just happens to paint that marvelous mural, and the big group of people who arrive in jeans and slap paint all over the place while the photogenic hostess serves pots of hot coffee, baked beans, and hot dogs with a big crisp salad.

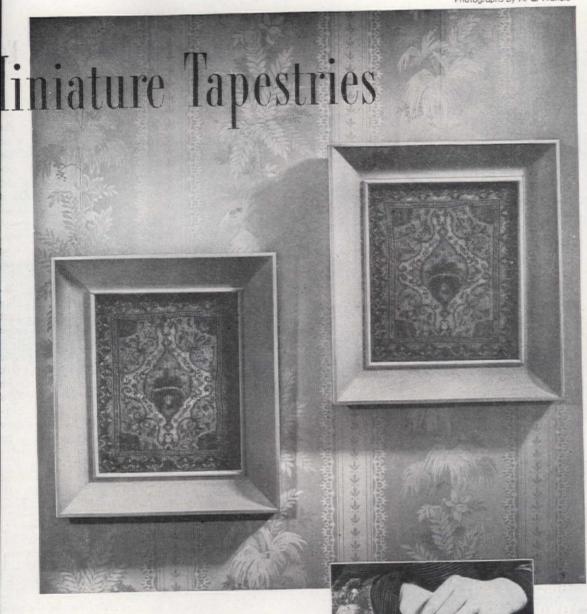

My own friends are a delightful group, but they would rather flex their minds over a bridge table than heave timbers to convert an old horror into a happy home for me.

Maybe the fault, dear Brutus, is not in the writers but in myself. I love to read efficiency schedules while I sit drinking a cup of coffee with my back firmly turned to the dishes in the sink. It's great to read how lithe lovelies keep their figures and their houses in trim. And while I read, maybe I can forget the "woollies" of dust rolling beneath the beds. I might even try painting the canary cage pink and planting it with philodendron.

Let's see, can life really be that chi-chi?

Yours,

MARY ALICE BROWN

rom Beaded Bags

MILDRED SUMMERFIELD

The forgotten beaded handbag that was "all the go" when grandma was a girl can easily be transformed into interesting wall decoration. Mounted and framed, these beautiful bead tapestries form a decorative focal point for your walls.

Somewhere in an attic trunk, storage closet, or small girl's "dress-up" costume box, you may have one of these handsome accessories of thirty years ago. The colors and designs of these bags were inspired by treasured copies of Turkish and Persian prayer rugs, by the brilliant beauty of medieval stained-glass windows, by the artistry of illuminated manuscripts. Why relegate such loveliness to the oblivion of attic dust? These patterns, worked by patient hands into beautiful designs, deserve enduring reincarnation.

Each bag can be separated into a pair of miniature tapestries. The operation is simply done. First, remove the handle and lining of the bag. Then, using a razor blade with one edge safely bound with adhesive, divide the bag into its two sections. If some beads are loosened by the process, save them. They may be glued to bare spots if there are lesions in the main design.

For mounting, choose two pieces of stout cardboard large enough in size to allow about an inch of border around the beaded pieces. Outline with a ruler the dimensions of the pieces and then appliqué the beading to the cardboard. You will need a strong, sharp needle and strong thread. Be sure the beading is evenly aligned for framing, and, for added security, stitch a second time.

For framing, a pair of old-fashioned walnut or gold-leaf frames create a suitable border but may be difficult to locate. Shadow boxes will also set off the tapestries very elegantly and do not require glass. At this point you might also inscribe on the back of the mounting the name of the artist who created the beading design, for no two of these artistic bags were exactly alike.

You are now ready to hang your pair of unique "hallmarks," your pair of miniature tapestries.

Home-Owners' Quiz

The right answers can mean money in your pocket

Q. What should my income be to afford insulation?

A. Regardless of income, anyone can afford to insulate his home. Installed in a new home, KIMSUL* insulation may cut yearly fuel bills as much as 44%; in an existing home—up to 33%. Thus KIMSUL quickly pays for itself. And so, after a few years, KIMSUL actually begins paying back more than the original cost of the insulation. Moreover, to insulate an average new 6-room home costs only about $150.

Q. How much cooler does insulation keep a home in summer?

□ None □ Up to 8° □ Up to 15°

A. Double Thick KIMSUL, installed in the attic, lowers inside temperatures as much as 15° on hottest summer days. Keeps your home snug and warm in winter. And the exclusive many-layer stitched design of KIMSUL provides uniform temperature control. Unlike some types of insulation, it leaves no money-wasting thick spots, no thin spots where heat can seep in or out.

