... CATHERINE NISSLY, our new Food Editor who would cook just for the love of it, has an estimable professional background. For many years, she developed recipes for such famous A & P brands as Ann Page, Sunnyfield and White House, and was on the staff of General Foods. She loves to visit unusual restaurants, collect antiques, paint in oils.

... CLARENCE E. PARTCH owns one of the most extensive collections of Meissen china we've seen. Dean of the School of Education at Rutgers for 25 years, he has taught for 45 years—in one-room rural schools, and in the graduate schools of two universities. In addition to being a collector of antiques, he is an excellent craftsman, builds handsome furniture.

... ANNA MAY WILSON is Kitchen Consultant for the Chicago Heart Association. For the past two years she's been teaching women how to use their heads to save their hearts, mostly by putting their kitchens in order. You can see her kitchen, very much in order indeed, on page 58. She credits it with providing her with free time for lecturing and teaching.

... HENRY E. DOWNER grew up on the Isle of Wight, studied the plants there (especially hollies, page 36) and, logically, became an horticulturist. Trained on estates, nurseries, and at the Kew Botanic Garden, he came to America and taught horticulture at Smith College for seven years, and at Vassar for 21, "graduating" to retirement with the class of '52.

... GEORGIANA ROBERTSON purchased, several years ago, a dull little house—because there wasn't another house to be had. The Robertsons being "putters and pack rats," it's a dull little house no longer. Motifs adapted from their store of Meissen china have made it bright and beautiful, and some of those very designs have been added to our collection.

... PERRY GRANT, whose bathroom (variety Early American self-designed) we show on page 43, concerns himself with furniture making, too. In between saw swipes and hammer blows, he writes for the Ozzie and Harriet show, and free lances in humor. Married to a "mighty sweet girl named Edith," he's the father of a baby daughter.

DISCOVER YOUR HOME TOWN

RUTH M. MALONE

Each winter we sit by the fire and dream of far-away places we hope to visit come summer—then summer finds us feeling that we need our money for something else, so we stay home again.

But never did we have so wonderful a summer as this past one when we realized we had been "home town blind." There were many interesting places along our own beaten paths.

When we visited strange cities in the past, we always stopped by the local Chamber of Commerce to learn of places of interest—now we did just that at home, and were amazed at the things we found. Our little town of Camden, Arkansas, with population of 12,000, boasted of a Civil War relic, Poison Springs Monument, that we had passed often, but had never stopped to see—nor had we read about the place. Now we know what it really means and the part it played in making history in the South.

One day we spent on the river front. Old-timers there told us many tales of the river in bygone days. The showboat became real to us as one elderly river captain told us about showboats that floated down our river years ago. The children were so fascinated by the nets he was making, that he taught them how to knot the cords to make beach bags and stoles I had seen in a fashion magazine.

Home-town exploring turned up many historical places. One had been a stagecoach stop, and was now occupied by a woman who was kind enough to show us all over the house; we even saw the trunk in the attic where her grandfather hid when the Union troops camped here. The place would delight any antique lover, for the original wallpaper, carpet, and much of the original furniture was still there. The Confederate Cemetery with its monuments gave us many epitaphs of unusual interest, and our children were more interested in a Sunday afternoon spent there than they had been in many of the historical out-of-town shrines. One of our town's oldest buildings, the charming little library, with its cobwebs and dust, gave us a wealth of ideas on a rainy afternoon. Blueback spellers and McGuffey readers as well as many first editions showed us the place was truly rich in history.

One morning, we took the city bus and rode its route. The people who lived along the way, many of whom were strangers, became friends as we chatted with them. This unplanned sight-seeing trip ended up at the pottery plant, so we took advantage of our luck and made a tour through it. Though this plant is known throughout the country, we had never seen it before.

We heard of a bird sanctuary at the home of some newcomers from California, so we called on them and learned not only about birds, but many beautiful native plants these people had found in the woods close by. The rest of our vacation we spent finding some of these plants for our own yard.

Yes, we were lucky in our discoveries, but no matter where you live, you can have a wonderful vacation discovering the interesting and instructive possibilities of your own home town.

As an introduction to this program of ART TREASURES OF THE WORLD we invite you and your family to examine two beautiful collectors' Portfolios of paintings by Van Gogh and Toulouse-Lautrec—32 paintings reproduced in exquisite full color, 30 of which are mounted on 11" x 15" ready-to-frame mats. Each portfolio is handsomely bound with a full color illustrated cover and covered with acetate. Although these Portfolios are sold to subscribers at $2.95 each, you may have both the Van Gogh and Toulouse-Lautrec Collections for only one dollar.

So perfectly do these magnificent reproductions duplicate the brilliant colors, intricate detail and fine shadings that art teachers confidently use them as substitutes for the originals! So perfectly in fact, that you will be tempted to reach out and feel the textures of pigment and canvas... run your fingers over the visible brush marks!

AN ART EDUCATION AT YOUR FINGERTIPS

In his own words each authority contributing to this program has simply and clearly explained why the artist deserves to rank with the immortals of art; what there is about his works that keep them fresh and inspiring through the changing decades.

Here, for you and your family to enjoy, are the breathtaking scenes, still lifes, landscapes, nudes, portraits that have brought pleasure to countless art lovers, students, children.

In addition, you will receive a course in Art Appreciation. With every portfolio a treatise by a famous scholar on such subjects as color; composition; technique; abstraction; will be sent to you. The course is distributed only to members.

BREATHTAKING BEAUTY FOR PICTURE-POOR WALLS

The same radiant beauty that draws millions of people to see these masterworks in the museums and galleries will fill your home with breathtaking color and design. And, since all the matted reproductions are identical in size, you can interchange pictures freely—make your walls a gallery of great art, for as little as 19¢ each!

HOW THIS COLLECTOR'S PLAN OPERATES

Mail the coupon at once, together with your dollar, and we will promptly send you your Van Gogh and Toulouse-Lautrec Portfolios and a free copy of the first treatise of your Art Appreciation Course. In addition, we will be happy to extend to you the courtesy of an Associate Membership. Associate Membership does not obligate you to purchase any additional Portfolios ever! If you do not wish to purchase any particular Collection, simply return the form provided for that purpose. A section from the Art Appreciation Course will be included free with every Portfolio you accept.

ART OF ATTENDING AN AUCTION

What is an auction? Why, it's a sport, a day's outing where the fans "bag the big ones" in bargains—for almost everything goes for its wholesale price, or below. It's a treasure hunt, a competition full of jubilation, disappointment—and fun. The auction has been an accepted way of trading since Roman times, and it is still the most practical way to dispose of estates and effects no longer needed. That's where the bargains come in—I know of a young intern and his wife who furnished a six-room house for less than $400 by attending city auctions.

It's as hard to find out from a fan what auctions he attends as it is to get the name of that good little seamstress. But city newspapers list the city ones, and the big-league country country auction offers you a fine, fun-packed day—plus an opportunity to pick up valuable small things and useful large ones at bargain prices. It's a h-and-carry proposition, so bring a station wagon or small truck if you can. Truckers, often on the premises, can crate and ship largest items

Before the sale, examine items and decide which to bid on, and how high to go. A good auctioneer knows his merchandise and can explain it, as Mr. Slatoff does here, pointing to a maker's mark which determines the value of an old tureen. Babelots and background are what the collectors of antiques and contemporary enthusiasts both go for

"That sheathing will cut air-conditioning costs"

Whether you're building air conditioning into your new home or thinking of adding it later, you couldn't plan a better start than this. Make sure the framework of your house is covered with Armstrong's Temlok® Sheathing.

Armstrong's Temlok is made of wood fibers pressed into big, tough boards. Besides building a stronger house, Temlok Sheathing is a natural insulating material. It adds important insulation to the walls... and at no extra cost!

Just as Temlok's insulating value cuts heating costs in winter, it cuts air-conditioning costs in summer. In some cases, the use of Temlok Sheathing will even permit use of a smaller, less expensive air-conditioning unit.

In addition to these savings, Armstrong's Temlok Sheathing goes up fast, saving greatly on labor. It usually costs less to use than ordinary lumber sheathing. For complete details on all the advantages of Temlok and other Armstrong materials, plan to see your lumber or building materials dealer soon.

Fair Play for Woodstock's Library

EVA BEARD

On Library Fair Day in Woodstock, New York's art colony in the Catskill Mountain foothills, you must come early to find parking space within half a mile. At 2 P.M., trumpets from the school band herald the cutting of the ribbon at the ornamental gateway, and in rushes the crowd to tables and booths well stocked with all manner of articles, and to the famous Flea Market, where treasures are sold for a song. The clown's band strikes up, children scurry after the balloon girl, to the puppet or pet show, or for a pony ride, and things are off to a fine start.

In the crowd are librarians from miles around, seeking to discover how and why a simple, glorified rummage sale is able, during four hours on a hot July afternoon, to add some $3,500 to the Library's treasury. The answer is that the Fair just grew, and everybody works at it. The first was held in 1917, and others up to 1927 brought in a gratifying $200 to $250 each. Then they became annual affairs. In 1929, Mrs. Walter Weyl, widow of the first editor of the New Republic, gave to the village, in his memory, the little century-old house that is now the Library, and on whose grounds the Fairs are held. Since '39, the returns have risen steadily so that, in 1948, it was possible to build a $20,000 fireproof addition that added vitally needed space for book storage, a reading room, and a children's room—all without changing the appearance of the original building from the front. In 1949, came the town board's first grant of $600 to eke out the annual $100 allotted to every free library by the State. A

After the Fair opens to a fanfare of trumpets from the school band, this informal band of local celebrities—artists, writers, musicians, etc.,—takes over. Led by the clown, it wanders about (followed by nearly everybody under ten), adding melody, color, and merriment until, as the afternoon ends, its last tune bids farewell to the departing throng yearly membership campaign brings new friends and increasing funds, but the Fair remains the financial backlog for this notable small community library.

Of course, Woodstock is favored with an unusual wealth of talent—painters, cartoonists, musicians, dancers, actors, writers. But in addition, the Fair often discovers and benefits by other unsuspected talents—such as the ability to organize. Next year's Fair chairman and staff are usually selected while this year's Fair is under way; booth and department heads train younger workers to succeed them. Weeks before Fair time a publicity committee starts sending news items to papers within 30 miles; then follow radio broadcasts, posters for display in neighboring villages, announcements to go in R.F.D. mailboxes, feature stories for metropolitan newspapers. On Fair Day, a loud-speaker radio car tours community and countryside. Each year brings new attractions like "Sharkey the Seal," a Gay Nineties background for the Midway, shooting gallery, photographer, giant "Wheel of Chance," drawings by a local artist to be raffled off. Always new possibilities, ideas, thrills.

The long, hot afternoon draws to a close. Tables and counters are bare, and buyers stagger away under their loads of purchases as the voice of the auctioneer, disposing of the last few items, is loud on the landscape. From its green knoll, the old white house looks benignly and gratefully down upon a colorful, weary but contented throng resting in the shade of the huge sugar maples. Then a last tune floats through the air. The last of the crowd slowly thins away . . . it will be twelve months to another Library Fair.

