Floor shown, Cambrian Vinyl Corlon 80003. Cambrian and Corlon® are trademarks of Armstrong Cork Co.

Armstrong quietly introduces the new vinyl floor with cushioned comfort

(It's Armstrong Cambrian Vinyl Corlon. Remarkable!)

The comfortable man in our photograph is demonstrating one of the virtues of the new Armstrong Cambrian Corlon floor: It's thickly cushioned.

Cambrian Corlon is vinyl with a brand-new kind of foamed vinyl underneath. Exuberant stuff. The floor gently gives under your feet, then comes right back.

Cushions your walk

When you first walk on Cambrian Vinyl Corlon, you will walk with a new lightness in your step. Reason: Armstrong has invented a process to give the vinyl base a special cellular form, honeycombed with tiny air bubbles. (See inset.)

Do not attempt to count the air bubbles in this view of the new Armstrong floor. There are nearly a million per square foot.

Takes a beating — doesn't show it

For all its light-footed comfort, this floor is as tough and durable as any floor Armstrong has ever made for your home. No need to worry about spike heel dents in a Cambrian floor. Its vinyl cushion gives under your heel—then comes right back.

Smothers noise

Another virtue of this interesting floor is its ability to smother the noise of footsteps and the scuffle of children at play. A blessing for people seeking peace in the same room or the room downstairs. (In a comparison test with an ordinary vinyl floor, Cambrian actually reduced the noise of footsteps by about fifty per cent in the room downstairs.)

Beautiful design

New Cambrian Vinyl Corlon has a warm, dappled design that looks just right in all your active rooms: family room, children's rooms, entrance hall, or wherever. You can choose from blue, green, teak, or any of five quieter shades that live on good terms with any decor.

Sealed seams for easy care

This floor comes in six-foot-wide rolls that install with scarcely a seam. So there's hardly a place for dirt to hide. And where there is a seam, it's sealed by the installer so that it's hardly noticeable and made completely waterproof.

Armstrong Cambrian Vinyl Corlon is designed for active areas like this: a family room. This is Cambrian style 80000.

Cambrian can be installed anywhere in your home—even in most basement rooms, directly over the concrete, which is where its softness and warmth are a special blessing.

Another bonus: Besides looking warm, the floor is warm underfoot. The air bubbles insulate, and the vinyl surface stays at room temperature.

Guaranteed by Armstrong

Armstrong gives you a written guarantee with your purchase of Cambrian Vinyl Corlon that covers both the material and the installation, if carried out by an approved Armstrong retailer. Ask your retailer for details.

11:00 A.M. Spattered with baked-on grease and soil, this Frigidaire Electri-clean Oven is a mess! So are the racks and drip bowls. Now, set the "clean" lever and turn the "start" dial.

Model RDE-38K

2:00 P.M. Clean as a whistle—except for a "blow-away" trace of ash! This Frigidaire Electri-clean Oven has cleaned itself more thoroughly than you could with hours of hard hand-scrubbing.

Her Frigidaire Electri-clean Oven cleans itself, automatically... while she does the family shopping!

Cleans itself, the racks, even the drip bowls! With the remarkable Frigidaire Electri-clean Oven Range, a dirty oven can never again tie you down! It cleans itself...while you go to the hairdresser's, tend to your shopping or catch up with other household chores.

How it works. This remarkable oven uses high heat—about 900°—to turn the toughest oven soil into harmless vapor and a trace of ash. It even gets rid of those baked-on grease spatters that get trapped in the corners of oven racks!

Safety features. When it rises above broiling heat, the Frigidaire Electri-clean Oven door locks. It cannot be reopened until it returns to conventional heat. That's one reason this range meets the Underwriters Laboratories safety requirements. Incidentally, this remarkable range can be installed flush with wooden base cabinets.

Operating costs. This "big family" oven cleans itself automatically, electrically, for about the cost of a cup of coffee.

Price of this range...surprisingly low! In fact, you can buy an Electri-clean Range for less money than many ranges that do not clean their own ovens. It comes in different models and colors with a variety of exciting features. See the Electri-clean Oven Range at your Frigidaire dealer's now. Outstanding products of General Motors.

The brightest ideas in ranges are yours with Frigidaire... Electri-clean, Tender-matic, Flair, Twin-30 and Pull 'n Clean oven models.

by James Beard

America's foremost cook-author

Down with the old bromide — you have to cook sumptuous dishes to be a devastating hostess. You don't. You can rise to gastronomic heights with the simplest recipes.

The secret lies in making taste sing. Take a sirloin steak like above. A surprising saucy touch is to smooth on butter creamed with lime or lemon juice just before serving. My menu includes baked potatoes with rosemary butter; crisp tossed salad with oil and vinegar; hot French bread; fresh fruit, cheese and dry red wine.

That fresh beef flavor is what makes the real difference to the way steak tastes. And the best way I've found to guard that juicy freshness between market and range counters is to store all meat in Baggies® Plastic Bags.

Why Baggies for meat? Because they're drip-proof. Moisture-proof. Vitamin-rich juices are protected... can't seep thru folds or punctures that can develop in foil or wax paper. On every count big-size Baggies (Food Wrap and Jumbo) are better for storage. I find them sitting on my counter for just about everything.

Flavor 'n time saver. Next time you cook cauliflower, save some of the flowerets, mix them in a casserole with cream sauce, Swiss cheese and bread crumbs, and freeze in a big Baggies. Just slip the dish right inside the bag.

Good cooking to you.

We are writing this piece from a hotel room 18 stories above Denver, Colorado. From the window of our room there is a breathtaking view of the snow-covered Rocky Mountains and in a little while the lights of the city below will be coming on with some man-made dramatics.

For the past week we have been traveling around the Midwest. We like to do this every year about this time—just before spring takes over—because there is an air of anticipation as if the entire area were just holding its breath for spring. There is for us an exhilaration flying low in a puddle jumper over the vast fields of our land, realizing that under that lifeless-looking surface is the pent-up energy of corn and wheat just waiting for the right minute to break through and change the brown to green. At this time of year, you cannot see spring but you can smell it, and you feel it, and it's a good feeling.

In our travels we talked with architects and builders and we have seen some interesting urban-renewal projects and exciting buildings. Mostly, however, we have talked with people and we hope that they enjoyed it as much as we have for it has helped us shed our annual winter cabin fever. There are an awful lot of nice people about. True, there are others who could improve their manners and there are certainly quite a few who are a little too self-centered for our taste, but when you subtract these people you still end up with a great many real human beings and a lot of them still pretty much individuals. They and their families have decided what is right for them. Whether it is housing, decorating, or simply a way of life, it is going to be what they want and not necessarily what the rest of the crowd wants or what they are told is right for them.

There are some, of course, who are so concerned with material values that they miss the intangible things that really make it all worthwhile. But, there are many more who take material possessions for exactly what they are—pleasant to have if you can afford them but only as important as you allow them to be.

We found a lot of nice people with lots of money who are living rich and rewarding lives and we met many wonderful people who not by any stretch of the imagination are rich whose lives are equally full.

The day after tomorrow we will head back East refreshed, and reinvigorated from having had a chance to renew our acquaintance with our land and its people.

we put it in a nice new can.

It's the best way we could think of to let you know something is going on inside. Where the real news is.

Because SEGO® Diet Food—the one that has always tasted best—now tastes even better than that.

It's hard to describe the new taste. It's richer, yes—but not gooey-rich. It's a cleaner taste, brighter... nicer.

A nice new taste. And all thirteen SEGO flavors have it.

The best part about new SEGO, though, is it's still old SEGO at heart. Still has two more ounces than any other liquid diet food, and that extra appetite-satisfying protein is still there.

SEGO still has only 225 calories a serving... so it's still the best way we know to help slim, and stay slim.

Which brings us back to that new can.

It's slim, too. (Not to mention taller and prettier.) We've even gone so far as to call it "new slim SEGO."

So here it is. New slim SEGO... With the nice new taste.

"America's Weight Watcher Since 1919"

Color in the cards—purple: We've seen deep, winy-purple carpets at Barwick this season; mauve-violet tablecloths at the Belgian Linen Association; a purple in one of Win Anderson's new prints (she's one of those pace-setting designers to watch); a deep, royal purple called Spring Violet in towels at Cannon Mills. Color worth watching—black and white: Nice example is Fallani & Cohn's black, white, charcoal prints (for tablecloths, napkins). Color coming back—gray: Slowly but surely it's gaining ground, especially in floor coverings. Total color: Beautiful bedroom colorings in carpets at Thomas Pride Mills where they feature the most enchanting, most feminine of pastels—maybe because they're also in the bedspread business?

Good nights: The Englander Company has always been concerned with giving you a good night's sleep via their bedding products. Now they also want to make sure your bed will look well during the day. Their new line of dual-sleep equipment includes daybeds (Da-Beds to Englander) and Bed 'n' Sofas. Daybeds are practical and pretty and can be used in almost any room. You name it and Englander has a Da-Bed to fit the location. Chateau looks contemporary, has low, completely upholstered head and footboards. It has a pair of well-tailored bolsters and a removable cover. Del Prado is more formal, more Empire, with obelisk-shaped posts and more wood showing. Priced from $320 and $360 respectively, depending on fabric. A classic among Englander's Bed 'n' Sofas is a three-cushion Lawson with the popular "sloppy down" look. It hides a queen-size bed with great elegance; $360 in velvet. Valencia, a compact 42-inch love seat with back cushion and bolsters, turns into a single bed. A pair of these might be just the thing for your den or vacation home; from $370.

More than charming: a new group of wallpapers by F. Schumacher & Company can be stripped. This means easier redecorating, no steaming, soaking, scraping. For nonprofessionals: If you don't hit it right the first time, you loosen one corner of the paper, strip off, rehang. Especially developed stock on which these designs are printed is washable, will not tear when wet. Our favorites: Beach Roses with its Liberty of London-Kate Greenaway look, Fern Silhouette, and Golden Delicious, a zesty pattern of apples and pears, done in slapdash technique. Great for bathrooms, children's rooms, kitchens. Papers are about $14 a roll depending upon designs.

Very grand manner indeed: Cannon's new hemstitched sheets and pillowcases. Bravo for custom detailing in their Portofino rose border which frames a scattering of roses. More of this embroidered look in a pure white hemstitched sheet with embroidered scallops. Embroidery is what June brides will be asking for in sheets and towels. Wamsutta tells us their Madeira embroidery patterns are so popular, they are planning to add new ones to their line.

How TO MAKE A REAL ROCK GARDEN

A rock garden is the reproduction—on a small scale—of a scene from nature. It is not easy to accomplish and the result will not be maintenance free. It will not even be low-maintenance. You will have to learn some Latin names of plants. But if you enjoy gardening, you will find that alpine or rock gardening is its most rewarding and challenging form.

The garden in the accompanying picture was built by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Leninger, of Trumbull, Connecticut. It gives the impression of always having been there, of being an integral part of the hillside, and of having been the inspiration for the house, which is also built of native stone. This is a real rock garden.

Most "rock gardens" are piles of dirt with small stones laid on top of the soil. They are usually dedicated to the creeping varieties of phlox and other minor spring deities. In summer and fall such gardens languish and fail to inspire anyone. Your rock garden should resemble a natural rock outcropping. It should have the feeling of a rugged woodland or alpine scene. Plant it with small rock-hugging plants. It can be a tiny thing tucked away against a bank or wall or it can be a long, narrow ledge in the lawn (a ledge just three or four feet long and a couple of feet wide can support 30 different types of alpine gems). If you're really ambitious, make a large garden. (continued on page 20)

A tiny alpine town on a "lake" is shaded by a Japanese maple. Paul Leninger carved the little village and its castle.

Alpine plants have great charm. They are tiny, modest creatures, often spreading, with diminutive blooms. They do require trimming, thinning, and occasional dividing so they won't outgrow their positions and ruin the proportions of your garden. Many rock plants, such as the alpine gentians, ericas, buttercups, orchids and primroses, are bog dwellers, used to having their feet watered by cold mountain streams and melting snow. A small pool in your garden will provide suitable conditions for growing them.

Rock plants sink their roots into thin pockets of soil in cracks and crevices between and in the rocks. You must never allow these soil pockets to dry out, so you will have to water the garden between rains. Unlike a conventional bed that can be mulched to discourage weeds, you will have to do a good deal of painstaking hand weeding to prevent tiny plants from being crowded out by wind-sown, more aggressive growers. You don't just make a rock garden—you live with it every day of the growing season!

The best exposure for your rock garden is a site that receives both sun and part shade. Southeast is good. Don't try to build a rock garden near large trees, especially spreading, shallow-rooted types such as maples and willows. Their ravenous roots drain the soil of available moisture and nutrients.

Drainage is the most important factor in the success or failure of your rock garden. Seek out slopes or gentle inclines and avoid low spots. The ground should slope away from your rock garden. If the subsoil is sandy, you will have no drainage problems. If it's heavy clay, you will have to excavate at the base of the slope and fill in with drainage material: broken stones, two to 12 inches in diameter depending on the size of the rock garden. Over this put a thick layer of fine stone chips or coarse builder's sand. Once you've provided for drainage you can spread a thick layer (about a foot) of soil mix, into which you should set large boulders. They will not be seen but will serve as supports for the exposed rocks on which your plants will grow.

In their quest for moisture and food, rock plants often sink their roots deep into a stone where some water and soluble nutrients are stored. Obviously the "softer" or more porous the rocks, the easier it will be for plants to become established on them. Tufa is a soft stone but lacks the strata that make stones interesting and rock gardens beautiful. It's rounded, lumpy, and difficult to work with. Shale is soft but too crumbly. Sandstone and limestone are best.

Sandstone has a nice rugged structure and is colored from dark red to light yellow. Limestone is gray, has pronounced stratum lines, fissures, and crevices, and weathers beautifully. If you live in an acid-soil area you will be able to grow dwarf rhododendrons, heaths, and other acid-loving plants on limestone. If you're in an area of alkaline soil, however, you will have some trouble with the acid-loving plants.

If the predominant stone in your area is granite, you will have difficulty making a rock garden. Granite is a very hard, non-porous, nonstratified stone that is not congenial to plant life. Gneiss is easier to work with and more amenable to plants. It's a foliated granite (it splits easily into flat, slablike sections) and is very handsome in the garden.

Choose flat, rectangular rocks because they're easier to work with. Set them well into the slope so that they look like an integral part of it. They should not sit on top of the soil. The exposed parts of the stones should be weathered, with cracks and crevices for plants. Rocks should be tilted backward and downward into the slope to catch the rain and minimize erosion. Stratum lines should all slant at the same angle.

Place some of the rocks close together to make planting pockets. Others can be set further apart to make larger beds for spreading plants and dwarf conifers. Don't set rocks in solid rows. Place the lowest rocks first and work upward.

When you're ready to plant your rock garden remember that you're striving for rough natural beauty. Avoid geometric, formal designs. Plant in drifts of one color—no crazy quilt patterns! Set tiny plants in the narrow crevices, those with long, hanging stems behind or above large rocks for a cascading effect. In nature, tall-growing plants are at the bottoms of slopes (in the valleys). The higher the elevation, the thinner, more stunted the growth. In a large garden you can follow this pattern, but in a small or average-size rockery it's best to put tiny alpine near the base of the slope where they can be more easily seen, and taller plants higher up.

Plan your rock garden for all-season interest with spring-, summer-, and fall-blooming plants. Comb nearby nurseries for dwarf conifers and try to include small-leaved groundcovers like thyme. The most frequent mistake of beginner rock gardeners is to overplant for the sake of filling every inch of ground. If you give plants room to grow without too much competition they will quickly spread out and cover up blank spaces.

It's not possible to mention every rock-garden plant, but here are a few to begin with and their approximate flowering times: Allium ostrowskianum, summer; alpine aster, early summer; anemone blanda, spring; anemone occidentalis, summer; arabis, summer; dwarf barberry, summer; campanula, summer; colchicum, fall; dianthus, early summer; hypericum, summer; muscari, spring; pasqueflower, spring; potentilla, summer; primrose, spring; sedums, summer; Solomon's seal, spring; and the early-spring blooming species tulips.

Some shrubs for the rock garden are dwarf boxwood, bunchberry, creeping rockspray (Cotoneaster adpressa), trailing rockspray (C. dammeri), Daphne cneorum, Erica carnea and other heaths, wintercreeper (Euonymus radicans), wintergreen, (Gaultheria procumbens), Sargent juniper, mugho pine, Indian azalea, dwarf roses, creeping rosemary, low spirea, and dwarf Japanese yew.

By Bob and Ginny Crozier

Most families dream of a leisurely sight-seeing trip across the United States to see the natural wonders and landmarks that dot our country from coast to coast. Our family was no exception—except we decided to make the dream come true.

When we say family we mean the two of us and our four sons: Bob, 15; Tom, 13; Bill, 9; John, 3—who became 4 on the trip. After numerous family conclaves we decided the only way to see the country was by camping. Our launching date was set for mid-July.

The excitement really started around the house when the equipment began pouring in—cooking gear, blankets, lanterns, and a never-ending stream of small items. It was then that the camping trip (our first) began to take on the ring of reality. Once the boys got excited things began to happen and from all four corners of the house they began gathering the “musts” they wished to take along.

What a wonderful feeling to live with flameless electric home heating (why not change over now?)

Now, clean invisible electricity frees you forever from the old-fashioned flame furnace at a cost you can easily afford. And what a wonderful feeling.

You have no sensation of heat. You can't smell it. You can't see it. You can't hear it. Its gentle warmth is just there. It saves you money on redecorating and maintenance.

And you live with a sense of well-being that makes you feel like a million all winter long.

More than 2,500,000 families like yours have already discovered that flameless electric home heating is reasonable to own and operate.