Q. Will insulation make my home fire-proof?

☐ Yes ☐ No ☐ Depends on where the fire starts

A. No insulation can make a home fire-proof. However, KIMSUL insulation can effectively retard a fire. KIMSUL is the only fire-resistant insulation with Pyrogard* fire-resistant cover. In addition, KIMSUL is permanently resistant to insects, vermin and mold.

Q. How much will I save by insulating when I build?

□ 66% □ 20% □ 3%

A. Insulate the walls with KIMSUL when you build and you'll save 66% over what it would cost after the house is completed. For but a few cents added to mortgage payments, KIMSUL insulation brings lifetime comfort to you and your family. Owners of existing homes can save by installing KIMSUL themselves. No special skill or equipment is needed. However, your KIMSUL dealer will arrange for professional installation if you so desire. Builders will tell you the KIMSUL way to insulate is the scientific way—leaving air space on both sides of the insulation to reduce heat lag and condensation.

Weekends Built a Holiday House

from the calendar. He wisely planned circulation to eliminate as much wet sand and tracking as possible. Just examine the position of bathroom and its companion dressing area! Here we find two direct entrances to these useful little rooms, one from the path on the north, the other a step across the bedroom hall from the porch. Such planning results in one complete bathroom plus a dressing room equipped with shower, laundry tub for rinsing out wet bathing suits, a dressing table, and plenty of hanging space. Guests who drive out for a day's outing find this layout ideal since they need not disturb the rest of the house when getting into or out of bathing togs. The owners, too, enjoy this extra privacy.

Living room is spacious; its shed roof is painted blue-green, a happy contrast to the pink-beige plywood walls which are surmounted by cherry-red indirect lighting troughs. Floor-to-ceiling windows run across the bay side and have sunny yellow cotton draperies that can be pulled across when days become too hot.

An open kitchen is almost part of the living-room extension used as dining area, yet it is cleverly tucked away out of sight behind the fireplace wall. Here with hot coffee at hand's reach on one side, the deep blue of the bay on the other, one can really forget the hurly-burly of city life.

If your choice is for a lazy day, there's the deep covered porch with its obscure-glass wall panel for protection against wind or view. On the other hand, if one's desire is a mahogany-colored skin, the open red-tiled terrace is at your disposal. Here one can either relax in deck chairs or on the comforting sand and have food easily available from the kitchen near by. As can be readily seen, this is a house planned to satisfy anyone's vacation whims.

Indoors once more, we visit the master bedroom, modest in size but full of comfort. Included within its four walls are a recessed dressing table and two ample closets. But perhaps the best space-stretching trick in the house is a combination den-bedroom next to the bath. Here's a room with but three walls, the fourth being the hallway with its bank of south windows. A curtain track in the ceiling holds a heavy drapery that can be pulled closed at night to form a cozy bedroom.

The exterior of the house is pale tan in color, harmonizing perfectly with the landscape of sea and sand, and trim little planting pockets add a refreshing touch of green. There's not a bit of pretense about the house; elegance was sacrificed in order to gain extra spaciousness. Mr. Wilson has been singularly successful in creating a gay, inviting atmosphere conducive to easy-going summer living. There's a minimum of housekeeping since grass matting, bamboo furniture, and gay cotton fabrics not only add a fresh, outdoors appearance but need little attention to keep looking trim.

Living room, dining area, and kitchen flow into one another yet have individual privacy. Walls painted pink-beige harmonize with color of fieldstone chimney nursery school be attended, he was the most ill-mannered of the entire group because he constantly interrupted the flow of activities with "Pardon me, but—" Here was a youngster who was a "model child" to his parents. Yet, in reality, he was so frustrated that his surface manners reflected an underlying disturbance, and these same manners were a great hindrance to his play group. His parents could not comprehend the teacher's concern about the child's general behavior and her desire to discuss his total development.

Table habits are often shocking to parents because they look upon their child as a diminutive adult and expect too much of him. During the early years, children are more apt than not to use a spoon, but will revert to the use of hands without hesitation. In the later pre-school years, as he develops greater manual dexterity, it becomes more natural for him to use a spoon, and later a fork. Cups, spoons, and forks scaled to the child's size will facilitate the proper handling of eating equipment.

Mealtime habits are best taught when meals are served in unhurried fashion, with everyone eating in a pleasant and casual manner and treating the child as if he is a human being rather than a small storage factory into which foods must be crammed. Dad must remember that he is not setting a good example if he munches his food behind the protective screening of the newspaper.

