Beautiful basement rooms begin with this floor

ENTERTAINING is more fun and less work in an attractive basement room. Use your imagination in decorating, and your room can be as beautiful as this one—inspired by a collection of menus from famous restaurants. Put down a floor of Armstrong's Asphalt Tile, and your basement will be both attractive and practical.

Basement floors present a special problem because the concrete is directly on the ground. The alkaline moisture in this type of floor ruins most flooring materials, but Armstrong's Asphalt Tile was developed especially to withstand such conditions. It will stay beautiful because alkaline moisture can't harm it.

Armstrong's Asphalt Tile is a tough floor that can take hard usage. Spilled foods and beverages can be wiped up without leaving a trace. Cigarette burns are easy to remove.

Dancing feet won't mar the lustrous surface. Dust and dirt can be swept up easily and occasional washing and waxing keep it new looking for years.

The bright, clear colors in Armstrong's Asphalt Tile make it an unusually attractive floor. Armstrong's exclusive swirl-grained marbling adds to the over-all beauty of the floor, helps to conceal tracked-in dirt until it can be swept away. There's almost no limit to the way colors can be put together because Armstrong's Asphalt Tile goes down block by block—your floor design can be as distinctive as you wish. The multicolored floor in this basement shows how well the colors harmonize with each other.

With all its special qualities, Armstrong's Asphalt Tile is an economical floor from every point of view. The cost is reasonable, and it can be installed without any special preparation. Your Armstrong flooring merchant will be glad to show you the large variety of colors, help you work out a floor design, and give you a cost estimate.

Individual blocks of Armstrong's Asphalt Tile are laid in whatever design you want for your floor. Colors can be selected to complement any room decorations.

Replace dirt-clogged furnace filters NOW!

It costs you less to change 'em twice a year than to forget 'em . . . even once!

DUST STOP*

AIR FILTERS

The "original equipment" filter in the best warm-air furnaces.

*FIBERGLAS and Dust-Stop are trade-marks (Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.) of Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corporation for products made of or with fibers of glass.

Important Information

UP TO 96 HOUSEFULS OF AIR A DAY pass through the air filters and blower of your forced-warm-air heating system during the heating season.

DUST AND LINT FROM ALL THIS AIR is trapped by the Fiberglas Dust-Stop® Air Filters inside the furnace. You get cleaner air to breathe, save dusting and cleaning. Your furnishings, walls and woodwork stay clean longer.

IN TIME, FILTERS GET CLOGGED with several times their own weight in dirt. Then less air gets through. Your burner and blower work overtime trying to keep you warm, but some rooms may still be chilly.

CLEAN FILTERS, that take only 2 minutes to install, let air flow through freely. You get greater comfort throughout the house—and burn less fuel to get it.

WHAT YOU SAVE IN FUEL will pay the small cost of Dust-Stop Filters over and over again. It's good economy to change filters twice a year—oftener if you live in a dusty area.

YOU CAN BUY GENUINE DUST-STOP FILTERS from your furnace man, hardware dealer or department store. Look at your filters now. Replace if they are dirty.

FREE BOOKLET tells facts you should know about heating: what to look for if you're buying or modernizing, how to get better heat with less fuel. Write for "How to Get More of the Comforts of Home." Address: FIBERGLAS, Dept. 8-K, Toledo 1, Ohio.

WHY WE MAKE THIS UNUSUAL NEW MEMBERSHIP OFFER

Each month publishers submit their best books to our editors—from which one is selected for presentation to Guild members. Although nearly all Guild books later become widely discussed top best-sellers, Guild members pay only the bargain price of $2.00 each—and receive their books at the same time the publisher's own edition goes on sale at $3.00, $3.50 or even more. Because so many members know that Guild books give them the kind of reading entertainment they want, hundreds of thousands take each selection—even though they need only accept four a year from among the thirty or more regular selections and alternate books offered.

How the Literary Guild Book Club Operates

Each month during the year you will receive without charge a copy of "Wings"—the Guild's attractive, informative book-review magazine which describes the current Guild selection. It is not necessary to accept a Guild book every month. If you do not want a selection, you may return the special form provided and specify any one of the alternate books offered thereon—or simply indicate you do not wish to receive any book at all that month. There are no dues or membership fees of any kind except for the Literary Guild books you decide to purchase.

Bonus Books Free to Members

As a Guild member you will also receive, free, a beautiful, specially prepared Bonus Book for each four Guild books you purchase—and if you decide to continue as a member you can obtain an additional Bonus Book free with each four selections, or alternates, you accept thereafter. Each month the decision to take a selection is up to you, but the amazing record of the Guild during the past twenty years guarantees that you will always receive a new best-seller—a thrilling, entertaining story. No wonder the Literary Guild Book Club is the largest book club in the world, with almost a million members!

... BARBARA STICKNEY SMITH once had the good fortune to break an antique cup. You'll see what we mean by "good" fortune if you turn to page 52, for her excursions to antique shops in an attempt to match that cup were the beginning of the splendid porcelain collection she shares with us in this issue. A member of an old California family, she has taught school in various parts of the state, and was an originator of Toy Loan Libraries for underprivileged children.

... RAYMOND P. KORBOBO, as Assoc. Extension Specialist in Ornamental Horticulture at Rutgers Univ. since 1946 (having previously been in the army and, for four years, designer with two landscape firms), teaches home landscaping through lectures, radio, television. His key interests, he says, outside of his wife, who helped make his "Plan Animator" (see page 74), are his garden, licking crab grass, his car, pool and box hockey in his basement, and "just plain people."

... DORIS BRIAN, our new Copy Director, started as an art historian. She picked up a couple of Fine Arts degrees, specializing in architecture and the decorative arts, then settled down to the editing of art periodicals. During the past decade, she divided her time between art criticism and serving on the staff of national magazines which, like THE AMERICAN HOME, deal with the very fine art of good living. Her hobby? Trying to make Husband Micky like her cooking.

... CARROLL B. COLBY finds time for the rich family life described on page 47 between an impressive assortment of activities. Children's books and TV programs are one side of his career. He is also an aviation specialist, having edited several aviation magazines. How did it start? He studied art, did a stint with the U.S. Customs Service, then learned to fly. Combining his interests, he has written and illustrated countless articles on aviation and other subjects.

... CAROL MOORE, aged 16, is one of our youngest contributors on record. This creative miss designed one of those dreamy holiday window decorations. Of course, she plans to make art her career, though she's still a student at Mineola (N.Y.) High. Her second love is music, an interest she shares with a talented brother who plays clarinet and sax in his own dance band. Along with art, music, and school studies, she keeps house for her father and brother.

The ABC's of Hydro-Flo^{*} Heating

A simple explanation of why this forced hot water system can provide so much comfort on so little fuel

RADIANT WARMTH AS SOOTHING AS SUNSHINE

YEAR 'ROUND HOT WATER

LOW OPERATING COST

B & G Hydro-Flo Heating requires just three basic units. They can be installed on any hot water heating boiler, new or old.

First, the Booster Pump. When the thermostat calls for heat, the Booster rushes hot water through the system. Heat is supplied instantly and smoothly modulated to meet every change in outdoor temperature!

That's why B & G Hydro-Flo Heating costs so little to operate. It matches fuel consumption to weather conditions.

Next, the Flo-Control Valve. It shuts off circulation when there is no call for heat. This prevents overheating—helps keep your home at a uniform temperature.

And finally, the Water Heater—heated by the same boiler that heats the house. It provides all the hot water you can use for kitchen, laundry and bath—winter and summer!

With B & G Hydro-Flo Heating you have a choice of baseboard panels, convectors, radiators, or concealed radiant panels. Ask your architect or heating contractor.

Send for free booklet

Every home builder or modernizer should read "Capture the Sun with B & G Hydro-Flo Heating." It will show you the way to have genuine winter comfort with radiant, sunny warmth.

Look at the G-E picture... and believe your own eyes

MILLIONS now can enjoy television — and don't know it! Distance from a station is not necessarily a handicap, nor hills or valleys or big buildings — if you have the right set. In side-by-side tests with other leading brands, the G-E picture proved outstanding in areas where good reception was thought to be almost impossible. So see the G-E picture and believe your own eyes. Look at this lovely console in genuine mahogany veneers with 17-inch rectangular black tube. Swirl-figured doors and concealed casters.

General Electric Co., Electronics Park, Syracuse, N. Y.

Prices range from $249.95 to $775 including Federal Excise Tax. Installation and picture tube protection plan extra. Prices subject to change without notice. Slightly higher West and South.

still have to watch their pennies and who are always anxious to find some way to have an ideal home without expensive furnishings. How much fun it can be to paint furniture yourself . . . and to watch beauty come from hard work and imagination. Anyone can do it, but with a wonderful magazine such as yours, it's so much easier and the ideas start forming the minute I turn to the first page of each new issue.

—MRS. C. W. HOPKINS, JR.

Dear Editor:

While reading your July story "We're Homeless and We Love It," I became so mystified as to who would ever enjoy reading such a fantastic tale—except as I did, for sheer amazement. Your magazine usually encourages young people to build and live in private homes, and I think such an article will either greatly discourage the bride and groom or hasten the selling of small houses and make many a young dream fall through.

I was interested in the article mostly because we have much in common (as far as material things are concerned). I have a very large lot, a beautiful new dream house, three of the largest breed collies, and two loving, active children who enjoy their home as much as their mother and father do.

Many of the Lowes' problems faced us too, but we just loved our place so much that we bore all the hard work until we became used to it. We enjoy big parties, lots of company, things tidy, and cleanliness too, but it can all be overdone until you're miserable. I agree a beautiful new home inside and out looks better when it is clean, weeded, and unused. But only down-to-earth people who love to live would rather see a place lived in, used, and even untidy at times.

We work hard together on our beautiful home . . . but we have a system by which we help each other. . .

—MRS. WILLIAM E. SNYDER, JR.

It isn't expensive to add an extra room like this

Would you like to transform your wasted attic into a bright extra bedroom like this? It's easy to do with Armstrong's Temlok®—and the cost is surprisingly low.

Armstrong's Temlok is a strong fiberboard that's an interior finish material and an insulation, too. It's made in big boards like those used on the walls of this room and in the smart tiles that form the ceiling. Both are easily nailed in place over a simple wood framework or they can be cemented to plaster. The job is so simple you can do most of the work yourself. When you're finished, there's no painting to be done, for Temlok's smooth surface is applied at the factory. You can either choose the Light Ivory shown here or the new Snow White. They're both wonderful backgrounds for any color scheme, and will stay new-looking for years.

The extra room you build with Armstrong's Temlok will be more comfortable, too, for Temlok insulates against summer heat and winter cold. It also reduces noise. You can see samples of Temlok and get all the details on this practical material at the lumber yard or building supply store in your community.

SEND FOR FREE BOOKLET, "How to Remodel an Old Home." It's packed full of information on methods and materials, illustrated in color. Write Armstrong Cork Company, 5111 Vine Street, Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

How We Work

In New York . . .

It isn't only how we work, it's the when and where that keeps us on our toes—that is where you have to be if you want to be sure that your eyes are always open! Take our merchandise stories, for instance. They're usually born at a market, which is a vast building, located anywhere from the West coast to the East, where manufacturers bring their wares together for store buyers to inspect. We go right along, from booth to booth, floor to floor, picking things to show you. Up at the top of the page there you see Table Merchandise Editor Gertrude Brassard in the center. It was at the China and Glass Market in New York, in July.

But Gertrude looks pretty happy—not much like a girl who has just lost her baggage while rushing up from a demonstration down South in order to be able to "make" the Gift Show. With her are Dais D. Beene of Miller and Rhoades of Richmond, Va., and president Charles W. Carlson of U. S. Glass.

But to find out what makes things tick, we go straight to the source. Right below there is Home Furnishings Editor Gertrude Dixon at the Armstrong Cork plant, inspecting linoleum in the making so she'll know just how to tell you to use it.

(Martin Goshkey shows her.)

"Dixie" assures us that what she learned was well worth the long trip that she made out to the plant.

See what a lighted valance can do for your living room

STRETCH a lighted valance across your living room wall-to-wall and you'll be surprised at how the room seems to grow in size. How it glows with new beauty. How colors stand out in draperies and furnishings, as ceiling and walls are bathed with soft, cool, uniform light from concealed fluorescent lamps.

It's one of the newest ideas in home decoration! Confined first to the most expensive interiors, lighted valances are now being offered at popular prices to fit any home.

In the interior above, the lighted valance is combined with portable lamps in a typical G-E Light Conditioning recipe:

WHAT TO USE: 20, 25 or 40-watt G-E fluorescent tubes end-to-end to fit valance length.

HOW TO USE: Wall-to-wall as above, or over doors or windows. Valance can be up to 10" deep.

For best results, be sure your lamps are marked "G-E".

NOW, MORE VALUE than ever with General Electric fluorescent lamps! Recent improvements make them more efficient, longer lasting, with better color and uniformity, less end-blackening.

LESS GLARE, SOFTER SHADOWS, are the result of using General Electric's new 100-watt White lamp. Revolutionary new inside "Q" coating, product of G-E research, makes the difference. 100-watt White lamp 21¢ plus tax.

GIVE CEILING FIXTURES new beauty with General Electric's new 50-GA lamps! They direct part of the light upward, soften the downward light. For fixtures where bulbs are used in base-up position. 50-GA lamp 40¢ plus tax.

STOP BULBSNATCHING! Don't rob one light socket to fill another. New G-E 4-lamp package makes it easy to keep spare bulbs on hand. Four 60-watt lamps . . . 56¢ plus-tax. Four 100-watt lamps 64¢ plus tax.