Before you build, buy or modernize your home, talk with the people at your local Planning a 10,000-mile camping trip isn't as scary as it sounds. Everyone pitches in since camping is a family activity. First we dragged out the atlas for all the things we really wanted to see—from Niagara Falls to Yosemite. We then checked out mileage on main roads from place to place, roughed it out on the maps, and then began to compromise. Once we established our proposed route, some simple mathematics made it clear that such a trip required careful financial planning too. As it turned out, it cost approximately $8 per day per person. That included trailer rental, gas, oil, food, campsite fees, sightseeing tours, etc.

Final details of the trip came from three camping aids that no camper should be without: Texaco Road Atlas, Rand McNally's Guidebook to Camp Grounds, and three issues of Mobil's Travel Guide for Good Food, Lodging, and Sightseeing. Those, along with Handbook of Auto Camping by George and Iris Wells (Harper and Row) and Ford Guide to Outdoor Living (Doubleday), covered all our needs.

The Texaco Road Atlas illustrates each state and is marked with main highways, elevations, cities, rivers, lakes, memorials, parks, and many camp grounds. Enlarged detail maps of main cities and all national parks are included.

The Guidebook to Camp Grounds has main roads printed in red, campsites in black numerals. In the back you find invaluable information listed by state: name of campsite; whether it's national, state, county, or private; number of acres of each park; number of tent sites; trailer sites; fee per night; dates when it is open for the season. Also pertinent are the facilities available—tables, showers, laundry, toilets, shelters, café snack bar, hunting, fishing, swimming, boating, etc. Lots of acreage with relatively few tent sites (for privacy) and flush toilets were first in importance. Showers and laundry facilities were also high on the list.

The Mobil Guide Books are useful for general history and sightseeing and a reliable guide to restaurants and motels when we did not eat at our campsite.

One of the most important considerations was not where to go, but how. We owned an Oldsmobile Vista Cruiser station wagon; the next problem was what went behind. We settled on a tent trailer, and since we had never camped before and were uncertain as to how we would like one, we decided to rent this piece of equipment. Our choice was an Apache Golden Eagle (they rent from $35 to $50 a week). The Apache slept four comfortably on extra-long foam-rubber mattresses and also provided ample space for Bill and John on inflatable mattresses in the 5' wide center section between. Not only did the trailer provide us with sleeping quarters, we utilized every square inch of the inside to store our gear while traveling.

For what we packed and how we packed, see below. More about our trip next month—what we saw and how we did it.

In the trailer went:

- 3 suitcases
- 2 folding tables
- 1 Coleman oven
- 1 catalytic heater

- 1 gallon and two 2½-gallon plastic water jugs
- 2 tackle boxes
- 1 Coleman camping stove
- 1 portable toilet with disposable bags
- 4 sleeping bags
- 2 inflatable mattresses
- 1 small utility bag (swim suits)
- 1 2½-gallon gas can

In the Apache's built-in aluminum storage box went:

- 6 flashlights
- 1 Singer portable TV and Power Pak
- 1 transistor radio
- 1 spare tire (we had two blowouts and 1 flat)
- 6 bath towels (each set a different color for each person)
- 2 life jackets
- lotions, drugs, cartons, etc.

The rack on top of the car carried:

- 2 camp trunks for rarely used items
- 3 fishing rods
- 1 large plastic bag for dirty clothes (between washings)

- 1 heavy-duty tarp with 3 canvas straps (we replaced tarp on trip. First one so torn by wind as to render it useless)

Inside the car we carried:

- 1 cardboard box: towels, napkins, garbage bags, toilet tissue, soap, matches, old newspapers, 1 asbestos glove.
- Ice chest held about 10 lbs. of crushed ice at top. Vertical design with front door.

In compartment in rear of auto, less-frequently used items:

- 1 jacket each
- 1 raincoat each
- 1 medicine kit
- Extra set of fuses and fan belts
- Flares
- 1 sign with our name and "RESERVED" on it. This for holding sites when moving from temporary to permanent quarters.

"How we retired in 15 years with $300 a month"

"Looking at Alice and me in this picture, you'd never guess it was taken two days after Christmas!

"We never thought we'd see the day when we could afford Florida vacations, yet we now spend all winter living the good life in the warm sun. You see, I'm retired. And, thanks to Alice's smart planning, when I gave up chasing commuter trains last year, I did not have to give up the satisfaction and security of getting a regular pay check. I receive a check for $300 every month from Phoenix Mutual, and this income is guaranteed for life!

"I give Alice credit. Before the children came, she was a secretary in a big corporation. Time and again she would see what happened when a man in the office reached retirement age and actually couldn't afford to retire!

"That's never going to happen to you!" she said. "I'll figure out a way for us to live happily ever after."

"Sure enough, in 1950 (I remember, because it was the year I turned forty), Alice handed me a Phoenix Mutual advertisement she'd torn out of a magazine. 'Read this,' she said, 'and when you've filled out the coupon, I'll mail it on my way to the hairdresser's. But hurry, because my appointment's in twenty-five minutes!' She had a stamped envelope that was already addressed to Phoenix Mutual in her hand.

"I read the advertisement. It told how a man my age could actually retire in 15 years with a guaranteed monthly income of $300. I couldn't believe it, but there was no time to argue. Alice had her hat and coat on, so I just laughed, filled out the coupon and gave it to her.

"A few days later the free booklet arrived from Phoenix Mutual. We studied it and picked a plan that suited us, and from the day it started, a big worry seemed to be lifted off our backs.

"Fifteen years seem such a short time when you're working and raising a family and paying off a mortgage. Suddenly you're tired of working, the children are grown and flown, the house is paid for, and along comes the first $300 check from Phoenix Mutual! Alice says she's so proud of me, but I know she's pleased with herself for planning the whole thing."

I read the other day that one out of two Americans is a gardener. Great Scotts and heavens to Burbank that's a lot of gardeners. But it figures. I've noticed that among the married couples we know there's always one who shoulders the hoe and one who sits on the patio. If now and then you find two gardening nuts in one family, balance them against the few oddball couples who don't even sport a fake geranium on the stoop—and there you have your one out of two.

I'm the one out of two in this family. That is, if you'll grant a rather ungirdled definition of the word "gardener." In my book, a gardener is anyone who puts something in the ground with the wild hope of having something come up. By that token, I've been a gardener for some ten years, and I just wish somebody had handed me a handy list of dos and don'ts for gardening dopes at the beginning.

I'd apologize for starting so dumb so late, but the fact is that our culture no longer gives its youth a natural, solid grounding in horticulture. We all sow our first wild row of carrots or marigolds, and burst with pride when the first green fuzz appears 2000 years later. But next thing we know we're up to our necks in Dick and Jane. Then we're teen-agers—so who's Paul Scarlett? Is he the one with bangs and a cute red Honda? Then comes college and an asphalt-paved career and marriage and babies. And there we are, in our first little rose-covered cottage in the suburbs but—oops—no roses.

Gardening expert, I'm not. I will not be speaking to the Third District of the Federated Garden Clubs of America next Tuesday. (If you know a gloxinia from a gaillardia, you're on the wrong page—the only wrong page in this whole green, verdant, blooming May issue.) But compared to what I knew about gardening ten years ago, today I am a walking, 24-volume set of encyclopedias.

I've learned, the hard way, a thousand dos and don'ts. Such as you put in tulip bulbs with the pointy ends up and you don't dig a separate hole for each one with trowel and yardstick—you get an old broomstick and lean on it—or if you're smart, you buy an easy-does-it bulb planter. (After you've locked the beagle puppy in the basement.) Such as you don't send away for tons of exotic Japanese higo iris bulbs without reading the fine print (higos like soggy, slippy riverbanks, not the driest, hardest clay this side of Arizona). Such as you don't grow petunias from seed. I mean, you can—but don't. It will break your heart, and you'll never feel the same about the helpful neighbor who pulls up the gorgeous green weeds you've nursed for weeks.

What else don't you do? You don't buy new marigold seeds every year—you just knock the old seeds to the ground in the fall. You don't expect pink daffodils to be really and truly pink (and you don't say Mrs. R.O. Backhouse—it's Back-us, don't you know). You don't pick the pots at the nursery with the tallest plants and the most flowers—you pick the shortest, squattiest plants with no blooms—yet. (Don't be a jellyfish in the nursery. Shoo the man away and take as long to select six geraniums as you would to buy a mink coat or a pound of string beans.) You do find a good greenhouse, so that when everything goes wrong, you have someone to blame it on. If you're lucky, you'll find a good greenhouse that's cheap as dirt too (by now even I know that dirt's not cheap)—shop around. But if the difference between a gorgeous, healthy, guaranteed geranium and a stick-y, so-so geranium is 25c—do spend the quarter.

Speaking of money, in the beginning I thought that gardening must be the quickest, alluringest road to bankruptcy there is. Even little 25c seed packs mount up—and who can pass by the 35c and 50c varieties? One little flat always leads to another. Once you've got a marigold on your back, you'll swipe the rent money, the grocery money, the children's birthday-present money to go sneaking off to the greenhouse.

But now I know you can grow the most beautiful garden in town without spending a cent. Good gardeners are forever dividing and thinning out things. What's more, gardeners are the most warmhearted, open-handed people in the world. Admire a woman's iris at the luncheon table—the next day you'll have a station-wagon full of glorious rhizomes. Praise a neighbor's chrysanthemums—the next year you may have more in your yard than he does in his.

Of course, by now I know that the best way to grow roses is in your neighbor's yard. If you pick your neighbor carefully, you can wallow in lovely, fragrant roses from June until September. The spraying and pruning and feeding stay on his side of the fence, but half of the roses drool over into yours.

In your own garden you plant impatiens. Good old, reliable old, easygoing impatiens. How can one flower be so beautiful and so dumb? It doesn't know that flowers need sun. It doesn't know that flowers need to be pinched, fed, and sprayed.

If it's a picking flower you want, you plant daisies. You can pick daisies till the cows come home. You can fill every bowl, basket, jar, urn, and pencil cup in the house with the decorators' darlings and go out the next morning and fill them all over again.

What else can I tell you? You don't scare rabbits away by tying white streamers on sticks. You don't scare them away by buying $10 worth of white mothballs. You scare them away by buying 100 feet of chicken wire—preferably before your zinnias are nibbled level with the white mothballs in the shade of the waving white streamers.

You don't kid yourself that your first bag of peatmoss will be your last. Before you've lugged your twentieth bag home from the supermarket, you face facts and have someone deliver a truckload. You don't kid yourself that gardening gloves will keep your hands soft and lovely, not when there's more dirt inside them than there is on the ground in your backyard.

Most of all, you don't kid yourself that next year you're going to landscape with concrete up to the foundation or let the whole place grow up in jungle. If there's one thing I've learned about gardening—no matter how your garden flopped last year, tomorrow is always another bright new May.

Although posters are the oldest visual advertising medium in history, lately they've been turning up not so much for selling, as for sale. Travel posters and political posters, vintage theatrical posters and avant-garde movie posters all are in demand; but of special interest is the "art poster" which announces an art exhibition or, occasionally, some other cultural event.

Posters of this kind are as much a part of the city of Paris as the Eiffel Tower. In the U.S.A. the recent congressional blow to highway billboards does not presage a big future for outdoor advertising, no matter how noble the purpose or artistic the fulfillment. However, while posters may be "out" outdoors, indoors they are very definitely "in." Their primary appeal is as an economical wall decoration, tion, but the pleasure of posters is greatly enhanced by their historic background and unique qualities as art.

Since the art poster starts with an inherently utilitarian purpose, it is not, strictly speaking, "fine art." Unlike a placard that tells how to keep your sheets whiter, your hair softer, or your husband longer, the art poster informs rather than exhorts. A poster by Picasso does not try to convince you that "Picasso Duz Everything." It just tells you that he has done it again. The lettering is limited to a name, a place, and a date. The pictorial portion of the poster illustrates nothing but the artist's characteristic style.

Thus, in its functional setting—adorning a street-corner kiosk in Paris, for example—the art poster might best be classified as institutional advertising. And the institution is art itself.

Marc Chagall (Limited Edition)

Andy Warhol

Of course, when Count Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec made his first posters for the Moulin Rouge back in 1891 his subjects were not conspicuously associated with High Culture. Can-can dancers and chanteuses, proprietors and patrons of Montmartre cabarets— (continued)

295 FIFTH AVENUE NEW YORK, NEW YORK 10016

But it was not because of his subjects or, for that matter, in spite of them that Toulouse-Lautrec exerted a major influence on poster making. It was rather because he imparted to his posters the artistic attributes of his paintings that the poster was transformed from a mere advertisement to something of value in its own right.

"He was continually striving for a maximum effect with a minimum of clutter," writes one of Lautrec's biographers, distilling in that remark the essence of the modern art poster. Directness, clarity, an absence of nonessentials, and the capacity to immediately arrest attention—these are the qualities that distinguish a poster from a picture.

After Lautrec, more fine artists began to make posters for theatrical impresarios, publishers, and other commercial patrons. But it was not actually until the end of World War I that French gallery owners saw the logic of using art to publicize itself. And as interest in the new form grew, it became apparent that by printing and selling extra posters, exhibitors could not only gratify the demands of collectors but pay for their bona fide advertising as well. This practice continues today.

In some cases, the art poster is made from an original drawing created especially for a particular event and hence called an artist-designed poster. Just as frequently, a painting from a current show is incorporated into a poster simply by adding lettering to it. The distinction is a tricky one. In the first category, the poster reflects the direct and intended result of the artist's creative activity as a poster maker. In the second, a painting or drawing he has made for the show becomes the subject of the poster. Because of the bold lines and vivid colors that characterize so much of the contemporary art of today, such posters are often as effective for the practical purposes of both advertising and decorating.

This is not true, however, of the poster reproductions of "great master" paintings, which are sold in some bookstores for as little as $1. Except for the lettering, which is usually itself uninspired, such posters are no different from ordinary reproductions and lack the distinctive "alive" quality that makes the contemporary poster an appropriate adornment to contemporary living.

New York, the art capital of the country, is inevitably the biggest source of art posters this side of the Atlantic. Ranging in price from $3 to $30, good collections are available at Raymond & Raymond, Wittenborn & Company, Gallery of Graphic Art, Griffin Gallery, Weyhe Gallery, Associated American Artists, Art Fair, and Brentano's. In other cities you can find posters—or information about sources—in print shops, bookstores, department stores, art galleries, and particularly museum book and gift shops.

You may sometimes see a poster with a price tag of $100 or more, and wonder why. Such posters are printed on luxury paper in limited editions, are sometimes hand-pulled instead of machine printed, and—most important—are individually signed and numbered by the artist.

The pioneer program to encourage the production and enjoyment of American poster art was inaugurated only two years ago as a joint venture of the Albert A. List Foundation and the American Federation of Arts. Under this program a cultural organization, let's say a symphony orchestra, applies to the AFA for a poster to publicize a forthcoming series of concerts. The AFA commissions a top-ranking American artist not merely to design the poster, but to create an original lithograph, woodcut, or serigraph (silk screen print), which is produced in a limited edition of 100 impressions, individually signed by the artist. The finest traditions of print making are observed. The prices range from as low as $40 to $150.

An edition of 500 to 2000 prints of the limited-edition poster is then made by commercial printing methods, sometimes using the original plates. Fifty of these are given to the orchestra society for display purposes; the rest are sold to the public through Poster Originals, Limited, a firm dedicated to fostering poster art. (Three of their posters are shown on page 30.)

In addition to the posters commissioned by AFA, which sell for $5, the firm also distributes posters designed for one-man shows at leading art galleries, retailing for $5 and $10. (For a catalog, write to Poster Originals, Limited, 175 East 79th Street, New York, N.Y. 10028.)

The contemporary art poster is a front-running challenger to the cliché, "Interesting, but I wouldn't want to live with it." Posters by even the "farthest out" artists are surprisingly easy to live with, for reasons perhaps more psychological than aesthetic. The poster does not raise perplexing questions like "Why is it worth $5000?" or "What does it mean?" It asks to be judged only for its effectiveness as a poster, to be collected as a document of art history, and to be enjoyed for its shape, lines, colors, and decorative values. As one recent enthusiast remarked, "Posters are so—approachable."

FRAMING OF POSTERS

The large size of posters in most cases precludes custom framing. One alternative is to use a metal holder which grasps the top of the poster and may be hung by an attached string to a picture hook or nail. (Available at The Griffin Gallery, 611 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022.)

Mounting, the most delicate part of poster-framing, is best left to experts when posters are old, torn, or brittle. You can then frame the mounted poster yourself.

The following do-it-yourself instructions for framing posters, at a materials cost of about $3, are suggested by framer Henry Rothman of New York:

Materials: 1/8" nontempered Masonite board, slightly larger than the poster; stretcher strips from art store or 1x2 strips from lumberyard; Elmer's Glue; wallpaper paste mixed to consistency of heavy cream; clean wrapping paper; Krylon Spray; screw eyes; and picture wire.

1. Place poster face down on clean surface. Sponge back of poster lightly with water. Apply paste to poster and Masonite, which should be lightly sandpapered for better adhesion. Holding poster by outer ends to form a U-curve, let bottom of "U" drop on Masonite and let down each side from center outward, one side at a time. Cover with paper. Smooth from center to remove air bubbles and surplus paste. Roll with rolling pin from center. Leaving paper on, dry overnight under weights.

♥ MASH NOTES ♥ FOR THE AVOCADO ♥

Any other fruit would just be crushed if you mashed it. Not the California avocado. It goes on its delicious way to perk up almost anything around. For instance:

Burgers Montezuma: Blend 1 peeled avocado and 1 Tbsp. each mayonnaise, catsup, chopped onion, lemon juice. Salt to taste. Spread on 6 broiled burgers, for a royal treat.

Avocado, slightly mashed and seasoned with salt or lemon juice, makes a marvelous spread for English muffins, toast, or bagels. Try it at your next brunch. Just make sure your avocados are ripe enough to yield to gentle pressure.

We'll send you other serving suggestions for avocados, in return for a postcard to Box 336-M, Costa Mesa, California.

CALIFORNIA AVOCADO ADVISORY BOARD

Avocados from California

When dry, spray poster with Krylon. Trim Masonite to the exact size of the poster.

