COLGATE DENTAL CREAM STOPS TOOTH DECAY BEST

Better Than Any Other Way of Preventing Tooth Decay According to Published Reports!

Reader's Digest recently reported on one of the most extensive experiments in dentifrice history! And here are additional facts: The one and only toothpaste used in this research was Colgate Dental Cream. Yes, and two years' research showed brushing teeth right after eating with Colgate Dental Cream stopped decay best! Better than any other home method of oral hygiene! The Colgate way stopped more decay for more people than ever reported in all dentifrice history!

No Other Toothpaste or Powder
Ammoniated or Not Offers Proof of Such Results!

Even more important, there were no new cavities whatever for more than 1 out of 3 who used Colgate Dental Cream correctly! Think of it! Not even one new cavity in two full years! No other dentifrice has proof of such results! No dentifrice can stop all tooth decay, or help cavities already started. But the Colgate way is the most effective way yet known to help your dentist prevent decay.

YOU SHOULD KNOW! While not mentioned by name, Colgate's was the only toothpaste used in the research reported in July Reader's Digest.

... BETTY AND BILL HILLERMAN are Middle West converts to California living. Betty careered a bit in an advertising agency until Bill convinced her that marriage was her true vocation. Both were interested in decorating, and when years of intensive work as an accountant culminated in an ulcer operation, Bill changed his vocation and learned the creative angles of custom upholstery. In "How to Re-upholster a Chair," Bill supplied the ideas and "know-how," while Betty put them into writing.

... RUTH HOLADAY MORGAN, wife of a Hoosier college professor, describes the pattern of her family's life in "Our Children Like Our Way of Life." Besides her children and writing, her interests include photography (her husband's hobby), puppies, kittens, tadpoles, toads, wild bunnies, and other small forms of animal life. "All four of us love to travel," she says, "hay fever having made us summer Canadians." The family project is creating a back yard out of a daisy, blackberry, and thorn thicket.

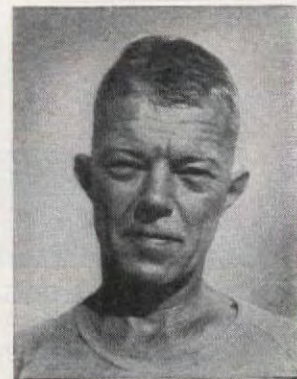

... JAMES G. ESSON has had a lifetime experience in the professional gardener field, and for many years was superintendent of one of the best-known gardens on Long Island's North Shore. Later, he was the editor of Gardeners' Chronicle of America and, since 1946, has been official consultant of the Horticultural Society of New York. Always sympathetic to the problems of the back-yard gardener, he organized the only Men's Garden Club on Long Island. Bulbs are one of his favorite topics.

... MYRTLE ROSS DAVIS is the proud mother of four boys which gives you a good healthy clue to her interest in back-yard ice skating (page 44). A native of Colorado (born and raised on a cattle ranch), she taught botany for three years after being graduated from college. Aside from her home and family, her main interest is in horticulture and gardening. Her hobbies include raising orchids and other plants not easy to grow in Colorado. She satisfies her artistic sense with flower arranging and landscape-design.

... CARL MOLITOR found himself in 1943-44 bobbing around New Guinea in a small Navy ship with visions of fresh vegetables haunting his dreams. Returning home, he fell in with the pioneers of hydroponic gardens, about which he tells on page 110. On the soft but salty sand of his home at Ponte Vedra Beach, Florida, he is applying his dreams to the magic of hydro-gardening—or, he says, "vice versa." He thinks he'll live to see vegetables growing in every kitchen, and flowers in every living room.

Cut and Engraved Glass 1771-1905 by Dorothy Daniel. (M. Barrows and Co.) Price $5.95. . . This is a fascinating and complete history of cut and engraved glass, beautifully illustrated with 517 different pictures of glass. The author claims this to be the first book on an American craft neglected and almost forgotten. She discusses with exactness and with authority Cutting, Engraving, Etching, Cameo, Intaglio, and Colored Cut Glass, and divides the American span of production into definite periods: Early American (1771-1830), Middle (1830-1880), and Brilliant (1880-1905). It is prophesied that American cut glass will increase greatly in value over the years. Endless research and three years in the writing result in an informative and rare book for the collector or layman interested in American glass.

The State Fair Blue Ribbon Cook Book by Hurley and Groetzinger (Frederick Fell, Inc.) Price $2.95. . . Much more than a cook book is The State Fair Blue Ribbon Cook Book; it's a visit to the fair and a tour through America at its finest. Fine food, fine people, fine standards are all here represented by blue-ribbon recipes for cakes, pies, breads, cookies, preserves, and other foods. Each chapter is preceded by a folksy visit with the authors. They tell you how a good cake should look, feel, and taste. They bring the fair to you with all its sights, sounds, and gaiety. We found it refreshing and valuable. The recipes have infinite variety; Texas Bishop's Bread, Mayflower Scones, Plum Cat-sup, caught our fancy, to mention just a few.

American Red Cross Home Nursing Textbook. (The Blakiston Company) Price 60¢ (limp cover), $1.00 (hard cover). . . Here is the 1950 revised edition of the Red Cross's invaluable text on home nursing. Certainly a must for the home reference library, it includes information on how to meet home emergencies, how to recognize some of the early signs of illness, how to give simple nursing care to the sick and injured in the home, how to keep the family well. Available through your Red Cross chapter.

TELEPHONE LINES ARE HUMMING

THIS COUNTRY'S telephone service is one of its greatest assets in time of emergency. It unites millions of people—helps thousands of businesses to get things done quicker—and is a vital part of our national defense.

In the last five years the Bell System has increased the number of telephones by more than 12,500,000. Billions of dollars have been spent for new telephone equipment of every kind. There are nearly 150,000 more Bell System employees.

All of this growth and the size of the Bell System are proving of particular value right now. One reason this country can outproduce any other is because it has the most and the best telephone service in the world.

"Well, Janie . . . tonight boy met girl—boy married girl—and we're supposed to assume that boy and girl lived happily ever after."

"So?"

"So things don't always happen that way in real life. You've got to work for happiness . . . and plan for it."

"I'm all for that."

"I know you are. We both are. In fact, just today I had a talk with someone on that very subject."

"Good!—Why Darling, that sounds like the kind of planning real happiness is built on."

Careful, individual planning—that takes into account means as well as needs—is what makes Mutual Life's Insured Income program so attractive to young family men. And Insured Income offers economy, too, because it starts with assets you already have, such as Social Security and pension benefits.

I have just read the article "Want to Save up to 174 Hours a Year?" by Edith Ramsay, and I would like to enlarge the role an electric ironer can play in doing a family's ironing.

We have three little girls whose wardrobes are completely feminine: basque dresses, pinafores, petticoats, etc. Twice a week, I wash and iron from fifteen to twenty dresses, three petticoats, two to four shirts for my husband, an apron or so for myself, a nightgown, a slip, and a pair of pajamas in addition to flat pieces. Periodically curtains and a couch slip cover must be included also.

How long would it take to do such an ironing by hand? Perhaps three or four hours of uninterrupted work. But with two small children, who has four hours free from interruptions?

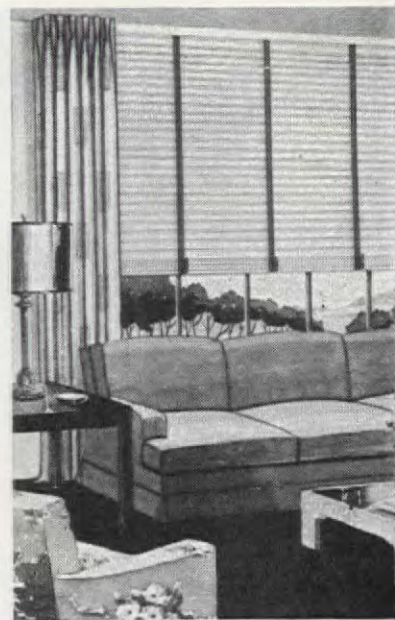

I iron in the morning when the children are willing to play contentedly without me for a while, or in the early afternoon during their nap time. Even counting the inevitable times I must stop a minute for the telephone, the doorbell, or a dry diaper, I can do my ironing in two or two and a half hours. How much time during the year does my ironer save? 174 hours? I think that number could be multiplied by two!

I shop with my ironer in mind, too. I avoid patterns that will be difficult to iron.—MRS. MAR'LYN D. COWAN

After reading "Confessions of a Simple Soul" by Charlotte M. Mill in your May issue I just had to express myself. As a lecturer, teacher of Elementary Flower Arrangement, and as the recent State Chairman of Flower Show Schools for the Garden Club of New Jersey, I felt that some word of defense should be written.

I am an ardent horticulturist, but raising the flowers was not enough. I wanted to use them for decoration, and I wanted to be able to use them well, so I studied Flower Arrangement. I will never attain the "studied perfection" in my arrangements mentioned in Mrs. Mill's article, because I do not approve of the slavish adherence to the rules and the mad scramble to get unusual material for "that important show." But I do know that flower pictures made by following basic rules and principles, will always give the observer a greater feeling of aesthetic satisfaction, and will usually give the arranger a feeling of a thing well done.

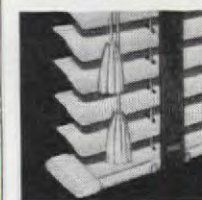

I heartily agree with Mrs. Mill's criticism of the "TOO perfect" and the "TOO studied" arrangements appearing in some of the flower shows—but in defense of the creators of these flower pictures, a word of explanation should be given. . . . In the advanced flower shows, and by those I mean the shows given in the cities and the larger towns, the schedule of classes for flower arrangements is of very high caliber. . . . The exhibitor entering these classes is, in this instance, an artist creating a flower picture. These arrangements, of necessity, must be very studied and as nearly perfect as possible, and a trained observer can readily comprehend the message contained therein. . . . The exhibitor who progresses rule by rule but does not go beyond that, usually creates a cold impersonal arrangement; but the exhibitor who interprets them with her heart puts her own personal touch in the arrangement and this is what gives it warmth and personality. . . .

I do hope the next time Mrs. Mill visits a flower show she will look for the message in the flower picture and that she will try to imagine the challenge it presented to the exhibitor. . . . To the arranger who enters these shows for the joy of working with flowers and who enjoys self-expression in her work (and there are many of us) whether or not an award is given is a small matter.

Thanks for the "Welcome Home" offer. It is nice to know that I've been missed.

THE AMERICAN HOME has always been our family magazine. My sister, Mrs. W. H. Adderly has been a subscriber for many years, and her two daughters have been brought up in THE AMERICAN HOME tradition. . . .

Personally, I got the idea of collecting old glass from THE AMERICAN HOME and now have a beautiful and interesting collection of old vinegar cruets.

In 1942 a group of your editors made a trip to the Middle West to call on old subscribers. One called on my sister and was so pleased with her and her home that an article was written about her and appeared in your April 1942 issue. . . . I have felt that I would like to thank THE AMERICAN HOME for this friendly gesture in giving credit where it was due and truly appreciated.

MAX ALTH and LEONA FERGUSON GOLDSWORTHY

What real fun is a holiday that ends in tyranny and vandalism? After years of watching their young people turn into juvenile delinquents for a night, the good citizens of Yonkers, New York, and Rahway, New Jersey, finally asked themselves this question. Broken windows, slit awnings, damaged porch furniture, jammed door bells, false fire alarms, stolen auto parts, rotten eggs smeared on houses, heavily soaped car windows, and overturned garbage cans were the inevitable results of what started as a simple, warmhearted holiday and grew into a rampage of destruction.

Pleas from teachers and parents and extra police enforcement only seemed to aggravate the situation. Take the case of Yonkers, a town as American as any. The custom there on Halloween night was to call out the entire police force. The regular 80 man night patrol would be increased to 250. But for all the good these men seemed to do, they all might as well have stayed in bed. The amount of damage was still extensive. On one particular night the police answered more than one hundred complaint calls. The fire department responded to twenty brush fires and two false alarms. The devil alone knows how many citizens did not report their troubles to the police, or how many fires were put out without the aid of the fire department.

That night of Halloween, 1945, did it. Yonkers decided something must be done. The local Police Athletic League, which had been inactive for two years previous because of the war, met and discussed the problem. PAL decided that something positive a real constructive substitute was the answer, rather than punishment which might just spur the offenders on to new outrages. Many substitutes were discussed. Some favored a block dance, and some favored a dance and show to be held indoors in the State Armory. Then someone came up with the idea of a parade. Find the kid, he said, who could ever resist a parade! PAL went to work.

During the year some unrecorded genius named the parade "Ragamuffin," and another suggested that the kids wear costumes and prizes be given for the most original, most beautiful, etc. City business men gave 25 prizes and PAL donated 100 dollar bills from its treasury. Citizens offered to act as judges, guides.

The route of the march was laid out over a two-mile course that wound up hill and down dale. The object—to tire the Ragamuffins out and make them eager for a little "shut-eye" at the end of the parade.

Witches' night arrived and 200 police were assigned to the regular Halloween night patrol. Another fifty, assisted by 150 firemen and war veterans, were assigned to the parade—400 men in all. Many had insisted that all those kids in one bunch meant trouble and nobody was taking any chances.

Three thousand kids and many of their parents marched that Halloween in 1946, and 15,000 brave citizens watched them. They wore a fantastic variety of costumes. They screamed, howled, and tooted with all their lusty might. They marched up Riverdale Avenue, then back down Broadway, picking up supporters all along the way. Everybody had a royal time—that is, everybody except the 200 men on guard. They didn't dare relax one step of the way.

It wasn't until late that night, when reports from all the precincts were in, that the total effect of the parade could be measured. And then the bare fact stunned every one present into silence. Not one single case of Halloween vandalism had been reported in the entire city. The witches had been driven out of Yonkers!

Knowing a good thing when they saw it, Yonkers continued the parades which each year grew larger. In 1949, 300 prizes were given out and a king and a queen were chosen to rule over the revelers. Officials from near-by towns were on hand to learn how the city solved its vandalism problem. Eleven thousand ragamuffins paraded and 70,000 citizens turned out to cheer them on. It was the largest number of people ever to assemble on the streets of Yonkers in the city's history. Long live the Ragamuffins!

Four years ago a similar miracle was wrought in Rahway, New Jersey. Overnight, grim Halloween pandemonium was transformed into a delightful civic occasion. Like many miracles, this one occurred with such speed and perfection that it is now impossible to find two identical versions of how it came to pass. Some say the credit is due the Mayor, and some say it belongs to the Deputy Chief of Police. Still others mention the Sideliners, an organization of local business men interested in the promotion of activities for the young people of Rahway. There is glory enough for all of them.

Neighbors (Begins on page 26)

There was a Halloween parade with prizes for the funniest, prettiest, and most original costumes. Local business men covered the necessary expense. A city block was reserved for street dancing. At seven o'clock, the hour of the parade, the streets were packed solid. Everyone of Rahway's 20,000 population participated, it seemed, either as a parader or spectator. The marchers were a wonderful sight with costumes that brought a constant howl of laughter. It was the best parade we had ever had in our local history.

The following year, the idea was expanded with a longer parade more elaborate floats, a longer list of prizes, and a special reviewing stand erected at the high-school athletic field, where the parade ended in glory. Again there was street dancing with a longer band and a louder band. So many young children wanted to be included that a special Children's Parade was scheduled for those under ten years. This took place at the field in the afternoon so that youngsters who should be abed early could have their share of the fun. An appropriation for the Halloween Parade expenses was included in the city budget, and taxpayers never benefited more.

The following years brought further delightful innovations. Under the auspices of the high-school art department, the large plate glass windows of store and business establishments were decorated on the outside with scenes of witches, pumpkins, harvest moons, corn fields, black cats, and goblins. Seventh and eighth graders and a students from high school applied the scenes free-hand using special water paint. Since prizes for the best Halloween picture were offered, the young people worked seriously and well. The business section began to resemble an especially gay art gallery. Hundreds of visitors came to town to admire these windows.

This Halloween will be the sixth year Rahway has presented a definite, efficiently planned Halloween program. More merchants have asked to have their windows decorated, and more young people will be able to share in the fun of decorating.

Gone are the days of cut clotheslines, rude intrusions, and hoodlums roaming the streets looking for trouble. Small witches and hobgoblins, all giggly over the daring experience, still ring doorbells and hope to receive a cookie, corn candy, or caramel in return. Nobody ever objected to this charming Halloween custom. The hoodlums have turned out to be exuberant young things just asking for someone to show them how to have a good time. A nightmare has become an exciting adventure.

But best of all, Halloween has become a day that parents share with their offspring. And it has become a community affair in which old and young join together to produce a gala civic event. In Rahway and Yonkers, U.S.A.—three heartfelt cheers.

A decorator's skill solved this common but difficult decorating problem: the stairway that descends right into the living room. Matching print wallpaper and fabric pull the two wall areas together, efface the awkwardly placed window. Three or four walls were painted pale gray so that papered wall has the effect of creating a separate entrance hall where none really exists

THE ECONOMY: defining room areas, camouflaging bad spots in an old house without the added cost of structural remodeling

CORNELIA CONGER, A.I.D.

An eminent decorator tells how and why a decorator can save you money.

How to choose a decorator, what you can justifiably expect,
how to estimate the costs

For years it has been fair game to poke fun at the alleged extravagance of decorators—but I'm going to try to show you that, far from being an extravagance, the services of a competent decorator are, in actual fact, an economy to you.

Apparently the general public thinks that decorators are either dreamy, artistic people, or else grasping hussies who charge outrageous prices for the same things you can buy for less at any store! But, funnily enough, the people who know us best seem to be sufficiently deluded to believe that, when a job is done, we have saved them the wear and tear of tramping the streets, as well as a lot of hard cash by making a careful plan of work to be done and the budget to be kept within.

Let us start in on fabrics. It is far easier and better to let your decorator save you time and effort by bringing you a well-considered selection gathered from a dozen firms to try in your own house. Each sample is clearly marked with a retail price—you pick out what you wish, and the price is exactly as shown. It is not the decorator who sets it; it is the fabric house. We are compensated by the difference between retail price and wholesale cost. Out of this difference comes our overhead—rent, salaries—and our profit.

As to wallpapers: You have all seen sample books of them. The price is plainly printed by the factory, not by us! If we borrow cut samples from a showroom, they, not we, mark the prices on each, and we are given a discount by the factory. We give you the benefit of our taste, experience, and our great professional pride in doing a thoroughly good job for you of combining the paper chosen with everything that goes with it into a harmonious whole, and we are responsible for the ultimate effect.

Furniture is a more varied and complex subject. Certain factories have showrooms scattered across our country showing their products, each tagged with a retail price. Others are marked in a wholesale code. Decorators usually prefer to have the retail prices marked. Then there are many upholsterers and cabinetmakers and other special workmen who do made-to-order work for us. Here again, I do not believe the decorator charges a higher percentage than in the factory field, except in the case of some specially designed and intricate piece that requires full working drawings. For this sometimes a charge for the design itself is made as a separate item. This is not in the usual run of our work.

Most department stores feature their carpet departments and advertise them heavily. THEY set the retail prices on their moderately priced grades which they carry in stock, and

A decorator uses matching patterns for a purpose: this paper on one wall because the bold design is good scale to "hold down" the big bed; twin fabric to avoid another pattern or texture in the small room. Can you tell the difference between this room and the near-twin, below? Everything in the top room is in good taste, but several important features have a skimpy, pinch-penny look. ● THE GREENS

Begin your color scheme with your rug. Consider it, too, as a long-term investment. It will control your decorating over many a year. Most popular, easily blended color is green. Lees' Provincial Texture, about $8.00 sq. yd.; Gulistan's Arabesque, around $11.50 sq. yd.; Archibald Holmes' Predictor, at $12.50 sq. yd.; typify range of tone and pattern for every decorative need

● THE OPULENTS

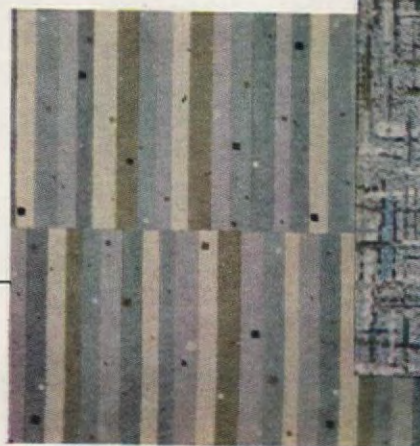

This is what you

Rich, ripe color underfoot—enough to borrow a complete scheme for the rest of the room. Washington Square, $10.25 sq. yd. by Lees', has a charcoal ground that brings out every subtle color. A delight for the traditionalist. Gulistan's American Provincial, $10.50 sq. yd., is a series of lively, stylized floral motifs set into a dark green ground. Both are designed for use only with furnishings in like character. Both suggest restraint in use of other pattern for walls, upholstery, draperies

Gray is crowding green in current color popularity. It works well as background for more vibrant accent colors, is pleasant when developed in a monotone scheme. Alexander Smith's Repartee, at $14.95 sq. yd., uses line and color variation for dramatic modern effect. Bigelow-Sanford's Hearthstone, about $8.50 sq. yd., has a tweedy look so right for the casual room of any period. Their Springtime, around $10.50 sq. yd., is adaptable to modern or Provincial. You'll use versatile gray with assurance

THE BROWNS

No wonder brown is this year's color! Here Bigelow-Sanford's Madence, about $10.50 sq. yd., in tree-trunk browns carries out the cozy feel of this Colonial room. Fabrics are appropriately d-flecked Tweed by Moss Rose, avocado linen by Golding Bros. Painted Wallpaper's pheasant pattern, repeating fabric and g colors, should be hung above a dado. Tole clock by German Kashins, Blenko Handcraft vase, and match box from bel & Co. are completely in character

Masland's all-cotton Spindrift, $6.95 sq. yd., in widths up to 15 feet, combines with Schumacher's Pear Blossom paper, their nubby textured upholstery, and Waverly's striped chintz in a tawny-toned scheme for a Provincial dining room. JAMES G. ESSON

Let's go Shopping for HARDY BULBS

It is in springtime that the cheerful flowers of bulbous plants are enjoyed so fervently by most gardeners. But right now it is the bulbs themselves that are all-important as they beseech us to give them a home where they can carry on their pleasant work of growing. Planted now, they at once start sending new roots into the soil, so the better we have prepared an environment to their liking, by digging deeply and supplying food, the greater will be our reward in the spring.

These bulbs do not all have the same growth habit. Daffodils, for instance, if already in the soil, will make new roots in early summer, whereas tulips will not. Yet the commercial bulb grower must harvest them all as soon as the foliage dies down so he can clean, grade, and prepare them for sale.

The gardener, however, can delay buying his tulips until quite late, though it is advisable to buy and plant daffodils as soon as available.