FREE "LIGHT CONDITIONING" RECIPE BOOKLET. Brand new! Contains 22 Light Conditioning recipes. Covers every room in the house. Specifies bulbs, fixtures, measurements. Write Lamp Div., General Electric Company, Dept. 166-AH-11, Nela Park, Cleveland 12, Ohio.

In New Orleans . . .

At the bottom of page 16, that's Edith Ramsay, Home Equipment Editor, up to a night's worth of work at the Housewares Show in Atlantic City. She could hardly wait for you to see what she found so she set up a miniature studio right there (she had to borrow the sheet from the Foley Food Mills) and just made the deadline for the October issue. With her are photographer Johnny Krafft of Hess Studios and our own Bob Houseman who went along to help stage the pictures. After a whole week of this kind of thing, Edie came back to New York and settled down—in a plane bound for New Orleans! She went to talk to home economists of the Southwestern Gas Association's workshop—about 100 girls who conduct cooking schools in 14 states. As good cooks, they want to know about good equipment, and our Miss R. was the gal to tell them.

There she is at the top of the page, attending a New Orleans luncheon with Robert R. Suttle, Managing Director of Southwestern (he hails from Dallas), Arvilla Patison of the Lone Star Gas Co. of Fort Worth, and Veep S. L. Drumm of New Orleans Public Service Co. Below you see Mary Monze, our Decoration Editor, setting up the picture we reproduce on page 118. This is the way most of our merchandise "shots" are taken. First we see the things, thousands of them, at the markets. We pick and choose, and make our notes. Then we come home and plan stories around the stars which excite us so much that we feel you must see them. Finally, we build a whole room around our choices—just like a stage set. In this case, "Becky" built hers at the Summer-grade show room. Bob Houseman is with her, and officiating at the camera is the photographer whose name you often see on our pages, F. M. ("Demmie") Demarest.—THE EDITORS

TITANIUM Rutile

The New WONDER GEM of the century . . .

For the first time in history and as a result of intensive experimentation and research on a vital military project brilliant scientists of one of America's largest corporations suddenly hit upon the solution of the ages. The secret of how to crystallize in the laboratory a gem with a refractive index higher than and a dispersion factor greater than a DIAMOND was DISCOVERED. The discovery is TITANIUM RUTILE so widely acclaimed by leading reportorial mediums such as Reader's Digest and The Saturday Evening Post.

This is the same atom-age wonder-gem development widely sold at much higher prices under various colorful trade names.

REFRACTIVE INDEX ABOUT 10% HIGHER THAN DIAMONDS

Compare: Refractive Index of Rutile is between 2.62 and 2.90 as compared to the diamond's 2.42. Dispersion of Rutile ranges between 0.155 and 0.205 in comparison to the diamond's 0.025.

(Actual Photograph of Our Product)
You are living in an age of miracles. As you know, atoms are being split. Actual basic materials are being re-arranged. Fantastic as it may seem to the layman, the secret of what has formerly been referred to as the DIAMOND is now known beyond a shadow of a doubt.

YOU PROFIT. No longer need you invest large sums of money in a tiny stone the value of which is determined largely by scarcity and control. YOU can enjoy the beauty and prestige and the envy of your friends with a stone that no one of lesser ability than a REAL JEWELER working with a magnifying glass in his eye under good light can detect as not being a real DIAMOND.
A handsome engagement ring made of our remarkable gem presented to any girl will inspire her devotion. The hundreds of dollars thus saved will go far towards building a happy, permanent home. Hudson Gem Co. sells RUTILE only in the cut stones. Each stone is perfectly cut with full 58 facets per BRILLIANT stone. By law we cannot refer to our products as DIAMONDS so we ask you to order them in the three most popular DIAMOND shapes namely the round or BRILLIANT, the oblong or EMERALD and the oval or MARQUISE cuts. You may order these stones for setting by your local, friendly, trusted jeweler who will be glad to verify your purchase.

We do not sell mountings nor do we go in for costly catalogues nor expensive time payment plans. You get the benefit of direct to consumer possession of a valuable product which you can then have mounted and SAVE THE MONEY YOURSELF.

IMPORTANT NOTE: The Hudson brand is finished with our exclusive process. More fire, more sparkle and more durable. Thus—10 YEAR REPLACEMENT GUARANTEE. Accept no substitute regardless of price. Deal with only one source—be sure. UNCONDITIONAL MONEY BACK GUARANTEE. 30 DAY TRIAL IN YOUR HOME. You are the SOLE JUDGE. In this advertisement you are assured that if for any reason whatever you are dissatisfied with your purchase from us you may, within 30 days, return your purchase for 100% CASH REFUND WITHOUT QUESTION.
Order with confidence. Select the shape you want, either BRILLIANT or EMERALD or MARQUISE shapes. Then select the number of carats you want, either 1, 1 1/2, 2, 2 1/2, 3, 3 1/2, 4, 4 1/2, 5, 5 1/2, 6, 6 1/2, 7, 7 1/2, 8, 8 1/2, 9, 9 1/2, or 10. Remember BRILLIANT is full 58 facets. Check this with your trusted jeweler. Price $10.00 per carat. Add 20¢ Fed. Tax. Send Check or Money Order (do not send cash). Add 50¢ post. & handling. Write Dept. AH-11.

Age 25 "I was just drifting along . . . hopeful for the future, saving what I could. Then Bill Henson explained how he planned his retirement income—and also protected his family."

"That same day I learned from an older friend how retirement income was working for him. Think of it—in his early fifties—he was nearing retirement and lifelong security!"

"Those talks convinced me . . . I 'joined up.' Today, at 55, my wife and I have retired to a carefree life in our cottage by the sea. Money? Enough for most all of our needs . . . Penn Mutual Retirement checks every month!"

Start Your Own Traditions

In our family, traditions are important. They are also a heck of a lot of fun. In fact, the traditions that are fun are the most important to us, come to think of it. Why not begin a few in your own family? Now, I don't mean such standard traditions as turkey at Thanksgiving or a tree at Christmas. Those are routine. The traditions we have fun with are those that sort of sneaked up on us. The kind of thing we find we have been doing for so long that we are pleasantly stuck with it.

For example: Some years ago we were at a loss for a new Christmas card idea. So we bought some big manila envelopes, wrote "Same to YOU" on all the cards we had received the year before, and sent them whence they came. This solved our problem—and started one of our pleasantest traditions. The next Christmas one of those cards came back to us once more, this time with a funny note. The same card has been traveling for twelve years. It kept going all through the war, sometimes to far and frantic places, a humble reminder that even international hate can't stop interfamilial friendship. A card like that means a lot more than the fanciest one you could buy.

Even very little things can become pretty fair-sized traditions if you give them time enough. When we were first married, my wife and I took time one spring to drive to a swamp just to hear the spring "peepers" again. The next year we went back. We still do, but now the youngsters go along too, getting as much kick out of the "peeper pilgrimage" as we do.

It's often the seemingly trivial family tradition which would be missed the most if it were suddenly stopped. Take for instance our time-worn custom of using the same centerpiece for everybody's birthday cake, every year. When our daughter Susan, now 15, had her first birthday, we got a big, pink, candy rose candle holder for the middle of her cake. For fun, we saved it and used it again the next year. That rose keeps coming back. It is faded and experimentally nibbled, but you may be sure that it is as important to a family birthday as the cake itself.

Then there's the family skeleton. Now, a family will usually hate to admit to a skeleton in its closet. We not only admit to a traditional ghost, but are quite proud of him. He's a handy character at times, too. None of us can seem to recall just when or how he started, it was so long ago, but "Charlie" is still with us. He occasionally signs funny holiday greeting cards, or leaves little unexpected gifts for no particular reason between Christmas and birthdays, and frequently and (apparently) good-naturedly takes the blame for cellar lights left on all night, and disappearing doughnuts. As a matter of fact, "Charlie" got me out of a hole just a few days ago, when I personally slipped up on another small-fry tradition. Freddie, seven, shed a tooth which of course had to be parked under his pillow overnight for the "little people" to exchange for cash. It turned out that the "little

There's a "New" Color in Decorating

Mocha, driftwood, café au lait—no matter what you call it, it gives your house a subtle background which looks new, wears wonderfully

It's not the tired tan or the drab taupe of the twenties. It's not the "safe" color that "goes with everything" (the eternal refuge of the color coward). It won't go with everything; it takes smart handling. But it's a surprisingly versatile color that we've seen cross-country again and again in smart homes.

It comes in countless shades and tints. Sometimes it looks gray, sometimes chocolate, according to the way the light strikes it, or the pigmentation of the particular mixture. We hate to give it a name, because it already has so many, but at its loveliest it's a smoky sort of soft brown, like powdered cocoa spilling from a tin.

Marion Heuer, the dynamic Chicagoland decorator, planned the living room at the top of page 49 for Mr. and Mrs. Martin Sandler of Glencoe. Study the fireplace in this room and you'll know the vintage of the house. Mrs. Heuer developed a largely monochromatic scheme around the color she calls "suntan," played it on walls and floor to unify the room and soften the dated architectural features. The fireplace, originally white enamel, was painted the wall color, then rubbed with a cloth to bring out an antiqued effect. Various shades of brown appear in the chairs, the love seat, and the small patterned chintz at the windows. The result is warm, gracious, with a contemporary look in spite of the fact that not a single architectural change was made.

Kathleen Duffy—Mrs. G. A. Duffy of Los Angeles—planned the interiors of her home with color sense that would do credit to a professional co-ordinator. She chose this color—she calls it "elephant gray"—and made it a master plan for the whole house.

In her living room and dining room at right, she uses The Color for walls; the paint is washable to resist the fingerprints of two rugged, small boys. The sofa is upholstered in a deeper shade, a sturdy chocolate basketweave wool. She has had the fabric quilted to give it additional wearing qualities and style. Curtains in the living room are beige with valances of brown cloth. The green carpet throughout these areas is neither dark enough to show footprints and crumbs, nor light enough to show spots.

Mrs. Duffy's bedroom glows with warm color. Here the walls have the deeper tinge of milk chocolate; the spread and quilted headboard are cocoa. She combines them both with a marvelous pink linen and accents of porcelain white. Only the curtains and the white rug belong in the perishable category, and they are both tubbable. All in all, as fresh and pretty a bedroom as we've seen.

If you're thinking of remodeling, don't miss the talents of these wonder-working tones. The Sandlers, and the Arons, whose homes we show on the next page, both live in houses they wanted to re-do completely. They started with the interiors, and found that The Color was so good for unifying broken wall spaces, for making small rooms seem larger, that structural changes weren't needed.

Photograph by B. Goodnow—Kranzlen Studio

Marion Heuer calls it "sun tan" and uses it in a monochromatic room. Carpet, sofa, draperies, even lamp shades, are tones of brown, cued by background color and spiked—just a little in printed fabrics—with yellow and green

Photograph by Géorge de Gennaro

Kathleen Duffy calls it "elephant gray"

a pinker version of The Color, one with gray overtones. She used it for handsome practicality on every wall in her house. In the living room, she balanced it equally with green; in her dining room, left, she added a portion of yellow; in her bedroom, she used several shades of it monochromatically with pink

"New" Color in Decorating (Begins on page 48)

Here is a tip if you want color to flow from room to room to room without an iota of monotony. These color twins are very different. They share the same key tone, but notice that bittersweet and yellow, merely suggested in the living room, are strong in the dining room; that green, chief foil in one room, is barely whispered in the other. But they're carefully related—don't miss that living-room sofa cushion, made of the dining-room print. In the living room, soft-toned solids are played up with textural contrast. In the dining room, the print's the thing, and it's the colors which contrast. Small windows were space-breaking bugaboos in the dining room, too—turned into assets by matching wallpaper and draperies, a variation of the trick used in the living room. But perhaps the most remarkable part of this little color masterpiece, which is the Winnetka home of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Arons, is the fact that it was a color job only: none of the furniture was new, and the color key came from the carpet they bought with the house.

Photographs by Kranzten Studio

Here the color is "wood hue." On the walls, underfoot, it's a foil for bittersweet accents, mustard yellow tweed

Study these two rooms together, for they're part of a single color story which shows what subtle wonders you can work if you give yourself a background of those new woodsy tones. In this shade, decorator Marion Heuer calls it "wood hue," and uses it to solve some touchy, and very prevalent, problems. Two tiny rooms, each with badly broken-up wall spaces, stood in full view of one another. The trick was to increase the apparent size of each and to blend them together without being repetitious. Used with skill, the color did it, making living room and dining room distinct variations of a single color theme. The living room itself looks larger than it is because this single, restful color used for walls and carpet lets boundaries fade away—the room feels bigger. Then, that serene fireplace wall, originally cut up into a lot of small areas and so typical of houses built during the twenties, took some doing. Painting fireplace, over mantel, and bookcases one color helped, but the triumph was draping the dinky windows in a handsome, heavy fabric of the same shade.

Cups and Sorcerers

BARBARA LENOX

When you've sipped coffee from a fine porcelain cup—smooth as silk, hard as glass, and so fine you can see light through it—did you ever stop to realize what an aristocrat this prince of potteries is? Yet kings once competed with each other, not only in acquiring porcelain, but in manufacturing it. The patrician examples at your right are from the collection of Mrs. Barbara Stickney Smith of Hollywood who enjoys her hobby on two counts—she loves to explore the history of each item, and she delights in living with these really great objects of art.