2. Attach Masonite to stretcher with Elmer's Glue. Clamp and let dry overnight, inserting cardboard under clamps to protect poster. Sandpaper sides; paint or stain. Attach screw eyes and picture wire.

A variation of the above is to use two vertical strips instead of complete stretcher, placing them about 4" from the sides of poster. They need not run the entire length of the poster. Their purpose is to prevent bowing and provide a backing for screw eyes.

A poster that has real or presumed value should be protected by glass. First, glue Masonite of exact poster size to stretcher, as in Step 2 above. Position poster on Masonite and cover with glass. DO NOT PASTE OR AFFIX WITH TAPE. Cut four strips of aluminum trim used for laminated plastic kitchen furniture (available inexpensively at lumberyard), mitered at 45 degrees. Drill holes through aluminum and nail to wood.

If you want to use a regular picture frame, it is necessary to place the poster between the Masonite board and glass, and add frame.

NEW BOOKS OF HOME INTEREST

The most delightful novelty cook-book we've seen in a long time is THE COOKBOOK FOR POOR POETS AND OTHERS, by Ann Rogers. The first time we opened it we found ourselves reading (and smiling) all the way through it. Among the poor poet's rules for dining well: Always have fresh bread and always serve wine. His dishes are elegant yet inexpensive. The soups are especially good and there are some unusual chicken dishes and one-pot meals with the strict rule: "Never use weary vegetables." Then, for the times when the poor poet receives a check or needs inspiration, he goes all out on a gala "outrageously expensive" dinner. His "Dinner for Instilling Hope" includes such things as Cornish Game Hens Flambées, Wild Rice Mold, and Strawberries Romanoff. $4.50. (Charles Scribner's Sons)

For those of you who love our favorite flower, the rose, two excellent books have recently been published. One, CLIMBING ROSES, OLD AND NEW, by Graham Stuart Thomas, is a definitive work on the climbing and rambling variety, and gives the history as well as descriptions of hundreds of types. $8.95. (St. Martin's Press) The other is a revised, updated edition of a popular book among rose lovers: THE ROCKWELLS' COMPLETE BOOK OF ROSES, by F. F. Rockwell and Esther C. Grayson. Even someone who has never planted a flower before could grow beautiful roses using this book as a guide. $5.95. (Doubleday)

For the experienced woodworker, CONTEMPORARY DESIGNS FOR WOOD by A. C. Romero has exquisite projects—and good contemporary designs for the do-it-yourselfer are hard to find. Some of the items: a cigarette box, footstool, magazine rack, ice bucket, salad bowl, and several styles of small tables. $3.50. (Bruce Publishing Co., Milwaukee)

Americans are apt to take their nation's capital for granted, but every time we visit there, we can't help being struck by its beauty. WASHINGTON: MAGNIFICENT CAPITAL has captured the city beautifully in dramatic photographs by Fred J. Maroon and text by A.

Robert Smith and Eric Sevareid. A sensitive portrayal of the city's many faces—its people, places, and politics. $14.95. (Doubleday)

Planning a motor trip this summer? New this spring are the FODOR SHELL GUIDES, eight books on different areas of the country which give helpful advice on where to stay (ratings of restaurants, motels, hotels) and what to see. They cover all the states except Hawaii, are available for $1.95 each (paperback), $3.95 (cloth). (McKay)

These books may be ordered through your local bookstore.

OUTDOOR CARPETING

WHY CARPET OUTDOORS?

What, you ask, is the point of carpeting outdoors? What's wrong with a nice, green lawn? Nothing, we say and we're really not suggesting that you lay down a piece of carpeting instead of growing grass—although you may wish you had after your next weeding session.

Outdoor-indoor carpeting is really not designed to take over from nature but to improve on such man-made areas as slippery-when-wet slate terraces or poolsides or docks. Not only does outdoor carpeting make such areas safer, but a carpet is also much more pleasant underfoot than cement or rough stone can be.

It was discovered that outdoor carpeting has another advantage: It cuts down glare, especially on big-city apartment-house balconies. Obviously, it would also perform this same service on cement areas that surround houses and tend to reflect strong sunlight. We know of only one tennis court to date that's been done in outdoor carpet and it also makes a dandy putting green, indoors as well as out. I would also add a large measure of safety to children's outdoor play areas as well as cut down on noise if your house has a patio or atrium.

WHAT IS IT MADE OF?

Outdoor-indoor carpeting is most often made of olefin fibers spun from polypropylene resins. The names you'll hear are: Herculon (Hercules trademark) olefin, Vectra (National Plastics Products Co., Inc. trademark), and Marvess olefin (the trademark of Alamo Industries). Here are some of the outstanding characteristics of olefin fibers, according to some of their manufacturers. They are light yet unusually strong, completely moistureproof. And moisture and dampness are any carpet's worst foe. Olefin fibers are said not to absorb moisture-laden dirt; this makes them easier to clean. One company—Orcco—lists a whole alphabet of 67 common household stains from alcohol through wine that can easily be cleaned from its Herculon outdoor carpeting. In addition, olefin fibers are mildew- and rotproof, can be colored for the life of the fabric (solution dyed), and they are relatively inexpensive. Other fibers are used too; for example Cabin Crafts has an outdoor carpet called Mardi Grass that is made of Dow Chemical Company's saran (Rovana); U.S. Rubber uses vinyl for its Royal Vinyl outdoor carpeting.

When buying outdoor carpeting be absolutely sure it is synthetic throughout. This means face and back too. Many outdoor-indoor carpets use Polly-Bac, a woven polypropylene fabric. Basic constructions are: tufted, felted or needle-punched, and flocked.

COLOR IT GREEN

A fairly wide choice of colors is now offered in outdoor-indoor carpeting. Many manufacturers have as many as eight colors. But in most lines reviewed to date the greens seemed to come off best, especially a strong Kelly, emerald, or billiard-table green which has style. A darkish royal blue also caught our attention because we visualized it with lots of white and bright red or lemon yellow upholstered outdoor furniture.

PRICE IS RIGHT

The majority of outdoor-indoor carpeting will sell in the neighborhood of $4 to $5 a square yard. Cabin Crafts, however, is selling their grasslike, rubber tufted Mardi Grass for almost twice that amount. Widths for outdoor carpeting range all the way from a full 12 foot to a narrow three-foot size.

HELP FOR SHOPPERS

Many manufacturers are currently making—and marketing—outdoor-indoor floor coverings. Among them are: Cabin Crafts, Inc.; Crown Tuft Carpet, Inc.; General Felt Products; Mohawk; Thomas Pride Mills, Inc.; Orcco; Ozite; and U.S. Rubber.

EASY ALL THE WAY

Outdoor-indoor carpeting can be hosed off outside, vacuumed or gone over with a carpet sweeper indoors. In locations where it is used mainly for safety's sake, it is suggested that the fabric be cemented down or put down with double-face tape to avoid slipping. The same installation techniques are recommended for laying the carpeting indoors. According to the Fibers and Film Department of Hercules many of the new Herculon introductions will be made with an olefin backing, coated with a special bonding agent. This rough surface is designed to make carpets cling to smooth areas such as vinyl and tile.

OUTDOORS ONLY?

Outdoor-indoor carpeting is primarily made for terraces, poolsides, atriums, boat decks, docks, marinas, porches, and many other strictly alfresco areas. However, as the name indicates, it can also come into the house and provide a colorful, practical floor covering for those "forgotten rooms" such as laundry areas, recreation rooms, basements, attics. It's also suitable for use in bathrooms and kitchens.

An ACI (American Carpeting Institute) spokesman, Ruth Holman, had this to say about using outdoor carpet indoors: "Most outdoor carpeting is felted, hence lacks the pile of conventional carpets, and even the tufted outdoor fabrics do not have the same pile height as most other carpets. This means that outdoor-indoor carpeting is less comfortable to walk or stand on than conventional carpeting."

However, ACI has found that many owners of outdoor carpeting simply pick it up, come the fall, and carry it indoors for use throughout the cold weather.

We believe that there's quite a future ahead for outdoor carpeting. In real outdoor areas because these will become more and more lived in and in semi-enclosed areas (patios, lanais, Florida rooms, etc.) and finally in some areas within the house itself such as basements, laundry areas, playrooms, and other hard-use areas.

O UTDOOR FURNITURE

Step one in shopping for so-called outdoor furniture is to determine where and how you plan to use it. Decide in advance whether you want furniture that will live outdoors or whether you need outdoor-indoor pieces. Sketched on this page, some new and very typical "outdoors only" pieces. See page 42 if you're interested in furniture that has

"outdoor-indoor" talents. For "outdoors only" pieces, we recommend modern styling, hard-wearing lightweight materials, functional design. Since this is essentially seasonal furniture with a short-use span, we've chosen models that are not too expensive. If color is involved, get the brightest, prettiest colors possible.

Contemporary elegance in Aegean, by Donald Colby Associates, for Tropitone. One-inch vinyl webbing is replaceable, baked acrylic enamel on frames comes in a wide range of brilliant colors. The chairs are $46 each, the table is $90.

Catch the breeze or the sun with Lloyd's swivel chairs. One-piece seat and back of armchair is molded of firm's airy Fibercraft weave. The umbrella top has an automatic pull-cord lift. About $129 for the set.

Substantial comfort is offered in light, modern-looking chairs of tubular steel and vinyl in bright shades of pumpkin, yellow, and turquoise to contrast with the white of the frames. Bunting's three-piece Bistro set costs about $30. Ideal for small balconies.

A slim-lined tubular aluminum rocker by Larry Kroll with laced-on canvas seat is the essence of simplicity. Rocking action is due to sloping stretchers; canvas comes in choice of colors. Sells for a low $8. Excellent value for the price.

For outdoor dining or a card game on the terrace, this six-piece set by Troy Sunshade sells for about $100. Folding chairs have perforated metal seats and backs, shaped for comfort. The seven-foot umbrella is equipped with pull-cord mechanism for easy operation.

OUTDOOR- INDOOR FURNITURE

More traditional, but also more versatile than the "outdoor only" furniture sketched on page 40 are the outdoor-indoor groups shown here. Although they spend the entire summer happily outdoors, they're also very much at home on enclosed porches, in family rooms, dens, and even the most conventional of dining rooms.

Shades of the old park bench—this one by Goshen, was designed by Gordon Perlmutter in Alaskan cypress with wrought-iron frames. Also available are matching lamp, cocktail tables, and lounge chairs. Love seat, $40. Table, $30.

This dining group of antebellum inspiration is made of cast aluminum in an antique finish by Plantation Patterns, Inc. The pedestal-base table, with heavy glass top (in 42- and 48-inch sizes), and chairs, from $240.

Dark finish on Philippine rattan, wrapped and bound with genuine cane, is among the quality details of this group (shown, a chair and ottoman) by Ficks Reed. Styling is contemporary with an ever-so-slight Oriental flavor. This chair and ottoman sell for $115. Additional pieces are also available.

A baby's crib is only 27 inches wide.
So is your half of a regular double bed.
Are you going to take this lying down?

Don't spend another cramped, crowded night on an old-fashioned regular double bed.

Not when you can stretch out in royal comfort on a Simmons Queen-size Beautyrest, today's new double bed. There's 20% more sprawl space on a Queen-size Beautyrest.

The Beautyrest. By Simmons.

But extra bedroom is only half the Beautyrest story. The other half is its extra comfort.

You see, Beautyrest is made differently. It has separate, individual coils. They're not wired together, so they don't sag together. Beautyrest coils are flexibly firm. Shift a hip, dig in a shoulder, roll this way or that; Beautyrest individual coils give every inch of your body the separate support it needs.

And, because Beautyrest coils are separate, each sleeper gets single-bed comfort in this new Queen-size double bed. No rolling together!

The cost? Only $199.50 complete, for mattress and box spring. Less than a penny more per night than a regular-size Beautyrest set.

HEALTH IN THE HOME

By Annette Francis Benjamin

Several years ago a front-page newspaper story revealed a unique set of circumstances surrounding the divorce of an admittedly happily married couple. The courtroom proceedings, punctuated with more medical than legal terms, described the sufferings of the wife who after six months of marriage developed a mild rash every evening when her husband came home for dinner. The rash gradually became worse and, after two years, incapacitating. The woman was diagnosed as being allergic to her husband—the divorce was granted.

Fortunately, an allergy of this kind is quite rare. However, allergic disorders of other kinds due to many different causes are extremely common.

WHAT IS ALLERGY?

Allergy is an excessive, and sometimes dangerous, bodily reaction to certain substances or conditions normally harmless to most people. The substances which cause these reactions are called allergens. They may be foods considered essential to good health, such as milk, eggs, and wheat; they may be medicines, such as aspirin, sleeping pills, and penicillin. Plant pollens, molds, house dust, and feathers are among the most common allergens inhaled into the nose and throat. Emotional excitement, exposure to sunlight, and excessive cold can also cause allergic reactions in some persons.

When an allergen reacts on body tissues, it releases from the cells a powerful chemical called histamine. Even in small quantities, histamine can have an injurious effect on blood vessels, causing swelling in the surrounding tissues.

ALLERGIC SYMPTOMS AND DISORDERS

An allergen that comes in contact with mucous membranes of the nose can cause symptoms ranging from sneezing to complete obstruction of the nasal passages. Hay fever, one of the most common allergic disorders, occurs most often during the spring, summer, or fall when plants produce pollen. Symptoms may be a runny or stopped-up nose, runny and itchy eyes, itchy and burning mouth and throat.

Great numbers of hay-fever sufferers may develop asthma, and many asthmatics are subject to hay fever. Asthma is a potentially serious condition that occurs when an allergen reaches the lining of the bronchial passages, causing them to narrow. Wheezing, coughing, and difficulty in breathing are the main symptoms of this ailment.

The part of the body most vulnerable to allergic responses is the skin, for it reacts to both external and internal allergens. Skin reactions can range from mild facial itching to the severest form of hives (angioneurotic edema) resulting from a food or drug allergy. Eczema is a breaking out of the skin, often associated with an allergy.

SPRING AND SUMMER ALLERGIES

It seems paradoxical that the two most happily anticipated seasons of the year can produce the largest number of allergies.

Two thirds of all people who touch poison ivy develop a skin rash which is an allergic reaction to the oily substance of its leaves.

Summer fruits, such as strawberries, are common allergens, as are fish—shellfish in particular.

Exposure to the rays of the sun, even for short periods, can give a person with a sunlight allergy an uncomfortable rash for days.

The bites of stinging insects, such as bees, wasps, hornets, and yellow jackets, usually result in discomfort. People with a known allergy to any insect sting must take care to avoid a possible fatality.

MEDICAL HELP FOR ALLERGIES

It is comforting to know that allergies can disappear as suddenly and mysteriously as they arrive. However, some allergies become progressively worse if they are allowed to go untreated. If you have a distressing allergy of any kind, or if you are allergic to anything too common to be avoided, you should seek medical advice. There are many methods of treatment that can cure or prevent certain allergies and control or relieve others.

Researchers are making great strides in solving one of the most complex chemical mysteries of the body—the allergic reaction.

HOW TO PROTECT YOUR

SAVINGS

FROM CREEPING INFLATION

What will happen to money you're saving now? What will it be worth in purchasing power 10, 15, 25 years from now? That would be money you're putting away for children's education, a nest egg, or retirement. The big question is how much of a bite will creeping inflation take out of your savings?

The answer depends mainly on the savings method used. One popular and widespread method of savings could mean that inflation will lop off 25 to 50 percent, perhaps more, of the purchasing value of your hard-earned savings. A $1000 put away today would buy as little as $500 worth of goods, housing, and services for you at some future date. That's exactly what happened to the savings of many people in the past 25 years, says Maxwell S. Stewart of the Public Affairs Committee, a nonprofit educational group. He says:

"Since 1940 hundreds of thousands of people have seen the purchasing value of their savings shrink by more than 50 percent as a result of keeping all their savings in such investments as bank savings accounts, life insurance, and U.S. government savings bonds."

A 1940 dollar is worth only about 43¢ today. It will buy that much less goods and services for you than it would have in 1940. It's shrunk that much because the cost of living has more than doubled since 1940. And that is by no means a unique period in U.S. history. Since 1900 the cost of living in the U.S. has just about quadrupled. A 1900 dollar is worth only about 24¢ in purchasing value today.

In short, inflation has become an accepted way of life. Experts add that a small amount of inflation every year, on average, is virtually inevitable if our country is to continue to expand and grow in the future as in the past. That's the price we pay for continuing prosperity and to create more and more new jobs for our growing population.

In booming times like today, with the U.S. economy virtually boiling over and defense expenditures mushrooming, there are signs that the tempo of country-wide inflation may well speed up. That puts increased emphasis on knowing how you can best protect your family savings from inflation erosion in the future.

TWO BASIC KINDS OF SAVINGS

Before getting into how to protect your savings against inflation, you should understand the difference between the two basic kinds of savings. The first consists of what financial people call "fixed dollar" or fixed-income savings or investments. Examples include bank savings accounts, government savings bonds, life insurance, most life insurance annuity plans, and also investing in so-called gilt-edged bonds or high-grade preferred stocks, and real estate mortgages (as an investment, not for the house you buy).

Such investments are safe, to be sure, but only up to a point. There is little risk of losing your money. The amount you have invested is always clearly specified in dollars, and the dividend or interest rate is also specified (though it may change). However, your initial capital generally remains fixed over the years; it neither grows nor shrinks much, though it may fluctuate a little.

Such savings are generally unaffected by business conditions and ups and downs in the stock market. (This is not absolutely true, since there's always the possibility of an economic catastrophe when the safety of your money could be in severe jeopardy.)

The biggest danger with fixed-dollar savings, however, is their high vulnerability to inflation. Take doctor bills and medical services, for example, the costs of which have gone up some 40 percent since 1956 because of inflation. It therefore takes about $1400 today to buy the same amount of medical services that you could have obtained in 1956 for $1000.