Most of the fall-planted bulbs come from Holland where their culture is an ancient and important industry. A few tulips and crocuses are grown in the United States, and daffodil bulb growers have been quite successful, especially in the Pacific Northwest where the mild, damp winters favor their culture. These hardy bulbs are of many kinds (see table, page 152) and give a continuous show of flowers from March or earlier until early June. In general, they fall into two groups, one sometimes called the "lesser bulbs," the other consisting of the better-known daffodils (that is, the hardy kinds of narcissus), Dutch hyacinths, and tulips. Many of the first group are fine for permanent planting in rock gardens, grass areas, even shady places where, left undisturbed over the years, they increase and spread, by seeds or by offsets. After the first year, all such plantings benefit enormously from annual early autumn top dressings of bonemeal. The lesser bulbs should be bought as early as possible for several reasons. If deprived of an extended fall period for making roots, they lose vigor, especially winter-aconites, which detest dryness. Again, some kinds are so scarce that the supply may be exhausted early in the season, which also means higher prices. This has been the case with yellow crocuses especially during recent years.

In buying anything, maximum satisfaction comes from believing we have made a good bargain. But often, the lowest-priced goods may not be the best bargain. This truth should ever be kept in mind when buying bulbs. The numerous channels through which bulbs are offered for sale today range from top-quality seed houses and bulb specialist firms, to such retail sources as hardware and department stores, mail-order houses, and even variety and 5-and-10-cent stores. Success has been and probably will be had with stock from all these sources, if carefully chosen and properly handled. But obviously, the specialists and larger, high-quality seed firms can be expected to handle the finest goods and the largest selection of varieties true to name and uniform in performance.

Quality in bulbs is largely a matter of size. Take May-flowering tulips, for example. It is well known that bulbs of some varieties run larger than those of other kinds. Standards of size for export stock are fixed by the Dutch government in centimeters (1 cm. = .39 in.), and no "top quality" tulip bulb can be less than 11 centimeters (about 4 3/8 in.) in circumference, or about 1 1/2 in. in diameter. Though bulbs of that size produce flowers of the best quality, many much smaller bulbs find their way into our markets to be offered at lower prices. Even though healthy and true to name, they may not flower the first year after planting or, if they do, the flowers may be small. The buyer of bulbs must expect to get what he pays for.

In Dutch hyacinths, there are two well-defined quality sizes. The larger bulbs (17 to 19 cm. in circumference) should be used for indoor culture in hyacinth glasses, etc., as their flower trusses are so large that they cannot withstand wind and rain as well as those from 14 to 16 cm. bulbs. The latter are, therefore, the better adapted for outdoor planting.

Daffodil bulb sizes are not as easily defined, some varieties being offered in much larger sizes than others. Plentiful, older kinds may be abundant in the largest size (18 cm. or more in circumference); these usually have one or more smaller side bulbs attached to them, but the main bulb should be at least 1 1/2 in. in diameter. It is most important that they be solid and show no sign of decay at the base. Daffodil prices also vary considerably, but remember that the size of the bulb and the newness and rarity of the variety are the main price-deciding factors.

A study of a number of bulb catalogues is always helpful in arriving at a decision as to the quantities and kinds that will best meet one's particular needs. For formal beds, it will be hyacinths or tulips, but for the spring

JESSIE WALKER

While their faithful Ford convertible with its large "U.S." and the less impressive Winnetka, Illinois license was attracting crowds of curious German youths in every cozy village they explored, Mrs. Erwin Meyers and her college-age son, Warren, were busy gathering rare and lovely pieces of Meissen china to carry to the United States.

"I like to think that I brought something beautiful from the Germany Hitler had already defaced," explains Mrs. Meyers as she fingers thoughtfully the molded inkwell whose rhythmic figures are fashioned with a virility and sincerity characteristic of the famous Meissen factory's period of greatest artistic achievement. She uncovered that precious and beautiful inkwell among some less deserving pieces of porcelain in a dingy shop facing a famous thirteenth-century square in the old town of Frankfort. While the tenseness of the approaching war hung in the atmosphere even as she stood in the shop bargaining in her beginner's German, little did she dream that within a few years a bomb crater would replace both the shop and the famous square.

For Mrs. Meyers, the history of Meissen itself has always been as fascinating as the stories which surround its collection. Through studying the writings of porcelain authorities such as W. B. Honey one learns that the first quantities of porcelain reached Europe through the Dutch East India Company in the seventeenth century. The Oriental art met with eager admiration and an immediate attempt to copy it, as the European had known only soft-paste porcelain. All efforts to duplicate this beautiful Oriental work failed. Finally, in 1709, after many attempts, Johann Friedrich Böttger—a young

Mr. and Mrs. Jake Warde's tri-level, solar home in Denver makes every square foot of its compact plan count. There's elbow room for an active family of five, maintenance is easy

Edward B. Hawkins, Architect

Two Modern

There are two very distinctive features in the Warde home not commonly found in a house so moderate in size—the privacy its tri-level plan affords and its planned ease of maintenance. One entry, with a minimum of space allotted to it, nevertheless provides direct access to every room in the house. Bedrooms and bath are seven steps above ground level assuring privacy. Laundry, utility room, and a large play-room are down five steps from ground level, again assuring privacy for the noisiest rainy day activities of the pent-up young fry. Under-cover entry from garage through utility room; high strip windows on street side, walls of glass on the living side are further evidence of the thoughtful plan architect Hawkins provided the Wardes. Planned to take the punishment of three active children, all interior walls, except kitchen, are of cedar clapboard varnished for easy maintenance. Built-ins eliminate need for much furniture, add further to easy housekeeping. Built-in bunks, wardrobes, and furniture eliminate need for a larger bedroom for the three boys. Dining table, only five feet away from kitchen eliminates need for large kitchen ordinarily needed to provide a breakfast nook. All in all, a whale of a good family house!

Colorado Homes

James Hunter, Architect

The ranch-type home of Mr. and Mrs. Lefferdink in Boulder has, for all its compactness, three bedrooms, a business office with separate entrance and complete privacy from living quarters

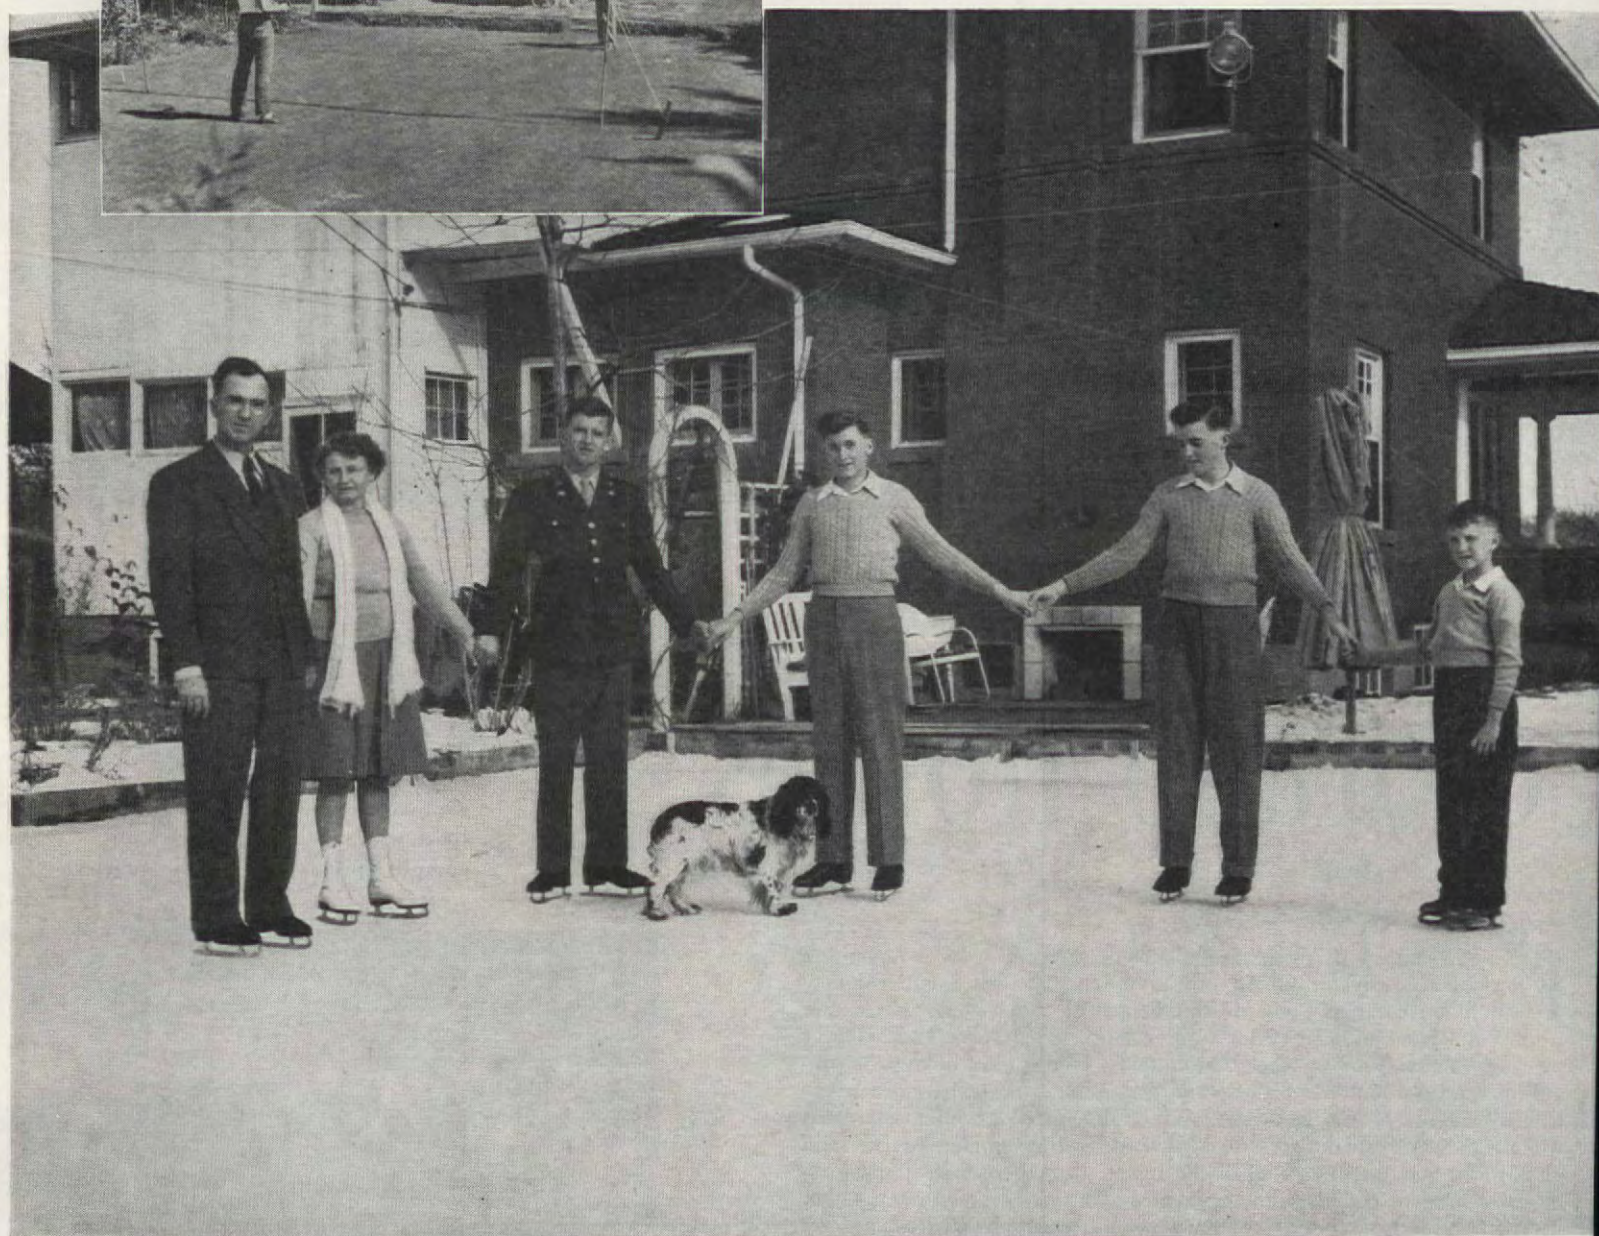

For all its long, low, rambling appearance, the plan of the Lefferdink house is compact, anything but rambling. The handsome chimney wall likewise takes it out of commonplace "ranch-house" style. Set toward the front of its city lot to give more living space and a bigger view of the spectacular Rocky Mountains, landscaping plans will provide privacy for outdoor grill and garden. Built without basement, full-length windows on the garden side take advantage of winter solar heat while the deep overhang gives needed shade in the summer. A structural glass wall separates living and dining rooms, to give a sense of spaciousness to what would otherwise seem a too-small family dining room. Other walls in the living room are of natural-finished fir plywood squares set in an effective checkerboard pattern. There are three bedrooms, plenty of closet space, a utility and laundry room adjacent to the ample kitchen. One and a half bathrooms ease the morning pressure of getting children off to school at the same hour dad gets off to business. The office, as noted, is completely private so that the house functions as a separate private dwelling, yet saves office rent as well as commuting wear and tear.

Free-hanging burlap curtains strung on wires shade the ice when idle, keep it from melting. Pulled back and tied to posts, they leave room for dancing or two big "figure 8's." At left, a family friend, Miss Wilma Hardesty, of Wyoming, and Denver University, puts the rink to good use

Our garden is even more useful in winter than in summer, for we turn our lawn into a 40 by 45-foot ice-skating rink that is a great source of enjoyment and entertainment for family and friends for from eight to ten weeks each year. Denver's climate rarely allows more than a few weeks of skating on the city lakes.

About November 15, before the first snow, we get our equipment in place. It consists of an edging of 1 by 10-inch boards held in place by wooden stakes, and four lines of hemmed burlap curtains hung across the rink by small metal (hog) rings from wires running east and west between 8-foot, 2 by 4-inch posts firmly set and guyed with two or three wires. The curtains are held together by rings about one-third down except in the center; here they divide so half of each line can be pulled back and tied to a post during skating periods. Their purpose? To shade the ice on sunny days and prevent melting. Hanging free, they give with the wind, rarely tangle or tear; if they get twisted, they are easily straightened out.

When the first snow comes, we pack it down as smooth as possible with skis. When the temperature gets below freezing, we start sprinkling with a rather fine spray. We put on one very thin layer of water after another, taking care to let each one freeze so no water will remain underneath to run out and leave a breakable crust. From 10 to 20 deg. F. is the best ice-building temperature, and alternate spraying and freezing for eight hours will produce skatable ice. However, it should be built up to four or five inches before being used. After each skating period, we scrape the ice with snow shovels, spray it, let it freeze—and it is ready for more skating. Any snow is promptly scraped off, and the ice is kept clean at all times, for any dirt or leaves will absorb heat and melt through. We patch small holes with what we call "ice-putty," that is, wet snow, filled in and smoothed over with putty knife or trowel. So long as we start with a layer of snow, the lawn is not injured but comes out green and healthy-looking when, in early spring, we remove the shades, the posts, and the wires (numbering and labeling them ready for next fall) and let the ice and snow melt. Our rink accessories are an outdoor fireplace (a comfort for spectators and skaters alike), a floodlight placed high to light the whole area, and a portable electric record player on a rinkside table so skaters can regulate their music.

American Home for the Scotch

The Hiram McTavishes consider themselves among the millions who are part of THE AMERICAN HOME family. Long before they built this house, they read every issue for years to gather ideas on the particular kind of place they would build.

The first thing they wanted above all was privacy from the street. They devoted most of the front of their lot to driveway and motor court, with a garage placed at right angles to the street. From the street one sees only a patch of lawn, the paved motor court, and two windows (kitchen and breakfast corner) and a trim little gate high enough to give complete privacy to inner garden. This is good planning!

Going through the gate one enters a roofed passageway with a door to the left which gives access to guest room and bath (completely separate from the house.) And there you are in a lovely little garden enclosed on three sides by the walls of the house, and on the fourth by a board fence.

Now for the second "must" of Mr. and Mrs. McTavish—informal living with plenty of comfort! A combination living-dining room, of which they had seen many fine examples in THE AMERICAN HOME seemed a good answer to the McTavishes, for it would give them a sense of spaciousness in a small house. However, Mrs. McTavish wanted privacy for the dining area and didn't like the idea of stepping right into the living room.

A small entry hall, formed by the end wall of dining area with a door to the right leading to the kitchen gives that pleasant sense of seclusion from front door which is so desirable. And

You can transform that sagging hulk into a trim

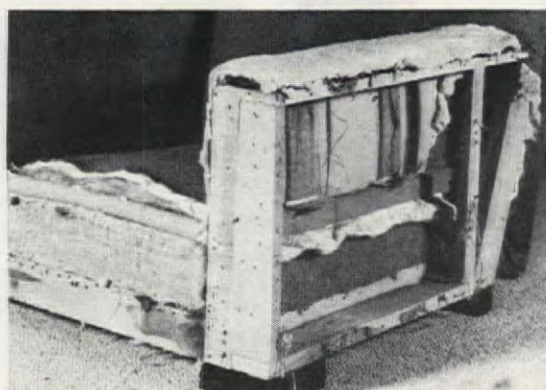

modern chair. Here are step-by-step professional instructions

How to Re-upholster

Note: Use 3-oz. tacks unless otherwise stated

1. Loosen and pry out tacks from cambric bottom with screwdriver and hammer, leaving webbing exposed. Be sure not to tear fabric, save to use again later, when chair is finished

2. Remove cloth from back of chair carefully. Remove outside arms, inside arms, and front panel. Be careful not to tear fabric. Save pieces to use as patterns. Leave padding on arms; smooth with new cotton where necessary. Remove platform cloth and front flap. Leave burlap on front

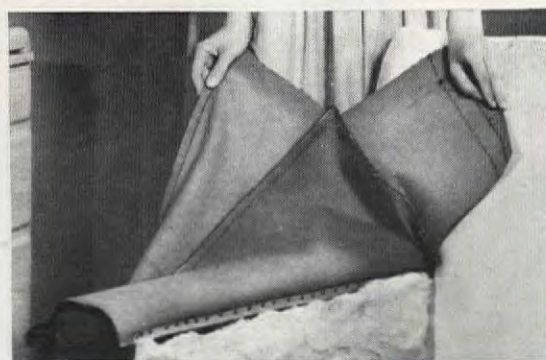

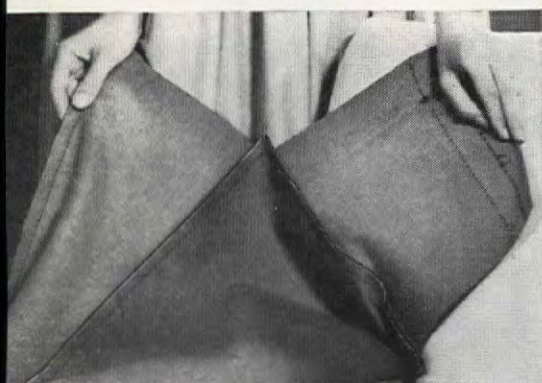

3. Tie springs if necessary (see page 138). Machine stitch new platform cloth to new front flap. Pad front if necessary. Put platform cloth in place, turn back front flap. Tie carpet thread securely, handsew flap behind rolled edging, using curved needle. Pull thread tight as you sew. Waxing thread will make sewing easier. Smooth fabric down over rounded edge

6. "Pull cloths" are pieces of sturdy fabric such as denim or canvas sewn as shown to substitute for expensive upholstery fabric, where it will not show when chair is completely finished

7. Applying the inside arm. It is shown here upside down, inside out, to show how top edge is tacked to frame, right over cording you just applied. Cut cardboard strip $\frac{1}{2}$ inch wide, fit firmly under cording and tack through cardboard. Gives a clean edge when fabric is turned down

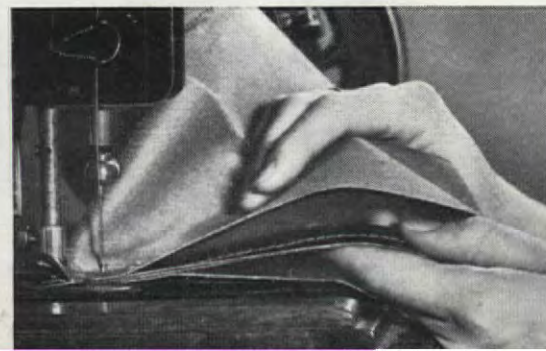

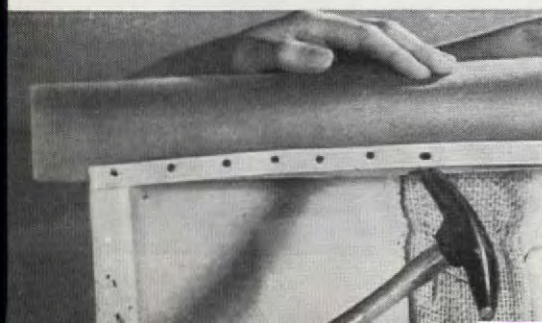

8. Turn fabric over cardboard, tuck bottom edge under rail and outside. In same way pull fabric from inside out through back, stretching piece into correct position. Keep smooth. Tack to bottom rail on outside of arm. Tack down piece pulled through back. Front edge is tacked after next step

11. Cover outside of arm, same way as inside. Tack on cardboard strip. Keep fabric smooth. Pull underneath chair and tack down on under side of bottom rail. Tack front and back edges

12. Cut pattern for inside back and boxing, and sew pieces together, (except outside back cover). Sew cording between pieces as shown. Use heavy button thread. Place over chair like slip cover

13. Pull down through bottom and out back, pull through to back. Drive tacks halfway to hold fabric in place. Adjust until smooth. Tack bottom edge sides and outside back. Fit smoothly, adjust, then tack securely across top and at sides

AFTER

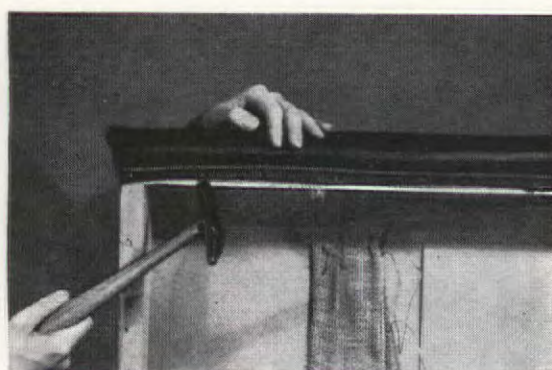

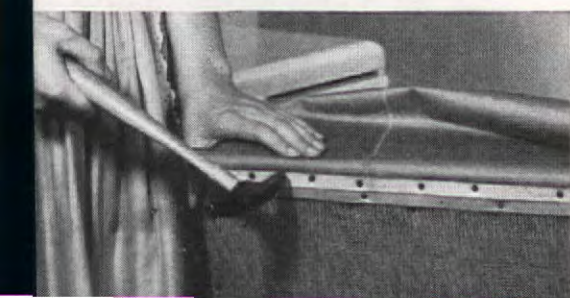

4. Pull tight and hold temporarily with skewers or long stick pins. Make tuck on each corner, fold ends in. Sew to burlap just below rolled edge. Pull platform cloth under arms and through to back. Tack to boards next to spring, pulling cloth down smoothly, but don't force springs down. Machine stitch cording (see fig. 10) along top edge of new front flap. Place flap on front of chair to conceal stitches illustrated above. Turn back flap, hand-stitch close to cording. Tack ends and bottom under chair

