This new Armstrong vinyl floor has a nice way of emphasizing the qualities of good furniture in any style. The vinyl chips in Montina Corlon are flecked with different colors. They form random patterns in their translucent vinyl setting and give Montina a nubbly surface texture.

Go modern-and Montina's crisp beauty is a handsome asset to today's straightforward, clean designs. Go traditional-and the warm colorings and textured surface of Montina Corlon complement rich patinas and elaborate patterns.

Or mix different styles. A floor of Montina Corlon provides a single sweep of color and pattern from wall to wall that harmonizes different kinds of furniture.

For a free sample of this new Armstrong vinyl floor and a folder showing its range of fashionable, decorator colorings, write Armstrong, 6404 Pine St., Lancaster, Pa. In Canada, Dept. 44-B, Box 919, Montreal, P.Q.

DEAR READER:

Why is it that ownership of land disagrees with so many of us? Even the most rational and considerate individual may start acting in a most peculiar fashion the minute he owns a plot of ground. As soon as he has the deed in his hands he begins to think that even though he didn't actually create that land, it was at least created especially for his exclusive use. He begins to feel that the most important object in life is to protect the value of his property. This in turn entitles him to decide who will own the land around him, what sort of houses they may build, how they should conduct themselves, and what sort of garden they can grow.

The ownership of land has been disagreeing with mankind since heaven only knows when. Man has fought many a war over land and today we keep our lawyers and judges busy with suits and countersuits concerning rights to the use of land. We suppose that things will always go on in this fashion but it does seem rather foolish. After all, it's not really our land in spite of what is written on the deed. The land was here long before we came on the scene and hopefully it will be here long after all of us have gone. We are not landlords. We are caretakers and while we have a right to enjoy the piece of land on which we live, we have not the right to deny others the enjoyment of living on land which happens to adjoin ours.

We have in this country something called a "population explosion" and we have only a limited amount of land suitable for housing. Unless we can make some basic changes in our feelings about the possession of land, unless we can be less concerned with property values and more concerned with human values, this nation can be in for a good deal of unhappiness.

both food stains and potmarks. But not Comet. It gets out both kinds of stains best. Know why that is? Because only Comet has Chlorinol, the best cleaning, bleaching and disinfecting stuff in any cleanser. Even if you think

"What a difference! Other cleansers have problems with you've got the world's worst stains, don't give up the sink! Get Comet and make it white as china. Comet cleans deep -bleaches right through old dried food stains, makes pesky, scratchy potmarks disappear. Comet removes those stains best-and you can't be any better than that!"

WE DESIGN AGARDENER'S WORKSHOP FOR THE FAIR

Most likely to impress visitors at the New York World's Fair this year will be the radical departures in building and interior design. One of the most avant-garde is the Edward Durrell Stone home at the "House Of Good Taste" exhibit, for which The American Home and True Temper Corporation designed a unique garden work-shop. Combining beauty with utility, this garden hobby center has convenient equipment and tool storage, roll-out bins for storing peatmoss and potting soil, glass-enclosed seed trays for starting plants, and pot dispensers.

In the over-all view of the workshop above, note that the pegboard panel for short-handled tools shows their uses as well.

In the detail of the counter corner (center) you see that the flip-top lids of the storage bins serve as additional work surface. Counter-balancing springs raise the pots.

The floor plan (far right) gives dimensions of the various units comprising our hobby center.

Seed trays (right) slide out and are illuminated on several levels. Vents give temperature control.

If we told you that you could assemble and put up your own custom aluminum awnings in less time than it takes to mow your lawn (and save a bundle doing it), would you be interested?

You would? Good. We've got just the thing: Kirsch Sunaire aluminum awnings. They give you the beauty and comfort of custom awnings. Inexpensively. Because there're no assembly or installation costs. And they cost less than comparable awnings to begin with.

Easy to assemble? Sure. Simply put the prefitted 4" x 36" aluminum panels and other parts together.

Maintenance-free Sunaire awnings are strong enough to meet the toughest rigidity tests, yet light enough to be handled by anyone. They come in a variety of colors. Mix or match panels to suit your taste and home.

Sunaire awnings are made by Kirsch, the nation's leading drapery hardware maker. So you can feel very sure of quality. For the full story and the name of your nearest dealer, drop us a line at 503 Prospect, Sturgis, Michigan.

One of the poppycockiest rumors running around these days is that hired help is no longer necessary. "Who needs a maid?" asks today's young housewife, snug in her push-button, porcelain palace. It's not a question of innocence. The trouble is that nobody knows she wants a maid.

Who needs a maid? You do, you silly goose.

Don't let anybody tell you that automation can take the place of Annie. Sure, nobody in the history of housekeeping ever had it so good. You don't have to do your laundry on the rocks, chop wood for the fire, or milk the cow. You don't have to beat carpets, trim oil-lamp wicks, or strain baby's peas and carrots. You don't even have to defrost the refrigerator or sift your own flour. Your floors and furniture are easy-care. Your clothes are wash and wear. Your foods are instant jiffy-quicky. What's more, you've got something the likes of which the world has never seen-a husband who changes diapers, scrubs the floor, and spends his Saturdays at the supermarket.

Girl, you've got it made-or have you? Life is a mink-lined lead pipe

I think you're exhausted. I think you're working your nerves, if not your fingers, to the bone. I think that by six o'clock any night in the week you're as much fun to come home to as last night's soufflé. For all your gorgeous, gleaming appliances you're only a bird in a chromium cage. If I were you, I'd stop telling everybody "please, I'd rather do it myself" and start screaming my head off for help.

In the old days all nice normal girls used to scream for help. Having a maid was part of the American dream. Whether grandma ever got the maid of her dreams isn't the point—at least she knew that she wanted one. You couldn't tell her that maidlessness was next to godliness. If it was economically possible she got her maid. But how about you? Maybe you've been muttering all the way down the page that you can't possibly afford help. But can't you, honestly? If you wanted a cleaning woman as yearningly as you wanted a washing machine, dryer, dishwasher, television set, second car, dancing lessons for Susie, braces for Johnny, or a summer vacationwouldn't you find a way?

But why don't more young wifemother-homemaker-dishrags want a maid? Why all this noble silent suffering, all these stiff upper lips? I suspect it's because you feel guilty. With a houseful of glorious, gleaming appliances, you're ashamed if you're pooped at the end of a day. Maybe your poor nonautomatic mother and grandmother needed servant girls, but why should lucky little push-button you? Phooey. Nobody's taken all the work out of housework yet. Taking care of a house and family is still a full-time, full-sized job.

If your household duties are less back-breaking than they used to be, they're also more nerve-racking. You live more complicatedly, go more places, wear more clothes, and juggle more responsibilities than the average housewife of the past. Did children ever change in and out of clothes as often as yours do? Was life ever such a round of P.T.A.'s, dancing lessons, Cub Scouts, pediatricians, Little Leagues, dentists, beauty parlors, Brownies, keep-trim classes, dinners for the boss? No, there's nothing wrong with you if you sometimes feel inadequate-nothing that a nice, healthy cleaning woman once a week wouldn't cure. Or every other week. Or just for the summer.

Perfect jewels are as hard to come by today as they've always been. But it's probably a lot easier than you imagine to find a good, hard-working conscientious girl. You don't have to make a big production of it or steal your best friend's cleaning woman. Naturally, if you're looking for a full-time, sleep-in maid, you'll be more cautious-but that's not what we're talking about. You can pluck one good cleaning woman after another right out of the want ads. And there's a lot to be said for playing the domestic-help field. Most of us are as reluctant to change maids as we are to change hairdressers or doctors.

'Tis better to have hired and lost than never to have hired at all.

Maybe you can't afford a maidnot now. Never mind, you can start wanting one. That's the first step. And by wanting one, I don't mean nagging for one. You don't have to meet your husband on the doorstep tonight, magazine in hand, crying "See?". The first happy week that the budget can afford it, he'll see for himself what a difference a maid makes.

WHAT CAN YOU DO ABOUT RISING SCHOOL TAXES?

Last year when a record-breaking $6,000,000 school budget was submitted to the city council of a large eastern suburban community, one of the councilmen jumped to his feet to protest. "I move that this budget be cut in half," he declared. "That will put such a crimp in our school program that the parents who've come here because of it will move away. Then we can go back to a reasonable tax rate."

The councilman was smart enough not to run for re-election. But his outrageous proposal was only a little more futile than most other efforts to reduce school taxes to levels of the past. The reasons why this can't be done are simple.

1. Thinking Americans will no longer tolerate a second-rate public school system. Even though the rejection rate of local school bond issues submitted to voters all across the country rose from about 17 to 33 per cent in the past ten years, the need and demand for better schools eventually overcome all opposition.

2. In this day and age, rising school costs are inevitable. (They jumped from $8.3 billion in 1953 to $19.5 billion last year; they will about double by 1970.) That is because some of the principal causes of the rise are beyond control, and no one wants to interfere with the others.

These causes are not limited to obvious problems of population growth, inflation, and communism's challenge to democracy. Another cause is our insistence that every child is entitled to a public school education. This has brought into schools thousands of exceptional children who would formerly have been considered uneducable. Still another is the fact that, despite the much-discussed problem of high school dropouts, a higher percentage of youngsters complete 12 years of school today than ever before. A final cause is the increasing use of new programs and teaching tools that contribute to improved education. Most of these represent additional expense. For instance, one school system found it would cost $50,000 to put a year of foreign language instruction in ten elementary schools. To install a small-scale educational television setup would cost another $30,000.

3. As school costs rise, local property taxes (which now pay about 57 per cent of the total annual bill) will go up too. Not even Congressional approval of proposals to pour Federal funds into new classroom construction, teachers' salaries, etc., can prevent this tax rise.

Here is a bleak prospect for home owners. Yet the situation is not completely hopeless.

Despite the inevitability of rising school costs, there are a number of ways to slow the rise—make it less burdensome—without cheapening the quality of our education program.

"The first step is to recognize why costs are high," says the superintendent of a large suburban school system. "The second is to determine what you want from your schools and to make this known. The third is to encourage school boards and other local authorities to take appropriate action when necessary."

Here are 11 questions you might ask in your community.

Is your board of education keeping informed about what's happening in the community?

Time was when whatever changes took place in the average town took place so slowly that they were hardly noticeable. Now change—rapid and extreme—is the order of the day. People come and go. New housing and industrial developments spring up. Whole sections of town are torn down. Nothing seems to stay put.

Many of these changes add substantially to school costs.

For instance, if because of population shifts an elementary school starts the year with more pupils than anticipated in one grade and fewer in another, a number of costly things will probably happen. New books and study materials will have to be ordered (there is no discount on small orders). A new teacher may have to be hired for the larger grade while one of those originally scheduled for the smaller grade may have less work to do. Because of crowded conditions in the school, it may even be necessary to buy and set up a portable classroom outside.

Or consider what can happen when for one reason or another the schoolage population in one section of your town jumps from, say, 500 to 1200 in a couple of years. Unless the school board has anticipated this, it may either have to rush through a new school (rushing costs money) or to budget for much higher bus transportation costs.

Such problems are not unusual today. Yet they need not add heavily to costs if the school administration and school board—with the help of interested property owners—stay alert for every important change occurring in the community.

Is your school system planning for the future?

It's one thing to recognize what is happening in a community; it's another thing to draw up plans to meet the situation foreseen (and unforeseen). Out of stupidity, lethargy, or fear to face facts, school systems don't always do this.

An example is an unnamed West Coast community which knew it was developing fast but neglected to make plans for the schools it would need. This failure to consider the future will eventually cost local taxpayers an estimated $1,000,000 for school transportation alone.

By contrast, the San Mateo, California, board of education made plans for expanding the school system years in advance of the time any action had to be taken. Then it went out and purchased the necessary land. The difference in the value of the land then and when the schools were finally built was about $3,300,000—a handsome saving.

"There is no formula for making exact and complete predictions about your community," says Robert Seitzer, superintendent of the East Orange, New Jersey, school system. "But planning by the board of education—alone and with other town departments—is essential."

Can the costs of building schools be trimmed?

Most property owners who complain about school taxes place the blame for them on the magnificent school buildings which are mush-rooming in every part of the country. Actually, the cost of these buildings over an estimated 40-year lifetime comes to only 10 per cent of the total cost of education.

Nevertheless, there are plenty of ways that school-building costs can often be reduced without resorting to cheap construction or poor design. Here are some of them.

Hire a good architect. "He can make a 10 per cent difference in the original cost of a school," says Harold B. Gores, president of Educational Facilities Laboratories, "and the difference over the years can really be astronomical."

But how do you tell a good school architect from a poor one? Study the work of several men, says Dr. Gores. Get references from other school boards. Urge school-board members to inspect schools in other cities and pay their way to do so. (School-board members are not paid and are not always given expense money when traveling on school business.) Above all, don't hire a local architect just because it seems like a good idea to keep business in your community.

Limit corridor space. Some schools devote more than 20 per cent of total floor space to corridors which contribute nothing to children's education, but cost money.

Select the site with care. One New England school board, which failed to order exhaustive initial studies of a site, watched development costs soar an extra $100,000 when the contractor hit an uncharted rock structure. Then, apparently to prove it was afraid of nothing, the board selected for another school a swamp which old inhabitants as well as some engineers said was bottomless.

Limit frills, but first make sure they are frills. Last year the board of finance of a Connecticut town turned down the local school board's plans to install (continued on page 84)

Fine recordings commemorate 400th birthday of Shakespeare

Just 400 years ago this April, William Shakespeare greeted life and rebelled against a midwifery slap with a loud cry. Later, he sang-in lines of sweetest cadence-perhaps better than any writer or any English poet before or since. That's sufficient reason, it seems to us, to celebrate the month with thoughts of Shakespeare's contribution to recorded entertainment. His plays-atleast half of them-are yours for the listening: in part, in full, and in a mixed bag of selected quotes. In preparation for this column, we drank deep of Shakespeare these past four weeks and the days of listening have taken their toll. It's hard not to think in metric lines; it's harder still to write unadorned prose. Where a simple word will do, the more flamboyant tries to urge itself upon us.

You cannot approach Shakespeare on records as you would the music he has inspired. Listening to Hamlet places a different demand on you than listening to Mendelssohn's "Incidental Music to Midsummer Night's Dream." For the majority of us, music appeals more directly to the emotions. The spoken word, on the other hand, directs itself first to the intellect.

For the most part, the vehicle of our listening was the excellent series of albums prepared by the Shakespeare Recording Society (461 Eighth Avenue, New York, N.Y.). This firm is a division of Caedmon Records. The casts are star studded with the likes of Sir John Gielgud, Dame Edith Evans, Siobhan McKenna, Richard Burton, Sir Ralph Richardson, Jessica Tandy, Claire Bloom, and Pamela Brown. The Society operates in much the same way as many book clubs do, which is to say you can buy a complete recorded play regularly priced at $12.90 for only $2.95. Then during the year the purchase of three albums makes you eligible for a bonus

The plays, like those of other manufacturers, are available in both monophonic and stereo versions. Stereo separates the characters in the same way that it separates the instruments of the orchestra. We hear them spread out across the stage instead of hearing all emerge from one sound source. This is particularly helpful in a many-character play. Another benefit stereo confers is the aural impact of crowd scenes, such as in Caesar and Cleopatra. Movement of the characters across a stage is also achieved through stereo effect. An important aid to listening is the complete text included in each album. We had thought at first that these were unnecessary accessories, like a bicycle's third wheel. It was arrogance to think we remembered the literature of the Bard so well. Before long we found ourselves, text in hand, chastened on a tricycle.

Some dross mingled with gold among the discs. Gwen Ffrancon-Davies' "Lady Macbeth," Richard Burton's "Coriolanus," Frank Silvera's "Othello," and Albert Finney's "Romeo" were all to the good. To find the really bad we had to leave the plays and listen to Sir John Gielgud's intoning of the Sonnets. If Sir John had some artistic intent behind his delivery, it was not discernible to us.

This is all the more incredible when one considers the Gielgud discs that are standard Shakespeare repertory. There is, for example, the fine two-record set (on Columbia) of his "Ages of Man" and "One Man in His Time." Here is a potpourri, parts of which have no equal on records—the speech from King Lear, for example. And in the complete plays of the Shakespeare Recording Society, Sir John distinguishes himself in Richard II, Measure for Measure, and Winter's Tales.

Recordings will never substitute for a theater performance. There is—and perhaps we imagine it—less vitality in the recordings as if actors are reading rather than playing. And yet, the discs serve to preserve great performances and convey them to the greater audience not fortunate enough to see them live.

THE END

How much should you tell your wife?

Some husbands are reluctant to discuss business and money affairs with their wives. Others take such discussion as a matter of course. It is, however, the rare husband who actually sits down with his wife and goes overwrites down and puts together in one place-all his financial records, covering such items as personal property, wills, savings accounts, investments, mortgages and insurance policies. And yet this method of acquainting his wife with his affairs is one of the most important things a man can do to protect her against panic and helplessness in the face of sickness, accident or death.

Often it is just these unpleasant associations—of death and illness—that keep men from "getting around" to giving their wives this important peace of mind. Yet no plans you are making for the future are complete without this simple summary of what you own, where it can be found and whom to call in case of emergency.

