Anne brought my Continental kitchen home from school

If Anne weren't so thrilled with her geography, I'd probably still be struggling along with my dull old kitchen.

I'd been wondering for months what I could do to breathe some new life into it, when one evening my daughter, Anne, asked me to read to her from her new third-grade geography book.

Geography books certainly have changed since I was a girl. I spent a fascinating hour with Anne, looking at colored pictures of the things they make in Europe. On one page, there was a lot of blue Meissen china from Germany, and some Dutch Delft tiles.

Suddenly the thought came to me. Why not a Continental kitchen? If I took the color scheme from that very same china and those very same tiles . . .

It was just an idea—one I might have forgotten if we hadn't turned the page and seen that French Provincial furniture. That did it! I spent the rest of the evening planning my new kitchen.

By bedtime, I had everything figured out, even the color of the floor. But could I get just the colors I needed? And was there a floor that had the good looks I wanted, yet would still be practical?

I needn't have worried, for the next morning when I went to see the man at the flooring store, he showed me Armstrong Rubber Tile. There they were . . . exactly the colors I had in mind, but far more lustrous than I'd dreamed any floor could be.

"I'm putting more Armstrong Rubber Tile in kitchens every day," he told me. "People like it because it's comfortable to stand on, easy to keep clean, and grease resistant, too."

Then he helped me plan a floor design to go with my Continental kitchen. "It doesn't cost much more," he explained.

"We just put Armstrong Rubber Tile down block by block, so there's no expensive cutting."

As a matter of fact, the whole remodeling job was surprisingly inexpensive. Bill—that's my husband—is quite a handyman, you see. He built the cabinets—and painted the molding effect on them, too. When it was finished, we had our friends in for a "kitchen-warming" party. You should have heard the compliments! I don't know who got the most—Anne for her geography, Bill for his carpentry, or me for my Armstrong Rubber Tile Floor.

Busy in the kitchen? Long hours of standing aren't so tiring when the floor is cushiony Armstrong Rubber Tile. And long years of wear won't mar the sparkling beauty of this floor, for the colors go all the way through the tile. A handsome custom design—at little extra cost—gives the room an extra touch of individuality. This floor is Armstrong Rubber Tile, Style No. 646 Chartreuse and No. 653 White Black with bands of No. 676 True Blue White.

Send for free booklet and sketch plan of this kitchen. Full-color booklet gives complete information about Armstrong Rubber Tile and shows the full range of harmonizing colors available. Just write to Armstrong Cork Company, Floor Division, 5503 Plum Street, Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

Sound Conditioning . . . the new comfort for up-to-date homes

You can quiet kitchen clatter for as little as $25<sup>00</sup>

A new kind of ceiling muffles the noise of dishwashers, fans, mixers, radios. You can even install it yourself — a free booklet tells how

Meals are more serene with Armstrong Cushiontone on the ceiling. The shrill shouts of children, clatter of dishes, the clanging of silverware and strident ringing of the telephone are all softened . . . and you'll enjoy a more relaxed atmosphere.

It's easy to install 12" x 12" tiles of Armstrong Cushiontone in old homes or new by cementing or nailing. Whether you do it yourself or want a professional installation, see your local Building Materials Dealer for helpful advice and supplies.

You needn't put up with noise in your kitchen. An acoustical ceiling of Cushiontone® traps sound before it becomes noise. Today, homemakers are discovering that quiet is one luxury everyone can afford, for when you install Armstrong Cushiontone yourself, it often costs less than a new mixer.

Cleaning is no problem with Cushiontone. Dust doesn't readily cling to its surface, and the white finish can be washed or repainted.

For free booklet, "How to Make Things Quieter at Your House," write Armstrong Cork Company, 5503 Clark Street, Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

New FIREPLACE

Circulates Heat . . .
Warms All the Room

Especially designed for the modern home, the new Heatilator Fireplace is the only fireplace that gives you all 3 of these features . . .

● Circulates Heat. Cool air from floor level is warmed in the double walled firebox—then circulates gently to every corner of the room, even adjoining rooms.

● Will Not Smoke. A scientifically designed steel form, the Heatilator unit does away with guess-work and rule-of-thumb construction methods. Adds little to cost of finished fireplace.

● Damper Seals Air-Tight. The new Pressure-Seal Damper seals the chimney throat air-tight when the fireplace is not in use. No costly house heat escapes up the chimney. No chimney downdrafts can chill the room. And in the air-conditioned home, it is an absolute necessity to prevent the loss of expensive summer cooling as well as winter warmth.

Ideal for every purpose . . .
homes, basement rooms, camps or cabins.

There's a new look to this Early American living room—a gently sophisticated air added to the traditional heart-warming qualities. It's achieved partly by skillful detailing, and mostly by the use of a "new" color with Early American—pink! Read all about it on page 47. Photograph by Robert C. Cleveland

THE FABULOUS BENDIX

It can happen tonight!

You can curl up in bed and sleep like a princess while the
BENDIX DUOMATIC Washer-Dryer takes washday out of your life!

Here is the one machine in all the world that washes then DRIES your clothes... and we mean thoroughly dry, not damp dry... while you drift off to dreamland. On this page, you'll find facts, not dreams, about this miraculous new machine... the Bendix Duomatic

You're a rested Mother

... cheerful and understanding when Sister's lunch lands in her lap and Johnny marches home in mud-soaked jeans. Your Bendix Duomatic is a whiz at getting youngsters' hard-to-wash things sparkling clean—and dry-for-wearing, too. Much of the time you won't even touch the clothes with an iron. Just put them in... then put them on!

The two helpers you want most ... in ONE machine

An automatic washer... an automatic dryer! Now for the first time in anybody's lifetime, you can have both in one handsome, wonderfully compact machine.

You'll set the dials just once to wash, rinse and thoroughly dry your clothes. Or, you can use the Duomatic as a washer only... or a dryer only... whenever you like. No wash-day appliance has ever been so versatile... so completely ready to do exactly what you want when you want it.

Clothes are lifted and tumbled 500 times every ten minutes

The Duomatic washes clothes whiter... brighter... cleaner than you've ever seen them.

That's because its tumble-action is unlike other machines.

Your clothes plunge deeper into the suds... they're lifted higher... turned and tumbled (ever so gently) 500 times in 10 minutes.

Two wonderful tumble rinses plunge your clothes in and out of clear, warm water until they're immaculately clean. And they stay that way because they're lifted out of the water as it drains away.

Atomic tests show the Bendix Duomatic washes three ways cleaner than other leading automatic washers.

But you won't need tests to tell you.

A special heater keeps wash water hot

Women who have the Duomatic say the built-in Magic Heater is almost as wonderful as the machine itself. Other washers let the wash water cool off, but the Bendix Magic Heater keeps it hot and hard working all through wash cycle... keeps it extra hot for extra-dirty things.

You're a beautiful housekeeper

... you'll have the crispest curtains, the fluffiest blankets... and you'll do them with your eyes shut. None of the lugging and tugging that made "heavy cleaning" a thing to be dreaded. Now, thanks to the Duomatic, it's as easy as setting a dial.

Balmy breezes dry your clothes

After your clothes are washed and rinsed, the Duomatic blinks its bright green eye and automatically turns into a dryer.

Now soft, warm air blows through your clothes while the Duomatic fluffs and tumbles them lovingly dry.

And consider this: Duomatic drying is so gentle, manufacturers recommend it for Fabulous Fabrics like Orlon, Dacron, Nylon. Fabrics you'd hesitate to trust to other dryers.

Proved in 2 full years of home use

The Duomatic is no "experiment"—it's been an everyday blessing in thousands of homes for two years now. And—if you think we lavish praise on the Duomatic, you should see the hundreds and hundreds of letters we've had from grateful owners. You'd read comments like these...

"The best surprise is the way it washes. I've never had clothes come out so clean"...

Mrs. John Self, Chicago, Illinois

"I love the way our Duomatic dries, too. It never steams up my kitchen or overheats the house"...

Mrs. Rolfe Christopher, Beaumont, Texas

"With two small children, it's a life saver. Like having full time laundry help"...

Mrs. E. C. Gutknecht, Milwaukee, Wis.

No space or installation problem

The Bendix Duomatic gives you a washer and dryer in just 36 inches of wall space. Fits neatly into the kitchen, the pantry, even the bathroom. And it's now available in both gas and electric models so your husband can't bring up that old bugaboo about installation costs. Would it be a good idea to mark this paragraph—for him?

Shouldn't you take your husband by the hand and look into the
tomorrow?

Do you want a separate washer or dryer?

The new Bendix Tumble-Action Washer washes just like the Duomatic does. Same superior cleansing action... same rinses. Bendix Tumble-Action is the only washer with Tip-Top Laundry Guide. Closed, it hides the dials, gives you extra work space. It opens to reveal convenient, up-front controls and a complete laundry guide.

And the new Bendix Fluff 'N' Tumble Dryers dry like the Duomatic does... gently, with safe low temperatures and a high flow of clean warm air. What's more, they're very low priced... as little as $158.88!

Thrifty Bendix Tumble-Action uses less water... so, of course, it uses less detergent, too!

Bendix prescribes ALL, the modern "controlled suds" detergent, for best washing results. ALL never chokes up your washer with suds that slow down washing action. That's why a free box of ALL is packed in every new Bendix washer.

What's New About Do-it-yourself?

The current Do-It-Yourself craze puzzles me. My young neighbor is making a coffee table out of plywood and ready-made iron legs. Her husband is making a dining table out of more iron legs and a slab door. I couldn't be more impressed, but I'm puzzled about one thing. When I asked her where they got such good ideas, she gave me that patient look the young reserve for those on the shady side of forty and said, "These are Do-It-Yourself kits." Somehow the emphasis she put on the "Do-It-Yourself" suggested that I might be a trifle too old to know about anything so utterly new.

Where do these youngsters get the idea that they thought all this up themselves? We, who started our homes when prosperity was still some

vive to prove that even Grandma did it herself. —SUSANNE ADAMS

"SHINING" ERROR

I can't resist writing to you concerning the rather glaring error in the December, 1954, issue of THE AMERICAN HOME, where there is an article entitled "Now the Dark Streets Shineth." The "eth" ending can be used only with a singular subject. I assume that the quotation was taken from the popular Christmas carol which reads, in part, "... in Thy Dark Streets Shineth the Everlasting Light." The subject of this sentence is the singular noun "Light."

Mrs. Sensbach is right. We used our poetic license in this case.—ED.

BLUEPRINT PLEASES THE GREENES

In March, 1951, you introduced the plans for a house by asking, "Is this the home you've waited for?" Well, for us, it was the house. We'll be forever grateful to Mr. and Mrs. William Rodger of Birmingham, Michigan for making available their house plans. By following the AMERICAN HOME blueprints almost to a T, we have been able to create a comfortable, easy-to-care-for home for ourselves and our two children. (See snapshot at left.)

Outside of the rough carpentry, masonry, plumbing, and wiring, my distance around the corner, knew a thing or two about Do-It-Yourself long before it became a catch phrase. My husband and I, like most of the young people we knew, had very little money, few tools, and no kits, but we pitched in. We painted unpainted chests, refinished used tables, upholstered, slipcovered, and remodeled. Of necessity, we were plumbers, repair men, house painters, and landscape gardeners. It was good for us, as it is good for those who are doing such things today, but they needn't think that they are inventing something entirely new.

I wonder, too, what grandmother would say to those who make Do-It-Yourself sound like an original idea. Her quilts, hooked rugs, painted china, and crocheted table cloths, as well as the memory of her jams, jellies, and home-smoked hams sur-

PROFIT FROM YOUR PROGENY

Mrs. Babcock's article, "Learn From Your Child" (Sept. '54) was most interesting—especially the paragraph suggesting a pleasant way to call the children to dinner. According to Mrs. B., you should call the tads "five minutes early and say, 'You will have time for one more ride, then run fast and see who can be the cleanest when the big hand gets to twelve.' I can just see their rollicking faces, if you choose that one."

Well, Mrs. Babcock, I have news for you. Mrs. Babcock is a happy new; my chicks are full of fun and energy, are moderately inhibited. Total strangers tell me how delightful they are. I reckon they learned their charming ways from the fairies. The last time I called my little ones as Mrs. B. suggested, my oldest girl, aged 8, remarked reflectively, "I suppose dinner is ready and we are dirty as pigs. So let's get really filthy, huh, kids?"

Dinner was fun though. The children ate their applesauce in their fingers, and, my, what healthy, normal appetites. I never before knew applesauce could be eaten by hand. Yes, one does learn from one's child.

BEDROOM AYES

On your April, 1952, cover, you showed an exquisite bedroom which had custom-built cabinets and vanity with louvered doors in pale blue. This bedroom fascinated me, so I saved the magazine for the day I could afford to have those beautiful cabinets made. Since we had just bought our house, finances were low.

My bedroom is finished now and the result is very gratifying. Visitors fall in love with it and ask where I got the wonderful ideas. The spare room also boasts a custom-built cabinet and is decorated in a color scheme shown in your magazine.

I believe these two rooms are a perfect example of the helpful ideas your magazine offers, and show how, with careful planning, the most magnificent and enormous room illustrated can be scaled down to a size suitable for people like myself who have a small house and modest income.—LOUISE SCHILLER

PARSON'S WIFE PRACTICES WHAT WE PREACH

I am a country preacher's wife, mother of four lively children—so you see my time for reading and re-decorating is limited. I paint and paper when the children get to bed—and between conferences and church activities!

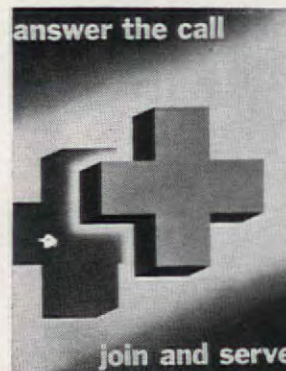

Most preachers have their home all picked out for them; some are even furnished, but our church, a new, young work in a rural area—had no parsonage. We were fortunate to purchase an old brick house, a house empty for six years, waiting patiently to be lived in once again. And this is where THE AMERICAN HOME magazine comes in.

Quite a few years before we bought our old house, I had been saving copies of THE AMERICAN HOME. As we planned how to make our lovely old house more livable, I found myself instinctively going again and again to my old copies. We found so many wonderful ideas, and we didn't need to have a fortune to work them out either.

Some magazines leave me so frustrated after I look at the pictures. A poor preacher's wife could never in a million years have enough money to carry out the ideas they set forth. I do use some recipes, but so many are beyond my food budget. I am glad to return those magazines to the folk who have been kind enough to let me look at them.

On the other hand, AMERICAN HOME gives a host of wonderful ideas that I can store away until there are ways of working them out. The decorating ideas never have left me with that achy, longing, never-to-be-acquired feeling. They stimulate and inspire and add a beauty to my soul which no other current magazine can.

—DORIS H. CROOKS

"HE ALMOST BIT MY HEAD OFF!"

"Was he mad! His best sport shirt... I'd washed it twice but it still looked grubby."

"Then what did you do?"

"I tried blue Cheer—the suds Elizabeth swears by."

"The one they say you don't need bluing or bleach with?"

"That's the one. And it certainly did the trick. The shirt came out good as new!"

"But didn't it fade the colors?"

"Nope—actually made them look brighter."

"Gee!—I guess I'd better try blue Cheer myself."

Why Is Blue Cheer So Different?

Three words... Blue-Magic whitener... make Cheer stand out from all suds sold.

It's Cheer's secret and you can watch it work. You can actually see Cheer get your clothes whiter and whiter, wash after wash.

What's more, Cheer gets colors brighter and brighter, wash after wash.

If you own an automatic, remember this: Cheer is recommended by the world's largest washer maker. And in any washer, Cheer does this: gets clothes so clean, so white you need no bluing and—except for problem stains—no bleach. Try it and see.

We Saw It in THE AMERICAN HOME

The "Do-It-Yourself" trend is even becoming popular with the kids—at least in our family. One night while glancing through the July (1954) AMERICAN HOME, I saw the picture of a pool built by a husband and wife and called my husband to show him the idea. Right then we decided to invest in a small pool of our own, instead of spending about $150, as we usually did, to rent a cottage up north for our summer vacation.

I was away most of the next day, but when I returned, my husband told me to look out back. My three children and four young neighbors—boys and girls from seven to fourteen—had already started a hole just 13 feet beyond our back steps, a hole which grew rapidly during the next few days. My husband made suggestions, but the children did the actual labor. At his advice, they lined up the side pool foundation with the side house foundation, so that, in years to come, we could extend 13 feet out from the kitchen to build on an additional room.

The finished pool measures 9' x 12', is 42" deep, and cost only $143.32. The biggest expense was in having a local contractor lay and level the cement blocks, while the children actually mixed and carried the mortar. We had the bottom poured by a transit mix company at a cost of $23.30, and there was enough cement left over for the youngsters to set up a stone fence behind the flagstone terrace which they had put in around the pool. (The flags, though they would be costly to buy, had been collected by my husband and had been used for a hit-or-miss sidewalk.) The children also moved a picket fence which now encloses both pool and terrace. I'm sure there is no need to tell you how proud their father and I are.—MRS. EDWARD GRANT, Manchester, Conn.

EVERYTHING but Gold Bricks

Planning and Building Your Patio by Shan Steward. Crown. $2.95

... "End up with the man who lays the bricks."

My goodness, I couldn't think of another word to be said about the subject of patios, after reading this book. There are 123 pages with over 400 photographs, diagrams, and plans, plus columns and columns of informative directions...

"Patio" is a pretty confining word for the range covered by the author. Practically every surfacing except gold bricks is thoroughly ragged around from the standpoints of what it is, color, coverage, cost, advantages and disadvantages, and if you don't want a patio proper there are all sorts of ideas for porches, decks, and the like. I particularly liked, too, the second part which states flatly "A patio floor alone does not make a patio", and goes on to bedazzle you with the glamorous things you can do with a patio once the subject is laid.

It's a practical book aimed at those who would do it themselves but insofar as the handsome illustrations are concerned, it could be a treasure trove of ideas for professional landscapers. Interesting, too, to know that the author, Shan Steward, is a woman—J.W.

Now YOU Can Start Landscaping

Complete Home Landscaping and Garden Guide by Raymond P. Korbobo, edited by E. L. D. Seymour. Wm. H. Wise. $2.95

Among the more frequent appeals received from readers are requests for help in developing the grounds around new homes. "We are happy and comfortable in our modern house," they say in effect, "but the outside, besides being either dusty or wet and muddy, is not attractive. We have no money left to pay for a landscape plan or for expensive plants, and know nothing about gardening. Please tell us how to make our garden pleasant and colorful all year 'round without much work or expense." Well, of course, you can't "make bricks without straw," a rabbit pie without rabbit, or a garden without at least some knowledge, skill, materials, and physical effort. The more any one of these is lacking, the more there must be of the others.

However, Complete Home Landscaping and Garden Guide holds the key to a pretty comprehensive, practical answer to such problems. As Extension Specialist in Ornamental Horticulture at the New Jersey State Agricultural College, and with a background of landscape training, practical nursery work, teaching, and lecturing, the author knows what people want (and need) to know, and how to tell it to them. His simple, direct advice is supplemented by 286 equally clear, direct sketches and diagrams. The 26 chapters start with general principles, but quickly get down to details of making a garden plan, developing and relating its features, carrying it out, selecting and locating plant materials, walks, structures and living areas, lawns, beds, borders, and other garden features—and then maintaining them. A Regional Planting Guide, compiled with help from the National Landscape Nurserymen's Association, lists trees, shrubs, and evergreens, and 17 pages of Contents and Index direct the reader.

Acquiring Antiques

LESTER SLATOFF—as told to Barbara Hart

When does something old become a valuable antique? If I could always guess the answer to that frequently asked question, I'd be rich, for I'm an antique dealer and auctioneer. Fashions in antiques change, but in the final analysis, craftsmanship, good materials, good design, and state of preservation are what we want in our homes. So for our purpose, let's define an antique worth owning as "something no longer manufactured but still a useful, artistic household furnishing."

Why do we so often turn to the past for the things we choose to live with? Although every generation has had its monstrosities, the successes survive. In the history of furnishings and architecture, the products of a single slice of 125 years—from about 1700 to 1825—remain unsurpassed. This is the golden age of the Queen Anne, the Georgian, the American Colonial, the age of Wren, Sheraton, Hepplewhite, Chippendale, and Phyfe. At this time, Italy, France, and the Orient also produced excellent designs, though of more elaborate nature. Oriental goods, treasured on both sides of the Atlantic, include screens, vases, porcelains, brasses, carved teakwood—and especially rugs.

Antiques appeal to you strongly—or not at all! Age adds only patina and exclusiveness. The soft gray of old glass, the mellow tones of aged wood, have a peculiar fascination for the antiquarian, historian—and romanticist. In addition, strong individual tastes are reflected by these unique handmade objects, whether they were planned for the palace of a potentate or for a simple New England manse. Their value persists in inherent quality, adaptability, and usefulness—characteristics shared with today's finest contemporary furnishings.

Are antiques too expensive for the average family? Here is another misapprehension, caused no doubt, by the publicity given the few whopping prices paid by large collectors for unusually rare items, and by the fact that today's high incomes are responsible for the higher prices of all furnishings—modern, reproduction, and restored antiques. Across the board, genuine antiques, unless they are great rarities, cost no more (and often considerably less) than reproductions or contemporary pieces of the same high caliber.

In fact, many people regard antiques as an investment, for you can realize more than half of the purchase price at quick sale, and value may often increase. Remember, too, that the cost of antiques can be significantly reduced if you handle minor refinishing and repairs yourself.