Features of the annual Library Fair by which Woodstock, N. Y., raises as much as $3,500 in a single afternoon for the attractive little institution which serves the community so well. Here, above, contribution and book tables; below, toy tables—one of many special appeals to the younger generation. Historically: the Library opened in 1913 in a corner of a restaurant; in 1924 it had a $400 budget; 1927 saw the first annual Fair; 1929 brought a real building, the gift of Mrs. Walter Weyl; 1948, the $20,000 fireproof addition at rear of house was dedicated; 1949, the town board made its first appropriation ($600) for the Library. But the Fair remains the financial backlog Architectural Photography of Houses by Robert C. Cleveland (F. W. Didge Corporation). Price $7.50.

. . . A most competent treatment by a highly skilled expert that offers scads of information both to professional and amateur photographers. Some 325 examples of Cleveland's best work, handsomely presented, illustrate the various points covered in his treatise. The results shown should make anyone itch to focus a camera on a room or house. This is a real guidebook, full of basic principles and practices, plus a certain philosophical approach to this type of photography that makes for very pleasant reading. The author is not a stranger to AMERICAN HOME readers for, over the years, much of his work has appeared on our pages.

The Gardener's Trouble Shooter by Victor H. Ries. (Sheridan House) Price $3.50. . . After 25 years of teaching and helping gardeners, Professor Ries can still present facts and advice with a light touch as well as experienced authority. Writing "as one gardener to another," he ranges over many garden and plant problems and their probable solutions.

Picture Primer of Dooryard Gardening by Margaret O. Goldsmith. (Houghton Mifflin) Price $2.00. . . Companion primers have dealt with indoor gardening and attracting birds. This, on the planning, planting, and care of gardens "from plot to country acre," is simply packed with data, descriptions, directions (necessarily abbreviated) and illustrations in strong (sometimes exaggerated) colors.

Our Amazing Birds by Robert C. Lemmon. (Doubleday) Price $2.00.

. . . For bird lovers, these handsomely presented informal notes will be a lightful summary of familiar facts about 102 kinds. For others, they present a wealth of intriguing natural history to be read for relaxation, entertainment or as an introduction to the rewarding hobby of bird observation and study. Mr. Lemmon's mate comments are exquisitely illustrated by Don Eckelberry's life black-and-white paintings.

How to Make Good Movies published by the Eastman Kodak Company. Price $2.00. . . This revised edition gives a simple explanation of how to make good films for your own enjoyment. Stresses the value of proper focusing and posture, but offers ideas that enable you to get the most out of your subject material. Irons out questions on composition, continuity, editing, erases doubts about making movies at night or in color, and goes into comedy or trick shots for grandstanding at home. Thoroughly illustrated and without technical language, it is, as appropriately subtitled, "A complete handbook for the amateur movie maker."

Our Children

These Drugstore Cowboys are Good Citizens

MAURICE H. VINCENT

The Pill Rollers Club, Inc., an unusual organization of boys in Springfield, Illinois, is a wonderful example of the way in which the energy of young people can be harnessed successfully for the betterment of the community. Founded in 1930, in a drugstore owned by Charles Dungan, the Pill Rollers started as a social club and "hang-out" for neighborhood boys. Their common interests and the tireless, wise guidance of Mr. Dungan, turned a restless group of youngsters, banded together for a good time, into an organization that has won the admiration of Springfield citizens for its ready acceptance of the responsibilities of community service.

Ten years ago, Pill Rollers was made a member of the Inter-Civic Clubs of Springfield, an honor granted in recognition of impressive civic achievement. Their club was the only organization of high school boys so honored. Each year the average membership of about 100 boys, ranging from 16 to college age, learns the fundamentals of orderly, democratic self-government while engaged in raising funds for such projects as providing milk and ice for underprivileged babies, and Christmas gifts for the children of the Springfield Washington Street Mission.

The club came into being 23 years ago, when an informal group decided, under Mr. Dungan's direction, to give a dance. That first hastily planned affair netted the sum of $100. With the money came responsibility and the necessity for electing officers. The boys chose "Pill Rollers" as a name through admiration of their druggist sponsor, and adopted a mortar and pestle as their symbol. The boys give several dances a year now, which are open to the public. The money they earn is earmarked for the various charities whose goals they support. They work with the Community Chest, the Red Cross, the Shriners' Crippled Children's Fund, and the March of Dimes, among others.

Pill Rollers boast 2,000 members and alumni on their rolls. The

TERRAFLEX AND ASPHALT TILE

The Pill Rollers of Springfield, Illinois, a group of teen-age boys who have learned to find real pleasure in helping others, have a fine afternoon at the Washington Street Mission. In addition to telling yarns and entertaining the children with games, the boys make a material contribution to their welfare, supplying them each Christmas with toys and other presents. Active in a variety of charities, the club strives to promote a sense of responsibility and civic awareness boys are recruited from the high schools of Springfield, and there is nothing of the "snob" club about the organization. Boys are nominated by members and voted in by the rest of the body, the prime qualification being good moral character. After an impressive initiation, new members receive the coveted certificate of membership set with the official seal of the club. The boys meet twice each month, and although the major portion of their time is devoted to civic works, they manage to support both a bowling and a soft ball team. The Pill Rollers take great pride in the fact that the Springfield Junior Chamber of Commerce is their direct outgrowth, and assert with pleasure that the roster of any civic club in the city includes a goodly proportion of Pill Roller graduates.

Good Citizens

The 100 members of the Pill Rollers, ranging from 16 to college age, have a vital interest in democratic methods. They have formal meetings in the rooms of the Springfield Elks Club, and accomplish their aims with a dignity envied by many adult groups

Radiant Heating

Ready to build or buy? Then plan on enjoying new Bundyweld Ceiling Radiant Heating. It's the last word in today's heating—made possible by the fact that radiant rays will flow downward. It's simple in operation. Warm water flows silently through coils of Bundyweld Tubing in ceiling. Coils act like the sun, send down rays that radiate evenly throughout the room.

In winter, those radiant rays give you heating so comfortable, so clean and economical it's like having the sun in your ceiling. You live in draft-free, pleasing warmth. You enjoy even, healthfully moderate temperatures and fresh-feeling air. No gasping for breath, no goose pimples. And you pay no more for Bundyweld Ceiling Radiant Heating than you do for today's outmoded types.

Will you buy obsolete heating or enjoy the last word in COMFORT, CLEANLINESS, ECONOMY?

1 Spotless heating. Because your heating's so even, so free of drafts, it causes no dust deposits, no wall streaks. Your paint, furniture, draperies, and colors stay fresher years longer. Think of the house-keeping work, redecorating and cleaning expense you save.

2 No radiators, no registers. Bundyweld Tubing in ceiling is your sole heat source. No dust- and draft-spreading registers. No clumsy, dirt-collecting radiators or wall registers. You have new freedom in arranging furniture, hanging draperies. You gain in usable space.

3 Low cost. If you can afford to build or buy, you can have Bundyweld Ceiling Radiant Heating in almost any type of house you choose. First cost of this system is low. Savings in fuel, maintenance of system, cleaning, redecorating make this your lowest cost heating of all over the years.

4 Bundyweld Tubing helps make possible the low first cost of this exciting heating development. Bundyweld's the only tubing double-walled from a single strip. It's tough steel, copper-coated inside and out.

OWNERS: MR. & MRS. PAUL BLOCK, JR., TOLEDO, OHIO

The Blocks Buy an "Impossible"

TINA SATTERTHWAITE

You expect originality when busy, successful people who can afford to hire a raft of professional architects and decorators to work for them, choose to do it themselves—for sheer love of accomplishment. And if, like the Paul Blocks, they have the taste, talent—and enough conviction to create the time—to make a wonderful thing of this once “impossible” house, the results are bound to inspire you. Paul Block, publisher of a chain of newspapers which includes the distinguished Toledo Blade, has a scientific bent—he can wire anything, assemble a complicated high-fidelity system, build new life into an ailing radio or an ailing house. Marge Block, his wife, is a well-known newspaper columnist recently turned artist—and she’s quite a girl with a color scheme on canvas or in a house, and a master when it comes to designing and making draperies and bedspreads. Not standard people, the Blocks. And for them, no standard home. They looked at the ranch-types and at the big Georgians, then fell in love with a woodland site overlooking the dreamy

See “Where Credit Is Due” on page 92

The Living Room was Completely Transformed

Maumee River. Along with it came a 40-year-old log house which had been fairly "impossible" even in youth. Designed around the lines of a banjo clock, it was laced with hallways, but there was no real entry—you got in and out through French doors in the living room. A big reception room led to an octagonal hall, 35 ft. high, crowned by a cupola—but there was no dining room. The living room had a gratuitous balcony; kitchen and bedrooms were inadequate; logs were rotting. The Blocks took it. But because they are smart as well as bright, they moved in to live with its faults, and corrected none for six months. By then, they found virtues in things that had seemed monstrous—the balcony is perfect for their radio-phonograph, vast halls are great for big parties. Lovers of log houses flocked to see them because, as Marge observed: "Everyone wants to know someone who lives in a log house, even if they don't want to live in one themselves." Over the protests of such sentimentalists, off came the logs, up went insulation and wood siding, its lines emphasized by the louvered fence which frames the garden handsomely. Inside, Marge mixed old things with new to create a combination of elegance, comfort, and common sense you seldom encounter. In the setting above, for example, the chest from her old apartment is topped by an antique mirror bought for $35, flanked dramatically by sconces, and set off by proud chairs covered in practical sailcloth. But it's the continuity of color and of decorative themes which makes this decoration so good. The colors used throughout—

...then a Handsome Bedroom and other Bright Ideas

Master bedroom has two baths. One shown "before" and "after" here is also the powder room, its fine wallpaper imprinted with clouds. Upstairs bath at far right is decorated with fish Mrs. Block fashioned from gold-painted nailheads and cord. Below, schools of painted fish swim onto curtain cerulean blue, turquoise, cadmium yellow, cyclamen pink, viridian green—came first from a painting by Marge, and were later duplicated in housepaints. Pure, or in grayed-down tones, the same colors appear in every room, sometimes as accents, sometimes as the dominant notes—often punctuated by touches of gold, and lavishly contrasted with white and black. To “bring down” the high ceiling of the living room, she asked for—and got—“the blue of the sky on a hot summer’s day.” It takes taste to know when to be lavish. In the master bedroom, for example, the carpet is deep, and the lobster-bedizened fabric, full-gathered and plentiful. But the desk is a revived Victorian; the chest, an ordinary one,

...and a Study with Male Appeal bought unpainted—but treated to big pulls garnished with drawings of fish. Notice the unstandard still life above it—the ivy-filled lavabo, the yellow candles. In the den for the master, the same color theme is repeated, with assertive variations: the blue is deep, real red is introduced. It is no accident

This Nightmare became a Dream Kitchen

When big parties are in progress, dining room becomes a hallway, and the table folds up against a wall. To conceal the ugly gap between the top and the drop leaves, Marge designed this clever strip of wood that the ceiling of Paul Block's den should be made of accoustical tile to ensure quiet, for it was he who saw to it that this remodeled turn-of-the-century house behaves with mid-century efficiency. The baseboard heating system really heats the whole place; electrical outlets are ample (in the kitchen, every three feet); all plumbing is new, and in his bathroom, you'll even find a razor cleaner—run by the air compressor which operates their paint sprayer!