To help you make just such a summary, in a compact and easy-to-understand form, Phoenix Mutual has designed the portfolio "Our Property." This hand-somely bound, permanent record for your financial affairs is not for sale anywhere. We're offering it to readers for only 25¢, less than the actual cost, in order to get it into the hands of as many people as possible. The indexed page forms list such vital information as records of your assets—bank accounts, real estate, personal property and insurance; important addresses (and the telephone numbers) of your advisors—such as your lawyer and insurance agents; the locations of such essential items as bankbooks, safedeposit box, Social Security card, will, notes and obligations.

You'll find many uses for "Our Property." Once you fill it in, you'll also have a sounder picture of your own net worth—and you'll probably have the pleasant surprise of discovering that you're worth more than you think!

For your copy of "Our Property," just send us the coupon below, enclosing 25¢ to help cover handling costs. We only ask that you use it.

More and more families—at least 50,000 each year—are convinced that the best way to enjoy a vacation is to spend it in a cottage of their own.

Surprisingly enough, young marrieds are among those who eye a vacation cottage for an additional reason: a potential retirement home. If the location is one that will be continually satisfying, this makes good sense.

Families with a practical bent manage to build and then rent their cottage to others for a portion of the season. With demands running high for vacation homes, it's not unusual to collect in one month's rent enough to cover six months' payments on the cottage.

Other astute families have found a vacation home profitable. For example, there are couples who have built a cottage on borrowed money, sold it at a comfortable profit, and applied the gain to yet another cottage. In a very short time, they were able to build a vacation home with their own cash.

Whatever your reasons may be for wanting a second home, making your wish come true can be a lot easier than you think.

LOOKING FOR LAND

There isn't going to be a shortage of vacation land in our lifetime. Literally hundreds of millions of leisure-time lots are now waiting to be purchased or rented. They range from near-worthless swampland to lush, plush estates. Prices are scattered from $20 to $20,000.

Your aim, of course, is to pick the right one in the area that suits you for a sum you can afford. Unfortunately, it isn't quite as easy as buying a car or a boat. Buying land anywhere needs careful consideration; selecting a vacation lot generally requires even more thought. Above all, don't jump at what looks like a steal. Be suspicious.

You'll want to begin by deciding where to look. If you've been spending your vacation in an area you like, start there. Should an area unfamiliar to you strike your fancy, spend a week there and get to know it. In all cases, try to keep your initial explorations relatively close to home. Any spot over 100 miles away will mean a tiring weekend drive round trip.

There are other ways to familiarize yourself with the region. A local chamber of commerce or board of trade will be only too happy to help you. The editor of the newspaper serving the area is generally a fount of information.

Step number two is finding the lot. You can make this job much easier by explaining your requirements to a local realtor or real estate broker and letting him take over. Dealing directly with land owners sometimes is risky, since the information you get from them may not always be wholly accurate.

Many families prefer to deal with one of the growing cordon of vacation-land developers. This eases your search since lots are clearly defined and priced. You'll also have the advantage of being in a stable or potentially stable community. There are disadvantages to some, however. Glowing plans promised in sales literature occasionally fail to materialize, and you'll find yourself holding title to a remote lot in a non-existent community.

If the land is publicly owned, you may be able to rent a lot. The local agent for the U. S. Forest Service can tell you what is available. Annual rents are modest, ranging from $30 to $95 per year and leases run as long as 30 years.

Once you've narrowed the selection, here's what should help determine your final choice:

- A good source of potable water. This is one commodity even the most rustic mountain cabin must have. When the area lacks a community water system you'll need a well. In a few isolated cases, you may be able to tap a spring or stream but these aren't always suitable or dependable sources.
- Soil condition. Check other homes in the area. Any pronounced settling may indicate a soil too soft for the weight of a home. On the other end of the scale, check for subsurface rock ledges. Blasting out rock for a foundation could cost from $20 to $30 a cubic yard, and blasting for a septic tank field might be absolutely impossible.
- Are utilities available? It's no hardship to do without natural gas since bottled gas serves well for cooking and heating. But lack of electricity adds unwanted work to your vacation. A community sewer is a welcome advantage and if a telephone is important to you include it on your list of check points.

If no utilities serve the area, it's going to be costly bringing them in. Unless roughing it is your idea of fun, move on to another locale.

- Beach privileges. Do you like water sports? Be sure that a lot that doesn't front on the water has access to it. Get a statement to that effect in the contract.
- Shopping. If stores are several miles away, frequent trips for a forgotten quart of milk or another bottle of sun-tan lotion can get

- pretty annoying. Find out if the stores stay open weekends. It's also a good idea to check on local fire and police protection and determine how close is the nearest doctor.
- Will you want to visit your retreat at any time of the year? Then be sure the roads will be open all-year round. Some mountain and state roads are closed for the winter.

In addition to the items already mentioned there are several legal and technical points to consider. Your best bet at this point is to hire a lawyer. He would make sure that you had:

- A clear definition of the property. You can't depend on, "Well, the line's from that big rock to the sassafras tree." An approved survey should be obtained.
- An unencumbered title to the property. This means more than making certain there are no prior claims or liens on the land. It also determines whether easements have been granted to neighbors many years ago and clarifies the true ownership of all of the water and mineral rights.
- A knowledge of all special restrictions. For example, some lakes can be used only for fishing. Others outlaw water skiing. A number of vacation communities dictate the general design of all vacation homes built within their boundaries. Others have zoning restrictions affecting the size of the lot and setbacks from the lot lines.
- An accurate picture of taxes. You ought to know how much it's going to cost to keep the unimproved land (since it may be several years before you build on it).
- And, last of all, a just contract. This is where legal aid gives you maximum protection.

WHY, WHERE, & HOW TO BUILD YOUR SECOND HOME

Why?

You need two cooking levels, that's why. After studying the work habits of thousands of housewives like yourself, we found that most cooking chores require not one, but two working heights for maximum cooking comfort. Thus, the unique split level platform on our flameless Terrace Top® Electric Range.

The front units are lowered to just the right height (33" from the floor) for stirring, blending, flipping, beating (much less fatiguing than standard height units). The back surface units are higher (35") than the front ones but still lower than counter height (36"). They're perfectly placed for foods that don't require constant attention—like stews and simmering soups.

Note, too, the side mounted controls that eliminate reaching over hot utensils...the timing center that controls the big, roomy oven and outlet for small appliances—automatically.

If you think your present range is a comfort to cook on, then you probably haven't tried our Terrace Top. Size it up at your Westinghouse dealer's along with the many other Westinghouse Golden Jubilee Ranges for 1964.

You can be sure if it's Westinghouse

There are two ways you can pay for your vacation home and lot right now without increasing any payments you're presently making.

The first is with cash. This is by far the most uncomplicated and fastest method. If your present savings are within $1000 or so of the money you need, it might be wise to put off building until you have saved that amount. By doing so, you'll avoid any addition to your indebtedness and pocket the interest you would have paid on a loan.

The second way: if you have an open-end clause in your mortgage use it to re-extend the amount. For example, if you've paid off $8500 of the principal on your present mortgage, you can re-establish the full amount of the mortgage and get the $8500 in cash. Your monthly payments will remain the same, although the weight of the payment will shift toward interest, as it did when you first took out the mortgage. You may have to pay a small amount for another title search; you will also need approval from the mortgagee.

The next most inexpensive way is to refinance your mortgage. This turns up cash for you in essentially the same way as an open-end mortgage. However, you'll have to pay new closing costs that will amount to about 65 per cent of the charges for the original mortgage. And it's likely the interest rate for the refinanced mortgage will be higher; rates are presently falling in the 51/4 to 6 per cent range.

Another good source of funds is your own life insurance policy. Rates today are rarely more than 5 per cent simple interest. In addition, you can get loans from credit unions and consumer-type financing companies, although interest rates are inclined to be high.

If none of these methods mentioned is open to you, getting money may prove more difficult. But it's not impossible. There are clear signs today that lending institutions are gradually becoming more receptive to financing vacation homes. A primary impetus has been the remarkable increase in demand for money to build second homes.

If you have purchased or leased land in a vacation development, quite often you can arrange to finance the house through the developer. Be cautious, however. In some cases, you'll be asked to pay an add-on interest rate for your loan. To illustrate: a $5000 loan for five years at 8 per cent add-on means 8 per cent of the full amount each year or total interest of $2000. Thus, true interest over the five-year period would be 40 per cent.

Yet, most developers are reputable and have normal working arrangements with a local lender. You'll be able to borrow money at rates roughly equivalent to loans for home improvement or personal needs. These are usually discounted notes, for which true interest rates can vary from 8 to 15 per cent.

The same advantages are quite often open to you when you buy a prefabricated home, a precut packaged home, or a shell home. Approach the terms of precut or shell home financing with the same caution since there are still a few companies (mostly local) that deal in add-on financing, or worse yet—the balloon note*.

As long as your credit is good, there's little reason why you can't get a straight personal loan. In fact, if you own a late-model car or have stocks, bonds, etc., that you can offer as collateral, this type of loan is easy to obtain. You can borrow as much as $5000 from some lenders for periods up to 36 months. These notes are commonly discounted, so prepare to pay up to 15 per cent true interest. It makes sense to ask for a loan from your present bank first. But if you consider the interest too high, don't hesitate to shop around. Savings and loan associations have been particularly amenable toward vacationhome financing, and you may find their rates slightly lower.

If you've scratched FHA and VA insured financing off your list, put them back. Although there are limitations, you definitely can get a loan this way. A notable example is the

*For a balloon note you generally pay nothing down and a small amount each month for 3 to 5 years. At the end of this time the loan is called, and you must pay or refinance the balance—a sum that is often as large as the original loan. financing for the Raymond Loewy-William Snaith-Macy's vacation home, pictured on page 82. Both FHA- and VA-backed financing is available for this home, as built in Montauk, New York. This is true of other cases in which you select your finished vacation home from a builder's model.

Here are the government restrictions. The home must be located in what the FHA considers a year-round, established community, and it must be built to meet FHA minimum property standards—the same qualifications required for a permanent home.

The housing bill presently pending before Congress calls for a more lenient attitude toward vacation-home financing. If passed, it will permit insurance on loans up to $11,000 for homes in outlying areas. Construction standards will not be quite as rigid.

Here's how most lending institutions compute your ability to repay a vacation home loan. They add to all your present obligations the monthly payments for the new loan. If the resulting figure is more than one fourth of your monthly income, they will consider you a poor risk.

INSURANCE FOR YOUR SECOND HOME

Do you have a homeowner's policy on your permanent home? In many states you can arrange for a relatively inexpensive extension to get the same coverage on your vacation home. In a few states, only the liability provisions in a homeowner's policy may be applied to a second home. Insurance against fire and theft would then have to be purchased separately.

In all other cases, you'll have to buy fire and extended coverage separately. Expect to pay a moderate to stiff premium for vandalism coverage—as much as $1 for every $100 of valuation per year.

You should know, too, that if you plan to be away from your permanent home for more than 60 days, it would be wise to notify your insurance agent. Some policies are ineffective on your permanent home if it's unoccupied for longer than that amount of time.

MORGAN-JONES wondrous Insulaire, to blanket you 365 nights a year

Cool in summer, warm in winter—it's all the blanket you'll ever need. How does "Insulaire" work? Its magic is in the air-loom weave. Thousands of tiny cells speed away body heat in summer; comes winter, just toss any light cover over "Insulaire," and it holds body heat, warms perfectly. It's the thermal principle—put to bed! And, ah, how sweet you sleep. No weighty feeling. No electric rigmarole. Nothing but "Insulaire"—beautiful to be under and to behold. Ask to see all the dream patterns "Insulaire" comes in—prints, plaids, stripes, solids.

The one you see here—the color is wedgewood—comes in the four most wanted sizes in fashion shades, all bound with nylon satin. And all beautifully machine-wash-and dryable. Start at $9.* At fine stores everywhere. See list on facing page.

Few people are willing to depart from the accepted, traditional, or conventional pattern when it comes to building their permanent home, but with a vacation retreat just the opposite is true. In fact, the design and appearance of vacation houses are most often expressions of individual taste and personality. For this reason, they take on every conceivable shape and form, from boxes and polygons to cylinders and domes.

Your particular choice of shape or design is restricted only by the climate of the area in which you build. Keep in mind that in areas of heavy snowfall, the steeper the roof pitch, the less chance there is that the weight of snow will collapse a structure. You can't transplant a flat-top beach house to the mountains without substituting stronger, more expensive roof framing that's designed to carry snow loads.

A sturdy foundation is equally important. If you build along a coastline where hurricanes may strike, the best defense against this destructive force is to build the house on wooden pilings. Away from the hurricane belt, you can use a variety of methods to build a foundation. The most popular types are concreteblock piers or 4x4' wood post supports resting on individual concrete footings. A continuous concrete block or concrete foundation and footing is more expensive but it should be used where soil conditions are poor or when exterior walls are of masonry. In all cases, the footings should extend below the frost line to prevent frozen soil from raising parts of the house.

If you are a typical vacationer who sets about to build a vacation house, you will want to keep the cost at a minimum and within reasonable bounds. You will also want it to be as maintenance free as possible, otherwise you might end up spending your vacations fixing, caulking, patching, and painting instead of fishing and boating. Keeping these factors in mind, the two structural materials that emerge as the most suitable are wood, because it is widely available and adaptable to any design, and concrete block (if locally available) because of its sturdiness and low cost. However, unless concrete blocks with a cast-in design are used, their appearance is a drawback. In addition, the foundation must be continuous to support the weight of concrete-block walls.

Wood, of course, is by far the most popular material since it looks well in any setting. Wherever wood is used in contact with the ground or close to it, it should be treated with preservative. Redwood, cypress, and cedar last longer than other woods when in contact with water but even these species require treatment. Pressure-treated lumber, in which the preservative is deeply impregnated, is the best type to use.

If you plan on doing the building work yourself and have ruled out buying a complete prefab package (see page 27), have the local lumber-yard precut or prefabricate all the materials you use for the floor, walls, and roof. There is absolutely no need to follow the expensive, time-consuming procedure of individually measuring, cutting, and nailing each piece of lumber into place.

Paneling techniques have come a long way in the past few years and even the most remote lumberyard is familiar with them. The walls and floor can easily be made up of 4x8' or other convenient-size panels that are sheathed with plywood and ready to fasten into place over the floor framing. The same procedure can be followed with flat roofs. On pitched roofs, prefabricated trusses can be put into place and sheathed with plywood in a single day. The same roof, using conventional construction methods, could take you weeks to complete.

The roof finish can simply be plywood panels, caulked at joints and covered with batten strips or any of the usual roofing materials such as wood shingles, asphalt shingles, or asphalt roll roofing. If asphalt shingles are used, be sure they are the self-sealing or interlocking type which can't easily be blown loose by a strong wind.

If you desire lively colors on the exterior walls, you can reduce your painting and maintenance problems considerably by using colored asbestos cement panels, or plasticcoated colored plywood panels. The easiest and cheapest way to avoid painting problems, is to use roughsawn boards for siding and let them weather in their natural state. If you prefer deeper, rich wood tones with more pronounced grain patterns, you can apply clear or colored stains. These are available commercially or you can (continued on page 80)

General Electric introduces P-7, the oven that cleans itself electrically

it cleans itself electrically.

P-7 comes on the master oven of Americana® range J796 (left) and on Custom range J486 (right). Also on Americana without exhaust hood.

Those illustrations up there are not a trick. You don't use any cleanser. No liquids, no pastes, no fumes, no nothing.

All you do is set your selector dial to "CLEAN," set your thermostat to "CLEAN," and set the timer. Then you latch the oven door. That's all.

P-7 takes over. The same electricity that cooks your food cleans up the spatter and mess completely. Within 2 to 3 hours, all those crusted-on pie juices, cheese spillings, roast drippings just disappear, leaving your oven new-clean. Even in the ridges and between the coils, where you and "easy-cleaning pastes" and stuff could never clean before.

All that's left of the dirt is a trace of fine, white ash on the oven floor, about as much as one flick from a cigarette.

Operating cost? Far less than the ovencleaners you now use.

Incidentally, this wonderful-cooking oven stays extra cool. (And, because it's electric, it's flameless cooking!)

A weekend house is to be free in! It's purely for pleasure-and the way you furnish it can add to, or subtract from, that agreeable objective. The first fun will come in finding the spot itself-near ocean, lake, river, or stream, in the mountains, or on the meadows. The house you findor build-may be a rustic cabin, a glass-walled A-frame, a many-butsmall-roomed old farmhouse, an open-plan brand new prefab, a compact mobile home, or a sprawling McKinley-era mansion. The way you decorate it need have little to do with its architecture, but much to do with your own ideas of what constitutes a vacation-freedom, change, and fun.

Two confluent paths lead to these goals. One is functional-the planning of furnishings so that minimum demands are made on your housekeeping time. The other is emotional-the opportunity to enjoy a complete change of pace from your accustomed decorating climate, to express without rules or inhibitions the experimental or daring side of your personality.