How do you start a collection of antiques? Whether you're starting from scratch or adding to heirlooms you already own, buy cautiously, using what you have to advantage, and adding choice pieces from time to time as you find and can afford them: A small chest of drawers is always a sound investment, for this

New low-cost plan for young families gives you

$12,500 LIFE INSURANCE plus a RETIREMENT INCOME AT 65

Costs only $2 a month more than you'd pay for straight life insurance (at age 35)

EVERY FATHER knows life insurance is a necessity. Nobody has to tell him that bills for food, the mortgage, the dentist will go on whether he's here or not.

But, often, planning an income for himself to retire on seems a luxury. Sure he'd like to be able to say, "In twenty years or so, I'll quit work and head for Florida, laze on a beach, go fishing."—"But not now," he says. "I can't afford it now." But then later he finds costs go up as he gets older.

Today, the new Phoenix Mutual "Total Protection" Plan makes it possible and practical to enjoy the peace of mind of immediate life insurance protection—and also to get a head start on a retirement income at the low rates available to young men.

With this Plan, he can afford both. At age 35, for instance, he can get a life insurance policy of $12,500 . . . plus a retirement income of $50 a month, plus the right to purchase later on another $50-a-month retirement income at rates guaranteed today. He pays only $2 monthly more than for straight life insurance.

SEND FOR FREE BOOKLET

If you'd like to know more about this new Plan, exclusive with the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Company, clip the coupon, fill it in, and mail it now. We'll send you without cost, without obligation, a booklet which tells all about this new answer to a growing problem. Don't wait. Get the facts.

Anywhere she goes...

she can buy Tampax

Whether you travel by boat, plane or camel train, you can buy Tampax. It's on sale in Egypt, Madagascar, New Guinea, Venezuela, Iraq, Guatemala—and scores of other foreign countries. It's available, too, in every city, every town, every hamlet, throughout the length and breadth of the United States.

Such widespread distribution is clear evidence of the way Tampax internal sanitary protection has "caught on" with women. And yet—is this so surprising? After all, Tampax is really the logical method of protection on "those days"—the method that does away with the bulky belt-pin-pad harness, and substitutes protection that's far more convenient and much easier to use.

Wearer's hands needn't even touch the Tampax. Tampax can be worn in shower or tub. Tampax prevents odor from forming. Tampax is easy to dispose of. And it's so small, a month's supply can be carried in the purse. Choice of 3 absorbencies at drug or notion counters. (Regular, Super, Junior.) Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.

When we moved into a sweet little Cape Cod house with a 24' living-dining room, I could see myself, clad in tiger-skin pants and a fluffy apron, presiding over charming intimate buffet suppers for, say, two or at the most, three, congenial couples

Look out!

The walls are closing in

JEAN T. ANDERSON

S tarry-eyed brides, take heed! Young couples seeking the modern mode of life, beware! The Planners for Tomorrow are out to get you! Only this morning I had a glimpse of what you're in for. Sprawled in front of the television set with my fourth cup of coffee (no expense too great to put off making beds), I watched one such Planner cluck adoringly over sketches of the ultimate house plan for Mr. and Mrs. Average American. The sight of this cosy nest, composed mainly of living space sheltered by a mushroom cap, threw me into a comatose state wherein I relived the past eight years in what the real estate salesman described as a modern Cape Cod semi-bungalow. The only difference between my Cape Cod and the mushroom that they showed

Eating in the kitchen worked out pretty well until our two young tots were old enough to ping butter pats off their knives at the pots and pans stacked high in the nearby sink on the TV screen is that mine involved shingles. Take this business of living space. As a happy bride, I was interested in the simple, or slovenly, life. Not for me two sets of china, and silver trays to polish. No siree! No back-breaking labor cleaning a full-scale dining room! "Show me some planned living space," I cried. "Bring on those multi-purposed rooms with a relaxed feeling of spaciousness!" We bought such a house in September and the vision lasted until Thanksgiving. Living-dining rooms are strictly for orphans—our combined relatives number nine, and not one of them will settle for a little casserole dish and a Caesar salad. My mother-in-law refuses to squat on brightly colored cushions, so with our drop-leaf table as over-extended as our mortgage, we managed a full course sit-down dinner, with serving dishes overflowing onto a nearby card table. Poof! That ended my ideas on what constitutes labor-saving. If anything is back-breaking, it is to set up, serve, and immediately clear away a large dinner in the living room—the same room in which you hope to spend the evening visiting.

You think you can avoid all this by spending Thanksgiving at Grandma's? Uh uh! There's more to it. Just wait until the stork gets around to you. By the time our first daughter was old enough to sit up and take strained beets, I had worn a doughnut-shaped hole in the rug from scrubbing the spots around her high chair. In despair (and just in time for the arrival of the second daughter), we gave up dining by candlelight and moved permanently to the kitchen. Here we dined in the modern manner—everything simplicity itself. From stove to table to sink, not to mention that intermediate step of scraping garbage off the plates.

To get out of the kitchen (and it's taken us eight years), let's consider the subject of television. What is there about it that stirs up the appetite? As a family, we cannot spend a half hour before the screen unless grub-staked with popcorn, graham crackers, apples, and sandwiches (with lots of mayonnaise, of course, for the slipcovers). This is easy on the grocer, but tough on the multi-purpose living room.

Of course, the ideal spot for TV is a basement playroom, but the Planners for Tomorrow take care of that, too. The basement is brought upstairs, condensed like soup and literature, and wedged in between the kitchen and bathroom. It's called a utility room. Not only will it not take TV, it

SURPRISE DRAWER

LUCILLE E. HEIN

Entertaining very young visitors sometimes can present problems, especially in households which have no full-time junior members. If small nieces and nephews or children of friends come calling with their parents, it's always a pleasure to welcome them. But when the time comes for a delicious gossip with their elders over coffee, keeping the tykes amused can be a problem. At such times, a Surprise Drawer comes to the rescue.

As I sort the delightful memories of childhood, I remember just such a drawer in my grandfather's house—a drawer crammed with fascinating odds and ends. If we behaved, we could open that drawer, and for the rest of the afternoon, while the adults enjoyed their own visiting, we played in a happy world of broken bead strings, wooden spools, lengths of ribbon, an old stereoscope with views of Niagara Falls and Paris, a set of dominoes, a black lace shawl, a glass egg once used to encourage a reluctant hen, an album of pictures, and other trivia so dear to a child.

Our drawer always stuck because it was near a floor radiator. This sticking was part of its lure for we had to struggle to open it, and secretly felt we were doing something forbidden. There is a certain joy in playing without a mother's supervision, and my sister and I made the most of the opportunity. Of course, we had to behave, and to put everything away in readiness for the next grandchild.

If you have young visitors, why not clean out the lowest drawer in that secretary, or the little one in your bedroom chest? You need not go on a buying trip to fill it, for it will fill itself—with empty spools, bits of yarn, old valentines and Christmas cards, campaign buttons, ancient handbags—anything with which they can't hurt themselves. If you're determined to buy extras, how about a few beautiful marbles or a jigsaw puzzle?

Children are given so many toys that are wonderfully made but call for no ingenuity. They enjoy them, of course, but also enjoy that assorted miscellany from which they can make their own toys.

More for your money in a CONCRETE HOUSE

Before you build or buy a house—wherever it may be, whatever size or style it is—compare basic construction materials. You'll find you get more for your money when your house has concrete foundations and floors, concrete masonry walls and a firesafe roof.

You get durability and protection. Concrete has maximum resistance to weathering. It can't burn, decay or be damaged by termites and vermin. A properly designed basement and concrete first floor provides a safe refuge from tornadoes, hurricanes and atomic blasts.

You get beauty. Choose from many distinctive concrete masonry wall patterns. Finish in beautiful color with portland cement paint.

You get comfort. With ordinary insulation a concrete house is cool in summer and warm in winter. It's snug and dry the year around.

You get economy. A sturdy, durable concrete masonry house will need less repair and maintenance. So its moderate first cost ÷ its long years of service = low annual cost.

HOW TO GET A CONCRETE HOUSE—and what will it cost?

Phone a concrete masonry manufacturer for names of architects, builders and lending agencies experienced in concrete house design, construction and financing. They know conditions in your community and can tell you about plans, local requirements and costs.

Take any plans or sketches you have to an architect. Have him show you how your home—of any size, style or floor plan—can be economically built with concrete walls, floors and a firesafe roof. If you're not yet ready to build, write for a free, illustrated booklet, distributed only in the United States and Canada. Address Dept. A3-5.

3 MONTHS

says slender Mrs. Aileene George of Sunnyside, N. Y.

After each of my children was born, I put on more and more weight; looked less attractive every day. Unlike many women who have this same experience, I simply refused to be fat. The photo above tells the story. I weighed 173 pounds, wore a size 20 dress when I started the famous Knox Eat-and-Reduce Plan. In only 3 months my hips were down a whopping 6¾ inches, my waist down 4¼ inches! The photo below shows me as I am today, over 2 years after going on this diet. I wear a youthful size 14 dress, weigh 138 pounds... look better, feel wonderful. Here's proof you not only reduce but best of all you stay reduced on the Knox diet.

In the past three years more than a million people have sent for the original Knox Gelatine Eat-and-Reduce Plan.

Proof aplenty of the need for a safe, pleasant way to get rid of unwanted pounds without pills, wafers, drugs or synthetic substances of any kind. The Key to the Knox Plan is a famous food product you and your doctor have had confidence in for many years.

Now, here is a new, improved, easier-to-follow Knox Reducing Plan that lets you live and work as usual while getting rid of 2 to 5 pounds a week. ## Before You File Your Income Tax Return...

Be sure you understand the advantages the new law offers householders. Your home budget record can be most helpful in making your return

Complete Records Save Time and Taxes:

Most readers of THE AMERICAN HOME are directly or indirectly interested in and subject to the Federal Income Tax Laws. There are many new advantageous adjustments in the Internal Revenue Code for the year 1954—the individual returns for which are due April 15, 1955. Such advantages include new exemptions of income, additional dependency allowances, and other relief provisions. In all cases the objective is to pay the minimum required tax—Uncle Sam does not expect you to pay any more! It is equally important to complete a return without violating the provisions of the law, and better records at home can help to save taxes and avoid inaccuracies.

When deductions are detailed on the return, it is more important than ever before to keep available with your tax file, sufficient records to support each item. Budgets and cash records by the wife and each working member of the family can help meet this requirement—actually save taxes; control the commitment of obligations beyond ability to pay; and furnish valuable information year by year. Invoices and cancelled checks should be kept with this record.

Keep Your Tax Record with Your Budget Record:

I have found that by comparative budgeting, important obligations are met when due. They could include taxes, mortgage, and interest on home and properties; life and other insurance premiums; and finance payments. With a budget and cash record month by month, income receivables are brought to attention when due. Tax deductible items for the current year are less likely to be overlooked when preparing tax returns in the following year. It is helpful in preparing and checking quarterly tax declarations and planning the purchase of new furniture, household equipment, an automobile, and improvements to the home without getting into financial difficulties. Budget books are available in all stationery stores.

If You Have Household Help:

Your tax and budget record should include payments to household help, and the new Social Security tax you will have to pay the Federal Government—if any individual is paid $50 or more in a calendar quarter, regardless of days or hours worked. This first return for January, February, and March must be filed and paid by you in April, 1955. The total rate of 4% must be remitted by you in April, 1955, 2% of which should be collected from the employee. This 2% is often paid by the employer.

New Exemption on Income from Dividends:

The tax return indicates you can deduct the first $50 from your dividend income. If the stock is owned jointly by husband and wife, each may claim up to $50. 4% of the dividends received

Will you love me forever?

Choose in a dog the personality traits you like in your friends. A Blue-Ribbon disposition matters more than Blue-Ribbon conformation

Acquiring a dog is a little like getting married or adopting a child. The four-legged acquisition is not a possession, but a member of the family, a personality to be lived with, for better or for worse. You can't just see a pup in the window of a pet shop, hand over your ten bucks, and suppose that you have so easily bought the devotion, the fun and companionship, the satisfaction, that the right dog can give the right human.

The pup may be coming down with distemper or worse, so you run up a big vet bill, lose a lot of sleep, and end up with an ache where your heart is. Or what if the tiny tyke grows and grows, until you find yourself with a pet the size of a pony? It could be that the little dear turns out to be an ornery cuss that bites not only the hand that feeds him—and you end up in a court of law.

Of course, there is no insurance that your dog will never get sick, but he should be in good health when you buy him, and you can be reasonably certain of his size, appearance, and personality if you proceed intelligently. (By far the greatest number of troubles the dog-owner suffers are personality problems.)

In books and dog magazines you will find much on choosing a breed. This applies where size and appearance are concerned, but one should not infer that breed and personality can be neatly bracketed. What has too seldom been said is that, although there are breed characteristics, there are also wide variations and exceptions within every breed. All Cocker Spaniels are not docile. All German Shepherds are not belligerent.

If a breed has enjoyed top spot on the popularity list, choose the individual of this breed very carefully. Too many people who know too little about dog breeding, flood the market with specimens inferior in character traits and not true to the original qualities of the breed. This happened with the German Shepherd, the Cocker Spaniel, and the Boston Terrier, and to some extent

Love Me Forever?

with the Boxer and other breeds. The Poodle, possessor of many rare qualities, is now in grave danger from the same indiscriminate breeding.

It is perfectly possible to breed sound, good-looking dogs, and at the same time to give primary attention to the most important assets of any dog: temperament and high I.Q. If all breeders had given attention to this aspect of heredity, the I.Q. of our present generation of dogs would be appreciably higher.

It's hard to choose from a group of captivating pups like these—yet each will have its own distinctive personality

For every champion born, hundreds of the same breed pass into the dog population, and many of these are beautiful to the non-technical eye. The chances are that you are not going to get a winner unless you pay high in three or four figures—so why not look for the priceless qualities breeders can't charge for: a lovable nature and intelligence? I'm tired of having new dog-owners proudly show me Queenie's pedigree, pointing out the number of champions in red letters.

What they should want to know is: Was Queenie's Mama beautiful but stupid? Was Granddaddy a vicious character used widely at stud to produce thousands of problem dogs, simply because he won a roomful of trophies or passed to his progeny his long, narrow skull?

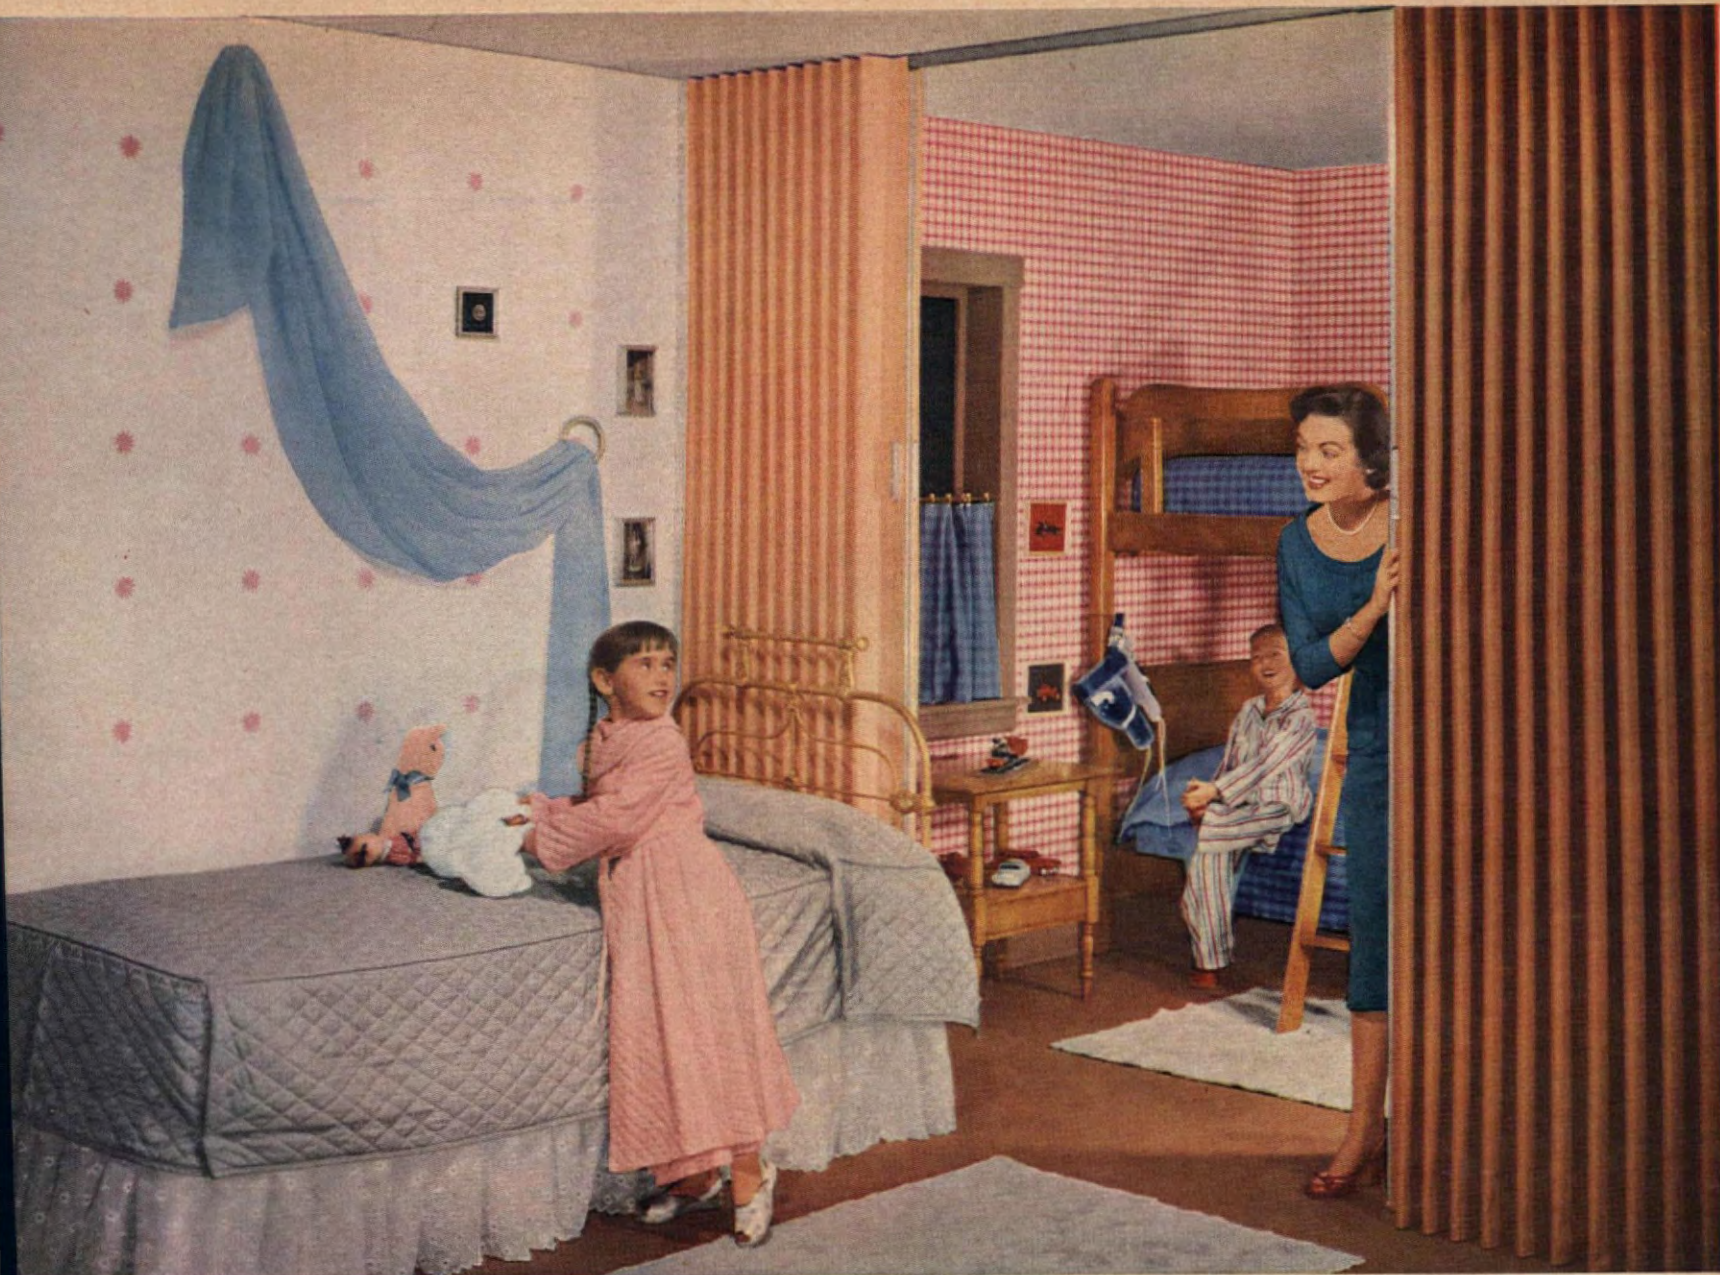

Line breeding, or in-breeding, accentuates the bad factors as well as those which are desirable. By all means look for clear eyes, clean skin, shiny coat, good bone. But when you read that you should choose the most aggressive little bundle of dog in the litter, think twice. Many dogs exhaust their owners because they are too bursting with energy that cannot be controlled, too mischievous, too destructive. Probably these deluded buyers tried hard to pick an aggressive pup. Also, you should not take the timid baby hiding in the corner. Choose in your dog the traits you like in your friends. Dogs differ as much in disposition as humans, and there are many stages between the dog gangster and little Milquetoast. The more thoughtful pup that takes a few minutes to make friends will probably be as ready for a romp, and yet be willing to share moments of repose.