Most cultures have placed a great deal of emphasis on sharing. We, too, are anxious for our children to grow up to be co-operative and generous. However, there are periods in a child's life when his development prevents his sharing freely. For example, a two-year-old finds sharing difficult because of the possessive feelings he has at this age, and if he grabs a toy from one of his playmates, he is acting like a normal child. Taking the toy away from him with sweet talk about the joys of sharing usually fails to accomplish its purpose and often is followed by screaming and shouting. By the age of four, most voungsters are willing to share at times. With them, sweet reasonableness and a request to let a playmate have a toy for a little while is likely to get a friendly response.

Interrupting a conversation may be disconcerting to adults, but must be expected of young children. Some five-year-olds will play quietly when guests are in the house, and six-yearolds will usually co-operate to the extent of excusing themselves when they interrupt.

A six-year-old will usually respond to an adult greeting. Even younger children may be ready to respond with a friendly "Hello." However, let's consider the three-, four-, or five-year-old, who cold-shoulders his favorite aunt, then fifteen minutes later brings in a new trinket to display to her. Oddly enough, he is practicing good manners—for his age.

Insistence that a three-year-old say "Thank you" whenever he receives a gift may finally achieve such a verbal response. This doesn't prove, however, that the child has any understanding of expressing gratitude in this fashion.

Grandma may think that Penelope is a model of good behavior if she says "Thank you very much" in response to the gift of a new book, then goes off and leaves it on the table. Few parents understand that it would be a truer indication of appreciation if Penelope grabbed at the package, tore open the wrapper, and avidly devoured the contents—without saying "Thanks."

Ideas about neatness develop as a reflection of adult habits and emerge more rapidly from following an example than from sermonizing. More often than not, the young pre-school child is little concerned with adult notions about neatness. By four or five, he will begin to co-operate in picking up his toys and in putting clothes away. This doesn't mean that he will always do it, nor should he be expected to. Between six and ten, a child knows a good deal about the proper care of himself and his clothes, but he may be in such a rush to get at what really interests him that he cuts corners. Parents should be happy if he spontaneously washes his hands before meals.

Parents should be concerned about the pre-school child who is so terribly neat that she dares not play at any game which might soil her skirt or dirty her hands. They will be wise to find out what errors they've made in handling the child, with the result that she is so scrupulously clean and neat—to the exclusion of the normal fun of childhood.

Too many parents expect too much of young children in the way of manners. Families which practice courtesy and respect the rights of others are most successful in helping youngsters learn the social amenities.

Have you spoken frankly to your daughter about these Intimate Physical Facts?

Before she marries—make sure she has scientific knowledge she can trust!

The practice of vaginal douching two or three times weekly for intimate feminine cleanliness, health, married happiness, after menstrual periods and to combat odor—has become so thoroughly recognized and recommended today, it's no longer a question of whether a woman should douche but rather what she should use in her douche.

And every woman should be made to realize this: Of all the liquid antiseptic-germicides tested for the douche—no other type proved so POWERFUL yet SO SAFE to tissues as ZONITE! You can use ZONITE as often as you want without the slightest injury.

Cautions Against Weak or Dangerous Products

It's shocking how many women, through ignorant advice of friends, still use 'kitchen makeshifts' such as salt, soda and vinegar for the douche. These are NOT germicides in the douche. They NEVER can assure you the great germicidal and deodorizing action of ZONITE.

The ZONITE principle was developed by a famous surgeon and chemist—the first antiseptic-germicide principle in the world with such a powerful germ-killing action yet absolutely safe to the most delicate tissues.

Truly a Miracle!

zonite positively contains no phenol, no mercury, no harsh acids—overstrong solutions of which may damage tissues and in time even impair functional activity of the mucous glands. zonite is strictly non-poisonous, non-irritaling—truly a blessing to womankind.

ZONITE destroys and removes odor-causing waste substances. Helps guard against infection. It immediately kills every germ it touches. You know it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract. But you can BE SURE ZONITE DOES kill every reachable germ and keeps them from multiplying. Any drug counter.

months. One occurs every 16 minutes during the months of July and August.

Four-year-old Mary J. was another '48 vacationist who didn't need to die. Her mother, a city woman, thought the country "safe," let the child roam freely on her own at the resort where they were staving. One day Mary wandered into near-by woods, went wading in a pond. She was never seen alive again. She drowned.

Mary J.'s mother was not a vicious woman. She was ignorant of safety hazards, didn't anticipate possible disaster. Lapses like hers account for many child deaths each summer.

Drownings, traffic accidents, and falls-these are the season's biggest killers. Burns, poisonings, and bicycle accidents also take their toll.

Accidents in the summer, like those in the home the year round, are caused by things you can controlhaste, overconfidence, carelessness, overexertion, negligence. The woods, the mountains, the beach, and your back yard-all have special hazards which can be eliminated with care, vigilance, and forethought.