One of the most ingratiating and original rooms in the house is the dining room they coaxed out of the odd, cupola-topped octagonal hall. A ceiling reduced it to human proportions and, with its shimmer of gold and accents of crimson against deep cream backgrounds, it is a tasteful, unorthodox mixture of luxury and clever inexpensive improvisation, as light-hearted as it is aristocratic. The floor is linoleum; the sconces are golden; the table appointments are the finest. But old ice-cream-parlor chairs were bought for $2 each, brass-plated for $8, and padded by Marge with foam rubber covered in a metal-shot fabric. And it was Marge who designed the clever custom-made octagonal cordovan mahogany table shown in detail at your left. In this house in the woods by the river, birds and fish are the themes, and you'll see them not only on papers and fabrics, but in hard-to-find things as well. For example, the living room's antique bird cage, filled with leaves and flowers (cover). If she couldn't find the right accessories, Marge made them: fish in the upstairs bathroom, fish on the bedroom drawer pulls, and carved wooden fish, peppered with pearls and sequins, and placed on a living-room table.

An imaginative Dining Hall, dramatic Entry

Spacious reception hall off new entry and across from dining room, has an outdoors air. Brick wallpaper picks up where real brick leaves off, lanterns light it, fine poster acts like a painting

Shopping for HOLLIES

If it were December, that would refer to brightly berried sprays for Yuletide decoration. But at this season, it means holly plants to grow in the garden. Early fall is one of the recommended planting times (the other is early spring), and, thanks to the interest aroused in recent years by the Holly Society of America, and to specialists in the nursery business, various forms of holly are now available—and suitable—for a much larger portion of the country than once was believed possible. Of course, in favored regions where the soil is not likely to freeze hard, planting can be done throughout the dormant season—that is, when deciduous plants are without leaves. But before thinking about buying plants, or of selecting kinds for various purposes on the basis of the descriptions in the accompanying chart, you should give attention to such matters as proper soil preparation, the providing of the congenial environment, and the limitations imposed by the climatic conditions in your locality.

As to soil requirements, hollies, in general, like a soil of a sandy-loam type—not too dry, but sufficiently well drained to prevent sogginess. Plenty of organic matter is essential to the production of good sturdy growth, and that from oak leaf mold and sedge peat is especially good. In

Buy the Plans and Start Building

Now that new-fashioned families come in old-fashioned sizes, the homestead had better be planned to sleep 'em, feed 'em—and provide a haven for harassed parents. Few of the moderately priced houses that we've ever run across do that with such ease as this heartwarmer in which six or even seven kids could grow up happily. In Long Island, it sells for a bargain $19,900 (plus $2,500 if you'd like the attic finished). Equipped with our blueprints and complete list of materials, you can build it on your own piece of land—and that would be a wonderful bargain, too. (See Blueprint Order Form, page 91.)

Just tot up all of its outstanding merits—at least a baker's dozen. (1) Center hall plan—nonconflicting areas. (2) A gracious, traffic-free living room with handsome fireplace. (3) Honest-to-goodness dining room. (4) Well-organized kitchen with plenty of room to serve breakfasts and such. (5) Secluded master bedroom with private bath, and a big walk-in closet. (6) Second bedroom that can really take twin beds. (7) Third downstairs bedroom that easily adapts itself as a nursery, child's room, or den-guestroom. Or you can leave out the wall to create a whopping living room. (8) Second downstairs bath. (9) Exceptionally good expansion attic which takes on third bath plus two really spacious bedrooms—not low, cramped, unventilated boxes. Dormer windows go to the back; smart row of front windows means you don't spoil the handsome roofline by expansion. How to Have a Better Lawn with Less Effort

ELEANOR B. McCLURE and HAROLD HAYNES

If you're weary of annual struggles to maintain an attractive lawn, cheer up. You can enjoy a good bluegrass sod even if you live in a "crab grass belt" or a region reputedly hard on grass; and with a minimum of effort, too. For years lawn care was one of our most laborious and least rewarding garden tasks here in Missouri. Repeatedly, we sowed bluegrass only to raise a bumper crop of weedy grasses that soon clamored for renovation. One fall we spaded the lawn hoping the turned-under growth would supply needed organic matter; it did, and the next year's crab grass benefited! Twice we let the bluegrass go to seed—making our yard dreadfully unkempt and distressing our neighbors; but none of our measures paid off with any permanent improvement.

Now we are doing differently, using seed, equipment, and methods recommended

Aeration: By "plugging" soils that tend to pack and bake, you improve drainage and texture, economize on seed and fertilizer

The 4-Way Secret

1. AERIFICATION: To put more air
 2. GOOD SEED: To put more plant life
 3. FERTILIZATION: To put more food
 4. MULCHING: To put more humus
- } into the soil

Mulching: Combined rotary mowers and leaf-shredders grind grass and leaves into a fine mulch (above) that soon sifts down, decays, and becomes part of the soil, helping all that grows in it

Aeration: Home-garden type soil aerators are as easy to operate as a lawn mower. Larger, higher capacity machines can be rented with or without professional operators to start a soil improvement program

Aeration can also be done with spike-disc machines like this, as well as hollow spike devices for hand use (top of page) which lift out soil plugs that break down and become compost

PERRY GRANT

The wife looked me in the eye and said our bathroom stood out like an Eames chair at Mount Vernon, and what was the use of an Early American living room and all that, if we had to wash our hands in that ... that lavatory? The room in question seemed to me to be perfectly adapted to hand washing, but the wife assured me functionalism wasn't enough.

Right off, I could see the problem: Money. So after a few days, I came up with plans for the solution you see here. We made the key change on the ceiling—real Early American—by building a false ceiling with fake beams put in on a slant. Then, along one wall, a shelf to display our collection of shaving mugs. A small-patterned wallpaper went between the beams and on the wall over the mug shelf, and we brought the paper down into the room by using it to cover the shaped valance I made for the window. We needed more room to store things, so we built a cabinet of white pine (doors were ready-made), cut a hole in the top to hold our antique pitcher and bowl, and used Early American hardware. Finally, we threw in a couple of wrought-iron towel racks. Total cost, including light fixture and paint, but excluding husband's labor, was $36.50. Not bad for the privilege of washing our hands in Early American peace!

When they bought it, the cabin was tiny, but habitable. Eventually, the Dorrs tore off the porch (above) and added a living-room wing (right). Over the pond, at the other side of the house, they built a screened terrace larger than the original cabin had been

JANE FISHER

She loved the water . . . he loved the country . . . she liked the country, too, well enough—if cows and chickens didn't have to "come with"—and they both had roots in Dade County, Florida, and wanted their home to be well rooted, too. And so, the August Dorrs came up with Dorr's Pond which keeps them both very happy. But the phrase "came up" covers a lot of time and thought, for the Dorrs neither found their home as is, nor built it, exactly. They just sort of planted the idea of it, and helped it to grow. And when it comes to planning a landscape, and remodeling a house, and decorating a home, Helen Dorr certainly has a green thumb. (To see the elegant interior of this rustic house, turn to page 80.)

It started when they spotted a little cabin snuggled up to the rim of a five-acre rock pit. Once a servants' shack, the cabin had been somewhat modernized by a family of five who were camping out temporarily in its two tiny rooms. The fact that the pit didn't belong to the cabin's owners was the Dorrs' first disappointment. However, they finally arranged to buy the whole works and moved in. The question of whether to enlarge the cabin, or to use it as a guest house and build a new home on the property, was left for time to decide. Time decided in favor of the former, and now, several years, a couple of fiascos, and a few sets of blueprints later, they have the eminently satisfactory house you see here. Mrs. Dorr has water, Mr. Dorr has the country, and they both have a bonus of perfume-laden breezes.

First came work on the rock pit. After 18 truckloads of junk had been carted away, a beautiful pond with tiny islands was their reward. Now it is well stocked with bass that thrive on minnows that feed on algae that are nourished by fertilizer dumped into the water. But the pattern doesn't always hold: "We had a tragedy this spring," reports Helen Dorr, "the fish ate all our baby ducks."

When the pond was fresh and clean, they built an open deck over it, supported by five enormous tapering concrete beams anchored to the bedrock below the cabin, and very handsome viewed from the pond. Then they sat back for a year to enjoy it before making any decisions. But in their climate, open decks over ponds just don't work. So they covered it over and screened it in, and once they had such a fine

Meissen Patterns... paint them yourself

We'll bet heavily upon the popularity of these painting patterns—and that bet is backed up by some very ancient history. If you know old china, you'll recognize this ingratiating motif—the Meissen Onion pattern, beloved of collectors for hundreds of years. It originated in China long, long ago, and was skillfully translated by 18th-century German artists for use on early European porcelains. On china, it has been a best-seller ever since. But why, we asked ourselves, should its crisp blue and white beauty be confined just to one kind of thing when it is so universally appealing, so appropriate in any room, and so perfect for transforming ordinary things like doorknobs or window blinds into real aristocrats? No reason why! So we adapted it to authentic paint-it-yourself patterns which come with directions for the best way to apply the Onion to china, to wood, and to textiles. So delighted were we when we tried them, that we even designed a charming plywood mirror frame especially suited to our Onion garnish—and made the frame an AMERICAN HOME pattern, too. Owners of Meissen have probably already turned to our Pattern Order Form so that no time need be wasted in duplicating that remarkable tablecloth for themselves—but we can assure you that it's enchanting with plain white china as well.

The Care and Feeding of

EDITH RAMSAY

Anyone who owns an automatic dishwasher smiles so broadly at the mere mention of the word that their devotion is beautiful to behold—and why not, when this machine bypasses the messiest of homemaking jobs? It saves many hours per week; and when there is a washer, it's easy to convince Pa and the kids that using it is as much fun as running the electric trains. It changes your housekeeping habits, too, for with an ever-clean washer, you need do your dishes only when you have a full load—often just once a day. Also, it cuts down on colds as well as on work, for it has been proved that the most common and annoying of harmful bacteria are killed in one minute in the 140°-160° water a dishwasher uses—water too hot for washing dishes by hand. To get the best results, you have to use your common sense, and follow a few simple rules. And is it worth it!

BEFORE YOU DO ANYTHING—Be sure that your water is hot enough—and plentiful enough. The water in your dishwasher must be between 140° and 160°, for colder water will not get your dishes really clean and germ free. If your hot water supply is limited, don't run another appliance that uses water just before you do the dishes. If the water heater is some distance away, then, before starting the dishwasher, let the water run at the sink faucet until pipes are drained of cold water. Soft water is important too. If the water in your area is hard, give some consideration to a softener in the water-supply system of your house. (See April AMERICAN HOME, page 86.)

Cooking Utensils: Your dishwasher makes these "horribles" much less so. But you can't expect it to do jobs which, in hand washing, require long minutes of elbow grease with the aid of abrasives. So if the skillet or baking pan is greasy and charred, give it a light going over with abrasive before putting it into the washer. Sometimes things like egg beaters and spatulas also need a little pre-washer attention.

LOADING IS EASY, but give your dishwasher a fair chance. It can't do a good job if it is too crowded, or if the flat pieces overlap. Things won't come out clean if water doesn't get to every surface, so load cups, bowls, glasses, pots, and pans all bottoms up. Alternate small and large pieces in the racks. To make for good circulation of the water, place biggest things where they won't block off the water from the smaller ones. If you study the racks of your dishwasher, you will see that the best possible position for each piece is obvious, and remember that careful arranging and loading will pay off.

do not completely fill the washer, the load is probably too small for economical operation. That is when the dial can be turned to "On" (no detergent here) just long enough to give the soiled dishes a quick rinse so the food won't dry on them—two or three minutes will do the trick. When the next meal comes along, if there's still not a full load, give the dishes the same quick rinse. When the load is complete, put in the proper amount of detergent and wash the whole batch—at one time!