Saying it another way, suppose you had put $1000 ten years ago in a fixed-dollar savings account as a reserve fund to pay for unforeseen future medical emergencies. Today that $1000 worth of 1956 capital would buy only about $700 worth of medical services in terms of present-day costs. To be sure, your fixed-dollar investment would have been earning you a stipulated dividend each year, but your capital would have lost considerable purchasing value, i.e., in terms of what it will buy for you today.

VARIABLE-DOLLAR SAVINGS

This is the second basic kind of savings; it's also called equity savings. It includes such things as money put into real estate, common stocks, common stock mutual funds, and commodities. The value of such investments will fluctuate with changes in business conditions. Make no mistake about it, such investment savings entail a certain amount of risk.

The chief pitfall with a variable-dollar investment would occur if you suddenly find you need money at a time when the value of such an investment is at a low ebb. That would be during a severe (continued on page 94)

Do some foods disagree with you?

For you, it may be cabbage. Or pizza. Or French fries. You name it. Just about everyone has certain foods that upset their system, causing acid indigestion or irregularity.

That's when Phillips' Milk of Magnesia sets things straight.

Suppose those foods get your stomach upset with too much acid. Phillips' relieves that acid upset, heartburn or even nausea in seconds—literally!

Or (let's call a spade a spade) suppose you're constipated. Phillips' will start you back to regularity in just a few hours—gently, comfortably, completely. In fact, it's the kind of laxative doctors recommend.

For acid upset, you take just a little Phillips'. For constipation, a little more. And if you're worried about taste, don't. Flavored Phillips' really tastes good!

Mind you, it's still not a good idea to sit down and eat yourself sick. But next time you have a little too much of a good thing, hurry up and take Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. That settles it!

BEAUTY AT HOME

By Alice Thompson

At a party she was giving for a garden club, the late Helena Rubinstein heard one of her guests say, "It's such a privilege to meet Madame Rubinstein, even if I must admit I just don't have time to use cosmetics and all those things." The hostess, moving close to the speaker, said, "Yes, I see," a simple statement of fact. As she walked away, she remarked quietly, "Why does she want to look older than she has to?" It was an apt question from a lady then over 90 with the complexion of a woman of 45.

But it is easy, too easy for the busy homemaker to slip into the habit of taking excellent care of everyone in the house except herself. But "too busy" is not an excuse. So why not start today to give serious consideration to your eating habits, your exercise program, and those basic routines of beauty that will get you ready for a summer in swim- and play-suits?

Has your dressing table the "must" trio . . . cleansing cream, skin lotion, moisturizer? All cosmetic firms make them. Helena Rubinstein has added Skin Dew Freshener and Lotion to her Skin Dew line. Oil of Olay may be new to you, is a marvelously fresh under-makeup moisturizer. Elizabeth Arden and Estée Lauder have their versions of the trio; we particularly like Ardena Skin Lotion and Lauder's Undermakeup Crème.

New, lovely to look at, delightful to use is Revlon's array under the banner of Ultima 11 . . . among them, lipsticks in really different shades, packaged in compacts with brush, Lip Glosser to add sheen (and protection), Creme foam Makeup that fairly floats across your face, and a blessing, Creme Concealer that really disguises under-eye lines, shadows, circles.

And get to work on your hair, to reinforce it against the summer sun . . . with the loving kindness of Breck Shampoo and Cream Rinse. Pick the formula your kind of hair needs. (Ours is the dry kind.) You'll bring back the young and happy shine you deserve!

Not all beauty assists come from cosmetic counters; don't forget the staunch allies you can find at your drugstore. Colgate's Dermassage, cream or liquid, prevents or counteracts ravages of too much water and detergent . . . there's Johnson and Johnson's Dermicel, a positively pretty cover-up for cuts and burns that doesn't hurt a bit when you peel it off . . . Prom Cosmetics Curl Free, a natural curl relaxer to help tame over-curly hair which is a real nuisance especially in the humid summer.

Now get to work on the important job of looking as young as you are . . . and maybe a few years younger than that. It takes amazingly little time, and it pays the kind of dividends that makes you enjoy that look in the mirror. (Husbands, not really very noticing, do notice the improvement, the glow that comes with care!)

What a wife should tell a husband about carpet buying...

Tell him Mohawk's new Aragon of Polycrest® is the best carpet value his money can buy!

Or be more subtle. Tell him his carpet will pay for itself in years and years of wear.

Act knowledgeable. Tell him Mohawk weaves Aragon of Polycrest—U.S. Rubber's new olefin fiber. If he just sits there looking puzzled, explain that it's the most moisture-resistant fiber type yet. And by moisture we mean ink, coffee, mustard—everything that spills and stains.

Be a pal. Tell him he can walk on it in his muddy boots and you won't make a scene. Even his cigar ashes won't dull the beauty of Aragon. A swipe of the sponge and it looks fresh as new.

Be your feminine self. Tell him you've never seen such colors, or felt such sturdy, thick pile for the money.

Save the clincher for last. Tell him Aragon costs $9.95* a square yard. If he doesn't believe you, don't give it another thought. He's already sold. Good girl!

*Approximate retail price.

One more thing. Remind him that Mohawk Cloud-Step carpet cushion makes any carpet look better and last longer.

THE MOST FROM YOUR AUTOMOBILE

By William J. Toth

Americans own more cars than the rest of the world put together, but that is little consolation when your spouse has the car and you need it. Once a luxury, the automobile has joined food, clothing, and shelter as a necessity of life. And in some cases a second car has become equally important. But if you contemplate buying an additional car, make sure you have really explored every alternative and know exactly what you are doing because a second car can become a luxury you can little afford.

THESE QUESTIONS NEED HONEST ANSWERS

What are the advantages of a second car? Are there any alternatives? What will another car cost (new or used)? Can you afford the extra car on your present income?

On a separate sheet of paper for each of these questions list your answers. Because it will be your money you are spending you must be very honest with yourself. Following are a number of factors and pointers to keep in mind before you make your final decision.

CONVENIENCE

With two cars the commuting husband can come and go as he likes. The wife need not bundle up the children early in the morning to drive her husband to the station and to meet him in the evening. The need to wait for him on a late train is eliminated, and this is especially appreciated at night.

During the day in case of an emergency a second car is always available for the wife to save precious moments. If you live in a remote area the importance is significantly increased.

Time and money can be saved from waiting for and the cost of a bus or a cab, especially if trips are frequent. Even though a neighbor's car may be available, you cannot always expect it to be handy to conform to your schedule. In emergencies or when it fits their schedule, neighbors might never object to your using their car or even driving you anywhere, but frequent use of this privilege can soon strain even the most cordial relationships.

Considering the number of trips that the modern homemaker must make to keep appointments and the home supplied, there is little doubt that the key role of a second car is convenience and in some remote areas, safety.

ALTERNATIVES TO A SECOND CAR

1. If you are the husband consider public transportation, leaving the car at home.
2. Explore the commuters' car pool where your car is used every fourth week.
3. Hitch a ride with a neighbor or fellow commuter on occasions when the car is needed at home.
4. If you are the wife, use your telephone to take advantage of home deliveries.
5. Rent or lease an additional car. This is good for short periods of time and the few times you need a special type of vehicle such as a station wagon or a small truck. Many families use this as a method to determine the type of vehicle best suited to their needs.
6. When the car is left at home, make efficient use of it. Plan dental and medical appointments together and shop on the way home.
7. Have your husband pick up certain items on his way home.
8. Plan shopping and appointments for evenings or weekends.
9. Use public transportation on shopping trips but have your purchases delivered.
10. Combinations of any of the above can give you many more alternatives.

WHAT WILL AN ADDITIONAL CAR REALLY COST?

These answers will probably have the most weight in arriving at your final decision. Here are costs you cannot avoid.

1. The actual cost of the car. Financing will be extra. Cash can save you money.
2. Additional insurance. However, you can get a significant premium reduction on a second car. Explore reductions for no male drivers under 25, no collision coverage (especially if it's a used car), a compact car, and other plans available from various companies.
3. Licensing the car. In some states where licensing is based upon the weight, you can save some money by buying a smaller car.
4. The routine cost of maintaining and servicing the car. A second car is generally run about half the mileage of the first car. Again, a compact car will cost less to operate.

However, if you buy a used car that needs constant repairs and service, you may find that it will cost far more than your first car. Depending upon the use made of the car, a husband might consider using the second car himself, especially if he just drives to the station and parks the car.

ADDITIONAL FACTORS

Do not forget to add in the cost of seasonal items such as chains or snow tires. Also, can your present garage accommodate two cars? In some communities overnight parking in driveways or on the streets is forbidden.

Even though you plan closely there is always the temptation to make trips that are not really necessary. Add a few more dollars for these.

IF YOU DECIDE ON A USED CAR

Know exactly what type of car you need before you go hunting. Check your newspapers so that you will have some idea of current prices of cars that could fit your needs. Have a maximum figure of what you can spend and do not let yourself be pressured beyond it.

Usually a new-car dealer selling used cars will give you the best buy for your money. On rare occasions you might be able to pick up a car from a private party when you or someone you trust knows the car. Figure 10,000 miles for every year the car is old and check this against the odometer.

Always test drive a car before you sign or buy. Hire a competent mechanic to accompany you when you have definitely decided upon a car. A few dollars for his time will be well worth the expert advice he can give you.

ONE BIG CAUTION

If your first car is aging and becoming troublesome, weigh a second car carefully. You might end up with two cars that are undependable. One good car for the road is worth more than two sitting in the garage. Explore the possibility of buying a new, dependable car.

SPEAKING OF THAT NUMBER-ONE CAR

This is spring, and if you have not done your spring cleaning and summer conditioning, you still have time. Here is what needs to be done

- Replace those snow tires. Rotate your tires and, by all means, trade in your worn ones for new ones.
- With your new tires in place, have the wheel alignment and balance checked.
- Give the car a thorough washing inside, outside, and underside. An overhead lawn sprinkler, placed under the car and moved a few feet every five minutes or so can do a good job of dissolving winter snow-melting chemicals. Supplementing this with high-pressure hosing under fenders and other hard-to-get-at places can do much to save rusting and pitting.
- After touching up scratches and rust spots with paint, apply a coat or two of good wax. Summer heat and salt spray can be damaging to outside finishes.

Unless your manual recommends otherwise, drain, flush, and refill your cooling system with clear water and also add a rust inhibitor.

- Change your oil to a summer-weight oil.
- Have the lubrication points checked and greased if necessary.
- Scrub the battery with a wire brush and fill it with clean water.
- Vacuum the inside of your car and give the trunk a going over too.
- Remove all floor mats and ashtrays and wash in hot, soapy water before rinsing.
- Clean window surfaces inside and out with a good cleaner. Even a closed car during the winter can pick up much dirt and scum on the inside surfaces.

- Check with your serviceman on bringing the car in for a tune-up.

YOUR FINAL DECISION ON A SECOND CAR

After you've cleaned your first car you might have second thoughts about buying another car. Approach the decision practically. Weigh the facts as you have listed them against your budget and then make your choice.

An automobile is one of the most expensive investments you make outside of your home, so be especially careful. Careful of selection, careful of maintenance, and careful of use.

For modern outdoor living,

Gas makes the big difference

... costs less, too

The ingredients are a record player, a few fine records of your own or borrowed, and a handful of congenial friends. Add a little daring, a little planning, a recognition that an entertainment form that sells more tickets than baseball is apt to be surefire. The result? An evening when no one argues too much or talks too much . . . an evening when you listen to great music. Listen—we said—with complete attention. You'll find the kind of restfulness and refreshing, silent communication that makes a concert audience feel lifted by sharing a lovely experience together. Only this time it will be even deeper since it will be an evening to remember with friends.

Moreover you can (and we hope you will) listen to music that is seldom heard in concert halls—plenty of Mozart, a bit of Delius, Poulenc, the lesser-played concertos, the old masters, and newer composers who may not make great box office but make great listening, the exceptional musicians who may never get to your particular city.

Start your first evening to remember with a program that requires not much more than an hour and a half of actual listening. (Later you may want to extend that time.) Be sure to provide the creature comforts that aren't at hand in the concert hall. Begin, perhaps, by reading aloud the notes on the record cover, that usually well-written piece about the music, the composer, the era, the performers. Lower the lighting while the music is playing. As soon as the last note dies away, turn up the lights and let the listeners comment . . . appreciative or critical. Round off the evening with coffee and cake or little sandwiches served where you've been listening.

In our suggestions below for any number of evenings to remember, we've listed some of the rarer among recent recordings, pieces and artists you might easily—and regretably—miss. You don't need us to remind you of the great Beethoven symphonies (but don't overlook the great quartets), the lovely music of Haydn, Schubert, Brahms.

Volume 1 of Mozart's Piano Concertos, Lili Kraus, soloist, Vienna Festival Orchestra. Pick one of 6. Epic.

Sonata in F Minor (Appassionata) and Sonata in C by Beethoven, Artur Schnabel playing. RCA Victor.

Leonard Bernstein Conducts Richard Strauss in "Salome's Dance", "Don Juan", "Till Eulenspiegel." Columbia.

Four Concerti for Festival Occasions by Vivaldi, played by an extraordinary string ensemble from Venice, I Solisti Veneti, C. Simone, director. Columbia.

The Six Brandenburg Concertos, by Bach, played by the Southwest German Chamber Orchestra, Tilegant conducting. Pick any one but don't miss the second! RCA Victor.

Concerto for Cello by Delius, 21-year-old Jacqueline DuPré, soloist, the Royal Philharmonic with Sir Malcolm Sargent conducting. An Angel recording.

Liebesslieder Waltzes by Brahms, with the Robert Shaw Chorale. An RCA Victor recording.

A Western Wood patio is a party-room, living-room, family-room and play-room...all rolled into one!

A Western Wood Patio brings a breath of fresh air to a home.

It's an extension of the living-room for your guests, an outdoor play area for your children.

It's a private place for sunbathing, a special place for breakfast. It's an away-from-it-all place for cocktails, a chic place for bridge or brunch.

In short, a Western Wood Patio is any room you want it to be—day or night!

We say Western Wood Patio because no other kind of building material compares. Wood has an inherent warmth that blends naturally with the outdoors. It flatters any type of architecture, and compliments every type of material.

On the comfort side, you can sunbathe and walk barefoot on wood without being sizzled.

On the practical side, nothing is as easy to build with as wood. You can paint it, stain it, or leave it alone.

And all it takes to keep it clean is a garden hose.

YOUR BACKYARD— biggest room of the house

Hooray for May! The magic moment has come when you step outside and really live as big as all outdoors. Where to go? No farther than your own backyard. What better place to go when you want to expand your living space?

To wine and dine, to play and entertain, to take a dip or just breathe in some good fresh air? Our point is to plan your backyard for the way you want to use it—then full speed ahead and make it one big roofless room. Here we show you how—with decks, patios, pools, some lovely landscaping. Study with care—you may never want to leave home!

By Alan C. Borg

HIT THE DECK!

Decks are one of the best ways to make your yard an outdoor living room. Those shown here and on the next few pages are actually roofless rooms to be used for relaxing, entertaining, and playing. Decks are especially good where the ground is uneven, and a patio is impossible without extensive grading, or where a patio would require the use of a retaining wall. A deck is the solution if there's a drop in the grade between the house and the yard. It will easily bridge the gap and tie the house to the ground area. A deck is also the answer if you want variety of height in your yard. It can be on the ground or elevated. For sketches of how decks fit various styles of houses, turn to page 86.

Besides the unusual design, this deck in Tacoma, Washington, is a departure from the usual spaced-board construction. Here, in this innovation by the American Plywood Association, it is simply a series of platforms of exterior-grade plywood, protected by plastic-based roofing material, set on the framing of 2x8s. On top of them is Ozite's Town 'n' Terrace indoor-outdoor carpeting, which is unaffected by rain and can be easily vacuum cleaned.

Indoor-outdoor carpeting is also used in the living room. It not only makes the deck an extension of the living room but also provides a smooth surface for outdoor activities. A sliding glass door was installed to bring the outdoors inside. A different color carpeting was used on the children's play platform, which is below the platform outside the living room that's primarily for adults. The deck system was designed by Harris and Reed, A.I.A.

Not just one deck, this is a series of interrelated deck and planting areas, each designed for a specific purpose. It was designed to make the steep backyard (see before photo) a useful addition to the house. It also gives the children play space they didn't have before. Here, the different levels reflect the slope of the land, and the plantings tie the various elements together.

Decks can do anything . . . extend along the side of the house, go around the corner, circle a tree, step down to the yard. This one in California connects two wings of a one-story house (remodeled under the aegis of Johns-Manville) and provides a place to sit. The living room gets a view of the yard through the sliding glass doors. The deck is built of redwood; the yard is surfaced with tanbark.

Variation on a theme. In his home in St. Petersburg, Florida, architect C. Randolph Wedding decided to put his outdoor living room in the center of his circular house to be able to completely control the view. Each room surrounding it opens to the center with a concrete deck. Below circular rim is sitting area with fireplace and built-in benches. Glazed roof lets plenty of sunshine in.

This deck, almost as large as the house itself, seems to float out from the house and perch lightly on the sloping ground. Located in Chipita Park, Colorado, it has as background high mountains and tall evergreens. The deck edge and the roof line of the house both have a white-painted edging. The deck, opening to the house by large glass walls, has an elevated barbecue pit and wooden planter boxes set in gravel. The house is set on the slope so that there is room allowed beneath the deck for a two-car garage.

Patios are one of the most commonly used ways to get outdoor living space, and one of the most pleasant places to spend long summer evenings. They can be built of almost any material that withstands the weather. Some of the most common materials are brick, flagstone, concrete slab or pavers, slate, gravel, redwood rounds.

The patio on this page is actually part of the house. In remodeling this home in Dallas, Texas, architect James Reece Pratt cut away a section of crawl-space wall, dropped part of the living room floor to grade level, ran a new brick floor right into the backyard, and put up large plastic privacy screens.