See why for yourself: (1) Old trembleuse cup from Berlin got its name from guard which kept cup from shaking and spilling its contents on the long way to the table. Cover helped, too. (2) In 1770, Frederick the Great, who owned the Berlin porcelain works, gave this to the Russian royal family. Portrait is of Grand Duke Paul Petrowitz. (3) A regal Viennese cup with 24K gold decorations and a miniature version of an important painting. Empress Maria Theresa bought the Vienna factory in 1744. (4) The porcelain of China started the vogue in Europe. These typically Chinese examples date from the reign of K'ang K'ei (1662-1723). And how did porcelain come to be the royal rage in 18th-century

The story goes that a German alchemist discovered the secret of Chinese porcelain in some discarded wig powder.
What he found was worth a gold mine

A good house is rich in poetry as well as function. This one, built for a naturalist, seems to grow on its Westchester hillside. Its roof—half flat, half gentle slope—follows the land's contour. Its walls are as at home as the trees. Thanks to its vast areas of glass, it can shelter its occupants without ever shutting them in. The landscape appears to be untamed: lawn and planting are simple in this forest setting

Built from the Inside Out

Do you love both the country and the compact convenience of a city apartment? Then here is a house full of ideas for you to study

ARCHITECTS: GIBBONS & HEIDTMANN

William Bridges is a wildlife specialist, ex-newspaperman, and editor of the New York Zoological Society's publications. Those activities have plenty to do with this house, though he didn't know they would. In fact, when he bought part of a wooded hillside in Pleasantville, N.Y., Indiana-born Bill had a very different house in mind—a nostalgic, traditional house, filled with pot-bellied stoves, ancient rockers, beds with old blue panes. He ended up with this, a house built to fit his way of life, but so good it would work well for any small family really in love with the out-of-doors. And Bill Bridges thinks it's perfect. Here is how it came about.

Photographs by Richard Averill Smith

House is almost as open as carport. Great horizontal window belongs to the kitchen, vertical one to the living room, and you can see clerestory on top. Well-coated Douglas fir walls remain handsome

After they bought their land, the Bridges listed their requirements to architect Kenneth Gibbons. They wanted:

1. To live in their woods—even when they were indoors. The house had to admit a maximum of air, light, and view.
2. A minimum of stairs to climb.
3. A compact house—as easy to care for as their New York City apartment. No wasted hallways, no surplus walls.
4. An enormous living room—without adding too much to the cost of the house.
5. A snug, warm study, which looked as if it were right in the open, so Bill could feel he was working outdoors.
6. Room for 300 linear feet of bookshelves (measure your own and you'll see that that's a lot).
7. Good storage space.

8. As low a budget as possible without sacrificing quality. That list totted up to a modern house—unconventional, full of glass walls, and planned from the inside out. Here, point for point, is how the Bridges' requirements were met:

1. The house doesn't fence them in. Every room has over-size windows, and the living room (page 136) is flooded with light on all four sides: its whole west wall is glass, it has a north window, the east wall is topped by a clerestory strip, and it gets light from the study's south-facing window. The living room's ceiling seems to float above it, for the roof here is supported by steel beams and columns—the window

HOW IT WORKS ON PAGE 136

Furniture that Works All Over

Photographs by Dale Rooks

THESE WORK WHEREVER YOU DINE

● Start out with a love of a dining table and chairs with more than a hint of the Far East in their design, and where will they serve you best? You're apt to put them in the hallway, living room, or dining room. We found them good in all three when we decided to test the versatility of this new dark-toned Koa-wood group. With leaves down, flanked by a pair of chairs, you couldn't ask for a more attractive hallway arrangement. And, because the top is just 9 in. deep, there's no traffic problem here. The same arrangement will work just as well on the living room wall nearest the kitchen. The deep, 24-in. leaves allow plenty of room for chairs and long masculine legs. Moved into the dining room, the table opens to an adequate 42 x 57 in. which will seat six comfortably. There's a tricky little interlocking device which hooks two of these tables together when you're entertaining ten or so. The table is about $115, the side chair $29.50, and the arm chair $39.50.

DOUBLE DRESSER AT WORK THREE WAYS

● Smoothly designed, the double dresser is perfectly at home in the living room. Here, it's topped by a 42-in., two-shelf cabinet that's pretty adaptable itself. As shown, the two pieces stack up to a handsome, impressive unit for that difficult long, high wall. Where height is not needed, the double dresser could go it alone as a wall piece, and the cabinet as a 30-in. high bookcase. Dresser is 52 in.

wide, 19 in. deep, and 31 in. high—a wonderful size for the average bedroom. We like the decorative effect of the tall chest with it, the three small pictures lined up with the top of the shadow-box mirror to unify the group. There's no hint of the boudoir when this same piece moves into the dining room to serve as a buffet. The dresser is about $169, the cabinet about $87, mirror, $40.

LITTLE TABLE WORKS IN EVERYWHERE

● On the designer's drawing board, this little table with its 18-in. square top, 24-in. deep lower shelf was labeled "night table." But we put it in a hallway to hold a telephone, found the drawer deep enough to house a good, thick directory. And its 24-in. height couldn't be handier for note taking.

Back in the bedroom, where it's supposed to belong, the lower shelf holds a clock-radio, leaving the top free for a good-sized lamp. The interesting pattern of the "V" legs tempted us to turn it sideways, put two together at the end of the sofa. And it worked. It seems everything but the bed can switch decoratively and practically from room to room. Table, about $45.

There's really double duty in this 42-in. high chest that's 32 in. wide, 19 in. deep. Moderately scaled, like the rest of this group, it not only serves its primary function as a storage unit, but will fit into most any room scheme. Priced at about $139. Complete group available in lighter-than-honey finish, also

SUZANNE TRIBOULET

As it happens, this house is in St. Louis, Mo., but it might stand on any tree-lined street in America, as proud now as the day it was built. It could be your old family homestead. Or it could, like this one, be the answer to a house-buyer's quest for space at a price.

Dr. and Mrs. Bert Klein bought it a few years ago. When they found their pre-war bungalow too small for their post-war family, they had talked of buying a farm. Then, one fine day, the Doctor made a call. You guessed it! His patient lived in this house; and it was for sale, tagged low; and it was in good repair; and it stood on a fine large lot near the Doctor's office. It also had a big basement, convertible into playroom. So they bought it, knowing that it looked its age and that its rooms were too many and too small.

Together with decorator Frederick J. Shuermann, they made plans for breathing this century's living into last century's walls. First the exterior. Since they didn't need the third-floor rooms and didn't like their outside looks, they performed a major operation of façade lowering. Off came the top floor, its roof replaced by a lower, hipped one. Next to go were porches and similar gingerbread.

Dishwasher and Disposer Cut Working Time . . .

● Less time is spent at the sink since the new kitchen provides a dishwasher and garbage disposer. However, life is much better there, because there is a fine view through that new wide, low window. Utensils are kept in the drawers next to the range, the vegetables in sliding bins in ventilated area beneath sink

...because of a Stepladder

When a family discovers a house at two o'clock one afternoon and likes it so well that they buy it within the hour, they are likely to find that their hasty purchase has drawbacks to offset its alluring charms. Before they remodeled it, the owners of this kitchen in Glencoe, Ill., described it as "simply horrid."

The five-ft.-tall woman who lived here felt just like an acrobat. She had to drag the stepladder everywhere because the wall cabinets were inaccessible. On her tiptoes, she could reach the bottom of the doors and force them open—that is, if the high-up clasp hadn't caught tightly. The heavy drawers in the storage section were 4 ft. deep, which meant that an unexpected visitor was likely to find her hostess on the floor giving a drawer a futile yank. The window over the sink was too high for her to see out of,

and was fastened at the very top with a hook which demanded athletic endeavor. Because there wasn't room for it in the kitchen, the refrigerator was kept in the unheated back hall. The first floor was without a powder room. The fan in the window shut out light. The door to the canned-goods closet and the door to the back hall constantly bumped one another. Altogether a sorry work center!

After two years of clipping articles from THE AMERICAN HOME containing many helpful suggestions, these owners visited Aubrey Tupper-Waite, kitchen designer in nearby Chicago, who brought their dreams to life in this workable, friendly room. Its color scheme gives it a fine decorative unity: walls and ceiling are green; cabinets have a gray-green finish and are studded with copper knobs placed low enough to be well within easy reach; unpainted chairs are stained French headings, fringed skirts, contoured sides, matching cushions, contour quilting—all these are decorator terms for refinements which used to be available only in sky-high, custom-made bedspreads and draperies. Now, thanks to a new style-consciousness among manufacturers, they are yours, ready-made, at prices which reflect the benefits of mass production. But there's nothing "cheap" about the best of them—the workmanship can be superb. The variety? There are styles and colors and fabrics for almost any room, in any price range.

Ready-mades

There is strong accent on throws, bolsters, and pillows matched to draperies calculated to turn sleeping quarters into smartly tailored, double-purpose, bed-sitting rooms. Window-dressing news includes tiered curtains, ruffled or tailored, in many lengths—use as many tiers as you need for the length of your window. In buying any curtains or draperies, get enough panels to give you double fullness across the width of the window or wall. Brise-bise, or café curtains, their scalloped tops attached to rings which ride on rods, revive an old French style. Mix them with tier curtains for a new look!

Lined matching draperies, French-pleated at top, are $50; pillows, $8-$13. This smart set comes in coral, brown, dark green, or moss green. 2. To give a spend-thrift look to a pretty bedroom, consider the luxury of a three-piece ensemble of fine rayon taffeta (beige only). Single or double spread ($30) is quilted in leaf pattern. Leaf is repeated in embroidered ruffles of drapery ($30) and dressing-table skirt ($23). Draperies have French-pleated tops, and you can have them 90" or 99" long

Cartridge-pleated drapery top features plastic tubes which hold pleats firm, come out easily for cleaning ($17). 5. Appropriately named "Stardust," this dream set is sprinkled with color in your choice of six grounds. Spread is single ($19) or double ($20) plain (with quilted tops, $25 and $28). This drab blonde chest looked hopeless, but we found a way to renew its clear lacquer finish. The trick is to allow plenty of time between the simple operations for thorough drying. First rub off the old finish with 0000 steel wool. Wear stout gloves

When old finish is removed, bleach entire surface with good furniture bleach. Pour bleach into china, enamel, or earthenware container; apply with rubber sponge. Wear rubber gloves for this operation

TACK THIS UP OVER YOUR WORK BENCH—IT'S ALL HERE

Apply wood filler with an old brush, follow grain of wood. If filler hardens too quickly in bowl, add a little more turpentine. Be sure to cover every inch of surface and put on generously. Do one area at a time

Watch filler carefully. If it becomes too dry, it will be almost impossible to remove. As soon as coat of filler becomes dull, wipe off, against the grain of the wood, with a rough cloth. Rub till every trace disappears and surface is like glass

Dry several days. If you want dark edges, stain with mahogany or walnut stain. Dry 24 hours—more in damp weather. Then apply coat of water-white lacquer, thinned if necessary with lacquer thinner. Use best lacquer brush. Work quickly, with even strokes. Lacquer one area at a time. Dry 24 hours

How to Rejuvenate a Blonde

DOROTHY LAMBERT TRUMM

Allow bleach to remain for period specified on container. Most bleaches must be neutralized to insure good finish. Household vinegar is usually advised, but directions will specify neutralizer. Use neutralizer on cloth to wipe bleached surface

Dry 24 hours, or more if weather is humid. When thoroughly dry, go over entire cabinet with 0000 steel wool to smooth roughness caused by bleach and neutralizer. Surface is now completely cleaned

Want that surface satin smooth? Then make a paste of wood filler and fill the pores of the wood. Mix filler with turpentine, as directed on can, till creamy smooth

Rub surface lightly with soft cloth dipped first in linseed oil, then in fine pumice. Wipe thoroughly. Last three steps (lacquering, 24-hour drying, oil and pumice rub) must be repeated five times

If it has a clear lacquer finish, that old blonde chest need not grow darker when you restore it.
This process is exacting,
but not difficult to follow

Need More Room?

The Penikoffs

Photographs by Kranzten Studio

Do you think your house isn't large enough for that remarkable new thing in American life—the all-ages living-play-room? Then take heart and read these six pages. We show you how three American families made space for put-your-feet-on-the-sofa second living rooms which invite informal entertaining—lots of it—and let the whole family enjoy the fun of being a family together.

For example, take the case of Doris and Chuck Penikoff who live in a gem of a caretaker's lodge on their Illinois farm. But because it's tiny, they thought they'd need a whole new house to welcome the easy, drop-in-and-bring-the-gang kind of life they craved. They didn't. With the help of Chicago architect René Travelletti, they discovered that they could have everything they wanted if they just added one wonderful wing to their home.

You see it here. It's a room, bath, and terrace, built at right angles to the original house, and looking very handsome with it from the outside. It can be entered from its own terrace, or from the dining room or kitchen of the main house—a handy feature since informal meals often appear at that semi-circular bar. It is large enough to hold the big, un-stuffy parties the Penikoffs love, and long enough for the projection of Chuck's home movies. Of course, there's room for games.

Anything else? Well, one of those sofas hides a bed, so this is a guest house, too. And there's a home office for Chuck here when he wants it.

Naturally, Doris saw to it that there was a generous closet, cedar lined, and Chuck made sure of storage space for his photographic equipment. And they didn't overlook a fireplace, or a picture window—or anything. In fact, the Penikoffs feel that they've had their cake and eaten it too, for this addition lets them keep their charming old house and gives them what they wanted in a new one as well. If your house can't spread out for such good living, turn the page for other solutions.

As good for a couple as a crowd, the new wing gives Chuck a home office with an ideal desk designed to suit his needs, hold his books, and even provide him with office-size files

In its role of informal country living room, the new wing accommodates a host of people without turning a chair. Note wise seating which is good for small groups, yet lets everybody join general conversations. One sofa opens for overnight guests. The bar, a step from kitchen or dining-room china closet, is a perfect place to serve buffet suppers

Addition blends and contrasts with house. Roof pitch is same in each. On this side, addition is stone. Another façade repeats the brick, clapboard, and shutters of the original wing

By building a giant window, you can transform a dark, hot, and wasted attic into a cozy beauty of a den or all-around playroom which doubles your family life

Sunlight by day, moonlight by night, and breezes in summer stream into the knotty-pine den the Newell G. Meyers built into the attic of their home in Wauwatosa, Wis. The key to the room is that huge plate-glass window, 20 square feet of it, which makes the space habitable by bringing in winter warmth when closed, and opening up to make a cross-draft for hot-weather comfort. And as you can see by the exterior photograph above, it was calculated to harmonize with the architecture, doesn't look like an after-thought. Because it is so large and so heavy, the window needed the good support provided by a framework of extruded aluminum and the tension bars which prop it up when open.