DISHWASHERS NEED LITTLE CARE. Every time you wash dishes, you wash the inside of the tub too. In areas where water is extremely hard, any hard-water scum can be flushed off by running the dishwasher through a complete cycle without dishes, using a cup of vinegar instead of a detergent. Don't let the small strainer over the drain in the bottom of the tub become clogged, and be certain that the impeller (that is the dasher that sprays the dishes) is free to rotate. You can give it a flick with your finger to make sure. Occasionally, dust the motor and parts, but be careful not to damage the wiring while you're cleaning. A cloth or a hose attachment on the vacuum cleaner does the job. You may have to remove a panel to get to the motor, but the instruction book will show you how to do this. Scouring powders will scratch the smooth finish of the dishwasher, so use only mild soap and water on the outside surfaces, and polish with one of the special appliance waxes.

IT'S EASY TO GET DISHES READY. In the majority of cases all you have to do is scrape off the loose soil (you don't have to scrape every tiny little speck) with a rubber spatula. You don't have to waste time rinsing the dishes—the dishwasher does that for you. There's no need to stack dishes either—just put them right in the washer. And don't wash a single piece by hand if it can be washed in the dishwasher. After all, everything is safe in a dishwasher because nothing moves but the water. Glassware is no problem either, and ordinarily, silver doesn't even need rinsing—but load with handles down. (Lipstick on dishes and tarnish on silverware do need a little pretreatment.)

THE RIGHT DETERGENT. Don't use anything that makes a lot of suds, for they cause such a cushion of suds that the water can't get through to the dishes, and you're even apt to find puddles of bubbles oozing out of the washer. Use the products recommended by the manufacturer. Always use the correct measured amount—don't just guess.

IT CAN DO OTHER THINGS, TOO: The dial control on a dishwasher is just as flexible as a thermostat on a range. It not only tells what is happening inside of that dishwasher, but it makes it possible to do many extra things you might not think of.

You can use a dishwasher as a sterilizer for baby bottles.

Use the dishwasher as a plate warmer. Few kitchens have the facilities for warming any quantity of dishes for serving. But since the average dishwasher has a capacity for complete service for six to eight, it is a simple job to load in clean plates, serving bowls, even cups and saucers—as you would for washing—and then turn the dial control to "Dry." When you're ready to serve, the dishes will be warm.

It gets ready for a party: When you are putting on the dog with the best china and glassware from the high cupboard shelf, wash off that light layer of dust in the dishwasher. It isn't necessary to go through the whole cycle—a quick rinse does it.

The Roses that Bloom in the Fall

Flower Arrangement by Betty B. Merriam

Said Poet Swinburne: "The year of the rose is brief." And so it was, until horticulturists, in answer to the wishes of rose lovers, developed varieties which make possible a long season for these flowers so beloved of poet and peasant—and everyone else.

Among many long-blooming types is the variety The Fairy, from which the arrangement below was made last September. The Fairy is flourishing now, as it will until the first frost. With its own boxlike foliage, it makes a fine summer arrangement. Later, when the dogwood turns, you can use its leaves as a garnish (step-by-step pictures are on page 64), but be sure to take the dogwood judiciously from your own trees, for it is on the conservation lists in many places.

Mrs. Merriam, who made our arrangement, describes The Fairy as: "Ideal for everyone, because even a dumb bunny can grow it. It's hardy, practically immune to plant diseases—and even the bugs are kind to it. Its nice, low, bushy form should recommend it to the new home owner who is starting a garden along with a flock of babies and dogs—and so should the fact that it blooms long and needs little care."

The Fairy belongs to the class Polyantha (from the Greek words "many" and "flower") because the blossoms, smaller than those of florist and Hybrid Tea or bedding roses, are borne in loose sprays, as here, or in dense clusters, as in the long-popular climbing Ramblers. Indeed, an early name for the Polyanthas was "Baby Ramblers," because, by contrast with other Ramblers, they form spreading bushes rarely more than three feet high. This variety originated in England in 1932, and was introduced in this country by the Conard-Pyle Co., in 1942. It is a "sport," or natural spontaneous variant, of the English Rambler, Lady Godiva, which, in turn, was a sport of the famous American pink Rambler, Dorothy Perkins. Though not widely grown, it is a charming, adaptable variety, generously praised by those who know it.

Eats! Outdoor Eats!! Remember last June I took you over my knee, spanked you hard—and we agreed there'd be fewer and fewer elaborate outdoor setups for nasty little hot dogs and 4 oz. of hamburger buried in 16 oz. of soggy bun. Well, here's outdoor eating, and to paraphrase Voltaire—all outdoor eating is good except the tiresome kind. Ever try barbecued turkey steaks? They're wonderful! And to make it easy, we've taken a picture of how to carve a frozen turkey so that you might take it to your butcher and let him see, too, exactly how it goes (page 69). And prunes—baked in a bean pot with red wine, a fat cinnamon stick. Easy to do ahead. Easy to serve icy cold—for the bean pot keeps cold, just as it retains heat. Serve with rich cream for dessert.

Now this is for papa! Papa—want real fame? Well, put on your cap and gown and serve your 5 o'clock guests hot, crispy, brown French-Fried Onion Rings. I'll personally guarantee your halo, do you do them this way.

And the fun of dunking in a bubbling Swiss Fondue!! A genuine Swiss recipe, this. A famous dish the world over with skiers—but for the life of me, I can think of nothing better for outdoor eating. Everybody stirs it—it's a self-dunking meal or, if the crowd is large, a remarkably easy, "filling" hors d'oeuvre. With cold boiled tongue, ham—or your delicatessen cold cuts—why not rice 'n peanuts 'n raisins? Delicious—and with the tongue (or what have you?), a garnish you can eat! Dill pickles stuffed with cheese.

And, my friends, look at the Fisherman's Platter—look! Lobsters—handsome rosy fellows. Clams—very, very special cucumbers—delicate pink shrimp—well, look for yourself. My home state, Maine, is the lobster's paradise—and may I add, the lobster is the only creature who appreciates that ice-cold water. It is said that a lobster takes on the taste of its last feeding. As for us humans, a swim in Penobscot Bay might well be the last of any-

It soaks up flavors, so sauce it—or use it as an ideal foundation for vegetables and all kinds of meats, eggs, and cheese. It doubles in volume when cooked, and, in general, should be prepared according to directions on the package. Best Kitchen I Ever Built

The first time I saw this kitchen, the worst thing about it seemed to be the fact that we owned it! Scored on the University of Illinois' kitchen scoring sheet, it rated 0. So did my spirits. And mind you, this wasn't a house we had bought for peanuts, and our kitchen was no worse than many another in expensive houses.

Here were its shortcomings: No base cabinets. No wall cabinets. No counter to right of sink. No counter to left of sink. No counter next to range. No counter beside refrigerator. In fact, no counter. Refrigerator was across room from sink. Range was across room from refrigerator. Traffic through work area. Corner door interfered with chair at table, and covered the window. Another door made cellar entry a booby trap. Eight doors conflicted with each other something fierce. Work area divided in two by "maid's" stairs (no maid). High ceiling, walls, woodwork, and doors, all same shade of tannish cream; floor, light brown marbelized with tan (colors used by scenic designers to create moods of depression). For 60 years, women had endured it. But one thing was sure—Anna May Wilson would not. After all, I've told too many other people what to do about their kitchens!

I wanted to high-tail it back to my old home (those tannish-cream walls!) But since I couldn't, I started with the changes shown under Stage Two on the opposite page. Because plumbing is outrageously expensive hereabouts, we had to recover from the cost of the first projects. But eventually we got what we wanted—time, patience, and some good color have done wonders for all the Wilsons.

These are the changes we made: Knocked out stairs and nailed stair door shut to make unbroken, L-shaped working area. Located sink to have elbow room on either side of it. Moved range to outside wall for good light, and where it's handy to sink when I use pressure cooker. Placed refrigerator near work center—now it no

Now the room almost sings. We cook in it, eat in it, play in it—and love it. But what a depressing all-tan mess it was when we started—inadequately equipped, poorly arranged, studded with useless, conflicting doors. First step was to remove unused “maid’s” stairs, take down two doors and nail up another, rearrange the equipment, buy new cabinets and a new sink. But I was mad at the plumbers when I got their bill. After recovering from that bill, we finished the job, adding more cabinets, removing more doors. Now we love our kitchen for its convenience, and its lively color—and we’re mad at nobody!

True to its name, "Mardi Gras" is gay, colorful and festive . . . a design that matches the most discriminating interior. It comes in colors that complement almost any decorative scheme.

Like all Micarta, it remains young and carefree for a lifetime. It resists scratches, scuffs, stains and burns, and frees you forever from the toilsome task of polishing and refinishing. To clean it, simply swish a damp cloth over the nonporous, super-smooth surface.

No wonder such famous designers and decorators as Russel Wright, William Pahlmann, Elisabeth Draper and Dorothy Liebes proclaim Micarta the perfect blend of beauty and utility.

When building, remodeling or furnishing your home, ask for Micarta surfaces on furniture, counter and sink tops, paneling or bathroom vanities.

Best Kitchen I Ever Built

(Begins on page 58)

Rear entry is now a well-lit pantry, with a low closet for outdoor clothes and a mirror which makes it an ideal place for the girls to primp before meals (there is no downstairs lavatory in this old house). Door directly into kitchen has been blocked off, its back treated to shelves especially measured to hold cans and jars

We wanted a counter-balanced light which could rest on high, or be pulled down to give good illumination over the dining table in the kitchen. Prices of the store-bought variety scared me, so I used the drop-ceiling light so often found in old kitchens, dressed it up for $2.75, and a handsome light was born. The shade matches the wallpaper on the ceiling

Here's how counter-balanced light works: Nylon fishing tackle, wound around heavy black cord, pulls lamp out of the way when we eat by candlelight. Clamp-on reflector used over bulb came from the dime store. Cord which operates pulley is anchored to boat cleat

Treating our bathroom to a fake ceiling with beams was twice as easy as it sounds. We used some scrap 2 x 4's (the older the better) as beams. I cut them to the proper length, and to the angle I wanted for the slant. Top beam was put in 2 in. down from ceiling on higher side (the 2 in. to allow room for working between beams and ceiling), and 14 in. down on the lower side. It's best to measure for each beam right on the wall, because some houses aren't built as squarely as they could be. To anchor the beams, I propped them temporarily in place with poles, and nailed a 2 x 4 stringer, the length of the wall, under the ends of the beam on the lower side. This stringer is notched to receive the beams, and is nailed into the wall studs with strong finishing nails. The higher end of the beams is held in place only by their own angle of cut—because I made the beams a bit longer than the space they fill, they act as a wedge and can't fall down.

For the fake ceiling, I tacked strips of wallboard on top of the beams (that's when the 2-in. free space came in handy). One long strip of wood, angled to the beams near the high end of the ceiling, was placed in position before all the board was up. I nailed the strip through the board horizontally. After this job was finished, I papered the wallboard. [If, like Mr. Grant, you plan to use wallpaper, the wallboard should be of a type recommended by the manufacturer for papering—Ed.] In the center of the room, I left an open space for the light fixture which goes through a trap door of wallboard—but getting it to look right took some jiggling. (Of course, proper wiring is essential!)