6. Cut gash in corner to allow this piece to cover front edge. Do not make cut too long or it will show. Keep fabric very smooth and pull firmly whenever tacking. Tack down front edge

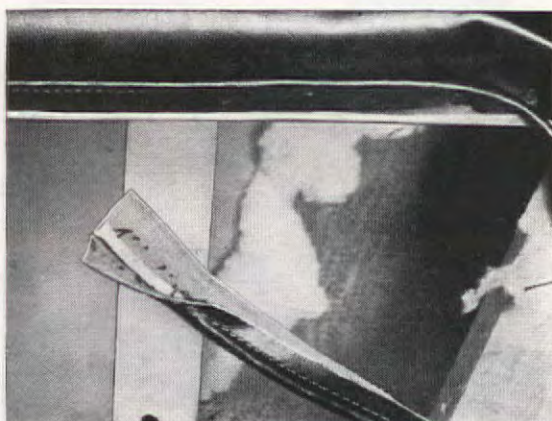

11. Take strip of cording, begin at bottom, run up side, across top, down other side, tack into place. Lay outside back across top, with wrong side toward you, as you did arms. Tack on 1/2 inch cardboard strip, keep close to cording. Also tack cardboard strips down sides and back over cording, keeping in a straight line

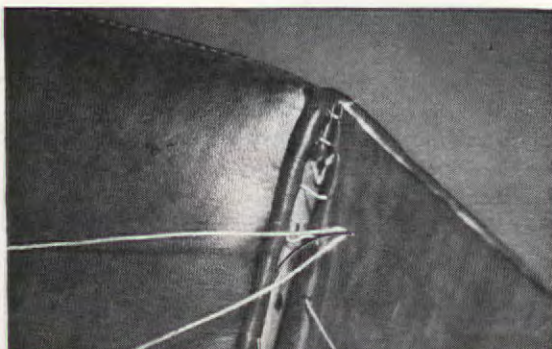

5. Place fabric on top of arm and tack at sides, leaving about one inch projecting at front. Along inside of arm, close to edge, place a piece of cording as far toward back of chair as you can reach. Fasten with one tack. Then pull taut toward front to get a straight line. Tack down about every four inches. Do same on outside of arm

10. Shows construction of self-covered cording. Make true bias strips of upholstery fabric 1 3/4 inches wide. Join strips for length on the bias. Baste cord into bias strip, then sew on machine using narrow foot

15. Fold sides of back cover under so no raw edges show. Sew to cording with curved needle, use blind stitch as shown. When you pull blind stitches tight, they will not show. Tack bottom underneath chair

What a bright new hat does to a gal's drooping spirits (and psychiatrists advise it), a face-lifting operation and some new paint will do to a sad-looking house. Some houses need really drastic tearing down and rebuilding to achieve worth-while results, but a house, with basically good lines to start with, lends itself to remodeling with a minimum of structural changes. Here are two outstanding examples of what can be done. To the right, the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Cox, Los Angeles, California, required a major structural operation, and below, the home of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Vaughn, Berkeley, California, involved only a few, relatively minor, changes.

Friends agreed that Mr. Cox was justified in his opinion of the badly neglected old Spanish-style house. He had shaken his head and declared that he would never live in it no matter how Mrs. Cox had it remodeled. The interior was a veritable nightmare, both in plan and colors. But Mrs. Cox had courage and vision, and a firm belief in the ultimate satisfactory outcome. She attacked the problem with an exuberance and determination that was heightened by her husband's skepticism.

The first step was the removal of the roof and entire front of the house. The new flat roof included four-foot overhanging eaves. Large plate glass windows for the living room and dining room, and high half-windows for the front bedroom were placed in the new front wall. Tying the garage to the house with a timber fence, tall columns at the entrance and garage, and some changes in the entrance walk and front yard completed the exterior miracle. Inside, a few small modifications of the plan worked

BEFORE: When Mr. O. L. Cox first saw this outmoded 30-year-old Spanish style house, he didn't like it and said, "It's a sow's ear and you can never make a silk purse of it." But Mrs. Cox and designers Dingman and Wilbur went to work and proved him wrong. Yes, that's the result on the other side of the page.

How to chop years off the age of your house wonders, and a complete decorating program covered the ravages of neglect and bad taste. Today Mr. Cox is proud of the house he once thought was beyond redemption.

The Vaughns had a relatively easy time bringing their home up to date. No partitions were moved, no walls knocked out, no windows had to be changed, and there was none of the usual clutter and confusion that marks a remodeling project. Instead, what happened was just a change here and there of things that dated the house, a complete paint job inside and out, new wallpaper and interior decorations, plus a landscaped garden, and the result is a clean, fresh modern look that bears little or no resemblance to the original structure. The chimneys were rebuilt, the exterior walls were painted a soft gray-green, and the roof and trim have been made white. Around the garden there is now a new white brick wall with a wooden gate.

Inside the Vaughn home the principle changes consisted of new fireplaces to replace the old mantels in the living and dining rooms, and remodeling of the old-fashioned glass doors from the living room to the hall. The doors were covered with Masonite, a wallboard, to give the effect of solid wood doors. Gay colors in the upholstery fabrics, fascinating wallpaper designs, and charming color schemes planned by William Bonyng of Oakland completed the rejuvenation.

Aside from the work on the new front wall of the Cox home and the window changes that went with it, the interior structural remodeling was not as extensive as the first impression indicated. Doors were substituted for windows between the living room and

BEFORE: The home of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Vaughn was nondescript behind an overgrown mass of vines, but Architect Harry A. Bruno changed all that. See, to the right, the miracle wrought by simply removing the vines, remodeling some minor details and the entrance, and applying a new coat of paint. Hard to believe, isn't it?

1. FIRST THINGS FIRST IN THE MINIMUM KITCHEN

The large Magic Chef range with its six burners and two ovens, the large Servel refrigerator, and the gleaming Lyon sink and cabinets were all chosen with "malice aforethought." Goodyear Vinyl counter tops, contrasting with the floor in color, as well as the Goodyear rubber tile flooring were chosen for their long life span as well as their beauty

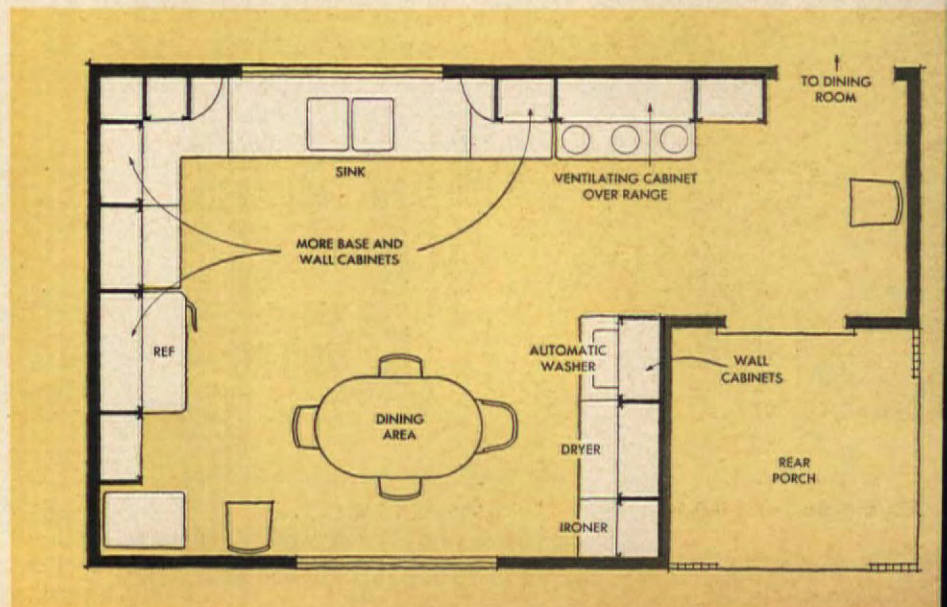

2. SECOND STEP—YOUR PLANNING PAYS OFF

And isn't the homemaker glad to have planned the wide open spaces between major equipment pieces. For placing them so strategically, there will be no future expensive wiring jobs or plumbing-in expenses. By planning for a laundry at a future date, the wiring and plumbing lines were run through at planning time, too

3. PERFECTION AT LONG LAST

Easy does it, and life becomes easy. The cart has served its purpose in plans preceding this, as a counter and storage unit. Now it goes to the corner for instant use about the house. The utility cabinets flank the L-shaped working area. Excellent ventilating cabinets are over the range to serve as ventilation for the room when range or laundry equipment are in use

How does your kitchen grow?

Money, like the man says, doesn't grow on trees. Most of us can't flip open the checkbook and write out a check to cover the tab for a spanking new, complete, up-to-the-last-second kitchen. But it would be pretty foolhardy to put off buying the advantages you can afford right now. Say you're faced with a large ungainly floor plan in an old house, or you're planning large floor space for that future dream kitchen in your new home, careful planning and buying can ease the growing pains.

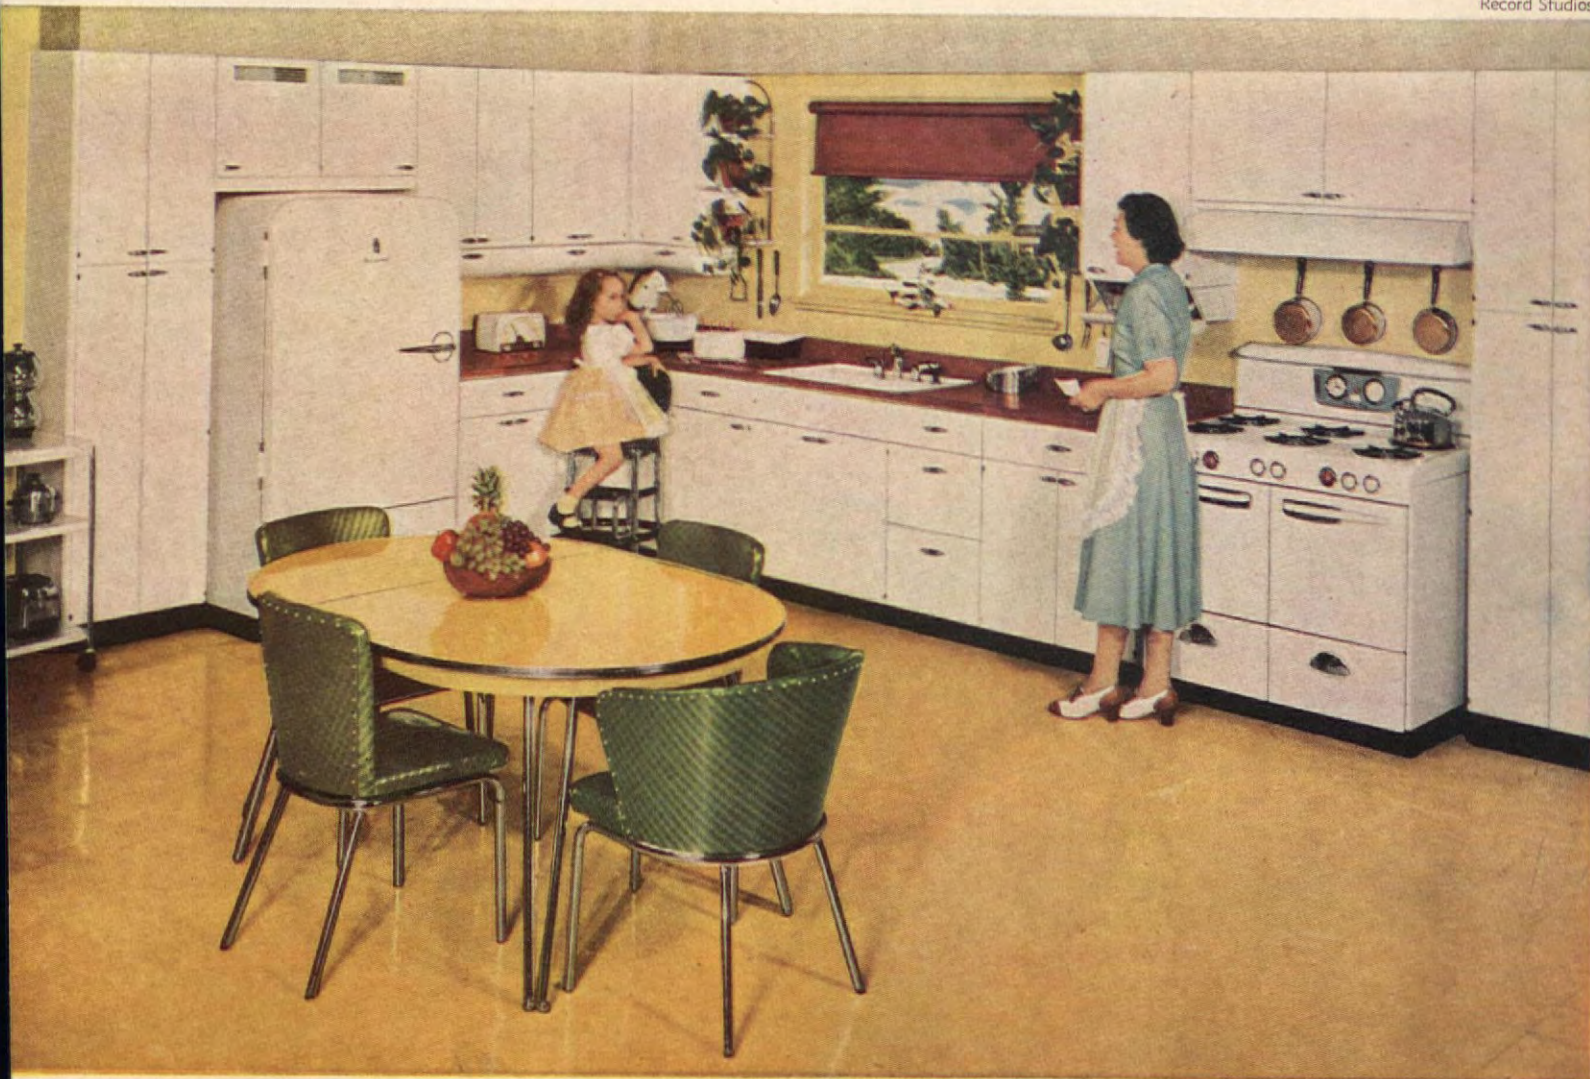

First things first. The range, refrigerator, and sink are basic. They form the nucleus around which the final plan for any kitchen should grow. It doesn't pay to skimp on these items. Buy good equipment that will insure you years of sound, practical service. The cabinets included as part of a good double-bowl sink will hold the essential pots and pans and other cooking utensils. Don't deck your kitchen with cabinets just for the sake of cabinets alone. With standard measurements and open stock the order of the day, you can add them when and if you need them. Wall cabinets for everyday dishes and staples are a good initial purchase. A utility table is another good first. A wonderful step-saver, it also holds appliances and mixing bowls, and provides extra work surface.

The second step may come six months or several years later, whenever the budget permits. Now's the time to add an automatic washer—not near the sink, but across the room where there is light and plenty of room to add other laundry appliances, the dryer and ironer. More base and wall cabinets can be added at this stage for storing glassware, extra staples a growing family requires, and such special-occasion equipment as out-sized roasters and skillets.

The third stage completes your over-all plan. Two utility cabinets will store cleaning and miscellaneous supplies. Add a base cabinet between the sink and range or a dishwasher (the dimensions are perfect). A ventilating cabinet over the range makes excellent use of what is ordinarily unusable space. Quarter-round shelves on either side of window hold trailing vines. A little patience and a sound plan, and you have a kitchen right out of the storybooks.

Here's a flower arrangement burgeoning with the glories of Indian Summer. October always seems determined to make up in advance for the long winter months ahead. There's a stimulating mixture of still, languorous days and cold nights that brings variety and richness to flowers. We've used two types of chrysanthemums, lantana, celosia, begonia foliage, and autumn leaves. Don't forget fall asters, late zinnias, marigolds, ageratum, and others that may be blooming in your locality.

For the perfect early autumn table, we've taken colors right from the changing brilliance of the leaves. There's crispness and warmth in the contrast of the coppery-colored brown cloth and yellow napkin. These tones are picked up in the new "Orchard" dinnerware and the "Amberosa" water goblet. A really majestic touch—the rich mellowness of handsome silver and candlelight.

Keep in mind that a flower arrangement for a dinner for less than eight people should never exceed 18 inches in height. When you use chrysanthemums, strip all foliage that will be below the water line to keep water fresh. Choose a container that picks up the color of your setting but is not so noticeable that it detracts from the beauty and harmony of your flowers.

HOW to get the most out of a can of tomato soup

BY Anne Marshall

ANNE MARSHALL
Director Home Economics
Campbell Soup Company

OF course you serve tomato soup—once or twice a week probably—for it's "the soup most folks like best." But are you, I wonder, really getting the most out of those familiar cans of tomato soup that you, like most American homemakers, have on your kitchen shelf? May

I respectfully say you're not—unless you're using it also in your cooking and as a pour-on sauce.

New life for "Old Reliables"

For instance, in addition to the tomato-glorified beef stew—which we show below—by cooking with tomato soup you'll marvelously improve such homey dishes as meat loaf, pot roast, meat pie, stuffed peppers, meat balls and other favorite dishes. Delicious, too, as a base for spaghetti sauce. Dishes take on "new meaning" . . . your leftovers will be enlivened . . . your family recipes will have a finer-than-ever flavor when you add the richness of condensed tomato soup.

Adding Character, Color and Zest

And then, of course, you'll not overlook the added temptation, the enticement you lend to meat patties, frankfurters, fish cakes, omelet, boiled halibut, grilled cheese sandwiches—to name but a few—with tomato soup used as pour-on sauce. Just everything you pour it over becomes smoother, livelier, brightly attractive . . . in short, has more "character".

1 A Dish for All Occasions

Naturally, you think of tomato soup as the most versatile of all soups. You build family lunches and suppers around it, for instance; you serve it when company comes; you let the children have it often—for school-day lunches and early-to-bed suppers, preparing it with milk; you serve it to perk up convalescent appetites; you "lunch alone" with it; you combine it with other soups. No wonder women say of tomato soup: "It's the handiest thing on my kitchen shelf!"

Tomato-glorified BEEF STEW

Do try this: To your favorite beef stew recipe, add 1 can of condensed tomato soup. That's all! But my, what it does to that stew. If you've had compliments for your stew before, you'll have cheers for it now!

3 Tomato-enlivened HAMBURGERS

Broiled hamburgers take on new interest when you do this: As you lift them brown and sizzling from the pan, pour over them a can of tomato soup (heated just as is). Rich, red, velvety-smooth—what a tomato sauce it makes!

So you see, tomato soup in your meal-planning life can well be a multiple thing . . . something to keep on the shelf in good supply.

A winner of a dinner!

This is the time of year when the frost is creeping closer to the pumpkin, all the dainty, heat-reducing salads and froths of the summer months are a thing of the past, and once again our fine robust friend, the pork chop, takes its place at the head of the table. There are many dishes sizzling on American stoves that titillate the taste and promise delight, but a well-cooked pork chop, succulent and tender, is hard to beat any time, any place. That's why we feature them this month, sort of dressed up, with their good old-fashioned flavor still predominating.

First of all, we start with Vichyssoise Cleveland, a sort of American overtone on a French dish. There's a treasonable story going around that Vichyssoise originated in Maine, where there was an oversupply of potatoes and a good recipe was needed to stimulate the appetite to a diet of potatoes, day in, day out. Who knows? All we know is that this soup is wonderful. You may use bouillon cubes if you're in a hurry, or take the time to make soup stock if you're choosy. Whipped-cream topping tastes gorgeous, makes the whole thing de luxe.

Pork-chop Casserole never could make up its mind about the North and South—it's based on a fine old Southern dish, but there's enough Yankee influence in it to make it thrifty, filling, and no nonsense about it! Dry mustard gives it a something apart, tomatoes give it color, all you do is give it a try.

Honey and Dill Salad—if you're tired of the run-of-the-mill tossings, you're in for a treat. Onion rings and orange slices, apples and lemon juice, fresh dill lightly sprinkled over all, and a bite-y dressing of honey and lemon—light touch after the pork chops.

There are many ways to make sauces—we use Sauce Béchamel with our green beans and peas in this menu—but the basis is usually a white or brown "roux," as it is called by the "experts." We are giving you two sets of three recipes. One is based on simple white sauce, the other on the brown. From white sauce you can make Sauce Béchamel, or many others that sound important, but are simple to do. Sauce Béchamel, for instance, is white sauce with well-seasoned chicken stock substituted for some of the milk. Mornay has cheese added to Béchamel or basic white sauce. Sauce Crème has an egg yolk added. To the brown roux base, we add water, bouillon cubes, chopped onion, and carrot—it's Sauce Espagnole. Add curry powder, garlic, onion, bouillon cubes, tomato soup, chutney, shredded cocoanut, and a dash of cayenne for Curry Sauce.

Creole Sauce is simply brown sauce with onions, green peppers, canned tomatoes, olives, cloves, garlic, parsley, and thyme. Try experimenting to make some of your own—then when your guests roll their eyes and say, "Marvelous, what's its name?"—you can lower yours and say, "Mine."

As usual here on THE AMERICAN HOME food page, we wind up with a grand dessert. This month it's a pie. How far we've come from the days of the English meat pie, which is still plenty good, through New England's mince and Pennsylvania's dried-apple. This month's delight, Chocolate Bisque Pie, starts out like any pastry, but it gets off the beaten track in a hurry, using a lime-flavored gelatin base that includes eggs, milk, and sherry. Shaved chocolate is added as a surprise, topped with whipped cream and more shaved chocolate. It's filling and rich, but what a beautiful way to leave the table!

Coffee, of course.

How Baba Could Cook!

As my husband munched dolefully on starchy pasta and the incompatible textures of raw pepper and cooked meat, he remarked: "You're not only three thousand miles away from your grandmother; you're a million light-years apart!" And so it is, when we make our hurried cross-country sorties, I find myself sitting in Baba's (as we have always called my grandmother) kitchen, watching and taking notes, rather than queuing up in the Forties for theater tickets.