Weekends are for wives, too, though it can seem quite the other way if your functional planning is not careful. You are the only one whose vacation does not remove familiar responsibilities. Your husband is free of his work, your children of their school-but the only thing that's different for you is location! To gain your own vacation rewards, you must see that your decorating and furnishings make the real difference. Unless your husband is the rare one who works at home as artist or writer, or comes home from work to lunch, your winter cooking is only for you and the preschool children until the evening meal. But in the weekend house, everybody's home all day, and it's three meals for a full family plus the inevitable weekend guests who come out of the woodwork as soon as the word gets around that you have a summer place.

Country dirt and city dirt are different in quality, but equal in quantity, so in choosing your floor treatment, think about tracked-in sand or pine needles, wet feet, and dripping bathing suits. Though you may be a wall-to-wall carpet aficionado in town, stick to bare floors in the country. They may be wood (spatter-dash-painted floors are a great camouflage for road dust), or linoleum, cork, or vinyl (encourage a distressed finish and let it stay that way if you would avoid frustrationyou don't go to the country to maintain a high polish on your floors instead of a tan on your face). If you are building from scratch, consider the permanent freedom of natural stone, ceramic tile, or slate floors that wash down to renewed beauty and resist all abuse with their natural hardness. If you must have something on the floor, use the natural sisals, ropes, hemps, and fibers that sweep or shake out clean and refuse to get moldy. On the other hand, in high-fashion circles there's a vogue today for Oriental rugs in country houses, and their owners seem more than compensated for the depreciation and the vacuuming time by the esthetic satisfaction. In any event, the area rug, whether it be an old-fashioned rag rug, a Spanish or Greek handcrafted throw, or a contemporary tufted synthetic, provides color, softness, and texture, and asks for the least attention.

In choosing your furniture, keep a wise eye out for scale and for purpose. Scale because big furniture can cramp unnecessarily the limited space most weekend houses offer and purpose because the more purposes one piece can serve, the fewer pieces you will need. For example, the sofa that sleeps either a guest or a member of the family turns the living room into an extra bedroom. Now that they have been designed for good looks and comfort, too, they're virtually indispensable for a vacation house. Since there is apt to be rather limited storage space (even with minimum linens and wardrobe, you still have to put things out of the way) consider low chests of drawers that can also serve as side or end tables. Comfortable armless chairs can double for dining or pull-up seating when rain or cool evenings keep you indoors. And a generous dining table more than justifies the space it occupies, for it can become a game table for the weather-bound children. One perfect piece that earns its keep is the big basket hamper, pretty and wellventilated and light enough to carry right into the car filled with the weekend's wash to launder at home.

Vacation homes and prefabrication make a good marriage. When your land is remote, pre-assembly or precutting vastly simplifies construction. Just imagine trying to buy all the hundreds of different materials separately in an area where the lumberyard is 15 miles south, the plumbing-supply house is 45 miles north, and other suppliers are scattered all over the map.

Compare this to one or two trailertruck deliveries from a home manufacturer. Included will be every last piece of material and equipment for the house. Moreover, the factorypaneled parts are packed and labeled to make erection easy. It's not quite like an Erector Set but there are strong similarities.

If your vacation lot is in a year-round community where materials are easy to come by, prefabrication still gives you a time advantage. Many models can be closed in during the course of a single day. This means that sidewalls and roofing are secure. And it's not unusual to expect a completed home within four weeks, provided the plan is of average size and you aren't thinking about adding a swimming pool.

Then too, if you're at a loss to decide exactly what floor plan or style suits you best, home manufacturers may have the answer for you. They have a tremendously wide choice of plans and designs for vacation homes. It would be the rare person who couldn't find among all the manufacturers' models at least one floor plan tailored to his specific needs. Exterior styles run the gamut from plain to ornate chalet and from trim contemporary to everyday traditional. On the average, these designs are well executed. But if you're seeking something architecturally distinctive, it's true that your pickings among prefabs will be slim.

Hundreds of plans means hundreds of prices. There is a generous sampling of designs at every price level so you should have a fair choice no matter what your budget. Or, if your family is large and your savings small, ask manufacturers about expansion models—homes that give the basics in comfort, and can be enlarged later when more money is available.

If you've heard that many families save a healthy chunk of money building a prefabricated or precut home by themselves, your source was questionable. Surveys have indicated that only a small fraction of buyers take on the task of erecting the entire house. Also, unfortunately, a number of these homes remain permanently in a semifinished state.

This doesn't mean you can't save some money doing some jobs your-self. By all means appraise your own qualifications and tackle the finishing jobs you feel experienced enough to do. Painting, flooring, and cabinetry are popular do-it-yourself projects, with which some families save enough to cover down payments.

If the idea of buying a panelized or precut home appeals to you, you should know the three types available. They are:

The prefabricated or manufactured home. This is almost always a complete home divided into components small enough for convenient shipment and easy erection. Wall sections are usually 4x8' and are delivered with plates, studs, sheathing, and often interior wallboard attached. Gable ends are generally a single panel and trusses are common for roof support. The equipment packages are delivered with the house so you needn't chase around for bath fixtures, wiring, and so on.

Manufacturers work through franchised dealers or directly from the factory, depending on where you live and the size of the company. A list of home manufacturers specifically producing vacation homes is given at the end of this article. For a more complete list write to the Home Manufacturers Assn., Suite 1117, Barr Building, 910 17th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20206.

Shell home. This is almost always an unfinished home. The basic shell includes a completed exterior with windows and doors in, plus subflooring and 2x4" stud partitions inside. You may buy it this way, or in any stage of completion up to and including the complete house minus paint and utility hookups. In some cases shell homes are panelized, and in others, the parts are just precut.

When only the shell is erected it's up to you to finish the house, either by yourself or by acting as general contractor and hiring others to do the job. (continued on page 80)

If you're building a new vacation house or remodeling the kitchen of your holiday home, it's smart to think ahead carefully about your choice of appliances and equipment. After all, even on a holiday, unless you're fortunate enough to have a maid, it's still up to you to see that the meals are cooked, the house kept clean, and the laundry done.

Basic kitchen planning, featuring marvelously up-to-date timesaving appliances, is as vital in the vacation home as it is in the year-round home. When on a holiday, where you're likely to entertain house guests a great deal (and where, let's face it, it's supposed to be a vacation), you'll want to save as many steps as possible in your daily household rounds.

We have given a great deal of thought to the planning and equipping of the ideal vacation-house kitchen, studying carefully the new appliances and analyzing their workable features for happy leisure living. And we've decided that our ideal vacation-home kitchen might well include the following components. Perhaps, after reading our reasons, you'll want to choose some or all of these features to make your vacation cooking, cleaning, and laundering a whole lot easier.

Designing the kitchen. In designing a vacation home we would place the kitchen so that it is easily accessible to entertaining areas, especially to the pool or patio where many summer snacks and meals are enjoyed. A service window to the outdoor entertaining center is a great idea.

The kitchen should have as much built-in efficiency as possible: appliances which are flush to cabinets or counters (no unnecessary crevices or areas as dust and dirt collectors), plenty of cabinet space for the storage of canned goods and convenience foods, enough counter space to leave out often-used appliances as the blender and toaster, a built-in cutting board so the children can concoct quick sandwiches without worrying about marring the counter, a small snack table or bar for quick meals on the run.

Range. For the major cooking appliance we would choose one of the many gas or electric eye-level ranges that are on the market. These compact ranges have the appearance of being built in without the expense involved with the installation of true built-ins. The eye-level ranges set either on a base cabinet or slide into position. You may desire two ovens if you plan to entertain a great deal or one oven may be plenty if you enjoy cooking outdoors. These ranges are easy to clean because no stooping is required when cleaning them. For a second home you may feel that a stripped model range is a saving. But stop to consider the time saved and the conveniences of the automatic features. With an automatic timer you can swim while dinner is cooking. And keep-warm oven controls will hold food at serving temperatures.

Refrigerator. For vacation-house refrigeration we say the bigger the better. If you haven't the space for a separate refrigerator and freezer, why not choose a combination or one of the two-door vertical or side-by-side storage units where there's lots of room for frozen foods? Plenty of freezer space eliminates those extra trips to the shopping center. The refrigerator-freezer should be self-defrosting. Throughout the summer when the family opens and shuts the door often for cold drinks, fruits, or ice-cream cones, defrosting can be a weekly nuisance. It's well worth the extra expense to eliminate this old routine. Your freezer should also have a roomy ice-cube storage container or space for plenty of ice-cube trays. You'll need loads of those cubes in the good ole hot summertime.

Dishwasher. If you haven't used a dishwasher, why not give one a workout in your vacation home? It's either an automatic dishwasher or a running battle with the family to help clean up after every meal. Why not pick a portable for your vacation home? One that can be rolled to the patio and easily loaded with scraped dinnerware. The prerinse cycle on many models banishes the bother of over-the-sink rinsing.

Disposer. Where the area code allows, an in-the-sink electric disposer or a gas incinerator is great for eliminating garbage thus avoiding pesky odors, flies, ants, and bugs.

Laundry equipment. Dirty laundry is as much a problem here as back home. The washer-dryer combination is the perfect solution to small-space laundry areas. This combination appliance can be placed in a closet, bathroom, or kitchen. Once it's loaded with clothing or linens and the proper controls set, you can breeze off for a swim or out to the tennis courts. When you return, the laundry will be washed and dried—ready to fold and forget.

Cleaning equipment. Selecting cleaning equipment for your second home should depend entirely on the type of floor you have installed. If you have hard surface flooring, a scrubber-polisher combination or a vacuum with a polisher attachment is a sound choice. Rather than going to the expense of a second heavyduty vacuum cleaner or the inconvenience of lugging your vacuum to your vacation home each trip, why not purchase a lightweight portable or electric broom-type cleaner with above-the-floor attachments for your vacation. These are easy to use and store and are very satisfactory for most cleaning jobs.

Small appliances. A large number of small appliances can be a help or a hindrance depending on your entertaining and work habits. If your idea of a vacation is to get away from it all, in a spot where you and your family can have a quiet retreat, the storage and cleaning of small appliances may cause problems. The best plan is to choose the minimum of appliances-a toaster, portable mixer, coffee maker, and iron. However, if you enjoy entertaining, you'll find that small appliances are very important. We can't live without them at home or on vacation. Look over the list to determine your needs.

Large coffee maker—Brews enough coffee for 30 to 40 guests.

Hot tray or hot tray cart—Keeps food warm, right on the table; an aid to any buffet.

Blender—To make frothy drinks, smooth and delicious milk shakes. It's great.

Griddle—Makes it easy to whip up breakfast for a crowd or for concocting delicious hot hors d'oeuvres.

Rotisserie-broiler—Cooks your meat right at the table. In case of rain enjoy outdoor flavor indoors. Table oven—Use it for baking a Table oven—Use it for baking a cake, a pie, or heating rolls. Can be done right at the table.

Fry pan—Pan with high dome lid—will cook everything from roast chickens to casseroles to fried eggs.

Barbecue equipment—Nothing tastes quite so zesty as food cooked outdoors. Many patios boast built-in fireplaces. But if yours doesn't, you can find a wide assortment of wonderful grills and braziers in fascinating styles, colors, and materials. Take your pick from many models priced from $1.98 and up.

So for a happier, more carefree vacation home, do give real thought to your selection of things that can make life smoother and easier. Above all, choose only equipment that's easy to care for and simple to use, and made, thank goodness, with you in mind!

Closing up a vacation house involves a good deal more than turning the key in the door, especially if you intend to leave it for many months.

Of course, that doesn't mean you must do it. A number of families hire a local handy man to close up and keep an eye on their cottage while it's vacant. The fee is usually quite reasonable.

The same service is often made available to you if you've built a vacation home on leased land in a private community, sometimes called a private club (since a clubhouse is generally on the property somewhere).

But even if you have someone else lock up, it's well you know what steps to take. The following suggestions apply to a house that's going to be closed for an extended period of time—from September to June for example.

If the cottage has the slightest chance of being exposed to freezing weather, one of the first jobs is to drain the pipes. To make this easier, you might install a single petcock to drain all the lines at once. Prevent an air lock by opening all the faucets before you start draining. Next, drain the traps and refill them with a nonvolatile oil. If any water should back up in the lines, the oil will mix with it and prevent freezing. You may have been told to drop rock salt down the drains before you close up the house. Don't do it. The resulting brine stimulates electrolytic action that eats at the pipe-particularly if it is copper or brass pipe.

To prevent rats and mice from chewing up the sheets and pillow-cases, store them in a tight wooden or metal box or hang them in a bundle from the rafters. Another possibility is to wrap them in waterproofed paper, but only over winter months since summer heat may cause the asphalt to bleed through the paper onto your bedding.

Close the damper on the fireplace, or better yet, put a tin can over the chimney top and wire it down. In this way, you'll keep out water and nesting birds. Just don't forget to take off the can next time you build a fire. If your cabin has an open soffit, screen it to keep small animals out of the attic.

In country where heavy snowfalls are common, it's wise to brace the roof ridge from inside the cabin with 4x4" posts. This not only increases resistance to snow loads, but can prevent serious damage should a heavy branch fall on the roof.

Clean out the refrigerator completely. Clear the cupboard of all but unopened canned goods (and if you're going to be away very long, take them too).

To keep insects, rodents, and mildew from the food on the shelves, pack everything but unopened bottles, cans, and jars in a tight plywood box with stout hinges, a hasp, and lock. Another good trick: round up a few large shortening cans—the type used by bakeries and restaurants. They're fine for storage because they have good, tight lids.

If your vacation home is built on wood post supports, you can prevent an invasion of rats and mice by wrapping each post for a height of ten inches with sheet metal. The rodent can't get a grip on the metal. An easy way to do this is to remove the bottom of a large empty tin can, cut it open with metal shears, and tack it around the wood support.

Shutter the windows against the possibility of a severe storm, and install wire mesh over small unshuttered windows to prevent the glass from being broken by wind-whipped branches.

Waterproofing the house is also important. A leak could create serious damage over a period of several months to walls, floors, and furniture. Check all the joints around door and window frames. Caulk any cracks you find. Inspect the roof carefully for breaks in the roofing material or missing shingles. For safety's sake, you might apply a fresh coat of asphalt waterproofing to the flashing around vent pipes and the chimney.

Bolt the doors securely. In wild country, you may need to bear-proof your cabin. Bears usually enter through the door, so have a door built of at least 3" timbers, or one lined with heavy-gauge sheet metal.

Don't at any time leave behind a pile of oily rags or other refuse that could catch fire. And drain the gas tanks of any power equipment you keep at the vacation cottage.

Before you leave, make one final check of the house to be sure you haven't overlooked any vital protective measures.

THE END

About the only thing that can come between a Corvair owner and his Corvair is his wife

'64 Corvair Monza Club Coupe

Like most men, the fellow riding the bench has pretty definite opinions on what he buys in the way of neckties, fly rods—and cars. But right now he's having some second thoughts on just who talked whom into buying a new Corvair.

Sure, he had his for-men-only reasons. Output in the standard engine is up nearly 19 per cent this year—to 95 hp. (And in the new Monza Spyder models it's a virile 150 hp.)

He also had a knowledgeable appreciation of Corvair's steering, cornering and rear-engine traction. Things his wife really couldn't be expected to be interested in.

Tidy styling and tasteful (she called them "chic") interiors—that's all that concerned her. Or so our bench warmer thought. Until he began counting his commuter tokens one day.

The point is that the same things he liked about the car—its spirit, the ease with which it turns and fits into parking places, the way it grips on ice, mud and snow—his wife liked too. Maybe even more so.

Matter of fact, it's sometimes occurred to us that if we built a car for women only we probably couldn't make it more to their liking than this one. Couple of us married fellows were talking about that at the bus stop just the other day. . . . Chevrolet Division of General Motors, Detroit, Michigan.

How long has it been since you had an entire day to yourself with no errands to run? No schedule to meet? No promises to keep, duties to fulfill, or commitments other than the whim of the moment? How long since you looked around at new, fresh, colorful things you don't see most of the year? Or left the well-worn paths of routine and habit? If the answer to any of these is, "Too long," you need a vacation.

A vacation can be many things. It can be any season of the year, any part of the world, any activity or lazy lack of activity. It can be short as a weekend or as long as you can make it. It can differ as much as the personalities of the vacationers.

The only thing it truly cannot be is compulsive activity for its own sake. But what precisely is it? A vacation is basically a state of mind and a change of pace. And the proper place for a vacation is any environment conducive to these ends.

A vacation should be more than a forgetting or vacating of usual cares. By placing yourself in a new environment, or by a change of pace away from everyday pressures, you give yourself a perspective on your usual activities. It's a sort of periodic, philosophical checkup on your way of life.

For most of us, work (or earning a living) takes up less and less of our time, allowing more freedom and energy for creative outside interests. Many people today have the means to pursue these interests.

This widespread leisure is a recent trend. For the first time, leisure has become a topic for research.

With more spare time, the ways of using it have become increasingly diverse. Our lives are fragmented in dozens of directions, depleting our energies.

CAN DO FOR YOU

Vacation should be a time to simplify, unify, and forget dull care. False, misdirected leisure can become a burden in itself, empty hours that must be filled with superficial "entertainment."