For the shaving mug shelf which runs the length of the room over the washstand, I built a job, which looks like a plate rail and has cutouts, for the top of the medicine cabinet and the shower entrance. Hand-carved pegs were added to the flat side, and they are very handy for bathrobes and such. Now Paul Revere himself would be right at home in our bathroom, despite the lack of a half-moon in the door.

You can give both charm and stability to an arrangement featuring a light, dainty rose like The Fairy. Use a broad, shallow container (this one is of copper and pewter), and a wide, flat pinholder. Place sprays of both buds and open flowers, starting at center, and angling them gracefully. Later in the season, when the dogwood takes on copper hues, you can strengthen the base of such an arrangement with a few dogwood leaves snipped from your own trees

Cheapies

Instead of climbing the soapbox and lecturing our members on the horse sense of spending food money, Cheapies for August climbs the icebox. Excuse—I mean the refrigerator. For with August come real looking doldrums. In June a hot dog still tasted marvelous. Summer was still a gay thing—long-awaited. Then came July, month of salads and of quickies. Summer was here. But our enjoyment of it cooled as the weather “hottened.” And then August. A veritable endurance contest, and the kitchen a horrendous nightmare. Thus, Cheapies is happy to be able to give you six such wonderfully cool, easy recipes as these, with nary a gimmick or a frill. Just plain good eating with a minimum of effort and expense. Look at the two cold-meat platters. Total preparation time for each is about 15 minutes, yet they are not in any way slapdash food. They will win your appetite and tempt the eye—they’re summer eating at its best—not to mention at its easiest.

Lamb Mint Platter epitomizes the kind of food we have been discussing. In no time flat, you can put this together, then stash it away in the refrigerator until time for dinner. And the joy of it is that it takes no hours of garnishing to make it look so cool and inviting; it is the green mint jelly which does the trick.

• country slaw • salsa (a cheapie)

• peach appetizer salads (a cheapie)

1 tbs. minced onion
4 peaches
4 tomatoes
2 tbs. lemon juice
2 tbs. sugar
½ cup Burgundy

• Line four salad bowls with greens; sprinkle the onion in bottom. Peel and halve fruits. Put half a peach, dipped in lemon juice, in bowl; then tomato half, dipped in sugar. Repeat. Cover and chill for few hours. Pour wine over and serve.

• salami egg whirls (a cheapie)

8 slices salami 1 cup soft white
4 eggs bread crumbs
½ cup milk ½ tsp. salt

• Beat eggs, add milk, salt, and bread crumbs. Let stand few minutes, then beat again. Cook like regular scrambled eggs. Cut half across salami and whirl. Hold into shape with toothpick. Now stuff with the scrambled eggs. Serve cold.

Cheapies (Begins on page 67)

Another cold-meat Cheapie is the Salami Egg Whirls. To make the whirls, take a slice of salami, not too thin, and cut it from the center straight over to one edge. Pick up one cut edge and roll just slightly into cornucopia shape. Secure with a toothpick, and there you have it. They are really perfectly simple to make, will take you about five minutes to do six or eight of them, yet don't they look festive? You'll like that easy trick for making egg salad, too, and want to use it in other summer dishes, as well.

We might more properly have started with our "Hot Tomato" recipe, since it is a first course which you'll find most useful. Basically, it is a spiced-up tomato juice, marvelous when served icy cold. Or you can thin it down with consommé or a diluted bouillon cube, and have yourself a deliciously different-flavored soup to serve hot or cold. Top with a dab of whipped cream or a slice of lemon or lime which has a whole clove in the center.

By this time in the summer, most of us are guilty of having overworked salads as a main course. It's surprising how good a salad used as a salad tastes about now! Judging by the quantities which disappeared, our Country Slaw seems to have hit the spot around here. It is essentially real old-fashioned coleslaw, spiced to that "just right" point only. Shred the cabbage fine if you prefer, but we all found the finely chopped was a pleasant change.

Salsa, as we presumptuously call this recipe, is the name of a superb gourmet food. Yet it is so simple and so delicious that we've pre-empted it as a Cheapie. Vary spices to go with the rest of your meal, using mint to go with lamb; marjoram or basil for fish and so forth. Both Salsa and the slaw recipes benefit by standing in the refrigerator, so don't hesitate to make them up in the morning, for serving at dinner time.

The Peach Appetizer Salads are something completely new in taste. The combination may not sound as though it went together well, yet upon testing it we found it very popular. This, too, is made in advance for flavors to be absorbed and blended, and makes a grand salad to go with your dinner. But you'll notice we've named it Appetizer Salad, for we were also delighted with it as a first course. The chilled fruit seemed somehow so right as a beginning to a summer meal.

So here are our Cheapies, all guaranteed to be kind to a vacation-flattened purse, yet the best of cool eating.

• country slaw • salsa (a cheapie)

CUCUMBER SALAD: Peel, cut off ends, and scoop out center of 4 large cucumbers; sprinkle with salt. Mix diced cucumber ends and crumbled yolks of 3 hard-boiled eggs with $\frac{1}{2}$ pt. sour cream. Moisten 2 tsp. gelatin in 1 tbs. vinegar and dissolve over hot water. Add to sour cream mixture and chill in refrigerator until thick. Stuff cucumbers and slice into $\frac{1}{2}$ -in.-thick rounds. Serve ice cold.

• picnic rice

• picnic rice

Wash $1\frac{1}{2}$ cups rice and cook in very heavy kettle with 2 dissolved bouillon cubes, 1 cup water, 2 tbs. bacon grease, salt, and pepper. When rice has soaked up nearly all the water, add $\frac{1}{2}$ cup chopped peanuts mashed with rolling pin, $\frac{1}{2}$ cup chopped raisins, and $\frac{1}{2}$ cup chopped celery. Cook about $1\frac{1}{2}$ hours on asbestos mat.

• barbecued turkey steaks

Buy a large, hard-frozen, eviscerated tom turkey—the bigger, the better. Have your butcher cut it on his power saw into 1-in. transverse slices, starting at the front of the breast bone, and working back to about where the thighs join the body. If you're serving a large number of people, have him cut more slices—one slice will make two good servings. The two ends that are left can be left frozen until you need them.

Now lay the frozen slices out in a large, flat pan, sprinkle with monosodium glutamate, and drizzle on enough cooking oil to coat each one. As they thaw, the oil and the turkey juices will make a fine marinade in the pan. This should be brushed back over the slices from time to time. When they are completely thawed, divide each slice into two steaks with a sharp, heavy knife. (You'll find that the cross sections of breast and backbone will split easily.)

Have a good, hot bed of coals going in the barbecue. Arrange the steaks in toasting racks, brush with basting sauce ($\frac{1}{4}$ lb. butter, $\frac{1}{2}$ cup dry white wine, salt, and pepper). Broil about 8 in. from the fire for about 10 min. on each side. Turn them a couple of times during the cooking, and brush with more butter-wine mixture—don't overcook, and don't let them dry out.

Serve them up, one to a customer, with the remainder of the basting sauce heated and spooned over each serving.

• French-fried onion rings

Peel 4 medium onions. Cut into $\frac{1}{4}$ -in. slices. Separate into rings. Add $\frac{1}{2}$ cup milk to 1 egg, well beaten. Stir in $\frac{3}{4}$ cup flour, sifted with $\frac{1}{4}$ tsp. baking powder and $\frac{1}{2}$ tsp. salt. Dip rings in batter, one at a time. Fry in hot deep fat (380° F.) until light brown (about 3 min.). Drain on absorbent paper.

• Swiss fondue

$\frac{1}{2}$ lb. imported Swiss cheese, shredded
 $1\frac{1}{2}$ tbs. flour
1 clove fresh garlic
1 cup light dry white wine
Salt, pepper, nutmeg to taste

1 loaf French or other white bread with hard crust (or 4 hard rolls) cut into bite-size pieces, each with at least one side of crust.
3 tbs. Kirschwasser or 2 tbs. any non-sweetened fruit brandy

Dredge cheese with flour. Rub cooking utensil well with garlic. Pour in wine and set over very slow fire (preferably use chafing dish, alcohol stove, or electric plate with asbestos pad). When air bubbles rise to surface (before boiling point), stir with fork and add cheese by handfuls, each handful to be completely dissolved before another one is added.

Stir until mixture starts bubbling lightly. Then add a little salt and pepper and a dash of nutmeg (optional). Thoroughly stir in Kirschwasser or brandy and it's ready to serve.

The eating: Keep fondue bubbling lightly. Spear piece of bread with fork, going through soft part first and securing points in the crust. Each guest dunks his own with a stirring motion. If fondue becomes too thick, stir in a little preheated (never cold) wine. Keep heat low when, towards the end, the melted cheese forms brown crust (a special delicacy) at bottom of utensil.

Recipe from Switzerland Cheese Association

• prunes au vin in bean pot

Cover and soak large prunes in claret or Burgundy (domestic) overnight in a bean pot. Add $\frac{1}{2}$ cup sugar, stick of cinnamon, and thin rind of $\frac{1}{2}$ lemon; cover bean pot; and bake in slow oven (300° F.) for about an hour or until prunes are soft. Remove prunes and let juice cook a little longer. Return prunes to bean pot. Chill. Serve very cold with cream.

• fisherman's platter

With boiled lobster, shrimp, and salmon serve:

TOMATO, AVOCADO, CRABMEAT RUSSIE: Place $\frac{1}{2}$ -in. slices of tomato in bed of coarsely shredded lettuce. Combine 1 can crabmeat with 1 diced avocado in juice of 2 limes or 1 lemon; mix with Shrimp Cocktail Sauce. Mound high on tomato slices and dust with paprika.

SHRIMP COCKTAIL SAUCE: Mix 1 tsp. salt, $\frac{1}{2}$ tsp. hot sauce, juice of 2 lemons and 1 tbs. vinegar. Gradually add this sauce and 1 qt. salad oil to 4 beaten egg yolks. Add 1 bottle tomato catchup. (This famous Brewton Inn sauce will keep several weeks in refrigerator.)

SHELL SPAGHETTI: Blanch 3 cups of shell spaghetti in boiling water; drain. Cook in rich consommé, well seasoned (1 use $\frac{2}{3}$ cup consommé and $\frac{1}{2}$ cup clam juice). When cooked, lift out spaghetti with slotted spoon and keep warm. Reduce consommé to $\frac{1}{2}$ cup. Whip 4 egg yolks with $\frac{1}{4}$ cup cream and add consommé. Pour over spaghetti. Reheat in pan of hot water. Cool.

CLAMS ASPIC: Mix $\frac{1}{2}$ cup fresh clams (mince clams, if you do not use electric blender) with $\frac{1}{2}$ cup finely chopped crabmeat. Add $\frac{1}{2}$ cup clam juice, $\frac{1}{4}$ cup white wine, and $\frac{1}{8}$ cup cream. Add $\frac{1}{4}$ cup soft French bread which has been crumbed in water and squeezed dry. Mix in blender or with rotary beater. Add salt, white pepper, and a few grains of cayenne. Cook uncovered, in top of double boiler until thick (about 30 min.). Cool.