CECILE ROWE BOST

In my lifetime, I have not traveled far from home, Newton, North Carolina, yet I have sensed the loveliness of the Emerald Isle and the glory of Great Britain, and I have witnessed the pain of a defeated Germany, a now-lost Latvia, and a wounded France—for I am the only native U.S. member of a unique organization, Club International, composed of GI brides from other lands who are now making their homes in North Carolina's Piedmont section. Pictured at one meeting, above: a new little American, Velda Hewitt, with her mother Marie, a native of France; Club Treasurer Lucy Withers from Hawaii, center; and Vice President Jean Reynolds from Newfoundland.

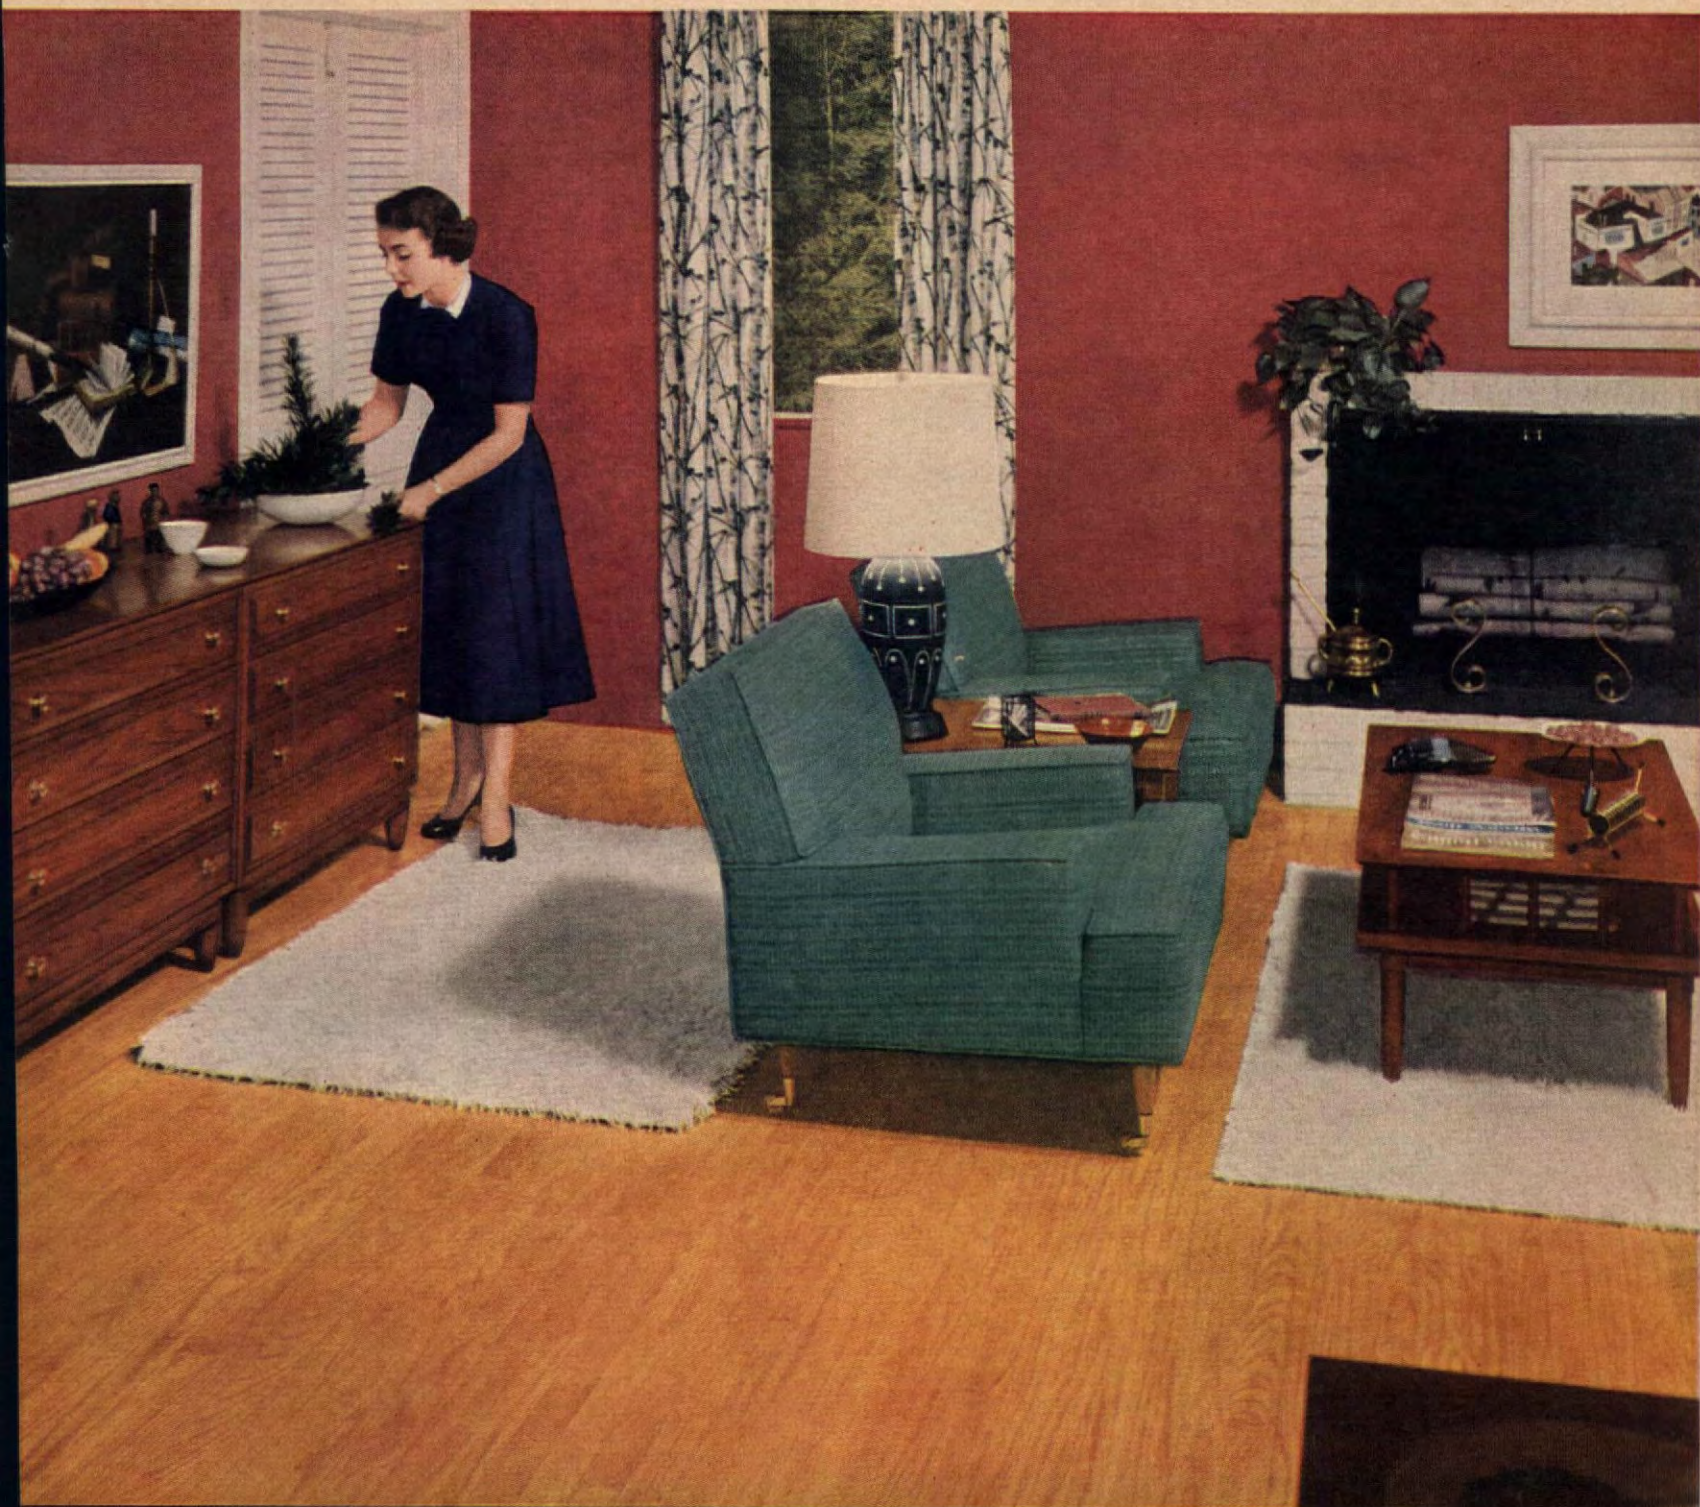

Club International came into being in August, 1952. For several months I, as women's editor of the local radio station, had combed the territory in search of foreign-born GI brides to participate in a series of interviews. I had discovered that these young women did not know each other, even though some of them had the same native lands in common. Therefore I invited them to my home for a "strictly American" luncheon. How thrilling it was to hear them say, at the end of the meal, "Let's get together again!"

Meetings are now held each month and membership has remained near twenty. Over their coffee cups, in their homes, these new Americans have told of experiences in former countries, talked freely of World War II, and openly discussed the prevention of future world conflict. As a project, the group sends monthly packages of food and American magazines overseas, and it also gives attention to several local causes. Responsible for many of the club's benefits were the first officers (left): Phyllis Brooks, from Britain, Edeltrant Corriher, from Germany, and Elsie Shook, of England. Projects in the making call for learning more about America. Community leaders will be invited to attend the meetings and speak on various phases of American life, as an aid to club members who are hoping to get their citizenship soon. Whether from Austria, England, Germany, Latvia, France, Hawaii, or Ireland, the members of Club International are busy proving that it's easy to be "Good Neighbors."

Occupation: RETIRED

PEGGY PAEPER

Most advice about how to retire must have been written by persons who have never done it. Those ads picturing Grandma and Grampa stowing luggage in the family car, or waving from the deck of a luxury liner, ready to take off like the gypsies they are not, look good. But how many of us have the inclination or the income to be forever on the move? A rose-covered cottage would have as much appeal and be a lot easier on the feet! Travel may seem alluring while you are tied to a desk with one eye on the clock, but when you have time on your hands, a settled home and interesting work to do are going to be much more gratifying.

Retirement can be fun, a great adventure, or a sad mistake. Nothing you have ever done before so vitally depends upon your personal outlook and effort. The first major change encountered is that you are no longer a number or a name on a desk, door, or shingle. You are just you, without prestige of position or profession. This situation you adjust to, according to how much you leaned on that crutch in the past. It surprises some to learn that many people have lived a lifetime without having heard of dear old "Electric Motors," or whatever their former business connection.

Next on the change list is—husband and wife have to learn to live with each other again. Not since the first years of marriage have they been so dependent upon one another, or been so much together. And if you think retirement means a lavender shawl and walking cane, you would do well to take a look at figures being published by the insurance companies showing good health that stretches far into later years. Then start making plans to use that active mind and body.

For nearly three years, we have been in retirement in the Ozarks, enjoying a new way of life far from our old home. We are happy with our new career, our home, our friends—several years of thinking and planning and searching proved their worth. To us, retirement meant a lawn chair under a tree in a moderate climate, with elbow room enough to guarantee peace and quiet. We wanted a small house and garden space, a town nearby for shopping, and a city not more than a day's drive removed. For all of this, we could pay around $5,000, with another few thousand to be held in reserve for remodeling the house along the lines we desired.

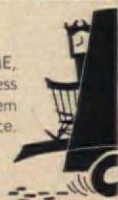

After a search I'll describe later on, we found our home in a place where we do a fairly good job of supporting ourselves. We have a vegetable garden, the surplus going into the freezer or fruit cellar. We keep chickens for eggs and meat (we vowed

A good deal of attention is being paid to modern music in the recording field these days. Perhaps not so much attention as some of us might wish. But there are always reasons, you know. Recording would be a disastrously unprofitable business, if the various companies concentrated heavily on modern composers, for the buying public is still having its long and passionate affair with the Bachs, Beethovens, Brahmses, and Mozarts—producers of what may now be called—with impunity, I trust—standard items. Consequently it's going to take aeons before the ordinary music lover takes to his heart a Webern, an Orff, a Cage with the same enthusiasm that he exudes for the others. There are composers even less "modern" than those three who are having a difficult time getting acquainted with record lovers. But it's no fault of the disc makers; they try anyway. And now let's get on to the business at hand, the recordings to be discussed—some modern, the others not "standard."

ROBERT BAGAR

THE MODERNS AND THE BAROQUE

Drawing of "Les Six" by Jean Cocteau—for the album of their music

LE GROUPE DES SIX: Auric, Durey, Honegger, Milhaud, Poulenc, and Tailleferre (the only girl in the fraternity), each represented by a composition played by the Orchestre de la Société des Concerts du Conservatoire, under the direction of Georges Tzipine. ANGEL 35117-8, two 12-inch LP discs.

We have in this album a tribute to the famous "Six" of French music, a society of divided musical persuasions. It was Henri Collet, who in 1920 dubbed them "Les Six," and so they have remained in the histories. They were young and, as the young ever do, they revolted against conditions in music. With that, each one, naturally, offered a "replacement," music which in every case advanced an idiom of its own, if not a new language. Some of the six have become a part of the musical life of our country as well as their own: Milhaud who has spent much time composing and teaching here during the past 15 years; Honegger whose opera, Jeanne d'Arc au Bucher, has been as popular with American music lovers as with European; Auric, whose excellent scores for films made in France and in Britain have contributed musical distinction to a visual medium (the delightful song from Moulin Rouge, for example).

The compositions in the present volume sprang from later periods in the lives of the different composers. Only Louis Durey's Le Printemps au Fond de la Mer (poem by Jean Cocteau) stems from 1920, when the group became known by the name that unintentionally flung a challenge to the Russian "Five" of a former era. There is this to add to the aforementioned—the music, all of it, has vividness and charm; it is performed with the grace and the devotion you might expect in a mood of celebration, and the sound is excellent. The works consist of a Tailleferre Overture; the Honegger Prelude, Fugue and Postlude; the Poulenc Secheresses

It loosens as clothes are individually dipped, flexed and rinsed by thorough G-E Activator Washing Action. # Colonial in the Pink

Pink, once the ingénue, is now Queen of Colors, found often in the company of worldly Modern and elegant period decoration. But see what a warm, welcome glow it can give to Early Americana as well

MARTHA B. DARBYSHIRE

"Why not pastels, especially pink, with Early American?" asked Decorator Harold Grieve. And so, in the Early American room in the David Shelly home, he achieved a warm and worldly look by introducing modern chairs and sofas, modern fabrics—and modern pink, a color most suited to his pretty client whose portrait you can see over the table. It's pink spiked with red for character. Pink used by an artist. The secret is that the pink is merely a lighter shade of the red: Start with the rug's red, mix it with sufficient white, and you have the delicate tone of the ceilings and walls. Other reds come part way between, and touches of amethyst, liberal splashes of blue, pinkish wood tones of the impeccable fireplace wall relate the living room to the rest of the house. When you analyze its ingredients, this Early American "farm house" becomes mighty urban and up-to-date—but a country flavor and an unmistakable nostalgia are certainly present, keynoted perhaps by the Shellys' excellent collection of paintings by Grandma Moses (they own five originals) which have been featured to advantage.

OWNERS: MR. AND MRS. DAVID SHELLY, WEST LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

Recessed into the living room's overmantel is The Checkard House ("Grandma's" own spelling), one of the most celebrated of the nonagenarian primitive artist's subjects. A painting of the same house has appeared on a fabric (Decorator Grieve used it for cushions in the living room) and on a set of plates, one of which you can spot next to a second important Grandma Moses painting over the library fireplace.

In the snug and sunny library above, yellow rather than pink takes the bows—but it is a yellow combined with mauvish brown instead of obvious reds, and the room is akin to the living room in spirit. The close-up of the bookcase end shows how a phonograph was cleverly housed here: the turntable is attached to a pull-out shelf while the speaker rests, at ideal height for the room, on a bookshelf near the sofa.

Colonial in the Pink

(Begins on page 47)

There's always interesting pattern underfoot. A rag carpet, climbing stairs painted off-white and stippled in blue, is met in the upstairs hall by bold squares of navy, red, and beige carpet. The two young daughters of the house love their garden, a fact enticingly announced by the little semicircular hooked rug on the threshold of their room.

There are three living rooms in the Shelly house—the pink one (page 47), the yellow library-music room, and the combined dining and TV room at your right. An inspiration it was to build the TV into a corner of the dining room, and to provide the sofa above for televiewers. Those as wants to, can enjoy it, the others may read in the library or practice the arts of conversation in the living room without competition from an all-consuming Cyclops. In this room, too, the coloring is pastel rather than primary, and there's a pinkish cast to the whole. The stronger notes here reflect colors in the still-life given to the Shellys by songwriter Buddy de Silva, who, like so many well-known people, is an accomplished part-time artist (he also painted the picture above the library sofa).

For the master bedroom—what color but pink? All-over pink this time, save for the blue bedspreads. "Tongue-in-cheek" pink is what Decorator Grieve humorously calls it.

By derivation, an amateur is a "lover." In gardening, amateurs are the great motivating force, the consuming public for whom plants are grown, devices are invented, research is done . . . Be glad and proud that you are one of them

The rose, undisputed "Queen of Flowers," usually wins popularity contests, too. One reason: while special care does help, even a rosebush planted and "let grow" can pay big dividends. How else will $2 buy you so much beauty and delight for years on end! . . . "Gladness" played no part in naming the gladiolus (meaning "little sword" because of the leaf form). But what enjoyment comes from growing it—for use in gardens, in arrangements, in flower show competition? . . .

Two Amateurs Swap Notes

CAROLYN S. LANGDON, truly a tyro when she started, knows the fun, frustration, and reward of getting to know gladiolus. Here she "looks at the 'glad' catalogues"—and beyond.

he beginning gladiolus grower probably is scarcely aware that there are catalogues devoted to that flower alone. Perhaps his attention was first attracted by a colorfully lithographed box of bulbs (all right, corms) in a local seed or hardware store, bearing a "Bargain at 75 cents" sign; whereupon he decided to gamble a bit of spare change. If they were typical, so-called "bargain bulbs" widely sold each spring, he probably lost out then and there, for such bulbs are all too often worn-out culls that a reliable grower would not offer; or, even if not bulbs of mediocre quality, at least bulbs of very old, probably superseded, varieties.

That was how we started. While my husband was discussing lawn seed mixtures, I discovered the box surmounted by beautifully pictured flower spikes, offering "12 for $1." The family's garden boss insisted (1) that gladiolus needed special treatment and should be grown in rows like vegetables, and (2) that there was no room for any in his little patch. The clerk then came to my aid by suggesting that I plant them in clumps and make them a part of my own little flower corner.

That must have been a sturdy collection, for from every bulb came a spike that bloomed so well as to impress even my doubting husband. In fact, they inspired him to attend the local gladiolus show where we learned that our beauties were, indeed, only "oldies," tried and true but, in most cases, long since surpassed by larger, more vigorous, more spectacular varieties. We also discovered that thousands of commercial growers over the country issue catalogues—some mere price lists, others highly descriptive, with or without illustrations—most of them free for the asking. The great majority of these firms are reliable, but if there is any question, helpful guides are: Does the firm belong to a nationally recognized society, such as the North American Gladiolus Council, or the New England Gladiolus Society? Does it advertise in reputable magazines? Is it located where you can visit it and inspect its plantings? And we found out, too, that commercial growers usually have their own classes and exhibits in the shows. One of the latter emphasized odd, "smoky" varieties, so we put our name on the exhibitor's mailing list.

His next catalogue listed many, unbelievably beautiful named varieties that cost only a dollar or less for ten. And what a thrill we had that summer, watching each spike

MARIAN BROWN got her elementary education in gardening the hard way—reclaiming a plot of "filled" land. But she found both she and roses could grow and be happy there.

fter our house was moved to a plot of filled land at one end of a contractor's yard, I anticipated all kinds of difficulty in establishing a garden there, for the ground wasn't "fill" in the landscaping sense, but more in the nature of an industrial dump heap. It was, roughly, one part cinders, one part brick, glass, cement rubble, tin cans, and other debris, and the rest gummy clay with sand and stones mixed in. And yet I later found this filled land perfect for roses!

After a summer of back-breaking work, in which I was aided by my teen-age son and an ancient gentleman and his ancient horse and plow, our 9,000 sq. ft. began to look like a home property. Next, we removed half of the dozen nondescript trees that densely shaded it, and hauled in such tillable fill of black dirt, humus, and sand as we could get. Meanwhile, in clearing up, we had hoed in an inch or so of the leaves, weeds, and grass, so the result was three or four inches of reasonably good soil on top of several feet of the original debris. This condition has made lawn building something of a nightmare, but it seems to have provided perfect conditions for roses. In my "boning up," I learned that they don't like "wet feet," and our subsoil certainly ensures good drainage.