One means of doing this is with a vacation home. Although often considered a luxury, it could be one of the most beneficial "luxuries" (even therapies) you ever invested in. It can be used anytime, without advance reservations. Impulsive last-minute weekends become joyfully possible. Best of all, the factors affecting your comfort are within your control.

A vacation home usually becomes a family center. Families enjoy the security of returning year after year to their own house in a friendly, familiar neighborhood. They are together to enjoy one another's company. It becomes a refreshing retreat.

The golden rules in a vacation home should be simplicity, informality, the absence of schedules, unclutteredness, and a spacious feeling of stretching your mind as well as your legs. There should be privacy and pleasant contact with nature and the outdoors. And, especially, it should be an easy-to-manage house so the mother of the house can enjoy it.

We believe in the life-giving importance of the vacation house. In this issue, we offer you a portfolio of ideas. One example is an older house excitingly refurbished. The others were built especially for vacations. They were created for various settings, for people of different tastes and needs.

We invite you to study them, to decide what you enjoy most in them. Let yourself dream a little. Conjure up your ideal vacation home, and start planning now.

WHAT A SECOND HOME

FACED HOUSE

Here is a vacation house that neatly solves the old either/or dilemma of whether you should go to the sea or into the forest for rest and rejuvenation. The choice here becomes as simple as deciding whether to walk out the one side of the house onto the beach or out the other into the trees that grow to the edge of the deck. (In fact, in some places they grow through the redwood platform.) The designer took full advantage of the site and chose to orient the house so it capitalizes on all possibilities. There is no main side or front to this house. The symmetry of the plan lends itself to this and permits the direct contrast of light and shade, interior and exterior, beach and forest. The sharply pitched gables over the central section give a heightened sense of shelter and enclosure in an otherwise open structure. Bedrooms, studio, and bath are grouped at the sides of the living area right under the low, flat sections of the roof, which gives them a more cozy feeling. The windows and doors in these side rooms are located so that there is a clear passage of light from a window on one side of the house to the opposite window. The secluded location on Great South Bay, New York, makes draperies on the wide windows unnecessary. By night the house is visible only from the sea. By day trees shade the bright southern exposure. A natural air conditioning effect is produced by opening the wide windows to the cool north breeze or the warm south, as desired. The dramatic architectural design needs only the most restrained interior decorating. Varied wood tones, large open walls, and clerestory windows are dramatically accented by aluminum frames. No paint breaks up the natural materials. The house is mainly redwood. Charcoal stain on the roof frame adds contrast. The roof facing is mahogany; flooring is stained pine. The wood cabinets are designed without hardware. Spot lighting in the beams can be thrown up to light the peaks or turned down into the room.

Photographs show peaked roof and 20x25' living-dining area which faces both forest and beach. Two views at left show trees poking through the deck. Cool blue and green are used with warm wood tones. Open kitchen and free-standing counter are at one end of living area. Franklin stove at other end keeps chill out in cool weather. At right, a view of bar with bath beyond as seen from the kitchen area. Plan shows relationship of open and private areas with deck on both sides. Bedrooms face beach.

ISLAND HOME TAKES FULL ADVANTAGE OF THE OUTDOORS

This carefully planned house proves that your leisure home need not be large to have a feeling of spaciousness. The secret is to put the outdoors to work for you. The designer, Don Page, has used this concept throughout. The site is an area of heavy vegetation and tall trees. Raised three feet off the ground on locust posts, the house skims the surface of surrounding shrubbery and incorporates the trees into the plan. The four wooden decks are a significant part of the house, not merely tacked on as an afterthought; the four courts through the center of the plan separate the sleeping and daytime quarters. Only 40 per cent of the living area is roofed; the rest is wooden platforms or tiny garden islands between sections of the house and decks. The plan packages these gardens, decks, and the six rooms in an area of only 45x60'. The post and beam structural supparts, based on 8'8" modules, run through both the covered and open areas. They give a sense of

The living room, so integrated with the outdoors, needs no contrived interior decoration. White vinyl floor and light cypress walls contribute to the spaciousness. A luxurious orange mohair rug dramatizes the natural background. The owner's collection of contemporary art hangs on the one unbroken wall in the house over a low 14' shelf that serves to display magazines and accessories

The interior seems to open up the minute one steps inside the front door. The lovely woodsy setting can be seen through the glass doors topped by clerestory windows. The fireplace has side vents which heat this part of the house in cold weather. There are also three bottled-gas heaters so the house can be used seven months of the year. Corridor to left of bar leads to sleeping quarters.

The house (far left), in a grove of magnificent holly and pine trees, is approached from the west by a raised walk. Solid wall gives complete privacy. All exterior walls are cedar, the interior cypress. Structural beams are creosoted where exposed and painted to match inside. The complete building occupies about 2480 square feet of which 1100 square feet are enclosed.

The plan fulfills the owners' wish for lots of deck space, openness, and sun, and indicates the perfect balance of the various living areas. Day and night living areas are set apart by four open courts connected in the center of the house.

An expandable sand-

This clean-swept vacation house was built specifically to provide privacy and easy maintenance at minimum expense. The owner-architect Harry Bates likes the feeling of space, light, and simplicity that is achieved in a mere 600 square feet of enclosed area. The rooms are visually extended by the five-foot decks running the full length of the north and south exposures. dune large-scale floor-to-ceiling louvers provide privacy and light control for the glass pavilion walls. A larger deck on the south side faces the ocean. This has since been enclosed with louvers for privacy. walls. A larger deck on the south side faces with louvers for privacy.

> The house is raised four to six feet off the ground on locust posts. The site slopes so that there was space to add a guest room under the house. It has its own entrance, which is reached by walking through a walled garden, and does not disturb the privacy of the main floor. The house was designed so it could be easily expanded. First, the main floor was built as a self-sufficient unit. Then the walled garden was added, the guest room built, and recently the large deck enclosed as an extra living area. Mr. Bates plans to add another wing on the west side in the future. The present bedroom will become a dining room connected by a breezeway to the new living room wing. The present living room will then become a bedroom.

Living room (above) has shades of inexpensive homespun. Kitchen, hidden from living room, is opposite blue wall. Outside view (opposite page) shows deck before it was enclosed with louvers. Interior siding (center) is durable red cypress, also used for louvers. (Bottom) Pleasant places for the eye to roam: along the deck, into the walled garden leading to the guest room, and through the louvers.

IMAGINATION PLUS!

This house is shining proof that the most valuable requisite for a vacation home is imagination. The ideas used in the remodeling of the Stanley Young house can easily be adapted to solve your own problems. There are more ways than one, as the Youngs discovered, to get a new second home. They began with a sound structure (shown above) in a good location near the water on Long Island. It was large enough, it was already landscaped, and most of all, it was there. But it was also in need of paint and repairs, provided no ready access to the outdoors, and had a flabby middle-aged appearance. After carefully analyzing the possibilities, they accepted the challenge and decided what to discard and what to renovate. Without changing the basic structure, they removed many of the attached sheds, converted the little-used screened porches to patios, added another brick patio at the rear of the house, and installed sliding doors to reach it. The interior was opened to light and air by these changes and by removing a partition to enlarge the living room. The owners then furnished the house with bright simplicity.

The informal dining area, below, benefits by reversing the old scheme of dark walls and light painted woodwork. The large stairway window was removed, the walls were redone in white, and the cabinets restored to their natural color. (The Youngs did this last time-consuming job themselves.) The gay bright colors used in decorating contrast pleasingly with the light walls and dark polished floor. The dark stain was selected to disguise a difference in flooring in the adjacent rooms, discovered when the partition was removed. Leopard-skin rug further hides the discrepancy. To turn a supposed flaw into an asset, exercise a little ingenuity.

Harrowing middle stages of remodeling when chaos and doubts settle in are shown at left. But courage and patience, not to mention lots of hard work, resulted in the bright livable rooms seen here. The kitchen was redone with dark stained cabinets, tile floor, and globe lamps The living room below was enlarged by removing partition at fireplace wall. The new sliding glass doors lead to the garden at the rear. A ceramic stove set on a pebble hearth was added. The rooms are decorated with sharp contrasts in style and a minimum of color.

If you've ever stumbled on a wild orchid while rambling through a wood or glimpsed a field of black-eyed Susans through the window of an automobile, you'll probably need little persuasion to attempt to grow these and other wild flowers in your own garden. But if you have never had occasion or opportunity to notice nature's wildlings, our photographs are the next best thing to a walk in the woods, fields, and bogs of America. You'll notice that most of these plants have a delicate, airy beauty quite unlike the studied flamboyance of cultivated plants. And unlike their well-bred counterparts, most wild flowers will not grow in just any good garden soil. Perfectly adapted by nature to their own particular environment, they will most likely die if transplanted carelessly to a foreign one. Before moving a plant from the wild, familiarize yourself with its native habitat and repeat it in your garden. Each of our illustrations is keyed to the natural growing conditions of the plant, with S representing sun, SH—shade, S-SH—semishade, W—wet, AM—average moist, D—dry, AC—acid soil, and N—neutral soil. Time was when gourmets, gracious hostesses, and even our own grandmothers turned up their noses at those lowly peasants—the vegetables. Parsnips, carrots, and peas were just humble side dishes to be carelessly boiled, buttered, tossed into a bowl, and carried to the table in the shadow of the lordly roast.

Now, the tables are turned. Today, hostesses bring on their gleaming, tender, crisp, colorful, flavor-rich vegetables with trumpets and fanfare. Not at all like your great-aunt Hattie who used to boil the living daylights out of every vegetable from bog apples to Brussels sprouts. Then religiously pour all that wonderful vegetable vim-vigor-and-vitality down the drain with the sink water.

Today is a new day. Women have learned the gentle art of undercooking these crisp, good gifts from the earth.

We no longer overbroil, overstew, and ruin proper cooking will do this.

The most common method of cooking vegetables is to boil them. But, oh, how many other ways there are to do it! Fresh vegetables can be prepared with all kinds of creative twists and innovations.

the old wives' tale of adding baking soda to keep vegetables green. It isn't necessary;

With the exception of oven cooking (which we do not recommend for the strong-flavored vegetables), most vegetables can be cooked by any of the methods described on page 72.

A poet must have named the first foam cake "angel food." This floating cumulus cloud of goodness couldn't be better named. No culinary creation is more heavenly, more ecstatically out-of-this-world than this one with its delicate taste and texture.

Ah—"delicate!" There's the scare word—the word that makes some of us women cowards. The actual reason why so many shy away from tackling an angel, chiffon, or sponge—or any kind of foam cake—is that we imagine it takes some mysterious touch of an angel to make these dream cakes come true.

That's nonsense—and the reason we're conducting this cooking class. Once you've mastered the steps we describe here and on our recipe pages, you'll be sure to turn out the perfect foam cake every time.

Cakes are generally classified as either shortening or foam cakes. Shortening cakes always contain fat —be it butter, margarine, or vegetable shortening—and a leavener such as baking powder or baking soda, or both. Foam cakes have eggs as their major ingredient and they depend on the air beaten into the eggs for their leavening. The majority of these cakes, especially the large ones, are baked in ungreased tube pans—ungreased so the delicate airy batter can cling to the pan as it rises. The center tube affords the batter additional support.

Of all the foam cakes, the sponge cakes show most variation. They may be made with egg yolks and egg whites, or with just egg yolks. Some recipes call for hot water, some cold water, some hot milk. The

Other sponge cakes will contain baking powder as a secondary leavener for the heavy egg yolks. But air is still the main leavener. Then we have the butter sponge that contains melted fat. Angel food, made with only the egg whites, is leavened only with air. The chiffon cakes combine some of the techniques of the shortening cakes with those of the sponge and are made with oil.

Now let's consider the eggs—the principal ingredient in foam cakes. Their handling is most important to the success of your cake.

Because we've found that most people use medium eggs, we've based all of our recipes on them. As you read the recipes note that, as well as the number of eggs, there is also a measurement of the amount of unbeaten yolks and whites to be used. If you use smaller eggs, measure them to equal what the recipe calls for. Larger eggs present less of a problem—the small difference will not harm your cake. It will produce one that is slightly higher. Here is our guide for measuring medium-sized eggs:

	Whites	Yolks
3	3/8 cup	1/4 cup
4	1/2 cup	1/3 cup
5	2/₃ cup	3/8 cup
6	3/4 cup	1/2 cup

Take the eggs from the refrigerator and separate them. They separate best when cold. Let them stand at room temperature about an hour before beating them. Remember you must always beat the eggs sufficiently, and when they have warmed this much you will be able to incorporate the maximum amount of air into the yolks and whites.

The next phase in making foam cakes is to learn to combine the beaten egg whites with the other ingredients without stirring out the air. The air you incorporate into the egg whites expands as the cake bakes, giving you a light cake. If you lose that air in the mixing, you will have a compact and heavy cake. To do this properly, we use the technique known as folding to combine the egg whites and other ingredients. This must be done by hand. On page 64 where the recipes begin, there are pictures showing how to fold—study them before you start making your cake.

Besides the leg and the shoulder roasts, you have no doubt seen many other cuts of lamb in the meat case and wondered what they were, where they came from, and how to cook them. The leg itself may be done one of two ways, "Frenched" or American. A Frenched leg of lamb has had the meat trimmed from the end of the leg bone. An American leg is one in which part of the shank bone has been removed to form a pocket. The shank meat is tucked into the pocket and skewered into place.

From the shoulder the butcher also cuts the economical neck slices and stew meat, as well as the arm and blade shoulder chops. Don't overlook these chops—they are less expensive but as flavorful as the more well-known rib and loin chops.

Lamb graces the most formal occasions with the impressive and regal-looking crown roast formed from the cut known as the rack. This cut also provides those ever-so-tasty rib chops.

The popular loin chops with their easily recognizable T-shaped bone, the double loin chop known as the English chop, and the boned and rolled lamb loin roast all come from the loin section.

When the budget is low, count on the breast and shank sections of the lamb for those delectable lamb riblets, lamb shanks, lamb for stews, and ground lamb for patties and loaves. They all can be made into delightful dishes at very little cost.

Whatever cut of lamb you buy, note its appearance. Highquality lamb is firm and fine-textured, varying in color from dark pink to light red. It has a smooth covering of clear pinkishwhite brittle fat over most of the exterior. Over this is a thin paperlike covering called the "fell." This is usually removed from chops before cooking, but it is not necessary to remove it from the leg before roasting. When you leave the fell on the leg, it will hold its shape better, be juicier, and cook faster.

Fresh lamb, just like any other meat, should be stored in the coldest part of the refrigerator. Some meatmen wrap the lamb in specially treated wrappings that preserve the bloom or attractiveness of the meat. These need not be removed before refrigerating. If you have any doubt about the type of wrapper on the lamb, unwrap it and cover it loosely with wax paper. Store ground lamb in the coldest spot. Use it within 24 hours, for its keeping quality is not as great as unground meat.

COOKING LAMB

Lamb is a tender meat and most of the cuts can be cooked by dry heat, that is, roasted or broiled. There are a few less-tender cuts that are cooked by braising or simmering. Whichever method is used, all cuts of lamb should be cooked at low temperatures for best results. These are the rules to remember.

- 1. Cook according to cut.
- 2. Always use low temperatures.
- 3. Avoid overcooking.

There are three basic cooking methods for lamb just as for other meat. Dry heat which includes roasting, broiling, and pan broiling. Moist heat which includes braising and cooking in liquids (as you would do with a stew). Frying which includes pan frying, griddle frying, and in certain recipes, deep-fat frying.

To Roast

Season meat with salt and pepper. (For extra flavor you might rub the outside of the roast with a cut clove of garlic or insert slivers under the skin—be sure to remove them before serving.) Place the roast, fat side up, on a rack in an open roasting pan. Insert meat thermometer so bulb reaches center of meat and does not touch any bone. Do not add water; do not cover. Roast in slow oven (300° F.) until meat thermometer registers 175° F. for medium done lamb or 180° F. for well done.

Cuts to roast: leg, American or Frenched; shoulder—whole, rolled, or cushion; boneless sirloin roast; crown roast; loin roast; boneless loin roast; rib roast; lamb loaf (ground lamb).

To Broil

Set the oven regulator to broiling. Place meat on broiler rack 3 to 4 inches from heat. Broil until top of meat is brown. Season with salt and pepper. Turn meat and broil until it is desired degree of doneness. Season and serve at once.

Cuts to broil: chops—sirloin, loin, English, rib, shoulder, Saratoga; patties (ground lamb); steaks—sirloin, leg; kidneys.

To Panbroil

Place meat in heavy frying pan with no fat or water. Cook, uncovered, over low heat, turning occasionally to insure even cooking. Pour off fat as it accumulates. Brown meat on both sides, but do not overcook. Season and serve at once.

Cuts to panbroil: chops—sirloin, loin, English, rib, shoulder, Saratoga; steaks—leg; patties (ground lamb).

To Pan fry

Season meat and dredge with flour or corn meal, if desired. Brown quickly in a small amount of fat in an uncovered frying pan. Cook at moderate temperature until done, turning occasionally. Remove from pan and serve at once.

Cuts to pan fry: chops—sirloin, loin, English, rib, shoulder, Saratoga; steak—leg; patties (ground lamb); kidneys.