However, the window was only the point of departure for this pine-paneled beauty of a room. If you want a den which is a place for serious work or study, it's full of ideas to copy. For example, it contains a real office file plus not one, but two good desks, placed back-to-back. Where? Well that built-in furniture isn't exactly what it seems to be—it's even better. The desks are second-hand office desks, typewriter compartment and all. They have been resurfaced with pine facing to match the room and hide their businesslike origins while retaining their efficiency. And the file? It's been given the same beauty treatment as the desks, and you can see it in the corner of the picture opposite, sporting a nautical lamp on its top. Other built-ins include a radio-phonograph housed in a cabinet fashioned from ancient butternut boards, and that floor-to-ceiling bookcase, behind which is a storage space so capacious it's dubbed a "Fibber McGee" closet.

So much for the way it works. Its charm comes from the careful weaving of its nautical theme. There are generous amounts of rope-like molding surrounding desks and windows, there are captains' chairs, brass portholes on the doors, and other such seaworthy details as ships' wheels on the walls and a handsome marine blanket on the couch. A dismantled Great Lakes steamer provided many of these, plus some of the lumber for the room.

The huge window in the insert is what opened up this attic for use as one of the coziest, most useful, and most inviting of dens. Two desks, a filing cabinet, and a radio-phonograph are masked to match the walls, and a vast "Fibber McGee" closet hides behind the handsome bookcase.

$212.82 plus family labor makes family playroom of Rochester basement

Photographs by Don Nibbelink

Look familiar? This typical cellar is what they started with. By moving a few pipes, utilities were relegated to one area, then screened off when the playroom was built

DON AND BETTY NIBBELINK

Did you ever accidentally drive a nail through a copper water pipe? The sudden shower leaves no doubt that an amateur carpenter has done it again! But this was only one of the problems we faced in building the basement playroom which gave our house so much more meaning. First, we had to decide whether or not the project was worth while. We put the question to two real estate men who assured us that, since we planned to do the work ourselves, the cost of materials would be more than justified by an increase in value of the house should we sell. (Actually transforming our nondescript cellar into the hobby-playroom you see cost us $212.81 for materials—plus the cost of fixing one nail-punctured water pipe.)

Then we put the question to ourselves again. Just what would we gain by dividing our basement roughly in half—one part for utilities, one part for the playroom? We listed the advantages: A place where youngsters and grownups could play when they couldn't be out of doors in the rain or in Rochester (N.Y.) winter weather; a hobby room, complete with pull-down screen for projecting home movies; a place to use lawn chairs and the like as wintertime furniture; good storage space; concealment of usual basement clutter. It could be a room with a photography theme, dressed in photomurals. The list clinched it. We ordered lumber.

Since our partitions didn't have to support any weight, we took the advice of a builder friend and used 2 x 2's at half the price of the usual 2 x 4's. We left a 2-in. "breathing space" between the cement-block basement wall and the playroom wall, and went to work. Two long evenings were spent pounding a star drill into the concrete floor for the expansion bolts! (We learned later that a carboloy drill would have taken 20 minutes to do the job!)

The walls themselves are partly photographs—a 30-in.

PLEASE TURN TO PAGE 129

Inserts opposite reveal how the Nibbelinks kept this room's low cost from showing. After erecting an inexpensive skeleton of 2 x 2's, they partly covered the walls with economical wallboard, decked with photomurals. The rest of the walls are plywood. Nancy's bulletin board, also a wallboard panel, suggests other ways to dress up wallboard

Maybe you can't see him, but there's Opportunity, knocking on that door at the right. Your opportunity to keep an old, old New Year's resolution—the one in which you promised that next year, positively, you'd plan your house's Christmas costume early, and make it good. Remember how you swore off the usual last-second bedraggled branches bedecked with the just-like-every-other plastic peppermint stick? Well, look around at what we offer. Rudolph the red-nosed on the roof, choir boys singing to the world, a whole wintry village for window or mantel, gloved hands to greet your guests, all bespeaking your Christmas spirit before anyone enters the house.

And, naturally, they're all AMERICAN HOME patterns, which means that we've done the planning for you and drawn up a list of materials you'll need. So set a date for a family decoration-making bee (maybe complete with refreshments), and have your Christmas adornments ready by Thanksgiving.

To show development of a well-planned 50 x 96 ft. garden, Miss Murch drew plans progressing from bare backyard (above) with 2-ft. bank, one tree, to finished project (below). To dramatize it. . .

We asked Horticultural Extension Specialist R. P. Korbobo to turn her plans into perspectives and show four stages in the planting by means of his unique Plan Animator system described on page 139

Stone wall with steps was built to hold bank. Maple, birches, screen shrubs at end of garden; two flower beds were planted. As they grew, more beds, side hedges, and pool were added

How Does a Garden Grow?

EDITH MURCH

The opportunity to start a garden from the very beginning is one that should be welcomed, made the most of—not muffed. Like birth, it can occur but once. So, before you start, it is not only desirable, but essential, to learn a few fundamental rules that make for success. Some gardens resemble antique shops where furniture and bric-a-brac are piled with little or no attempt to display their esthetic appeal, individually or collectively. Others are like museums where number and variety of specimens are the prime objectives. Plants, like furniture, look best in a proper environment, properly related to one another. If one learns (and follows) the rules, they can be just as effectively displayed. Moreover, by exercising a little discretion, you can avoid expensive mistakes. In short, it pays to work to a plan which sets a goal, keeps it in view, and shows how to proceed toward that goal. This permits the buying of plants as the budget allows and the purse expands. It sets a limit on spending. And yet, after the garden is established, experiments in modifying it can be tried, cautiously, without undue cost or risk. Here is a primer of ideas for the making of that first garden:

PLAN to enclose your garden. Privacy is important, and flowers need a background. An enclosing structure or planting will define the area and bring it down to a scale in which people feel comfortable and at ease. And small gardens are more in keeping with our times and way of life.

CO-ORDINATE house and garden; make them part of one another. The private quarters of the first floor (living and dining rooms certainly.

What's Wrong with This Table?

(HOW TO JUDGE IT ON PAGE 76)

GERTRUDE BRASSARD

How did you do with Lesson One of our table-setting Primer in September? Didn't it give you a new slant on your table's wardrobe and bring out the critic in you? Well, now that we've suggested what goes with what in type and quality, we'd like to tell you how that three-times-a-day ritual of setting a table can bring out the artist in you, too. Not just special tables—every table. For every table you set is what an artist calls a composition in line and color. That's why this lesson deals with color and co-ordination of elements in a special kind of picture—your table.

To test your present understanding of the subject, take a critical look at the less-than-perfect example at your right and judge it by following the directions below.

Our object is to open your eyes, not to close your minds. So we give suggestions, but few hard-and-fast

HOW TO PLAY: This informal Thanksgiving setting isn't quite worthy of the noble bird. How do you rate it for color co-ordination and for the way its elements are composed? Study our standards of judgment (chart, page 130) and rate this setting tentatively in the space below. If it were ideal, it would merit 10 points for color and 10 for relation of elements in the composition. Next, read our whole article and see if you want to change your rating. Finally, turn the page to learn how we rated it and why, and what we did to correct its shortcomings.

Here is how we judged the table on page 75 and why this one is better.

● COLOR. Since schemes of both are built around color contrast, we rate them for effectiveness of contrast. CHINA. The same excellent earthenware sets pace in both. (Score: full 3 pts.) CLOTH AND NAPKIN. The cloth in setting on this page is warmer in tone than one on page 75. Contrasting napkin is better here than self napkin. We deduct $\frac{1}{2}$ pt. for cloth, $\frac{1}{2}$ pt. for napkin. (Score: $\frac{1}{2}$ pt.) GLASSWARE. Spruce green of these tumblers complements tones of earthenware. Sharp Killarney on page 75 clashes. We deduct $\frac{1}{2}$ pt. (Score: 1 pt.) CENTERPIECE. Color of tray in both is good. Vegetables at left more subtle and harmonious in color. We deduct $\frac{1}{2}$ pt. for vegetable colors on page 75. (Score: $1\frac{1}{2}$ pts.) ACCESSORIES. Spruce-green relish dish more effective here than clear crystal. We deduct $\frac{1}{2}$ pt. (Score: $1\frac{1}{2}$ pts.)

● RELATIONS OF ELEMENTS IN COMPOSITION: For VARIETY OF SHAPE AND TEXTURE, both settings are good, avoid monotony. (Score: full 3 pts.) DISTRIBUTION OF ELEMENTS. No crowding in either setting. Both allow all elements full play. (Score: full 3 pts.) GENERAL FORM OF CENTERPIECE. Same good tray in each. Arrangement on page 75 too elongated, compactness here looks better. We deduct $\frac{1}{2}$ pt. (Score: $1\frac{1}{2}$ pts.) EFFECTIVENESS OF OTHER ACCESSORIES. None are superfluous. In both settings they are well related to other elements. (Score: full 2 pts.)

Cream of Mushroom, the Luxury Soup

Cultivated mushrooms...extra heavy cream! In my book, there's nothing better! Looks wonderful—and tastes it, too. The whole family will enjoy it!

BY Anne Marshall

MUSHROOMS... I love them! That's why cream of mushroom soup makes any of my everyday meals a party. It dresses them up... really adds that special touch.

Not too many years ago cream of mushroom soup was classed as a luxury, something for entertaining or to be enjoyed at the finest restaurants. Now nearly everybody seems to serve this rich, creamy-smooth soup with lots of tender mushroom pieces... and they serve it often. It's so delicious, so easy on the budget.

If your "man and clan" tremendously enjoy it as a soup, then they're sure to rave about it as a sauce and cooking ingredient.

As a pour-on sauce with vegetables, chicken or turkey, it steps up their taste... gives a real lift to economy meat cuts.

Cream of mushroom soup is "dreamy" in soufflés. Any cheese dish is sparked by it. And as for potatoes or tuna, once you've scalloped them with cream of mushroom soup... you'll never do them any other way.

There's magic in cream of mushroom soup. It does so much for your reputation as a cook!

Good Victuals

JEAN AUSTIN

EACH AND EVERY MONTH I RACK MY BRAIN to think of something "else" I can call this besides "Good Victuals." Very often I find there is something so different or unusual above the food's own good looks themselves I can find extra words which I hope will intrigue you into reading about them, eventually cooking them. Then, there are months when announcing anything but "Good Victuals" seems like gilding the lily. Well, this is one of those months. There isn't one lyrical name in the lot—but there isn't a dull, ordinary dish here! Yet, how can I not go on and on saying "Good Victuals" and hope you'll know how very good they really are? There's a melon and fruit cornucopia centerpiece. It's the very spirit of bounty—easy as pie to do. Bowls of chicken soup that is out of this world—yet looking just like all cream of chicken soup that is out of this world. There are pork chops—but beautiful company stuff—nicely displayed but still looking exactly what they are, pork chops, and to go with them a wonderful cider sauce. Looks like any old sauce but does it ever do something for pork! And a roast duck. Not greasy, not fatty, a Chinaman's idea of crispy duck and an orange sauce (excuse me while I brag) far superior to that of the famous Left-Bank-of-Paris duck-eating place. Saffron rice with bacon and almonds and a million times better tasting than it looks. An orange soufflé, for all those who put in their holiday bird and—you know what? Couldn't cook a cookie in the left-over room in their oven! It's cooked in a double boiler on top of the stove! And it doesn't have to be served the exact moment it's done. It doesn't fall. It's light and wonderful, after any heavy festive meal. And a super-easy, super-crusty apple torte, so good it falls slightly as any good torte does the moment it smells ozone. And what have I got? Eight elegant ideas—and nothing I can call them but "good victuals." Not one "fancy pants" title I can give you this month, not one recipe here that is not worth your very serious consideration.

But just to show you how much I care about you cooking them, in case their plain-Jane titles do not entice you, I shall tell you that I have just finished a lengthy session with Mr. Noah Webster's famous book—the dictionary. I looked up the word "good." Definition 5 (I quote): "Adapted to give, or giving pleasure; agreeable; pleasant; as, good company; a good dinner." Two more columns I read, and came to "goodly." Awkward title, "Goodly Victuals" but, word for word, it is a far better definition of what I have tried to do, what the food

|------------------------------------|--------------------------------------|
| 1 envelope unflavored gelatine | 1/4 teaspoon ginger |
| 1/4 cup cold water | 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg |
| 1 1/4 cups mashed cooked pumpkin | 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon |
| 3/4 cup evaporated milk | 2 egg whites |
| 1/2 cup water | 1/2 teaspoon vanilla |
| 2 egg yolks, slightly beaten | 1 cup Baker's Shredded Coconut, |
| 3/4 cup brown sugar, firmly packed | toasted* |
| 1/2 teaspoon salt | 1 baked 9-inch pie shell |
| | 1/2 cup cream, whipped and sweetened |

Soften gelatine in 1/4 cup cold water. Combine pumpkin, milk, 1/2 cup water, egg yolks, 1/2 cup of the sugar, salt, and spices in top of double boiler. Cook over boiling water 10 minutes, stirring constantly. Add gelatine and stir until dissolved. Remove from boiling water. Chill until slightly thickened.