My first rose purchase, made in early spring from a mail-order house, included (because I liked their names) the Hybrid Teas—Mirandy, New Yorker, Herbert Hoover, and Helen Traubel. For them, I dug an eight-foot trench, 18 inches wide and two feet deep, and put in it six inches of sand and old leaves, and then enough good humusy soil so the bushes, when placed on it, would have their crowns an inch below the final surface. After setting each bush, I filled soil in over the roots, gently trod it down, filled the trench with water, let it soak in, filled the trench level full of soil, and gave it one more soaking and leveling. A heaped-up covering of leaves and soil protected the plants (which I had pruned back to six inches tall) until frost danger was over. Then I removed it gradually.

During the first summer, I mulched with grass clippings, hoeing them in from time to time, and buried all my vegetable garbage between the bushes. In fall, and the next spring, I applied a good fertilizer and every week or so I dusted with an all-purpose dust. The resulting blooms were magnificent, attracting many passersby. I have since added Peace and Forty-niner (H. T.'s); Fashion, Vogue, Red and

WORKSHOP FOR GARDENERS

This little honey of a structure is a "command performance," designed by us especially to meet innumerable requests for a good garden workshop that needs no hiding behind a screen of shrubs. Topped by its cupola, and with potted flowers abloom on its ample shelves, it will make an attractive addition to your property—and the gardener of the family will bless its conveniences. Of course, we have made its blueprints available, along with a list of materials required. Send for them now—and when balmy days blow your way, get going! (Construction Pattern 2065—see order form on page 145.)

As to the details—the simple frame structure, 8' x 10', rests on a concrete slab. The interior, equipped with pivoted bins and lots of cupboards, is divided into two sections—a work room and a storage room, each with its own entry. The outside is random-width vertical siding, while the roof, which has a skylight of translucent corrugated plastic, is made of asphalt shingles.

Thanks to the separate storage section for tools, lawn mowers, wheelbarrows, and so on, the work room is free of the clutter found in the usual combined tool and potting shed; and its floor is free of tracked-in mud, wet leaves, and lawn clippings. By omitting a door between the two sections, you may have added wall space for hanging tools on the storage side, and for shelves on the work-room side. There's generous bench surface, and generous space under it for the pivoted bins in which to keep soil, peat moss, leaf mold, and so forth—yet everything is within easy reach. A pleasant place to work—or take root in—would be hard to imagine.

*You can build this potting shed from our blueprint—

Something good under the sun, wind, and rain:
pigmented stains and sealers for siding.

Unlike older "natural" wood finishes, they needn't gray nor darken; and they let you change
a wood's color without losing its grain

Would You Believe They're REDWOOD?

If you'd like to keep your redwood or cedar siding looking spanking new—or if you'd like to change its color but keep the beauty of its grain, the pigmented stains and pigmented penetrating sealers are for you. They come in a wide range of wood tones, and in grain-revealing rainbow hues; are so easy to use that even Junior can wield the brush. These finishes wear away gradually (as does any good house paint), and since they protect the wood from the elements, the wood can't blacken or turn dingy gray. Two coats applied to clean wood should last from one to three years, and when a fresh coat is needed, it goes over the old without fussy surface preparation. They may be used on weathered wood too, but be sure to consult your dealer about compatibility before using them over a different type of finish.

If you prefer a clear, glossy finish, there's good news for you in new types which don't crack, check, and peel like the older varieties. The new clears wear away gradually, and so don't build into thick troublesome layers when they are renewed. However, since clears give the wood little protection from sun discoloration, we recommend that you protect the wood with a coat of pigmented finish before applying the gloss.

Here are a few of the wood tones available in pigmented finishes. There is also a variety of such non-wood colors as green, yellow, blue, and black—or you may mix your own

When Your Roof

1. To locate leaks in an unfinished attic, look for pinholes of light or for water stains. Slide a wire through hole so you'll be able to spot the leak easily when you're topside. In finished or insulated attics, look for wet spots after rain. Since water may run down rafters before appearing, measure distance from gable and ridge to leak. When you're out on the roof, look all along rafter line above wet spot to find water's point of entry

2. Take every feasible safety precaution when you are on the roof. Wear rubber-soled shoes and keep off your feet as much as possible. Don't go up on a wet day—it may be slippery, particularly if your shingles are wood. To use a ladder as a working scaffold, throw a heavy rope over the ridge and pull ladder up, as shown. Tie other end of rope securely to post or tree

7. If leak results from a split wooden shingle, drive a piece of copper, aluminum, or galvanized flashing under break. Metal should extend well up under next course, and be as wide as shown above

3. Force roofing cement into crack; nail down curled edges or loose pieces; cover exposed nail heads with cement. If the shingle is in really bad shape, remove it and replace it as described in Figure 4

9. Hard-to-locate leaks may often be traced to faulty flashing around the chimney, for water may seep under shingles before dripping down. Check for cracks or holes in flashing. Replace or nail down loose flashing and patch holes and joints with a generous coat of cement

Leaks

The best time to track down a leak is when it rains—and the best time to fix it is the next sunny day. If, like most, yours is a shingle roof, these prescriptions are for you, though the interior first-aid we suggest applies to roofs of all types. The major causes of leaks are worn, torn, warped, or cracked shingles, inadequate fastenings, and poor or deteriorating joints between flashing and roof shingles. Don't delay repairs, for small leaks have an insidious way of becoming big leaks rapidly. At worst, big leaks seriously damage plaster and wood framing; at best, a weeping roof will stain your walls, ceilings, and woodwork.

3. If leaks are caused by loose or upturned asphalt shingles, fasten them down with blob of roofing cement placed underneath. Nail down curled edges, and cover nail heads with cement. Repair similar leaks at ridge or hip coverings in the same manner

4. If shingles are badly torn or have actually fallen out, you must replace them entirely. Raise the shingle directly above the damaged one and pull out all nails that hold the battered shingle. To remove a wooden shingle, slide hacksaw blade under it to cut off the nails

5. All nails that cannot be pulled should be cut off or driven flush and covered with roofing cement. Slide new shingle in place and nail, using old holes where possible. If shingle won't lie absolutely flat, fasten down with cement as shown in Figure 3

6. If shingle above is too brittle to be lifted without danger of breaking, press nails in with your thumb, then drive them home using a block of wood and a screw driver as shown. Be careful not to hit shingles with hammer. Coat all nail heads with roofing cement

10. Check flashing around plumbing stacks and vents in the same manner as you did around the chimney. Treat by nailing down all raised up lead flashing and by covering joints with a liberal application of roofing cement

11. In an emergency, it may be possible to repair a leak from the inside. Force roofing cement into leaks or into the cracks between the sheathing boards. Then cover cement with a piece of tar paper cut to size

12. Hold tar paper in place with a flat board jammed in between the two rafters on either side of the leak. Toe-nail the board to both rafters with short nails. Never nail through sheathing—you may start more leaks

That handsome but slightly chipped goblet, that orphaned juice glass, that sherbet from a set no longer in use—don't hoard them in the back of the cupboard when they can do you so proud out in the open! Filled with a few choice blossoms, such odds and ends brighten dull corners all over the house: upstairs, downstairs, and especially in milady's chamber—next to her mirror, or perched on her night table to greet her each morning. When flowers are scarce, these small arrangements are more desirable than ever, their requirements are so modest. (1) Tulips in a beer glass are no paradox—they're an effective tiny floral tribute to your coffee table. The accompanying cigarette urn might well be a juice glass on its night out. (2) A small water tumbler sports five daffodils of varying heights and a few sprigs of andromeda—to the delight of duck figurine. (3) A dainty sherbet holds a fan of yellow and white freesias, African violets, and carnations. To set this one up, place "foam" or clippings of greens and ferns in the bottom of the glass. Criss-cross adhesive tape over the top, making sure that the complete arrangement hides this. Start with carnations and violets, then add freesias, turning tips up. An "odds and ends" demitasse that could hold cigarettes complements the bouquet. (4) For a small milk-glass sherbet, an array of daisies is fresh as Spring's first careless rapture—and well worth buying an inexpensive bit of milk glass for especially. Begin this one by filling the container with sphagnum moss, foam, or a pinholder. For the curved lines, white butterfly bush (buddleia) and for contrast, a bit of greenery such as ilex (holly). Along the periphery, insert daisy buds.

EVERYBODY'S MAD FOR Pink

MARY E. MONZE and

GERTRUDE BROOKS DIXON

The moral here is: "If you're aiming for mink, tempt Poppa with pink!" No gal need bake a pink cake merely to hint that pink's pleasant around the house. Quite the reverse—the boys now believe that pink's their invention—a good masculine color they'll share, if the Little Woman behaves. There's reason to believe that the current commotion started with the Brooks Brothers' pink shirts that Beau Brummells began to snap up a few years back. Then the belles took a new look at pink. After that—the deluge!

Everybody's pink-happy—and very happy not only in pink, but surrounded by this universally becoming color, now available in fabrics, wallpapers, and floorcoverings in sophisticated off-shades knowingly combined with the greens, grays, reds, and blacks that give a sharp edge to pink without diminishing its glow.

Only yesterday, all-pink kitchens, very smart, were made to order exclusively and v-e-r-y costly. No more, for colored cabinets and appliances are now included in regular lines. Those shown here are General Electric's Petal Pink—ranges, refrigerators, and dishwashers, as well as cabinets and counters all match, and they can be matched exactly in paints for your walls or furniture. For practical reasons, the Armstrong Corlon vinyl flooring we used is deeper in tone, but still part of the trend that puts you in a rose-colored world—without rose-colored glasses.

FOR MORE ABOUT PINK, TURN THE PAGE

To unscramble this Pink Puzzle, see "Where Credit Is Due," Page 144

THEY STAY IN THE PINK: The Deltax "Delvogue" fiber rug, a confection of deep and pale tones, is reversible—and can be washed with soapless detergents. Troy Sunshade's chairs, plastic covered, are easy to maintain as the matching glass-topped table. Hathaway's froth of nylon marquisette curtain, dotted with cotton, fluffs even more after laundering. Pretty as Grandma's prized fan is a pleated window blind by Elkeles—made of Dupont's Tontine, it withstands lots of soap and water. Party-pretty, too, are ceramic double casseroles by M. Wille. Pink Foam glass by West Virginia Glass. Pink Provincial tumbler by Lotus.

SPLASHES OF PINK include essentials from tissues to toothpaste. On this page, pink swirls its way through glass powder jar and lotion bottle, goes solid in the fat powder puff, glass tissue holder, rubber pillow (equipped with suction cups to hold it to tub as a headrest) and molded nylon tumbler (all from Hammacher Schlemmer). On the next page, more pink delights: the mesh basket with wire gallery and scroll-back metal vanity stool (Unique Gifts); lion-headed metal towel ring (Helen Gallagher); pink-rimmed Detecto scale. Smart tricks: the wastebasket that wears a removable terrycloth jacket, and the tray for bath cosmetics that fits over a tub rim (both from Hammacher Schlemmer; cosmetics, Helena Rubinstein).

GRACE NOTES IN PINK: A nosegay in the bathroom? Why not, when scaled-to-the-spot arrangements such as this miniscule one by Mrs. Roy Darby can turn a shelf, a sill, or even a "johnny" top into something lovely to look at? A pink bed in your garden can provide such "makings" for pink bouquets as pink zinnias, pink "glads," pink cockscomb, fringed garden pinks—and roses, of course.

PLENTY OF PINK as a background for bathrooms. On the walls, Wall-Tex "Noel," a star-studded wall covering in a coated fabric that's washable and design-matched to plastic shower curtain by Hygiene. Rubber-backed cotton carpeting by Cabin Crafts, Inc. is called "Luxury," but has its very practical aspect—sections small enough to go into your washer are taped together to reach from wall to wall. A bathroom floor that will stand punishment is Armstrong's Excelon tile in "Sioux Pink"—it is a vinyl plastic-asbestos composition that resists even spilled oils and creams. Brass towel rack (Hammacher Schlemmer) holds Fieldcrest's "Deauville," a stunning striped bath towel; and Cannon's "Grand Manor," a towel your store can grace with your own monogram in this same grand manner. Velvet to the touch is "Royal Velvet," Fieldcrest's solid pink towel next to the rack.

Pink!

"Tell me a pink story," the Little Colonel coaxed, wanting every object mentioned—clothes, and foods, and decorations, too—to be described as tinged with pink. There are settings aplenty for pink stories nowadays, though the worldly color we are using may not be the one Annie Fellows Johnston's small heroine meant. Pink is exclusively "little-girl" no longer. The pinks, like other members of the red family, are vibrant, and their pastel personality turns dramatic when intensified or combined with brilliant red or orange.

Pink on floors, even in a Kentucky mansion in the Little Colonel's day, would have been impractical. But thanks to improved yarns, finishes, and cleaning methods, we can have pink practicality underfoot. Magee's all-cotton "Bloomtuft" carpeting shown below is solid pink, its finely twisted, closely packed tufts taking on a density of tone. The outer swatch at your left, Magee's "Radar" acquires its texture and tone through the twisting of deep rose and white rayon yarns. Next, Gulistan's Petal Pink "Chanteclair" rayon carpet, protected by a soil-resistant finish. The third swatch is Cabin Crafts' "Overtone," combining pink, white, and red carpet rayon to lend elegance to any pink room.

Pink can also be muted, as it is in the classically simple sofa below, a Valentine Seaver design by Kroehler. The Levolor aluminum blind is also subtly toned down, for it is composed of slats of clear pink alternating with slats overprinted with a linen-like motif (shown close up in the hand). Paul Hanson's lamp, all blush pink, sheds light on Schumacher's "Midnight Roses," a chintz whose pink ground is strewn with a floribunda of reds to fire your pink setting.

● Pink, now news in the living room, has flourished on dinnerware these past 200 years—but pink at your table is no longer confined to flower-decked china and pink candles. To show how well new pinks companion the old, Table Merchandise Editor Gertrude Brassard assembled the ingredients above, using Haviland's old-favorite "Rosalinde" china as a starting point, and surrounding it with new napery and accessories chosen to point up its delicate colorings. Brass is a timely note, though silver reflects pink as prettily.

A casual look at the pictures on these pages—and you couldn't tell which was the front and which was the back of this house. And isn't that good! Ninety-nine times out of a hundred, when you find a house that has a pleasantly designed façade on the street side, all heck breaks loose when you see the back: shed dormers sprout out of the roof, jugs and jogs stick out every which way. Nobody seems to care very much about the backsides of houses!

This design didn't just happen: it was the masterful planning of Architect Bertram Weber for the Martin J. Rauscher family who owned a large piece of land practically out in the country. The house sits back from the road, but near enough for convenience—and the elimination of over-long driveways. Their view is to the rear—a sloping lawn, a pretty brook, a pond, and a grove in the distance.

The house was designed to take every advantage of the site, and still put up a good front—and back. Particularly good is the way the entrance to the two-car garage is placed at the side. Seen from front or rear, the garage seems an integral part of the structure—you don't see the garage doors, and when they're open, passers-by can't look in at whatever you may have stored there.

All main rooms open off the central foyer—again, good planning. You enter the front door (bottom picture) and there's a coat closet handy. To the right is the den-TV room with its fireplace and adjacent lavatory. Straight ahead, but protected from the view of a caller, is the big 15'3" x 30'3" living room with its own fireplace and big wall of glass.

Note the easy access to and from the house—the protected front door; the service entry to the utility room (in bad weather, step from the garage right into the house); the doors leading from living and breakfast rooms to the terrace.

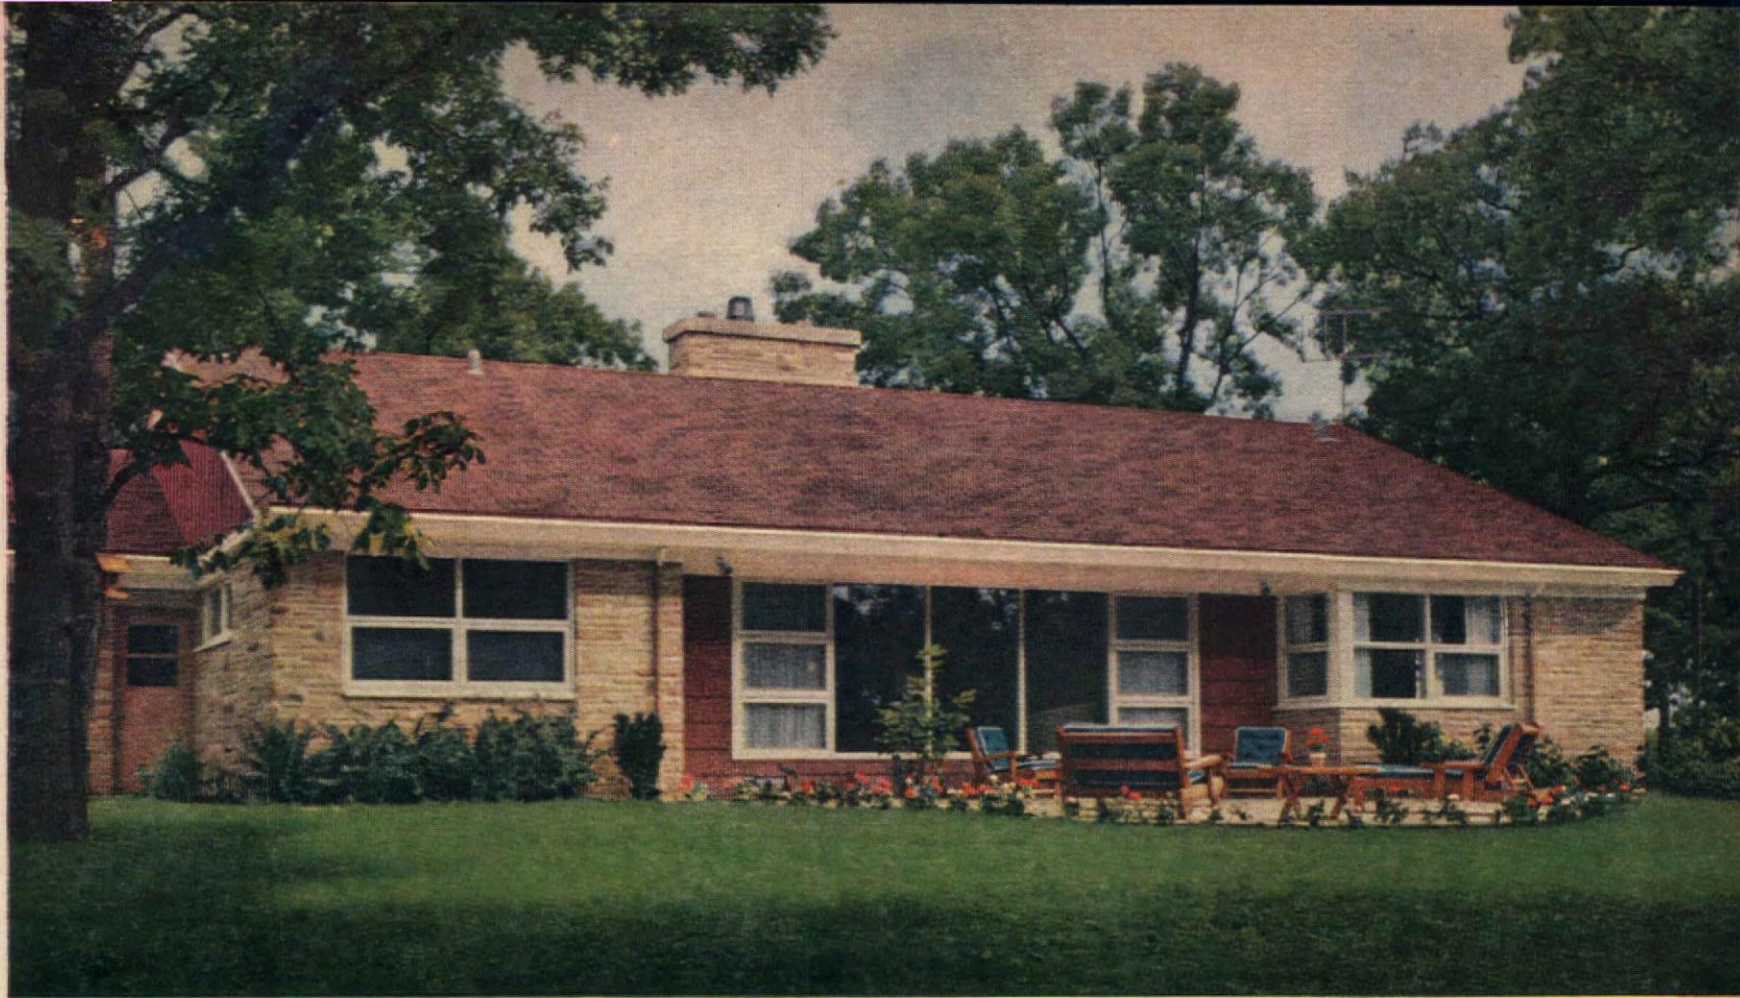

The house measures 38'5" x 80'2" over-all; there are 1930 square feet of enclosed living space, not counting the garage (there's no basement, but one could easily be added). The house is faced with crab orchard stone. Heating is by forced warm air heating plant located near the utility room. Take (or make) an inexpensive screen, and transform it into a well-screened menagerie for your own cubs' den. Pictures that turned the trick here began life as Jello ads—but any set of pictures of uniform size would do. First, cover panels with a gay colored felt—or paint them. Then, with rubber cement, mount the pictures on a heavy, three-ply matboard and adhere them to the screen. A coat of acrylic spray will preserve the pictures.