To Braise

Brown meat on all sides in hot fat in Dutch oven or heavy kettle. Season with salt and pepper. Add a small amount of liquid, if necessary; cover pan tightly. Cook at simmering temperature until meat is tender.

Cuts to braise: chops—shoulder; shoulder—rolled; breast—rolled; shank.

To Simmer

For large cuts, place meat in heavy kettle and add water to cover. Season with salt and pepper. Cover and simmer slowly—do not boil. If you wish to add vegetables, put them in long enough before meat is done for them to be cooked.

For stews, cut meat into 1- to 2-inch cubes. Brown on all sides in hot fat, if desired. Season with salt and pepper. Cover meat with water and cover kettle tightly. Cook slowly until meat is tender. Add vegetables just long enough before meat is done for them to be cooked, or add cooked vegetables to hot stew.

STUFFED SHOULDER OF LAMB

Preparation time: 30 min. / Roasting time: 35-40 min. per lb.

3 tbs. butter or margarine; 1 med. onion, chopped (½ c.); 2 tbs. diced green pepper; 2 tbs. diced pimiento; 2 c. fresh bread crumbs; ½ tsp. leaf rosemary, crumbled; ½ tsp. leaf thyme, crumbled; 1 beef bouillon cube; ¾ c. boiling water; 1 boned shoulder of lamb ( $3\frac{1}{2}-4\frac{1}{2}$  lbs.), with pocket; salt and pepper; 4 tbs. flour; ½ tsp. salt; 2 c. hot water; 1 tsp. bottled gravy coloring; 1 c. currant jelly.

Melt butter or margarine in skillet; sauté onion, green pepper until soft. Add pimiento, bread crumbs, rosemary, and thyme. Dissolve bouillon cube in boiling water; add to skillet; mix well. Press filling into pocket in shoulder of lamb; roll up. Tie meat securely with clean white string in several places around roll. Place on rack in open roasting pan, fat side up; sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper. Roast uncovered in slow oven (300° F.) allowing 35 to 40 minutes per pound or until meat thermometer registers 175° F. for medium done, 180° F. for well done. Remove lamb to warm platter; keep warm. Pour off all but 4 tablespoons fat from roasting pan. Place pan over medium heat. Stir in 4 tablespoons flour and salt until it is smooth and just begins to brown. Add hot water and gravy coloring slowly. Cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Add jelly; stir until smooth. Serve hot with lamb. Makes 6 servings.

PAPRIKA LAMB SHANKS

Preparation time: 30 min. / Cooking time: 2-21/2 hrs.

 $\frac{1}{2}$  c. flour; 1 tsp. salt;  $\frac{1}{4}$  tsp. pepper; 4 lamb shanks (about  $\frac{1}{2}$  lbs. ea.); 4 tbs. pure vegetable oil; 4 c. boiling water; 1 envelope ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pkg.) onion-soup mix;  $\frac{1}{3}$  c. flour; 1 tbs. paprika; 1 c. cold water; 1 can (3–4 oz.) mushrooms; 1 c. dairy sour cream.

Put ½ cup flour, salt, and pepper in paper bag. Add shanks; shake until well coated. Heat oil in Dutch oven or heavy kettle; add lamb shanks and brown well on all sides. Add (continued)

Glazed Ham on Parade

Cook ham as directed for type and size. About 1/2 hour before ham is done, remove from oven, score fat, stud with cloves. Then pour Karo All-Purpose Syrup over ham. Continue to bake in 350°F oven, pouring Karo over ham several times more, until it is well glazed. To glaze vegetables: dot cooked, seasoned vegetables with Mazola Margarine in oven proof dish. Pour Karo All-Purpose Syrup over vegetables. Bake in 400°F (hot) oven, basting often, about 15 minutes. Arrange around ham on platter just before serving.

Easter Bonnet Cake

Using your favorite recipe or cake mix bake 2 layers, a 9 inch and an 8 inch. Cool. To make "No-Cook" Marshmallow Frosting: beat 1/4 tsp. salt with 2 egg whites with electric mixer or rotary beater until white and frothy. Gradually beat in 1/4 cup sugar until mixture is smooth and glossy. Beat in 3/4 cup Karo Crystal Clear Syrup, a little at a time; beating to firm peaks. Fold in 1-1/4 tsp. vanilla. Add food coloring to make it a delicate yellow. Frost 9 inch layer; place 8 inch layer on top; frost entire cake. Decorate with real flowers.

Bake a Foam Cake (pictured in color on pages 56 and 57)

The first cake in the family is perhaps the granddaddy of them all—the True Sponge Cake, so called because it depends completely on the air you beat in for its leavening. The same technique shown here will apply to all other foam-type recipes unless otherwise illustrated. This is a truly magnificent recipe and one for your file of classics.

TRUE SPONGE CAKE

1 c. sifted cake flour;  $\frac{1}{4}$  tsp. salt; 6 egg whites  $(\frac{3}{4}$  c.);  $\frac{1}{2}$  c. sugar; 6 egg yolks  $(\frac{3}{8}$  c.);  $\frac{1}{2}$  c. sugar; 1 tsp. lemon rind; 1 tbs. lemon juice. Set oven at slow  $(325^{\circ}$  F.). Sift flour and salt together.

6. Bring the scraper across the bottom of the bowl.

1. Beat 6 egg whites in large bowl until foamy.

7. Move scraper up side of bowl and across top of mixture, bringing some up from bottom. Rotate bowl one-quarter way around. Repeat folding and rotating until ingredients are completely combined.

2. Add ½ cup sugar gradually, beating well after each addition.

 Sift one quarter sifted flour on top of egg mixture. Fold in. Repeat with remaining flour a quarter at a time.

 Continue beating until mixture is glossy and stiff peaks form when beater is lifted out.

9. Pour into ungreased 10x4-inch tube pan. Cut through batter with spatula to prevent air pockets. Bake 55 to 65 minutes or until cake springs back when lightly touched with finger tip.

4. Beat egg yolks, ½ cup sugar, lemon rind and juice in small bowl until thick and light.

 Invert pan on center tube, side ears, or in upside-down funnel. Cool completely.

5. Fold egg-yolk mixture gently into egg-white mixture. Cut down through mixture with rubber scraper on side of bowl away from you.

11. Remove cake from pan.

Insert narrow knife or spatula between cake and pan. Carefully move up and down around outer edge and center tube. Invert pan, tap lightly, lift off pan.

Dust cake with confectioners' sugar, if desired.

Are you sure you heard it cluck?

So "chickeny" it almost clucks. Everything about Lipton Chicken Noodle with Meat says chicken. The wholesome chicken meat, the hearty chicken broth, the heaps of tiny, tender egg noodles. Only one of 12 tempting soups from Lipton that taste like Mother just cooked them.

Over the years, another type of sponge-cake recipe developed. It included baking powder in its ingredients as a secondary leavener. This may have come about because women were never too sure of themselves when they made a true sponge cake and wanted some extra assurance of success. Our version, California Sponge Cake, is rich in sunny citrus flavor, because it contains orange and lemon juice!

CALIFORNIA SPONGE CAKE

 $1\frac{1}{2}$  c. sifted cake flour; 1 tsp. baking powder;  $\frac{1}{2}$  tsp. salt; 6 egg whites  $(\frac{3}{4}$  c.);  $\frac{1}{2}$  tsp. cream of tartar;  $\frac{3}{4}$  c. sugar; 6 egg yolks  $(\frac{3}{8}$  c.);  $\frac{3}{4}$  c. sugar; 1 tbs. grated orange rind;  $\frac{1}{4}$  c. orange juice; 1 tbs. lemon juice.

Set oven at slow (325° F.). Sift together flour, baking powder, and salt. Beat egg whites and cream of tartar until foamy. Add ¾ cup sugar gradually, beating well after each addition. Continue beating until mixture is glossy and stiff peaks form when beater is lifted out. Beat egg yolks and ¾ cup sugar in small bowl until thick and light. Combine orange rind and juice and lemon juice. Add sifted flour mixture alternately with juice mixture to egg-yolk mixture. Fold gently into egg-white mixture until completely blended. Pour into ungreased 10x4-inch tube pan. Cut through with spatula to prevent air pockets. Bake 60 to 65 minutes or until cake springs back when lightly touched with finger. Invert pan and cool cake completely. Remove from pan to wire rack. Frost cooled cake with ORANGE GLAZE: Blend 1 cup sifted confectioners' sugar with 1 tablespoon orange juice; stir until smooth. Spoon over top of cake allowing some to drizzle down sides.

While most sponge cakes are made with both the whites and the yolks of eggs, there is one that uses only egg yolks. It is a perfect way to use leftover egg yolks and we have developed ours using six yolks so it could be a companion to the Baby Angel Cake we will talk about later that is made with six egg whites. This sponge cake is delicious when frosted as we suggest below, but for an extra special occasion, use it as the basis for a heavenly peach or strawberry shortcake.

GOLDEN SPONGE

 $1\frac{1}{2}$  c. sifted cake flour; 2 tsp. baking powder;  $\frac{1}{2}$  tsp. salt; 6 egg yolks ( $\frac{3}{8}$  c.); 1 c. sugar;  $\frac{1}{3}$  c. boiling water;  $1\frac{1}{2}$  tsp. vanilla.

Grease and flour two 8x1½-inch layer-cake pans or 9x5x3-inch loaf pan. Set oven at moderate (350° F.). Sift together flour, baking powder, and salt. Beat egg yolks until thick. Add sugar gradually, beating well after each addition. Continue beating until mixture is very thick. Stir in boiling water and vanilla. Mix in sifted dry ingredients with electric mixer at lowest speed. Turn into prepared pans. Bake 25 minutes for layers, 30 to 35 minutes for loaf or until cake springs back when lightly touched with finger. Remove from pans to wire racks (this cake should not be inverted to cool). Cool completely. Layers can be filled and frosted with packaged cream-style Lemon Frosting Mix or your own favorite frosting.

There are days in every household when the budget just will not stretch to having a fancy or expensive dessert—but everyone votes for cake. The answer? A fluffy sponge cake that requires only three eggs and can be whipped up in minutes. Frosted with a simple boiled frosting, topped with a rich sauce, or even served plain with fruit, it becomes a perfect sweet ending.

FLUFFY SPONGE CAKE

1 c. sifted cake flour; 1 tsp. baking powder; 3 eggs; 1 c. sugar; 1 tsp. lemon juice;  $\frac{1}{3}$  c. hot milk.

Grease and flour 9x9x2-inch cake pan. Set oven at moderate (350° F.). Sift together flour and baking powder. Beat eggs until thick and light. Add sugar gradually, beating well after each addition. Continue beating until mixture is very thick. Add lemon juice and hot milk. Mix in sifted dry ingredients with electric mixer on lowest speed. Turn into prepared pan. Bake 25 to 30 minutes or until cake springs back when touched with finger. Remove from pan to wire rack (this cake should not be inverted to cool). Cool cake completely. Cut into squares to serve. Makes 9 servings.

Who doesn't remember enjoying jellyroll as a child? It was a favorite dessert at supper, and when found tucked in a lunch box it really made that school day something special. Jellyroll, too, is a sponge cake and really quite easy to make. It is unique because it can be made completely with the electric mixer. Whether simply filled with jelly or more elaborately done with ice cream or flavored whipped cream, it is a dessert to impress and delight. It's fun to make. Teach the kiddies to bake this one!

The world's original coffee grinder

Legend has that we owe the discovery of coffee to a little goat. It seems that around 1440 A.D. an Abyssinian goat herder noticed one of his goats getting healthier and happier after crunching berries from kaffia shrubs. So this goat herder tried them himself and lo and behold, coffee was born.

Today, Americans drink an average of 11/2 cups of coffee daily.

But even after centuries and centuries, we're still not getting the best possible cup of coffee at home. So it's about time we did something about it. Right? Right!

First of all, do you grind coffee beans fresh just before brewing? No? That's what we thought. Herein lies the secret to truly good coffee. Nature never intended for the rich, volatile oils, locked in the coffee bean, to evaporate into thin air.

That's where the ingenious Kitchen Aid Electric Coffee Mill comes in. May we strongly urge that you look into this remarkable little machine. It holds over a pound of beans, adjusts to your favorite grind, and all at the flick of a switch. It comes in white or sandalwood. Your dealer should have it.

So for the best possible cup of coffee, take a tip from our friend the goat. Grind your beans fresh!

(P.S. If you happen to be a tea lover, consider it for a gift idea.)

DOREEN'S BIRTHDAY CAKE (ANGEL SPONGE)

 $\frac{1}{2}$  c. sifted cake flour;  $\frac{1}{4}$  c. sugar; 6 egg whites ( $\frac{3}{4}$  c.);  $\frac{3}{4}$  tsp. cream of tartar;  $\frac{1}{2}$  c. sugar;  $\frac{1}{2}$  tsp. almond extract;  $\frac{1}{2}$  c. sifted cake flour; 2 tsp. baking powder; 6 egg yolks ( $\frac{3}{8}$  c.); 1 c. sugar;  $\frac{1}{2}$  c. boiling water; 1 tsp. lemon extract.

Set oven at moderate (350° F.). Sift together 1/2 cup sifted cake flour and 1/4 cup sugar. Beat egg whites and cream of tartar until foamy. Add 1/2 cup sugar gradually, beating well after each addition; add almond extract. Continue beating until mixture is glossy and stiff peaks form when beater is lifted out. Sift flour mixture, one quarter at a time, over egg-white mixture; fold in completely after each addition. Spoon mixture into ungreased 10x4-inch tube pan. Cut through with spatula to prevent air pockets. Sift 11/2 cups sifted cake flour and baking powder together. Beat egg yolks until thick and light. Add 1 cup sugar; beat until very thick. Stir in boiling water and lemon extract. Blend in sifted flour mixture. Spoon over egg-white mixture in tube pan. Bake 50 to 60 minutes or until cake springs back when lightly touched with finger. Remove from oven. Invert pan and cool cake completely. Remove from pan to wire rack. Fold in 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind. Decorate cake with green gumdrop leaves.

One member of the sponge-cake family that may be unfamiliar is the butter sponge. This is a very famous continental cake known as "Génoise." If you were to read a French cookbook you would find it the basis of many exciting and delightful desserts. Once you have learned to make it and discovered how superb a cake it is, we are sure you will be inspired to look up those French recipes. This cake, when made without separating the eggs, is most successfully done with an electric mixer. For those of you who do not own a mixer we have included directions for hand mixing below. Note that the eggs should be warm and you use a warm mixing bowl. This is most important to the end result.

BUTTER SPONGE (Génoise)

1/4 c. butter or margarine; 6 eggs at room temperature; 1 c. sugar; 1 tsp. grated lemon rind; 1 c. sifted cake flour.

Grease and line with wax paper two 9x1½-inch layer-cake pans. Set oven at moderate (350° F.). Melt butter or margarine in small saucepan; cool. Warm bowl of electric mixer. Combine eggs, sugar, and lemon rind in bowl. Beat at highest speed until mixture stands in soft peaks and mixture is tripled in volume. This may take 10 to 15 minutes. Sift flour one quarter at a time over egg mixture; fold in completely after each addition. Fold melted and cooled butter or margarine, a teaspoon at a time, into batter.

Turn into prepared pans. Bake 25 to 30 minutes or until cake springs back when lightly touched with finger. Remove from pans; peel off paper. Cool completely on wire racks. To fill and frost as pictured: Heat ½ cup apricot jam until spreadable. Glaze tops and sides of layers. Sprinkle with 1 cup toasted, sliced almonds. Whip 1 cup heavy cream; reserve ½ cup for garnish. Combine remainder with 1 cup washed, hulled, and halved strawberries. Spread on one layer; top with second layer. Garnish with whipped-cream rosettes and additional strawberries, if desired.

To hand mix: Separate eggs. Beat egg whites until foamy. Add ½ cup sugar gradually, beating well after each addition. Continue beating until mixture is stiff and glossy. Beat egg yolks, ½ cup sugar, and lemon rind until very thick and light. Fold egg yolks into egg whites. Proceed with directions above to finish cake.

The newest member of this family of cakes is the chiffon cake. It is distinguished from all others because it uses oil—and it must be vegetable oil. The cake has many of the qualities of both sponge cakes and butter cakes. Originally it was made with several eggs and had many flavor variations. (Ours is a wonderful chocolate one enriched with a burnt-sugar frosting.) Then, to complete the family, comes a smaller version, called Sunny Chiffon, which uses only two eggs making a delightful layer cake, and so easy to make you'll use the recipe often. (continued)

5 things to do [besides look] when you remodel or add a bathroom ...or visit a model home

1. Pound the tub

Good, solid thud what you get? Fine. That's just what you want—a sturdy cast iron tub deeply layered with enamel to protect against chipping and scratching. The solid thud is as good as a promise that your tub won't rattle like a snare drum when you turn the shower on. Won't flex underfoot when you step in. Will wear like—well, like iron! There's no better buy for your money than a cast iron tub, made by American-Standard.