In shallow pan over high flame, reduce 1 can of jellied clear chicken consommé to $\frac{1}{2}$ can. Remove from stove and add 1 tbs. pale, dry sherry and $\frac{1}{2}$ tsp. cognac. Chill until firm. Chop very finely, mix with clam-crabmeat mixture. Fill each clam shell. (Fills about 24 shells.)

Sundays— Fun for Kids and Company

NECY HALES

My eight-year-old daughter snuggled closer in anticipation: "Mother, tell me again about the company dinner parties on Sundays when you were a little girl?" Almost automatically, I began. I described the preparations which started on Saturday. First, she must hear about the general house cleaning—how we aired each room, scrubbed and waxed the floors, oiled the woodwork; how we beat the rugs stretched over clotheslines and polished the silver and copper for hours, until our faces were distortedly reflected in the gleaming surfaces.

"Now, Mother, the baking. Don't forget the dessert with the toasted nuts on top like autumn leaves. And tell me about turning the ice cream freezer and licking the dasher and—"

As she paused for breath, I reminded her, "We children had our share of the work, too. Many times we were glad to have Saturday end. We must have made dozens of trips up and down the narrow basement stairs to fetch apples, potatoes, and carrots. We had to hunt the dusty shelves for all kinds of pickles, relishes, jellies, and preserves."

"But," my daughter interrupted, "it was fun, wasn't it? I love to have you tell about the caramel rolls full of raisins, and the real dark bread and how you ate the end crusts when they were just out of the oven and the butter melted in."

When I had finished, my daughter sighed: "That must have been wonderful!" Then, somewhat wistfully: "I wish we could have company for dinner on Sunday."

For the next few days her remark kept popping into my mind like the refrain of an old song. There were many reasons why we, and other families like us, had discontinued the custom of dinners for the entire family. We were too busy, our house too small, the children had their own parties and we ours. Of course, at holiday and vacation time, we exchanged visits with relatives, but the distance was so great that these meetings were infrequent. On the other hand, wouldn't the effort be worth while? Couldn't we, despite the lack of space and other demands on our time, plan at least one such party? We did, and after a dozen or more, we are agreed this is an experience for every family to share. Fun for Kids you, too, would like to build a store house of future pleasant childhood memories. If so, these suggestions may help to get you started:

1. Remember that this is to be a family affair and let the children have a vote in making the guest list. For our first dinner, we chose a family parallel to ours—a couple with two children, a boy who was a friend of our son's, and his sister, a classmate of our daughter's. We had met these people only once, so a personal call to explain our invitation was in order. The ensuing friendship is one we will always cherish. This happy experience became the base upon which we built future dinners, outdoor excursions, and other shared experiences. We discovered, interestingly enough, that the similarity of our children's ages need not be a fixed rule for these occasions.

2. Plan a simple menu. Children eat and enjoy the known, everyday foods. Sherried sweet potatoes are a hit with your adult guests, but often youngsters prefer a baked white potato. A fruit salad is usually preferred to one of cucumber and onion, and ice cream and cake to a sophisticated torte or other "special" dessert.

3. Follow your mother's example in Saturday preparation. No need to accept the elaborateness of her generation, but do agree in the value of making salads, desserts, or even the entree ahead of time. Take advantage of the time-saving packaged mixes and frozen foods. However well we like the effect of smooth, heavy, damask table linens, we're grateful for our own practical mats and easy-to-laundry cottons. We realize our transparent china looks regal, but we know colored pottery, gay and appealing, is eminently satisfactory too.

4. Let the children help. They'll benefit through their contributions and so will you. There are lots of ways for them to participate: setting, serving, and clearing the table, aiding with the shopping and food preparation, etc. Our little daughter once surprised us by making place cards of spring flowers and lace doilies; our son by making a "surprise" dessert from gingerbread mix.

5. Be alert for entertainment ideas which include both children and adults. We play croquet, volley ball, baseball, charades, and a variety of card games. One rainy afternoon our young guests decided to present a program of their own. The impromptu skits, recitations, and piano playing were entertaining, and all of us had a marvelous time. One father said something to my husband that we think sums up our feelings very well: "The kids have something wonderful and, thank goodness, we can take time out to share it with them!"

Dishwasher

(Begins on page 48)

A FEW THINGS TO WASH BY HAND:
Rubber materials may soften at dishwasher water temperature.

Your hand-painted china: The kind of china mother used to paint is valuable and pretty, but the colors aren't so permanent as in commercially glazed wares, so wash carefully by hand.

Wooden ware should be wiped or rinsed only. Hot water will not be kind to its finish.

Plastic materials: Some types may warp in water of 150°, though most modern plastic kitchen gadgets of good quality won't. If you aren't sure, wash by hand.

IF SOMETHING GOES WRONG, you may be able to fix the trouble:

1. If machine doesn't fill properly or fills too slowly, first check the filter screen on the water-inlet valve. It may be clogged, or the house plumbing could be plugged with mineral deposits. Or there could be a crimp in the inlet tubing. If the timer is faulty, call a serviceman.
2. When water doesn't stay in the tub the drain valve may be leaking. See if food particles are holding it open.
3. Slow draining as a rule is due to plumbing stoppage, not the washer.
4. Door leaks: Is the door gasket loose or worn?
5. If current isn't reaching machine, check fuses. If power supply is all right, then remove the panel, as in cleaning, and carefully touch the motor to see if it is hot. Let it cool (almost all motors have protective overload devices) then reset this overload switch by pressing the red reset button (usually on bottom front of motor). Turn control switch to "On" again, and if dishwasher still doesn't start, call a serviceman.

A good gadget to hold a recipe card: take a wooden square, drill a small hole to accommodate a dowel to which you can screw a spring-type clothespin, upside down. (See page 61.)

HOW TO MAKE THE FISH

Cut out fish or other motif from wallpaper. Leave margin of about $\frac{3}{8}$ in. paper all around motif. Apply good paste to back; mount on hardboard. To get a flat, clean, even bond, lay a sheet of blank paper over motif, press down, and smooth out excess paste. Remove blank paper. Let dry overnight, using books as weights

With jig saw, cut closely around motif, and go very gently when sawing around tail—it can break off. Sand. Paint edges matching color. Glue piece of $\frac{1}{4}$ -in. wood to back of fish. To find true center of fish, so it will hang straight, insert long, thin nail and hold fish up, adjusting until balanced. Fasten bracket as shown above. Another method of hanging is to fasten screw eyes to each end of wooden block and attach picture wire. Hang from picture hook

Background's the thing in this summertime home. Lustrous hardboard walls look like wood, cost much less. A moderately priced fabric with handsome print was used lavishly for unlined draperies—not cheap, but see what character it lends to inexpensive furniture

Background for Fun

MARY E. MONZE

They used the hardboard to surround the fireplace completely, and to flank it with excellent built-in storage at either end. When the house is used for winter weekends, the pot-bellied stove does service (the painting hides its flue). Ed made fish from a patterned wallpaper—claims they are the only fish that he ever caught, but they're quite a haul! (See his method, page 76)

Give a room a good background, and it practically furnishes itself—and this one proves that a good background is a matter of taste and of judgment, not of money. Here good (but inexpensive) walls, good fabrics with a moderate tab, and inventive accessories contribute so much character that an assortment of random furniture rides right along with them.

It's the living room of the Edward Fortunas' beach house at Southampton Shores, and the Fortunas were no more anxious than other young couples to sink a small fortune into decorating a summer place. But neither were they going to let their eyes be offended by ugly makeshift in a place intended for relaxation and recreation!

So they started with the walls. Knotty pine would have been great—but not on their budget. Plain wallboard would have been cheap—but less attractive "as is," and a bother to keep on painting. Their solution was a hardboard with a glossy built-in finish that simulates natural birch down to the tiniest grain. It's pre-finished, needs no staining, painting, nor even waxing. It has been up for a couple of years now, in this house surrounded by water and uninhabited in the winter—and the only attention it has demanded was from their eyes: approving attention. To create the effect of wooden planks, and to make easy handling still easier, the 4' x 8' panels were cut into 2' x 8' strips. The same material masks the bulky fireplace and the good cupboards which flank it. A drapery fabric with a lively geometrical print completes the background, and it's as attractive as a broad grin on a bleak day.

The rest of the furnishings? Only the lamp-table next to the divan was bought for the room—everything else was clever improvisation. An old box-spring and mattress on legs was trimly covered in a solid-green fabric and treated to a couple of store-bought bolsters encased by the drapery print—a fine sofa and guest bed! An aged table with wrought-iron legs and a wooden top was in bad shape, and intended for outdoor use, but Ed painted the iron a pleasant shade of green, refinished the top lovingly—and found himself with a perfect living-room dining table to set by that wall of windows. A couple of other small tables were given similar treatment, half a dozen yacht chairs were thrown in, a green rug was added, and a piscatorial garnish over the mantel—and the result: summertime living room worthy of all the good living it witnesses.

Two room-high cupboards flank the hearth, but their doors open around the corner from the fireplace rather than directly into the room. This one holds logs below, and all manner of gear above. The other harbors a coat closet and additional storage.

Wide archway leads from new living room into dining area which is divided from kitchen by antique wooden blinds found in Gary, Ind. Modern spinet piano is separated by a screen from an old spinet desk on which stands a china clock—a wedding present to Mrs. Dorr's mother which still chimes as sweetly as it did in the home in which Mrs. Dorr grew up. Not everything went easily, however. Of her dining-room furniture, Mrs. Dorr laments: "For this drop-leaf table and fiddle-back chairs, I traded Grandmother's oval table. Now I wish I hadn't."

Space and air are what count for most in this house in the woods on the water. So the new living room has no real inside walls. Between living room and master bedroom, a wall of plantation shutters makes a satisfactory division, and they are very like the antique shutters which separate the dining room from the kitchen. Provincial antiques mix well with city-bred ones here terrace room, the open question easily answered itself—the cabin was to become a comfortable "main" house. The original two rooms are now the kitchen, dining room, dressing room, and bath. A living room and bedroom wing was added, a huge corner fireplace plus barbecue was built on the terrace. Then, with the aid of a stiff brush and bleach, a rosy-gray tone was given to the cabin's exterior, a beautiful color which was the despair of the painter who had to attempt to match it when he was painting the new parts of the house.

Under the terrace room, there's a cave-like retreat right on the water, and its walls are covered with ferns. It's perfect for outdoor dining—aquatic for Mrs. Dorr, and accompanied by the quack of mallards and the hiss of wild geese which give Mr. Dorr his country noises. A curved flight of stone stairs leading down to this spot, a network of paths around the pond, and a little wooden dock for a rowboat, were all planned by Mrs. Dorr and executed by an ax-wielding gardener.

Individualists, the Dorr's; and little things which give their home character are apt to have stories attached. For example, there's the green glass ball suspended by a net from the roof of their "cave"—a wartime memento copped by Mr. Dorr when he was a Seabee. Japanese fishermen used such balls as floats for their fishing nets, and they were highly regarded as souvenirs by Seabees who swam out to nab them by the dawn's early light, at the risk of being shot at by our own Marines. Mr. Dorr took that chance, and he got this one, which he claims is the biggest of them all.

Then there's "Dorr's Folly," a load of granite slabs which were once part of the White House in Washington. Freight charges, of course, were much higher than the dollars-and-cents value of the stone—and the stone couldn't even be used for the purpose they first had in mind! They had intended to face their fireplace with this historical material—but it was too hard to cut, and there wasn't enough of it. So it now makes the walk to their entry.