First we dished up a coat of base paint, then we traced the patterns atop and filled in the designs with oil paints. As Edie Ramsay, our Equipment Editor, said when she saw them installing my beloved stove (they were stoves then, not ranges): "Now I've seen everything!" Over the years she has reconciled herself to my stubborn refusal to replace it with a slick modern number by calling it an amusing conversation piece. So be it. I admit it has a rather "Early Chippendale" appearance in a modern kitchen, but what have any of the new ones got that my 30-year-old Magic Chef hasn't got when it comes right down to performance. I don't have to fall flat on my stomach to use the broiler. I have one enormous oven, big enough to take a roast or turkey and the vegetables or

She sat. She glared. She positively hated me! Her husband, having asked, per title, "Why don't WE ever have that?" calmly helped himself to seconds, utterly unaware of the situation he had created. When she could speak, she choked out that he wouldn't eat the offendish dish at home, then resumed cordially despising me for the rest of the evening. This scene took place in our home long ago, and it has been repeated many a time since. I'm reminded of it poignantly, too, every time MY husband turns tables and asks the same question of me. Why is it that we'll eat—yea enjoy—when we're dining out, a dish we scorn at home? We all do it, and I can think of only one explanation: perhaps we gals just don't try hard enough, or often enough, or cleverly enough, to put across that frowned-upon food. Herewith are four new-old ones that have caused our guests to "Why don't we...?"

Raised Donuts are #1 on this list, not because homemade doughnuts are ever frowned upon, but because they are too seldom made. They're supposed to be tricky. But ours are a cinch with the new deep-fat fryers—and such a sure-fire hit they'd be worth making anyhow! Serve with cubes of tangy cheese, country style—and don't forget to fry the doughnut holes! My children like them best of all.

Super Swiss Steak, the melt-in-your mouth kind—is #2 on my list of "husband-likes, wife-hates-me" recipes. Try our version—it's simple and wonderfully good. No reason why anything so excellent should suffer under a cloud of "cheap-cuts-made-tender." Rice pudding, that poor, maligned dessert! Here's one made with the new quick rice and dressed up with the unused egg whites as a meringue—plus a few spoonful of currant jelly. Last, but not least—a swell way to do carrots with pineapple for a good sweet-sour effect.

Write and tell me your own theories, your answers to this "Why Don't WE?" story. Perhaps, between us, we can rewrite it someday as a "Why don't THEY ever have this?" story.

Anne's Notebook

"The Circus Coming into Town," woodcut, 1873

ANNE BARNARD

Have the Ides of March or this weather got you down? Then think of happier matters—the circus, for instance. THIS GAY AND GALA CIRCUS CAKE should stimulate myriad ideas for a festive circus party. Easy to fix it is, as you will agree when you do it yourself. To your favorite chocolate or devil's food cake mix, add  $1\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoons cinnamon,  $\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoon allspice, and  $\frac{1}{4}$  teaspoon ground cloves. Prepare according to package directions.

NOW FOR THE FROSTING—decorating this cake is a circus in itself. Prepare a seven-minute frosting, substituting firmly packed brown sugar for the granulated sugar usually used. For decorating, save a small amount of frosting as is...in separate bowl. To the rest, add cocoa according to color preference. Spread between layers and over top and sides of cake. Arrange candy wafers (different colors) around top edge of cake "tent" and place animal crackers as illustrated. Use the lighter frosting for the tent poles between animals on sides of cake. Cut paper pennants, fasten to toothpicks, and place around top of cake along with the "marching" animals. If you wish, match pennants with wafers in color.

SHRIMP STAB is a kabob with a different twist, and the green pepper it sports makes it a pretty sight for a St. Pat's day supper. Take breaded shrimp and place on skewers, alternating with mushroom caps and  $1\frac{1}{2}$ -inch slices of onion and green pepper. Brush with melted butter, and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Place four inches below broiler heat. Broil until pepper, onion, and mushrooms are done, and the shrimp is crusty brown. Turn occasionally. I usually use the frozen breaded shrimp which speeds up this production.

ABOUT ST. PATRICK. Somehow or other I have always thought he was Irish as the Blarney Stone. Surprised I was to discover that the patron saint of the Emerald Isle was not born there. Great controversy still exists as to his actual birthplace. England, Scotland, Wales, and France all claim him. Perhaps this explains the general enthusiasm about his Day.

SUCCULENT ROAST CHICKEN served with HOT BRANDIED PEACHES brought a flood of compliments to the hostess at a dinner party recently. You can use the peaches that come in jars, or fix 'em yourself. This is a combination I had never happened to try previously.

SLIVERED TOASTED ALMONDS sprinkled over the top of cheese-stuffed baked potatoes before browning and serving...will tease the most reluctant of appetites.

FRANKLY BEANS

Beans in a soup? Beans in a salad? Beans as a snack? Just try 'em! A few generations back, when beans in a can first appeared complete with their spicy, slow-cooked sauce, they were time-saving miracles — so Grandma, unaccustomed to such boons, thanked her lucky stars, and used beans straight from the can. Good they were — and are — just that way! But beans in tomato sauce, with pork or without, can be the foundation of many a satisfying, rib-sticking dish, served any time of the day.

Most good old jokes remain funny through the years, but biscuit mix put one oldie out of business — the one about the bride who just couldn't make biscuits like those his "Mother used to bake." This marvelous mix cuts both the time and the gamble, but no smart cook, tried or tyro, confines it to hot breads alone. GOOD TIPS FOR

EGGS

Keep all your eggs in one impunity in the sturdy

smart idea to date each batch of eggs so that you'll use up the older eggs first

the new ones because they're on top

What cook hasn't spoiled an

wasteful, disappointing

occurrence can be avoided if you open the eggs into a

them to the rest of the mixture (this will keep shells out of the mixture as well)

in half. You needn't be King Solomon—just beat the egg long and pour it into a measuring

cup. Then use half, by measure.
This trick is a handy one when you want to make just half of a recipe that calls for an odd number of eggs—using more or less egg than the recipe
requires can throw proportions out of balance

Pot luck at your house will be delicious if your favorite stew simmers in a cooker like this. Its accurate temperature control gives just the proper heat for beef, lamb, or veal in good, heavy gravy, or piquant sauce with vegetables

A canny cooker does wonders by slow-cooking soups of your own concocting—and when you have quick tricks in mind, use it to heat imaginative combinations of canned soups, served right at table in the cooker—a smart tureen it makes!

small APPLIANCES

Be sure to read your instruction book thoroughly to find out whether you're using that appliance for all it's worth. Scalloped potatoes with ham (above) is an example of a meal-in-one casserole dish, with the electrical cooker making like an oven

Very much better for temperature control are deep-fat fried or braised food as the veal scallopini shown here. Since the food doesn't become grease-soaked, it is easily digested and the caloric count stays down. To clean your cooker, be sure to follow directions given in your instruction book

You can bake in cookers such as the one below—not only casseroles, biscuits, muffins, and custards, but also pies. Even baked potatoes can be turned out to perfection. A brief warning: these cookers all operate on only AC currents

A waffle grill with big ideas is this model which serves and keeps warm corn-on-the-cob along with a piping hot casserole of franks and beans

Meet this handy table appliance that grills, fries, toasts, keeps food warm... then flips its grids to bake waffles. It's really five appliances in one, and so convenient for meals or snacks

There's even a before-dinner use for this versatile domestic—set it up in the living room and whip up a batch of appealing hot hors d'oeuvres. We took some silver-dollar-sized griddle cakes, spread them with a crab-meat mixture, then rolled and pinned them and served hot from the grill. Other griddle cakes were wrapped around bite-sized, cooked sausages

Those of you who have thought of waffles as just a breakfast dish have a treat in store when you discover chocolate waffles with ice cream!

Cooking Can Be Play

FAY LANGE

Cooking is fun for the pigtail set. It is important play for my daughter, Carol, when she makes her famous chocolate stacks, company butterscotch pie, or other dishes for the family. She delights in serving them and beams, "I made it all by myself." To make chocolate stacks, Carol first gives her hands a quick wash and a half drying, puts on her own pint-sized apron, tears open a package of semi-sweet chocolate bits and pours them into the top of the double boiler. While the chocolate is melting over hot water, Carol covers two plates with waxed paper. After an occasional stirring, the chocolate is melted or is "soupy" as Carol puts it. She measures three cups corn flakes with a two cup and a one cup measure. Into the chocolate go the contents of the larger measure of corn flakes, and after they have been thoroughly stirred, the other cupful is added. When all are well-coated with chocolate, she molds the mixture into stacks, using a teaspoon and a chubby finger. Then the stacks are chilled in the refrigerator for half an hour, or until the chocolate is firm. (The recipe makes 18 cookies, about 1½ inches in diameter.)

On days when Judy or Sally come to visit, there is contented play as animal crackers are matched up and sandwiched together with peanut butter. More often, graham crackers are gaudily frosted with "sweet paste" as the children call it. To make this simple delight, the children get a large bowl into which they place one cup confectioners' sugar, one tablespoon of water, and flavoring. After each young chef has had her turn at stirring, all the lumps are sure to be gone. The icing is divided into three teacups, and each girl colors her icing with vegetable color to please herself. The crackers are spread with the gay "goo" and they usually get an added fillip with cake decoettes, raisins, or coconut. After sampling, the best are saved for snack time.

Carol may never become a prize cook, but she is beginning to appreciate, and develop a taste for good food. Her play is purposeful. She has a feeling that she is contributing and doing things in a grown-up way.

When you want a jar from the rear of the refrigerator, you don't have to reach like this. Instead . . .

You simply turn the shelf, and that hidden jar rides to the front. You pick it up without overturning any foods.

To put in a large turkey, you don't have to remove all the foods and rearrange the shelves. Instead . . .

You press the button, revolve the shelf and presto! The turkey fits. Shelves can be raised or lowered.

New G-E Revolving Shelves put all foods at your fingertips!

Now available in most G-E Refrigerators! Of all refrigerators available on the market today, none can match the luxury and convenience of a G-E Refrigerator with Revolving Shelves. Here is why:

In the new G-E, there are no hard-to-reach corners. A simple turn of your wrist, and the back area of the Revolving Shelves is right out in front. Furthermore, there's more shelf room than ever before! The inside refrigerator walls are rounded to accommodate extra-large shelves!

See your local G-E dealer for prices and easy terms. Look for his name in the classified telephone directory. General Electric Co., Appliance Park, Louisville 1, Ky.

Mayonnaise
Parmesan cheese

• Select tender zucchini about 4 inches long. Do not peel. Boil in salted water until partially cooked (about 6 min.). Let cool. Cut in half lengthwise. Hollow out center a bit and place in a flat dish with hollow center up. Pour over a generous amount of French dressing. Lay sliced onions and garlic over the zucchini halves and let them stand, well covered, for a day in the refrigerator. At the same time, pour the can of tomato sauce into an ice tray and freeze. When ready to serve, take off the onion and garlic. Place zucchini on crisp lettuce leaves. Fill the hollows with frozen tomato sauce. Top with mayonnaise and sprinkle with generous amounts of Parmesan cheese. Serve immediately.

CRAB MEAT ROLLED IN TINY PANCAKES and served with a choice of sauces . . . curry-flavored and mustard-flavored . . . is an appetizer of distinction. Follow the directions on a box of pancake mix, using one tablespoon of batter for each pancake. Cook until golden brown, turning only once. Spread with flaked canned crab meat. Roll up and fasten with toothpicks. Dip one end in the curry sauce and the other in mustard sauce. A pleasing surprise are these hot canapés with tantalizing flavor . . . no matter which type of sauce you prefer.

HOT ROLLS always have appeal. DRESSING THEM UP, makes them even better. Using Brown 'N Serve Rolls, it is simple to be impressive. Just before you put them in the moderate-hot oven (400°F.), brush tops of rolls with butter or margarine and sprinkle sparingly with minced chives or your favorite herb. We like thyme or basil. Brown rolls according to package directions.

SPEAKING OF HERBS, THE SNAP-OFF SIFTER TOPS on jars are right convenient. You can garnish more evenly and delicately without fear of sprinkling too large an amount. The top may be removed . . . a spoon inserted in the jar . . . when a definite amount is needed as an ingredient.

HEARTY AND TASTEFUL are these easy SOUP COMBINATIONS! Combine cream of pea soup with cream of tomato and serve sprinkled with crispy croutons. CLAM CHOWDER teamed with VEGETABLE SOUP pleases the palate at dinner when March winds are blowing outside.

A natural partner for your FAVORITE CURRY DISH in this fruity dainty—CURRENT RICE. Prepare a 5-oz. package of pre-cooked rice according to given directions, adding ¼ cup currants to the boiling water with the rice. Add two tablespoons butter or margarine just before serving—mixing all lightly with a fork. We like this best with curried chicken and don't forget the chutney if you like it as well as I do with curried dishes.

COCONUT PASTRY CRUST made this way is a fine change for a favorite pie filling. Combine ½ cup shredded coconut (cut fine) with 2 tablespoons brown sugar. Press mixture on bottom and sides of 8-inch pie shell in pan. Bake in hot oven (425°F.) 12-15 minutes or until lightly brown. Cool before filling.

A handy solution for DISPOSAL OF HOT GREASE are these plastic-coated paper cups and lids. The hot grease can be poured directly into the cups, and the lid can be snapped on to prevent spilling. The cups have handles and the lids fit securely. Both cup and grease can be thrown in incinerator. These cups have many other uses, too, you will find.

TIOGA TUNA BAKE

...singing with California Flavor

TIOGA TUNA BAKE

Serve heaping helpings—and watch how fast they disappear! The reason is the sunny, specially satisfying flavor that only California's own ripe olives can add. Taste it here—flavor you can easily give to many fish, cheese, and egg dishes.

- |                            |  |
|----------------------------|--|
| 1 cup ripe olives          | ½ tsp. Worcestershire sauce              |
| 2 hard-cooked eggs         | 1 (10½-ounce) can cream of mushroom soup |
| 1 (6½ or 7-ounce) can tuna | ¼ cup diced pimiento                     |
| 1 tsp. grated onion        | Buttered dry bread crumbs                |
| 1 tsp. prepared mustard    |  |
| ¼ cup milk                 |  |

Cut olives into large pieces. Dice eggs. Drain tuna and flake coarsely. Stir onion, mustard, milk and Worcestershire into soup. Blend in pimiento, olives, eggs and tuna. Spoon into baking shells or shallow baking dish and top with crumbs. Bake in moderate oven (350°F.) 20 to 25 minutes, until thoroughly heated and browned on top. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Free Ripe Olive Recipe Booklet is yours for the writing.

For eating by hand, remember ripe olives are an easy appetizer before dinner . . . a tasty "relish" at table. And when friends drop in, offer an inviting bowl of California flavor . . . a "welcome bowl" of ripe olives.

*We've shown you family kitchens galore, designed for the cook-mother-wife. But how about the woman whose children have grown up and married?
She wants—and deserves—an* up-to-the-minute kitchen too! Here is a splendid example

Have kitchens really changed very much in the past 15 years? For a dramatic demonstration of the fact that they have, see these “befores” and “afters.” It’s not only the equipment itself, but our point of view about kitchens that has changed: A kitchen must measure up, aesthetically, to the standards of beauty set for the rest of the house, or it just isn’t modern, no matter how new the equipment.

This isn’t the story of bright but broke newlyweds who set out to feather their nest in a cottage. In this case, the leading characters are the Carl Judsens of Wilmette, Illinois, who, some 15 years ago, built an authentic New England Colonial for themselves and their two young sons. At that time, the kitchen you see in the “before” pictures here was a “very good one—for those days. It was headquarters for the cook, not for the mistress of the house. The equipment was of the best then on the market, and such modern notions as two exhaust fans and dropped soffits were included. What’s more, the Judsens kept it in good repair—replacing the floor and refrigerator, adding cabinets and shelves now and then.

But after her sons were grown, married, and established in homes of their own, the day came when Mrs. Judsen took a close look at her functioning, but far from dreamy kitchen, and decided that yester-decade’s kitchen was as old hat as yesteryear’s bonnet. Though it was still the domain of a cook, it deserved re-decorating and modernizing as much as any other room in her home.

OWNERS: MR. AND MRS. CARL JUDSEN

So she called in Architect Karl Knobel, and planned the transformation you see—a transformation effected without moving a single door, wall, or window, though some of the equipment was shifted because the old refrigerator wall made such an ideal place for modern, built-in cooking units. Because the kitchen isn't large, and no family meals are served here, there's no permanent set-up for eating, but the cupboard next to the refrigerator provides a pull-out shelf where a solo dinner can be enjoyed. And we mean enjoyed, for a kitchen as attractive as this must inspire some mighty fine cooking!

To make the preparation of those meals easier, there are yards and yards of good, con-

To save space, eating table, no longer needed, was replaced by pull-out snack shelf in cabinet

Both convenience and "pretty kitchen" look were desired. Moving refrigerator to free space for a modern cooking wall added some of each tinuous counter space (including an immense hard-maple chopping block). There's a pull-up-and-out mixer in one base cabinet, and cupboards aplenty to keep utensils and ingredients near their point of use. Cooking at that cooking wall is a joy (the oven is just the right height, and there's a hood and exhaust fan over the surface burners), and cleaning up at that sink is aided, of course, by a dishwasher.

From the rubber tile floor to the indirect lighting, everything is as handsome as it is modern. The warm tones of the solid maple cupboards are set off by the gayest of washable wallpapers which borrows its motif from Scandinavian folk art. Because both Judsens are of Scandinavian extraction, those lands so noted for good design are recalled by the wrought copper lighting fixtures, some old Danish copper utensils, and various other glowing touches.

WAX PERFECT

Want to save yourself from scrubbing your floors dozens and dozens of times a year? Then heed these suggestions—they spare your back and your nylons, and preserve your resilient flooring as well.

Wax forms a protective coating which prevents dust from sticking to the floors. But to do its best job the wax must be thin and tough. Since the hardening depends upon contact with air, the wax coat can't be too thick. If it is, only the outer surface hardens, the soft center attracts and holds dirt, and you really have to scrub to get it clean!

Next time a good kitchen floor cleaning is due, start by using one of the new liquids which remove wax and clean at the same time. No getting down on your knees—you apply it with a sponge mop, let it stand a minute, then rinse with water. When the floor is completely dry, go to work with the wax of your choice.

Water-soluble liquid wax should be applied in three thin coats. To assure that hard, tough coating, allow each coat to dry thoroughly before applying the next one. These self-polishing liquid waxes dry to an attractive soft luster. If you want your floors to have a super-glossy look buff them with a regular floor polisher, or the soft fleecy attachment of an electric polisher.

If you use this procedure, you will be happy to discover spilled things and tracked-in dirt can be wiped up easily with a damp cloth. Then with a daily sweeping or dry mopping, re-waxing will only be necessary every now and again.

More news: doors are hardboard or textured glass—or your own drawing, fabric, or stamp collection may be laminated into plastic cabinet doors

ROBERT W. HOUSEMAN

There are several news-making aspects to the story of Pic-A-Door cabinets by Tracy Kitchens for, not satisfied with an excellent job in the kitchen, they join up with wrought-iron legs or the like to solve almost any storage problem in the house. They come in all standard base and wall cabinet sizes, are made for do-it-yourself installation, and you can paint them any color you like. There's big decorative news in their sliding doors: stock doors come in textured glass, or in unpainted perforated hardboard (because doors are reversible, you can paint each side a different color, and change them about as you please).

But that's only part of it. Would you like your drapery fabric in indestructible form on your cabinet doors? Your stamp collection? Your pet recipes? The manufacturer can take any lightweight material you send—feathers, dried foliage, drawings, fabric, and such—and laminate it between sheets of plastic from which these custom doors are made.

Hide a Shudder with Shutters

BARBARA LENOX

Literally thousands of kitchens have little "two by something" alcoves which, regardless of their original intentions, serve no good purpose. However, such tiny affairs as this one near the back door of the Paul Heinley home in Los Angeles, can often be made big in purpose—and beautiful to look at—as these before and after pictures reveal. By boxing in the awkward space with a framework of shelves, then fronting it with folding shutters (all of them ready-made stock units priced down to earth), a custom look was produced in turning a wasted area into a useful one.

Use the shelf and shutter trick to gain storage space anywhere in the house—it can put the space under a staircase to work, or turn any unused corner into a fine corner cupboard.

The Heinleys didn't restrict shutters to storage cover-up. Because the narrow panels need so little swing-out space, shutters were used to "curtain" the glass panes of the back door, giving it a more modern look. As doors for cupboards or closets, shutters provide ventilation (a warm-climate trick people in other regions have learned). As room doors, they afford ventilation plus privacy. They decorate, too, thanks to their interesting pattern—of which decorators and designers are making much nowadays.

Rescue That Old Hooked RUG

Old hooked rugs take beautifully to mending if they're lined with burlap and mended with care. And while you're at it, why not enlarge the rug, as we did, instead of following the usual procedure of cutting it down? Since new hooking in the old block design would have been too apparent, we enlarged the rug by a new border of narrow Roman stripes. (See finished job, page 100.) Of course, we cleaned the rug before starting.