Beat egg whites until foamy. Add remaining sugar gradually and continue beating until stiff. Fold in pumpkin mixture, vanilla, and 3/4 of the toasted coconut. Turn into cold pie shell. Chill until firm. Before serving, top with whipped cream and remaining toasted coconut.

*To toast coconut, spread thinly in shallow pan. Place in moderate oven (350°F.) and toast about 10 minutes, or until delicately browned. Stir occasionally to toast evenly.

here this month really is. "In a goodly manner, handsome, gracious, readily, properly, excellently."

The Cornucopia of Plenty needs no recipe, just directions, and here they are by Vera Bjorck, the woman who conceived this beautiful, edible centerpiece. Cut 1/3 of a large honeydew melon slantwise and clean out seeds. Make sure the melon stays steady on the plate. If not, cut a piece off the bottom. Mark the scallop design with a pencil on the outside of the melon and cut out scallops. Make a horizontal slit in each scallop and insert a piece of maraschino cherry. Cut out melon balls but be careful not to come too close to the scalloped edge. Arrange fruit and melon balls in attractive pattern and garnish with laurel leaves.

The other recipes you'll find on pages 92, 94. A goodly Thanksgiving to you all!

The coconut controversy continues. Here's another letter concerning our article of last July on "How to Prepare Fresh Coconut"—and another technique. This one from Dorothy Kamen-Kaye of Chapel Hill, North Carolina, who writes: "The coconut technique on page 60 of your July issue is all right; but we . . . have other tricks. (1) We don't sandpaper outside—who cares if some of the beard's on? (2) We don't hammer; just bang it onto a hard surface after blowing in the holes. (3) The broken pieces, shell and all, are soaked 10–15 min. in cold water—after which the meat can easily be pried loose from the shell. (4) We find this coconut too moist to cover cake. Squeeze in a muslin to get some of moisture out. (This information is in Buen Provecho, Caracas Cookery.)

Thank you, Dorothy Kamen-Kaye. I'm glad to know about your favorite technique—but I still vote for the method given in our July article. We tried it your way, found it dried the coconut meat. But there's another on your side, not ours—and she's way down in the Canal Zone. Mrs. C. Leight Stevenson, of Balboa Heights, writes she has been making a home in the tropics for the last twenty-five years. Thinks the author of the picture story "How to Prepare Fresh Coconut" a better qualified photographer than adviser in the intricacies of opening a coconut—because the easy way is totally lacking in photographic angles. Says she, "If your readers want to extract the meat in neat, complete, and unfractured halves with the least possible effort, minimum damage to temper, and 'strong' knives, let them try heat. Break shell neatly across the middle. Set halves on a lighted gas burner until meat and shell separate. Or use oven—any kind of heat." We tried it and our opinion remains unchanged!

Up in Stratford, Conn., lives a reader of "Good Victuals" and her letter warms the cockles of my heart and not just because it is a fan letter, either.

Dear Mrs. Austin: I have used your recipes to the satisfaction of many of our customers. (You see, I bake the pastries for my daughter's restaurant.) The topside down cake and Queen's Pudding have made a big hit. I've never seen the "Raisin Pie Supreme" recipe printed. Would you please send me a copy? I would like to try it . . . I have a problem that maybe you could help me with. What causes my crust to get moist on the edges after it stands for a few hours? I speak of "Lemon Meringue"—Mrs. Ernest C. Elliott.

It heartens me that Good Victuals are not too onerous, too expensive, to be cooked and served in a restaurant. That's a fine testimonial to the good sense of Good Victuals and I thank you, Mrs. Elliott. Now, to return the favor, if I can. I wonder if perhaps you do not bake your pie at too low a temperature? A higher temperature sets the crust quickly, so that none of the moisture from the meringue can seep in. I can think of no other reason for the crust getting "wet" in so short a period. You can cook the filled pie at higher temperature without fear of its being reheated or overcooked when you put it in again for browning the meringue, if when it goes in for the last time you place the pie on two nested baking sheets. I presume you pile the meringue as deeply around the rim as in the center. This, of course, prevents the filling being heated and congealing at the rim. I hope I've helped. I really can't diagnose your trouble without seeing what you do—or don't do. But I hope I've helped!

You just made a magnificent impression

Fixin's for the Bird

Instead of pumpkin pie, how about Pumpkin in Alaska—a frozen bit of cinnamon, clove, and nutmeg spiciness tucked under a cloak of silvery, peaked meringue? Sentimentalists that we are, far be it for us to suggest anything but the old-fashioned makings for The dinner of the year—Thanksgiving. However, we think it's a mighty smart idea to give the old fixin's a new and dressy twist, and at the same time add a breath of glamour to the traditional list!

Today's ways with poultry-roasting mean the turkey—or duck, or goose—needs only to be stuffed, then popped into the oven until low temperatures transform it to a golden brown. Why not take advantage of every minute to get some 1951 into the recipes—and set before glittering eyes a royal feast of feasts that will hold satisfying memories of old-fashioned food cooked to modern perfection?

There are some familiar odors reminiscent of happy occasions—occasions that make fun, laughter, and families gathered together a very real memory. Nostalgic is the aroma of the plumply stuffed bronze turkey sending its roasting fragrance throughout the house on Thanksgiving morn'; the sweet scent of orange-colored yams a-cookin'; the haunting, teasing smell of golden pumpkin symbolizing a holiday as American as America itself! Precious memories through the years can be vivid, realistic visual pictures—and mouth-watering when taste buds recall the pleasant stimulation of well-loved flavors. Rather challenging to realize that our efforts can set the pattern for holiday traditions among our young ones—years from now! And so, to accept that challenge, here are a few thoughts for making this a Thanksgiving dinner never to be forgotten.

We know of no more perfect prelude than a medley of fruit sections chilled just until the crystalline stage—it's the tiny ice particles that make this appetizer a real refresher. And then the grand performance itself! The turkey stuffed with a dressing which uses all the good sage and celery seasoning found in Grandmother's dressing. We've chalked up a real plus in flavor and color with the addition of pimiento-stuffed olives, chopped so that their brightness shows through with every savory bite.

Try sweet potato puffs swirled on pineapple rings, and the elegance of buttered mushrooms blended into a rich sauce which is our guarantee for bringing out the best in any broccoli bunch. That favorite perfection salad we serve so much in the Midwest assumes a wonderful piquancy with the tartness of tarragon vinegar.

We candy our cranberries to look like a big jar of flaming marbles, tasting sweet and sour. Into a saucepan go one quart of berries, one pint cold water, $2\frac{1}{2}$ cups sugar. Bring to boiling point and cook for one minute. Drain berries and cook syrup 30 minutes. For a bright glaze, pour syrup over cranberries and chill.

What's for Supper?

GLORIA MARSHALL

A late-evening supper on Thanksgiving night is likely to be a command performance. As chairs slide back from the table in mid-afternoon, the general opinion is "I'll never be hungry again!" But, come the evening hours, almost everyone pops up with: "What's to eat?"

Don't be caught short and give them the last of the precious turkey which you could be saving for something special, like Turkey Divan on Saturday night. Instead, plan a snack supper while you plan your big dinner, and just spread it out on the table when the time comes. Most of the snacks suggested below can be made the day before.

How about a ham-salad roll, light but satisfying enough for the hungriest male? Give some personality to the salad itself by adding bite-sized pieces of dill pickle. And serve it as a filling for hollowed-out hard rolls. Sprinkle the tops with sieved yolks of hard-cooked eggs, and arrange on a watercress nest so they'll look as good as they taste.

Another sandwich idea is the cheese-lover's blend of Roquefort and Cheddar. Or Bologna and sliced olives make a striking twosome. Did you ever try tuna fish mixed with horseradish and a bit of Worcestershire sauce? Someone requested a hot sandwich? For a flavor surprise, combine peanut butter with chili sauce and grill it for toothsome flavor.

Since this is a holiday supper, the cook can treat herself to an imaginative garnish—cream cheese carrots, for example. Shape the cheese into tiny carrots. Then roll in grated carrot and tuck a tuft of parsley into the end. For something simpler, and good, try dusting celery curls with paprika for taste and color.

Unusual drinks? Shake cranberry juice and orange juice with loads of cracked ice for a refreshing pick-up, then serve with an orange wedge or slice of lemon. Cocoa prepared with a stick of cinnamon and a few cloves goes mighty well with this supper as a surprise hot drink.

For a sweet finale, bake a spice cake mix in cup-cake pans. To frost easily and tastily, flavor prepared marshmallow topping with orange rind. Add enough powdered sugar for a spreading consistency, and tint a delicate green. Swirl on cupcakes and sprinkle with chopped peanuts or stud with slivered almonds.

Melt butter or margarine, add mushrooms and cook 10 minutes, stirring frequently. (To keep mushrooms from turning dark, add a thin slice of lemon and cook with mushrooms; remove before adding flour and milk.) Blend in flour. Add the hot milk, grated onion, salt, and pepper and mix well. Combine egg yolks with the cold milk, add a little of the sauce mixture and then combine with the remaining sauce in the pan. Cook, stirring vigorously until boiling point is reached, but do not allow to boil. Remove from heat. Add lemon juice and mayonnaise, blending well. If desired, this sauce may be made ahead of time and kept hot over water that is just below the boiling point.

1 apple, peeled, cored, and chopped
1 tbs. bacon fat

1 tsp. salt; pepper to taste

Add crumbs and mix well. Add beaten egg, and toss mixture with fork. Put stuffing in prepared pork chops. Brown chops on both sides. Place in a baking dish, add a little wine and cover. What if Don't Have

Of course the ideal thing (which mighty few of us have, though we're dreaming!) is the two-oven kitchen where roasts and pies can cook, simultaneously, in blissful independence of each other. But with able electrical assistants like the ones illustrated here, a lot of ingenious women will serve forth proud holiday meals without using any conventional ovens at all. And if yours is the usual four-burners-plus-oven arrangement, you have a treat in store for you, lady, when you learn how many wise ways small appliances have. They'll supplement your range when a big production is coming up, but that's not all that they're good for. All year round you'll use them in your kitchen, dining room, and even on your terrace to save you steps, bring the whole family into the cooking act, and to do a better job on some foods than even your range can accomplish. So examine their merits—and write a note to Santa.

We're not going out on a limb and suggesting that you buy all of them. Take stock of your needs—the kinds of foods you serve, the size and types of parties you give—and pick the electrical helpers which will best complement your present equipment.

For most people, the best buys are the appliances which do more than one thing. For example, a roaster can cook a whole meal, or it can broil, or you can use its griddle for pancakes. You

Special drip spouts drain grease freely into drip cups provided

Remember mother cooking one pancake at a time? Not with an electric grill! She'll be right there at the table, loving it!

This is a deep-fat frying expert. It will help you to turn out, at home, the kind of wonderful fried foods which are usually in the province of a fine chef. The automatic thermostatic control makes the just-right heat to seal in the goodness. All you do is to heat the shortening to the correct temperature in the pan, toss your fryables into the wire basket, and watch them sizzle to perfection

This works for you at the breakfast or supper table, cooks waffles or even small steaks! Sandwich and waffle grids interchange simply. You can make two plate-size waffles at a time for feasts when folks call for more of these crisp beauties in a hurry. And it grills delicious hot sandwiches too, for its expanding hinges permit even toasting on both sides. To grill ham and eggs or small steaks and chops, it can open out flat

How to Keep out of the Kitchen

STANLEY SCHULER

On Thanksgiving day, we're going to have a wonderful dinner—and my wife, Elizabeth, won't spend the whole day in the kitchen! We have a "system," and here is how we got it:

After years of close and sometimes horrified research, I have reached the conclusion that there are only three kinds of hostesses: Those who have servants (a mighty small number), those who make do with the aid of delicatessens or neighborhood bakeries (spare me from their invitations!) and those—the majority—who try so hard to put the world's finest foods on the table that they often miss their own lovely parties.

My wife belonged to the last group. She liked to give parties; she insisted on serving good food and she worked altogether too hard in the process. She either wore herself out getting ready for the party or spent too much time in the kitchen during it. In either case, she had neither time nor energy to enjoy her efforts and guests fully. I had a good time. The guests had a good time. But not the woman who made it all possible. And that simply wasn't fair. So finally I put my foot down. "All right, Mr. Know-It-All," I was told. "What can be done about it?" That was and is a very good question.

The average homemaker, I am sure, does not like to be penned up in her kitchen during a party. And every once in a while she makes a supreme effort to get out and stay out. Usually when she does succeed in that direction, she fails in another. She comes out with a dinner that does her no justice. It may be a repeat of a previously successful dinner. It may be too quick and easy—one of those church supper affairs full of scalloped potatoes, baked macaroni, coleslaw, and even cold meats. Or it may not be served at the right temperature. As I considered such frightening results, Elizabeth's challenge grew more formidable. On the one hand I was saying, "Keep out of the kitchen," and on the other, I was discovering that the obvious ways to achieve this goal produced foods I didn't like. It looked as if we had reached an impasse, but of course we hadn't.

We just had a party for 28 and my wife was in the kitchen about five minutes before, during and after the party. The credit, in considerable measure, goes to our home freezer. Never once did the kitchen chain the hostess as it used to!

BON AMI "hasn't scratched yet!"

Out of the Kitchen

We've taken our cue from this party, and now plan all of our holiday entertaining around the home freezer. Our freezer is full of the makings of a Thanksgiving dinner planned ahead of time. The vegetables are there—and what a selection: peas, lima beans, Brussels sprouts! All the family favorites are waiting for that few minutes of final cooking before they shine at the Thanksgiving table. The melon balls, the peaches, raspberries and strawberries were frozen, like the vegetables, in season when they were plentiful and least expensive.