There isn't any real history to the signpost which marks their home and makes the headpiece for this story (page 44)—it's just the bleached root of an old pine tree on which they painted the legend: "Dorr's Pond." But it's absolutely perfect for this purpose and this house, and very typical of their bright improvisations.

On the inside, modern glass louvers keep company with antique wooden ones. Oriental rugs lie happily on rubber-tile floors, hand-woven Guatemalan fabrics cover an old chair and English sofa. Nothing is standard, and everything "works" charmingly.

"Orchids" for Your Garden

RUTH DENT HUGHES

If you are looking for an unusual, sturdy, easily grown annual flower with the delicacy and soft pastel colors of certain orchids, a relatively little known, but now available, relative of the old-fashioned but still beloved garden balsam should appeal to you. It is an improved form of the Asiatic species, Impatiens roylei, and is being grown by (perhaps among others) a California gardener who is promoting it under the popular name "Bel Air Orchid." It thrives in shady places, and when established, flowers all summer long. Unlike the common balsam which bears its almost stemless, double, rosettelike blossoms close against its upright, leafy stalks where they are often hidden, this Oriental relative holds its odd, orchid-shaped flowers well out from and above its open, spreading foliage on slender, but strong, stems.

A prolific seed bearer, it is likely to self-sow in all but severely cold regions—which may prove a convenient and welcome way to maintain it in the garden, or a nuisance as something unwanted, depending on the gardener's tastes and plans. While it is not particular as to soil—so long as it is well drained—this Impatiens responds well to the addition of humus and plant food to the soil by making bushy plants up to two feet tall. They will often bloom four or six weeks after the small plants are set out, which should be after the weather has warmed up and the seedlings, started indoors from February on, have been hardened off.

Good for a north border, or for use in the broken shade of shrubs or trees (providing their roots are not allowed to take all the food), Bel Air Orchids also make fine pot plants and material for window boxes and hanging baskets, and thus can bring brightness into sick rooms, patios, enclosed porches, etc. In making a hanging basket, line the wire container with sheet or sphagnum moss to hold the soil and keep it from drying out. A temperature of 60-70° F., with rather high humidity but good air circulation and protection from hot sun, suits the plants best.

When cut, the attractive little flowers keep in good condition for from several hours to a full day. They can be worked into charming corsages or, even more satisfactorily, worn with their stems in a lapel tube. Being produced in abundance, they provide pleasing and inexpensive ornaments for any sort of costume.

Better Lawn

by Dr. William Daniels and Albert A. Linkogel, in charge of Purdue University's Midwest Turf Foundation test plots at Lafayette, Ind., and St. Louis. Their simple program advises: Good seed, proper soil aeration, plenty of food for the grass, and high cutting. Already we are satisfied that it holds the answer to our problem. Certainly, it means a substantial saving in time and effort.

We started it in the fall by using an ingenious aerifier which eliminates laborious spading and raking. Its heavy roller is studded with sturdy metal "spoons" that dig out little plugs of earth and loosen the walls of the resulting holes so that moisture and dissolved plant food quickly penetrate the soil. The extruded plugs break down and become top dressing. Thus we gradually turned a thick stand of crab grass into a good seed bed despite our heavy, compacted soil.

After the first aerifying, we applied 20 lbs. per 1,000 sq. ft. of a 5-10-5 chemical fertilizer, then used the machine several more times, working in different directions until the whole area was peppered with holes. Next we seeded with the new B-27 Merion strain of bluegrass plus 10 per cent Colonial bent. This, though expensive, was economical, going much farther than cheaper seed; less than a pound is enough for 1,000 sq. ft. Spreading and growing vigorously, the Merion strain fights weed competition and under good conditions should soon become the dominant grass in a lawn; also it is resistant to the leaf spot disease that can wipe out ordinary bluegrass in hot, humid weather. (Another mixture for a new lawn recommended by Mr. Linkogel consists of 25% B-27 bluegrass, 25% Kentucky bluegrass, 40% Alta fescue, and 10% Colonial bent. If mowed rather short, the fescue gradually dies out as the bluegrass takes over.) After raking the lawn lightly to spread the seed and send much of it into the holes left by the aerifier, we kept it well watered until frost; by then, the new grass was established.

A final important part of our fall program was the use of a new type combined rotary mower and leaf mulcher which disposed of fallen leaves much faster than we could gather and take them to the compost heap. This efficient little machine, though not self-propelled, is light and easy to handle; can be adjusted to cut up to 3 in. high, and operates so close to edges that a minimum of hand trimming is required. Come fall, the mower blade is easily replaced by the mulching attachment, which clears a 20-in. path, sucking up leaves, small twigs, etc., and spewing them out in the form of a tidy, fine mulch that is much appreciated by the turf.

After that good fall start, our one springtime task was providing a second main meal in late February. For this we used a mixture of 3 parts by weight of a weed-free organic fertilizer and 1 part ammonium sulphate at the rate of 20 lbs. per 1,000 sq. ft., but it could have been any good complete plant food. The resulting growth was excellent, crowning our lawn project with success.

Aerification notes by Harold Haynes, California: Soil aerification is actually grass culture by mechanical means which encourages the roots to grow and spread deeply. At any time, except when the turf is frozen or wet and soft, it is "plugged" much as one plugs a watermelon by hollow tines forced into the ground by means of a hand tool or, on large areas, by power-driven machines. The response is almost immediate, as compaction around the roots is relieved. In Great Britain, traditional home of fine lawns, this treatment has been used for years to improve difficult soil conditions. In this country, since about 1945, its value has been increasingly appreciated and its application extended, with the aid of the U. S. Golf Association Green Section and various agricultural colleges. For years the University of Minnesota spent some $10,000 annually resodding its varsity and practice athletic fields. In 1951 it tried mechanical soil aeration, lifting over 25 tons of "cores" and applying 2½ tons of a balanced fertilizer and 1,000 lbs. of grass seed to the worn areas. Within 35 days, the fields were back in condition and being mowed thrice weekly. The cost of the renovation was $880, less than 10% of the previous annual upkeep expenditures.

With hand tools or small motorized or attachable units, the same thing can be done on home lawns, making top dressing unnecessary and getting better results from fertilizer applied because none is lost in run-off from the surface. And there is substantial saving of water, practically all of which runs into the core holes and is held in the loosened earth. Many lawn troubles can be traced to hard-packed soil in which grass roots are shallow, easily injured by strong sunlight, and susceptible to attacks of disease and insect pests. In well-ventilated soils, organic matter, worked on by earthworms and other organisms, breaks down rapidly and contributes to improved texture. Aerated turf dries out more slowly because water penetrates more deeply; it needs less frequent watering and discourages shallow-rooting weeds.

Home owners can rent as well as buy soil-aeration equipment, and those who cannot or do not want to do the work themselves can, in many places, hire it done by gardeners, nurserymen, and landscape firms.

the case of clayey soil inclined to pack, the mixing in of some sand as well as humus will help. It is well worth the effort to dig a hole larger than is needed to take the root spread, and to loosen the bottom several inches deeper than is required to take the root ball. Mix some of the organic matter into the subsoil to attract the main roots, as well as close around the ball to encourage the growth of feeding roots. When the plant has been firmed in place and the hole half filled with soil, fill it up with water and wait a few hours before filling in the rest of the soil. In dry weather, daily sprinkling of the foliage, in addition to soaking the soil whenever necessary to prevent it from drying out, is helpful. A 2- to 3-in.-deep mulch of peaty material, old sawdust, or pine needles over the root area will help conserve moisture and promote good root development. Renew this mulch each fall when the soil is moist and before it freezes. Don't attempt to force lush growth by heavy fertilizing, but if a plant seems to be lagging, mulch it with old cow manure in the fall and add a sprinkling of cottonseed meal in the spring.

As to environment, a situation protected from cold drying winds is most desirable. Winter wind can do more harm than winter (or summer) sun. Until plants are well established, protect them from icy blasts (moist coastal winds are less damaging). Burlap can be used, set up a little distance from them as a screen or windbreak; or simple fencing or evergreen boughs will do. A good place for a specimen holly is where its winter charm can be enjoyed from a window.

While holly plants are themselves beautiful and interesting, their charm for many is their berries. But not all individuals are berry bearing. With most kinds, the male or pollen-bearing, and the female or fruit-forming, flowers occur on separate plants; without one of the former in the vicinity, a female plant may bear no berries (or only a few as a result of bees bringing pollen from a distance). If it is not convenient to establish a male tree nearby, a few scions from such a tree can be grafted on the female plant to insure a berry crop. In buying plants, insist on knowing which kind you are getting.

Of the many types, the evergreen hollies are naturally the more important and popular because of their year-round decorative value. Some are able to withstand occasional sub-zero temperatures, but all show to better advantage in a less rigorous climate. From Long Island, south along the coastal region, and in the mild, moist parts of the Pacific Coast region, the favorite is the English holly (Ilex aquifolium) in any of its

CORRECTED
DOMESTIC WATER SUPPLY

YOUR home water supply is close to perfect on an EVIS Water inner will correct it in several money and work-saving ways.
all, EVIS continuous catalytic correction principle requires no servicing.

WATER increases the cleansing action of soaps and in many of water worth-while soap savings are realized. Dishes, glass and cars rinse free from water-stains. In the laundry, clothes free from soap-scum — even in cold water. EVIS-izing of water harsh on hands! water noticeably corrects this trouble.

EVIS IS NOT A SOFTENER

PREFERRED INSTALLATION is on the main line, ahead of all even those to gardens and lawns, because EVIS-ized water is beneficial to all.

CHEMICALS
DESTROY NATURAL MINERALS

MOST INSTALLATIONS ARE MADE IN LESS THAN AN HOUR and usually with very little change to existing piping. The EVIS is a line unit and requires no floor space.

UNLIKE MOST water conditioning systems the EVIS operates without upkeep cost regardless of the amount of water used. EVIS-ized water has a greater grease dispersing effect which is readily noticed in washing dishes and by the free-flow of cleaner sanitary drains.

SEPS PIPES and WATER HEATERS
FREE FROM SCALE DEPOSITS
The water supplies build heavy layers of scale in water heaters. This slows down the heating speed, wastes gas, or shortens the life of electric elements. Within 30-60 days after installation an EVIS puts an end to this trouble—and prevents further scale.
If pipes are very old, the use of an EVIS is not recommended, because scale has built up all that prevents leaks.

AMERICAN HOME, AUGUST, 1953

Hollies

numerous forms, which show great variation in size and growth habit.
Some have extra spiny leaves; in others the foliage is as smooth as that of a camellia; some show bright "gold" and "silver" variegations. A good hybrid of this species, hardy on Long Island, is I. altaclarensis, known as Highclere holly.

American holly (I. opaca), while not as glossy and effective, is hardier and usable over a wider area. During the last 40 or so years, specialists have selected, propagated, and named varieties that are superior in plant form, leaf, and fruit, such as Arden, Bittersweet, Cardinal, Croonenberg
(which bears both kinds of flowers),
Merry Christmas, and others.