One of Baba's great dishes is Olibtzes. A phonetic spelling is all I can manage, for Baba does not read or write. The Danes have their version of this dish; so the Swedes, the Poles, and half the UN. Nonetheless, Baba's recipe is markedly different and uniquely delicious. Before you can hope to make this succulent dish, you must procure some sour salt. Sour salt is citric acid and if you are lazy, like I am, you will immediately think of substituting lemon juice or vinegar or some such thing—but don't do it. If you cannot get it at a grocery store or supermarket, try a delicatessen, especially one marked "Kosher." You can

IN SALADS

AMERICA'S FAVORITE MAYONNAISE! Delicious served plain, as shown in Chicken and Fruit Salad. Delectable, too, varied with milk, fruit juice, ketchup, French dressing. Real Mayonnaise never turns thin-tasting! Unlike ordinary salad dressing, it contains no starchy filler. No matter how you blend it, the sunny flavor and smooth texture always come through. It can't be beat—even by homemade mayonnaise.

EXTRA GOOD! Hellmann's or Best Foods Real Mayonnaise eliminates the time and effort of "cutting in" the shortening—and gives Biscuits a tender golden richness. • olibtzes

Select an enormous cabbage (merely a big one will not do!). You will also need $\frac{1}{4}$ pounds of thrice-ground round steak, stock or bouillon cubes, onions, garlic, sour salt, brown sugar, and canned tomato sauce.

Heat enough water in large kettle to cover cabbage. Add cabbage when water starts to boil and let simmer for 5 minutes. Brown in lightly buttered skillet a large onion, finely minced, with a clove of garlic. To small can of tomato sauce add enough stock or bouillon to moisten and two or three crystals of sour salt. Let this mixture simmer while you drain onion on paper. Now add brown sugar to tomato sauce; start with 2 tablespoons, add more according to taste. If sauce seems dry, add more stock.

Mix onions thoroughly with meat. Minced celery or carrot pulp may also be added, but these are not de rigueur. Douse cabbage with cold water and drain. Core cabbage and carefully peel off leaves without tearing. Place 1 or 2 tablespoons of meat mixture in centers of largest leaves and roll up envelope-fashion. Lightly brown "envelopes" in a little peanut oil in iron skillet. Place these in earthenware casserole and pour tomato sauce over them. Cover and bake for about $1\frac{1}{2}$ hours at 275°F. Olibtzes are done when cabbage is a transparent, silky brown. If sauce seems tart, add more sugar. Serve over rice.

Wonderful buffet dish, it can be made in advance—tastes better on the second day!

• blintzes

For Blintzes batter, mix 4 eggs, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 cups water, and 2 cups sifted flour. Heat a medium-sized frying pan (iron, of course!) with a nugget of butter, and then pour in several tablespoons of batter. Fry the blintz on one side only and place on wooden board to cool. Medium-sized pan insures blintz of generous proportions. Mix 1 pound of hoop cheese with 1 egg and 1 tablespoon of melted butter for the filling. Heap each blintz with this mixture and roll up envelope-fashion.

And now for Baba's special touch! Do not re-fry them, as is usually done, after the blintzes have been refrigerated for a while. Instead, put them in a large baking dish, pour melted butter over them, sprinkle lightly with powdered sugar and brown sugar, and bake in a slow oven until they are heated through. Serve with sour cream and strawberry preserves.

For this information, consult your local water company or send a sample of well water, if you live in the country, to your local Department of Agriculture agent. Usually the synthetic detergents do a better job than soap in hard water areas. But do read directions on the box carefully—and follow them. This could be you...if you don't own a BENDIX DRYER

Could this be you, one day a week? With your basket, big as a barge, crammed full of heavy, wet clothes? Toting it wearily up the cellar stairs, wondering whether your back will hold up—could this be you? (Could be—if you haven't a Bendix Dryer!)

You're off on Operation Pin-Up. Bend—and pick—and straighten—and hang. Your mouth is full of clothespins—which keeps you from saying things when a vagrant breeze whips a "white" off the line. (You'd avoid all this, with a Bendix Dryer!)

A sudden downpour sends you galloping out to take everything in half-dried. Sheets flutter and snap like flags before they tear from their moorings. Hankies, socks, shorts are spread all around the yard. (That couldn't happen in a Bendix Dryer!)

Or the line breaks. And you stand by in raging helplessness while your clean clothes are dumped all over the grass, and you foresee doing the whole week's wash over again. Or the neighbor starts burning trash...! (Honest, it's simpler in a Bendix Dryer!)

A boy and his pals and a dog can certainly raise havoc, can't they? The kids really don't mean it, but that doesn't make the footprints any less noticeable on the pieces they've knocked off the line. (But you don't need a line with your Bendix Dryer!)

If you recognize yourself in any of these pictures, maybe you should look into the Bendix Dryer story. It may be time for you to banish these weekly annoyances, this drudgery from your life forever. Perhaps it's time you called on your Bendix Dryer dealer!

ONLY THE BENDIX DRYER HAS THE POW-R-VENT SYSTEM THAT BLOWS HOT AIR AND MOISTURE OUTSIDE!* keeps room temperature comfortable!

- No ropes, no pins, no weather worries. Dries a full load of clothes at a time—bone-dry for storage, damp-dry for ironing, as you choose.
- Suntronic lamp* bathes clothes in artificial "sunshine"—makes them smell sweeter, fresher than outdoor drying.
- No more harsh towels or stiff garments—clothes come out soft and fluffy.
- Single-dial control dries a whole load perfectly with a twist of your wrist.
- Basket-height porthole banishes heavy drying-basket lifting.
- Ample work surface available on gleaming white baked enamel flat top.
- Choice of electric or gas models.

BASE: Use equal portions of fat and flour, as one cup of butter or margarine to one cup of flour. Place fat in saucepan and melt over low heat until it bubbles. (This is the difference between white roux and brown). Remove from heat and blend in flour and salt and pepper to season. Stir and cook over low heat for 30 minutes.

FOR SAUCE ESPAGNOLE: Cook gently for about twenty minutes one beef bouillon cube, one cup water, one tablespoon chopped onion, $\frac{1}{4}$ cup grated carrot. Gradually add mixture to two tablespoons of brown roux, blend, and cook another ten minutes.

FOR CURRY SAUCE: To $\frac{1}{4}$ cup roux, add one teaspoon curry powder, one finely chopped clove garlic, one grated onion, one set chopped chicken livers, two beef bouillon cubes, two cups water, one cup tomato soup, two tablespoons chutney, $\frac{1}{2}$ cup shredded coconut. Blend well and cook over low heat for about thirty minutes. Season with dash of cayenne and juice of one lemon.

FOR CREOLE SAUCE: To $\frac{1}{4}$ cup roux, add one cup sliced onions, two sliced green peppers and cook over low heat for five minutes. Add one $\frac{1}{2}$ can tomatoes (or two cups canned tomatoes) a few sliced green olives, a three-ounce can sliced mushrooms, two whole cloves and simmer for thirty minutes.

BASE: Use equal portions of fat and flour, as one cup of butter or margarine to one cup of flour. Place fat in saucepan and melt over very, very low heat. Remove from heat and gradually blend in the flour until mixture is smooth. Add salt and pepper to season and continue to cook stirring constantly over low heat for about 10 minutes. This base may be cooled and refrigerated for future use or used immediately.

FOR SAUCE BÉCHAMEL: Add $\frac{1}{2}$ cup of well-seasoned chicken or veal broth to 2 tablespoons of white roux base and cook over low heat about 10 minutes. Add $\frac{1}{2}$ cup milk or cream; the latter will make a richer sauce.

FOR CRÈME SAUCE: Add small amount of hot Sauce Béchamel or basic white sauce to one egg yolk and beat. Blend in remainder of hot sauce gradually. Basic white sauce: add one cup milk to 2 tablespoons of white roux; cook over low heat about 10 minutes.

Baba Could Cook!

to produce her dishes, you must be a cook who tastes. Ever since Fanny Farmer introduced level measurements, a whole generation of scientific cooks with imperceptive taste buds has beclouded the land. These cooks are devilishly clever with slide rules, T-squares, ounces, milligrams, and grains, but cooks in the grand tradition they will never be. Having measured, weighed, graded, and sifted every ingredient carefully, they assume the outcome of their labors must be correct. The difference between a correct dish and a great dish lies in tasting. It is the difference between mere imitation and creation. An artist utilizes all the precision tools at his command, but he knows when to leave off and let imagination have its sway.

All right. You have traveled to the ends of town to get sour salt. You are prepared to use your common sense, wit, and imagination, and the treasures in your larder. All for the sake of Olibtzes! Now take the recipe and proceed.

We were always happy when Cousin Ben came to visit. He came infrequently from Boston where he headed the Harvard Department of Music and his visits were always the occasion for a dairy feast. He had a lean, cadaverous frame and Baba was sure that, like most bachelors, he ate bits and dabs of food. She did not make him the sumptuous repasts, redundant with kugels, that graced our holiday table. No, that would be too rich. Goodness knows what stomach trouble a lonely bachelor might have! Better to serve him bland, digestible meals that would ease their way gently into his "system" (as Baba called it).

She'd set the table with various cheeses, the simple ones that were given us by friends of my father's who had actually put up goat and dairy farms on Linden Boulevard, bounded on one side by Murder, Incorporated, and on the other by the marshy beaches of Jamaica Bay. There would be hoop cheese and pot cheese, dry and mealy, at their best blended with sour cream. Dark, crusty pumpnickel which my father would cut in huge wedges, careful to reserve the heel for himself. The best creamery butter and milk. A huge crystal bowl would be the centerpiece; in it bobbed the pears, prunes, raisins, and peaches of her compote. A plateful of Baba's huge sugar cookies, each one the size of an ordinary slice of bread. Herring pickled with sour cream, wedges of tomatoes, and slices of cucumber. Most ordinary mortals could make out a meal from this. But Baba did not expect our guests to do so; she had things to cook yet before she'd be satisfied to let "The Professor" sit down. To top all these, she would add her own special Blintzes, the lightest, most flavorful ever tasted!

And as we feasted on these delicacies, my father forgot to complain that there was no tsharve, no borsht, no milches (dairy) noodle kugel. Boston and its beans were forgotten by Cousin Ben. With the rest of us he drank Baba's boiled coffee with lots of hot milk and crunched on buckso (St. John's Bread). As for Baba, she sat at the spitz (the corner of the table) and dunked a hot roll lavishly spread with butter into her coffee.

If it had been in Cousin Ben's power, Harvard would long ago have conferred its highest honorary degrees on her!

Meissen Masterpieces (Begins on page 40)

alchemist who had fruitlessly tried to transmute base metals to gold—discovered the mysterious formula for the true hard-paste which was to give the town of Meissen the lead in porcelain manufacture over all the rest of Europe.

Böttger was working under the patronage of Augustus the Strong, Elector of Saxony and King of Poland. Elated by Böttger's discovery of the now famous red stoneware, his first porcelain, Augustus the Strong established the factory by royal charter at Meissen, fifteen miles northwest of Dresden, in 1710. He equipped the works in the Albrechtsburg castle, a walled fortress high above the town on the banks of the river Elbe, and the workers were virtually held prisoners during the first fifty years of the porcelain factory's existence.

The family loves to have Mrs. Meyers tell them the story of how two of the workers escaped to start small factories in Vienna and Venice, but from then on and for the next forty years the prized formula was even more carefully guarded. The factory maintained its artistic and technical superiority until the disastrous Seven Years' War from 1756 to 1763.

As is usually the case, no single element accounted for the amazing popularity of the Meissen output. Besides holding the secret formula, the factory had the good fortune to be located in a town whose clay pits are almost granite, containing the exact proportion of feldspar and quartz to create a perfect product. Added to this was the genius of Johann Herold, master painter-designer, and Johann Kändler, famous baroque sculptor, who is credited with being the first to understand the potentialities of glaze and color in porcelain figures.

Because of the molded vigor of the figures and the rich, strong reds and yellows on the inkwell, Mrs. Meyers feels that it might very well be one of Kändler's works. When asked how she can distinguish a real piece of Meissen of this great period from a copy, Mrs. Meyers will tell you that it is difficult to define, but that she believes that through long acquaintance with the porcelain one learns to feel the difference. She says that a copy is placed alongside a real piece, the copy seems somehow become lax and lack the sincerity of the real Meissen.

That summer, the china in underglaze blue in the popular Onion pattern seemed to have had an almost magnetic pull for Mrs. Meyers. And out of the small towns they drove, always searching for plates and bowls in the desired pattern bearing the mark of the cross swords of Saxony.

As they bounced through the Alps, Mrs. Meyers' respect for the durability of the china increased with each mile. Even though the treasure pieces traveled a rocky road in the rumble seat, they made the journey without a crack. By the time the intrepid collectors had reached safety for their return to the United States, their discoveries netted enough of the Onion pattern to set a table for eight.

If you should stop at the Meyers' house in time for a holiday dinner, you won't find the set of proud china gathering dust in a collector's cabinet. Instead you will find the table graciously set for an important meal with the china created in a factory which is proud of its two-hundred-year history of great heights and depths.

The Russians have taken over the Meissen factory. It is rumored that after World War II the china became crude and that the Russian hammer and sickle replaced the crossed swords. In a trip to Canada during June, 1950, Mrs. Meyers visited the Russian Meissen Factory Catalogue. She also saw some of the Russian output which, she said, was a good copy of the old china. She found the glaze on the recent Russian output to be more glassy than the Meissen, known for its translucent yet rich surface.

Sue never worried about her floors—believed they'd stay bright and gleaming with just an occasional dusting! She didn't realize that floors take more punishment than any other part of the house.

Sue got a scare one day, watching her floors take a terrific beating from scuffing feet. Worn and scarred spots were beginning to show—the finish was wearing through because it was unprotected.

"It's not too late," her mother said. "Use genuine Johnson's Wax—Paste or Liquid. There's nothing like it to beautify your floors and give them lasting protection from ugly floor wear. Try it!"

Now Sue knows that with a gleaming coat of Johnson's Wax on her floors, it's the wax that takes the wear, not the floors! Floors are far more lustrous and will never need costly refinishing!

It took the threat of floor wear to teach Sue floor care !

It's so easy with a Johnson's Wax Beautiflor Electric Polisher! You can rent one almost everywhere—available in 50,000 stores. Or buy one for $44.50.

Floors stay like new when protected with a gleaming "carpet" of genuine wax!

When you use genuine wax—Johnson's Wax—it's the wax that takes the wear, protecting the floor underneath!

Scuffing feet can't mar the gleaming, genuine wax finish. Dirt and water don't penetrate the hard protective wax film. A dry mop whisks dust away. Wood floors never need costly refinishing. And linoleum lasts 6 to 10 times longer!

Nothing else gives floors such lasting beauty and protection as genuine Johnson's Wax. It takes a little more time to use than "short-cut" polishes and cleaners, but you need apply it far less often. If you are particular about your home, you just can't afford to use anything but genuine Johnson's Wax.

Johnson's Wax comes in two forms—Paste and Liquid. Paste is more economical, because highly concentrated. Liquid is easier to use and contains an efficient cleaning ingredient. Both protect and beautify your floors with a hard, lustrous film of genuine wax. Get some—see what genuine Johnson's Wax will do for your floors!

For lasting beauty and protection insist on genuine

Here's good mathematics. Eighteen feet of shelf and storage space was added to the kitchen by putting a cabinet in the 6-inch-deep area which was left for the outside door to swing into when opened. The entire floor-to-ceiling cabinet cost less than $20. Cost of space that was otherwise wasted—exactly nothing. Door still opens conveniently

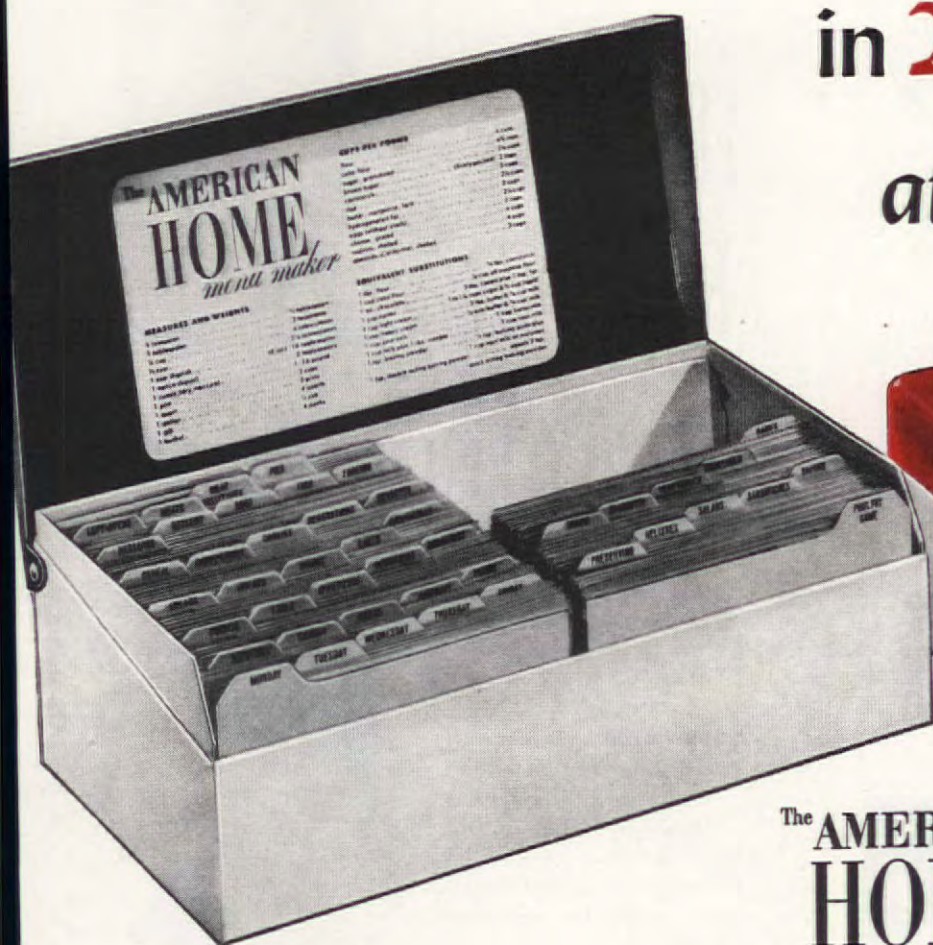

Don't let your door just hang there!

Data from Joe B. Vogel

Upper shelves hold canned goods—easy to see, easy to reach. Compartments below hold bread, vegetables, empty bottles, oversized packages of food and soaps. There's a handy recess for the garbage can. Dime-store wire baskets with an end removed make fine vegetable and fruit bin containers. Talk about space economy—this is it!

Modernization began with face lifting. New paper dial same style as original was bought at clock shop. Old mounting rings were removed carefully. Important not to bend or mar rings

Cutting new dial face to fit exactly, cementing in proper position to brass back plate, took time and patience. Mounting rings were replaced immediately. New hands will be added

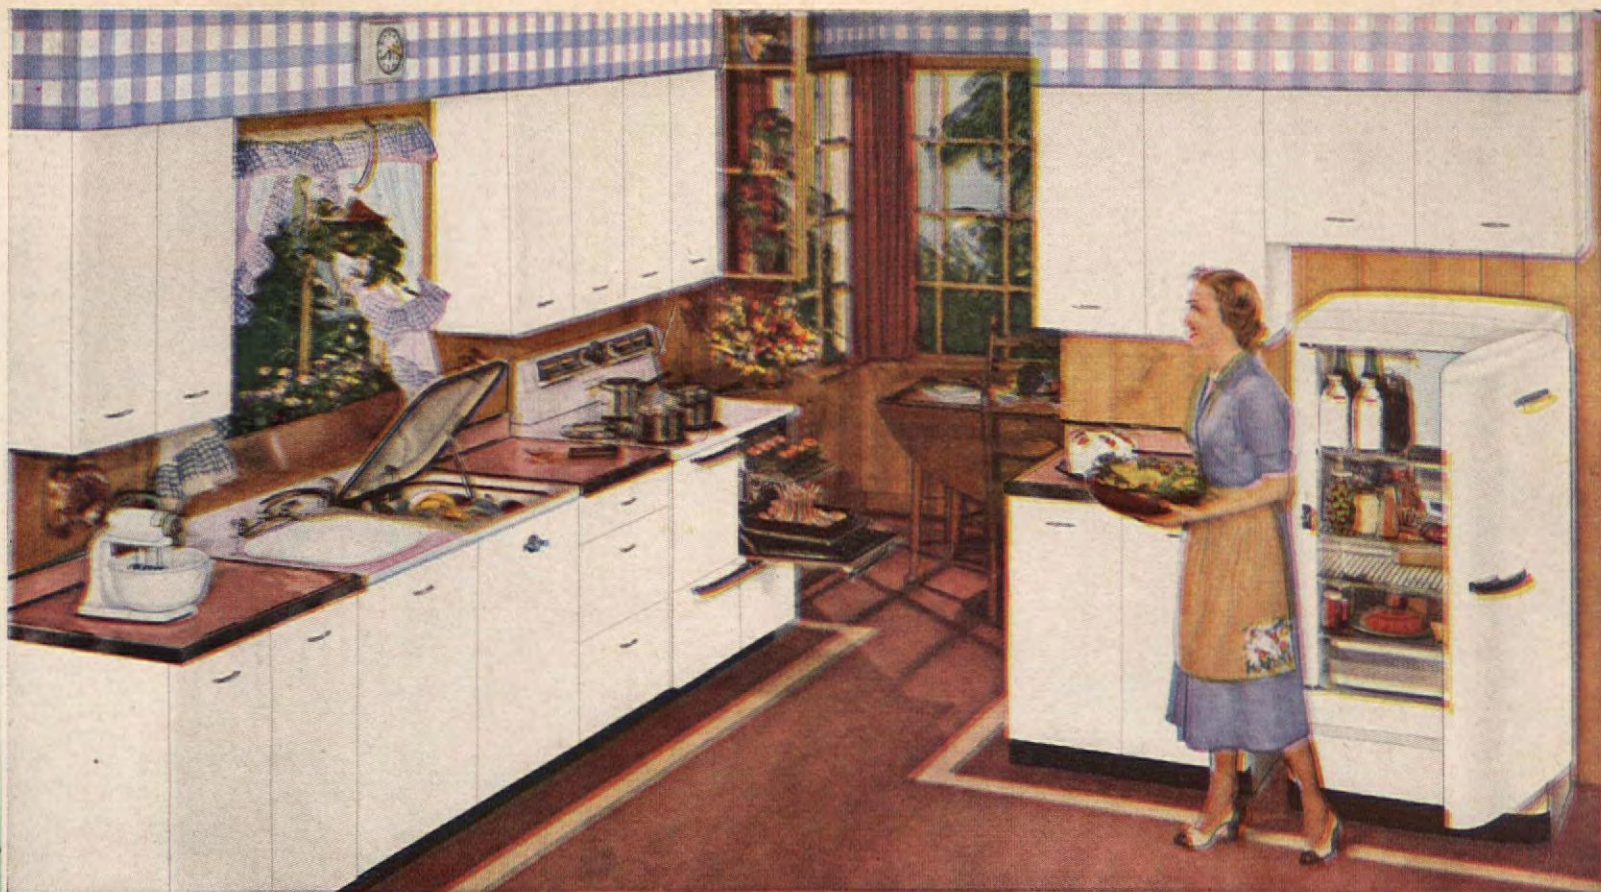

Old finish came off with paint remover, sandpaper, and steel wool. We applied 3 coats shellac, 2 coats varnish, rubbing case after each coat

To make way for progress, out came old works—a series of intricately balanced and meshed gears requiring care and attention of a craftsman when out of order.