Don't take chances during July and August. Be alive in September!

ITEMIZE HAZARDS, FOLLOW THESE RULES TO KEEP THE FAMILY SAFE ON VACATION

DON'T endanger lives by speeding, disobeying traffic signs. Stop driving when tired

DON'T let children roam out of sight. Don't let them play on busy streets and roads

Do have a first-aid kit handy in the house and in the car. Do know how to use it in an emergency....□

Do inspect strange terrain and list danger spots. Eliminate as many as possible, avoid others

Do clean up debris, remove hazards like broken glass, nails□ po keep insecticides and sprays out of reach of children Do study a good outdoor guide. learn to recognize poisonous plants, berries, and snakes DON'T light fires near trees and bushes. Always put fires out

Do expose yourself to sun's rays gradually-to avoid a dangerous, painful burn

DON'T overexert at sports if you are out of practice-and die of a heart

Do teach children to swim as soon as possible. Lessons are a good investment

DON'T try a long-distance swim alone. Always swim with others...

Do let 11/2 hours elapse between meals and swimming. Don't stay in the water when cold or tired

DON'T "fool" in boats and canoes. Don't overload. If you capsize, hang on to boat until help comes

Julius Caesar and the square of the hypotenuse be hanged! You have to whip your tennis into Alice Marble shape, and figure out what to wear to the block party Friday night. You're on vacation! And what's more, you've got a house guest coming for the week end. So roll out the welcome mat, roll up your sleeves, and get going on some full-of-fun plans for your summer visitor. And be sure to make your plans with enthusiasm even if it is your creepy cousin Cora, and not your best buddy who's coming to stay. This makes for much more fun, and you'll probably find that

Cora, the cousin, isn't such a creep after all!

Give a good party, invite a good crowd, and, dollars to doughnuts, the matching up of guys and gals will take care of itself. Friday night is a good choice for the big "production" party. This takes care of meeting everybody for the balance of the week end, and starts things rolling in a friendly, known-you-all-my-life kind of atmosphere.

No more tugging or pulling to open or close a balky garage door... no more doors that bang, stick or freeze shut! A turn of the handle sends an Overmatic up and over—a slight pull from either inside or outside closes it. Even an 8-year-old can operate the modern Curtis Overmatic garage door!

Easy to Install in Your Garage!

The Overmatic is quickly installed in a new or old garage—needs no special jambs. Operating hardware is simple—no space-wasting mass of bulky iron. The Overmatic fits an opening 8 x 7 feet—gives ample clearance for any style car.

The door panels in the Overmatic are made of Curtis Prespine—a superior new wood product manufactured exclusively by Curtis. Prespine Panels have the strength to take heavy impact blows... won't mar or scratch readily... won't splinter or chip. Prespine has superior bending strength, resists warping, shrinking and swelling. And it provides an excellent bond for paint or stain.

With all its advantages, the Overmatic is moderate in price—costs less than you think. See your Curtis Woodwork dealer—or write for literature.

Food Prices ...

Debit-Credit

 Why haven't retail food prices dropped as rapidly as prices of farm products? Because of long line of processes between farm and consumer. . . . Americans are still a prudent and thrifty people, according to Institute of Life Insurance observation. In 1948 money borrowed by policy holders on life insurance policies was lowest in 50 years.

Bug-a-Way Bulbs ... Moth Menace

· Yellow light holds little allure for night-flying insects, say Westinghouse engineers. Bug-a-Way bulbs coated with new yellow enamel expected to make summer outdoor living more comfortable. . . . Methoxychlor, Du Pont chemical compound fatal to household insects, relatively nontoxic to humans, is attracting widespread interest. New product, based on this chemical to be known as "Sanitone" MC, will make fabrics mothproof for a year.

Coffee Roasting...

Salad Habit

 Coffee roasting right before your eyes is new process introduced by Infra Roast, Inc. Considered one of most important developments since first license to sell coffee was granted in 1670. . . . Serving crisp salad as dinner appetizer, popular in the West, is good from standpoint of getting essential vitamins and minerals before appetite is satiated says Western Growers Association.

Miles of Roses

• If experiments succeed, Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad will plant multiflora rose hedge along thousands of miles of track-a barrier impenetrable even to small boys. Pretty too!

Ranch Style

• According to "Consumer News Digest", 99% of 3,000 women interviewed by Tulsa, Oklahoma, builder want ranch-style house with separate dining room, at least one picture window, more than one bathroom, sliding door closets, a pantry.

Food Budgeting

· New U. S. Department of Agriculture booklet, "Helping Families Plan Food Budgets", shows how to estimate family's food needs for one week at low and moderate costs. Free.