EVERYBODY OUT TO THE PATIO

Large expanse of glass separates indoor and outdoor portions of room physically, not visually. Stained mahogany hides beam above glass, while draperies screen off entry. Flooring in foreground is plain pine boards. Floor in lower part of room is same as on patio. Rug and candelabra are Mexican.

Combination floor-patio is hard-burnt random-length brick, set with narrow edges exposed, and interspersed with pieces of green marble. Inside, the brick rests on a concrete slab. Demountable pipe-framed privacy screens are of fiberglass-reinforced vinyl plastic. They shield patio from wind.

The spectacular setting of this flagstone patio alongside a river in Darien, Connecticut, makes it a perfect spot for enjoying the summer months. The house itself was built to take advantage of the view, with wide windows by the patio and facing the river. The patio opens directly from the family room on the lower level and is reached from the upper level by brick stairs. The patio is used extensively for entertaining since it was designed to work as part of the living space of the house. It's not isolated at all. The indoors and outdoors of the lower level become one large area, thanks to wide windows used.

A backyard pool can be the center of your landscaping plans as well as the center of summer fun. The placement of the pool can be tailor-fitted to your space. Here we show you three ways of fitting the pool to the plot: the familiar on-ground treatment; an above-ground installation; and a variation, where an in-ground pool is above the lowered living area. But despite the differences in placement, all three pools fit into their landscapes as easily as if they'd been there all the time.

A sunken desert terrace. The pool below, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Timan of Tucson, Arizona, designed by Nicholas Sakeller, has all the features of an oasis. The terrace, below the level of the pool, offers tentlike shade. It is separated from the living area by sliding glass doors.

Information: Louise Price Bell, Barbara Teel Photographers: Guy Burgess, Paul J. Peart, Ernest Braun

All decked out. Aboveground pools often turn out to be eyesores on the landscape, but here's one that nestles into the yard. To overcome the problems of a sloping site, Mr. and Mrs. Donald W. McKenzie of Sacramento, California, had their pool sunk into the ground on one side and a deck installed to keep poolside lounging space level with the top of the pool. Other side is three feet above ground level. Filter and equipment are hidden below. Pool by Doughboy.

On the level. This pool, right, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd C. Nelson of San Marino, California, placed level with the ground, was carefully integrated into the garden. The brick terrace with raised planter seats provides plenty of space for sunning. The bricks go to the edge of the pool to eliminate the usually disconcerting coping at pool's edge. Landscape architect on this job was W. Bennett Covert.

Your backyard may properly be called a room—and enjoyed as one—only to the extent that you achieve privacy. Traditionally our backyards have been open. We stayed indoors and shunned walls around the property line as undemocratic. But now that we spend long days in our gardens, we find we must have a degree of seclusion to enjoy them fully.

If you cannot or prefer not to fence in your garden room, screen out visual intrusions and neighborhood clutter with living barriers of trees and shrubs. Train vines or espalier trees on a screen for privacy.

In our pictures you will see that just a few plants will make your point dramatically and with a tremendous reduction in maintenance. Plant to soften the harshness of concrete, to humanize a blank wall. Use a tree or shrub, with its framework exposed, as rhythmic sculpture where your plan demands a focal point. Depending on how you use them, flowers, trees, and shrubs will throw your garden into soft or sharp focus. Plants are mood makers.

Beauty and interest do not derive from crowding every type of plant into every inch of available space. One well-grown specimen artistically displayed is often better than a multiplicity of types dug in without reference to design, scale, or proportion.

The design will be determined to a large extent by your activities. Make a plan and keep eliminating the nonessential. Elegance is rooted in simplicity, and the need for a simpler, less anxious life is the underlying reason for a room under the sky.

A SMALL, RICHLY DETAILED ROOM is shaded by a twisted old live oak. Festoons of ivy ornament grape-stake walls, aralias and evergreen groundcovers fill the plant beds. Flower color comes in pots. The floor is executed in redwood and concrete aggregate—beautiful and easy to care for. The garden belongs to Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Chichester of Oakland, California.

AN ENCLOSED GARDEN lends itself to a geometric layout, with growing things to ease the transition from circles to strong verticals. Translucent, colored panels set into fence are amber, blue, green, and purple. Garden of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Zwillinger, San Francisco. Architect was Ellis Kaplan. Planting by Douglas Baylis.

Three flower-topped columns of staggered heights repeat the vertical of the wind tower (below), and are a way to grow large bowls of ivy, geraniums, fuchsias, and other container plants.

The fence was designed to provide a view where none existed. Translucent, colored panels are softly backlit at night and planters hold a revolving display of seasonal flowers in pots.

In an 18-foot wooden wind tower hang huge metal chimes—very effective when the wind blows and fog rolls in. The fascinating wind chimes were sculpted in metal by Jean Flores and suspended from a rod high in the tower.

SAND CASTLE VACATION HOUSE

Our sand castle we'd say is introverted. Though the living room has a wide view of the beach, other rooms are shut off for privacy. (The house on the following pages is just the opposite, all open.) The striking design is completely modern with its multiple towers and platforms. They serve very practical purposes, though, of overcoming disadvantages of the site. The lot, 300 feet from the ocean on New York's Fire Island, is surrounded by other houses. The four towers, shingled in red cedar, provide privacy. The design appears complex, but is really just an unusual way of wrapping the exterior walls around the four corners to form the towers and floating the living room pavilion between them. Decks with wide glass doors jut out from the living room on four sides and give an open feeling. The tall, narrow jalousie windows set into the corners provide light. The house, which was designed by Horace Gifford, was built at a moderate cost.

View from living room shows how close other houses are, but relatively high railing of deck allows a clear view from inside or on the decks. The wood-burning Franklin stove is at home in its contemporary setting. Bedroom behind fireplace wall gets light from windows set into corners.

Builder: Harold Harding Photographer: William Maris

The living room is cool and serene. Slight roof overhang on the decks works to visually extend the room. Same cedar shingles as outside are used on some of the walls. The major pieces of furniture were designed by the architect. The kitchen cabinets and counter were built of the same wood as rest of house.

The plan shows how the subsidiary rooms fit into the towers, with the living-dining area between them. The lower level of one of the towers is used as a utility room. In the future, two bedrooms and another bath will be put in the lower level of the three other towers.

The entryway (right) leads dramatically under the main living level of the house and then up to it. Platforms in the sand guide visitors to the cantilevered stairs. House is raised above ground level to get the view and the breeze.

Exterior of house is a combination of the closed-in and the opened-up. Living room is in wide-windowed section between the towers. House has the locust-post foundation system typically used in the area, but surface of towers hides the posts with shingles.

OUTGOING STUDIO HOUSE

Here's an extroverted house if we ever saw one. Now the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Uhr in Sarasota, Florida, it will eventually become the studio and guest house when they build their "permanent" home. The architect, William Rupp, fulfilled their requirements for an uninhibited, outdoor environment at the lowest possible cost by using an unusual roof structure and inexpensive materials. The lower story of the house is concrete block. The roof is supported by five large cypress frames. The sides are cypress boards with translucent plastic strips inserted between the boards. A continuous strip of glass is used between the roof and the wall. The end walls are entirely glass to let in the view. High up in the roof area is a third level, a small study reached by its own stairway from the kitchen area.

High, wide expanse of glass (right) at ends of house and the windows just under roof let plenty of light into house. Roof seems to float over open space.

Living room (far right) is barely separated from outdoors. Putting the main living level up one flight allows the balconies to be at tree-branch level. Inside, the structural framing along the side of the room is support for built-in seating.

The kitchen, at one end of the main space, enjoys a balcony of its own. Window framing is used as display space for bottle collection. Steps go to study.

Exterior view shows the high roof and the sloping wooden wall of the main level. Rough-sawn wood has weathered to a mellow gray. Entrance is at side.

Plan shows bedrooms, bath, and entry on the lower level. Above are the open spaces of the living room and kitchen with small third-level study suspended over them. Balconies at both ends of the living level visually extend rooms.

the young american look

By Vera D. Hahn

THE PORCH really does the work of a second living room five months of the year. Stone walls and floor, wicker pieces from Design Research, and bright colors give it a lived-in look.

On these pages you see two small houses from two big cities with much in common and much that sets them apart from run-of-the-mill houses. They are both owned by young families of widely divergent backgrounds, yet there's a common denominator—both show a sure and consistent taste, a positive independence, and the strength to create a new and very personal tradition. In each case, both husband and wife were totally involved in the creation of the home even though one couple sought the help of a designer. Both husbands did an enormous amount of work themselves.

An appreciation of the very best. The first home of Joe and Hilda Longinotti turned out to be an old one with a breathtaking view of New York's Whitestone Bridge. It's a complete expression of the couple's taste, one that never spells

"his" or "hers" but "ours." "The minute we saw this 40-year-old house we knew it was for us," says Hilda Longinotti. "We love it—the stone exterior . . . the hand-pegged, random-width oak board flooring in the living area . . . the spectacular view. It has taken us two years of hard work to decorate and furnish our home and we're not finished yet. But we do know that everything we've done, from the Italian tiles we laid ourselves to the hand-painted Bavarian 'Kasten' (cupboard) is right for us." In the living room at right, you find a simple, yet strongly articulate background. For designer Dolores Engle, the prime requirement was to display the furniture collection of "modern" classics, colorful folk art objects, and decorative accessories. The impression you get is one of great warmth. It simply says these are hospitable, livable rooms adapted to the way young Americans live.

Hans Van Ness

CHEERFUL MASTER BEDROOM is tucked away under the eaves. The calculated austerity of the background—white walls; a simple, striped casement cloth shade at the windows; sand-colored carpeting—is an ideal foil for brilliantly colored belongings. Although this is a house without a definite color scheme, reds, hot pinks, oranges crop up over and over again.

IN THE HALLWAY, above, a dropped ceiling was made to camouflage a maze of unsightly pipes. Pine frame was stained to match the rest of the woodwork. Light panel is hinged for easy relamping operation. Small, simply furnished dining room is seen beyond the arch. The view at right shows the beams, room divider with radiator enclosure, and the staircase—all finished and waxed to a warm honey color. Casement windows have custom-made screens of wood and sheer draperies.

They knew what they wanted. Ken and Nancy Marks refused to take the easy way out and live in a conventional apartment. They wanted an interesting, different place to live and did not compromise until they found it—a town house in Chicago's Carl Sandburg Village. They moved in without any remodeling, have only added the handsome, glass-shelved storage and display case in the living room to separate it from the kitchen. They also added a prefabricated fireplace and oak parquet flooring to the hall, den, and master bedroom. Their decorating philosophy is simple: Neutral backgrounds, white walls, inexpensive but heavily shagged oatmeal cotton rugs, oatmeal upholstery on the plain sofa, and lots of paintings which Ken has collected since his M.I.T. days. They've also used hot color accents, a mixture of old and new, machine-made and man-made accessories with the freest hand. We like here—as in the Longinotti house—the mélange of modern, abstract expressionist art with folk art, Early American with Scandinavian, paint and wood.

Although the Marks keep rotating their collection of paintings and prints, there's never enough space to show them all, but their STAIRCASE WALL (above left) helps. This small art gallery makes going up the stairs quite an experience. IN THE LIVING ROOM (far right) there is nothing homemade about the functional teak coffee table, designed by Ken Marks. The coasters are built in. The storage-display—another Marks design—is balanced at the other end of the room (above) by a prefab fireplace painted paprika and elevated on a brick platform, a strong element in an otherwise all-white room. An Early American quilt on the table and red-painted Scandinavian bench go well with American primitive chairs. THE GAY YOUNG BEDROOM (right) with strong colors and shapes belongs to daughter Kristy. Her parents painted the chests—originally done in a black, Oriental style. Each drawer is lacquered a different shade of red or yellow. Kristy has outgrown her cradle (a Nana Ditzel design) and now uses it as a storage place for stuffed toys. Sunny yellow plays a big part in making this one of the most cheerful nurseries we've seen.

SO YOU'RE LEARNING TO COOK

breakfast, the day's most important meal, can be fun to prepare. Here are two eye-opening recipes that show you how easy it is to make good muffins (the secret's in the mixing) and perfect scrambled eggs (the secret's in the cooking temperature). Add fruit or juice and a beverage and the day is off to a good start.

- 1 egg
- 1 cup milk
- ¼ cup pure vegetable oil or cooled, melted shortening
- 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
- ¼ cup sugar
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 12 teaspoons strawberry jam

1. Heat oven to 400° F.

2. Grease just the bottoms of twelve 2¼-inch muffin-pan cups. Or, put paper baking cups into the pan.

3. Beat the egg slightly with a fork in a medium-size bowl.

4. Measure the milk and stir into the egg. Measure and stir in the oil or melted and cooled shortening.

5. Put the sifted flour, sugar, baking powder, and salt into a sifter. Sift the dry ingredients directly into the egg mixture.

6. Stir only until the dry ingredients are moistened. The batter should be lumpy. The secret of good muffins is not to beat the batter—just stir it.

7. Fill each muffin cup one third full. Drop a teaspoonful of strawberry jam on the center of the batter in each cup. Add batter to each cup to fill it two thirds full.

8. Bake 20 to 25 minutes or until golden brown. Muffins will have gently rounded tops and will look pebbly rather than smooth.

9. Remove from oven. Place on wire rack. Loosen muffins immediately with a small spatula. Serve warm. Makes 1 dozen.

- 6 eggs
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ⅓ teaspoon pepper
- 6 tablespoons milk or light cream
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine

1. Break eggs one at a time into a cup, then turn each into a medium-size bowl.

2. Add salt, pepper, and milk or cream.

3. Beat with rotary egg beater until yolks and whites are thoroughly mixed.

4. Heat butter or margarine in 9-inch skillet until it is hot enough to make a drop of water sizzle.

5. Tilt skillet to cover bottom and sides with melted fat.

6. Reduce heat. Pour in egg mixture. Eggs should cook slowly. Too high a heat will toughen them.

7. Cook slowly, lifting partly cooked and set eggs from the bottom with a spatula or fork. The thin, uncooked part will flow to the bottom. Don't stir constantly.

8. Continue cooking until eggs are thickened throughout but still moist and just a bit underdone. Remember, the heat remaining in the skillet after you take it from the range will finish cooking the eggs. Makes 3 to 4 servings.

HOME FIRE ALARMS

John H. Ingersoll

Does it pay to install a fire-alarm system in your home? There's no doubt that the right system increases your family's chances of surviving a serious fire. But the system must be adequate and also properly installed.

What is an adequate, properly installed system? It's one that will:

1. Have component parts tested and labeled by Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc. (UL) or Factory Mutual Laboratories (FM). Look for the UL or FM seal on the heat- and/or smoke-detecting devices, wiring or tubing, control unit, and the audible alarm. A few salesmen will imply that the entire system they're selling is UL or FM approved. It isn't so. As yet, neither agency has passed on a complete home-alarm package because no one system will fit the needs of every home. (However, the National Fire Protection Association is presently working on performance standards for complete alarm systems.)

2. Cover all the danger areas in your home. Closets, bathrooms, laundries, and garages are spots that often get passed by and shouldn't. In the average three-bedroom house, NFPA says there are 18 to 20 locations where heat-detecting devices ought to be installed. NFPA also warns that these devices won't signal the alarm fast enough unless installed on the basis of their rated coverage.

For example, a detector with a rating of 2500 square feet (the average for quality home units) will adequately protect a 50x50' space, provided the device is installed in the exact center of the space and on the ceiling. Phrased another way, the heat from substantial, open flames within 25 feet of the sensor—but not, of course, the controlled flames in your fireplace—will trip the alarm in time. Each sensor is set to go off at a certain temperature (usually 135 to 180 degrees) or at a sudden increase in room temperature.

Another tip from NFPA: Think seriously about installing at least one smoke-detecting device. Smoke is just as lethal as flame. Smoldering fires can produce clouds of deadly fumes and smoke before flames even appear, much less get hot enough to trigger a heat detector.

3. Have alarms loud enough to hear from any point in your home, and loud enough to wake you from a sound sleep. Your bedroom is a good spot in which to install an alarm. Whatever type it is—buzzer, bell, or horn—it should be recognizably different from the doorbell or telephone. You might also think about an outside alarm the neighbors can hear when you're away.

4. Have a reliable source of electricity. To NFPA, "reliable" means having a primary source (house current reduced through a transformer to 6-volt or 12-volt), and standby storage batteries. Power from the house should be tapped at the service entrance; not from one of the existing circuits. Then, an electrical fault in the house won't knock out the alarm.

5. Contain some way to periodically test the alarm, battery, circuits, and detectors to make sure they are in good operating order.

Now what should all this cost you? Talking about systems only—and you'll see why in a minute—you could spend about $25 for the absolute minimum, about $250 to put up a decent system, and as much as $2500 for the last word in protection.

There are also many single-station fire-alarm devices not labeled by UL or approved by FM. They're widely sold for about $4.95 to $15.

Some of the single-station alarms plug into a household outlet. Others operate on flashlight batteries. A third type contains a heat-sensitive metal coil that unwinds to trip a buzzer and a fourth is a small aerosol can of compressed gas that expands under heat, breaks a seal and escapes through a small whistle or horn. (The latter type shouldn't be confused with UL-labeled, gas-operated, single-station devices.) We'll run over their drawbacks, and then you decide whether you still want to buy one.

First, few of these devices are listed by UL or FM. This doesn't mean they can't be any good, but it does increase that possibility.

Second, by buying one of these units, you leave gaping holes in your protection. Of course, you could buy one for every danger zone, but a flock of them will rival the cost of a quality system with several stations.

Third, the single-station units have self-contained alarms. Fine, unless fire breaks out in the basement while you're asleep on the second floor. Will you hear the alarm?

Fourth, the units powered by flashlight batteries will work as long as the batteries work. Will you remember to replace them every time they wear out? Will you know when the batteries are dead? Units that plug into house current are useless if lightning or an electrical fire blows the fuse.