Of course, the real Thanksgiving treasure in our freezer is the turkey! With a freezer, Elizabeth does not wait to buy the bird the day before. She buys it ahead of time. She cleans, wraps, and freezes it promptly. As to the stuffing, we get the turkey out of the freezer in time to defrost it enough to be handled. Then in goes the stuffing.

At our house, both pumpkin and mince pies are very popular. Elizabeth makes pies for the freezer when she has time, freezes them baked or unbaked. It's only a matter of 40-45 minutes in the oven and we have pies fresh as fresh on the Big Day.

We won't worry about eating turkey till it comes out of our ears. The freezer gobbles it up. Elizabeth can't wait to get those leftovers in the freezer for extra meals. No one at our house has a chance to say, "Oh, not turkey again!" We will have holiday soup from the leftover carcass, leftover gravy in jars, packages of thinly sliced turkey for sandwiches or a buffet meal. Tidbits go to make a casserole. Our extra meals are ready before you can say "Jack Frost."

The guests usually ask Elizabeth how she knows that the dishes she serves at a party can be frozen. After all, no one has yet come up with a book giving all the possibilities. The answer is, she experiments. When the time rolls around for another party, she digs into her recipe file and cookbooks, finds the things she would like to serve, makes them up for the freezer, then feeds them to her company—and they usually cheer!

You can, and should, do the same. So long as you remember that certain foods, notably salad greens, cream fillings, custards, mayonnaise, and gelatin salads do not like zero temperatures. And so long as you remember that cooked foods should not be stored for more than a few weeks, you can freeze anything successfully and safely. In that fact, you have the key to an easier and happier life as a hostess.

When you grind dry bread for stuffings, or cookies for pies and refrigerator desserts, crumbs won't fly if you use this trick: grind right into a paper bag which is secured to the delivery end of the grinder by a rubber band

End tedious chopping by hand! Do you have a little left-over ham? Make it into a suave sandwich spread. Just chop ham in your grinder, add hard cooked eggs, pickles, spices and everything nice. Save yourself lots of time!

Because they were too heavy for her to pull out, the owner found she had to sit on the floor and yank to budge these 4-ft. deep drawers. The catches on the cabinets above were so out of her reach that the stepladder had to go everywhere with her

Major improvement was moving the refrigerator from hall to kitchen in space formerly occupied by that inconvenient-to-use cupboard. Because plenty of other cabinet space was provided, cupboard wasn't needed. Picnic supplies are kept in cabinet over refrigerator. One drawer in that chest is metal lined, for bread. And, oh how much better the kitchen performs now that the equipment is arranged in good working order! Cabinets were placed so that supplies are near the spot where they are used. A new electric range with its push-button control speeds up the three-meals-a-day chores. After meals, no one has to get out the dish-pan and towels or carry out the garbage; the electric disposer flushes away food scraps and the dishwasher does the rest.

And how does it all add up? Because of the low cabinets and streamlining, the ladder rests in the basement—almost forgotten.

In old kitchen, doors to canned-goods closet and back hall were constantly bumping into one another. Radiator was mournfully exposed, and ugly cords were in view. Shelf over radiator was too small to hold cookbooks

This kitchen reorganization also provided a much-needed powder room downstairs—it fitted neatly into that old closet. The things which used to be kept in the closet are now much better housed in that handsome gray-green birch cabinet on the left. And there is no more conflict of doors since powder-room's door slides. Washable wall covering is used in both kitchen and powder room

Place and Show

Carve section from top and slice from bottom of blue (or green), Hubbard squash, remove seeds, set on wax paper on tray. Assemble pin and cage holders, container (glass) to go in squash, test tubes, tape, long pick

Line squash cavity with waxed paper (so squash can be eaten later). Tape test tubes to pick to be inserted in holder placed, with others, in squash. Fill container and tubes with water; place curved center celery stalks in tubes, arrange at desired height

Select vegetables for pleasing color—red cabbage, red onions, beets, artichokes, peppers, broccoli, Brussels sprouts, pale yellow and green celery, peas (pods), wax beans. Wash, dry thoroughly, and polish them

Keep broccoli and celery stems in water to prevent wilting. Arrange vegetables on pin holder and, with short picks, on section cut from squash, in groups following an S curve. Use outer cabbage leaves in cup effect for depth

Curve all beans, beet roots, celery tops in toward central axis. Compactness, subtle coloring, design flow are important here. And it's all edible later!

Cups and Sorcerers (Begins on page 52)

Europe? Well, before that time, while lesser folk ate from wooden plates or crude pottery, royal meals were served up on fine pewter or on silver which often had to be melted down when funds were low. But in China, at the other end of the world, they had discovered the amazing kind of pottery we call porcelain—it could be made thinner and harder than any other pottery, it was so smooth that it could take a glaze like glass, and decorations looked more brilliant on it than on any other wares. We don't know when they discovered it—perhaps before the time of Christ. But we do know that they had it by the Sung period (960–1279 A.D.), and it was at that time that it appeared in the West. We are told that in 1171 the great Saladin delighted the Sultan of Damascus with a gift of porcelain. And we know that by the middle of the 15th century, Chinese porcelain was prized by kings in Europe. Nell Gwynne was an ardent collector, and so was William's Queen Mary.

By the time of the Chinese Emperor K'ang K'si, China's export trade in porcelain had grown to enormous proportions. It was beautiful, it couldn't be melted down, and the new drinks—coffee, tea, and chocolate—tasted so much better in porcelain cups! But so costly was early porcelain that it was classed with gold.

The Chinese guarded the secret and kept the price up. The more expensive it was, the greater its vogue. Now, the rulers of Europe needed money, and that profitable Chinese porcelain trade looked good to them. So they tried to discover the secret. As early as 1580, Francesco I de' Medici set up a factory in Florence. He produced a kind of porcelain, but not the kind he was after. Other rulers followed his example—also without success. Their wares lacked the hard, jade-like quality of the Chinese.

Success did come to Augustus the Strong of Saxony, and in a strange, strange way indeed. Needing funds like his peers, he virtually kidnapped one Johann Böttger, a brilliant alchemist. The Elector didn't have porcelain in mind. What he hoped was that Johann could at last master the age-old problem of turning base metals into gold. Of course, Johann couldn't. So the Elector gave him another assignment—to make gold, indirectly, by solving the riddle of Chinese porcelain, and producing wares to be sold for a mine's worth of treasure.

They knew that the secret was in the clay and the materials with which it was blended. Böttger worked with blends of jasper, agate, and other substances—but something was lacking. Then, quite by accident, so the story goes, he stumbled across some hair powder which a local wigmaker had discarded. It was fine, and white, and made from a clay. And it was the very ingredient needed to make true porcelain! Its secret was closely guarded, but doubtless the substance was kaolin, the clay the Chinese had used for centuries. And so a cosmetic, a discarded one, solved the riddle which had been plaguing European kings, chemists, and alchemists.

The discovery was made at Fort Meissen, about 12 miles from Dresden, in the year 1710. The Meissen factory, which was called the Royal Saxon Manufacturing Concern, brought prosperity to Augustus the Strong. But despite what we would today call "security regulations," the secret of porcelain couldn't be kept. When three daughters of Augustus married into other royal houses, each opened a porcelain factory. And Meissen workers, tempted by offers elsewhere, migrated and took the secret.

The Meissen factory, granddaddy of all European porcelain plants, fell into the hands of Frederick the Great at the end of the Seven Years' War. He carried off many of the molds and many of the workmen to Berlin. Thereupon he took over the management of the already-existing Berlin porcelain factory and ran it as a royal enterprise—a highly profitable one. Frederick also used it for diplomatic purposes. For example, wanting to smooth his relations with Russia, he sent elaborate, personalized porcelain to the royalty of that country as gifts (Fig. 2, page 53).

Another royal manufactory was the French porcelain works at Sèvres. Mme. de Pompadour took a great interest in its business affairs and in the excellent designs it produced. Finally, in 1759, her royal friend, Louis XV, took over its administration, and it became crown property.

Louis Philippe, France's last king, was the owner of one of the most costly of all varieties of Sèvres—the bejeweled kind, richly strewn with imitation turquoise, pearls, and emeralds set in beautifully chased mountings of pure gold. Because the skill required to make it was costly, even in those days, examples of jeweled Sèvres are rare. (For a set which belonged to Mme. Lebrun, see Fig 6.)

The exquisite set of pink Sèvres ordered by Louis Philippe in 1846, just two years before a revolution forced him to make a hasty departure from Paris, is illustrated in Fig. 7. Unfortunately, Louis, who died in exile, never enjoyed this handsome porcelain. With his queen, he was finally smuggled out of France as "Mr. Smith." His great collection of porcelain went to museums and to members of the nobility. And some of it later made its way into private collections of people who love this rich art—like our Mrs. Smith of Hollywood.

Oak Flooring Leading Strong Decorating Trend

By Everett Brown, A.I.D.

We decorators and homeowners have a common meeting ground when it comes to flooring—we both insist upon oak, and for good reason, too. Oak flooring is the only flooring that provides the homeowner with beauty, adaptability, durability, economy and “healthfulness”—and basic flooring needs.

As a decorator I appreciate the ease with which I can design a room having an oak floor. It is correct for every type of house, for every style of decorating and it “goes” with every color scheme.

Homeowners ask for a lifetime floor and oak is the only answer. Never does a worn out spot have to be replaced and the weight of furniture and foot traffic have no marring effect on oak's beauty.

Another important reason why more and more decorators and homeowners are showing more oak is the natural insulating qualities of this fine flooring. Here is a flooring that keeps rooms warm in winter and cool in summer.

When a floor provides all of the basic flooring needs as oak does, it's no wonder 85% of all prospective homeowners prefer oak flooring.

*Send for NEW Planning and Decorating Booklet!

Everett Brown is one of the nationally recognized interior decorators who has designed rooms which appear in full color in the wonderful new booklet, “How to Plan and Decorate Masterpiece Rooms.”

This booklet will show you how you can give your rooms the same color charm found in the world's great paintings, without any previous knowledge of color. Just pick the color combinations you like best—the rest of your color decisions are made for you automatically.

One for the amateurs to make. Old dining-table top upholstered in green plastic starts life over again as modern cocktail table

New Tricks with Old Tables

Do you plan to give away those old tables in the attic? Think twice. For example, that cocktail table above started life in a dining room half a century ago. With its pedestal removed, the top has been anchored to a square wooden box and both covered in plastic cloth. The plastic fabric, cut 2 inches wider than the surfaces, was tacked into position. For the top, occasional notching was needed for a smooth fit. To finish corners of the base, 4-inch plastic strips were attached with decorative brass tacks, and for looks, the same kind of tacks appear on the lip of the top. Before covering, a plant well was cut in the table top—a large square into which a brass pot was set.

One for the girls to copy. A drop-leaf table, double student lamp and two shaving mirrors are a novel and practical solution to the ever-present primping problem where two girls share the same room. Two fringed, triangular scarves add a colorful and authentic note, pull the whole arrangement together

Structural Corrugated Glass, flanked by plantings, is an exciting feature of the Case Study House in California. Greenery casts fascinating shadows upon the rhythmic figured glass partition to create a highly dramatic effect in the living area. Translucent without being transparent, the obscure glass separation floods both areas with softened, "borrowed" light that creates an atmosphere of comfort and spaciousness.

"My husband had to pay for my mistake!"

"We were crushed when we got the bill for refinishing our wood floors! My husband had to use hard-earned savings to pay it. And all because of my mistake — using so-called 'easy-way' floor care that let our floors get ugly and scarred!"

"I decided right then to protect my refinished floors the sure way—with Johnson's Paste Wax, the genuine polishing wax. My floor finisher said it gives floors real protection and beauty, not just a temporary shine.

"What a difference it made! My floors gleamed with a mellow, genuine wax luster. Dirt, water, and scuffing feet can't get through the tough, protective film. So the lovely wood floor underneath is shielded from wear!"

"I warn all my friends now—avoid expensive refinishing, with regular Johnson's Paste Wax care! My floors will never need refinishing again. Instead of getting shabby with age, they get lovelier with every waxing!"

Insist on genuine polishing wax—

Waxing Tips by Margaret Scott

During damp weather, save your temper by rubbing Paste Wax on the edges of stubborn drawers and grooves of windows—it keeps them from sticking. If your dustpan, ash trays and insides of wastebaskets are waxed, dust and dirt can be wiped out easily. Dishes won't stick to waxed cupboard shelves. And when blizzards come, wax your shovel so the snow won't stick to it—the man of the house will find cleaning walks much easier! And remember—polishing waxed floors is 10 times faster with a Johnson Electric Floor Polisher. You can rent one in over 50,000 stores or buy one for about half the price of a good vacuum cleaner.

strip along two adjacent walls is composed of large photographic prints mounted onto $\frac{3}{8}$ -in. wallboard. As a protection against dampness, they were sprayed with waterproof lacquer on front, back, and edges. We gave attention, too, to the way the photographs were arranged, the way they faced. On another wall, wallboard makes an oversize bulletin board—daughter Nancy keeps it filled with posters she makes in art class.

The photographs, of course, gave us a way of being inexpensively clever, for wallboard panels are easy on the purse. If we hadn't had the photographs, we would have used panels anyhow as part of our wall covering—perhaps decked out with the family's own hand-painted decorations or a montage of favorite cartoons. After all, it is a playroom. Illustrated road maps, free for the asking, and traced with the routes of past vacations could do well, perhaps illustrated with vacation snapshots.

The rest of the walls were covered with Weldtex, a striated plywood. We gave the wood a two-tone finish to show off the striations.

For the ceiling, we used 16-in. squares, $\frac{1}{2}$ in. thick, and stapled them from joist to joist—stapling goes much faster than nailing. Someday the floor may be asbestos tile. Meanwhile, we gave it two coats of a red oil-base floor paint designed to be walked on.