Add larger chrysanthemums following curved line. Press firmly into pin holder. Turn container and repeat, fill in on other side. Small flowers should be high, large ones low. Group similar types in clusters. Don't face all flowers directly to front. Turn "faces" for interest

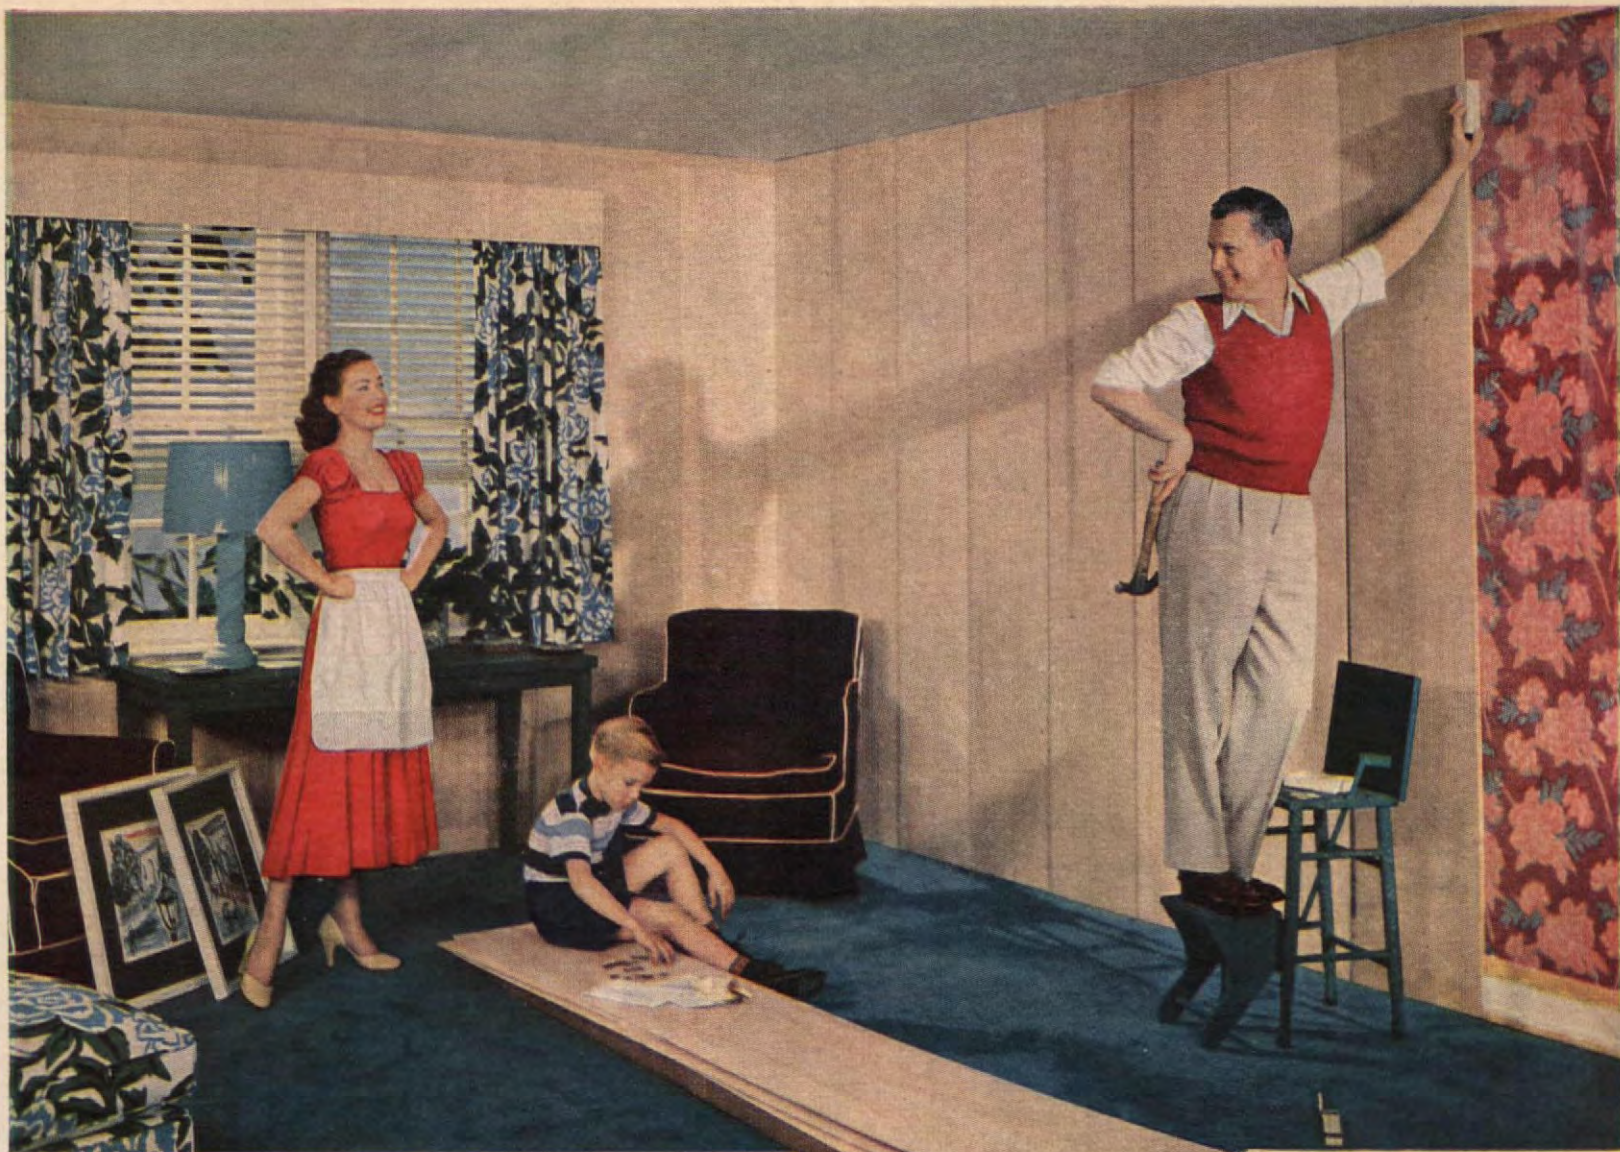

Use long sprays at ends of container, following downward curve. Add shorter ones following same stem lines. Now there is a three-section grouping to work with. Check at this point to be sure that some chrysanthemums extend over rim of the container

Fill in arrangement with varying lengths of chrysanthemums. Cut some quite short for contrast. Add autumn leaves and begonia foliage through the center spaces for color and depth. Don't just stuff in here and there. Keep in mind the rhythmic curve you want to achieve

To complete mass effect, add short sprays of lantana and celosia. Insert stems in curved pattern for a good design distance contributed by the wide windows, the total length of the living and dining rooms together, and the mirror above the buffet in the dining room to induce an atmosphere of repose. In the living and dining rooms the color of both walls and ceilings is a subdued gray-green, and the chenille rugs have a soft turquoise shade. Similar soft colors are used throughout the house. To eliminate any possible monotony of large areas of the same color, there are bright accents in the colors and materials of the furniture which were selected and designed by a home decorating consultant, Mrs. de Macomb Sharp, for each individual room.

Today both of these houses are as contemporary as can be. They have modern conveniences and lines to fit the up-to-date thinking and living of the owners. Many years have been chopped off their ages. You may be able to do the same for your own home, if it has basically good lines. The redecorating will cost little more than normal periodical redecorations, and the structural remodeling costs less than building a new home of comparable quality.

The black-painted brick fireplace, outlined in white, with a brass molding, and a red brick hearth, was designed by Mrs. Cox. It is a pleasing accent with the gray-green of the walls and ceiling

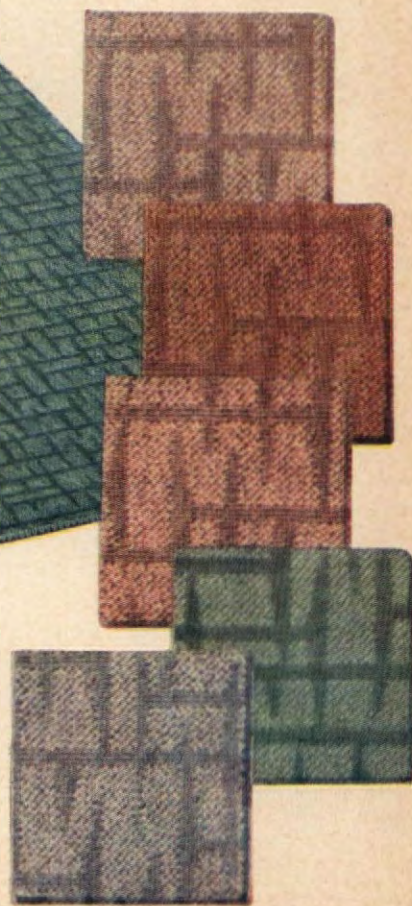

From the living-room hearth there is a spacious vista to the far end of the Cox dining room where the mirror above the bleached-oak buffet and dining table adds to the sense of distance

When plane blade or chisel is not badly nicked and bevel isn't worn down far, sharpen it on a flat whetstone. With tip of blade on oiled stone, and heel of bevel raised slightly off stone, work the blade straight back and forth without rocking

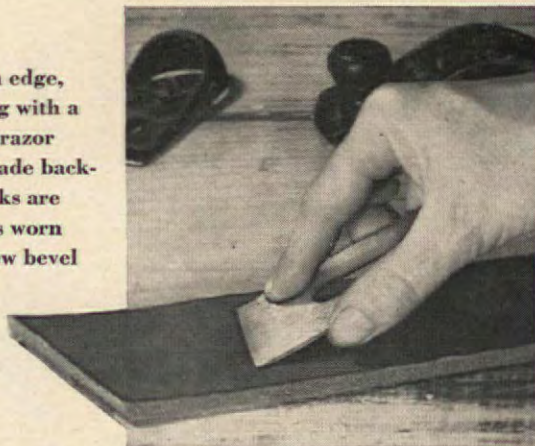

How to Sharpen Planes and Chisels

Next, lay the blade flat on stone with bevel up and slide back and forth to remove feather edge that turned under in first step. Don't make a bevel on flat side of sharp edge. If nicks show up, start at beginning again

For a really keen edge, finish sharpening with a few strokes on a razor strop, moving blade backward only. If nicks are deep and bevel is worn down, make a new bevel of 25 to 30 degrees on grinding wheel, wheel turning toward you

Keep cutting edge square with sides of blade when grinding, and keep blade cool by dipping in water frequently during work. After grinding and whetting, if you've done a good job, edge should be razor-sharp. Test it on the hairs of your arm

Wishing-well Compost Heap

P. H. PARROTT

If you have a garden, but wish it were a better one, why not build yourself a "wishing well" like ours and help make your wish come true? For years I watched our lawn clippings and other valuable garden waste go into the rubbish can, paid to have it carted away, and paid for fertilizer to replace it—simply because we thought we had no space on our 50 by 100 ft. lot for a compost heap which, we thought, though useful, would be unsightly. Then I solved the problem by building the simple structure pictured here. The heavy plank base makes a box 4 by 6 ft. and 4 ft. high; this is veneered with brick except for an opening across the bottom of the front that enables us to remove the compost from the bottom of the heap or turn the pile over by taking from the bottom and throwing it back on top. To close the opening at other times, I made four plugs, each of three vertical bricks on a horizontal one cemented together and with a wire handle in front. Four 7-ft. high 2 by 4-in. uprights support a windlass and two redwood and cedar buckets on a white rope; also a waterproof plywood roof attached to the house and painted red and white. This makes an open, but sheltered, bird feeding station, and the birds repay us by contributing their droppings to compost below. A fair exchange, we think, just as the whole affair combines aesthetic attractiveness and practical usefulness.

The homemade construction is simple, as this plan clearly shows

Photographs by Al Manner

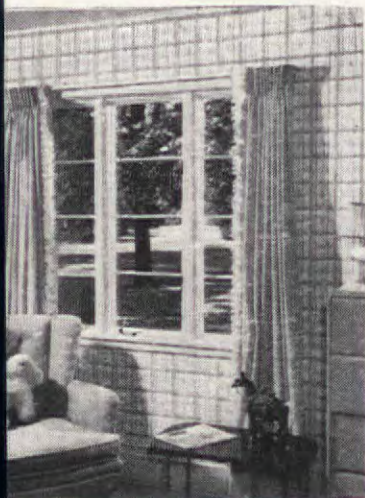

But within it, behind removable brick gates, ripens rich compost to be forked out whenever needed

Sumptuous Solid Cherry

FROM THE ELSWICK COLLECTION

The decorators and merchandising people who've seen the new Elswick group have been wildly extravagant in praising it. It's been at least 150 years since fine American cabinetmakers produced anything like it. Unless you're a sesquicentennial you've never seen such magnificent cherry in a store before.

It's got the age-ripened color, the delicacy of line, the time-and-painstaking niceties of construction you'd expect to find in a museum. Yet it embodies such contemporary pieces as the drop-leaf table, the most popular in America today. Assembled under the direction of Frederick Elswick, eminent American architect and antiquarian, it is produced by Willett in the finest of American cabinet woods, SOLID wild cherry—at modest prices* for your home; your pleasure—today and the rest of your life.

How to Make

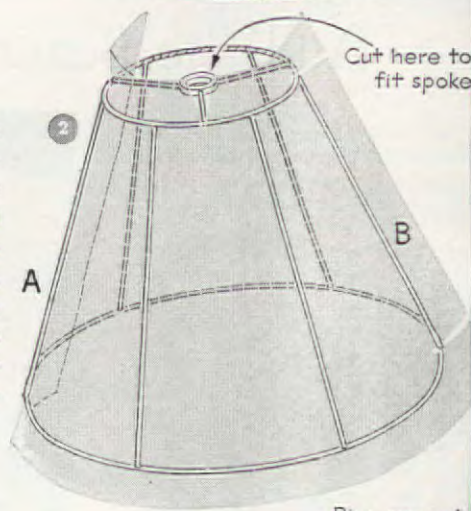

Box-pleated ruching may be purchased ready-made or you can make it yourself by following full instructions on page 108

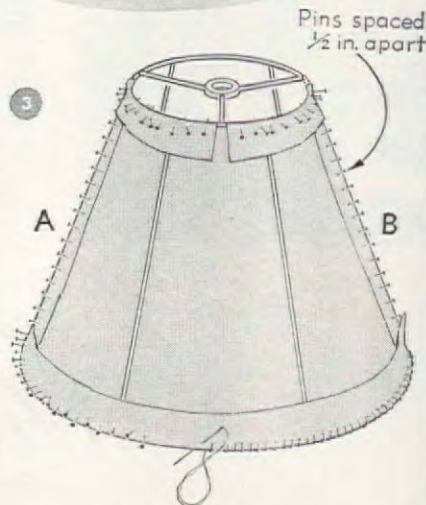

Ten-cent-store cotton tape, $\frac{1}{2}$ inch wide, is wrapped around wire frame diagonally, lapping over half of width. Wrap very tightly so it cannot slip. This must be very firm because all stitches for lining and outside cover are sewn to tape

Cut lining on bias in two half-widths, A to B. Each half should be cut one inch larger on all sides. First slip one half on inside of frame. Notch at top and bottom of side pieces A and B and at top front center so lining fits neatly

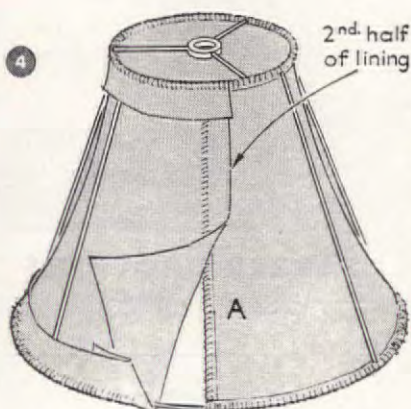

Turn back edges as shown. Pin lining into place about every $\frac{1}{2}$ inch along wrapped spokes A and B and top and bottom of frame. Pull tautly as you go along so it will be smooth. Sew with overcast stitches close together. Trim edges neat and keep straight

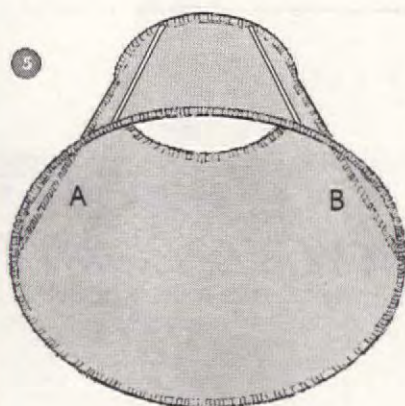

a Lamp Shade

MARIE PECHECK

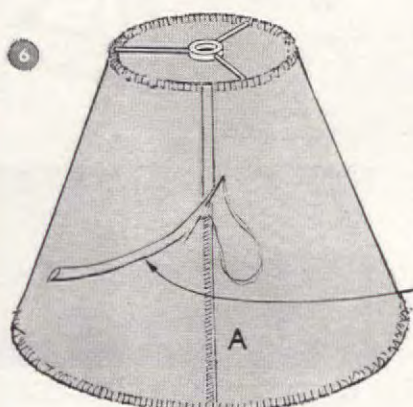

Large soft bow of matching plaid lined with contrasting plain color adds finishing touch at top of widely flared lampshade

Pin and secure second half of lining in same way, lapping sides on top and over stitched edges of first half of lining at A and B as shown in sketch. Sew directly on top of stitches of first half of lining. Trim off surplus and keep edges straight

Sketch shows frame completely covered with lining, neatly trimmed and sewn in place. Short strips of lining fabric folded like bias tape may be placed around each spoke at top of frame and stitched in place on top of wire spokes. Keep edges flat and conceal stitches

Outside covering is cut, same as lining, in two pieces on bias, allowing one inch extra on all sides. Stretch, pin, sew, then trim edges. Cover seams with tubular strips, see page 108

Stickley "American"

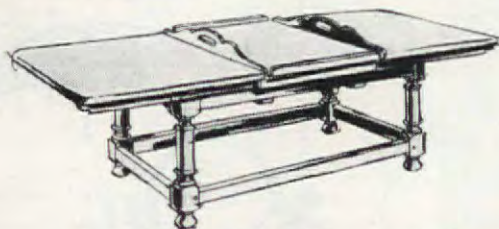

...the cherrywood, the style influences, the treasured originals, all came from Cherry Valley!

In a Georgian farmhouse high on a Cherry Valley slope, Leopold Stickley found the treasured pieces from which this room grouping was adapted.

There have been changes, of course. Stickley "American" furniture is not a copy. It is a growing style, reflecting the needs and cultural level of the present. Blending new interest and purpose with a glorious heritage, it adds physical dignity and grace to any American setting.

The workmanship is exceptional—honest, rugged, lasting. Old-time craftsmen labor patiently to provide a custom-touch to work started on machines. And modern science lends its magic—creates in hours the rich appearance of wood which has been lovingly cared for over the years.

• See typical Stickley "American" pieces at leading stores:

Make a Lampshade

(Begins on page 106)

Covering lampshades does not require special talent with needle and thread but there are tricks to give that professional look.

Be sure to select a sturdy frame; don't waste time on one that is weak or an unattractive shape. If you cannot buy the kind you want, your neighborhood sheet-metal shop may be able to make one for you.

To avoid rusting, paint frame with a primer, then a coat of flat white. When thoroughly dry, wrap the frame carefully, as shown on page 106.

Circular shades are always lined and covered with fabric, cut on the bias for stretch. Follow our sketches and instructions on pages 106 and 107 for the basic steps of pinning and sewing lining and outside covering of shade. The raw seams on either side of outside covering at points A and B are covered with tubular strips of material made as follows: Cut each strip from straight of fabric, fold in half lengthwise, sew together ⅛ inch from cut edges, then turn inside out. Use a small safety pin for this, pin on one end, then push back through tube pulling stitched seam on inside. Finished strip should be wide enough to cover seams on spokes A and B generously, about ¼ inch to ½ inch. Press each strip flat and sew to shade with matching thread. It takes a little time and patience to get these side strips on smoothly and evenly. Begin by anchoring the strip firmly on top of frame. Barely catch one side of the strip to the shade and pull thread gently through to the other side. Continue sewing strip to shade, alternating from one side to other until you reach the bottom.

The basic shade is now ready to be trimmed. There are many trimmings you can make yourself. We have used a box-pleated ruching on one shade and a bow on the other.

To make a double box-pleated ruching, make a series of double box-pleats long enough to go around shade, using the shade fabric for one side of pleats and a contrasting color for the other side. After pleats are sewn to shade (by tacking through center of pleats to top rim of shade), the top and bottom of each pleat is tacked together at center as illustrated in photograph. This ruching may be used on the bottom of the shade if desired, but we used a simple bias binding. Cut a strip two to two-and-one-half inches wide, baste double and slip stitch to bottom of shade, or you can put binding on in the same way you applied the side seams.

On the plaid shade we added a big plaid bow lined with a plain contrasting color. Cut plaid and plain color on the bias. Sew sides together on wrong side, turn to right side, tuck in ends, and stitch together. Make separate center to tie bow.

crowd. Many of us are still in our twenties, some of us are downright attractive, and all of us are fond of fun. We lonely girls need the opportunities you can provide to meet these men under pleasant auspices.

Too few of our jobs introduce us to eligible bachelors. Women, be they ever so charming, who are trained to peer through a microscope, file in-voices in an office, or sell lingerie in a dress shop often go dateless for months at a time.

It's true that romance, or a reasonable facsimile, is sometimes found at public dance halls and bars. But a sensitive spirit curls up and dies when she sits like a bale of merchandise, waiting to be appraised—and respected accordingly. It's a sad fact that good breeding and a delicate nature can be a distinct disadvantage in these modern times.

Yes, we've poked a lot of fun at the Victorian era for its stiffly starched code of social behavior, but the crinolined belles of that day seem to have enjoyed something we're missing—a warmly woven social life in the home and community. In those days, unmarried men and women had more opportunities to meet at the homes of mutual friends than they do today.