1. Blanket-stitch raw edges of burlap backing. Then, simultaneously hook two borders to add to either side of the rug

2. When you have completed both borders, cut them apart—being sure to allow at least three inches for ample hems on both the outside and inside edges of each border

3. Blanket-stitch raw edges. Hem one side of each strip so that it extends one inch beyond edge of hooking. Sew other side of burlap to join rug to edge of new hooking, using heavy carpet thread. Sew worn edges of original rug to burlap securely—you'll mend later

4. After edges of old rug are firmly sewn to burlap, a few inches of burlap will still be loose. Sew to body of rug, using overcast stitches and carpet thread. Cover the one-inch outside hem with bias strips of heavy wool fabric—it takes to hard wear, is easy to replace

Rescue That Old Hooked Rug

(Begins on page 98)

5. To give rug added strength and to serve as a background for mending worn spots, baste another piece of burlap to entire back of rug, as shown. Use heavy carpet thread for this. If necessary, piece the lining by lapping one piece over another, and blanket-stitch all raw edges. Do not turn or fold edges—keep them as flat as possible. Start sewing from one side, and work from one end to the other

6. To secure edges of worn spots, overcast to burlap lining. Hook in strips of wool fabric to duplicate original

7. Here is how the mended hooked sections look from the back of the rug. The strips have been hooked into the rug from the front, and right through the new burlap lining

8. In place of a worn old rug, ready to be discarded, we have a fine "new" one, handsome as ever, and more useful too, thanks to the 12-inch hooked borders that enlarge it. Of course, the rug could also have been lined with burlap and mended as directed without the addition of the border

How to Build a Brick Doorstoop

There's no better setting for that Welcome mat than a soundly built brick stoop graced by an attractive rail—and once it's built, it stays looking well. It needn't be solid brick either, for the center cavity may be filled with rubble. The 2 x 4 x 8 size common brick is recommended, and you can use ready-mix mortar or make your own (1 part Portland cement, 1 part hydrated lime, 6 parts fine sand, mixed before adding water). First, draw a plan of the stoop to scale, brick by brick. Low risers (6-8 in.) and broad treads (9-13 in.) are preferable, and steps should be at least 3 ft. wide. For a concrete footing, dig a U-shaped trench outlining the base of the stoop. Trench should be 1 ft. wide, and extend below frost line. Fill trench with several inches of gravel or cinders, then pour concrete (1 part cement, 2 3/4 parts sand, 4 parts gravel). Trowel top of footing level.

After footing (A) hardens, spread 1-in.-thick bed of mortar on top. Sprinkle bricks with hose five minutes before using. Push first course in place, checking with level and straight edge. Tap out-of-line bricks in place with trowel handle. To keep joints between bricks full, butter sufficient mortar on end or side of brick to be laid. Do not attempt to lay the bricks and then slush the mortar into the cracks between them, as such joints are not sturdy

Continue laying courses with bricks at right angles to those below, or lay with overlapping joints. Cut off excess mortar on outside face, flush with course. Watch to see that work is true to plan; use level to check vertical and horizontal accuracy

PLANNING A GARDEN?

Don't plant near your sewer unless it's CAST IRON

Seepage from sewer joints can ruin a garden. What's more, thirsty roots from deep-rooted trees or shrubs seek these openings—and can ruin your sewer line.

So be careful not to put the garden over, or even near, your house sewer—unless it's lifetime Cast Iron Soil Pipe. Here's why...

ROOTS CAN'T ENTER CAST IRON SOIL PIPE...

...and it's the only material accepted by every code in the country. That's because Cast Iron is the strongest soil pipe available. It can't warp, soften or get pushed out of shape. And joints in Cast Iron Soil Pipe can't be duplicated. They're packed tight with oakum... then sealed off for life with molten lead. They're the tightest, yet most flexible it's possible to make. No wonder even heavy driveway traffic or soil settling won't cause seepage or root penetration!

CAST IRON BELONGS INSIDE YOUR HOUSE, TOO...

...where waste and vent lines lie hidden in the walls. Repairs to these lines are house-wrecking jobs. That's why you need the lifetime reliability of Cast Iron in these critical spots.

Want to read about how your plumbing system works...how Cast Iron soil, house and drain lines, and vent stacks are permanent health-guards? Send for your free copy of "What You Should Know About Plumbing Drainage."

Brick Doorstep

Build up side walls first. Where half-bricks are needed to fill out a course, you can cut them to size by setting brick on flat surface, placing a wide cold chisel on your cutting line, and giving the chisel one hard blow with a hammer—or by cutting a light groove on one or more sides before the final severing blow.

Note rubble in cavity

Closure brick (last brick installed) should not be on end of course. Spread mortar on sides of bricks already in place. Set in closure brick without disturbing its neighbors. Tool joints before mortar sets—vertical joints first. Scrape out and compress mortar. (A pipe slightly larger than joint may be substituted for a professional finishing tool.)

When steps are finished, fill cavity with old bricks or rubble, and cover with kind of concrete mix used for footing. Bring concrete level with top of last course. After concrete sets, apply a level mortar bed. Place bricks on mortar flush with top course

Slush mortar into cracks between bricks, then tool joints. Ten days later, clean bricks with solution of one part muriatic acid, ten parts water. Rinse with water immediately, and thoroughly. Then add hand railings of your choice to finish the job

Love Me Forever?

pups for sale. The American Kennel Club and your local kennel clubs will furnish you with a list of breeders in your vicinity. If you favor a pet shop, be sure to investigate the ethics and dependability of the dealer before you buy. It is far wiser to select your own pup. Going to see the litter will tell you a great deal about how the dog family has been cared for. You should be able to meet the mother and find out something about the disposition of the father and grandparents. Puppies are twigs, easily bent by the humans they live with—if you like the people who own the litter and approve of the home surroundings, the chances are that the litter has had a good start. When a litter is closely confined in a too small pen, the puppies become accustomed to filth and are often difficult or impossible to housebreak. If you are buying a registerable dog, you should be given the signed application for registration when you pay for your puppy.

The younger the puppy, the less you can tell about personality and conformation. Given clean surroundings, proper food, some human companionship, and intelligent training, the half-grown dog of from four to nine months of age is a better buy than the pup of six weeks. But beware of an older pet if the environment has been bad!

As to sex—you may have a determined preference, but every year finds more people convinced of the advantages of the female versus the male. The female is in season only three weeks, twice a year. The male is highly sexed all the year round and can be very annoying with this preoccupation. The spayed bitch is the answer for many dog-lovers, and she need not be fat and lazy if her diet is controlled.

A word about the maintenance and polishing of your "new jewel" is important. Use common sense and be confident of the source of any advice you follow. You may give your dog a bad beginning because you are ignorant of the fact that irritating habits start the moment the adorable little thing enters your home and heart. Decide before it's too late: Is the pup allowed on furniture? How about begging for food? Where to sleep? An obedience training class when he is six months to a year old will pay off in dividends of fun and understanding.

Good luck! May you find the dog that will cherish you and be cherished by you as long as your dog shall live. This is a very long time, indeed, if you make a poor choice, but far too short if you find the joy that a dog can give.

†F. M. REG. EASI-BILD PATTERN CO.

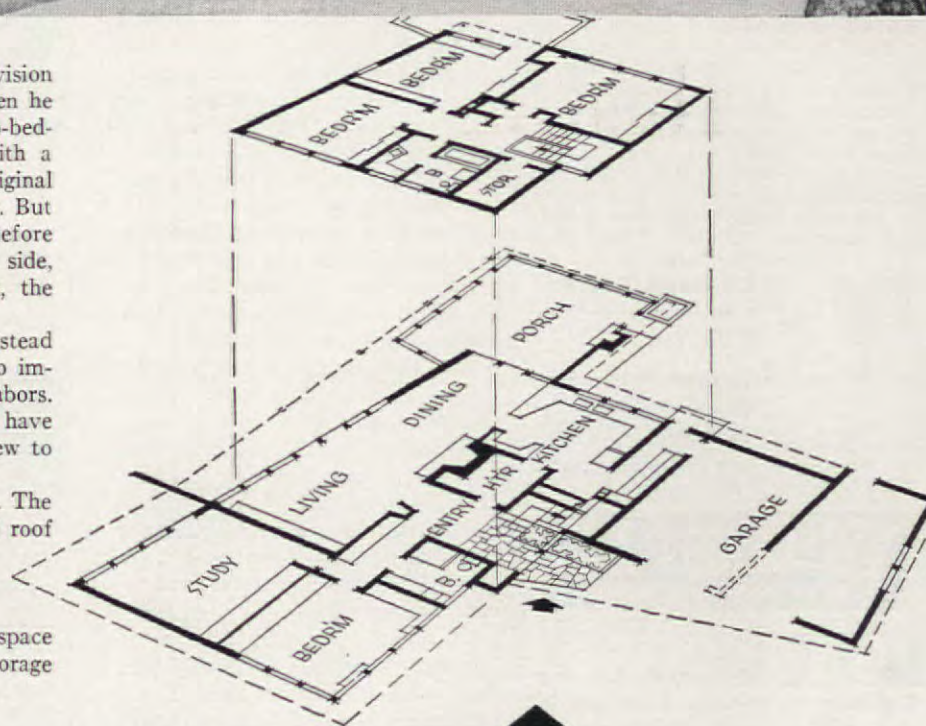

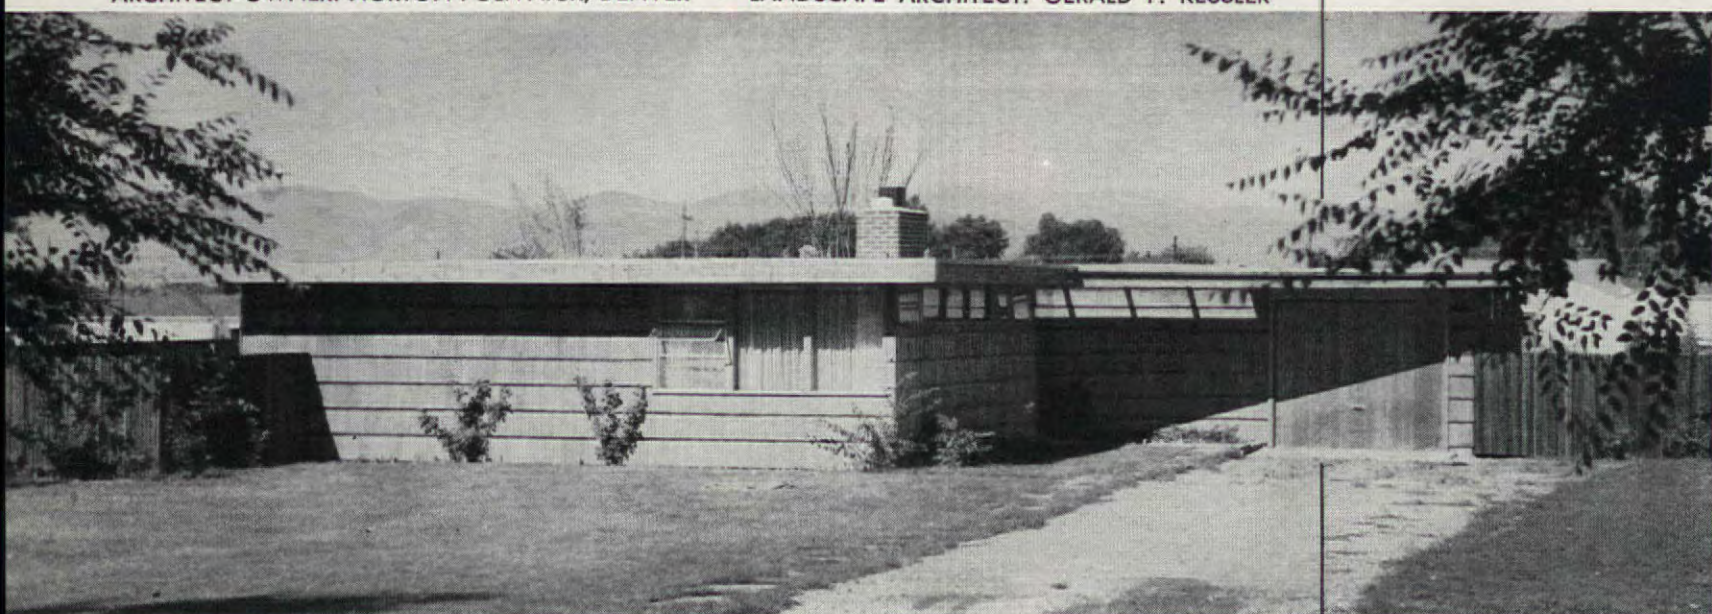

When you build a small house, it's always wise to make provision for adding to it, as did Architect Norton Polivnick when he designed for himself and small family the one-story, two-bedroom home below. He chose a deep, but not-too-wide lot with a glamorous mountain view to the rear, and in making the original plans, he kept in mind a future extension of the bedroom wing. But when man proposes, sometimes it's man who also disposes. Before time for expansion arrived, neighbors had built close on either side, dwarfing the trim little structure. So instead of growing out, the Polivnick house grew upward, as shown above.

A very good idea it proved to be. Building a second story instead of a new ground-floor wing had many advantages in addition to improving the proportions of the house in relation to its neighbors. For one thing, the new part is larger than it might otherwise have been. Then, too, a pair of bedrooms can enjoy that superb view to the back, and a bedroom sundeck was possible.

But there's more to it than that—substantial savings in costs. The original plumbing stack and chimney serve both levels, the old roof became the new subfloor, eliminating new foundations and sub-floor—and so on. The original house had cost $15 a square foot to build, but the tab for the 900 square foot addition was just $7 a square foot. A pretty dollar, all told! To make space for the staircase, the front door was moved forward, and a storage alcove between heater room and garage became the stairwell.

recipes they are! The Lemon Fromage is from Elna Nelson, one of our own cooks here. She works in the very modern, very beautiful "Green" Kitchen next door to Good Victuals, is a Danish woman by birth, and gives us the perfect recipe for this delicate dessert so popular in every Scandinavian country. That's what they call it, too, and though "fromage" means cheese to me, there's not an ounce of cheese in it—just eggs, sugar, and lemons, held together lightly with gelatin, and served with a berry sauce and a bit of whipped cream, diet permitting. I cannot praise it too highly as the perfect ending to a meal—and so very, very easy it is, too!

CALIFORNIA SUPER-COLOSSALISM?

From California, Sensation Salad—Mrs. Bairpugh's own name for it, and believe me, she is not indulging in the usual Californian "super-colossalisms." It is sensational—in taste and in appearance. But read the recipe—and see if, as I did, you won't find this the conversation piece at your next buffet.

Looking counter-clockwise, as they say in magazines—another "find" for Lenten entertaining, Venetian Sole with Potatoes Consulate. The sole's name is straight from the source of several other Good Victuals "exclusives," the California Foods Research Institute. They, shall we say, "promote" raisins—and so do I, as you must have noticed. Such good raisins we have in this country and so many good ways to use raisins—why don't we use them more? As for the Potatoes Consulate, therein hangs a tale.

A ROSE BY ANY OTHER NAME

I sometimes wonder if I'm working hard just to call a rose by any other name when I strive to name recipes I have cooked for years with no glamorous "tag" (and in my mind, only a basic name for them), or when I give them their real French or European names. I detest the sort of snobbishness that so often comes over my desk, as for instance, an offer to proclaim my worldliness and impress my friends by having my Christmas cards written in a foreign language and mailed under a foreign stamp. Thank you, No! But I am reminded of a very friendly invitation I got from a Mrs. Patrick de la Poer Horseley-Beresford. That is her name—and just as authentic are those “foreign” recipe names I often give you under my Plain-Jane “Good Victuals” title. Potatoes Consulate, though less pompous, is one of my “made-up” titles and, I think, well named. Certainly never should they be called roast potatoes—which they basically are. Do you agree? But the “tale” I promised you. Vera, whom you must all know by now is my long right arm and Keeper of Good Victuals Kitchen, went calling on a Swedish friend who is cook for a foreign consulate that shall be nameless. Her friend was busy cooking and Vera sat down and chatted while she watched. When she saw ordinary raw potatoes being cut down as one would cut a butter roll or fantans, she sat quiet as a mouse and watched. Out of the oven came the luscious-looking potatoes we show here—and isn't that a clever trick up your sleeve? Do you like my name for them—or would Foreign Intrigue be better?

Last around the clock, another unusual salad, this one from Mrs. Burdine down old Kentucky way. Mrs. Burdine makes it as one complete salad—but we doubled the recipe and did it several ways, thinking all the time what a glamor-puss it would make for a large buffet, especially during Lent when imagination is all too apt to desert us because we cannot lean on the old reliables. If you like broccoli, here's one for your book—excuse me, I mean your Menu Maker.

It would please me, and those who so graciously contributed these Good Victuals, to know how you and your family liked them. Won't you write?

SPEAKING OF LETTERS

—And I mean letters from Good Victuals fans, of course—I was amused at Mrs. Jolliffe's letter, from Andover, Mass. “Last week while thumbing through my recipe box, I came across a recipe entitled 7-Boy-Curry. I had clipped it from the magazine a few years ago and I had never used it. I followed the recipe to the letter—even making saffron rice. It was a great success—and an exceptional dish. However, since we must be greedy people, I do find that although the recipe says it serves four to five—it really only serves age eater of today. I remember seeing the guests arrive in all their finery and stand around with no cocktails or tidbits. At the table there was one cocktail with an hors d'oeuvre. Wine was served throughout the meal, and liqueurs with the demitasse.

"Today many diners are a bit sleepy after a meal preceded by an excess of alcohol and cloying hors d'oeuvres. From a safe vantage point half-way up the stairs, my brother and I were well aware of the fact merriment increased through the courses. With the last touch of brandy, they arose from the table in a delightful state of conviviality and full of zest for come what may for entertainment. Some of your readers might like to try this procedure—satisfaction guaranteed!

"As an amateur epicure I have come to the conclusion that the simpler the food the more delightful the meal. Someone asked me my idea of the ideal meal. Here it is:—

"Ice-cold lobster cocktail (big lumps) marinated in old-fashioned boiled dressing for several hours.

"Thick, medium-rare steak, cut at the table by the Lord and Master, served with broiled tomato halves, mushrooms, halves of baked stuffed potatoes (brought up to snuff with butter, cream, beaten eggs, a whiff of grated Romano cheese and paprika), Béarnaise sauce, the old-fashioned kind, made of hollandaise zipped with tarragon and parsley.

"Two or three pieces of Romaine lettuce, a few pimiento strips, two well-spiced French-fried cheese balls, soft on the inside, piping hot, about the size of a golf ball. A simple, tart French dressing. Sprinkle all with a few finely chopped bits of the sourest dill pickle you can muster.

"No dessert needed or wanted.

"Demitasse, thin mint wafers, and brandy. As a concession to this day and age, one glass of your favorite aperitif. Chablis with the lobster, claret or port with the steak.

"Salted almonds at each setting. Buttered and heated Parker House rolls with the meat. That does it!"

venture, not to be lightly undertaken, but to be filed carefully until such time as one feels extremely competent—and brave.

"There was, however, one phrase you used which I feel I must call to your attention. In the last paragraph on page 83 you say: 'If you are lucky enough to have even a dim-witted lackey in the kitchen . . . I deeply and sincerely resent the inference you make here, although I am positive that you meant no offense to anyone. Surely a person in your position realizes the true value of the many, many people who work in other people's homes—who take pride in doing a job well, and who maintain their personal dignity. Anyone who does a productive task and does it well deserves the respect of all of us.'

"Your magazine helps formulate the home life, perhaps the way of life, of thousands of families. To infer in any way that those who do menial work are not as good as those who don't—that is not part of the American way.

"I hope that you will accept this criticism in the spirit in which it is written. After all, you and I and your thousands of readers" [millions, not thousands!] are all striving for the same thing. It is in the American home that ideas and habits are formed which will lead us toward—or away from—love and brotherhood, peace and contentment for us all."

To Mrs. Schuiter in Mt. Holly, N. J. and to every Good Victuals fan, my sincere apologies. I meant no unkindness and no snobbishness was intended, as you must know.

LHMV-2—one 12-inch LP disc

Two years ago the Virtuosi di Roma, a group of quite extraordinary musicians comprising a seventeen-piece chamber orchestra—nine violins, two violas, three cellos, oboe, double-bass, and pianist—created quite a stir in American musical circles with their first tour of this country. They are Italians from Rome, and each one of them is, as their group name tells, a virtuoso.

a true master of his instrument.

Well, here we have them on records, beautifully presented in works by three Italian composers, whose place in the scheme of things has assumed, thanks to considerable inquiry and investigation, an enormous importance. The works are Corelli's Concerto Grosso in D, Op. 6, No. 4, with Guido Mozzato and Edmondo Malanotte, violinists, as soloists; Vivaldi's Concerto in F, with Renato Zanfini, oboist; and Clementi's Symphony in D, Op. 18, No. 2. Pure, soaring melody here, embraced by rendering of exquisite sensitiveness.

BERLIOZ's Te Deum, performed by the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, with Alexander Young, tenor soloist, and the London Philharmonic and Dulwich College Boys Choirs, directed by Sir Thomas Beecham

COLUMBIA ML 4897—one 12-inch LP

This Te Deum is probably the most forceful musical exaltation of the Divinity to be found in the archives. Berlioz calls for a large orchestra and many voices, in order to thunder out a reaffirmation of faith. The piece does have softer moments, naturally, and one of these, the Te ergo, is of a gossamer delicacy. But as J. H. Elliot says of the Judex Crederis, "The music is not beautiful; it is no more beautiful than an earthquake, but it is vast and thrilling—and the effect is produced legitimately, by authentic musical means."

All your reporter can say to that is "Amen" and he adds that Beecham and his forces are tremendously effective, big sound or small.

MUSIC OF THE BAROQUE ERA for Harpsichord and Clavichord, played by Erwin Bodky

UNICORN 1002—one 12-inch LP disc

Mattias Weckmann, Johann Pachelbel, George Böhm, Johann Valentin Rathgeber, Johann K. F. Fischer, Samuel Scheidt are the composers whose music fills this recording—and with a certain majesty, I might say. We are in the midst of antiquity, of course, and Mr. Bodky, a noted musical antiquarian, lucidly demonstrates, in compositions of all styles and variety, the homage that all later composers owed to these predecessors. You may find the sound of the clavichord of especial fascination, if you haven't heard it before. It is delicate sound which has too meager a dynamic range for the formal concert hall. Yet in this recording it has been recaptured in toto.