2. Tap the lavatory

Use your wedding ring—or a coin from your pocket—and listen for a clean, sharp "click." That's the sound of your two best buys in lavatories: solid vitreous china, or thick enamel on rigid cast iron. What makes them an even better buy is luxurious "big-bowl" styling from American-Standard—lavatories with bowl areas really big enough to handle all the jobs you'll bring to them. Like light laundry, hair washing, baby bathing or man-sized splashing. Moral: There's an American-Standard lavatory that will satisfy a family-full of needs—as long as your family needs it!

Flush the toilet

Which way does the water leave the bowl? It should run out at the rear of the bowl-away from you. That's called "reverse-trap" flushing action, and it's the first thing to look for in a good toilet. Toilets with this kind of flushing action have a larger water capacity than cheaper models. This larger water capacity makes the bowl more sanitary in use and easier to keep clean. American-Standard has been making, and improving, better toilets for over 50 years—to give you years of quiet, dependable operation, an end to handle jiggling, running-water waste and expensive repair bills. And our better toilets start at just $3.00 more. Aren't you kind of kidding yourself if you settle for anything less?

4. Count the faucet handles

One-hand control is easier than two—you adjust water temperature and water flow simultaneously. No more faucet fiddling! The soapy water on your hands drips into the bowl itself, not onto the faucet. Even children can work it—and love it. The advantage you can't see, but can count on in American-Standard Push-Pull* faucets, is that there are no washers to drip, to leak, to wear out or to change.

DON'T BUY ONE UNLESS YOU LIKE PEOPLE

This thinly-veiled threat is not to be poohpoohed. Man is by nature a social animal, but it can be overdone. We know of one exasperated gentleman who bought a Conn Organ to indulge his secret yen to make music. Before the instrument had been in his living room one full day he found himself waiting in line to sit at the keyboard. And that was just with his own family. When his friends and neighbors discovered the Conn, the poor fellow had to set up a priority system like the numbers in a butcher shop. So, take heed. If you are going to give serious thought to a Conn Organ, you must first accept the fact that people cannot resist playing it. Then you go joyously on from there! The start is easy. Thanks to Conn's

The start is easy. Thanks to Conn's remarkable new learning method, "Instant Music," you can play any one of 39 popular songs in a matter of minutes! No endless scales and tiresome exercises. If you know your alphabet from "A" to "G," you can play with both keyboards, with exciting band effects, and with foot pedals, too.

You play the way a professional organist does—naturally, with true human expression. No gimmicks, gadgets, pushbuttons, or one-finger chord makers. You are playing on a professional-quality instrument created by C. G. Conn, Ltd., world's largest manufacturer of band instruments. The Conn has such tonal versatility, such tremendous musical potential, that you will never outgrow it, no matter how skilled you become.

There are seven beautifully-crafted models, starting from $995. Your Conn dealer can arrange easy payments. But remember our warning—don't buy one unless you like people! Heat oven to slow (325° F.). Blend hot coffee and cocoa together and set aside to cool. Sift flour, sugar, baking soda, and salt into bowl. Make a well in center and add in order oil, egg yolks, vanilla, and cooled coffee mixture. Beat until smooth. Beat egg whites and cream of tartar in large bowl until very stiff peaks form when beater is lifted out. Pour chocolate mixture gradually over beaten egg whites, gently folding just until blended. Pour into ungreased 10-inch tube pan. Bake 55 minutes. Increase oven heat to moderate (350° F.) and bake 10 to 15 minutes longer, or until cake springs back when lightly touched with finger. Invert pan and cool cake completely. Remove cake from pan to wire rack. To fill and frost as pictured: Split cake carefully into three layers. Melt ½ cup sugar in heavy skillet over low heat until golden amber, stirring constantly. Carefully add ¼ cup boiling water; stir until all sugar is dissolved. Cool. Prepare 2 packages (about 14 oz. each) cream-style vanilla frosting mix with butter or margarine as directed. Beat in sugar mixture and enough lukewarm water to make frosting smooth and creamy. Spread between layers and on top and sides of cake. Melt 2 squares unsweetened chocolate and 1 teaspoon shortening; cool slightly. Carefully pour melted chocolate over top of cake, letting it drizzle down sides.

Grease and flour two 8x1½- or 9x1½-inch layer-cake pans. Heat oven to moderate (350° F.). Sift flour, 1 cup sugar, baking powder, and salt into bowl. Make well in center and add in order oil, ½ cup milk, and vanilla. Beat 1 minute at medium speed on electric mixer or 150 strokes by hand. Add egg yolks and second ½ cup milk. Beat 1 minute more or another 150 strokes. Beat egg whites in large bowl until foamy. Add ½ cup sugar gradually, beating well after each addition. Continue beating until mixture is glossy and stiff peaks form when beater is lifted out. Pour egg-yolk mixture gradually over beaten egg whites, folding just until blended. Pour into prepared pans. Bake 30 to 35 minutes, or until cake springs back when lightly touched with finger. Fill and frost with packaged chocolate-fudge frosting mix, if desired.

Vegetables

Boil (simmer) in a half to one inch of boiling, salted water; cover. Cook over high heat until steam appears, then lower heat and simmer gently until tender. Simmer green vegetables uncovered to retain their bright color. Try them at the crisp, tender stage (slightly undercooked), you may like them even more!

Steam vegetables by placing them in the perforated compartment of a steamer over rapidly boiling water. Cover and steam just until tender.

Oven steam in a covered casserole with a small amount of water. This is particularly good when cooking oven meals. When done in a moderate oven (350° F.) allow the vegetables to cook about three times longer than for boiled vegetables.

Bake vegetables on the oven rack, on a baking sheet, or in a shallow casserole.

Braise vegetables in a covered skillet with about two tablespoons butter, margarine, or drippings and one or two tablespoons water. These are also known as "panned vegetables."

Broil tender, raw vegetables such as tomatoes and mushrooms or use this method to reheat cooked vegetables (first brush with butter or margarine).

Fry vegetables in one of these ways: Sauté in small amount of fat in skillet over medium heat.

Shallow fry in a half to two inches hot fat.

French fry in hot fat deep enough to cover or float vegetables. Cook small amount at a time. Never crowd the pan.

Pressure-cook vegetables to save time. Follow the manufacturer's directions for your pressure cooker.

world. Whether you (continued) use the regular packaged vegetables, those with sauces, those that come in boilable pliofilm bags, or the new combinations of vegetables, the package will have very specific and explicit directions to follow.

Frozen vegetables can be baked in a covered casserole with one to two tablespoons butter or margarine and a quarter teaspoon of salt. The cooking time in a moderate oven (350° F.) varies 40 to 60 minutes according to the vegetables.

COOKING CANNED VEGETABLES

To retain the best fresh flavor of canned vegetables, drain the liquid from the can into a saucepan. Boil it until it is reduced down to one half. Add the vegetables and heat quickly. Do not boil. Season to taste with salt, pepper, and butter or margarine.

ADD A TOUCH OF GLAMOUR TO VEGETABLES

Most frequently vegetables are served buttered but there are so many extra touches to make the vegetable of the day more interesting and glamorous. Seasoning added to melted butter is the simplest, but consider creamed, scalloped, au gratin, and the crumbed vegetable as well as the many sauces that go so well with vegetables. Here are some hints on how to add these touches.

Seasoned Butters: Heat a quarter cup butter or margarine to a golden brown. Add one of the following: one teaspoon celery seeds; one tablespoon horseradish; two tablespoons lemon juice and one teaspoon grated lemon rind; two tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Creamed Vegetables: To two cups cooked vegetables add one cup medium white sauce and reheat. Or place hot vegetables in serving dish and pour hot sauce over. A second, and quick way to cream vegetables is done by heating light cream seasoned with salt, pepper, and butter or margarine then pouring it over the vegetable.

Scalloped Vegetables: Arrange cooked vegetables and white sauce in alternate layers in a casserole. Top with buttered bread crumbs and bake in a moderate oven (350° F.) 20 minutes or until browned.

Vegetables au Gratin: This may be done one of two ways. Layer the vegetables and a cheese sauce in a greased casserole and top with buttered crumbs, or follow the directions for Scalloped Vegetables, sprinkling each layer with cheese.

Vegetables with Crumbs: Cook a half cup dry bread crumbs in a quarter cup butter or margarine until golden brown. Sprinkle over hot cooked vegetable and serve immediately.

Hollandaise Sauce: Stir two egg yolks and three tablespoons lemon juice into small saucepan; add a quarter cup cold butter or margarine. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until butter is melted. Add second quarter cup cold butter or margarine. Continue stirring over low heat until butter is melted and sauce is thickened. Excellent with broccoli, asparagus, artichokes, or spinach.

Drawn-Butter Sauce: Melt two table-spoons butter or margarine in small saucepan. Blend in two tablespoons flour; cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until smooth and bubbly. Remove from heat; stir in one cup water. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until thickened. Stir in a quarter teaspoon salt, dash of pepper, a quarter teaspoon paprika, and one teaspoon Worcestershire sauce. Add one tablespoon butter or margarine cut in small pieces. Remove it from the heat. Serve on carrots, cooked celery, green beans.

Dill Sauce: Heat one cup dairy sour cream, two tablespoons melted butter or margarine, and one teaspoon dry dill weed or two teaspoons chopped fresh dill just until hot; do not boil. Serve on peas, asparagus, broccoli, cauliflower, or green beans.

Almond-Mushroom Topping: Sauté a quarter cup slivered, blanched almonds in one third cup butter or margarine until golden brown; remove. Sauté a quarter pound mushrooms, sliced, in remaining butter or margarine, five minutes or until tender; add almonds. Serve on peas, asparagus, broccoli, cauliflower, or green beans.

Want an excellent accompaniment to roast beef, chicken, or veal? Here's one of our favorites: Combine slightly cooked (about five minutes) frozen, French-style green beans (or you might use canned), water chestnuts, and a medium-white sauce in a casserole. Sprinkle with grated Cheddar cheese and bake in a moderate oven (350° F.) 30 minutes or until it is bubbly. Top with browned slivered or sliced almonds and serve at once.

Another idea for beans? If you like a sweet-sour bacon dressing this is your dish. Heat two cans (one pound each) whole green beans or cook a pound and a half fresh green beans and drain them. Cook a half pound bacon until crisp. Drain off all but a quarter cup drippings. Beat together two eggs, one third cup vinegar, a half cup water, three tablespoons sugar, and a quarter teaspoon salt. Add to a quarter cup drippings in skillet. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly until thickened. Pour over hot beans in serving dish. Crumble bacon and sprinkle over top of beans. Serve at once as a vegetable or chill and serve as a salad with crisp greens.

Carrot sticks and cauliflowerets are well known adornments for the relish or hors d'oeuvre tray. But have you considered tiny whole cooked beets? Use the canned ones and serve them with sour cream dip.

Here is a way to cook asparagus that seems to give it a whole new flavor. Snap off the tough ends and wash the asparagus. Remove all the scales with a sharp knife. Cut the asparagus in very thin, long diagonal slices about one and a half inches long and a quarter inch thick. Put the slices into a fine strainer. Fill a deep saucepan with salted water and bring to boiling. When almost ready to serve, plunge asparagus in the strainer into the boiling water. Cook just two minutes, drain and serve with melted butter and salt and pepper.

Did you know you can bake beets just as you do potatoes? They will take about an hour in a slow oven (325° F.). The time will, of course, depend on the size of the beets. Peel or scrape off the skins while they're hot and serve them with some sour cream and fresh dill.

Serve Lemon Glazed Carrots for a party. Melt a half cup butter or margarine in skillet. Blend in a half cup sugar and one teaspoon grated lemon rind. Add four cups cooked carrot sticks. Simmer gently, turning occasionally, until carrots are glazed.

If carrots are not a favorite in your house, combine them with other vegetables. They add color and flavor and are delicious when added to creamed celery. Try them grated in chicken salad, diced in cole slaw or potato salad.

Stuffed summer squash will add a new touch to your menus. Allow one squash per person. Cut them in half lengthwise, scoop out the center portions and parboil the remaining shells. Combine the scooped-out squash with your favorite bread stuffing and fill the shells. Arrange in a shallow baking dish, sprinkle the tops with melted butter or margarine, and bake in a moderate oven (350° F.) until heated through. For a variation of this recipe, you can also sprinkle the squash with grated Parmesan cheese before baking.

All onions aren't French fried. The French have a wonderful way of cooking small white onions called Brown Braised Onions. They're delicious as they are, served in combination with other vegetables, or added to a stew. Heat one and a half tablespoons butter or margarine and one and a half tablespoons olive oil in a large skillet until bubbling. Add 18 to 24 peeled small white onions. Cook over moderate heat about 10 minutes. Keep rolling the onions in the fat so they will brown as evenly as possible. Take care not to break the skins. Add a half cup beef bouillon or consommé or white wine, a half teaspoon salt, an eighth teaspoon pepper, and an herb bouquet made of a few parsley sprigs, a small bay leaf, and a quarter teaspoon leaf thyme tied in a piece of cheesecloth. Cover the skillet and simmer slowly over low heat 40 to 50 minutes or until the onions are tender but still hold their shape and the liquid has been completely absorbed.

VIEW

decorated by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Carlton of Carmel, California, is well planned for their needs and designed for the life they live with their two teen-age children.

The kitchen is part of a large room which also serves as the family dining room. The hallway to the adjacent family room passes by the kitchen entrance. A long cabinet serving as a buffet and storage area for dinnerware forms a low wall divider between the dining room and hall. Rather than close off the eating area with a door, the family chose to screen the dining table from the kitchen with the built-in surface cooking top and an electronic oven. Grease and cooking odors are exhausted through the attractive fan suspended from the ceiling.

Because the house is above the Pacific, the Carltons have eliminated any wall cabinets over the sink and preparation area that might mar the breath-taking view. Instead they have built a complete L-shaped storage center on an inside wall. Here a side-by-side refrigeratorfreezer combination and built-in electric oven are surrounded by cabinets for groceries and cleaning supplies. A pulldown desk cabinet was installed next to the oven and is used as a serving and storage bar for after-school or midnight snacks. Before installation, each cabinet was carefully measured for its exact needs and use. What could have been a dead corner was fitted for a small builtin planning desk and telephone.

All cabinets are at a comfortable finger-tip level for Mrs. Carlton and designed for her height. To achieve this, you'll notice a variety of toe-space heights under the cabinets and that some are on legs, while others rest almost on the floor. The dishwasher is raised above its normal 36" height to eliminate bending. Also take note of the sliding-shelf dish storage cabinet efficiently located adjacent to the dishwasher and built to the same convenient height as the dishwasher.

In planning this kitchen the Carltons didn't miss a single design technique in making the room functional. When preparing meals, Mrs. Carlton did not want to have to reach for any item she uses frequently, thus narrow glass-enclosed cabinets were installed beneath the windows to hold a variety of spices, staples, and condiments.

Brightly decorated in a gay yellow, this kitchen fulfills the desires of a happy family who understood their own special needs and were able to achieve comfort and real convenience in this kitchen.

POTATOES

Throw out the potato peeler-for packaged potatoes have proved to be a boon to the busy homemaker and foolproof (if you follow the simple directions). Mashed potatoes, which are now lump free, were used in olden days to keep cakes and breads moist and fresh for days. In Ireland a favorite food is Colcannon, mashed potatoes mixed with cooked vegetables or meat. Scalloped potatoes used to take 11/2 to 2 hours, but now packaged potatoes cut the time to about

Design and Material Selection

save money by mixing your own stain based on a new formula developed by the U.S. Forest Products Laboratory, in Madison, Wisconsin. This agency will furnish you with the formula and mixing instructions free of charge.

Inside the house, your choice of materials is dictated to a large extent by the condition of your pocketbook. Plasterboard, hardboard, or wood pulp boards are very economical but they require taping or batten strips at joints and frequent painting in order to look fresh and clean. Prefinished plywood panels are more expensive but they have many advantages. They are available in a variety of glamorous woodgrain patterns, textures, and colors, they can be applied easily to the framing and their joints are hidden by the pattern, requiring no further treatment. They also come with a protective plastic coating, so that nothing more than an occasional dusting will keep them looking new.

The selection of flooring material is usually a compromise, since all floor surfaces require some maintenance such as occasional repair, cleaning, and waxing. Asphalt tile and vinylasbestos tile are very suitable because of their low cost and resistance to moisture. They can be used safely on concrete slab floors on or below gradean application inadvisable with other types of flooring, except ceramic tile. Ceramic tile though highest in cost is the easiest to maintain. Rubber, vinyl, wood, and cork tiles are intermediate in cost but they are quieter and generally very attractive.

There are hundreds of variations in the exterior and interior building materials offered by manufacturers. Although a particular brand of product may strike your fancy and warrant paying a higher price or sacrificing some other advantage, don't sacrifice water-resistant or waterproof qualities. Moisture and water are the most frequent causes of vacation-house damage and deterioration. (See Off-Season Care, page 30.) Let this be the single most important factor in determining the materials you select.

The best way to become familiar with all the design possibilities is to go through the brochures and booklets offered free by many manufacturers and building-material associations. You will find these full of ideas, plans, and suggestions for designing your vacation house. The following is a brief list of sources for vacation-home plans and designs.