There are UL-labeled mechanical or gas-operated single-station alarms. They're given ratings on the same basis as the electrical devices, and may be used confidently in the home, particularly in spaces where open-planning has eliminated partitions.

Moving on to fire-alarm systems, here's what $25 will get you: two good heat detectors, a small buzzer or bell with a test button, and some wiring. Are two detectors enough? NFPA says no, but two detectors that work are better than none.

In the next category are included the home-alarm kits with prices starting at slightly under $100. This amount of money usually buys at least six heat detectors, an inside alarm, a control panel with test buttons, the proper wire (18/2 cable), and a 6-volt battery. Some makers even toss in the wire staples and mounting screws.

The kits are designed so you can add as many more heat detectors as you want, an outside alarm, and additional inside alarms, if necessary. For those kits that don't have it, a transformer-converter is available. This will knock down the 115-volt house current to 6-volt and automatically switch the system to batteries should the house power fail. Figure the cost of each new combination heat detector at under $9; an outside alarm between $30 and $40; extra inside alarms from $4 to $40, depending on size and type; a transformer-converter, between $20 and $35; another 6-volt battery, if needed, under $4; more 18/2 cable, costing about 10c a foot.

As the word "kit" implies, installation isn't part of the package. So the question arises, can you put it in yourself? NFPA fence-sits on that one. Underwriters Laboratories feels an electrician is mandatory for installation.

Smoke detectors ought to be mentioned at this point. Although they can't be tied into home-alarm systems, and are single-station units, they don't belong in the "gadget" group. The good ones for the home cost around $50. They usually feature a heat detector, have their own alarm, and may be plugged into an outlet. To be doubly safe, you'd be wise to have a qualified electrician wire it directly to the service entrance.

Next step up the price ladder is the system installed by a qualified technician. It's going to be a custom job, tailored to the size and layout of your house. Like any good electrical job, none of the wiring will show. But most important, a specialist in fire alarms can give you a system you can depend on. The price? In the average three-bedroom house, an installation wouldn't drop much below $300, nor climb much over $900, depending on the type of system, labor costs, and the amount of equipment needed.

Want to really throw your money around? In some communities you can get 24-hour monitored protection with a system that's tied directly into a central alarm service. Installation costs run around $800 to $3000, with an annual maintenance charge of $40 to $100. Many of these systems also give burglary protection.

Then, how about a sprinkler system? Some fire experts consider this the only complete protection, since it not only warns of fire, but helps put it out. Installed in the typical six- or alarms: In many communities, fast-talking and faster-moving cheats have been hawking these systems door-to-door. In Cleveland, for example, a couple was persuaded to sign an "installation permit" for a home fire-alarm system. Throughout his artful sales pitch, the salesman avoided mentioning the full price of the system, stressing instead such things as a promise to pay $25 for store for $30. And an electrician they knew said he could have installed the job for another $30. Finally, the promise of $25 for each recommendation proved a downright fraud.

In another area, a family was cowed by ghastly motion pictures of fire victims into signing for $750 in finance company payments—for equipment they could have bought for under $45.

How can you avoid such gyps? For one thing, don't rely on intuition. The door-to-door swindlers are first-rate actors. Families who have been fleeced often can't believe it, even after they know the facts.

But two moves on your part will beat a gyp every time. First, make sure you really know who he is. When he says he represents a local firm check it out before buying a thing. And watch out for the man who claims he's from a national organization. Ask for his business card and tell him to come back later. If he says something like, "I can't come back . . . this is your only chance to take advantage of this offer," or, "You're probably concerned because you think I'm selling something . . . no, this is only a survey (or demonstration or interview)," it's almost certain that he's a gyp. In another dodge, the salesman claims he's a government or fire department official on an "inspection tour." Make him prove it.

Your second line of protection is to always read and be sure you understand every word of any paper you sign. If a supposed "installation permit"—or any other document—commits you to time payments the salesman hasn't told you about, don't sign.

Does it pay to install a fire-alarm system in your home? As we've said, a lot depends on the quality of the system. But also remember that last year there were over 550,000 fires in private homes. And there were roughly 275,000 serious injuries and 6700 deaths from home fires. Of the deaths, some 3600 were children. The old chestnut, "It can't happen to me," is a risky excuse for not at least considering a home fire-alarm system. The alarm plus reliable fire extinguishers will give you the jump on saving property and lives. Of course, the equipment by itself won't save lives. You've got to make proper use of it. More important, your family should back up the alarm with an escape plan everyone is familiar with and has rehearsed. ▲ seven-room home, it almost surely would top $1000. (Incidentally, today's sprinkler system is barely noticeable in a home.)

Until now, we've been talking about putting fire-alarm systems into existing homes. Installing one in a new home during construction makes even more sense. For one thing, it costs less. The system that would go for $800 in an older home probably would cost less than $500 to install in a similar house under construction.

The Better Business Bureau warns about one more aspect of home fire each sales recommendation the couple gave him. With the signed papers in his pocket, the salesman shook hands all around and vanished.

The Cleveland couple goofed on two counts. First, they bought a fire-alarm system they knew nothing about from a total stranger. Second, they signed a paper without reading it. The "installation permit" was really a contract for $200 worth of high-interest time payments.

Later, they discovered that the alarm installed in their home could have been purchased in a department

ADDING A DECK TO

One of the nicest things about decks is the fact that they go with almost any style of house. Here we show some sketches of just a few typical situations. Give your own house another look and see what ideas you come up with. Then consult an architect or builder for advice on feasibility, local code requirements, and probable cost. Don't tackle the job yourself unless you've had a lot of experience with large carpentry projects.

To the side. If you have a slope away from the house, you can easily add a deck without involving too much structural alteration. This Colonial house shows how a deck would look added at the side, with a patio for the lower floor beneath it.

YOUR HOUSE

Over a garage. You can add a deck at the front of a split-level house. By putting it over the garage and driveway, as shown here, you can minimize the bulk of garage doors in the overall design of the house.

Between wings. The house doesn't have to be high off the ground for you to add a deck. It can be installed at ground level, instead of using a patio, which is usually down a step or two. The two wings of the house shelter this deck from the wind.

A slope at the back. If the land slopes to the rear and your house is two-stories high in back, you can extend a deck the length of the house. It reduces the apparent height of the house and gives an exit route from the rear, plus outdoor living.

HOW TO PAINT A PANELED DOOR

1 Remove hardware. (If you can remove the door from its hinges and lay it on a flat, raised surface it will be easier to paint.) If door remains upright paint top moldings.

2 Then paint the top panels. Repeat for other panels working from top down. Be sure to brush paint very smooth in corners.

3 When the panels are painted, paint across top of door, across divider between panels, across bottom. Do sides of door last. When dry replace the hardware.

WARNER

Aren't you too young to feel so tired?

YOU NOTICE it day in, day out. You get up tired and go to bed tired. And you look as tired as you feel. Of course, there's no single reason for it...but if you're one of the 40 million women who have a regular period, you may lose much more blood-iron every month than you replace through the foods you eat. It is this loss of blood-iron that can leave you always looking and feeling tired.

Women Need Twice As Much Iron

Even if you're only 5 feet 2, you need twice as much iron every day in your diet as your 6-foot husband. It isn't likely that you eat as much iron-rich foods, so you may develop the kind of iron deficit that drains you of your energy and youth. Why risk it? Put extra iron in your blood by taking Geritol regularly to make up for your monthly losses.

Just two Geritol tablets, or two tablespoons of Geritol liquid, contain twice the iron in a pound of calf's liver. In only one day, Geritol-iron is in your bloodstream carrying strength and energy to every part of your body. Check with your doctor, and if iron-poor blood is making you tired, take Geritol. Feel stronger fast...in seven days, or money back from Geritol.

GUIDE FOR MAKING DRAPERIES

This guide will help you estimate how many yards of fabric you will need for making simple draperies.

Standard procedure: As an example, for a standard single, double-hung window, 36" wide and 42" long, it is generally best to use double fullness of fabric for standard draperies. Double fullness means twice the width of your window. If you need more fullness, two-and-a-half times the window width will be required.

Triple fullness means three times the width of your window and is generally used for sheer or very thin fabrics. Standard curtains usually have a pinch-pleated top. There is a special "pleater" tape available to make this easy and accurate.

For a 36x42" window a 40" width fabric would be easiest to use. However, drapery fabrics come in many widths—just divide into your window width, estimating width desired.

You would need two widths of 40" fabric for a 36x42" window, each one 1½ yards long (3 yards of 40" fabric). This will make a right and left panel for each pair of draperies.

Allow 1¾" for side hems. This means a finished hem 1¼"—the extra ½" is to be turned in at edges. Allow 4" for heading at top of each drapery panel. The remaining 8" (for this size) is for a double folded 4" hem. The double folded hem adds weight at the bottom of the curtain and it will hang more evenly.

Stationary rods: If the rods have side returns, meaning that they extend 3" out from wall, you must add an extra 3" width at the outside edge of each drapery panel. This will total 6" by 1½ yards. If it is necessary to add a strip of fabric to make up width required, add the strip at each edge on outsides of panels.

Be sure to add this amount to your total yardage. Usually this means another 1½ yards. However, since you will probably be making more than one pair of draperies, this extra 1½ yards will make 3" by 1½-yard strips for 6 pairs of curtains. Do not skimp on fabric. Instead use a less expensive fabric—but follow the rules for fullness.

Traverse rods: Here too you must add a 3" wide strip to accommodate the side returns of the rod. You also have to add 2 inches more at each side of the center front of your draperies for overlap when draperies are drawn.

Variables: For very sheer fabrics you may prefer 7", 10", or deeper hems. This measurement should always be doubled—that is a 7" hem requires 14" for a double folded hem. This hem will make your draperies (or curtains) look better and hang more professionally.

Painful hemorrhoids?

All too often, humans who sit and stand pay the price of vertical posture. Sitting and standing combine with the force of gravity to produce extra pressure on veins and tissues in and around the rectal area. The result may be painful, itching or burning hemorrhoids.

The first thought of hemorrhoid sufferers is to relieve their pain and discomfort. However, of the products most often used for hemorrhoids, some contain no pain-killing agent at all...others have one too weak to provide necessary relief...and still others provide only lubrication.

Now at last there is a formulation which concentrates on pain. It actually has over 8 times more pain-killing power than the topical anesthetic most commonly used in hemorrhoid remedies. 8 times the power to ease the itching, pain, and burning of hemorrhoids.

The name of this product is Nupercainal. Nupercainal starts to work on contact. Provides prolonged relief from pain. Soothes and lubricates.

When you suspect you have hemorrhoids, check with your doctor. If hemorrhoids are the cause of your discomfort, chances are he'll recommend Nupercainal. Almost two-thirds of the people who now use Nupercainal first heard about it from physicians.

Nupercainal is available without prescription at professional pharmacies everywhere. Ask for ointment or new suppositories with free pocket-pack. (Say New-per-cane-all.)

THE INSTANT GARDEN

We live in a hurried age, one in which almost every need, desire, or whim can be satisfied instantaneously. The push-button era is upon us—even in the garden.

BEDDING PLANTS . . .

If you are one of the millions who have lost patience with the leisurely rhythms of the seed-earth-sun-water life process, you can now accelerate it into an immediate experience. You can adopt your plants full grown and love them just as much. Millions of foundlings in flats are taken home annually by gardeners cut off from the land but not from the need to cuddle its mass-produced orphans.

Of course bedding plants cost more than seeds. A single petunia plant in bloom costs more than a packet of seeds capable of producing over a hundred plants. But since most modern gardens are small, the concept of instant beauty becomes economically feasible. In a matter of minutes, for the price of two tickets to a hit play, you can set out a border of 50 petunias in full flower and edge them with as many blue ageratum. Your nearby garden center or greenhouse can supply you with dozens of blooming annuals—from alyssum to zinnia.

Another advantage, as though you weren't already convinced, is that you can choose the exact colors you like. And you don't have to depend on the poetic but elusive prose descriptions ("dawn-pink suffused with tender mauve") often encountered in catalogs and on seed packets.

There is a debit side. While annuals in full bloom are often lovely when purchased, they may not remain so. In order to produce plants that will flower quickly in small flats or pots, breeders must often sacrifice long periods of bloom, compactness, and other desirable qualities. Quick-flowering in many instances means quick-dying. You can be reasonably assured of long bloom, however, if you select hybrid varieties—especially in the case of petunias. They are improved types that flower earlier and usually keep on flowering longer.

. . . AND OTHER PLANTS

The possibilities for instant garden glamour are not limited to the nursery flat or peat pot. Shrubs and even trees grow in five-gallon cans nowadays, and it's possible to plant a forest in less time than it takes to chop one down. Whether it survives and thrives depends on you. Although such nursery stock is usually fairly small, it is in active growth and will give a quicker effect than a dormant plant that must be cut back when planted and given time to develop a system of new roots.

If your budget will survive the blow, you can plant entire hedgerows with canned specimens. Planting is so simple. You get special shears from the nursery to cut away the can, then stick the shrub with the earth around its roots into a hole you've dug in advance.

Rose buff? Potted specimens of the poets' favorite flower are available all over the country. They come in standard clay pots or larger tar-paper containers. You can plant roses at almost any time of the year. The smaller clay pots aren't a good buy after May 15th, when growing roots need more room. You can plant roses in the larger (nine to ten inches across) tar-paper pots until well into July. They are usually sold with flower buds already on them.

Later in the season—right into October as a matter of fact—you can set out chrysanthemums in bud or in flower. The move doesn't harm them in the least. You can buy just a few for a bright accent, you can fill up that bed of spent annuals with them, or devote an entire border to them.

BULBS ARE SO EASY!

Faster than a computer can decipher, store, and recall all three volumes of the Standard Encyclopedia of Horticulture, a few summer-flowering bulbs will bring high drama to your garden.

Ismene (Hymenocallis calathina), the Peruvian daffodil named for Antigone's uncertain sister, will bloom in a few weeks if you plant it no later than the last week in July. It grows to two feet. Set the bulbs deeply.

Lycoris squamigera, known in common parlance as the hardy amaryllis, will open clusters of lavender-rose blooms late in the summer if you plant it in midsummer. Both lycoris and Ismene do best in rich soil.

If you can manage to find bulbs and pot plants that are normally offered for sale at a different season, you can have instant bloom. The fall-flowering crocus, yellow-flowered sternbergia, and colchicum will bloom if planted as late as August. Even if you don't plant colchicums they'll flower in fall!

Lily bulbs that have been kept in cold storage will sometimes bloom in September from a July planting. Tuberous begonias that are in full bloom and well-established in pots are one of the most satisfactory plants to transfer to the garden for a quick face-lifting. Plant the large tubers of elephant's ear (Colocasia antiquorum). The foliage grows rapidly and will provide abundant green for the background of your beautiful albeit instant garden.

HOW DO YOU LIKE POTATOES?

Potatoes don't always have to be mashed. How long is it since you've had Country-Fried or Hashed-Brown Potatoes? Here's a selection of old-favorite recipes to help you vary the way you serve this daily fare.

1 medium-size onion, grated	3 tbs. flour
2 eggs	2 tbs. chopped parsley
1 tsp. salt	Butter or margarine

Grate potatoes on fine grater into bowl; drain very well. Add onion, eggs, salt, pepper, flour, and parsley; mix well. Heat 2 to 3 tablespoons butter or margarine in large skillet. Drop potato mixture by heaping tablespoonfuls into hot fat. Fry until golden brown on bottom; turn and brown second side, adding more fat as needed. Drain on paper towels. Pancakes may be served as a vegetable with meats or as a luncheon or supper dish accompanied with applesauce or sour cream. Makes 12 to 14.

HASHED-BROWN POTATOES

4 c. cold, cooked, diced potatoes	1/4 tsp. pepper
1/4 c. minced onion (1 small)	1/4 c. milk
2 tsp. salt	2 tbs. flour
	1/2 c. butter or margarine

Combine potatoes, onion, salt, pepper, and milk. Shape into 6 patties; dust lightly with flour. Heat butter or margarine in large skillet; add patties. Cook until golden brown on one side; turn and brown second side. Makes 6 servings.

COTTAGE-FRIED POTATOES

3 tbs. butter or margarine	1/2 tsp. salt
3 c. cold, cooked, cubed potatoes	1/8 tsp. pepper
	1 tbs. chopped parsley

Heat butter or margarine in large skillet. Add potatoes; cook about 10 minutes or until browned on one side; turn and brown second side. Season with salt and pepper; sprinkle with parsley. Makes 4 to 6 servings. Potatoes O'Brien: Sauté 1/4 cup chopped onion and 3 tablespoons chopped green pepper in butter or margarine until soft. Add potatoes and 2 tablespoons chopped pimiento. Cook until potatoes are browned, shaking pan occasionally. Season with salt and pepper.

MASHED POTATOES

10 medium-size potatoes	3/4 c. warm milk
1/4 c. butter or margarine	Salt
	Pepper

Scrub potatoes well; remove "eyes" and blemishes. Cook in boiling, salted water 35 to 40 minutes or until tender. Drain; peel. Mash potatoes in large bowl with potato masher or electric mixer until no lumps remain. Beat in butter or margarine. Add just enough warm milk gradually to potatoes, beating constantly, until potatoes are fluffy and creamy. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Makes 8 servings.

Duchess Potatoes: Mash potatoes. Beat in 2 eggs, butter or margarine, and enough milk to make smooth and fluffy. Season with salt and pepper. Mound with spoon or pipe through pastry bag on lightly greased cookie sheet. Brush with melted butter or margarine. Brown in 450° F. oven.

COUNTRY-FRIED POTATOES

4 large potatoes	1 tsp. salt
3 tbs. butter or margarine	1/8 tsp. pepper

Wash and pare potatoes; cut into thin slices. Heat butter or margarine in large skillet. Add potato slices; fry until golden brown on one side; turn and brown second side. Season with salt and pepper. Makes 4 servings.

Lyonnais Potatoes: Sauté 1/2 cup chopped onion in butter or margarine before adding potatoes. Cook as above.