The Story OF Two Roses

After 4 days in a non-air conditioned home, this rose wilted, faded and died.

After 4 days in an Airtemp home, this rose was still radiant and beautiful.

The rose on the left was in a home that is not air conditioned. The one on the right was in an Airtemp home. And look at the difference!

Of course, we humans can "take it" better than roses. But nevertheless, adverse air conditions have a telling effect on the lives of people, too. For air is more vital to our lives than either food or water.

Yet today our "fresh air" is contaminated with dust, smoke, fumes, pollen, and germs. And even air that is not thus polluted is usually either too cold, too hot, too humid, or too dry.

All these factors have created a new need in the truly modern home—a need for air conditioning. And Airtemp Year 'Round Air Conditioning provides this "new dimension" for modern living.

For example, Airtemp always keeps the air within the Comfort Zone—from 70 to 80 degrees. In fact, everything about the air is controlled—automatically—the filtering, the temperature, the humidity, and the circulation of fresh, pure air to all parts of the house.

So see your Airtemp dealer. Ask him how Airtemp can help safeguard your family's health and enjoyment of living.

FOR THE HOME
YOU HAVE NOW

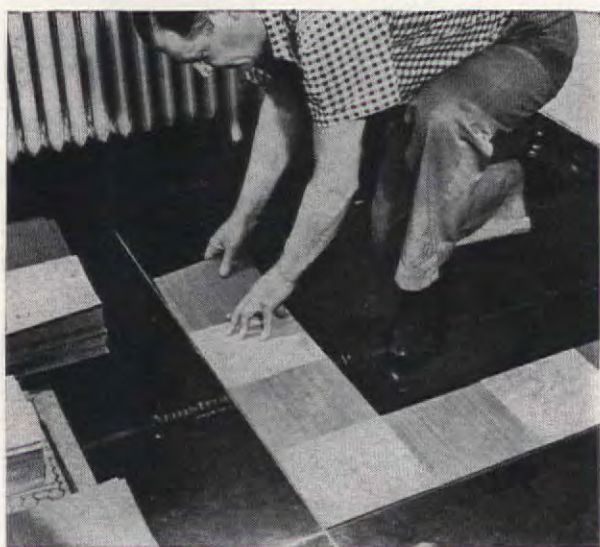

If you have a modern, forced air furnace, Airtemp cooling can be added at surprisingly low cost. Need a new furnace? An Airtemp "Spacesaver" will give you heating plus cooling in less floor space than your furnace alone now occupies!

OR THE HOME
YOU PLAN TO BUILD

Airtemp heating and cooling is available in a compact package—the "Spacesaver" unit—at a saving that will pay for the cooling if your new house is planned for air conditioning. Write: Airtemp, Dayton 1, Ohio, for book "Homes for New Dimension Living." Only 25 cents!

Occupation: Retired

never to try to out-farm the farmers, so make no attempt to keep other livestock or raise a cash crop). When we want meat, we buy part of a carcass from a farmer who has raised the meat for his own table. It is always grain-fed and prime. Fruits are bought in season at wholesale price and frozen, canned, or otherwise preserved, making the price seem ridiculously low to one who has always bought at retail.

Our house, a sturdy, three-room affair built of native timber, was bought a year before retirement with a view to the way we wanted to live, the amount we could spend, and how much work we would want to do. When the time came, we were impatient to get started. Rebuilding and revamping our 17 acres consumed all of the first year and we were so busy that we had no time to brood over whether or not we were adjusting! We even turned a one-room smokehouse into a guest cabin.

When you start thinking about retirement, you'll read a lot about environment in the pamphlets distributed by the government and large corporations to those contemplating retirement. Environment is important, but don't get the idea that you will live among "natives." In the U. S. of today, with good highways and easy communications, you have to get far back into the hinterland to find the characters pictured by radio gagmen! For instance, we live in a part of the country where you might expect to find a "native" at every turn. Our little community, Monte Ne, where there's a single gasoline pump and a post office in the general store, might easily be called a typical Ozark village. Here the residents, who may be thought poor in populous areas, own their little homes, have a garden, chickens, and usually a family cow. The children go by bus to school in town. These people attend the pretty white church in the valley and the percentage of attendance, the dignity and reverence of both the service and the congregation put many a larger, more prosperous town to shame. If one of these families moved into the house next door to you, you would not find them different.

For some people, the location for retirement is predetermined because of a desire to be near their married children or lifelong friends. However, this is not too satisfactory; old friends may move away to be near their children, and young families often find business opportunities calling them to distant cities. It is much better to plan your own life to suit your needs. Retirement locations must fit the aims and needs of each person. Some find a small business, using former skills or hobbies, ideal. Others find part-time selling jobs keep them happy and interested. For these, locations must be considered on the basis of opportunity for business or part-time work.

It is well to break away from old surroundings when retiring. In a section where people are making new retirement homes, all have the same leisure, about the same income, and it follows, the same problems. In a new location, the cut in income is less noticeable to you and to others—you join fewer clubs, entertain with cake and coffee instead of canapés and cocktails. If you live in a rural area, you will wear cotton dresses, sport shirts and slacks—and blue jeans for working.

How do you become acclimated? Well, the Home Demonstration Clubs (a part of the Extension Services) offer a gold mine of information and practical "how to do it" training as well as pleasant social activity for the woman new to country home-making. Even the men are invited to the noon dinners preceding the demonstration work. Most of us take up and develop hobbies that have interested us in former busy years, but were neglected for lack of time. Weaving, writing, painting, photography, woodworking, fly-tying, music, reading, or just plain handyman work around a country place become fascinating under serene conditions, when the clock does not rule the day.

It definitely pays to spend the few years preceding your retirement in making plans for it. The most important point is the location, and the search can provide vacations with a purpose.

We're delighted that we found the Ozarks, for this region offers ideal retirement conditions. The climate is zestful and living is wholesome, plain, and inexpensive. To be definite: a couple, if they own their own home, are debt free, and willing to do a little gardening and food preserving, will live very nicely on about $150 a month. They can maintain a very comfortable home and dress and entertain on the standard accepted by local residents.

The steps that we took to find our own home may be of interest to you. It wasn't easy, but we knew that the ideal spot existed, and were willing to settle for nothing less. We were fairly familiar with the East and West coasts, the North-Central states and the Deep South. We knew of places we'd like, but ruled them out because of high real estate prices or high living costs.

So we began by sending a letter to the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

ture in Washington, D. C. In reply, we got a list of College Extension Service Offices in the states that interested us. Along with this came some very sage and practical advice about how not to become a farmer. The College Extension Services were most obliging answering our many questions regarding climate, soils, growing seasons, real estate prices, etc. They sent factual bulletins, maps, and other information pertinent to their area. By studying this material, we narrowed the field to a few counties in certain states.

Next, we secured from the State Extension Service, the names of county agents. Now we had a man on the ground, who lived and worked there, and who knew every lane in his county. He is a man who can answer just about any question you can dream up and if he does not know the answer, can get it for you.

Most states have a Real Estate License Board and can supply the names of reputable firms in locations you would like to check for available properties. Let me put in a good word for real estate people. Most of them are sincerely interested in finding the right place for you and at the right price. They can save you miles of driving and weeks of fruitless search. They are incurable optimists though, and keep inching up to larger and more expensive places. The thing to do at this point is to hold fast to that dream and refuse to be flattered or swept out of your depth.

Our vacations for the last few years were spent in going over proposed locations. If you have a definite area, go right to it and look at everything your real estate man has to show you. The North Carolina Smokies and the Ozarks of Missouri and Arkansas came neck and neck on the home stretch with us. The Ozarks won because of lower real estate prices and general lower costs.

Two years before retirement, we had our location narrowed to a radius of seventy-five miles covering a corner of Missouri and Arkansas. All we had to do then was find our particular spot in that area. Vacation 1950 found us making our headquarters in a cabin on the Roaring River in a beautiful Missouri State Park. Appointments had been made by letter with real estate people, and we were ready to go on the last lap of our search.

One day, after two weeks of constant looking, we were driven through a quiet valley along the main street of a ghost town, up a lane to a tiny white house guarded by huge oaks. We knew instinctively that this was the end of the trail; this was the place we would name "Mountain Water Farm." We had come home!

78% of present home owners didn't get enough wiring to take care of present, let alone future, electrical needs. Thanks to a unique gate-fold action, this metal chair by Cosco has no "fold-up" look, but it's only 4½" thick when folded. The Duran seat is comfortably saddle-shaped. The table has flared legs that lock automatically. Frames, finished in Bonderized baked-on enamel, come in three colors. Set, $50

It's no puzzle—this oval table folds up too. The new star of the Samsonite folding family measures 32" x 42". Matching chairs with spring cushion seats and special curved-for-comfort back are upholstered in same metallic textured plastic as table top. Frames are black, brown, gray. Table, $17.95. ## Grand Slam Tables

What's home without folding tables and chairs? Whether you use them for big parties only, or for daily dining in compact quarters, you'll find them styled and priced for the job—some "frankly folding," and tagged accordingly low; others handsome enough, and comfortable enough to be permanently set up. In addition to supporting meals and games, they can double as desks, as sewing tables, as emergency kitchen counters, and their legs lock so sturdily that they can take on such new jobs securely. Folding chairs, now designed for comfort, have ample seats, well upholstered in attractive plastics which resist scuffs and wipe clean with a damp cloth. Wood pieces come in a choice of finishes, including black. Metal sets, finished to resist chipping and rust, come in black, gray, or beige with contrasting upholstery in "decorator" colors. Buy them as sets or individual pieces.

Just the ticket if your game table must double as a disappearing desk, for this extra-sturdy number by Durham is only 26½" high, a perfect height for typing. Because of a clip-in construction, the top and seats of Boltaflex Tweed are easy to replace after a long stint of double duty. The tubular steel frames come in brown or black. Table, $10.98. ## How to Build a Birdhouse

LUCIEN GREIF

As soon as he owns shiny new tools, a man makes great plans for putting them to use. Sometimes that is as far as it goes. A chair or a chest may take more time than you can spare—but there is always the time to build a birdhouse, an excellent short-time project for the new-tool owner. It's a good idea to start your acquaintanceship with your new power tools on a small project like this house for bluebirds (other birds need other houses). You'll learn operations the machine can perform and if you should make a slight miscalculation, you'll have wasted very little. But, even before you plug your tool into the power line, read the whole instruction book—cover to cover. Then try its adjustments and settings—a dry run to see how everything works. Now to the project!

Buy a five foot piece of  $\frac{1}{2}$ " x 6" lumber. Set saw for cross cutting and cut off one piece 14", one  $8\frac{1}{2}$ ", one 5", and one piece  $3\frac{1}{4}$ " long. Set saw to 7° and make mitre  $8\frac{1}{2}$ " from end of remaining wood. Set saw back to 0°. Lay cut side on remaining board and cut second side

Adjust saw for ripping. Rip top to  $5\frac{1}{4}$ " width, front to  $4\frac{1}{4}$ " width, and sides to 4" width. Use "pusher stick" as shown to keep fingers away from blade. Use full-width board for back

Above we show a layout plan for all the pieces required for the bluebird house, each piece marked for size. When all are cut, sand each piece lightly. At left of plan is a sketch of the back piece with position of mounting blocks shown. Sides and top pieces are attached to these blocks. Before assembling front piece to sides, drill a  $1\frac{1}{2}$ " hole for entry, 2" below roof line. Drill a smaller hole for a perch just a little below this. Insert dowel for perch. To prevent leaking, caulk the joint where roof joins back and sides. Another precaution is to drill several holes in the bottom piece for drainage. Mount bottom piece to sides with only two nails, which act as a hinge and permit bottom to be cleaned. Do not nail bottom to block C—this acts only as a stop. Finally, drill holes in back piece for mounting or hanging

MARTHA B. DARBYSHIRE

There are men who for some reason must leave their familiar world of adding machines or drafting boards and go home . . . but not just to sit. Their form of relaxation must be creative. Such a person is Mr. Cal Rambeau of Sierra Madre, California, who constructed a home for himself and his wife, much of its furniture, and, to taper off, a guest house.

Uniqueness of materials is perhaps the keynote of the Rambeaus' attractive dwelling, for Cal Rambeau felt that it was pleasant to go about the job without deadlines, and to practice his crafts to their fullest capacity. (Actual timing in this case: seven months' worth of full-days' work.) The adobe bricks he made from clay, cut from his own land, and bound with cement. The rafters are driftwood logs, picked up along a stretch of shore where the Rambeaus went regularly for outings. The attractive front door is driftwood, too, that Cal smoothed and painted dark green. When he ran out of "gratis" beams, he could always find—in an outlying lumberyard, under a stack of new timbers—some old fir logs that had been lying around the lot for a decade.

Even the fireplace bricks have a history. They came from an aged house that had been left standing in the very heart of downtown Los Angeles until a few years ago. He bought 3500 of the beautifully weathered old brick and hauled them all home in his ancient "Chevy"—everything for the house was either hauled in or on top of this car. With the brick, he built two fireplaces, placed back to back. One is in the living room. The other, in the kitchen, has an extension that forms the base for a most convenient work counter set alongside the electric range. The range itself, with legs removed, is mounted on a brick foundation, making range and work counter the same height.

1. Drive spike in center of level spot in full sun, leaving seven inches above ground; fit over it sleeve of water pipe; lay 18 bricks in a circle with radius just short of hose connection on pipe; remove pipe and fill in circle with concentric rows of brick, each row  $\frac{3}{4}$  inch from the next, as seen in picture at right; this will take 46 to 48 bricks. Make sure surface is level

2. Unroll metal strip and place on outer row of brick with notch down and in direction of water supply; lock ends together as shown at left. Next, place circular piece of plastic screening on bricks, with spike protruding through hole in center. Then replace water pipe, passing it through notch, as seen below. Now fit straight ends of curved wire ribs all the way into slots on outside of metal strip until tips rest firmly on the bricks

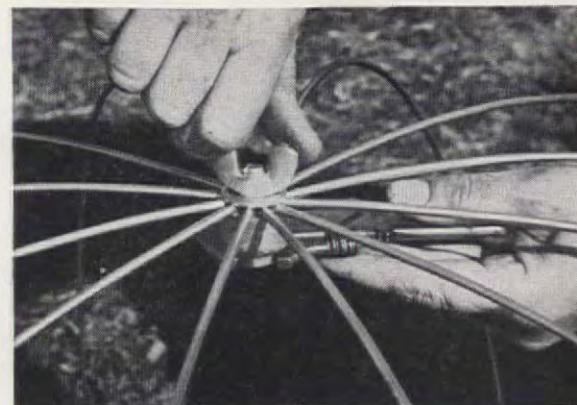

Package received contains everything needed but 48 common bricks, three bushels of coarse (concrete) sand, water, and cuttings

3. With ribs in place (as seen above) bring their upper (hooked) ends together and fit them into the cuplike section of the clamp assembly, after removing thumb nut and washer; then replace latter and tighten securely to make framework rigid

Find of the Month

Meet the Mistic Bubble—a brand-new development in the field of fog-mist plant propagation, devised especially for the convenient use of home gardeners

4. Make sure whole structure is centered on the bricks; spread and level clean, coarse sand (as used for concrete, not plaster) on plastic mesh to top of metal band. Place plastic cover over the framework, draw down to brick line, and secure it around the metal strip with spring-equipped wire. Attach hose to pipe connection—and your Mistic Bubble is complete

An unexpected, exciting by-product of our study of the mist-propagation method (read all about it on page 128) was the discovery of the new outfit pictured here, now available by mail and soon to be had at garden supply stores at under $30. Devised by Mist Methods Co., a progressive plant-propagating firm in Winchester, Tennessee, and calling for little skill, experience, or attention, it involves a simple foundation of loose brick for perfect drainage, a rigid wire framework, and a plastic cover (with ventilation holes at the top) to confine the mist from a centrally placed nozzle. The cover can be removed when cuttings are ready to be exposed to the air, whether transplanted to soil beds or left in the sand for a time and watered with a nutrient solution. As shown, a Bubble will hold up to 1,000 cuttings, and two or more crops a season can be started. Full instructions for assembling and operating the device and for handling plants are included with each Mistic Bubble kit.

Taking the mystery out of MIST PROPAGATION

ALBERT LOWENFELS

Probably the most discussed subject among nurserymen and other plant propagators these days is the "mist method" of rooting cuttings of shrubs, trees, and other woody plant materials. What it offers home gardeners (in addition to helping commercial growers make available to them more, better, and possibly less expensive plants) has had relatively little attention, so we are glad to present the following first-hand report of its successful use by one such gardener—Mr. Albert Lowenfels, of Westchester County, New York—and also (on page 126) news of a brand-new development in the field, especially designed and perfected for amateur, small-scale propagators.—EDITORS.

Basically, the thing that keeps so many people gardening is the thrill of making plants grow and watching the results. Heretofore, most of them have been content to buy their larger evergreens, shrubs, etc. from expert growers and to raise their own plants—if any—from seeds, bulbs, and young stock already started. Now, thanks to the development of mist propagation—or, rather, its application to their circumstances—almost any moderately capable gardener can grow a variety of plants from cuttings with considerable assurance of success, and without a greenhouse or expensive equipment. As this new idea is still being experimented with, anyone trying it may discover new, perhaps valuable, angles. That the system works is certain.

It has long been known that cuttings ("slips" our grandmothers called them) will root if given sufficient warmth and a very humid atmosphere, these conditions being commonly provided by planting them in a tightly covered, somewhat shaded

Mist Propagation

Stages in growing new plants: Lower row, cuttings of (l. to r.) red-flowering dogwood, rhododendron, Japanese maple. Upper row, cuttings rooted after about three weeks. Above, ready for planting out, a sturdy, one-year-old rhododendron plant

Among these cuttings, photographed during the 56-second interval between mist flows, are magnolia, spirea, Japanese maple, red dogwood, holly, azalea, etc. In right foreground is a dish of a hormone rooting solution in which cuttings are dipped box, frame, or bench. In the new method, the humidity is maintained by keeping them in a more or less constant mist or fog which prevents them from drying or wilting while they are developing roots through which to get moisture and food from the soil—and this even when they are exposed to the beneficent warming and stimulating effect of full sunlight.

Here are the basic steps: (1) Select a spot in full sun that can be protected from the wind. I use the unheated pit greenhouse shown, with the roof sash taken off and placed to form a windbreak; a coldframe surrounded by burlap or cheesecloth screens would serve. (2) Remove a foot or more of soil, put coarse gravel or other drainage material in the bottom, then six inches of coarse sand; a lot of water will have to be taken care of, for it must not stand around the cuttings. (3) Spread, level, wet thoroughly, and tamp down four inches of a suitable rooting mixture such as clean builder's sand, peat moss, a mixture of the two, etc. As the cuttings will be removed when rooted, it need not contain plant food, but the acidity of

When well rooted, cuttings are planted in small pots and kept in the bench over winter or, early in season, set outside under the broken shade of lath or other screen. Or they can be set out without pots, like these rhododendrons, to be moved the next year

peat moss helps rhododendrons and related plants. (4) A few feet above the medium provide a water pipe
equipped with nozzles giving a fine mist, not a spray or stream. These,
of various types and sizes can be screwed into threaded holes drilled into the pipe or brazed to it. Space them so the mist will cover the whole area. (5) Make cuttings four to ten inches long of new, soft, yet firm, growth (when you bend one, it should snap cleanly). Insert them an inch or so apart in pencil-size holes so at least one bud (with leaves around it removed) is buried; upper leaves are left intact to help nourish the cuttings. Dipping the base of each cutting in a hormone root-stim-ulator (to be had at seed stores) is helpful. Try to "take" the cuttings in early morning and plant right away;
if there must be delay, keep them out of the sun and wrap in wet newspaper or burlap. Run the rows east and west if possible so they get even light from the summer sun. (6) Firm and wet down the medium—and you're set. (7) When—three to six or more weeks later depending on the species, weather conditions, etc.—the cuttings are rooted, plant them in light, open soil (in two-inch pots if you like) under lath or other broken shade. A mulch of coarse sawdust, shavings, peat moss, or other fluffy material helps keep the soil cool and moist; leave it on over winter. The second spring the plants can be set out, a foot or so apart, in unshaded rows to "grow on."

My first results were obtained with a continuous (all-day) mist. Later, I heard of, and installed, a modification now being strongly endorsed. This involves an electric control device and a solenoid switch in the basement whence the water flows to the greenhouse through a hose. I set it to let the mist flow for four seconds out of each minute on all bright, sunny days. One advantage claimed for this "interrupted misting" is that it uses less water thus lessening the drainage problem and any tendency to lower the temperature of the medium. Also,
as the cuttings root, it can be adjusted to less frequent flow so as gradually to harden them off and condition them for transplanting or potting. Now there has been perfected an electronic control which turns the mist on and off according to the moisture condition around the cuttings, just as a thermostat keeps a desired constant temperature.

My mist propagation is done without artificial heat, so I don't start it until warm weather arrives, say late June. In fall, I disconnect the hose, replace the sash roof, and add more cover as necessary to protect any cuttings still in the benches.

Flowers and vegetables that grow well in one place may not grow at all well in other regions.

That's why we take great care to tailor-make your dealer's assortment of Ferry's Seeds to contain those varieties that will grow best in your particular climate.