Rising School Taxes

wall-to-wall carpeting in a new junior high school. Hardly anyone questioned the decision; the school board had obviously gone too far. Yet longterm tests in a New York and Michigan school indicate that, all factors considered, carpeting may cost no more than resilient flooring and probably contributes to the educational program by muffling noise and making schools more attractive to students.

Even art, such as murals and sculpture, has a place in the school building if it is not overdone. For instance, the New York City board of education recently announced that it was tired of schools that looked like bleak "spaghetti factories" and that henceforth several thousands of dollars would be spent on art works for new schools in order to "bring beauty into the lives of pupils."

However, for every school-building frill that makes sense there is at least one that doesn't. Any school board which has permitted many of the latter kind to get beyond the drawing-board stage should be questioned closely the next time it sets out to build a school.

Concentrate on reducing maintenance in the schools. Maintenance costs run high—approximately $12 per pupil per year (3.5 per cent of the average school's total net current expenditures). "We found years ago that we saved money by covering walls with expensive tough plastic fabric instead of paint," George Hayward, assistant superintendent in East Orange, says. "Now we're looking into better materials that may cost even more to install but will cut maintenance that much more."

Let your plans out for bid when contractors are not busy and money is not tight. It may even pay to delay the building project several months or a year (you can do this if you've planned ahead) if the result is a lower bid, a fractional saving in interest.

Let a single contract to the rightsize contractor. This isn't always possible because some states require schools to let separate contracts for construction, electrical work, plumbing, etc. But there is evidence that a single contract saves money. And to save more money, let the contract at one time (not split into smaller parts spread out over a couple of years) to a contractor who is not too big for the job.

Are your schools being built for double-duty?

Most schools are in actual session 1000 to 1500 hours a year. This means that a school which is built for use only as a school stands idle roughly 85 per cent of the time. Yet it may be the most expensive building in your community.

Is this sensible? More and more communities are deciding it is not.

One trend is to design schools so that they can be used after school hours for other community activities. For instance, the new Rich Township High School in Olympia Fields, Illinois, was specifically planned to be used by the whole community for evening meetings, lectures, theatrical productions, and adult athletics.

Another trend, stemming from the growing belief that the school day and school year are not long enough for us to do the best job of educating our youngsters, is to design schools for educational use in the evenings and summer. Among other things, this may mean air conditioning them. Surprisingly, it is possible to do this at no extra cost. In fact, the square foot cost of the new McPherson, Kansas, high school, with complete yearround air conditioning, was 15 per cent less than the average cost of 22 uncooled schools built at the same time in the same region.

Can the credit rating of your town be improved?

Portland, Oregon, is the outstanding example of a community that builds schools on a pay-as-you-go basis. Most other communities find it necessary to borrow money by selling bonds. This is an expensive proposition for taxpayers, since the interest on the bonds can add hundreds of thousands of dollars to the cost.

What can be done to reduce the interest? One thing is to insist that your school board employ a professional bond consultant when it comes time to market a new issue. Another thing you can do is improve your town's Moody rating.

This rating is the Moody's Investors Services' estimate of a community's credit standing. Towns are rated from Aaa (high) to Ba (low). The difference in the interest paid by toprated and low-rated communities is substantial. For example, if an Aaa community with a 3 per cent interest rate borrows $1,000,000 for 20 years, it pays a total interest of $315,000. A Ba town with a 4 per cent interest rate, on the other hand, pays $420,000.

Moody ratings are based on various factors which boil down to the question of how well a community conducts its affairs. In the final analysis, the answer depends on you and your fellow voters.

Should that old school building be abandoned?

This question can precipitate a battle royal. A clear-cut answer is difficult. But consider these points:

- 1. If a school building can no longer accommodate all students it needs to be replaced. Sometimes, however, it can be enlarged.
- 2. Any teacher does a little better in a bright, efficient new building than in an old one.
- 3. But children can get an excellent education in a decrepit building if they have good teachers. (In other words, teachers are more important than buildings.)
- 4. Remodeling an old school is difficult and costly and, if the work continues into the school year, the noise and mess severely hamper the educational process.
- 5. You only cheat your children if you tailor your educational program, not to their needs, but to fit into an old inefficient building.
- 6. The decision about whether to abandon an old school or to remodel it should be made by your fire department, an architect and engineer not regularly employed by the school system, and the board of education and superintendent. Only expert opinion should be solicited.

Can school costs be reduced by pooled purchasing?

The answer is yes. In many towns, supplies used by both the schools and other government departments are purchased through a central office. Now several school districts in California are co-operating in much the same way to cut building costs. By joint purchasing as well as by joint planning and the use of standardized, modular components, they are saving up to 20 per cent per school.

"But there's a lot of room for improvement in this whole co-operative buying area," one school superintendent says.

Can you hold down school taxes by encouraging the establishment of new industries and new private and parochial schools in your community? Many communities answered this question long ago with a resounding yes. But if you live in one of those which are not so sure, you might reconsider the facts. They are actually quite simple.

New industries and new private and parochial schools do create some problems. But industries usually absorb such a large part of the tax load (without adding proportionally to town costs) that rates and assessments need not be changed for years. And new nonpublic schools help to hold down school costs in varying degrees by siphoning students out of the public schools.

Are renters paying their share of your school costs?

In 1960 in Mamaroneck, New York, it was found that while a new garden apartment was paying a school tax of $42,415, the actual cost of educating the children in the apartment was $107,800. Who was paying the difference? Other property owners.

Undoubtedly this is happening in many other communities. But don't jump to conclusions about your own town. Sometimes most of the apartments in a community are occupied by older families who, because they do not have (continued)

Is your property tax administered properly?

The chances are that it is not. As a result, the tax load may not be fairly distributed among property owners, the community may not be collecting all the taxes it can.

If this suspicion is worth investigating, look for the following problems: Assessments are not uniform. Assessments are not kept up to date. Properties which should not be exempt from taxation are. The entire tax that is levied is not collected. Your assessor lacks training and experience for his job. You have an inefficient board of assessors instead of a single assessor with or without assistants.

How much are YOU adding to school costs?

Several years ago when a proposition to acquire a site for a second high school was submitted to voters in New Trier Township, Illinois, it was rejected by almost a two-to-one vote. A year later, when the proposition was resubmitted, the voters reversed themselves exactly. But the 12-month delay had cost the community $850,000, for in that interval the cost of the site had nearly doubled.

This is not an isolated case.

American property owners yearly cost themselves millions of dollars in higher school costs. As in New Trier, they do this by failing to face facts and support well-laid plans of local school authorities. They do it also by demanding that schools do things which contribute very little to better education but much to personal satisfaction.

For instance, when a new school is built in the north end of town do you insist that the old school your children attend in the south be remodeled or replaced?

Do you demand bus service for children within easy walking distance of school?

Do you scream to heaven when someone suggests (as New York City's new superintendent of education has) that it is not the duty of high schools to teach teen-agers to drive a car?

Let's be honest with ourselves.

If our school taxes are to be kept under control, we who are taxpayers and parents must first stop contributing to higher school costs ourselves. When we do we shall be in a far better position to get school and other town officials to enthusiastically support and institute other money-saving efforts.

Wild Flowers

When you've decided on the plants to include in your wild garden, success will depend on your creating a facsimile of the plant's original environment. Some plants, such as arbutus and pink lady's slipper, are difficult even for experienced wild-flower gardeners and should not be attempted. Most of the others, however, are relatively easy and when given suitable sun, soil, and drainage, will make themselves at home, spread out, and demand little further attention.

There are a number of reputable nurseries that specialize in wild flowers and collect and propagate wild species. They can give you valuable planting advice in addition to providing healthy stock that's appropriate to your area. If you wish to dig your own plants, you will have to secure the permission of the property owner before attempting to move plants from his land. Many states have conservation laws which prohibit the digging of certain species. Despite the statutes, however, if any wild flowers are in danger of eradication by builders, they can be moved for the sake of preservation.

Some wild plants can be transplanted in early spring just before or even during their flowering. Be sure to dig them with plenty of the soil they've been growing in. For mass plantings, wait until late summer when corms or flowering crowns can be handled like dormant bulbs.

When preparing soil for wild plants, avoid fresh manure and chemical fertilizers. Dig peatmoss and leafmold into the top 10 or 12 inches of soil for friability. Depending on the drainage requirements of the plant, loosen the soil with clean sand.

Plants that are at home in shaded woodlands will often solve the problem of groundcover under lawn trees or on the sunless side of a house. Moisture should be adequate, but don't try to grow woodland plants under dripping eaves.

Dry soils are well-drained soils, and those environments encourage such brilliant little wayside natives as dwarf iris, birdsfoot violet, and the downy pasqueflower. They and others keyed D are suitable for rock gardens, on natural or artificial outcrops, or on well-drained slopes. They're probably perfect for those "impossible" bare spots where grass won't grow.

When planning a wild garden, take foliage as well as flowers into consideration. Some leaves, for example those of hepatica and pyrola, will survive the winter while others (Virginia bluebell, Dutchman's breeches, and marsh marigold) die back shortly after the blooms fade. Mayapple foliage and the canopies of jack-inthe-pulpits stand until late summer over the ripening fruits. To guide you in planning borders or walks, we give average maximum heights of flowers or foliage (whichever grows taller) in the planting key. The END

IN YOUR GARDEN

Time to prune and fertilize; azalea pests; garden vegetables

In the light of the unusually severe winters of the past two years, be wary of vague garden advertising. Don't be misled by the term "suitable" when buying plants. It does not necessarily mean that a plant is adapted to or hardy in your area.

Prune winter-damaged stems and branches now; give trees and shrubs their first application of fertilizer as they begin new growth. We have had good results with the newer fertilizer mixtures containing slow-release nitrogen. One of these is 12-6-6 with 70 per cent organic nitrogen. Similar formulations are available and are equally good. Feed again in late June to mid-July.

Although container-grown nursery stock can be planted the year round, in many areas the best selection of plant materials is available in the spring. Remove the container before planting and gently loosen the root ball if it's tight and compacted.

Check rose plants now and prune dead or diseased wood. Remove weak plants and replace them with container-grown roses. You should begin pest and disease control this month. Phaltan, captan, fermate, and dithane are all good controls for black spot. For powdery mildew, try mildex or karathane. Fungicides should be applied every seven to ten days, with more frequent applications during rainy periods. To control insect pests on roses, use DDT or malathion. Roses are heavy feeders, so begin monthly applications of a complete fertilizer such as 10-6-4 or 10-6-6 and continue through August.

Daffodils are just about finished for this season, but don't cut off the foliage—it's necessary for good development of the bulbs next year. Later in the month you can roll and tie the leaves and set out annuals to camouflage the bulb beds.

Most annuals and perennials can still be started from seed, but for quicker blooms purchase potted transplants to set out. Before planting, incorporate peatmoss or other organic material and fertilizer in the soil.

Portulaca, or moss rose, is an ideal bedding plant and is excellent for use as a groundcover in the rose bed. You can sow the seeds directly in the bed. Choose individual colors that will complement your roses.

In many parts of the Southeast, azalea petal blight is a serious disease. It occurs during periods of high humidity and high temperatures, but does not affect the foliage of the plant. Apply a fungicide—containing dithane or Actidione RZ—as a fine mist to the flowers and buds of the plant. Use a fine mist so the fungicide will not spot the flowers.

One of the main insect pests of azaleas is lacebug. After your plants have finished flowering, start spraying the foliage with lindane, malathion, or zectran. Zectran will require only one application, due to its systemic effect, but lindane and malathion will require repeated applications every ten days to two weeks.

Native azaleas, or wild honeysuckle, are often collected while they are in flower. Be sure to secure permission of the property owner before gathering any plants. Cut them back six to eight inches from the ground and grow them for one season in a soil mixture of peat and humus, before planting them in their permanent position in the garden.

It's too late to try many of the cold crops in the vegetable garden. Keep seeds for them until the fall. In many areas, however, you can plant warm crops such as tomatoes and corn this month. Here are some varieties that we have had success with: tomatoes 'Big Boy,' 'Marion,' 'Early Giant,' and 'Sun Ray,' a yellow. For summer squash try 'Early Golden Summer Crookneck,' and 'Grayzini.'

Good sweet corn varieties are 'Golden Security,' 'Aristigold Bantam,' 'Golden Cross Bantam,' and 'Illini Chief Supersweet.' Two good bush beans are 'Extender' and 'Bountiful.' 'Kentucky Wonder' and 'Stringless Blue Lake' are good pole beans. 'Buttergreen' and 'Henderson's Bush' are fine bush lima beans.

Good Swiss chard varieties are 'Lucullus,' 'Fordhook Giant,' and 'Rhubarb.' 'Burpee Hybrid' and 'Black Beauty' are eggplant varieties you should try. 'Emerald' and 'Clemson Spineless' okra, and 'Delaware Belle' and 'Keystone Resistant Giant' bell peppers are also excellent.

A CARPORT THAT HAS EVERYTHING

Dr. and Mrs. William Harlow of Springfield, Missouri, wanted more than just shelter for their car when they planned this carport addition to their house. It also had to accommodate the family's many outdoor interests. The final result was an outdoor activity center that is large enough for everything, including the car.

Twenty-one feet of storage closet and a greenhouse line the outside wall of this spacious carport. In the humidity-controlled greenhouse, Mrs. Harlow revives house plants and propagates seedlings for transplanting into border beds. Overhead fluorescent lighting augments the natural sunlight that streams in through the south and east windows. The brick barbecue on the inner wall is Dr. Harlow's domain. He loves to charcoal broil the family steaks—rain or shine, all the year round.

In the summer, the carport becomes a shaded breezeway that's wonderful for outdoor dining or for entertaining loads of friends. The Harlows' teenage son often appropriates the entire sheltered area for boy scout meetings and square dances.

An indication of how useful this carport has become in the life of the Harlow family is that the car almost always ends up standing in the driveway.

Decorating for Carefree Living

Perhaps the greatest indoor joy of a weekend house is the fireplace. Now, even though the house you buy may not have had one originally, there are wonderful self-contained, free-standing fireplaces that require no more structural work than an opening for a chimney pipe. Compact and handsomely modern in design, these small fireplaces bring welcome warmth on a chilly evening, let you pop corn, toast marshmallows, and generally enjoy the wonderful satisfaction of the log on the hearth

Don't succumb to the temptation of letting the vacation house become a dumping ground for the outworn. Not only will the springless sofa, the bumpy mattress, the sagging chair make you physically uncomfortable, but the refreshment which is the purpose of a weekend house will be diminished if your escape surroundings are a dismal hodgepodge. You can live as casually as you choose, yet still have around you comfort and color without unreasonable cost.

Try for an effect of coolness when you select your country-house colors. And do select them-don't let them just happen. Paint and fabric are very inexpensive color coordinators and make it possible to bring together harmoniously the redone and the brand new. You may approach the cool effect from two extremes-suggestively using the cool colors (greens, blues) or bouncing the heat off the hot colors (oranges, reds) as the hotcountry people do. If your vacation house is exposed and treeless, remember the Greek island trick of white, white, white, to deflect the sun's rays, or the cavelike interior darkness in Mexican houses to retreat from the sun's heat.

Of one thing you may feel confident-there are no limitations whatsoever on your color choices as far as upkeep is concerned. The wonderful world of chemistry has opened the entire spectrum of color and a wide range of nature's designs in its plastic fabrics and plastic laminates, for upholstery or for surfaces, all resistant to stain or spill, all obedient to the moistened sponge. You may treat your windows with anything from a simple decorative roller shade that holds off the early morning sun to a swagged and rippling sheer that lets it in. The roller shade can be wiped down of grease or dust, the sheer can be machine washed and drip dried, and both are fade-proof.

Because you're in your vacation house only days at a time, here is where you can try experiments with color and design or switch your decorating personality completely. Forget about safe decorating rules and let your imagination go, go, go. Suppose your winter residence is an Early American or 18th-century home, carefully furnished with all the correct fabrics, furniture, and accessories of the period-restful, admirable, and a proud accomplishment of taste and selectivity. But the vivid colors, clean lines, and light look of contemporary have always lingered in the back of your mind as something you would like to try-if only you could figure out how to live with it. Or perhaps the playful curves, lively designs, convoluted turnings of the Mediterranean influence have appealed to you but made you wonder whether it might not be just a bit too lively to have around all the time. Your weekend house is the perfect place for such exploring. There's nothing to stop you from indulging a weakness for Victoriana in the glass-walled A-frame, or from creating a spare, Mondrianlike composition of balanced color planes and geometric furniture lines in the spacious rooms of the McKinley mansion. The rules are off and anything goes that adds to the fun. What a pleasure to express an entirely different aspect of your taste-and how real and meaningful a change for you.

Weather permitting, you'll probably be outside your house most of the time, but be sure to make the inside of it an equally pleasant part of your vacation!

Are you being deceived by a slight drip of water from a plumbing fixture in your house? The answer is "yes" if you're unaware that even the slightest faucet leak of 90 drops per minute adds up to 310 gallons of water wasted every month. A leaking toilet flush tank can waste five or ten times this amount. When you consider the cost of water such leaks are expensive.

You might be further deceived by the thought that fixing these leaks requires the services of an expensive plumber. Actually, it can be an easy do-it-yourself job requiring no special skill. The procedures for repairing faucets and flush tanks, the chief offenders, are explained below.