For our electrical needs, we used approved BX cables and junction boxes, all inspected before being put on the ceiling. We provided for ceiling fixtures and one fluorescent light, and installed two double-outlet floor plugs at opposite corners to provide for lamps, radio, projector, electric grill, and so on. We put the plugs on different fuse lines to avoid overloading when we use our photographic equipment down here.

So much for the construction details. Our room has a few "specials." For example, our picture window: It's a fake window, built into the wall, and lit by a fluorescent tube. In it, we've put a large mounted photograph of the New York skyline. It alleviates the "room-in-the-basement" look, and it provides reading light for the bench below. We can change the picture from time to time, but for the present we're enjoying the penthouse view from the basement. And you may laugh at our ceiling light fixtures—wheels from an old wheelchair—but they're just the right size and shape, and allow plenty of headroom. And our storage space: we not only have the built-in bookcases and a spot for winter storage of screens, but we're also proud of our window bench with hinged lid cushioned with a discarded baby mattress, neatly slipcovered.

What's Wrong with This Table?

rules. We know that hundreds of books, all different, and all by sound authorities, have been written on the subject of artistic composition. Nobody has had the last word yet, but you'll make no mistake if you take our hints. In color, well-set tables, like well-decorated rooms, usually fall into three general classes. Until you're experienced, stick by them. First, there is the monochromatic scheme, wherein one definite color prevails. For a monochromatic green table, for example, use shades of green for dishes, accessories, napkins, cloth. Spike it with neutral white, gray, ecru, or black notes. Silver blends right in; so does crystal.

The second type we call a related scheme. It's something like monochromatic, but broader in scope. You use groups of color which have a color base in common. Let's take a related blue table: Use blues with other colors having blue in them—like the greens or the purples and violets. The browns, rusts, and yellows also do well in this kind of setting.

The third type is built around contrast of two basic colors (like green and red or blue and pink). Use varying shades of each if you want to. Contrast may be gentle, with everything in pastels, or strong, with lights played against darks. Our setting on page 76 is contrasting, but had we matched our cloth to the pale blue in the plate, we would have had a related scheme.

Your centerpiece, of course, is part of your harmony and its tones obey the rules. And a word about the whites, blacks, grays, beiges. They can be neutral—but used in contrast, they behave just like any color. If you have white china, you know it.

You don't pay anything extra for good color in table-setting materials, in any price bracket. And you don't need a warehouse full of china and glass to get variety and high style into daily settings as well as party tables. We'll give you a tip right off:

HERE'S HOW TO JUDGE

LESSON II: Color Coordination of Materials Used

(Highest Possible Score 20 Points)

General factors to consider in planning or judging your own table setting: Does it harmonize both in color and in style with the room? Does its color fit the "theme" of the occasion, that is, if your setting is for a festive holiday, are the colors appropriate for this kind of celebration?

For color, most well-set tables fall into one of the following three classes. It is wise to keep to them.

- (a) Monochromatic, which uses only one definite color, or shades of that color together with neutrals.
- (b) Related, which uses colors of the same general cast—for example, blues with purples, or yellows with oranges.
- (c) Contrasting, which plays color opposites against each other.

But when you judge for color, you must also consider the general relationship of the shapes and forms used in your table composition. Here is a handy chart for rating a setting, piece by piece:

- | | |
|--|-----------|
| 1. Color Harmony or Color Contrast | 10 points |
| Color of China | (3) |
| Color of Table Covering and Napkin | (1½) |
| Color of Glassware | (1½) |
| Color of Centerpiece (including the container) | (2) |
| Color of Accessories | (2) |
| 2. Relation of Elements in Composition | 10 points |
| Variety of Shapes and Textures | (3) |
| Distribution of Elements | (3) |
| General Form of Centerpiece | (2) |
| Effectiveness of Accessories | (2) |

You vary your color pace with cloths and mats and centerpieces which you change often anyhow, not with dishes and glass which go on year after year. When we set tables for contests, we have hundreds of things to choose from. But when we set our own, most of us are limited to two sets of china and glass.

So pay attention to your table's basic dress—its china, glass, and silver. Be sure it carries out the spirit of your room in color and character. You'll compose endless variations around it. And another tip: If you're replacing a service or adding a new one, keep your other china and glass in mind. Co-ordinate new with old so that you can sometimes blend them in a single setting.

For composing those endless variations, you have help from the whole world of fabrics. Backgrounds may range from fine lace to brilliant straw mats, and any color which looks well with your dishes and your room will do.

You've heard color prescriptions for various table themes: serene shades for formal dinners, rich tones for festive occasions, pastels for a wedding or anniversary, robust effects for a teen-age buffet. How do you do it, all with the same limited stock of china and glass? As a "for instance," let's take a red and green Christmas theme and see what you can do if you don't have green or red in your china. Well, if strong blue predominates in the dishes, you might try a related scheme, with a green-blue cloth, green napkins, a touch of red in the centerpiece. If dishes are white strewn with pink flowers, go monochromatic; use roses and reds for napery and accessories, green leaves in the centerpiece. With yellow in the dishes, you might achieve red and green by using dark green in contrast or pale greens in a related setting, getting the red in the decorations in either case. And so on.

No, your basic china doesn't wed you to any one type of color scheme. Let's suppose you have pink china, and a teen-ager's buffet coming up. That's easy. Try a checked or striped cloth with pink in it—pink and a strong color. You'll be surprised how robust those dishes can look.

We said we'd take it easy on rules, but here are just a few:

1. Do pick your background color from your china if the china has a multicolor motif.

2. Don't mismatch colors. If you use several shades of a color, make sure that they don't clash.

3. Don't use all colors in the same proportions. Let one predominate.

4. Don't use too many kinds of dishes. Mix plain with decorated china, or either with glass or silver plates, but keep to two kinds.

A painter puts his colors together in a design on a canvas. You, Mrs. Table Artist, do the same.

Consider your all-over design. Your table in the wood is your canvas, and you must consider its size and shape if you want good balance and proportion. You must also think of the type of design. Do you want a unified effect? Then use a dark cloth with darkish china or a light cloth with light-toned things. Or do you want contrast by setting darks on lights or lights on darks?

Accent your design with your centerpiece. It can be smack in the middle of the table. But needn't be. On a long table, try it on one side, balanced by candles.

Avoid monotony of shape. For example, if table and plates are rounded, use foils: irregularly shaped mats, square salad plates, square or irregular centerpiece, glass with square feet. If table and dishes are squared, use round shapes with them.

Don't crowd your composition. This doesn't mean simply not to use too many things on your table. There is such a thing as apparent crowding, too. Too many motifs or clashing colors will do it. And remember that colors have visual weight. If your ground is light, a small dark object will seem to occupy as much space as a large light one. If the ground is dark, the reverse is true. So vary your lights and darks.

Balance the high and the low. This is especially important on a buffet table where you have piles of plates and masses of silver.

Vary your textures. Especially in monochromatic schemes, play smooths against roughs for contrast.

Don't use accessories you don't need for serving food or to improve the design. After all, you don't wear all your own jewelry at once, and neither should your table.

Here's How the Heating System Works

Because its wall of windows faces west for the view rather than south for the sun, the heating system of this house in New York State had to be good. Copper coils embedded in cement-plaster ceiling do the trick (solid lines on plan below). In the study (left), where heat loss is great because of large proportion of glass, coils also run through the floor (dotted lines on plan). Summer comfort is built in as well, for that clerestory makes for excellent ventilation as well as remarkable light. In summer, cool air enters the windows while hot air rises to top of sloping roof, exits through operating casements in clerestory

58 Years Old

(Begins on page 58)

That flagstone terrace, topped by airy lattice, does look a lot better. Then came the windows. Instead of the prim ones, generous spans of glass now bring in light and air.

The "before" and "after" plans on page 58 tell the inside story. The only real structural addition was that small breakfast room. But there was plenty of division and subtraction. On the first floor, reception hall and parlor were made into one whopping big living room. Other rooms retained their floor plans, though the back stairs were moved. However, except in the living room, the high ceilings were lowered.

Upstairs, that master bedroom is worth a covetous look. Two smalls made one big, and hall closets became a dressing room, full of built-ins. The middle bedroom, occupied by two cowboys, aged 8 and 9, didn't change. But the room-sized hall became a corral of a closet and bath.

Did remodeling cost a fortune? It might well have if the materials in the house hadn't been sound and re-used with wisdom, and if Dr. Klein didn't have a hand in some carpentry.

From the Inside Out

wall isn't interrupted by conventional heavy supports to carry the roof.

2. It's a one-level house without a step, even to the terrace.

3. Every room opens from the living room; there's only one tiny hall.

4. Living room and study, one continuous sweep, take up half the house. To make up for this, there's no dining room, and bedrooms aren't large.

5. For a nature lover, that study is a real work of art. It's glass on three sides.

6. Pictures on page 136 show books to be important part of the design, making walls in living room and study. And under that whole expansive wall of windows, there's a deep hanging bookshelf, for a collection of oversize volumes.

7. This five-room house has ten closets in addition to the mammoth enclosed storage space in the carport.

8. The house, built on a concrete slab over gravel fill, needs no basement. Floors are asphalt tile and colored cement. Its exterior walls, made of 1 x 4 Douglas fir vertical siding, rest on concrete block foundations. Its fireplace, built with second-hand brick, is handsomely set for textural effect. Windows, an important part of its being, are 1/4-in. plate glass set in aluminum frames. Ceilings, which hold heating coils, are cement plaster. The roof, part flat and part low slope, is a built-up type with gravel surface.

Garden

and if possible some of the bedrooms) should open onto the garden. If necessary, turn a window into a door to provide free and easy access.

FEATURE existing trees. They may provide needed shade for a terrace, or an especially handsome one may become a focal point of the whole garden, such as the hub of a pattern or the terminus of an axis. Don't overlook the importance of shadows—on lawn, walls, fences, patio. A garden without shadows can be uninteresting and mediocre, however "correct" and appealing its ground plan may appear on the drawing board. Trees properly chosen and located are no detriment to a flower border; some choice plants do best in partial shade. So don't be hasty in taking out trees, and don't be afraid to plant some if needed.

MAKE USE of the original topography if possible. Some leveling may be necessary, but variation in levels makes for a more interesting picture. Besides, grading is expensive and the less you must have done the better.

KEY your garden plan to your climate. Hot, dry summers may limit the use of some perennials; in fact, it might be best, after the bright color of a spring border, simply to keep brown and withered leaves removed and depend on the pleasant, cool effect of the foliage. Less work, too.

RELATE the pattern or style of your garden to the architecture of your house. Lines and masses composing the setting can, and should, tie in with those of the building.

ADJUST your garden pattern to the needs and activities of all members of the family group. Even a small lot can provide a terrace for living and entertaining, a game area for recreation, and space for perennial borders or rose beds.

MAKE the garden entrance inviting whether by means of a gate, a rose arch, a pair of specimen evergreens, small flowering tree, or other feature.

COMBINE dollars and sense in your garden spending. Buy the best plants you can afford (cheap stock is often fast-growing but correspondingly short-lived). Use as many as the plan calls for and no more. Visualize them as they are going to be five and ten years hence. Think of the maintenance of your garden in terms of time and effort, of man hours. Remember that grass edges require trimming, hedges shearing, lawns mowing. Go easy on plants of doubtful hardiness—unless you want, and can afford, to experiment. Buy not for blossom beauty alone, but for the whole plant effect, in all seasons, under all conditions.

In short, in your first garden venture, first plan generally, considering the family's needs, the cost, the maintenance. Next, plan in more detail the various elements. Then start the project, and carry it on from season to season. You will find it an interesting, absorbing occupation.

EDITOR'S NOTE: We "point with pride" to the illustrations, here and on page 74, of Mr. Korbobo's unique and graphic method of depicting the growth of a garden according to a plan. He developed his "Plan Animator" at the suggestion of, and in cooperation with, Dr. R. B. Farnham, secretary of the Horticultural Society of New York, then his chief at Rutgers. Since 1946, he has perfected the use of cut-outs of felt and flocked paper which he lays against a flannel-covered board on an easel. He has staged demonstrations of good and bad home planting for hundreds of groups and before television cameras. But this is, we believe, his first attempt to carry out an actual plan for magazine reproduction. To do it, he had to make a large charcoal sketch of the finished garden, then individual patterns for each separate feature, many in triplicate or duplicate to indicate plant growth. Finally, each of the nearly 300 pieces had to be cut out of the right colored flocked paper—and kept track of. A real achievement.

Want Something Different?

—Get a
Shrimp Plant

As women become more and more interested in beautifying the inside of their homes with flowers when they cannot work with them outdoors, a plant somewhat different from the ordinary is always welcome. The Shrimp Plant certainly is different.

I first became interested in this odd-looking subject while visiting a friend in the hospital where it not only testified to the worth-whileness of giving plants to invalids and shut-ins, but also attracted a surprising amount of attention from nurses and doctors. Then and there, I made up my mind that I was going to own one.

Upon looking into the cultural requirements of Beloperone guttata (that being the plant's botanical name), I learned that it is one of the easiest of plants to increase, by rooting stem cuttings in sand or water. Being unable to locate a plant in any local florist shop, I telephoned my friend and asked if she still had the one given her when she was sick. She had, and, without waiting for a hint from me (although I'm sure she suspected my motive!), she generously insisted that I take a cutting from her now somewhat overgrown specimen. I did, put it in a shallow

In favored locations, Beloperone can become a mound of soft green showered with pink flower heads

the Value of Plywood
Subflooring"

"Everyone profits by experience. That certainly was true when Chris and I built our first house. We helped plan it. Even helped select the materials.