Gatherings in the home are still the best way to help people get acquainted, and that's why we're appealing to you, Mrs. Happily Married.
Won't you and the Mister round up some of your bachelor friends and invite us over for an informal evening now and then?

You'll get something out of it, too,
Mrs. Happily Married. You'll take pride in that social leadership which is your right.—ANONYMOUS

2nd Report on Magic Gardening

The August, 1947, AMERICAN HOME carried a report on "Magic Gardening" in Florida where, since World War II, enterprising people with limited space but unlimited imagination have obtained wonderful results in production and pleasure by adapting in their gardens the gravel-and-chemicals, or "hydroponic," farming methods successfully used by the U. S. Army in the South Pacific. Of the many comments and inquiries received from readers, the most numerous and wistful were from dwellers in city apartments and crowded homes who felt the universal urge to grow plants and flowers, but had no space for it except terraces, roofs, paved or unfertile back yards, or lofty windowsills. "If only I could make it work," they said.

Since then a lot of nutrient solution has flowed

1. Ingenious new "magic garden" is folding box of plastic-coated paper board, complete with plant food (and bag of sawdust, if desired)

2. Ready-cut and scored, it is quickly and easily assembled, as is wire-bottomed tray which holds sawdust on layer of excelsior

3. Seeds are sown in sawdust as in soil (but 16 times closer) and watered with food solution until roots grow down into it in box

4. Results in abundance soon follow. A glass gauge at one end of box shows solution level and serves as drain to empty it for moving holes in the bottom of one, filled it with old sawdust spread on a layer of excelsior to keep it from falling through, set it on top of the other one, and planted tomatoes in the sawdust, which I then sprinkled daily with a water solution of some common chemicals. Soon the tomato roots grew down through the holes into the solution in the lower pan—and I had a garden, in which the plants fed themselves. Some six weeks later, I was picking delicious tomatoes.

Hydroponic plants will grow as readily in sawdust as in the gravel of successful truck farms now scattered from Florida to Japan, and this kind of gardening can be as large or as small as you wish. You can use a discarded double boiler (as I used the two pans) or any watertight container, such as an old washtub with a tray full of sawdust on top of it, plus, of course, a small supply of water, a sprinkler, and a mixture of chemical salts to provide the plant food. You can buy, by mail, an inexpensive, all-purpose mixture in dry form; a pound will make some 128 gallons of plant food solution. If you want to mix your own, a typical formula calls for three major, or essential, chemicals and several others of which only a trace is needed. The "big three" are saltpeter (KNO_3), treble superphosphate ($\text{Ca H}_4 (\text{PO}_4)_2 \cdot \text{H}_2\text{O}$), and epsom salts ($\text{MgSO}_4 \cdot 7\text{H}_2\text{O}$). To a third of a pound of each of them add a pinch of the sulphates of iron, manganese, zinc, and copper, and borax, and mix thoroughly. A chemist might disapprove of this off-hand measuring, but your plants won't; if your local druggist hasn't the materials, he can get them for you or tell you where to get them.

The use of sawdust has led to further simplification, as witness the "folding bed" for plants pictured on page 110. One of these little gardens, started outdoors in summer or fall, can be brought inside, plants and all, before the first frost, to brighten the winter months. If it succumbs to steam heat in February, you can then replant and get a two months' start on spring. Its many possible uses include cheering the lives of invalids and shut-ins, and entertaining and instructing children. Different plants will have different light needs, and, of course, an uninsulated hot radiator will cook a hydroponic garden set upon it just as it will any house plant.

My small Florida back yard consists of sand generously tinged with sea salt. But I have there four $4\frac{1}{2}$ by $2\frac{1}{2}$ -ft. beds in which are growing a score of vegetables and flowers, packed in so tightly I probably should pull out at least half of them. But they're so healthy and full of zing that I just can't do it. It's too much fun to watch them grow and harvest them.

There's beauty and good living in a CONCRETE HOUSE

Your family will enjoy a lifetime of security and comfort in a house built with sturdy concrete masonry walls, concrete floors and a firesafe roof.

Concrete imparts beauty and character to any house because concrete masonry can be laid in a wide variety of pleasing and distinctive patterns. The walls can be left natural, painted any color with durable portland cement paint or stuccoed in beautiful textures.

A concrete house, properly insulated, provides year-round comfort in any climate. It's warm in winter and cool in summer. Being weathertight, it stays clean and dry in all seasons.

HOW TO GET YOUR CONCRETE HOUSE . . . and what will it cost?

Phone a local concrete masonry manufacturer for names of architects and builders experienced in concrete house design and construction. They know conditions in your community and can answer your questions about plans and costs. Take any plans or sketches you have obtained

A concrete house also is economical to own. Its first cost is moderate, it requires little maintenance and it gives long years of service. That means true low-annual-cost shelter.

A concrete house provides maximum resistance to storms, decay, termites and vermin. It's also firesafe. Concrete can't burn! There's no better protection for loved ones or prized possessions.

Don't Build a Firetrap

WILLIAM H. STEINBERG, JR.

Were it not for the fact that millions of years ago one of our nameless ancestors learned to use fire, and another discovered later that a fire at the mouth of a cave kept at bay the sabertooth tiger who stalked the prehistoric night, we might still be living in trees. But, for all the debt we owe to fire, there is no need to give our homes as burnt offerings. Yet, we do just that, in spite of the research and experience of fire-prevention engineers. Every year around 400,000 homes in the United States are damaged by fire at a cost of more than 200 million dollars.

Why? Because we allowed the fires to start through either carelessness or neglect. But that's just part of the story. Just as important is the startling, but true, fact that nearly all these homes are literally built to burn.

A home that is fire-safe depends on two things: fire prevention and fire protection. Fire prevention includes all those steps that can be taken to prevent the occurrence of a fire, such as elimination of rubbish heaps, bad electrical connections, defective chimney, smoking in bed, and the chance of children getting at matches. But some fires still start, and then fire protection steps in to minimize the danger to life and property no matter what caused the blaze in the first place.

Fire protection is not a matter of day-to-day carefulness. It is a question of building fire safety permanently into the home during its construction.

It is possible to build a home that won't burn at all—a home, for example, with solid masonry walls, steel framing, aluminum or asbestos siding, gypsum and vermiculite plaster, metal trim, and with furnishings and furniture that are not combustible. But such a house might be too expensive or too much in variance with our personal taste and preferences in architecture and interior decorations.

We can, however, build a high degree of fire safety into our homes without sacrificing these preferences. Any slight additional cost will be more than offset by the comforting knowledge that if a fire ever should start, its threat will be relatively weak. This is particularly true when we realize that of all the fires that started last year 70 per cent were in homes, and of all the deaths from fire last year 80 per cent were in homes. Similar casualties are expected this year.

You can compartmentalize your home so fire can go just so far and no farther. An asbestos, plaster, or gypsum-board ceiling in the basement will keep fire from eating through to the upper floors. A close-fitting door at the cellar stairs will stop fire from going that way. The heating unit should be enclosed, top and sides, with fire-resistant materials.

Within the living area proper the chief danger point is the stairway to the second floor, for an open stair acts like a chimney flue and provides a path for the rapid spread of flames, superheated gas, and toxic smoke. Thus, if your home has two stories, the best solution, from the standpoint of fire protection, is a heavy door at the foot of the stairs. Again, this may clash with your architectural preferences. Nonetheless, a decision to do without such protection must be made with the knowledge that it is contrary to the best principles of fire safety.

Fire stops between studs keep flames from spreading quickly in walls and enveloping house. An alarm system to warn of danger gives still more time for escape and fire-fighting

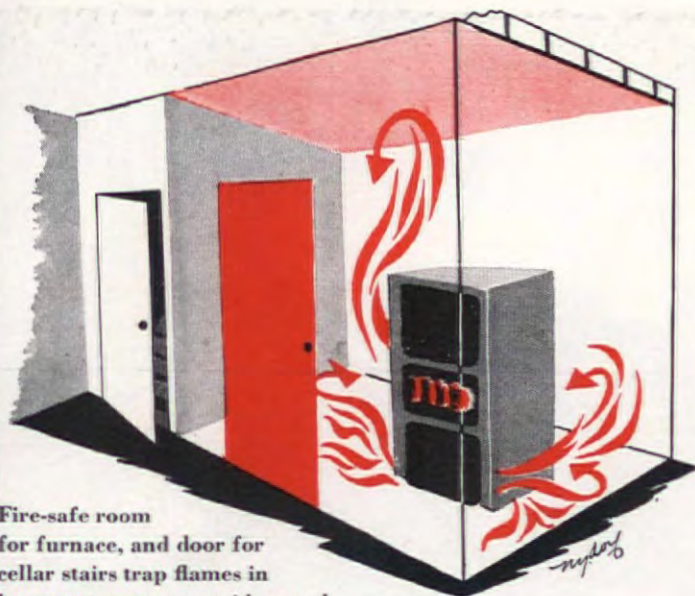

Fire stops in the exterior walls are a must. Consisting of non-combustible blocks filling the spaces between the studs at floor level and eaves level, they prevent fire from climbing up through the walls and enveloping the home in a wall of flame. Batt, blanket, or fill insulation between the studs is an excellent fire stop as well as a fuel-saver in the winter. Insulation in general also contributes to fire safety because it reduces the need for "forcing" the furnace in extreme cold weather—a common cause of fires started by heating equipment and chimneys.

Gypsum board and plaster—especially gypsum plaster with vermiculite used instead of sand—on metal lath very effectively traps fire within any room of the home when the doors are closed. Thus, every room can be a compartment to prevent the growth of a small fire into a conflagration that destroys the whole house before the fire department can arrive to put it out.

Another basic point in protecting your home is to make your furniture and furnishings as fire-resistant as possible, for many fire deaths are caused not by flames but by toxic smoke and gases given off by burning furniture, upholstery, fabrics, and paint.

Wood can be made highly fire-resistant by a process

Fire-safe room for furnace, and door for cellar stairs trap flames in basement, prevent rapid spread to upper floors, give time for fire department to save the home which forces metallic salts and other chemicals into the wood fibers. A fire-retardant paint that does not support combustion but forms a fire-insulating blanket when subjected to high heat, will protect combustible materials from catching fire. It can be used as a finish coat on wood or combustible wallboards as an effective protection against fire, or as a base coat under other paint finishes that fit the decorative scheme better. Also, woven glass and asbestos fabrics for upholstery and curtains combine fire safety with attractive appearance. What's more, nearly any fabric can be made highly resistant to fire by the use of ready-made preparations that can be applied by dipping or spraying.

You can also make a fabric fire-protection mixture yourself. Seven ounces of borax and three ounces of boric acid dissolved in two quarts of water and sprayed on upholstery or used as a dip for draperies or dresses will keep the fabrics from burning, but will not prevent charring. Repeat the treatment after every cleaning.

Another fundamental phase of fire protection is an effective alarm system which will give your family early warning of a fire. Originally developed for use in commercial buildings and factories, they have been adapted for home use. They usually consist of a thermostatic device which, upon a rapid rise in temperature, sets off an alarm in the sleeping area of the home, thus allowing ample time for escape and making it possible in many cases, to send an alarm to the fire department before the fire gains headway.

Fire-retardant paint will keep wood and other combustible structural materials from feeding flames, thus reducing size and extent of fire

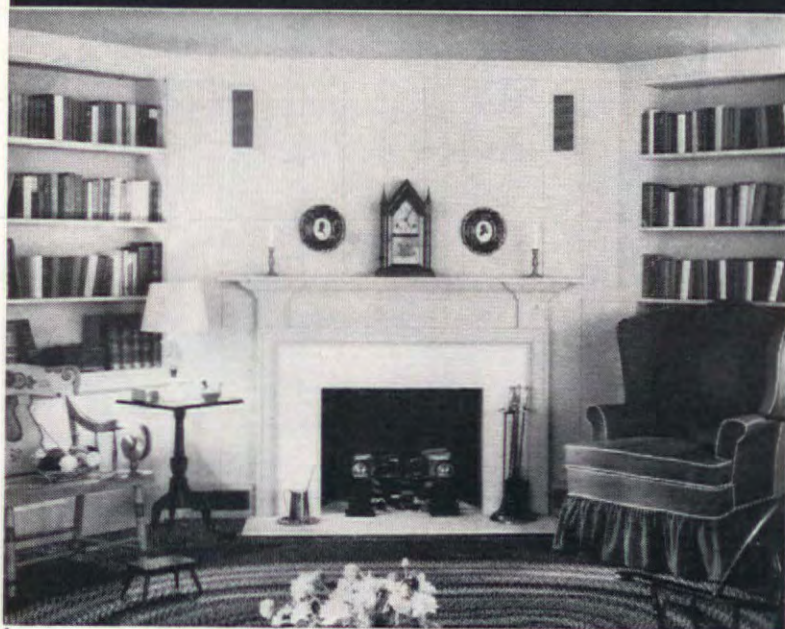

Spraying upholstery and dipping of draperies and dresses in fireproofing mixture will reduce danger of fire starting or spreading, and prevent many deaths from toxic smoke

There you have the fundamentals of building fire safety into your home. Use non-combustible materials as much as you can. Compartmentalize your home so that fire, if it starts, cannot travel very far or very fast. And give yourself and the fire department a head start by means of a reliable alarm system.

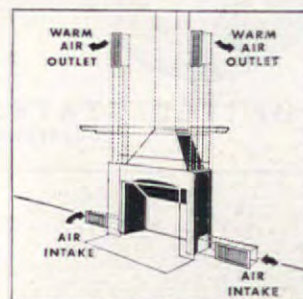

Having made your home as fireproof as possible, exercise day-to-day care to keep a fire from starting, and have an extinguisher at hand to put out any small fires before they can spread.

When Herbert A. Luegge first took a look at this three-room apartment, it literally needed a lift. Everything drooped and sagged, from floors and doors to upholstered pieces. Costly and necessary major repairs, blithely dismissed by his prospective landlady, even made his enthusiasm droop a bit. But such high-ceilinged, large rooms are hard to come by, and his decorator-trained eye saw their possibilities.

(Note the handsome panel of Plate Glass Mirrors above the tub.)

ONE OF THE SIMPLEST . . . and most effective . . . decorating tricks of them all is the use of a Pittsburgh Plate Glass wall mirror like this behind your dining-room buffet. It forms a perfect setting for furniture and silver, increases the apparent size of the room, and reflects in warm detail the color, movement and good cheer of pleasant meals. And for a graceful finishing touch, why not a mirrored or Plate Glass top for buffet and server?

the floor. Combining the outmoded furniture that came with the apartment and odd pieces he owned, he used colorful glo-sheen in plains, a stripe and plaid of green, mulberry and chartreuse to tie Victorian, Provincial, and Early American furnishings together in livable informality. Those wonderful, high windows can take yards and yards of material, but Mr. Luegge economized by using plaid swags over white shades and chartreuse café curtains hung on brass rods. The effect is colorfully lavish. Woodwork and garden bench converted to coffee table are painted white to provide sparkling accents.

A mulberry twill drapery pulls across the whole window wall in the bedroom. It's topped by a wallpaper valance repeating the colors and motif in the living room, and the rest of the walls are papered in green and white stripes. Against this bold background stands a Victorian dresser, Hollywood bed, pine desk, and Provincial chair. It took courage to put them together, but it's color that holds them together.

Christmas Wreath from Your Garden

MARY ALICE ROCHE

With a bow to Marion Rowley

I know two women. One hates Christmas. Says it's all humbug, a commercial scheme to sell people more things they don't need. Stays indoors to avoid hearing, "Merry Christmas!" Doesn't tire herself looking for the right present for the right person. And, of course, she never disarranges her house with "those silly Christmas decorations that make such a mess."

The other one doesn't seem to mind tired feet (from tramping the shops), stiff fingers (from wrapping gifts for family, friends, garden club members, the little girl next door, the neighbor who helped her out six months ago, etc.). Least of all does she mind the mess caused by making and putting up Christmas decorations. Last year she made the biggest mess ever—and had the most fun!

You see, one day when Marion Rowley was hanging bunches of herbs to dry in the attic, she came upon a big box of Christmas treasures—the fragile spun-glass angel from the first tree she can remember, a band of wooden pilgrims from the year young Everett (who was reading Chaucer) insisted they have roast pig, apple in mouth, instead of the usual turkey, and the polychrome angel, brought by a friend from Italy and

Start, as Mrs. Rowley did, with flat ring of stout ½-in. wire mesh slightly narrower than wreath is to be. To it wire carefully chosen seed stalks, pods, etc., all preferably tied in bunches. She began with sumac which, for many Christmases, had benignly watched (and seemed to bless) the happy family gathered around the tree below her. Suddenly Mrs. Rowley vowed that, this year, the lovely angel would again adorn the mantle, but against a truly beautiful and fitting background. So she began to collect especially interesting seed pods, sumac heads, broom corn (grown for the birds), fern spore stalks, sprays of leucothoe "beads" which, gilded, seemed the work of a master goldsmith. Stately formosanum lily pods supplied another shape, as did sweet-gum prickly balls, magnolia seed cases, quilled teasel heads, etc.

Then, as Christmas drew nearer, she settled down to work, as the pictures show. She had a plumber cut out a ring of strong, 1/2-in.-mesh wire screening a little smaller than the wreath would be, scaled so that the angel's head would come just to the center when the wreath was hung behind it. Next, with the materials laid out around her, she started with a focal point of rich color at the lower left by wiring together, and then onto the ring, two bunches of sumac, one sweeping up, the other down. Next, she built out to the wreath line with tight bunches of red multiflora rose hips; round, deep blue berry clusters of dog-grape (Smilax herbacea); Siberian iris pods which, like the stem ends of three pine cones, she touched with blue paint. Bands of gilded material above and below contrasted with the sumac, and gradually she filled in the rest of the frame with different kinds of cones to balance and complement the first side. Some gilding was done, but with discretion to avoid monotony and garishness—only the lotus pods and the delicate fern scrolls being completely covered.

Some of the cones she cut into sections with a small saw and fitted with stems by twisting a wire tightly around the core, between the bottom two layers of scales, leaving about three inches free with which to bind them into bunches. This bunching is important, for it is much harder to wire things on to the frame separately and get a compact, pleasing effect.

At last, when the wire frame was completely hidden, she added a "bow" of lily pods at the right, a feathery edging of wheat stalks along the top, fluffy allium heads (lower right), and, finally, frost-reddened leucothoe sprays behind the sumac.

Late on Christmas Eve, she and Mr. Rowley hung the wreath above their pine mantel against a piece of rich red Italian velvet, flanked it with two fat candles in pine holders, then gave the little angel her place of honor in front of it. In the soft candlelight she smiled down happily upon them, and they smiled back at her—happy and all ready for Christmas.

Pint-size, Climate-wise

The long roof overhang keeps out the heat of the summer sun, but the large living-room window admits ample light and view. The shorter overhang is shelter from wet weather

The climate helped design this house. After first selecting the site very carefully, Mr. and Mrs. James Bayless had Architect Van Evera Bailey design their home to take full advantage of the mildness of the climate around Portland, Oregon, and such heat as could be derived from the sun in the winter. At the same time protection was needed from the hot summer sun and the frequent wet weather.

The large window and the overhanging roof use and control the winter and summer sun on the southern front end of the living room and house. The terrace at the rear is protected by bedroom and car-port wings and roof overhang, which along with a wonderful view of the wooded ravine to the north, make it a delightful spot for outdoor meals from May through September. Protected access from house to car port is further shelter from the weather.

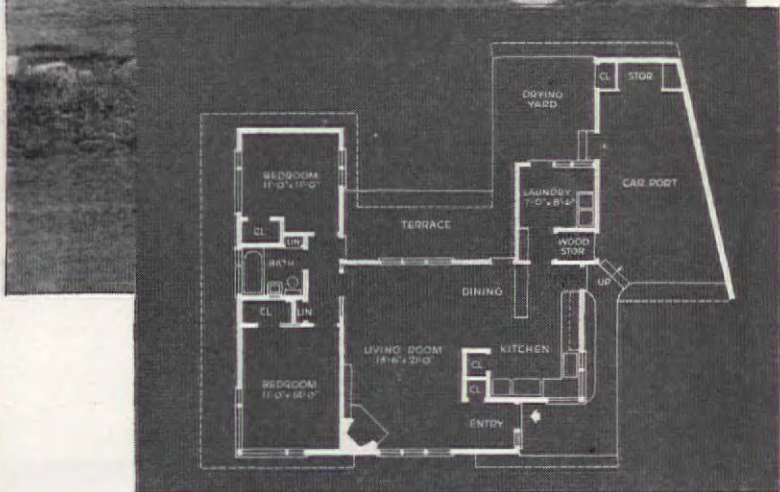

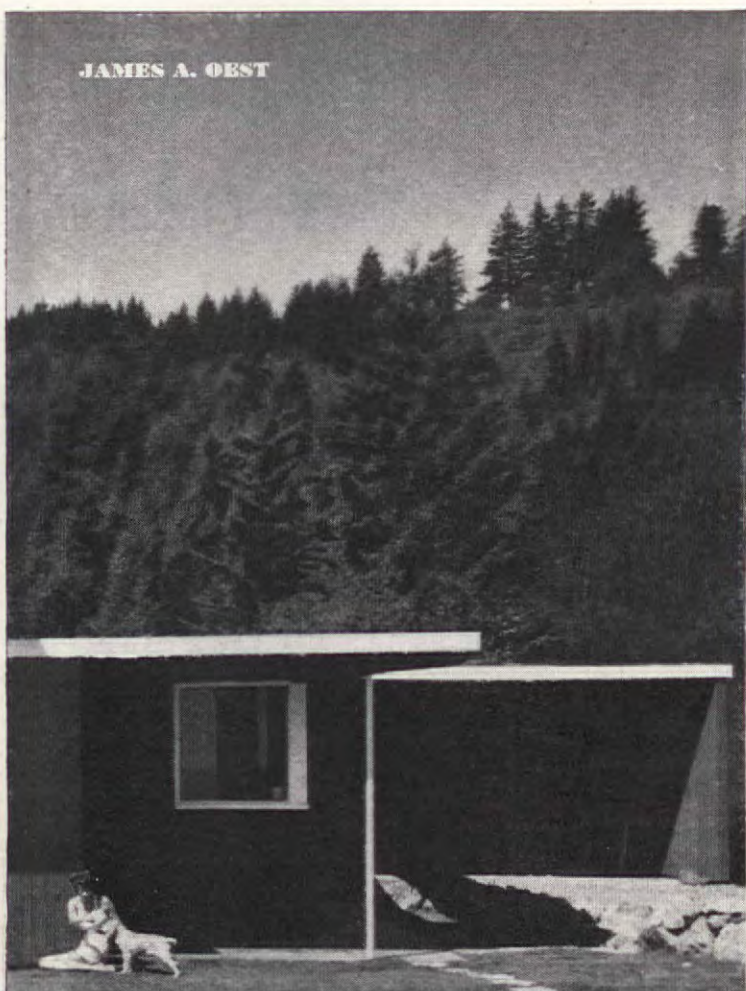

Brown-stained vertical siding makes the building settle into the surrounding landscape, and white painted trim on eaves, doors, and windows accent the fine low lines of the design.