This is an important reason why Ferry's Seeds are able to produce better, more abundant results. It's one more reason why Ferry's are your best seed buy.

Ferry's Seeds have been America's garden favorites for 99 years. Select from the Ferry's Seeds Display at your dealer's.

When a Tool Needs a Handle

MAX ALTH

The handle of a garden tool usually represents but a fraction of the cost of the implement. Being, ordinarily, made of wood, it is likely to be the first part to break or otherwise give out. It is, therefore, good economy as well as good sense to repair or replace it promptly instead of letting the inefficient or useless tool lie around, take up space, and, finally, become such a nuisance that you throw it away just to be rid of it. Moreover, either repair or replacement can usually be done easily and inexpensively.

As a matter of fact, some of the better tool manufacturers now make and supply to their retail distributors or direct to customers replacement handles numbered to identify them with the tool or tools they fit. If, then, a handle is beyond repair, simply buy a new one, by number, from your garden supply store or, if necessary, direct from the maker.

and follow the instructions given here for attaching it.

Even before a handle reaches that stage, it may become a nuisance because of splinters which sometimes develop in old, rain-soaked handles. To correct the condition, sandpaper the splinters smooth, then rub the handle down with linseed oil (Fig. 1).

If lengthwise splits develop in a handle and weaken it, without rendering it unusable, spread them apart with a screwdriver blade or chisel so that you can clean them out with putty knife or sandpaper; apply a generous amount of waterproof glue; work it deep into each crack; and clamp the handle firmly in a bench vise or some carpenter's

Jacobsen POWER MOWER

For all-round cutting ability, combined with ease of handling, the Jacobsen 18 in. manually-operated rotary mower is tops in the small rotary class. Wheels are offset to prevent scalping... inset to trim cleanly around trees, flower gardens etc. The 18 MA is powered by the Jacobsen-built "Hi-Torq" engine to insure double-quick starting, positive fresh lubrication, long life and quiet operation.

Exclusive Suction-Lift Rotor

Jacobsen's exclusive suction-lift rotor uses four cutting knives to double the cutting frequency of conventional bar-type mowers. Pitch of blades is scientifically determined to provide the lifting action essential for a smooth cut on long tender grass. Leaf mulcher is standard equipment.

clamps so as to close the cracks tightly. When the glue is perfectly dry, sand off any excess and rub the handle with linseed oil. A crack so treated will, of course, be less likely to give way if tightly wrapped ("whipped" a sailor would say) with copper wire, strong waxed cord, or the ever-useful friction or electrician's tape.

There are two ways of attaching handles to tools: The socket method, in which the tapered wood is driven into the tool head; and the tang method, in which the end of the metal part is inserted in the wooden handle (which may or may not be reinforced and prevented from splitting by a metal ferrule fitted to it). To remove a broken handle from a blind socket (as commonly used for hoes, trowels, and other light tools) fasten it in a vise and tap the socket or ferrule loose, using cold chisel or screw driver edge (Fig. 2). If handle fragment is short enough so it and the tool head can be put in a warm oven overnight, this will shrink the wood and make its removal easier. Rivets are often used to reinforce the friction hold of a tool head on its handle; to remove one, cut off its head with a cold chisel (Fig. 3) and drive it out with a drift pin or large nail. After the rivet is out (or if there wasn't one), rest the shoul-

Tool Handles

ders of the tool loosely in a vise (Fig. 4) or between two sawhorses and tap the handle out. If you need but cannot get a rivet for the new handle, use a stove bolt instead and, after you have tightened the nut, pound the protruding threaded end of the bolt down over it so it cannot work loose and fall off.

To tighten a loose socket handle, new or old, soak the head in water overnight or, for more lasting results, in linseed oil. Or tie a rag around the handle where it joins the metal, soak it with the oil, and leave it a few days. Another simple trick is to punch a few depressions through the socket and into the handle with a center- or prick-punch. If the handle is still loose, the tapered end has probably worn down. In that case, saw off an inch or so of the end so it will fit.

Attach a handle by the tang method by simply inserting the tang of the tool in the hole in the handle (after placing the ferrule over it loosely) and drive it home (Fig. 5). If the hole is too large, fold a strip of soft metal over the end of the tang before inserting it.

develop in size, color, and number of open florets exactly as the catalogue promised! We had chosen mainly from the section of the catalogue headed "Standard One-Price Varieties"—which are the trustees of the glad world. That is, they are not old enough to be dropped as the good growers eliminate outdated kinds to make room for superior newcomers, but they no longer can command the prices asked for recent introductions. Because our grower, like many others, was generous in his count and allowed us a selection of "bonus bulbs," we actually received more than we ordered. We felt that they deserved a real "place in the sun," and planted them in two deeply spaded rows in the well-prepared soil of the vegetable garden, following this with careful attention as directed in the catalogue.

The following August, the day of the local show found us rejoicing over four spikes in bloom on our plants. Although one had only a single floret open, we cut all four, put them in a big pitcher of water, and off we went at 20 miles an hour so as not to risk injury to a single precious petal. Proudly we placed our entries in the paper milk bottles provided by the show committee, tucking evergreen sprigs in around them to hold them erect; carefully we located the proper class designation numbers; meticulously we wrote out and attached the four entry cards. Then, nervously exhausted, we went home to lunch while the judges got to work in the otherwise empty exhibition hall. On returning, we got the thrill of our lives. Our Robinson Crusoe sported a blue ribbon and our Margaret Beaton a red! The second day, Crusoe took another First; Margaret moved up beside him; Burma had opened enough florets to get a First and Big Top had won a Third. Ultimately we won the Novice Sweepstakes (for the greatest number of points scored) which carried with it a purple rosette, $8 worth of bulbs and a year's membership in the State Gladiolus Society. The man we had bought from proudly called attention to what we—beginners—had done with his stock, and we, in our minds at least, were king and queen for that weekend.

We became really active members and by the time my husband became Society secretary, we were ordering from the "Outstanding Newer Varieties" and fascinating "Australian and New Zealand Varieties" sections of the catalogues, though still interested in the standard 400 and 500 Classes—giants with 5½-inch florets. At the Society meetings we heard about the experiences of experts; about the national "Symposiums," and, most important, how to read between the lines of catalogues. If a variety is "probably the healthiest of its color," we ask, "aren't all of that color healthy?" before buying certain expensive kinds. Soon we were buying fewer bulbs, but at higher prices—occasionally $1 or $2 each for a Mesa Mist or a deep-toned Blue Devil. And we no longer bought the largest bulbs, having found that medium-size cheaper ones do well enough the first season and improve in future years.

The first year my husband was Show Chairman, we discovered the section for "Miniatures," just then beginning to attract attention. The entries were few and when, after the show, most of the blooms went to hospitals, no one bothered to take the "little ones." So I did, stuck them in a vase at home, and next morning they, and we, were radiant. Indeed, our eight-year-old said, "Why don't we grow minies?" and since then, we have. But they are still new, and care should be taken in making a choice.

Other important sections are "Directions for Ordering" and "Cultural Hints," and, of course, "This Year's Introductions," which we are trying—not too successfully—not to notice.

Rose Amateur

(Begins on page 50)

Pink Pinocchio, and Goldilocks (Floribundas); and Blaze, New Dawn, and Gold Rush (Climbers). The same planting and care routine has given the same successful results. Morning watering by soaking rather than sprinkling seems to help prevent mildew.

From my roses I have raised about a dozen new plants. When pruning in the fall, I stripped the leaves from the lower half of strong, singly branched slips ten to twelve inches long and inserted the stems six inches into the soil where I wanted them to grow. After soaking soil and cutting, I covered each one with leaves and a mason jar which I buried in leaves. Every one rooted and gave me a new plant, delighting my horticultural (and frugal) soul. I plan to add to my collection Katherine T. Marshall, Thor (a Climber with huge red flowers), and some Miniatures (probably Rouletti and Oakington Ruby), telling myself that then I will be content. But when my plants are in bloom, they are certainly irresistible. I wonder whether friend husband's vegetable garden isn't larger than necessary!

This picture demonstrates 3 ways heat escapes your home

Johns-Manville Spintex Insulation prevents heat escaping ALL 3 WAYS!

Tomorrow at breakfast, let your coffee and a lighted match show how J-M Spintex insulation can keep heat from moving out of your home.

Only this type insulation properly applied prevents heat loss all 3 ways.

By Conduction:

Notice how quickly your spoon handle warms up. Fast-moving molecules in the hot coffee kick into action the slowed down molecules of a cold silver spoon. In the same way your furnace heat kicks its way out through uninsulated walls and ceilings.

By Convection:

When you light a match, notice that the flame is pulled straight up by rising heat. Heat behaves the same way in a house with uninsulated walls and moves to the colder surfaces where it finds ready exit to outdoors. Drafts result.

By Radiation:

Now sip your coffee. It has cooled perceptibly. The heat has propelled itself out into the air and will radiate in all directions unless it is stopped by efficient insulation.

That's why J-M Spintex can save you up to 30 cents on every dollar you spend for fuel. Your house is warmer in winter, cooler in summer. And Spintex is fireproof, gives added protection.

WHERE INSULATION IS NEEDED!

1. Exterior walls.
2. Floor above unheated garage.
3. Floor above unexcavated area.
4. Floor over open porch.
5. Ceiling below unfinished attic.
6. Sloping ceiling.
7. Dormer cheeks and faces.
8. Dormer ceiling.
9. Knee walls.
10. Ceiling below flat roof.

Pink

Pink for your table, your oven, your counter (top of page): Dinnerware in palest pink by Iroquois sets on a pink and lacy paper placemat by Roylace. Graceful casserole from A. H. Dorman is the same favored shade—and so is the painted tin cookie jar from Florence Thomas

What next? A pink vacuum cleaner, of course—one designed by General Electric to bring glamor to your chores. It has a swivel top—and a wheeled base with lock-in handle makes it easy to roll about. Cleans as well as it looks with its shell pink, coral, and cocoa trim

You can put pink on the shelf and still keep it in sight with this smart square canister set from Lincoln Metal Products. It stacks in space-saving formation and can be prettily underlined with pink shelf paper and rose-strewn shelf edging from Royledge

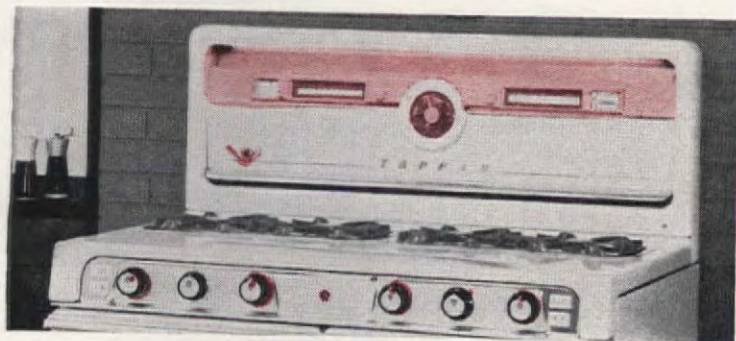

Black wrought-iron chair by Daystrom has pink plastic-covered seat and back. A set of these would bring a smile to an all-white kitchen, an all-wood kitchen—or an all-pink kitchen, for that matter. The step-on garbage can by Lincoln Metal goes pink without blushing, and can team up with a wastebasket made to match

Is the Link

Whether you go “all out” for pink, or just use pink touches for newness—these will pamper you. New-fashioned pink can be your “neutral” color

Pink's at home on the range, too—for example, on the new model by Tappan shown above, the panel sports pink. On other makes, you'll find all degrees of pink, in all amounts—white ranges with pink gas valves, pink electric switches, pink door handles; or ranges all pink from stem to stern, some of them pale, others deep pink in tone

What modern kitchen can be in the pink without an electric mixer? This hand model by General Electric comes in pink to hang on the wall above your pink counter or range ow can you tell Fostoria's “Century” is handcrafted glass?

HOLD it up to the light. Hand-made glass like Century has a swirling, liquid quality there's no mistaking. It's clear, like ice, but it has more sparkle than Jack Frost ever made! Fostoria craftsmen take molten glass from a furnace, shape it ever so deftly. Then they polish it in flame—that's where the smooth brilliance comes from. All this explains why Century will look so beautiful on your table—or with your card as a gift. Prices are modest; for instance, your choice in the illustration above ranges in price from $1.40* to $3.25*. In open stock because it's made by the Fostoria Glass Company in Moundsville, West Virginia.

Acquiring Antiques

can be used to decorate the living room of a tiny apartment and be equally attractive in a future home. Then come tables of all types, carefully chosen to blend with one another, but acquired at intervals.

For an antique effect in a room boasting but a few pieces of old furniture, there's nothing like an antique clock and old mirrors. Old picture frames can be picked up for a song and with new (or preferably old) mirrors in them, lend an air.

What about lighting a period room? Lighting is a problem, of course, since electricity has so changed the picture since the days when our antiques were created. It is painful to see a fine table illuminated by a commonplace modern lamp. And it's still worse to see a room in grim shadows because its owners feel duty-bound to limit illumination to a few small converted oil lamps "for authenticity." But what makes a handsomer lamp than a fine oriental vase? Lots of candle power can be packed into the bulbs of converted vases and candlestick. Hidden, indirect, and cove lighting are also effective, and for floor lamps, try wrought iron, or other metals.

What coffee table can you use with antiques? You might buy an old butler's tray and have legs made to match, or choose a fine reproduction. An old tea table, cut down, is fine if you have plenty of room, and I recently saw two lovely small tables made out of a one-tiered Victorian "knickknack" stand. Another idea: old benches with glass or marble replacing the seat, or a marble slab mounted on a suitable base.

For upholstered pieces, good reproductions serve well where the antique is unobtainable due to rarity and consequent expense. More and more furniture is designed to blend with heirlooms, and the canny home decorator can pick up truly authentic reproductions. While there is nothing phony about the fine reproduction that carries on the tradition of quality, beware of the "distressed" finish, where blow torch and nail heads have scarred expensive merchandise to simulate age.

Keep away from the fads. It may be amusing, for a while, to decorate a living room with farm implements, use an oat bin as a chest, or put old saddle stands and buggy seats to work. But such hi-jinks are fads that can run into money if you're not careful. There is little intrinsic or permanent value in household furnishings made of poor woods, poorly designed. If you fall for the cut-down chest or the flower-filled cupid on an old school desk, don't pay too much to assemble them or you will find yourself in the same predicament as the lady of fashion who chooses only the most extreme styles and each season finds herself with "nothing to wear"!

KILLS MICE

Don't be afraid to mix woods—but be careful how you do it. Mahogany, walnut, and cherry are best for formal rooms while maple, pine, and again, cherry, suit provincial style décor. Cherry, the "sunshine" wood prized by our ancestors, is coming back into popularity.

If you want antiques with lasting value, buy good ones. Learn as much as you can about them, then learn as much as possible about your dealer. Patronize only a dealer you can trust. He will come to your house, talk over your needs, and help you add to your collection. Many dealers assist clients in disposing of less valuable pieces as the collection is improved. They make actual allowances and often arrange to sell cast-offs. It may take years to "do over" a house for people who want just the right things.

Meanwhile it is a blessing that really fine antiques, like the very best of modern, are so classic in line and feeling that they go with anything. Homes are no more bound by periods than they are by woods!

The greatest danger in decorating with antiques is clutter. Like cardplayers, we must discard as we acquire, for a jumble of antiques—however fine individually—is apt to look like so much junk. It's hard not to be sentimental, but if a beautiful heirloom is too large for a room, or too small—out with it! Proportions, symmetry, and arrangement must be maintained irrespective of antiquity, so steel yourselves against adding a "real bargain" if you haven't a good place to put it. Discrimination is the secret of decorating with antiques. It is the vases and bibelots, bits of brass and copper, china and glass gleaned from auctions, wayside shops, even junkyards, that bring life and character into our homes. They are the trophies of the sport as we strive for perfection of line and color in the never-ending joy of acquiring antiques!

Unlike ordinary furnaces, the Gasaver and Oilsaver are controlled by inside and outside thermostats which modulate fuel consumption and warm air circulation. You get a constant flow of warmth... without waste.

Williamson Waterless AIRefrigeration needs no water, water tower, pump, plumbing or extra floor space. The outside compressor unit not only saves space, but also eliminates indoor compressor sound. ## Income Tax Return after July 31, 1954 may be credited against taxes owed. For 1954 this tax credit may not exceed 2% of taxable income. After 1954 this limitation is increased to 4%.

RETIREMENT INCOME CREDIT AND SOCIAL SECURITY:

You may qualify for retirement income credit if you have had an earned income in excess of $600 in each of any prior ten years. It might be well to note at this time that the new social security laws permit a person over 65 to earn $1,200 within a calendar year, instead of $900, without affecting his payments. At the age of 72, social security payments are continued regardless of earned income. (This age has been reduced from 75.) There are other new conditions explained in the instructions.

WAGES ARE TAX-EXEMPT WHILE YOU'RE ILL:

The first $100 of weekly wages paid by an employer under a plan for absence due to sickness or injury, are tax exempt. This does not apply to the first week of sickness unless the employee is hospitalized at least one day in that week. It can be important to check with your employer on this subject for any such payments during the past year.

NEW DEDUCTIONS FOR MEDICAL EXPENSES:

It is now possible to deduct for medical expenses in excess of 3% of your income, instead of 5% under the old law. This deduction may not include drugs, medicine, and similar supplies, except in excess of 1% of income. If your doctor orders you to travel to another location for care and treatment, the transportation expense may be included in these calculations, but not the food and lodging costs.

NEW BENEFITS IF YOU SELL YOUR HOME:

There have been two new benefits to persons selling their houses. The old law provided that a home owner did not have to pay capital gains tax on a profit made over the original purchase price if he reinvested the entire proceeds of the sale in another house and occupied it within one year, (or in the construction of a new house within 18 months). However, if the selling price exceeded the cost of the second house there is a tax due on the difference. This difference can now be further reduced by expenses to fix up the house for sale, such as painting and decorating, if they are made within the 90 days before contract of sale and are paid for within 30 days after the sale. Any brokers' commissions can also be used to reduce this difference.

THE LIMIT ON CHARITABLE DEDUCTIONS IS INCREASED:

The limit on charitable deductions is raised from 20% to 30% of income, provided this extra 10% is contributed to educational institutions, hospitals, or churches.

NEW ADVANTAGES TO WIDOWS, WIDOWERS, AND HEADS OF FAMILIES:

Widows and widowers with dependent children can split income the first two years after the spouse's death.

The definition of dependents has been extended to include anyone supported in the taxpayer's home, regardless of relationship to taxpayer. A son or daughter under 19 may earn over $600 a year and still be considered a dependent if the parent actually supports him. There is no age limit for regular students.

The head of family tax calculation may be used even though the taxpayer's dependent parent does not share his home.

IF YOU'RE A WORKING MOTHER, OR WIDOWER:

It is now possible to make deductions up to $600 for the cost of nurses, nursery schools, sitters, or other methods of caring for children under 12 years, or for other dependents unable to care for themselves, when this care is required by working women who are single, married, widowed, or divorced. The same deduction may be made by widowers or divorced men when they themselves must go to work. This deduction is only available in a tax return when expenses are itemized. A working wife is only entitled to this deduction if she files a joint return with her husband, and then the amount allowed as a deduction is reduced by the couple's total adjusted gross income that exceeds $4,500. If this income is more than $5,100, the expense deduction would have no value. There is only one deduction of $600 allowable per taxpayer no matter how many dependents are involved.

DEDUCTING HOUSEHOLD EXPENSES FOR BUSINESS PURPOSES:

If you're a wage-earning executive or a salesman, and if you entertain business customers at home to further improve your income, apportioned expenses for such entertainment are deductible when supported by sufficient records. Proportionate expense of home maintenance for any space set aside and used entirely for purposes to increase business income, may be deducted. This apportioned expense could include telephone, heat, light, insurance, repairs, and depreciation of home. This could apply to public accountants, sales-

DEDUCTIONS FOR CASUALTY LOSSES:

Yes, young lovers, there's a lot to be said for basements, and for attics as well. Like what I just said to the real estate man—"Find me something with a big basement, a big attic, and lots of out-of-date, single-purpose rooms in between." That's what I said. And when he shows me a gorgeously inefficient 45-year-old white elephant, I'll move right in, have breakfast in the breakfast room, dinner in the dining room, TV in the study, bridge in the sun parlor, and at last, live a little in the living room!

On second thought, don't let me discourage you. For a young couple just starting out, there's nothing like a house planned for the . . . well . . . modern mode of life. Now, I happen to know where you can pick up a sweet little Cape Cod semi-bungalow—absolutely no waste space, the most divine living-dining arrangement for intimate buffet suppers. . . .

material for flooring all through the house. The boards are of beautiful, sometimes even rare, woods from all over the world, and were bought at very low cost, right at the harbor.

When he was finished with the actual construction of the house, Cal went on to the built-ins and the furniture. He refinished every piece of furniture in the house and then, in the kitchen, designed and built-in the sink to resemble a Welch dresser. The handsome copper-lined sink with copper counter he found, all made, in a junk yard, and then he built the knotty pine shelves, cupboards, and drawers around it.

It's one of those charming, little houses—composed of living room, two bedrooms, one bath, and a living-kitchen—with a prideful, handmade distinction which adds at least ten per cent to an asking price—only this little house isn't the kind that changes hands. It owns its owner.

Kitchen fireplace sports a woodbox below, with firebox built at non-stoop level. Brick wall extends to form a convenient work counter

It looks like anything but the kitchen sink, this handsome piece with copper covering, shelves, adjacent to six-foot-long work counter