FRENCH-FRIED POTATOES

6 medium-size potatoes, pared	Oil or fat for frying
Salted ice water	Salt

Cut potatoes into 1/4-inch-wide strips. Let stand in salted ice water 20 minutes. Drain; dry well between paper towels. Put enough oil or fat into heavy saucepan to make 1 1/2 inches deep when heated. Heat to 375° F. Fry potatoes about 5 minutes or until they just brown. Drain on paper towels in shallow baking pan. Cover with wax paper; set aside. Just before serving, heat oil or fat to 390° F. Fry potatoes until crisp and brown. Drain on paper towels; sprinkle with salt. Keep warm in 300° F. oven until all potatoes are browned. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

SUPER BAKED POTATOES

Scrub large potatoes well; dry; prick with fork. Potatoes may be baked separately at 400° F. for one hour or along with meat that is roasting or baking. At 325° F., they will take about 1 1/2 hours, at 350° F., about 1 1/4 hours. Place potatoes on oven rack or in shallow pan. Bake until tender when tested with a two-tined fork. When potatoes are done, cut a cross in the top of each, hold with towel and press gently to allow steam to escape and potato to come through cross. Top with butter or margarine or one of the following:

- Mixture of 1/2 cup dairy sour cream; 4 tablespoons finely chopped, pared cucumber; and 1/8 teaspoon salt.
- Butter or margarine and caraway, sesame, or poppy seeds.
- Sprinkle with seasoned salt; add a pat of butter or margarine; top with dairy sour cream, chopped chives, crumbled bacon.
- Butter or margarine and minced green onions or chopped chives.
- Mixture of 1/2 cup dairy sour cream, 2 tablespoons vinegar, and 1 1/2 tablespoons blue-cheese-salad-dressing mix.

POTATO PUFF

2 c. thick mashed potatoes	2 tbs. grated Parmesan cheese
1/2 c. light cream	2 tbs. chopped parsley
1 tsp. salt	4 egg yolks
Dash of ground nutmeg	4 egg whites
	1/4 tsp. cream of tartar

Heat oven to 375° F. Grease 1 1/2-quart casserole. Combine mashed potatoes, cream, salt, nutmeg, Parmesan cheese, and parsley. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored; beat into potato mixture. Beat egg whites until foamy; add cream of tartar; beat until stiff peaks form. Fold into potato mixture. Turn into casserole. Bake 30 minutes or until puffy and golden. Serve at once. Makes 6 servings.

Why do Taylor after-dinner wines keep such good company all evening long?

The flavor is marvelously mellow.

Sip after sip.

Like good party talk.

It's the kind of flavor that goes well with a delicious dessert.
Or takes its place.

And carries through smoothly in every glass you refill.

Flavor like this comes only when you create a port or sherry slowly, naturally.

With the Taylor touch.

Only when we're sure our wine has reached the peak of natural flavor and care can do no more, do we bottle it.

For pleasant evenings.

And good company.

If it's a Taylor wine, you'll love it.

BALANCE IN DECORATING

Balance is that mysteriously potent force that makes or breaks a room. Because an innate sense of balance is rare, "bad balance" and "off balance" room arrangements are among the most common decorating mistakes. Happily, they are also among the cheapest, fastest, and easiest to correct. Balance can often be restored by rearranging the furniture, and that's easier and cheaper than repainting, repapering, or reupholstering.

WHAT IS BALANCE?

Before you enlist your husband to push the living room furniture around one more time, ask yourself if you really know what balance means as applied to decorating.

Have you ever seen a room that should have been just about perfect—but wasn't? You were aware that there was something not quite right with that room as you checked off one good point after another. Color? No—great color scheme. Furniture? No—nothing wrong there, fine furniture, comfortable too. Lamps, maybe? No—just right for the room.

The fault lay with a lack of balance, of course. Maybe all the major pieces were huddled together so that the room seemed to list to starboard while the other, unweighted side felt as if it were rising up. That's balance, or rather lack of balance. And it's easy to remedy—all that's needed is a more equal distribution of major pieces (sofa, lounge chairs, chests).

While a badly balanced room will always make you uncomfortable, a well balanced one is easily recognized too—it's restful and complete.

TWO TYPES OF BALANCE

Basically, there are two kinds of balance—symmetric balance and its opposite, asymmetric balance or, as it is known in the decorating field, occult balance.

Symmetric balance is easily recognized and the more prevalent of the two. These arrangements are quite easy to do once you understand the principle, which is the same as the mirror image. You work from a center line out. You see literally hundreds of examples of it everyday of your life—here's a typical one: A fireplace centered on a wall with a mirror above it is flanked by a pair of French doors. If the centers of the doors are at equal distance from the center of the fireplace, you have symmetric balance. Look around you, you're surrounded by examples of symmetric balance. It is the perfect equalization of attractions—it will give any room a degree of formality and dignity; it's usually the right solution but if used to excess becomes too safe, too dull. The 18th and early 19th centuries were the epitome of symmetric balance. Every window was echoed by a door; almost every piece of furniture had a twin.

OCCULT BALANCE

Occult balance is sensed rather than seen with the naked eye. You feel the weight of an object (or piece of furniture) then balance a big piece with several little ones. The number of pieces or objects involved will probably be uneven. Look to Japan and Japanese art for examples of occult balance. To turn our example of the fireplace and the French doors into an example of occult balance here's what we do: Set a sofa at right angles to one of the French doors with a pair of chairs and a table between opposite. Or balance a large painting, hung off center with a group of several small pictures. You still work with your imaginary center line but remember the seesaw as you go along. The heavier pieces closer to the center, the lighter ones farther out. Suppose you're arranging some things on a mantelpiece—place the biggest (heaviest) object closer to the center line, the smaller (lighter) ones away from the center, toward the edge.

MIX BOTH TYPES

Just as we mix styles of furniture, patterns, wood and painted finishes—we can mix types of balance in one room. Your basic arrangement might be symmetric but for variety, movement, and liveliness hang pictures or place your accessories in occult-balance groupings. However, if your overall room scheme is strictly occult balance you may want to hang pictures and place accessories in symmetric balance to give some stability.

To make yourself familiar with these two kinds of balance, go through this copy of American Home and see how many examples of each you can find.

DON'T STOP SHORT

Up to now we have been discussing balance as it relates to the architectural features of a room and to decorative accessories. Balance need not—in fact should not—stop there. Don't forget color and pattern play a major role too. A sofa done in an exuberant, brilliantly colored floral print can look much bigger and heavier than if it were upholstered to match the wall color, a treatment which would tend to make it "fade away" and look smaller. You might consider an occult-balance arrangement of sofa, pair of chairs, and table. If the chairs look small compared to the sofa, slipcover them in the "wild" print—and watch how they grow bigger (this is just another form of occult balance). Or if your lounge chairs tend to overpower your sofa, reverse the procedure; have them match the walls while the sofa is treated to a bright, splashy pattern, and balance will be comfortably restored.

The main thing to remember as you work out your room in terms of balance is that you must think in terms of weight and scale rather than strictly in terms of physical size.

HOW TO MAKE YOUR HOME FRAGRANT

What nicer, easier way is there to make your home more pleasant—and memorable—than with a delicious smell? Fragrance, however, is relative. What may be delicious at 7:30 A.M.—namely the smell of toast, coffee, and bacon—might not be particularly pleasant at 5 P.M.

Timing, therefore, is important. Here we've collected a number of ways to perfume your house, so that no matter what the hour or reason, it will be a fragrant, lovely place to visit—and more importantly for you, in which to live.

A big bowl of lemons on your kitchen counter, on your dining table, in your living room, or hall has a particularly pleasant fragrance. A well-placed vase full of eucalyptus can also give a fragrance to much of your home. It has a strong, pervasive, musky aroma.

Scented candles are now on the market in many varieties. It's fun to experiment with these or make your own. Fill your containers with Carolina Instant Scented Wax. It comes in many colors. (Small candles can be bought for 60¢ from the Carolina Soap and Candle Makers, Southern Pines, N.C.)

For a furniture wax that gives your room an attractive aroma and does a fine polishing job too, try Saint's Satin Wax. (Distributed by Baker Furniture, Inc., 305 East 63 St., New York, N.Y.) A tin of wax sells for $1.75.

Scented lacquer used on drawers and shelves is another way to make furniture smell pretty. Mary Chess (597 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y.) makes White Lilac and Tapestry scented lacquer that sell for $4.50 a bottle.

Why not burn incense before a party to add a touch—just the faintest whiff—of the exotic? And there's nothing like incense sticks to refresh the air in a musty hotel or motel room. (Azuma, 666 Lexington Avenue, New York, N.Y.)

Tuck small pillows of Balsam fir into the corners of your luggage or storage closets. It has a dry, forest-like smell. (Paine Incense Company, 49 Middle St., Lewiston, Maine, $1.) Or make your own by drying pine branches in a warm oven, then strip branches.

Scented soap in a jar or small bowl is refreshing to look at on your bathroom counter. Save small pieces of fragrant soap and put them in your drawers and closets too.

Save your empty perfume bottles and leave them uncovered in your drawers and closets. Tie a ribbon around the bottle and hang it.

A porcelain lamp can double as a night lamp or perfume burner. You put the perfume in the top of the lamp, light the lamp, and as the perfume heats, the fragrance fills your room. (Mary Chess perfume-burning set, $9.)

Estée Lauder has just come out with a new Youth Dew closet spray. She also makes Youth Dew perfumed lingerie disks.

Scented lining paper adds a touch of elegance to closets and bureau drawers. (Estée Lauder's Youth Dew; six sheets, $6.50. Sachet Paper by House of Fragrance, 711 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. Four sheets, $5, aroma—Nuit de Longchamps.) Or try scented flannel. (Karen Carson Creatives, 2571 Timber Lane, Dayton, Ohio, Flannelle Parfumée, 18x29" by House of Fragrance—$10, scents of Lubin parfums.)

Scented hangers are also available for your closets. (Charette, 6 East 32 Street, New York, N.Y. A set of two sells for $3.) Mary Chess makes individual hanger covers that sell for $4.50 each.

For lingerie the sachet tuck-in and corners are ideal. Or keep your lovely lingerie in cases that have sachet powder within their linings. (André Richard, 100 West 22 St., New York, N.Y. Lingerie sets come in three sizes, from $16; tuck-in, 50¢.)

To make your own sachets, purchase the sachet powder (perfumed powder by Mary Chess: 1 ounce, $3.75; ½ pound, $10) and fill a pillow with it.

Potpourri is a beautiful mixture of fragrant dried flowers, spices, and herbs, fortified with their matching oils. The mixture comes in jars, bowls, boxes, or hidden within lingerie pillows. (Shelley Marks, 3 West 56 St., New York, N.Y., $7.50; Carolina Soap and Candle Makers, $2.) To preserve the scent, leave the potpourri in covered bowls and uncover only when you want the essence in your room.

A pomander is a perfumed ball that you can hang in clothes closets, place with linens, or put in lingerie drawers. To make your own, take a fresh orange, stick it with cloves in such a way that you leave space to tie a narrow ribbon around it. Leave an extra length of ribbon for hanging. Press cinnamon on the orange. Place the orange in wax or cellophane paper and surround it with potpourri and orrisroot. Leave the orange to absorb the fragrances. After two days, uncover the ball and let it dry. Then tie on the ribbon for hanging. The fragrance is very delightful.

Flowers, while fragrant for a few days, shouldn't be left around the house too long. Remember, they only smell beautiful when they're very much alive.

If cigarette smoke bothers you, have a candle burning during parties or whenever there's a gathering of smokers around. It helps clear the air. Pails of water are effective, when strategically placed, in lessening after-paint smells.

A fireplace adds its own warmth and woody fragrance to a home—whether it's on a cool summer night or in the dead of winter. If you have one, use it often.

DO NOT STAPLE OR FOLD

We have quite a bit going for us these days, not the least of which is the privilege of buying almost everything we want without cash. "Charge it" is probably the most often-used command in the English language and it is quite possible that we make use of those embossed plastic cards more than is sensible.

There's one for the service station, the druggist, several department stores, and of course, the no-longer status symbol national credit card that lures us into restaurants and clubs we wouldn't dare enter if cold cash was the medium of exchange each time the waiter brought the bill. Foolish or extravagant or not, we enjoy the convenience, and sometimes around the first of each month it gives us some comfort to know that the national economy would be in a terrible mess if we hadn't done our share to keep the men in the factories on the job. In fact, we appreciate the privilege. It has gotten us into the habit of going to the bank each payday.

There is something that is disturbing about this easy credit, once-a-month-pay-the-piper, computerized way of life and that is we have a feeling we are taking on a kind of identity not unlike the serial number on an automobile. We have a number. In fact we have several numbers, none of which we are able to remember. Of course these numbers are called account numbers, but we know better. This multiple identification is who we really are. Disturbing? Frightening is more like it. The mere fact that we sign our name for the meal we have in a restaurant, or for the purchase made in the local emporium, doesn't mean half as much as the number stamped somewhere on the face of the numerous credit cards in our pocket. The moment it is imprinted on the receipt of our purchase we know that our true identity has been recorded for a particular kind of electronic posterity.

There was a time when the only numbers which concerned us were those on our auto license plates, or maybe the number on the piece of cardboard we held each Saturday morning while waiting our turn at the bakery. Those days are gone forever. No longer does our good friend Huang the laundryman tear a slip of paper with a mysterious Chinese character on it and hand us half of it to redeem our laundry the following week. Now the piece of colored paper has a number on it. A small slice of romance was carved from life when this came about. About the same thing happened when the Post Office zip-coded the entire nation.

Everything has a number today. When someone tells you they have your number they aren't just kidding. Somewhere, in some sterile room, small white lights are going on and off all over a huge board while an equally huge contrivance talks in a mysterious language. The words are punctures in an envelope-size card, which you will receive in the mail in the form of a bill, or it might be an invitation to join a book club. Sometimes it brings the news that even now you might be the lucky winner of a convertible.

There are quite a few misguided souls who will defend this new kind of numbers game on the grounds that it is the most efficient way ever devised by man to take care of the tremendous volume of miscellany necessary to keep the wheels of progress in motion. We won't argue the point, but we will be hard to convince that a rose will smell as sweet no matter what its number. As a matter of fact some of these electronically manufactured numbers are darned hard to read. The mixed metaphor is intentional.

Progress is great and most of the time we are all for it. Maybe we're afraid of numbers because when we were small a certain third-grade teacher impressed us with the fact that they were quite beyond our limited comprehension. Simple arithmetic was numbers and we never caught up with the rest of the class.

We hope this is not an isolated trauma and that there are others who share it with us. Unfortunately very little, or nothing can be done about it. It has become bigger than all of us, maybe even bigger than life. We don't really think though that it will go so far as to have a certain Reverend 076-931-114 ask a certain handsome and very young 429-163-21-000 if he will take the very beautiful and young 769-383-444-22 to be his lawfully wedded etc. Or will it!

Recently we read that the college kids now have a data processing system for weekend dates. Well, as we stated earlier, we're all for progress, but whatever happened to that good old American spirit of adventure? We hope the U.S.A. will be first in everything always, including being the first tenant on the moon, but we also hope that our youngsters will always have enough discernment and courage to be able to make a date on any enchanted spring afternoon across a crowded soda fountain.

By the way, what is your social security number? F. D'E.

How to Light Your Kitchen

If you have to work in your own shadow, or often find yourself squinting from the glare, there's something wrong with the lighting in your kitchen. From the letters we've received from readers, kitchen lighting is near the top of the list of "don't likes in my present kitchen." If you're planning on redecorating or building a new home or just want to improve what you have, here are some lighting facts you'll want to know.

WHAT KIND OF LIGHTING DO I NEED?

You need general illumination—a soft spread of light throughout the whole area to provide a pleasant working atmosphere. In addition, you need direct local illumination at all working areas such as sink, range, counter tops and snack bar.

GENERAL ILLUMINATION

Use large ceiling panels (or several smaller fixtures) of low brightness so that there is a uniform level of illumination all over.

To eliminate glare, counters and floors should not have glaring, bright, shiny surfaces. A satiny counter surface will help diffuse reflected light rays. The shield of the light should also diffuse and scatter the rays, and a light-colored ceiling will help provide an even reflection and eliminate shadows.

The correct kind of fixture is also of prime consideration. A center ceiling fixture is one of the most economical fixtures. It may be long or narrow, round or wide. If one is not large enough to provide sufficient light for the whole area, you'll need to complement it with another ceiling fixture or additional general lighting.

The more expensive luminous ceiling is probably the best system for general illumination in the kitchen. It consists of a false ceiling which is made of a diffusing material. The light sources are mounted above this ceiling. This can be included in your construction plans, or can be superimposed on your present ceiling if you can afford to lower ceiling height about one foot.

If this is not feasible, you may be interested in recessed luminous-panel units, which are often easier to incorporate in a remodeling job. Remember, to be sure of satisfaction with these, you need enough fixtures to produce satisfactory light distribution through the whole kitchen, a light-colored ceiling so that there is no disturbing contrast, and reflected light from other sources in the room to reduce brightness contrast between the panel and the wall.

LOCAL LIGHTING

Local lighting should be planned for the area that is to be illuminated. Counter tops that are beneath wall cabinets need under-cabinet lighting so you do not have to work in your own shadow. The most common way of providing this under-cabinet lighting is with fluorescent brackets, either built into the cabinets or attached to the wall directly under the cabinets. One or more downlights (recessed or otherwise) are excellent for providing direct spotlighting for sink, island counters, etc.

Lighting the eating area is most commonly done today with decorative light fixtures hanging from the ceiling. You're sure to find these in a wide variety of styles and designs to match your kitchen decor.

And don't forget portable high-intensity lamps. These are fine for a kitchen desk area where close work is done.

FLUORESCENT OR INCANDESCENT FIXTURES?