FAUCET LEAKS

Most homes are equipped with socalled compression-type faucets having separate controls for hot and cold water. Although the faucet styles vary from manufacturer to manufacturer, basically they all operate in the same manner. A typical faucet is shown in the cutaway diagram.

Water coming through the faucet seat is controlled by a resilient washer which is forced down against the seat to restrict the flow. The washer is attached to the same stem as the faucet handle, so that turning the handle moves the washer up or down with respect to the seat opening.

The purpose of the packing around the upper part of the stem is to prevent water from flowing into the top section and leaking out around the handle. On some newer types of faucets, a rubber O ring around the stem takes the place of the packing; on some models the bonnet is located inside a cup-shaped handle. One recent innovation is the single-handle faucet which controls both hot and cold water. This consists of a complex gear and pin arrangement that makes repairs difficult. Only an experienced plumber should work on this type.

Before you start removing parts of the faucet, determine the area of leakage. If the faucet leaks through the spout, the washer or faucet seat is at fault. If the leak is around the bonnet, fixture. If there is no shut-off valve there, the main water-supply valve must be closed. Now you're ready to disassemble the faucet. Remove the screw or knurled nut that holds the handle to the stem of the faucet and lift off the handle. Next, remove the bonnet with an open-end wrench or a monkey wrench. If the bonnet is chrome plated, wrap it with tape to prevent marring. Place the handle back on the stem and twist the stem out of its seat.

STOP

THAT COSTLY DRIP!

The washer is located on the bottom of the stem. Remove the screw that holds it and discard both. Replace these with a new washer and screw, but be sure they are the same size as the old parts.

A roughened washer seat can chew up a new washer and cause the leak to recur soon after a repair is made, so check the seat for smoothness. If it's roughened it must be dressed or replaced depending upon the type of faucet you have.

Most good-quality faucets contain removable seats. If the washer seat is slotted it can be removed. Replace it with a new seat, which you can obtain at a hardware or plumbing supply store.

If the seat is not replaceable, remove the burrs and rough spots from it with a seat dressing tool which you can buy at a hardware store for about $1. The knurled end of this tool is inserted into the faucet in contact with the seat and then it is twisted to grind this surface smooth.

BONNET DRIPS

Before disassembling the unit, tighten the bonnet with a wrench. If the drip persists, the packing in the bonnet has probably worn down and is preventing good compression. Shut or in a kitchen faucet around the base of the swing spout, the packing or the O ring may need replacement.

SPOUT DRIPS

First, shut off the water supply by closing the valve underneath the off the water and remove the faucet handle and bonnet, then pry out the friction washer. The washer is metal and seldom goes bad. However, if it looks worn, replace it.

The packing is located beneath the friction washer. Pry it from the bonnet. New packing comes in two forms, molded and cord-type. Molded packing is made in sizes to fit any bonnet and is easier to work with. You simply place it inside the bonnet, put the friction washer over it, and press the friction washer with your fingers to tightly seat the packing.

Cord-type packing is less expensive than the molded packing. If you use this, remove the stem from the faucet and place the friction washer on the stem against the stem threads. Wrap the packing around the stem in a clockwise direction up from the washer, building the packing up in even turns. Don't use too much packing since it can hinder the upward movement of the stem.

Put the bonnet over the stem and tightly squeeze bonnet and stem together with your fingers until two threads are visible in the bonnet. This compresses the packing. The stem and bonnet may then be put back into the faucet.

If you're repairing a swing spout, before removing the spout try tightening the large nut on its base. If the leak persists, a worn O ring or packing inside the spout is allowing water to escape. Unscrew the large knurled nut and take the spout from its position.

If there's an O ring in the spout, pry it off and insert a new one the same size. If there's packing instead, remove it and wrap a new length around the spout base. Insert the nozzle back into position and tighten down on the knurled nut, to compress the packing and seal the joint.

TOILET FLUSH-TANK LEAKS

There are only two places in a flush tank where a leak can occur: at the flush (outlet) valve or at the inlet valve.

The working parts of a toilet tank: 1. flush valve hole, 2. flush valve hole seat, 3. flush ball, 4. connecting rod, 5. connecting linkage, 6. handle linkage, 7. handle, 8. guide arm, 9. overflow tube, 10. float rod, 11. float, 12. valve screw, 13. valve plunger.

First you must determine the precise location of the leak.

To do this, take off the tank's cover and look at the water level. If it is low, it's almost certain that water is flowing into the toilet bowl because of an improperly closing flush valve. If the level is too high, water is flowing out of overflow pipe because valve isn't closing. A leak at the flush valve can be caused by a damaged flush ball, corrosion or dirt on the valve seat, or damaged linkage. Shut off the water supply and flush the toilet, emptying the tank.

On the bottom of the tank you will see a black rubber ball (3) that fits over a hole (1) which is the flush valve hole. Remove this ball from its connecting rod. If it's worn, rotted, or out of shape, water could be getting past it and dripping through the flush valve hole. Replace the flush ball if it's damaged.

Check the flush valve hole seat (2) for dirt, scale, and rough spots. Foreign material could be preventing the flush ball from seating itself over the valve hole. Smooth the seat by (continued)

The last cause of flush valve leakage is the linkage extending from the flushing handle to the flush ball. Test its operation by holding the handle down in the open position (the flush ball is off its seat) and then releasing it to a closed position. The flush ball should drop squarely and firmly into the valve hole seat.

If not, check the lower rod (4), the one attached to the flush ball. It's held in place by a metal guide arm (8) which is connected to the overflow pipe (9). If this guide arm is loose, it could have turned out of alignment, which will prevent the flush ball from seating itself squarely on the valve hole seat. Make sure the guide arm is directly over the valve hole seat and is tightly attached to the overflow pipe.

A leak at the inlet valve is caused by a bent float rod (10), a damaged float (11), a worn valve washer, or a roughened valve seat.

Inspect the float rod first. This is the rod that has the float on one end and controls the inlet valve on the other. If the rod is bent upward, the water level in the tank will be too high and may be overflowing. If it is bent downward, the water level will be too low and an insufficient supply will be delivered to the toilet bowl.

Unless the rod is badly out of shape, in which case it should be replaced, you can make the proper adjustment by bending it slightly in either direction. The proper water level is one that's almost to the top of the overflow pipe.

Next, check the float. If it has a hole in it, water will get inside and prevent it from rising high enough to shut off the inlet valve. This results in a constant leak.

To test the float, unscrew it from the float rod and immerse it in a pan of water. Hold it close to your ear and shake it. If you hear water sloshing around inside, the float is damaged and should be replaced.

If neither float-rod bending nor float replacement stops the leaking, the inlet valve itself must be disassembled. Make sure main water valve controlling flush tank is shut off.

The valve's plunger (13) is held in place by a valve screw (12), which you will probably have to loosen with pliers. Remove the valve screw and take the valve plunger from its seat. You will find the washer on the bottom of the plunger. It is held by a nut and, in most cases, a brass ring cap. This cap might be so badly corroded that it will break while being removed. If it does, replace it as well as the washer and washer screw.

Before reinstalling valve plunger holding the new washer, use a seat dressing tool to eliminate all rough spots and nicks on the valve seat. This last measure will prolong the life of the washer and make the repair more permanent. MORT SCHULTZ

Q-My spring cleanup list calls for removing oil and grease stains from my concrete garage floor. Can you recommend a cleaning agent to use? -C.Y., Colorado.

A-I can recommend several, but the one that does the job best depends upon the age of the concrete. Older concrete has more absorption power. If a grease or oil stain from a car has been on the concrete for some time, vou might not be able to get all of it out, although you can probably remove most of it.

Try scrubbing the spot with benzine or grease solvent. If these agents fail to remove the stains, there's another effective method to employ but it takes time and patience. Dissolve one part of sodium citrate in six parts of water and add six parts of commercial glycerin. These products can be bought in a drugstore. To this mixture, add enough powdered whiting to form a thick paste. Whiting is available in most paint stores and hardware stores.

Spread a thick coat of this paste over the stain. Keep the paste on the stain for about a week. As each application becomes dry, remove it and replace with a freshly mixed wet paste or add new paste over the old. The idea is to keep this thick paste moist at all times.

After the last application is removed, flush the area clean with plenty of water.

Q-A veneer-topped table in my home has become damaged. The veneer has loosened and raised, forming a blister that's about two inches in diameter. Can this be repaired? -C.J.K., New York.

A-Yes, and quite easily. With a very sharp knife or razor blade cut through the center of the blister. Prv the slit apart carefully and force glue under each half.

Place two or three sheets of paper over the punctured blister and a heavy weight on top of that. Use at least 25 pounds of weight. After letting the repair dry for about 24 hours, lift off the weight and paper. If any paper sticks to the patch, loosen it with a damp cloth. If necessary, sand the surface smooth and refinish it to match the rest of the table.

-The spring rains have pointed out a persistent leak in the aluminum gutter on my house. I've tried mending it with plastic aluminum, but this compound doesn't seem to hold. Can you recommend a better method? -M.J.R., Mississippi.

A-Plastic aluminum is good to use for a hairline crack but it won't do for a wider one, which is probably what you have. Try an epoxy-fabric patch which you can purchase at a hardware store. This can stop any leak through an opening of up to 1/4 inch in width. If the crack is wider than 1/4 inch you'd better consider installing a new run of gutter.

Mix a batch of epoxy cement according to the instructions on the package and coat the area thoroughly, extending the epoxy out on each side of the joint about three or four inches. Next, cut a piece of clean cloth and lay it over the epoxy, pressing it down with a putty knife or some other flat tool. Apply a second coat of epoxy, extending it beyond the edges of the cloth. This should do the trick.

—Although a window frame on my home was painted only last spring, I've noticed evidence of wood rotting. A neighbor told me to solve the problem by applying a creosote solution to the frame. However, this has a bad and lingering odor and gives the wood a dark color that's almost impossible to paint over. Is there anything else available?—D.C.C., Ohio.

A—Wood rot (also called dry rot) is actually caused by a plantlike organism that thrives where moisture is present. This is why it's particularly important to protect any wood that's in contact with the ground or is constantly exposed to dampness.

Years ago, creosote was the only effective preservative available but today there are many others which provide the same amount of protection without the disadvantages of creosote.

These newer preservatives, sold in paint stores under various brand names, contain either pentachlorophenol or zinc naphthenate. Look at the contents label of the brand you select to make sure one of these chemicals is mentioned. They are clear in color, easy to paint over, and have no objectionable odor. The chemicals protect wood not only against rot and insects, but also against warpage, checking, and swelling.

The most effective way to do the job is to soak the wood in the chemical. In your case, this is not possible so brush or spray the chemical on.

Applying a preservative to wood that has begun to rot, as your window frame has, will not restore any of the damaged wood. It will, however, stop the rot from spreading. If any part of the frame is severely rotted, you should remove that section of damaged wood and replace it with a new piece. The entire frame should then be treated liberally with preservative.

Q—I recently tried my hand at laying a tile floor in a new cellar playroom. Being an amateur, I wasn't too careful and used too much cement. Now it's coming up between the tiles. What can I use to get it off?—Mrs. C.E.S., Oregon.

A—You don't mention whether you used vinyl or asphalt tile cement, but it makes little difference. Both can be removed in the same way. Buy some denatured alcohol at your local paint store and apply it to the excess adhesive. Let it soak in for a few minutes and then simply wipe off the softened cement.

Be sure that you buy only denatured alcohol. Don't let the man talk you into using a thinner or solvent that is not denatured alcohol. Many thinners and solvents can destroy the gloss on tile—denatured alcohol won't.

Q—With the warm weather almost upon us, I'm waiting fearfully for the recurrence of the swarm of carpenter ants we had last year. At that time a local exterminator identified these ants and told us they appear in spring and summer. He wanted to charge us $85 to get rid of them. That's a lot of Carpenter ants usually congregate around entrances and beneath low overhangs that aren't too far off the ground. The most effective way to get rid of them is to spray chlordane around entrances and overhangs.

After spraying, the ants might disappear for a year or two only to reappear again afterwards. If this happens, the ants are probably traveling to your home from an infested tree hands in their mouth. Take whatever safety measures you believe are necessary to prevent their exposure to this chemical for at least a day after you have sprayed or preferably until after the first rainfall.

By the way, any home owner can get invaluable free assistance on any insect problem from three excellent sources. One is the bureau of entomology at any college or university near your home. The second is your county agent. The third is the Entomology Research Division, Agricultural Research Service, Department of Agriculture, Washington 25, D.C. A letter to any of these sources will usually bring an authoritative answer to any of your insect problems.

Q-I have a lamp connected into an outlet that is controlled by an on-off switch on the wall. This lamp insists on flickering although no other lights in the entire house, including those on the same circuit, flicker. I've checked the lamp itself for shorts and bad connections but found none. My home is fairly new and I'm sure my wiring system isn't faulty. What could be wrong?-E.J.R., Texas.

A-Although you say you've checked the lamp, the first thing I would do is positively isolate the problem. If you didn't check the lamp with a troubleshooting light made for tracing shorts, you can't really tell whether it is shorted. The wiring, for example, might look O.K. on the surface, but it could have a weak or broken strand beneath the insulation. Connect another lamp to the same socket-one that you know is in good shape and hasn't been flickering. Turn it on. If this lamp does not flicker, then the trouble is definitely confined to the other lamp.

First of all, try changing the bulb in the lamp.

Sometimes a break in the bulb filament makes intermittent contact causing a flicker. Next check the springlike tang at the base of the lamp socket. This tang, which comes in contact with the bulb, may have become dirty or depressed to the point where it doesn't make good contact. This could cause flickering. Disconnect the lamp from the outlet, remove the bulb, then bend this tang up with your finger and scrape the surface clean. If all these remedies fail, the lamp switch is probably faulty and should be replaced.

money. Is there something we can do ourselves, or must we pay the price? Can you help?—J.P.C., Delaware.

A—Your exterminator was right. Carpenter ants are dormant in cold weather. However, his price is not justified since you can probably exterminate these insects yourself.

First, set your mind at ease. Carpenter ants cause little damage to a home. Unlike termites, they don't eat wood but only use it for living purposes. They are also easier to get rid of than termites.

nearby. For this reason it's a good idea to inspect all trees on your property. Carpenter ants are more damaging to trees than to homes. They enlarge natural breaks and widen trunk splits. Thus, if you spot any ants, spray the tree with chlordane.

Chlordane is a toxic chemical, so keep everyone, especially children, away from the sprayed area and take care not to breathe the chemical while spraying. Little tots in particular have a way of snooping around with their hands and then putting their

MY LAWN USED TO DRIVE ME CRAZY

By Mike Senkiw

By Mike Senkiw

For years I was like nearly everyone else with a lawn. I spent more time on it than anything else around the house.

In the Spring it was weed, feed, and reseed. When summer came, I fought hard to keep my lawn green through heat, dry spells and water bans. There was no end to it!

I was ready to rip out my grass, concrete the area and paint it green! Instead I plugged in Amazoy Zoysia Grass.

Those plugs grew into solid turf that stayed green through blistering heat waves that burned out the lawns all around me.

When insects, disease and weeds ruined nearby lawns, mine was untouched. I haven't used crabgrass killers and weed killers for years. I mow half as much as my neighbors; I couldn't care less when they announce another watering ban; and when they announce another watering ban; and I've never re-seeded my lawn again. Write for interesting facts and prices today.

TIME-MAKER FOR HOMEMAKERS

Nine-thirty and she's through shopping . . . has an appointment with the hairdresser . . . a baby-sitter for tonight . . . and all by phone! Here's a girl who knows how to make the most of her time. The phone saves her running all over the neighborhood. That's one of the many values of your phone—the time it saves . . . and makes . . . and leaves for yourself and your family.

How many of these little "efficiencies" have you tried?

7 ways ScotTowels help wrap up work and throw it away!

Dry little hands and faces gently with soft ScotTowels. Fewer hand towels to wash, fold and put away.

Dry outdoor furniture after sudden showers with big ScotTowels. They stay strong when wet. No muddy rags.

Rinse fresh strawberries and drain on absorbent ScotTowels. Hull berries on the same ScotTowels. No fruit stains on dishcloth or counter. No hulls or excess moisture to wipe up. (Berries hulled after rinsing retain more juice.)

Wash windows with big Scot Towels. Dry with a clean thirsty ScotTowel. No lint or streaks. No cloths to wash.

A ScotTowel Holder in the garage keeps ScotTowels handy for wiping garden tools, car windows-and hands!

Wipe telephone with liquid wax and soft ScotTowels. So pliable, they clean under dial. No oily rags.

Here's why ScotTowels do all these jobs so well

ScotTowels are a unique combination of all the things you want in a towel. Super absorbent to give extra drying power. Now softer than ever too. They're the most efficient way to do everything from mopping spills to drying hands. No wonder ScotTowels far outsell every other brand. Pick up Regular or Big Roll ScotTowels in their bright new wrapper today, and put a ScotTowel between you and messy clean-up chores.

3. Remove last of paint or turpentine from brush with strong Scot Towels. No stiff brush or paint-filled rags.