Photographs and data from P. A. Dearborn

In the rear, outdoor dining area is well protected from both sun and damp weather. Breezes and the low afternoon sun, but not rain, reach into the sheltered drying yard

JAMES A. ØEST

Architect, Van Evera Bailey, A. I. A.

Light aqua on the plastered walls and the burgundy of the wall-to-wall carpeting is repeated in the print draperies. Aqua appears again in the upholstery of the overstuffed chairs. The rest of the furniture is of blond wood with simple lines

Q. Which is most important in an insulation?

- ☐ Vaporseal ☐ Uniform thickness ☐ Double heat loss barrier

A. Be sure to have all three. In an insulation like Reflective KIMSUL®, the many-layer fiber blanket resists heat loss and the aluminum foil cover reflects heat back into the house. This double protection is the most effective method of stopping heat loss ever devised. Uniform thickness—to prevent thin and thick spots (a feature of Regular KIMSUL, too)—is assured with the exclusive stitched blanket construction. Unlike other insulations, thickness can't vary with age or because of improper installation. The aluminum foil cover also acts as a vaporseal to prevent condensation in walls and keep humidity at the comfort level.

Q. How soon does insulation pay for itself?

- ☐ 1 to 4 years ☐ Never ☐ About 30 years

A. It depends upon how much fuel is saved by the insulation, and what its other benefits are worth to you. A home insulated throughout with KIMSUL may save as much as 44% on fuel—so the insulation pays for itself in a short time, often in only one or two years. Meanwhile, it keeps a home snug, warm, draft-free in winter—up to 15° cooler on hottest summer days.

Q. Where should a new house be insulated for proper protection?

- ☐ Around foundations ☐ Attic and sidewalls ☐ Between floors

A. Both attic and sidewalls should be insulated to stop the greatest percentage of heat loss. Be sure, too, that the insulation has been applied in adequate thickness at these points, and around doors and windows. It must also be resistant to fire, vermin and mold. Investigate to make sure that an "insulated" house is properly insulated.

Q. Can I install my own insulation?

- ☐ If you're under 35 ☐ Never ☐ Yes

A. Many insulations require skilled labor and special equipment for installation. However, KIMSUL insulation is easily applied by the home-owner himself in either his existing or his new home. It is available in easy-to-carry rolls at lumber and building supply dealers everywhere. For the average six-room home, complete insulation with KIMSUL costs less than the price of a good easy chair (still less if installed by the home-owner).

woe betide the ill-advised decorator who exceeds them. Yet we buy at a disadvantage in small, special lots direct from the mills; so, it is really quite remarkable that we are still able to give you a great deal of the time, thought, and service for the small profit that we derive from this essential branch of our work.

Antiques are purchased at both wholesale and retail. We pick up the finest pieces from retail shops who give us a discount, not very much nowadays, but first-water antiques are hard to find and very dear, so the percentage of profit is lower.

There are certain phases of our work that are compensated by a direct percentage charge. For instance, whether you use one of our painters or one of your own, we charge a flat percentage of his bill for working out a color scheme and supervising its execution, since the color of your backgrounds can make or break a room. Perhaps it is necessary to decide on structural changes or to look over a house or apartment you are considering buying, or just to rearrange a room that has failed to fall into pleasant, easy groups. For this service, most decorators make a charge based on time—often it is $50 a day or $25 a half day. A few top-notchers ask $100 a day. I really feel that anyone who will call in a competent decorator before buying a house and get a frank opinion as to its assets and liabilities is a very wise and practical person. I could have saved many of my clients thousands of dollars if I had been called in BEFORE buying rather than AFTER, when so much had to be spent to correct faults.

Here is one of the most important points to you: Call in a decorator, if you are ever to have one at all, when you begin; either when you look at a place already existing or when you engage an architect to design one from scratch. We really do our best work when we collaborate with an architect from the outset.

An architect naturally wants his house to look well as you drive by, and exclaim on its fine proportions! But, after all, you live inside your home, and it is really more important to you to have rooms spaced to take your furniture to the best advantage, to have convenient closets, adequate pantries, fireplaces where comfortable groups may be placed around them—not too near a door. All of these details of daily living and housekeeping with which a decorator is familiar are sometimes unwittingly sacrificed by the architect to some exterior effect that interests him more! But by working together, all these can be caught and checked before too late.

Here I reach a question of how to select your decorator, and it is highly important to you. There are a few whose main interest is 18th Century French, many who find Georgian England their natural background, and a few Victorians! But most decorators work well in a wide variety of styles and an equally wide variety of budgets, from a small flat for newlyweds to great country houses in the grand manner. But, even so, each has a special quality. Some are very restrained and subtle and work best in low-keyed and muted colors, appealing especially to introverts, perhaps. Others like a riot of color, a freedom from convention, a dramatic effect. These do well for extroverts and for people of very large means who can change often when tired of so exotic a background. But most of us are middle-of-the-roads, not humdrum at all, I hope, but a little less self-assertive, more receptive to the qualities and tastes of our clients. We enjoy sinking our personalities into theirs and making it a challenge to create something that looks completely their own.

So, before you select a decorator, give a lot of thought to it. Don't pick someone just because his work is photogenic and startling enough to make a stunning page in Vogue. That is not how your husband selected you as a wife, is it? Or how you chose your lawyer or doctor? If you are quaint and cozy and old-fashioned, don't get a decorator who works in stark, bare modern, or in a coldly stately and formal classicism. But when you see some work you like, find out who did it, if the decorator was easy to work with, open to suggestions, took a lively personal interest in reflecting the tastes and requirements of the owner, was businesslike and clean-cut in all dealings and conscientious about carrying out the work. Then go to that decorator and say, "I have seen a job of yours that looked like the type I want. But could you show me one or two more things that you have done?" and indicate the general style and price range in which you hope to work.

After seeing these, and if they are also attractive to you and you find the decorator sympathetic and understanding, then lay your cards on the table and say very cordially what your problem is, what you hope to achieve, and what you are prepared to spend—if you have a strict limit. It is a great mistake for clients to be secretive about this. You will only get what you pay for in quality. If you can afford fine quality, tell the truth about it. To give a far smaller budget than you can afford is stupid because you won't get the beauty or perfection of workmanship or the wider choice of good things to which you are entitled. If you are building and furnishing a new house from scratch, and don't know what is fair to allow for furnishing, you will not be very far "off" if you allow one-third of the cost of the house for the decorator's work. If you can afford to spend $40,000, allow $30,000 for the architecture and $10,000 for decoration. If you buy a $15,000 house, plan to spend $5,000 to decorate and furnish it.

This decorator's allowance should cover wallpapers, fabrics, furniture, floor coverings, lamps, mirrors (not built in), ornaments and decorative pictures (not great works of art). But it does not include china, silver, glass, linen, nor kitchen and laundry equipment.

And now may I give you a few suggestions to tell you how to get the best out of your decorator, which I shall call "Don'ts for Clients!"

1. Don't ask what are the smart new colors to use this season. Almost any color is beautiful if properly used, and almost any color can be made terrible if used in the wrong place or run into the ground. The once-de-spised magenta can be wonderful, the over-advertised chartreuse has made thousands of poor, dear ladies who have it in their bedrooms look as though they had jaundice!

2. Don't urge your house as you buy a chic and extreme new hat. Good furniture, well chosen, can last a lifetime not only physically, but also aesthetically, so be careful to avoid anything that will "date" your house in an absurd way after a short time.

3. Don't urge your decorator to duplicate something in the house of a friend or even of an acquaintance. You would not want something especially charming and individual in your house repeated in a house where you visit. Your decorator is quite capable of thinking up something equally attractive, yet entirely different from your friend's and far more like you.

4. Now, here is a don't from the bottom of my heart—DON'T NAG! The client who is under the delusion that her work will be done better and faster if she calls us bright and early every morning is all wrong. Any businesslike decorator is as anxious as you are to get your work done promptly and completely. It is even more maddening for us, with many jobs on at once, to have the thousand delays we encounter these days, than it is to you!

5. Please don't pick our brains! The women who make the rounds of the decorators' studios and try to get a lot of free ideas which they hope they can carry out themselves with great savings are a terrific headache to our profession. We have come, after years of disillusionment, to recognize this practice, and to protect ourselves, many of us ask a fee for the first visit—usually $25—to be deducted from the bill if the ideas suggested are carried out.

On my first terribly important job, my client said a very wise thing to me. "I don't want our home just to be a monument to you! I want it to be our home!" I was startled, and just a little hurt at first, but I have blessed him many times since. As the years have rolled on, I have come to realize that the only true monuments to the work of a decorator are those where our hand is unseen, where we have set the stage in seemingly effortless beauty, suitability and comfort for the individual tastes and needs of the family who lives in that home.

notice that the kitchen door is but a few steps from the patio, to make outdoor meals on the terrace very easy.

The living room is a cheerful spot with almost a whole wall of glass to the terrace and garden. Knotty-pine fireplace wall with mellow used bricks was accented by apple-green plaster walls.

The dining end of the room has low, built-in casework on the north wall for storing dishes and linen and on the end wall is an old china case of black walnut which was made by Mr. McTavish's grandfather in Canada some 150 years ago.

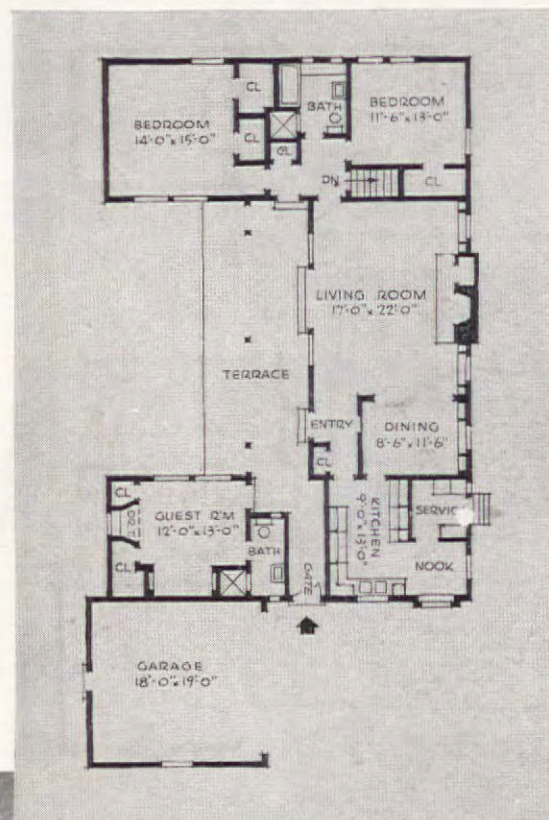

The kitchen is cheerful and efficient. Red and white wallpaper gives it a brisk feeling, yet everything is planned with streamlined efficiency to lighten kitchen work. The breakfast corner is well placed with east light and a trim little laundry is tucked on the north wall.

At the opposite end of the living room are two comfortable bedrooms with bath between. There are spacious wardrobes in each room and the master bedroom has a good-sized bank of windows on the garden side. From the bedroom wing, one can go directly out to the terrace.

It is not surprising that the McTavish's guests remark on the amazing degree of privacy and outdoor living that this little house offers. There can be people for lunch on the terrace, or Mr. McTavish can have a little siesta in the garden after a round of golf while from the street no one would think there was anyone at home.

When a house fits the way of living of a particular family it takes on personality and charm. That is exactly what has happened to this delightful home. It is the McTavishes.

Exterior views and floor plan of the McTavish home. Simple and without fuss, it is this very characteristic which makes their little house so satisfactory. Roofed brick terrace offers perfect circulation to any part of the house. Secluded outdoor living is the order of the day with easy-going informality the keynote

WINTER

Unused door becomes a greenhouse

If you would like to have a simple, small greenhouse or plant window for winter enjoyment, you might be interested in how we solved the problem of a door which in summer is used for reaching the garden, but in winter is, for all practical purposes, valueless. Incidentally, in doing this we created a real center of interest in our home. Supplementing the accompanying illustrations (which hardly need explanation), I may say that the exterior measurements of the "box" are such that its open side fits snugly into the door frame after door and hinges are removed in the fall. To further insure its weathertightness plastic weather stripping is forced in around the frame, and a slanting metal "roof" is tacked to the top of the door frame. Thus it is as easily removed as a storm door when, in spring, the plants are transferred to the garden. The shelves should be of open construction so as not to shut off the light. I made mine of ½-in. welding rod which is inexpensive and obtainable from large hardware or welding-supply houses; plate glass could be laid on the rods if desired. If care is used in laying out the window sash so the joints between the panes coincide with the shelves, the glass becomes almost undetectable when the plants are in place, giving the illusion of an open doorway. It might seem best to set the window sash inside the box but, for various reasons, it seemed to me better to attach it on the outside edge with a gasket of rubber tape, as shown in the sectional sketch.

Re-upholster a Chair

16. Strip front panels of arms to bare wood. Drive shingle nails through panel boards in five places. Cover nailheads with bits of fabric as shown, to prevent puncturing new cover. Spread thin layer of cotton over panel board, keep smooth and firm. Place fabric over this and tack onto back of panel with 2 oz. tacks. Tack cording around edges of both sides and across top. Place in position on front of chair and press to mark where nailheads are to go. Drive an extra nail partway into each mark, then remove, so nails in panels will be easier to fasten to chair. Place panel in position, then, using a folded Turkish towel over fabric, hammer into place

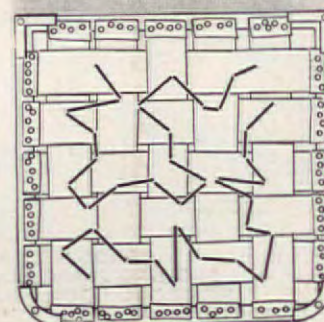

17. Make cushion cover, using old cover for pattern. Add extra filling if necessary to make a smooth, firm cushion. If you are using leatherette or plastic fabric, insert "breathers" (air vents) in the back boxing of cushion, available at upholstery supply shops

How to Repair an Asphalt Roof

Drawings by Margaret Nielson

STANLEY SCHULER

Once you find the leak in an asphalt roof, there's nothing to the job of fixing it. But the finding, frankly, is sure to strain the eyes and patience. I learned that within three weeks after I first slept under my own asphalt roof. The rains fell and pretty soon there was a wet spot on the bedroom ceiling. However, repeated examinations failed to disclose the location of the leak. I peered at cracks and craters, rips and bumps, pinholes and dents, and nowhere could I see the exact spot through which the water came. So it wasn't until I daubed a half gallon of roofing cement on the entire suspected area that I finally stopped the drip.

My patching of the leak in the roof, in other words, was largely a matter of luck and persistence. But, if you can get under exposed rafters to examine the underside of the roof, you can speed up the job considerably. If it is raining, you can trace back along the wet trail on the ceiling below and the rafters above to the source. On a dry day, with the under-roof area relatively dark, the daylight through even a pinhole will be easy to detect. When you've seen the hole, stick a straw or piece of wire through it. Then on shaky hands and knees, you can clamber around on the roof until suddenly your eyes widen and you exclaim, "I've found it at last!"

From this point on, your course of action depends on the severity of the leak and the type of roofing you are dealing with. I don't mean to infer that asphalt roofs—be they made of shingles, rolls of built-up tar, felt, and gravel—have a close resemblance to a sieve. On the contrary, they're dependable and durable. But over a long period of years the heat of the sun tends to dry them out, and they lose some of the resiliency that enables them to defy the winds, and may develop a hole or rip in strained or weak spots. When this happens on an asphalt shingle roof—the most common type on homes—the easiest approach is a direct attack with roofing cement and galvanized, copper, or aluminum roofing nails. But rips and tears can be prevented by a bit of attention when the shingles begin to show signs of their age by flapping like butterfly wings when buffeted by the wind. Apply a spot of asphalt cement under the center of each shingle tab that flaps. The spot need not be larger than a fifty-cent piece. If flapping occurs all over an old roof, this treatment can be given to all the shingles to temporarily prevent a series of rips and leaks, and hold off the evil day when it will be necessary to get a complete new set of shingles.

However, having located a leak, gently lift the edge of the leaking shingle and trowel a spot of asphalt roofing cement into and over the hole, or under the torn edges. Then press the shingle back in place and drive a couple of roofing nails through the torn edges to prevent further mutilation by the wind. Cover the nails with asphalt to seal nail hole against leaks, and prevent possible corrosion of the nail.

If the shingle is badly torn or worn, more extensive repairs are in order. One way is to insert a new shingle or piece of shingle (they come in strips) under the old one; nail it down; and cement the two together. A better alternative is to cut out the offender, removing the nails from the course above, and nail a new shingle in its stead. Renail the shingles in the course above.

Asphalt shingle roofs that have deteriorated so that water literally pours through them have to be replaced in toto, of course. Drive down all projecting nails and cut out badly torn or buckled shingles. Then apply the new shingles right over the old, after first installing new rake and drip edges, eaves, flashing, and starter strips as directed in the instructions of the shingle manufacturers and the Asphalt Roofing Industry Bureau.

Asphalt roofing that is laid in yard-wide continuous rolls (seen on many summer cottages) is more likely to leak than shingles, and, unfortunately, because it forms a more or less smooth, unbroken surface it is difficult, if not impossible, to make an invisible repair in it. Don't just slap the patching cement on the holes or rips willy-nilly. Trowel it on carefully with a putty knife and pick up the thick, black drips before you kneel on them and smear them all over.

Most leaks in roll roofing occur at the seams. So if leaks aren't obvious and easy to locate, examine the old tar along the seams with extra care and put a smidgen of new cement on all even faintly suspicious places.

Another problem with roll roofing is bulges. These may ultimately cause trouble. So act immediately along one of the following lines: (1) slit the bulge down the middle, butter the underside with asphalt cement, lap the cut edges, press down, nail, and cover with additional cement; or (2) cut the protruding material right out of the roof, smear a two-inch-wide strip of the cement around the edges of remaining material, press a new piece of roll-roofing over the hole and on the cement, nail down on all sides, and cover the nails and edges of the patch with a thick layer of cement.

Sometimes the whole roof—either asphalt roll roofing or shingles—is sadly dried out, and while it isn't leaking at the moment, who knows when it will start? If that's the case, you should apply over the entire surface an asbestos and asphalt roof coating which is like the asphalt cement but thinner. It is worked into the old roofing with a coarse brush, and a gallon covers from 25 to 75 square feet, depending on the age of the roofing and how badly it has dried.

The third kind of asphalt roof is "built-up" of impregnated felt and asphalt layers covered with fine gravel. It is laid only on flat or almost flat roofs, and it, too, gets tired and dry. But another coating of asphalt will bring it back to normal. Sweep the top layer of gravel to one side, brush on the asphalt roof coating (or hot tar), and then sweep the gravel back over the entire surface, adding a little gravel if necessary. The gravel protects the roofing from the sun's heat and from the wear of the wind, rain, and dirt in the air. But some folks think it is a sort of paving, and by continually walking on it force the gravel into the surface of the roofing felt, causing early leaks and trouble. Don't you be guilty of this mistake.

Should you find a hole, follow the same procedure, but use the thick cement rather than the coating at the hole. If the hole is particularly bad, cut out several layers of the old felt and lay in new.

And that's all there is to it... except for two final cautions.

(1) Don't work on a steep roof without some kind of scaffolding or good ladders to support you, or at least a stout rope tied around your middle and secured to a tree on the other side of the ridge pole. And be sure to wear rubber-soled shoes.

(2) Don't tramp on bulging shingles or roll roofing. You may start leaks in an otherwise sound surface.

Our children like our way of life...

RUTH HOLADAY MORGAN

We, like most modern parents, felt that no home would be complete without a family. Our babies arrived without having been consulted as to their wishes in the matter—as all babies do. My husband and I felt that the very fact of this demand invitation placed upon our shoulders, as parents, the responsibility of providing our children with a truly happy home.

To us, a happy home is a way of living. Taste-ful decorations and carefully chosen furniture combine to make a house a thing of beauty. If, within those walls, a mother, father, and their children live together as a family unit—instead of as disinterested entities—sharing their interests and problems, that beautiful house will become a happy home.

There are so many things for children to learn and a great many things for adults to understand. Our family has discovered that by working and playing together, we can all arrive near these goals and have a wonderful time in the doing.

This community of interests also provides the parents with the opportunity to emphasize from the start that there is great pleasure to be derived from work well done. We began with simple, everyday things like dishes. At eighteen months, our daughter liked to set the table. My station was in the kitchen, and Daddy's post was at the dining-room table. Marian carried one plate at a time and, with frequent prompting, soon learned to put the knife, fork, and spoon in the proper places. At the age of three, she stood on chairs to wash dishes, and at the age of four, she was teaching her brother to set the table—and feeling quite important about it, too. Of course, there were accidents, but I must confess that I hold top honors for the clumsiest performance of all. I walked through the dining room doorway carrying a full tray, barked my elbow on the door jamb, and dropped the tray on the rug.

Our early family training produced real results! Now, on a Saturday or Sunday morning, my husband and I awaken to find the table correctly set, fruit juice and cereal on the table, the coffee made, and only the eggs and bacon to be fried by me. Our early risers, Marian, age eight, and Tommy, age six, fully dressed, trot into our bedroom singing "Good Morning to You," help us with our slippers and robes, and conduct us into the dining room. It's always a gay occasion since we have time for discussion and making plans for the day. Never do we admit that we've heard the children creep downstairs and drag a chair across the kitchen floor to reach the dishes in the cupboards. Adults may tire of a game of surprise, but to children there is always something new and unspoiled about repeating the game.

Christmas cookies are another family project. We take two days during the vacation period for the baking and decorating of our cookies. I mix the dough, and the children cut out the numerous trees, bells, reindeer, Santas, and stars. They stack the baked cookies in their appointed sections on the dining-room table. When the cookies have cooled, the four of us sit around the table, each one doing his share of the decorating. For instance, the trees run down the assembly line as follows: Daddy paints the tree green with the mint-flavored powdered-sugar icing, I add the brown trunk, Marian places the snow around its base, and Tommy sprinkles the various colored ornaments all over it. We make attractive packages of our cookies to give to local friends and mail to far away ones. They are truly family-made gifts.

Many a mother claims it ruins her nervous system to have the children underfoot in the kitchen, messing in the flour. She'll be surprised at how little mess there need be, if plenty of newspapers are spread on the floor. If she chooses a day when the washing, ironing, and general cleaning have been completed for the week, her nervous tension will be gone, and she'll feel free to enjoy the fun with her children. Our Christmas cookies are a topic of conversation for the entire month of December—so much do the children look forward to making them.