Several lesser-known hollies can be used to add interest to a garden. I.
cornuta, the Chinese Horned species, has squared, spined leaves; Burford
holly is a smooth-leaved variety of it.
The small-leaved Chinese I. pernyi, being a slow grower, is well suited to small places; I. pedunculosa, whose pear-shaped leaves become bronzy in winter, is the hardiest of the Asiatic group. Resembling box in foliage and dense habit, Japanese holly (I. cre-nata) and its hardier variety, convexa, are excellent border subjects highly resistant to difficult city conditions.

Of our native kinds, the evergreen
Yaupon of Indian lore (I. vomitoria) is too tender for northern use, but in the South it is often seen used as sheared specimens and as clipped hedges. A plant allowed to grow naturally is also good looking, with its smooth leaves and profusion of red berries on rather rigid branches. Like the Japanese hollies, our native Ink-berry (I. glabra) bears black berries scattered among leaves that turn darker in color as winter approaches.

Of the deciduous species, the best known is the Black-alder (I. verticillata) common in swampy places in the North where its brilliant red berries shine in the fall; the leafless but thickly fruited twigs are sold in bunches at Christmas time to be used with different kinds of foliage and for decorating packages. The Winter-berry (I. laevigata) is somewhat similar, but its berries are more of an orange-red, and are longer lasting.
Mountain holly (I. montana) is the largest of the native species, sometimes attaining the proportions of a small tree and making a fine sight when laden with orange-red fruits.

Two deciduous species from the Orient are I. geniculata, known as Drophead holly, and I. serrata, the Finetooth holly. They are hardy as far north as southern New York and decidedly showy when in fruit.

So think of holly as something more than Christmas wreath material.
Go out and study the many kinds in nurseries and gardens and see how you can use them in yours.

Auction

ones as well. To find the more obscure farmers' auctions, follow the country newspapers in your general area, and get your name on auctioneers' mailing lists—they will notify you of auctions which may interest you.

If you are to enjoy the performance, and profit by it as well, the auctioneer must be more than just an M.C. Patronize responsible men who know their merchandise and give accurate descriptions of each item. If the item is chipped or imperfect, reliable auctioneers are conscientious in reporting it. If a defect slips my attention, a refund is made if requested—otherwise, all sales are final.

What to Bring with You. Not everything you are going to want will be advertised, and, as bidding calls for quick decisions, it is wise to bring current catalogues on whatever interests you. Remember what I said about wholesale prices? You are always safe bidding up to one half the listed price and perhaps a dollar more.

The terms of each auction are advertised, and usually you are responsible for spot payment in full, and the immediate removal of your purchases. Drive the largest car at your disposal, but you can rely on trucks, often on the premises, to crate and ship the big pieces.

Come Early and Stay Late. This is the first rule for all auctions. Before the auction, there is an exhibition where everything is on display, sometimes listed in a catalogue with numbers. If you attend with your spouse, this is the time for decisions. Work out in advance just what main pieces you are going to try for, and approximately how high you will go. There is no time for discussion later on.

When the auction starts, the crowd needs warming up to the bidding fervor, so the first items put up will not bring very much. Here is your chance at real bargains. But since this is just the warm-up, don't expect the Chippendale or the Staffordshire to appear quite yet.

Bidding. When you want to bid, raise your hand and call out, making sure to attract the auctioneer's attention. There is no set rule on how to do this, and you will see regular fans who hold up fingers, nod, wink, or give some other kind of signal once they are recognized.

If you see something that you want only if it is very cheap, you can play for second-hand high. I must always hear two bids, and during a warm-up, or when we are rushed at the close of the day, I'll let a slow starter go on the second bid. Values given away like this quicken the pace of an auction sale, and give you a chance to pick up small pieces for a song.

When original bidding on something you want is scattered, wait until it has narrowed down to two contestants who are slowing up on down raises. Put in a jump bid of two dollars or more to shut out the competition—sometimes this works, sometimes it doesn't. But never bid "just for fun," or you'll end up with a full of junk. Bid only on what you can use—you'll have fun anyhow.

Of course there may be values you can't bear to miss. Some fans to semipro, pick up extraordinary values to resell—and such turnovers of take place right on the premises.

It seems to be a rule that auctioneers like dealers, but fans don't. I can't understand this. Since a dealer is going to resell at a 50 percent markup, he won't bid over half the current market value, and his interest is your guarantee of value. There are only two exceptions: when an incomplete or marred item of genuine antiquity is worth more to a dealer who has the means to restore it, or when something offered is part of a set he is collecting for high-priced sale to a special customer.

Leaving a Bid. Since an auction is an all-day affair, it isn't always possible to be present when the object you set your heart on is offered. So bids may be left. Recently a woman wanted a certain clock, and left an unrestricted bid—in her case at least $150. I started the clock around $25, and $47 was all it would bring. So that's what she paid for.

What to Buy. One of my most ardent fans never buys antique furniture as his home is a modern shop place. He averages about $200 every auction, buying books, be bibelots, and background. There is no cheaper way to assemble a fine library than by regularly attending auctions of the old homes. At many auctions, time does not permit each book to be handled separately except when it is of unusual value. So the customers look through the library and make their own collections. I offer these tied together as a lot. From $1 to $5, and a whole shelf of beautifully bound classics is yours. Once in a $1 lot, a friend of mine found an 1860 Godey's Lady's Book filled with valuable color plates, each one worth more than he had spent the entire auction session.

Another thing to look for is bed mattresses, and upholstered pieces which go at bargain prices. Last Saturday, a Victorian bed and bureau that had cost the owner's parents $1,000 brought only $10. She was disappointed, of course, but equally surprised at prices bid on objects that had been in the attic for years.

The beautiful, the useful, the unusual—they'll all turn up during the auction days. Come soon, and when you do, have fun!

Proper curbing on your drive is the kind that keeps the car off the lawn—no matter who's driving! Grass won't sprawl into your roadway, and you'll cut down on the muddy erosion that's so bad during our suburban monsoons. Stretch a heavy cord tautly between stakes driven along the inside edge of your planned curb. Make it the height of the curb, and follow it exactly

How to CURB YOUR DRIVE

The kind of surface on your drive determines to some extent your choice of edging material. If you have bluestone chips, cinders, or another granulated covering, you'll need a high, solid border to provide a good barrier. Perhaps granite slabs, set 8 in. or more deep, are your solution

If your ground is free of rock ledges and large boulders, and you've got a supply of slabs, a good heavy pickax, and a couple of willing helpers, you can build a handsome rustic curb of blasted rock set flat-side upward

If construction work has required blasting in your neighborhood, you may be able to secure, at little cost, a good deal of ready-made shale, granite, or fieldstone curbing. Provide yourself with some good topsoil to fill in around your curb, and sow small plants of the sedum variety

If you want to keep errant drivers off your lawn while adding charm to your landscaping, dab the sections of curbing at the entry of your drive with white paint

Curb Your Drive (Begins on page 89)

In addition to granite slabs, there are other excellent curbings

Data: John E. Neill

You see above four other effective solutions to the driveway dilemma. (1) Why not good old brick, set lengthwise into a cement footing? They are easy to come by, frequently at secondhand, and therefore low in cost. (2) An eminently practical answer to the curbing problem is poured concrete (colored, if you like). Give it a broad base, with a deep footing of stones below the frost line, and use clean sand in the mixing to assure its strength. (3) Brick set diagonally in a saw-toothed pattern requires no concrete, except perhaps in establishing the first and last brick. This curb has personality, but requires more attention than many other types. (4) A simple, casual, and pretty edging, particularly on sloping ground, is one of white-painted cobble- or fieldstones. Stones about six inches in diameter are best, and they should be set as close together as possible, each in its own small declivity. A very practical, durable, and costly type of curbing (not illustrated) is metal "estate curbing" made of 1/4-in. sheet steel. Steel stakes, 18 in. deep, are fabricated into it, installation is easy where the ground is not rocky—and trimming grass along it is sheer joy.

Mole Control

Mr. Colby's tale of hunting moles with bow and arrow in last September's AMERICAN HOME delighted me, but I fear a busy man could hardly employ his method, no matter how entertaining or effective, especially in a dry season when moles tend to move in from the hard, dry field soil to softer, well-watered lawns where worm-hunting is so much easier.

I have used traps, poisoned baits, and mole pellets against these pests, but lately another, very simple method has proved far more effective in both my own and my neighbors' yards. It uses carbon bisulphide, an oily, colorless, foul-smelling liquid obtainable at drugstores, whose heavier-than-air vapor is deadly to Mr. Mole, but is an improvement over the usual practice of pouring a teaspoonful into the mole's tunnel at several points.

Fit a wide-mouthed 4- or 5-oz. bottle with a cork (not rubber) stopper in which a hole has been bored to take a 6-in. piece of glass tubing with an inside diameter of not less than 1/8 or more than 3/16 in. Constrict one end by holding it in a gas flame and giving it a turning motion until the opening is no larger than a pin, then fit the tube snugly into the cork. Fill the bottle with carbon bisulphide, cork it tightly, invert it, and poke the tube into the ground until the sharp tip is in the runway. (It may be well to make a hole first with a slender stick so as not to plug the opening.) As air bubbles slowly rise in the tube, drops of the liquid will fall into the runway, vaporize and spread through the burrow. For best results, the orifice should be such that a bubble rises every half minute or so; this will empty the bottle in three or four hours (more on cool nights) and give the fumes time to flow a considerable distance, and Mr. Mole little chance to escape or shake them off. As carbon bisulphide is inflammable and explosive when mixed with air, store any reserve supply in an airy place out of reach of children, and never pour it near an open flame.

but, you buy heating for "keeps"

We can't read the young lady's mind. Maybe she'll return the hat. But, return or keep it, her decision won't bite too deeply into the family finances.

There is nothing frivolous, however, about the selection of a heating system for your new home, or one you are modernizing.

Most people select a heating installation only once in a lifetime. Upon that selection depends a lifetime of economical comfort for your whole family. Yes, your heating selection is a most important decision.

And it's so easy to avoid the costly mistake of "comfort disappointment" . . . high fuel and service bills. Just be sure to see your local authorized Janitrol dealer for the type and size of Janitrol unit best suited for your home. His knowledge combined with Janitrol advanced design will secure you lasting heating satisfaction and comfort. He is listed under "Furnaces" in the yellow section of your phone book.

JANITROL EXCLUSIVE DESIGN PRINCIPLE ASSURES BETTER PERFORMANCE, LONGER LIFE

By focusing ribbons of flame accurately inside a series of heat exchanger tubes, even distribution and rapid transfer of heat is accomplished. Efficiency is greatly increased with extreme compactness. And the exclusive Janitrol design provides much more durability than ever expected.

AN AMAZING RECORD! Out of almost a million Janitrol steel heat exchanger tubes in use since 1940, LESS THAN 1/4 of 1% HAVE BEEN REPLACED for any cause. Backed by the findings of an independent research institute, Janitrol's long record of durable performance remains unmatched, unequalled.

If the young muralists in your house are irresistibly tempted by your proud expanses of paint and paper, supply them with a really satisfying blackboard. Here one wallboard surface was built right into the nursery, but it could as easily be nailed over the existing wall if you first find the studs. Two coats of blackboard paint provide a fine "canvas" for chalk. Board can be papered over

for Budding Artists

Can't spare a wall to the small fry? One wise father utilized an idea that appeared in last September's AMERICAN HOME to build this double easel board, easy on play space and young tempers. 1" x 4" pine legs were affixed to each of two blackboards and hinged at the top. A chain limits the spread of the legs