"Some things worked out fine. Some didn't. We splurged on floor coverings—bought the best. But we economized—or thought we did—on things like subflooring. Mistake! After we moved in, we found our floors began to develop little humps and hollows. And they squeaked like a haunted house.

"It's going to be different in our new house. Our architect told us about plywood. It's far and away the best for subfloors, he said. Makes floors look better, last longer. The big panels lay flat and stay flat. That's because plywood won't cup, shrink, swell, warp or squeak. It keeps out drafts. Makes floors warmer, too.

"Our builder agreed—said you can't beat plywood subfloors for strength and firmness. It even means extra protection against wind-storm and earthquake. And happy news! We found when you add up all the costs, plywood is as economical as it is practical. Our plywood subfloor was laid in less than half the time needed for other materials."

Something Different

pan of sand, moistened it well, and placed it in my sunniest and warmest window. Some people say all cuttings should be kept in the dark for several days, then brought into the light and given bottom heat. But at that time (early spring) my nice, sunny window sill, which provides just the right conditions for starting geraniums, seemed to offer what the Shrimp Plant needed, so I established the cutting there. Within a month it had rooted and was ready to be transplanted from its sand bed to a small pot of garden soil enriched with a commercial dried sheep manure. It made a nice decorative specimen until, in late spring, it had to be repotted. I then set it out in my flower border for the summer, where I watched with delight the unfolding of the curious little terminal sheaves of pinkish brown bracts which give the plant its common name. By fall, when it must be brought back indoors, I will have started new plants for use in my windows this coming winter. I am told that, under ideal conditions, plants will flower when only three or four inches tall; also that, once you get a cutting well established, you can count on having all the Beloperones you want in a few months.

That's fortunate. For, at least in my neck of the woods, it is hard to find a Shrimp Plant in a florist shop. Florist after florist, when asked, "Why, since they are so easy to grow, don't you carry them?" said in effect, "We just don't get any demand for them; we haven't had one for years." Well, maybe my inquiries started something and I shall live to see them peeking out at me from every florist's window. I hope so.

Beloperone guttata, a native of Mexico, likes sun, plenty of water—and little else. It's a house plant with no bugs. Its only drawback, that I can see, is a tendency to become leggy. But cutting it back to 18 inches or so when necessary provides a good chance to get new plants from 3- or 4-inch cuttings. When they are rooted and start growing, pinch out the tips of the shoots to keep the little plants stocky and make them bushy. Like Poinsettia, Beloperone owes its showiness not to its blossoms, but to its showy bracts. Inconspicuous, two-lipped white flowers protrude from between the overlapping bracts looking, for all the world, like legs dangling from a tiny shrimp.

Of course, if you live in a frost-free climate, you can handle it as all-year-round garden material and let it grow into a big handsome plant like that shown at the bottom of page 141, as photographed near Los Angeles. But even where it needs cold weather protection, you (and your friends) can get a lot of pleasure from it.

Traditions

people" became involved in meeting a magazine deadline, and completely muffed the transaction. "Charlie" took the rap.

Holidays are traditional in themselves, but it is the customs a family develops for those holidays that make them important. Like our Fourth of July flowers. Before we had our flagpole, we celebrated one Fourth by planting rings of red, white, and blue flowers around our lamppost. We still do it every year.

Halloween means (for us at least) that we have been going back to the same country produce stand for 15 years to let the youngsters pick out their own pumpkins for jack-o-lanterns. It means that once more we get the cluster of colored ears of corn to tie to our front door in the New England sign of "welcome," to be left up until replaced with our Christmas wreath. It means dressing up the youngsters for their annual "trick or treat" call upon the neighbors. Halloween night. This is a mild sort of blackmail in which costumed and masked junior racketeers inform homeowners that unless treated to cookies, candy or pennies, they will play a trick on them. It's best to pay.

Thanksgiving, too, brings out traditional things in many homes. One at our house has been going on for years: an old crackled chinaware cranberry mold shaped like an ear of corn. Thanksgiving wouldn't be official without it.

At Christmas, the youngsters make Christmas-tree garlands by stringing ropes of red berries and fluffy popcorn to vie with the modern electric lights. They are traditions from the past worth taking out of our memory cedar chest once a year when we take out concrete things—like the tree ornaments, some of which we have treasured for more than 20 years.

Our front-door wreath, too, is more than just a habit. For the past 15 years we have been making our own for the seasonal fun of it, and the pleasure we get from doing it is worth the effort. There is a little hillside a few miles from home, where the ground pine grows in thick abundance. We found it years ago and made our first wreath from it. When Susan came along, she too joined the yearly trek. And when Freddie arrived, he also joined the safari, riding into the woods the first years in a packbasket on my back and riding out again in the center of a basketful of soft green sprays. At home, we all join in to strip the vines and build the wreath on the same old circle of wall board we've always used. To make it even more our own, we recently added at least a little sprig from our own small holly trees.

Why Tampax is so different

Many women are surprised to find how different Tampax really is when contrasted with the type of sanitary protection they have known since childhood. Tampax is not just another brand, but actually a different kind of sanitary protection.

No belts, pins or pads

Once you understand that Tampax is worn "internally" you begin to see how belts, pins and external pads can all be discarded. No longer need this harness produce bulges or ridges under one's dress.

Only a fraction of the bulk

Neat and tiny as it is, Tampax is very absorbent. And after insertion (with dainty applicator) you cannot even feel its presence. Disposal is extremely easy as Tampax is naturally very much less in bulk than the older types.

Can be worn in shower

Yes, ma'am! You can leave the Tampax in place during your tub or shower—also while swimming! College girls particularly are crazy about it. Actresses, nurses, office workers—millions of women. Enlist in the Tampax ranks now!

Invented by a doctor

Made of pure surgical cotton, Tampax causes no odor or chafing. Buy at drug or notion counters in 3 absorbencies—Regular, Super, Junior. Whole month's supply slips into your purse. Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.

Traditions

Even some Christmas gifts (not neckties!) are becoming traditional. One in particular. It goes to a very dear old cousin with a sparkling sense of humor and a love of surprises. Packing her Christmas box is an event. Her gift is surrounded with extras that have become tradition with us. There is nothing stuffy about Cousin Pattie and nothing stuffy about those extras: a mousetrap complete with catnip mouse, a can of beer, and a police whistle (for elderly wolves).

Don't be too late in starting your own traditions. I am afraid one of our latest is almost over. Perhaps it can have a long life in your family. Help yourself! Our youngest, Freddie, has become slightly skeptical of old Santa. Not too openly, of course, just in case the old gentleman should happen to be the McCoy. But my wife and I felt that a little concrete evidence might hold him over for another year. How about his hearing Santa's sleigh on the roof? So, after supper last Christmas Eve, I tossed a ball of heavy cord over the ridgepole above Freddie's bedroom and tied a string of sleighbells to one end. Later, while The Night Before Christmas was being read to him in bed, I sneaked out and pulled the sleighbells up one side of the roof, over the ridgepole, and down the other side. Freddie's mother reports that the effect was terrific. It should hold him for another year.

Traditions are fun to start, and fun to keep going. Look around your home; you may have some of your own right now—traditions you haven't recognized as such. Anything which is fun for the family as a whole should be repeated. If it is as much fun the second time as the first, you have made one. It's up to you from there on. Let's keep the tradition mortality rate low. They make for stronger family ties—the kind that can take some pretty tough stretching over the years without ever quite breaking. Such family ties are something like the green ones on St. Patrick's Day—traditional.

Once a woman realizes how important the practice of complete hygiene (including intimate internal cleanliness) is to married happiness, her health, after her periods and to combat a grave odor at its source—how much happier her life can be!

And of course, modern, well-informed women have found out about ZONITE—how no other type liquid antiseptic-germicide tested for the douche is so POWERFUL yet SAFE to tissues. (This is an absolute truth proved by scientists.)

On the day the ZONITE principle was developed by a world-famous surgeon and scientist, women forever became free from the dangers of using harmful poisons—over-strong solutions of which may burn and desensitize delicate tissues. No longer did they have to rely on weak, ineffective 'kitchen make-shifts.' ZONITE changed all this!

So Your House Is For Sale!

EUNICE BRYSON SMITH

Our house has been, too—for a long time. It happened this way. Having reached middle age, and having lived in the same comfortable home for 16 years, my husband and I decided to buy a small ranch-type house. We had raised our family and reached the age when many possessions and a large house were more of a burden to us than a joy. We had read that the modern way to live was to possess so little that it would leave you free. With a modern house, all you have to do is to "turn the key in the lock" and follow the sun, moon, stars, or whatever intrigues you. "The modern, functional home runs itself," so we read.

So we decided to sell our house, and we thought it would be easy. We happen to live on the shore of Lake Erie in a quiet suburb of a large city. We're fond of the water, and took it for granted that all other normally sensible people were crying for lake-front property and that our house would practically sell itself overnight. What a mistaken presumption! We are now of the opinion that people are acquainted with water only as something that comes from a tap—to be used for sanitation or as a means of quenching thirst only when nothing else is available. We had read for years of the "housing shortage." I might say now that that is, and has been for some time, a huge fallacy.

During the time our home has been for sale, we have had many, many people through it. We find that our solid, well-built older house is competing with over 300 small, new, modern homes in this vicinity alone. The fact that they are built of unseasoned wood, and that some are of questionable construction means nothing to the buying public as long as they have the much advertised "turn the key in the lock" functionalism.

We learned a lot about just what people look for today in a home. We have always taken joy in the fact that our living room was spacious enough to easily accommodate four card tables to serve buffet dinners for 16 guests. It also has been a haven for secret high school fraternity meetings, and for teen-age dance-band rehearsals. Our large basement has many a time been the experimental laboratory for sprouting chemical engineers in the teen-age group. Our screened-in porch has provided sleeping, as well as summer eating space, and it has offered us cool comfort and beauty for years. In short, this house has been a Home. But these features mean nothing, apparently, these days.

House Is For Sale

Because I happen to be an interior decorator, people invariably admire the décor. But we have none of the latest labor savers, no pine-paneled recreation room, and our heat is provided only by good old gas-fired steam. I now often wonder how we managed all these years to live, entertain, and be a respectable civic-minded family in such an ark.

Living in a house which is open for inspection by the public affords you just about as much privacy as living in New York's Grand Central Station. I am sure everyone in my position has had experiences similar to mine, some just trying, some nerve-racking, and others just plain funny. Like the morning my head was full of lathery shampoo, and a real estate agent brought a family through, and I had no place to hide, since they go from basement to attic. And there was the time I was awakened by having five strangers walk into the bedroom. I had closed, but not locked, the door.

I paint water colors and had an order for a still-life composed around driftwood. The only suitable space to set up my subject seemed to be the breakfast-nook table. True to form, I was interrupted by prospects, and I will never forget the look of incredulous shock on the face of the woman when she saw a five-foot log perched on top of what was obviously a constantly used breakfast table. She left in a hurry, probably convinced that I was a madwoman.

No meal is ever interrupted. Either the phone rings (a call for an appointment) or realtors come tramping through with prospects. No dirty ash trays can be tolerated, no dust, no transient egg shells in the sink for even five minutes. No peace!

Perhaps when we are finally settled in our small, beautiful "push-button" house in the woods, we may look back on these experiences as amusing. In fact, we're sure we will, for now I can tell all of you who are having similar trials in the process of selling older homes that they are worth enduring. When you finally do sell your house, you'll be able to live the rest of your days in "turn the key in the lock" ease, and "push-button" convenience. You see, our house has just now been sold, and we, too, have succumbed to the modern features demanded by house buyers today.

CORRECTION: In the article "Floorings—the choice is not easy" on page 52 of our September issue, The American Home said with reference to cork tile as a flooring material "... Though its insulating properties are a major asset, they prohibit its use with radiant-panel floor heating."

We were wrong: Although cork tile has not as great a degree of heat conductivity as certain other flooring materials, it has been successfully installed as a flooring material over radiant-heating coils. The insulating factor is about equivalent to that of wool carpeting.

Rate Yourself on this Home-Owners Quiz!

Q. How much does insulation reduce fuel bills?

- ☐ About 5% ☐ Up to 45% ☐ Depends on furnace

A. KIMSUL* insulation, installed in walls and ceilings, can provide the maximum saving in fuel—up to 45% each year. At this rate, a yearly fuel bill of, for instance, $200, is cut almost in half, and in an average 6-room home, the money thereby saved pays for the insulation within two years. What's more, these savings continue for the life of the house, because KIMSUL is a permanent insulation.

Q. Can I install my own insulation?

- ☐ No ☐ With proper equipment ☐ Yes

A. Many insulations are irritating to the skin, or require skilled labor and special equipment for efficient installation. But KIMSUL is the home-owners' insulation—it is non-sifting and kind to the skin. You can buy it in easy-to-carry rolls at building supply dealers, take it home in the car, and install it yourself. As each roll is opened, the blanket is expanded and cut to desired lengths, then stapled to wall studs and ceiling joists.

Q. In an average uninsulated house, where is the greatest heat loss?

- ☐ Walls ☐ Roof ☐ Floors

A. In a 2-story house, because the wall area is greater than the roof area, most heat is lost through the walls. In a 1-story house, the greatest loss is through the roof. In either case, the best protection at lowest cost is obtained by insulating both walls and ceilings.

Q. For greatest insulating efficiency, should insulation—

- ☐ Fill the walls and ceilings ☐ Leave air spaces

A. The provision of an air space on both sides of the insulation is a prime requisite for protection against condensation. Important too, the air spaces act as additional barriers against heat loss. Unlike loose-fill or "too thick" insulations, both Regular and Reflective types of KIMSUL are installed on this "breathing wall" principle for greatest all-round protection. And because the KIMSUL blanket consists of many individual layers of fire-resistant cellulose fibers, millions of tiny air cells are created to trap the air, provide highest insulating value per square foot.