Speaking of our community kitchen workshop (we call it the "General Assembly Room"), there was our birthday battleship last year. Two more will be made this year, so successful was the first one. Marian announced at a Saturday breakfast conference that she wanted one huge cake for her school birthday party, instead of the customary cup cakes. Casting a critical eye over our assortment of pots and pans, we decided the oval turkey roaster was just the thing for a battleship birthday cake. I did the actual baking, but the whole family gave suggestions and helped with the assembly line. As a result of our combined efforts, we had a battleship of three decks—red, white and blue, flying proud American flags, eight large candles mounted fore and aft for guns, complete with name plates, life savers, coiled ropes on her decks, a trim railing and a blue tissue paper sea on which to float. Our family could have taken at least thirty orders from Marian's enthusiastic classmates.

Our vacations, too, are very much a family affair, literally from start to finish. Every autumn we begin to save our special vacation fund. Daddy contributes the extras he earns on lectures delivered outside the college. I stretch the household budget until there is something to put into the fund each month. The children save money from birthdays, Christmas, the nickels they earn for each "A" on their report card, and often part of their ten-cent weekly allowance. These are truly two months to be remembered the other ten months of the year. The children are excellent travelers. A daily game on our driving days is to see how many things we can remember from the day before. An ice-cream cone is the prize for the one who has absorbed the most geography and history. People ask us why we don't leave the children at home, as many parents do. Honestly, though, we wouldn't enjoy ourselves without them. Half the fun of our vacation is in watching their obvious delight in the new discoveries they've made. Sometimes it's blueberries that grow in heavy clusters like grapes, lobsters evicting snails from their shells, the slow, graceful movements of a red starfish, or the thundering surf on a lonely ocean point that sounds like freight engines humping their cars.

During the time we remain in one place for a week or more on our Canadian jaunts, we have a system of community living that gives Mother a vacation, too. I still do the cooking, but we all share the other duties. Marian makes beds, gathers the laundry, and washes the socks. Tommy helps his father chop and haul wood for the stoves and sweep out the sand. All four of us serve, remove, wash, and dry dishes. Each morning our chores are completed in record time and the children ask, "What are we going to do today?" Whatever we do the four of us do it together, whether it's swimming, hiking through the woods or along the hard sand beaches, digging clams for the evening chowder, gathering berries for cereal and pies, or shopping for boats for Tommy, films for Daddy, Toby jugs for Marian, and bone china cups and saucers for me.

Even at home our indoor activities are supplemented by our outdoor ones, from planting the vegetable and flower gardens, keeping the bird houses and feeding station in repair, training the rambler roses, and watching over a dishpan filled with one hundred tadpoles.

Then there was the Saturday morning that Daddy started a fire and then noticed a tiny black thing wriggling underneath some leaves. He scooped it out and brought into the house a tiny black animal which we decided must be a baby rabbit, although it looked more like a mouse at the moment. Since common sense told us there wouldn't be just one rabbit, Daddy quickly dug among the still un-

No other type liquid antiseptic-germicide tested for the douche is so powerful yet safe to tissues as ZONITE!

Failure to successfully practice complete hygiene (including internal cleanliness) all too often accounts for an increasing coolness on a husband's part. And the pathetic young wife is often left in the dark as to the real reason.

If only a woman would realize the necessity of putting ZONITE in her fountain syringe for womanly charm, married happiness, after her periods, and to combat a womanly offense even graver than body odor or bad breath—an odor which she may not detect herself.

And what a comfort for women to know: no other type liquid antiseptic-germicide tested for the douche is so powerful yet safe to tissues as ZONITE.

Developed By a Famous Surgeon and Scientist

What greater assurance could you want of ZONITE's effectiveness and safety than to know the ZONITE principle was developed by a world-renowned surgeon and scientist. ZONITE is positively non-poisonous, non-irritating, non-burning. Yet SAFE—to tissues. You can use ZONITE as directed as often as needed without injury.

ZONITE'S Amazing Action

ZONITE actually dissolves and removes odor-causing waste substances. It helps guard against infection and kills every germ it touches. You know it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract but you can be sure ZONITE immediately kills every reachable germ and keeps germs from multiplying. Instructions in detail with every bottle.

burned leaves and brought out five more. We fed them for several days and then decided to try an experiment. The original nest was completely burned, but we refilled the hollow with pieces of an old fur coat and placed all six babies in it. The next morning, digging down under the leaves, we found the six babies with well-rounded tummies. From then on, we brought the rabbits into the house for a play period, and put them back to receive their own mother's care at night. Mrs. Rabbit finally decided that she could do without baby sitters and moved the nest to a near-by field. The babies, now big and bouncing, enjoyed our cabbage and lettuce all summer long. We grew an extra supply and were glad to share it.

To add to our family experiences, we've had ducklings to swim in our bathtub at Easter, and later follow the children all over the back yard.

We have special Sunday evenings with a buffet supper before the open fire in the living room, after which the youngsters call for Daddy to get his banjo. The four of us join in a songfest, the repertoire of which includes not only current popular songs, but also those of the vintage of "Daisy, Daisy" and "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," not to mention hymns such as "Rock of Ages."

Thus as a family unit, we share our work and play. My husband and I are trying to give our children something tangible to keep, something they'll never lose in times of adversity—and we're receiving much enjoyment in return. Time and interest are the elements most frequently neglected in the child-parent relationship. Parents are often more lavish with their money than in sharing of themselves.

Although our youngsters are a normal brother and sister whose personalities frequently clash, they seem agreed that we are satisfactory parents. There are numerous occasions on which they, directly or indirectly, tell us so. Recently we heard the following incident.

A third-grade classmate remarked to our young lady, "You're just a professor's daughter. My daddy's rich and we have lots of money."

Marian replied complacently, "That's okay. We spend ours better."

It's moments like this that give parents a deep and wonderful realization of the importance and satisfactions of family life. In a world where everything seems to be a whirl, the only real stability seems to be rooted in close family relationships. We are trying to give our children a happiness that will lie deep within themselves. The results are not in yet, but we feel that we can honestly say — "Our children like our way of life."

studio. Then Tony set out to get the little house in step with the times.

First thing done was to build an addition to the living room of the house to add ten feet to its length. The new wall was made of brick with a fireplace in the center. A section of open shelves on a side wall suggested a division between living and dining area and made it possible to arrange the furniture conversationally.

Storage space in the bedroom was streamlined with a built-in wardrobe making an entire wall. Sliding doors on the closet make the bedroom seem larger by cutting down the openings in the room. The new arrangement also made it possible to build in a linen closet in the bathroom. Cupboards were added to the kitchen.

Decorator Helene Sprong has made the little house rhythmic with color. There's harmony in the big living-dining room, and the pattern of draw curtains used on two walls and curving around the end of the room gives a feeling of movement. The mauve-gray of the curtains, the chartreuse, brown, and red of the caladium-leaf pattern are woven and interwoven in the decorating theme of the room.

Asphalt tile in two shades of brown is used on the floor. Plyboard walls and ceiling are painted light gray. The end wall of common brick has been given an unusual treatment. A thin coat of flat gray paint allows some of the brick color to show, giving the wall warmth. The big gray couch, a lounge chair in red-and-gray checked cotton, and two low chartreuse chairs are all the kind men like to sink into for solid comfort.

There's a comfortable, masculine air in the bedroom, too. It takes on a special jauntiness with plyboard walls, Venetian blinds and draw curtains, all in dark apple-green. The wall of cupboards with sliding doors is inconspicuous. A gray-green cotton carpet, blond oak furniture of modern design are highlighted by tailored cotton plaid spread of gray, yellow, and dark green. The adjoining bath has the same color scheme.

Sometimes Tony turns chef and the compact kitchen becomes a beehive of culinary activity. Silver and dishes are brought out of the big blond oak cupboard. Glass doors lined with silver tea-chest paper conceal how fully the cupboard is packed. The gray glass-topped table with rattan trim is decorative in its own right, so linens are not necessary to make a party festive. The open shelves between the living and dining areas display dancing figures that Tony collects. Sculptured wood dancing figures also make lamp bases by the couch.

So four rooms grew from one. Just a step from the office, too. All in all, a home that has a big outlook on life.

The Fels Hechts found themselves saddled with a gloomy Victorian. They moved the house back next to the barn, scuttled the front porch. The front door, cornices under the eaves, high living-room windows are all touches of the Williamsburg style they used as a model

Photographs by Fred Gund and Joseph W. Molitor

An Eyesore Becomes an Eyeful

The ideas the Hechts brought back from Williamsburg were put to brilliant use in this living room. The paint for the walls was mixed in Williamsburg to insure the proper color. Ash floors are from old mansion, previously came from France. Mantel is stock item from millwork catalogue

The Fels Hechts of Chappaqua recouped in fine style, but for a while it looked as though they'd been stuck—and but good!—with a lemon. After looking for three years for a Colonial house, they found a house and two barns on Roaring Brook Road in Chappaqua. The house was right smack next to the road, and, although it was situated on 10 acres of good land in a highly desirable section, it was so unattractive nobody wanted it under any circumstances. For reasons they're still trying to fathom, the Hechts bought it and went to work trying to make a Colonial out of it.

The first step was to move the house back from the road. But by the time their architect, Gerson Hirsch, had submitted preliminary sketches, they were beginning to feel queasy about the whole project and wondered if they shouldn't go off and have their heads examined. A chance business trip to Williamsburg helped pull the fat from the fire. Taking their cue from this famous restoration project, they went to work with an experienced carpenter as foreman, and let the contracts themselves. The foundation of the barn was in fair shape. They rebuilt the fireplace end of the foundation and pointed up the rest of the masonry. A basement was built alongside and the house moved onto the foundation and joined to the barn. The barn was moved back into line and sheathing added over the old siding completed the major exterior renovation.

The Williamsburg style was used as a guide for the interior. Some of the hardware was found in old houses being torn down. One end of the playroom was paneled with siding from the old barn which still had a slight reddish cast from a coat of red paint it had received years before. The barn rooms are all one step down from the house. The Hechts are now the puffed-up owners of a mid-Victorian house that looks born-and-bred Colonial.

Graceful doorway carries out Williamsburg theme. Stairs at the right lead to basement playroom in barn addition. Entrance and landing recapture the stately quality of Colonial period

Corner cabinet is stock item, holds miniature rooms with accurate reproductions of authentic furniture. End table is pickled pine

Dining room paneling is painted Williamsburg-green. Original floor was scraped down and refinished. Sideboard is old bedroom chest border a wider selection can be made, always with the objective of achieving color harmony with other plants flowering at the same time. It is surprising how effective a clump of only six or eight tulips can be in front of a flowering shrub, provided a variety of the right color has been chosen. Always bear in mind that, after the flowers fade or are cut, the foliage of all bulbs must be allowed to die down naturally. For this reason, they should not be planted where aesthetic or other reasons do not permit this; or on lawn areas unless the grass can be left uncut until the bulb foliage turns yellow in late June or in July. Daffodils never look well planted in straight rows, but a collection of three each of a number of kinds will add much interest to a mixed border of spring flowers. The airy grace of daffodils is especially appealing when they are naturalized under plum, magnolia, and other deciduous trees. Yet few gardeners know how to get the best effect. The secret is to buy as many bulbs as inclination dictates (or means permit)—5,000 is not too many for a half-acre, but 500 would be pleasing—and scatter them carelessly over the area by handfuls. Then plant each bulb where it lies. In spring, they will look as if Nature herself had selected the location. Bulbs so naturalized cannot easily be lifted to permit improvement of the soil; hence an annual fall dressing of bonemeal will do much to keep them vigorous, healthy, and free-flowering.

When planting tulips, daffodils, or hyacinths in a bed or border, a good way is to remove the top five inches of soil, dig into the layer below thoroughly rotted manure or compost enriched with bonemeal or superphosphate (1½ lbs. to 100 sq. ft.), level the surface, set the bulbs 6 to 8 inches apart, and cover them carefully with the soil previously removed, unless tulips are being grown in the same place year after year. In that case, it is wise to cover them with soil brought from another part of the garden to lessen the chances of diseases being carried over.

The proper planting season for spring-flowering bulbs is a much debated subject. Bulb dealers naturally claim that it lasts as long as they have bulbs to sell; and gardeners tend to postpone purchasing and planting, especially if summer lingers late. However, for best results in the region of New York and places of similar conditions, it is safe to say that daffodils and hyacinths should be planted in late October, and tulips around Election Day. In cooler sections, the best planting period will be earlier; farther south, it will be somewhat later. In general, to prevent top growth starting until spring, planting should not be begun much more than six weeks in advance of the first severe fall frost.

North of New York, bulb plantings should be mulched to protect them against alternate thawing and freezing of the soil; but as mice are partial to tulip bulbs, delay covering the beds until the ground has frozen and mice no longer roam. Although in some cases tulips will thrive and even increase if left in the ground, they should, in most regions, be dug when the foliage ripens and stored in a dry, airy place. The same with hyacinths, although in many small gardens they reappear year after year if left undisturbed. Daffodils are less fussy, but preferably should be lifted in early July every second or third year and replanted immediately in rich soil. So handled, they will reward you for years.

Editor's Note—Jessie Walker, our Midwest representative, sends the following facts about the picture on page 38. An effective example of the use of bulbs in the home garden is the tulip border of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Winternitz. Backed by shrubs, it contains 25 bulbs of each of about a score of varieties as identified on the diagram, and is edged with pansies. Later, the border is planted with annuals, such as snapdragons, zinnias, and petunias in the sunny parts, tuberous begonias where it is shady.

The border was made late in the summer of 1949. As advised in Mr. Esson's article, the topsoil was removed; then the subsoil was enriched with rotted cow manure and compost, and covered with a thin layer of sand on which the bulbs were set and covered with good soil mixed with bonemeal. Lester and Selma Winternitz and their 16-year-old son, Steve, spent one fall Sunday at the planting. Because they planned to leave the tulips in the ground for several seasons, they put them 10 to 12 inches deep and, for a better mass effect, 4 inches apart instead of the usual 5 or 6. Each group was placed in accordance with Mrs. Winternitz's carefully worked out plan which aimed at charming waves or drifts of color; also, because the heights of the varieties as given in the catalogue were taken into account, a gradual slope resulted from the front to the tall flowers at the back. The combined shrub, bulb, and summer-flower border was the result of the family's desire for an informal garden effect to replace a stiffly formal tulip bed that has occupied another corner of the yard. It is in full view of the dining room and a recently added barbecue porch.

| 3-4 | Rock garden, border, naturalizing; any available position except lawn. Commoner kinds bloom later than rarer species (* in column 1) | |
| 3-4 | For early color in border, etc. Prefers rather moist soil. E. hyemalis is twice as tall as E. sibirica and has larger flowers | |
| 3-4 | To brighten early spring garden. Plant in deep, cool, woodsy soil. G. nivalis, the common sort; G. elwesii, larger, has a double variety | |
| 3-4 | Plant on grassy slopes, in front of shrubbery, in rock garden, under apple or shade trees. C. lucillae sometimes is pinkish | |
| 4-5 | Give it an intimate, nearby location where its delicate beauty and fragrance can be enjoyed; excellent for the rock garden | |
| 3-4 | Rock garden; in front of shrubs (brilliant blue flowers contrast nicely with forsythia, winter-hazel). Left alone, increases rapidly | |
| 5 | Especially good for woodland planting; also in beds and borders in combination with tulips of harmonizing shades | |
| 4-5 | Both species of snowflake good for borders, rock gardens, woodlands. L. vernum accompanies snowdrops; L. aestivum blooms with tulips | |
| 4-5 | Especially good in rock gardens and focal spots where their early blossoms can be seen and enjoyed. Consult catalogue descriptions | |
| 5-6 | Scatter clumps along borders; use in informal plantings, or naturalize, preferably in shade of tall trees. Effective with Virginia-bluebells (Mertensia virginica). N. poeticus and jonquils are fine near a pool | |
| 4-6 | For rock gardens and front of borders where informality is appropriate. More delicate, less spectacular than later kinds | |
| 5-6 | Effective for formal beds in early spring. Group along front of borders, edge of shrubbery. Best when seen from above | |
| 5-6 | Spectacular massed in formal beds, or in clumps in mixed border combined with other flowers planted among them or as background | |
| 3-4 | Especially good in combination with daffodils; also in rock gardens, or as edging for a border of spring flowers | |
| 4-5 | Odd, interesting, drooping flowers. Good in border or in wild garden. Prefers a moderately moist soil | |
| 5-6 | Especially effective for formal bed and border plantings in massed colors; but can well be used in clumps of 5 to 25 in mixed border. Strongly scented flowers last for some weeks | |
| | Set top of "pip" near surface with roots their full length down. A fine ground cover in shade, under trees, north side of house. Fragrant | |
| 5-6 | All three kinds are tall, vigorous, striking, with thick, grasslike foliage and clean-cut, medium-size, handsome flowers. Useful, long-lasting in border; flowers fine for cutting | |

Be sure of your background

VIRGINIA SCOTT

When Jack and Jill decided to make a garden, they looked up hill and down hill—for a starting point—and found it right in front of them: a thick, full-grown hedge abutting their property at the rear and forming a perfect background. They had only to enclose the two sides and make flower beds against the house.

Years passed, the garden grew lovelier and lovelier, and Jack was proud of the fine hedge that separated his lot from the next one, and gave Jill welcome privacy for relaxation and sun bathing. Then, one day, returning from work, they went into the garden to see if any roses had opened. Some had—and so had the whole back end of their beloved garden! Their neighbor on that side, becoming tired of her garden, had gone on a pruning spree and cut down the tall hedge that rose between them—so she could see into their pretty garden, she said when they protested!

Sounds like wanton destructiveness, doesn't it? But wait a minute. Actually the hedge was hers; for it grew on her side of the property line! They, never stopping to think who owned it, had thought of it as theirs.

Such happenings can occur anywhere, anytime; to you, or to us—as we learned last spring. Deciding to rearrange part of our garden, we were shocked to find that we had apparently ruined it by removing a few shrubs! For a new, decidedly ugly view stared us in the face; a view of back yards and an unkempt stable beyond the meadow. But it was not what we had done in our garden that revealed the offending landscape. The trouble was that, in our absence, an old honey-suckle-draped fence across the road had caught fire and burned to the ground. For years we had been unconsciously using someone else's fence for a garden screen and background. Like Jack and Jill, we had thought of it as ours!

Well, we have learned to provide our own garden boundaries and backgrounds and we suggest that you do the same. See if you are depending on something that isn't really yours, and that may some day be removed without warning. If you are, get busy on your side of the line and establish there, and no farther, something that no one can deprive you of.

POINTERS FOR HOME PAINTERS

How to get smoothest jobs ever with wonderful new NYLON paint brushes!

Dip only half the length of bristles in paint—on overhead work dip to only one inch. Tap off excess paint. Don't scrape off on edge of can.

Nylon brushes hold a full load of paint. And they're ideal for nearly all finishes.

Use the correct brush for each job. Poking large brushes into small corners causes "fingering" of bristles. Cut in around corners with a small brush—one designed for the job.

You can get a set of nylon brushes for every paint job, from touch-up work to wall and roof painting. Nylon paint brushes are made by leading manufacturers.

The next time you paint, try a smooth-painting, easy-to-clean nylon paint brush. You will never use any other kind. They're sold in paint, hardware and variety stores everywhere in all types and sizes.

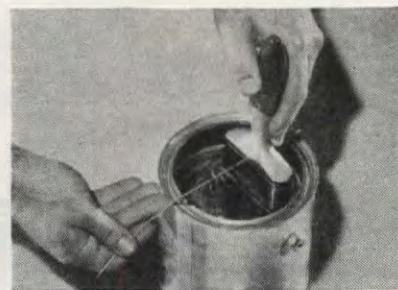

BETTER THINGS FOR BETTER LIVING
... THROUGH CHEMISTRY

To get best results, use a long, steady, even stroke, painting toward the surface already coated.

Nylon bristles don't break off, and an independent research laboratory has found that nylon brushes paint smoother.

After cleaning thoroughly, suspend the brush on wire in turpentine or in linseed oil for storage between jobs. Resting bristles on bottom of can deforms them and gums up the tips.

You can clean nylon brushes quickly and easily. Work out paint on newspaper, clean with thinner, rinse with soap and water. Then comb and wrap for storage.

The floor you need for a basementless house

THERE's a special floor problem in a basementless house because it's usually built with a concrete slab in direct contact with the ground. It's a problem that's easy to solve with floors of Armstrong's Asphalt Tile.

When concrete is directly on the ground, it draws up moisture from the earth like a wick. As it rises, the moisture dissolves alkali in the concrete and brings it to the surface. Although the moisture may not be noticeable, it's always present to some degree. This alkaline moisture causes most flooring materials to deteriorate—but it has no harmful effect on Armstrong's Asphalt Tile.

This floor can be used over radiant heated subfloors, too. It does not restrict the flow of heat and is not affected by the floor temperatures of most radiant heating systems.

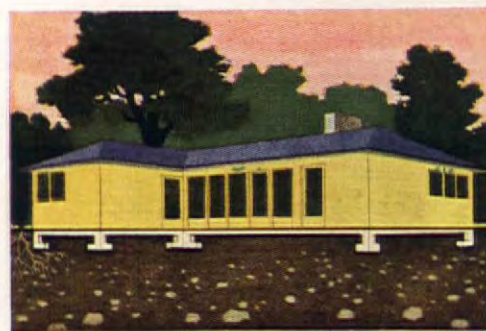

Floors of Armstrong's Asphalt Tile can be styled in countless ways to fit the decoration of any room. Since they're put down tile by tile, any of the wide variety of handsome colors can be combined to create distinctive designs, or rich effects can be obtained by using a single color for the entire area.

You'll never need to refinish this floor because the colors are built in. They go all the way through each tile and will stay beautiful year after year. The durability of Armstrong's Asphalt Tile has been proved through long service in busy stores and office buildings where conditions are much more severe than they ever are in a home.

Easy housekeeping is another advantage you'll enjoy with Armstrong's Asphalt Tile Floors. Dust and dirt can be swept up in a jiffy from the lustrous surface. Occasional washing and waxing is all the care needed to restore the original colorful beauty.

The low cost of Armstrong's Asphalt Tile is another point in its favor. Your Armstrong flooring merchant will be glad to give you an estimate that will prove its economy and help you plan smart floor designs for every room.

WHEN A CONCRETE SUBFLOOR is in direct contact with the ground, as in the basementless house shown above, you need a floor of Armstrong's Asphalt Tile. This modern flooring is not harmed by the alkaline moisture that rises through the concrete. It will stay beautiful year after year. The colors won't fade because they're alkali resistant, won't wear off because they go all the way through each tile. With all these features, Armstrong's Asphalt Tile is a low-cost floor.

Free Booklet — "Armstrong's Floors for Basementless Buildings and for Use Over Radiant Heated Subfloors," gives you all the facts you'll need to select the most practical and economical floor for a basementless house. For your copy, write Armstrong Cork Company, Floor Division, 5010 Plum Street, Lancaster, Penna.