For general illumination fluorescent fixtures are recommended because of their low brightness, even light output, and cool operating temperatures. However, since there is a variation in the color quality of fluorescent fixtures, you'll want to be sure to specify the deluxe warm white fluorescent. This variety is kinder to complexion and food and harmonizes well with incandescent light sources.

A fluorescent linear fixture is also recommended for under-cabinet lighting because of its convenient shape.

Incandescent fixtures should be used where you want accents and high brightness (such as over a work island or eating area).

POINTS TO REMEMBER

Consider the reflection of light from surrounding surfaces in determining whether you will be bothered by glare or a bright-dark contrast. A light-colored ceiling, as we mentioned previously, will evenly reflect all light from it. Nonglossy surfaces will diffuse and scatter light rays to give pleasing overall illumination.

When you're redecorating, rebuilding, or starting from scratch, remember these points before installing your lighting and ask your local utility company for additional help. ▲

How to Protect Your Savings

economic recession or at a time when the stock market has suffered a sharp dip. You very likely could not convert your investment into cash except at a loss. That's why variable-dollar investments are decidedly not for the short term. They are chiefly for money goals to be realized at least five to 10 years in the future or longer.

Therefore, a variable-dollar investment is by far the best if not the only way to safeguard your long-term savings from inflation erosion. Variable-dollar investments ride high with inflation. As the cost of goods and services increases, the value of variable-dollar investments increases. Many of us have seen how the value of suburban land and real estate has risen sharply since the 1940s. And just in the last ten years while the average cost of living rose some 18 percent, the value of common stocks, another variable-dollar investment, on average, has risen roughly 100 percent.

FIXED- VERSUS VARIABLE-DOLLAR INVESTMENTS

To see how the two basic kinds of savings have worked out for people in recent years, let's look at the record, as Al Smith used to say. For example, suppose you came into a $10,000 windfall in 1955. How would you have invested that money? Assume you were putting it away to pay for the children's education or simply for a nest egg. How would your money have stood up against inflation since then if you put it in a safe deposit box, a bank, government savings bonds, or selected common stocks via a mutual fund? Which of these savings methods would you have chosen?

How your money would have grown or shrunk in value is shown in the accompanying table. It shows that $10,000 in cash stuck under the mattress or simply put in a safe deposit box would 10 years later be worth only $8576 in purchasing value because of creeping inflation.

If you had put the money into government savings bonds or a 4 percent compound interest savings account, after 10 years it would have grown to over $14,500 in dollar value. But its actual purchasing value would in each case be less than $13,000, as shown. That's during a 10-year period, by the way, when inflation had slowed down to a tortoise pace in the U.S. In 1966, however, it appears to be picking up again, as we noted earlier. By comparison, your money would have done over twice as well if you had put it in common stocks via an investment in a common stock mutual fund chosen for long-term growth. (Rather than choosing your own stocks, you paid a small charge for professional experts to choose the best growth stocks for you and continually watch your investment.) The table shows that such an investment would have increased in dollar value over the ten years to $29,604, with a 1965 purchasing value of $25,380. It would have far outdistanced any fixed-dollar investment.

Each of the preceding examples assumes that annual dividends and capital-gain payments (with the mutual fund) were reinvested each year. Some funds, by the way, did better during the same 10-year period while others did worse. The final $29,604 sum is the actual result produced by a typical growth fund with roughly average growth, compared with other growth funds. The 10-year period selected is also a period in which mutual-fund growth is fairly close to average for all 10-year periods since 1940. To be sure, the 1955-64 period was one of generally rising stock prices, but it also spanned two country-wide recessions and three sharp stock-market declines (1958, 1960-61, and 1962). Despite these market breaks, the variable-dollar investment in mutual funds today should do as well in the future. But don't forget, it could also do worse.

WHAT SHOULD YOU DO?

Before a family puts money into variable-dollar investments, virtually every financial expert says you should have a foundation of fixed-dollar savings. Give top priority to life insurance, particularly if you have small children. Enough insurance should be taken out to take care of a wife and children in case of a husband's death. Remember, though, that nearly all of us can count on basic insurance protection as a result of Social Security. In case of a husband's death, for example, Social Security could pay a young widow with two children as much as $296.40 a month until the first child reaches 18, then less per month. Additional private life insurance is usually needed, and it's recommended, to supplement Social Security protection.

Second priority should go toward an emergency reserve fund of cash in the bank or other comparable fixed-dollar reserves. That's money to be readily available in case of a family financial crisis, such as loss of job. Experts advise shooting for a savings goal of enough cash to pay all your family's living expenses for four to six months. The exact amount will vary, of course, from family to family; it's up to you to decide what you need. Finally, fixed-dollar savings are also recommended for other short-term savings goals such as accumulating money to buy a new car, major appliances, to pay for home improvements.

WHAT ABOUT LONG-TERM SAVINGS?

Here is where variable-dollar investments are your best hedge against inflation. The number-one hedge for most people is owning a house. Be-

Why wood panel doors?

There's hardly anything you can't do with solid wood panel doors. They can add architectural interest, inside and out. They can be used to panel a living room, or to wainscot a dining room. To conceal a storage wall, or to divide a room.

Panel doors—the countless kinds of solid, Ponderosa Pine doors you can buy today as ready-made standard units—are made to go with ideas. Interesting ideas. The kinds of ideas that today's demanding homebuyer is searching for.

Entrance doors, room doors, closet doors, storage doors, patio doors of Ponderosa Pine add warmth, beauty and interest to any house, from contemporary to colonial.

sides, owning a house is almost always cheaper than renting if you live in the house for at least three to four years. By owning a house, your basic housing expenses stay relatively fixed and immune to the ravages of year-to-year inflation. The cost of renting, on the other hand, has climbed sharply since the 1940s as a result of inflation, and all indications are that it will go on climbing in the future. In addition, most houses generally increase in value as a result of inflation. One caution: a good location and desirable neighborhood are all-important for protecting the value of your house and property.

Owning a farm, or farmland, or buying real estate for investment purposes is also a good variable-dollar hedge against inflation. The average person, however, should steer clear of such investments unless he is a professional. Too many pitfalls and unforeseen risks lie in wait for the amateur trying to make money in real estate, as many people have learned to their sorrow.

WHAT ABOUT COMMON STOCKS?

This is another good way to protect your long-term savings against inflation. And besides serving as an inflation hedge, careful investments in common stocks also let you participate (and personally profit) in our nation's economic growth. As the economy grows, so does the value of many stocks.

A major warning: It's essential to invest carefully. For even when the stock market is booming, a surprising number of stocks often are going down. And needless to say, buying without special knowledge or reliable advice is decidedly not recommended.

That brings up mutual funds again, which are one of the best and safest ways for the average person to invest in common stocks. You should investigate various funds, of course, and compare one with the other. Then choose a voluntary plan for purchasing mutual-fund shares rather than commit yourself to what is called a monthly "contractual plan." By and large, a contractual plan should be used only by people who must be forced each month to save.

Most families, and particularly young couples with small children, first should buy life insurance, which can also serve as a primary fixed-dollar savings investment. Second, a fixed-dollar reserve fund should be built up in a savings account or other such investment.

Saving for long-term financial goals, however, is an entirely different breed of animal because of the strong likelihood of future inflation. Owning your own house is one of your best possible hedges against inflation. Next, every family should seriously consider putting a large chunk of long-term savings into carefully selected variable-dollar investments, such as growth stock mutual funds.

Additional information on saving and investing is available in the booklet entitled Investing for Income and Security, by M. S. Stewart, available for 25¢ from Public Affairs Pamphlets, Department AH, 381 Park Ave. South, New York, N.Y. 10006. Information on mutual funds can be had from the Investment Company Institute, Department AH, 61 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10006.

COMPARISON OF VARIOUS SAVINGS METHODS

Here is what would have happened to $10,000 invested in different ways during a record 10-year period.

Savings methods	Original amount, Jan. 1, 1955	Total dividends, other accrued earnings reinvested during period	Total dollar value, Dec. 31, 1964	Actual purchasing value, Dec. 31, 1964
Kept in cash	$10,000	None	$10,000	$ 8576
Series E government bonds	10,000	$4661	14,661	12,574
4% compound interest savings account	10,000	4888	14,888	12,780
Growth stock mutual fund	10,000	7627	29,604	25,380

A few notes: The interest paid on government savings bonds is expected to rise from 3¾ to 4 percent shortly, so in the future, money invested in government savings bonds will increase a little more than the figures shown above. The growth in value of the money invested in the mutual fund shown above was during a period of generally rising stock prices, and future performance may or may not increase by the same amount. It may be more or less.

Bright Ideas for Your

Vacation-Home Kitchen

Ever feel like you are transferring homework from one place to the other when you're on vacation? Here's a page full of quickie ideas for the kitchen in your second home. They're all easy to add and guaranteed to help make your vacation really a vacation. In fact, you might consider bringing a few back home!

1 Devise a small-appliance area for portable cookery. It can be a boon at vacation time. Use electric skillets for quickie skillet meals, griddles for short-order cooking. Take these portables to the patio for auxiliary cooking when using your barbecue grill.

2 A quick, do-it-yourself idea for under-cabinet lighting. Tack up a string of Christmas-tree lights under the outer edge of the cabinet. Replace the colored bulbs with white, and presto!—no more shadows on your counter tops. (Be sure to shield light with a strip of molding along the bottom edge of cabinets.)

3 Save your after-meal hours for fun and invest in a portable dishwasher for your vacation kitchen. If you're short on working space, wooden chopping block or laminated plastic tops offer an extra working-area bonus.

4 Ideas to make quick work of getting together the fixin's for outdoor picnics and barbecues: Slotted storage for wax paper, transparent plastic wrap and bags, aluminum foil; expansive wood chopping surface with slotted area for knives; turn dish storage racks into areas for paper storage (paper cups, plates, napkins, place mats, etc.). Arrange all in one picnic-fixing center.

Keep your cooking utensils—everything from pots, pans, strainers, and spoons, to graters, whisks, and bottle openers—within easy arm's reach by hanging them on a pegboard near the range.

Find a niche to store a serving cart. Stock the cart with the standard barbecue musts—catsup, mustard, relish, aluminum foil, pot holders, etc. Attach pegs to the side to hang your barbecue utensils. Come dinnertime, you need only add the food for the cookout, and you're ready to wheel the cart to the patio.

5 For that pass-through window between kitchen and patio, why not add a wide tile ledge on the patio side. It would be ideal for setting up buffet meals. If you can't swing the tile ledge, push a long, narrow table under the window for a handy substitute.

Plan some open help-yourself shelves below the breakfast or snack counter. Stock them with cereal, bread, peanut butter, cookies—even a toaster and plates and silver—so the children can fix their own breakfast, lunch, and snacks.

LORE AND LEGEND

Think of the number of meals or snacks, indoors or out, where you'll find franks broiled, barbecued, steamed, simmered, or grilled; in a bun, on a skewer, on a pizza; basted with sauces of all descriptions.

Frankfurters, the all-American favorite without which no circus, carnival, or ball game would be complete, originated in Europe. A small sausage turned out by the butchers' guild in Frankfurt, Germany, in 1852, was named for its birthplace. At about the same time the wienerwurst was created in Vienna (Wien), Austria. Legend has it that it came to this country—to Coney Island, New York—in 1871. At the St. Louis Exposition in 1904 a simple innovation started the hot dog on its way to national prominence. At the fair a concessionaire loaned white gloves to his customers because the franks were too hot to handle. He lost so many gloves, and consequently his profits, he asked his brother for help. His brother was a baker and he made a bun to fit the meat. We still eat it that way and love every bite.

They're so popular that special hot-dog houses and stands have become favorite eating places with youngsters and grownups alike. In Los Angeles we found the Dog House—it's shaped just like one—that serves the most delicious varieties with such palate-tempting names as Bashful Basset, Dandy Dane, Hep Shep, Brawny Bull, Plush Poodle, Cha Cha Wa Wa, and Mad, Mad, Dog. In New York a familiar sight is the corner hot-dog vendor with his cart and umbrella. He sells the dogs, the trimmings, the buns, and the soda pop—fans wait patiently in line to buy and enjoy his wares.

However, you don't need to go farther than your own kitchen, patio, or backyard for tasty hot-dog combinations. Try one or all of the 16 that follow—they're all good eating and will lead to your own inventions.

HEATING

Frankfurters do not require cooking, only heating through. This can be done by any one of these methods:

Steamed. Place frankfurters in pan of boiling water to cover. Remove pan from heat. Cover; let stand 7 to 8 minutes to heat through. Or, place franks on rack in kettle containing about 1 cup water. Bring water to boiling; reduce heat slightly. Cover; steam franks about 8 minutes. Do not pierce skins; handle with tongs. Simmered. Drop franks into boiling water. Cover; let water simmer—do not boil—5 to 10 minutes, depending on size until franks are heated.

Panbroiled or griddle broiled. Heat small amount of fat in heavy skillet or on griddle. Sauté whole franks, just until brown, turning occasionally with tongs. Do not pierce with fork. For split franks, sauté cut sides first, turn, and brown skin side.

Broiled. Brush each frankfurter with butter, margarine, or other fat. Broil about 3 inches from heat about 5 minutes on each side.

Grilled. Grill franks on green sticks, in frank roaster, or on grill over glowing coals until brown. Turn to brown evenly. Cook slowly to avoid having a hard, charred outside and tough cold inside. Or, wrap franks in aluminum foil and heat over glowing coals 10 minutes.

To Heat Rolls. Place rolls on cookie sheet. Heat at 250° F. about 5 minutes. To heat on grill, place rolls on edge of grill over glowing coals for just a few minutes until heated through. Or, wrap in aluminum foil and heat on grill.

To Toast Rolls. Split frankfurter rolls. Spread cut sides with soft butter or margarine. Place in shallow pan or on cookie sheet. Bake at 425° F. about 5 minutes. Or toast under the broiler about 2 minutes.

BUYING

You'll find, skinless and in natural casings, all-meat franks, all-beef franks, kosher franks.

Frankfurters may be bought in bulk or packaged. The latter come in ½-pound and 1-pound cellophane-wrapped packages, 2- or 3-pound cartons with cellophane windows, in cans and jars.

They come in three sizes. Regular franks that average 9 to 10 to the pound, dinner size about 5 to the pound, and cocktail franks 26 to 28 to the pound.

STORING

Frankfurters may be kept in the coldest part of the refrigerator for 3 to 4 days. Wrap bulk franks loosely in wax paper, transparent plastic wrap, or aluminum foil. Store packaged ones in their original wrappings. Freeze very fresh franks in their original wrappings a week. To freeze 1 to 2 months, wrap in freezer wrap.

For a so-called formal tea, set your table buffet style with the tea and coffee services at either end, a floral centerpiece and candles in the center, and the platters and trays of food attractively arranged for easy serving. The food should be finger food and easy to manage. Here are three types of fancy sandwiches and a recipe for pound cake. All the food—even the tea concentrate—is made ahead. Cutting, garnishing, and arranging are done the day of the tea.

Assorted Tea Sandwiches*
Pound Cake* Petits Fours
Tea* Coffee
Salted Nuts Mints

ASSORTED TEA SANDWICHES

Dainty Tea Sandwiches. Trim crusts from thin-sliced bread. Cut bread, if necessary, to make a perfect square. Spread with softened butter or margarine. Spread half the slices with one of the filling mixtures below. Top with remaining slices. Wrap in aluminum foil or transparent plastic wrap; chill. Cut each sandwich into 4 fingers, triangles, or squares. One loaf of thin-sliced bread will make about 40 sandwiches.

- Chopped cooked chicken, chopped toasted almonds, and drained crushed pineapple moistened with mayonnaise or salad dressing seasoned with curry powder.
- Ground raisins or dates and ground walnuts moistened with spiced peach juice.
- Mashed avocado, cream cheese, chopped onion, lemon juice, Worcestershire sauce, and salt.
- Sliced cucumbers topped with mayonnaise or salad dressing seasoned with onion juice.
- Deviled ham and chopped onion and green pepper moistened with mayonnaise or salad dressing.
- Flaked tuna, chopped chutney, lemon juice, and mayonnaise or salad dressing.

Pinwheels. Trim crusts from loaf of unsliced bread. Cut loaf lengthwise into 3/4-inch-thick slices. Roll each slice with rolling pin to make it more flexible. Spread bread with soft butter or margarine. Spread with filling all the way to edge. Roll up, starting from short end, like a jelly roll. Seal end with soft butter or margarine. Wrap tightly in aluminum foil or transparent plastic wrap. Chill. Cut each roll into 16 slices. One loaf of bread will make 64 sandwiches.

- Softened cream cheese. Arrange a row of sliced stuffed olives or gherkins at one end. Roll from that end.
- Mix shredded Cheddar cheese and finely chopped green pepper and onion. Season with Worcestershire sauce; moisten with mayonnaise, salad dressing, or chili sauce.
- Mixture of deviled ham and finely chopped pimiento. Arrange thin spear of dill pickle at one short end. Roll from that end.

Roll-Ups. Trim crusts from thin slices of fresh bread. Roll slices lightly with rolling pin. Spread slices with soft butter or margarine. Leave plain or spread with softened cream cheese. Do one of the following:

- Roll-up slices. Seal end with soft butter or margarine. Wrap in aluminum foil or transparent wrap. Chill. Before serving tuck sprigs of parsley, watercress, or mint in ends. One loaf of thin-sliced bread will make 20 roll-ups.
- Place sprigs of watercress along one edge so leaves stick out. Roll up, wrap, and chill.
- Place spears of cooked or canned asparagus along one edge. Have tips poke out each end. Roll up, wrap, and chill.

POUND CAKE

2 1/2 c. sifted cake flour	3/4 c. milk
1 tsp. baking powder	1 tbs. grated orange rind
1/2 tsp. salt	1 tsp. grated lemon rind
2/3 c. shortening	1 tsp. lemon juice
1 1/2 c. sugar	Confectioners' sugar
3 eggs

Heat oven to 350° F. Grease and flour 9x5x3-inch loaf pan. Sift flour, baking powder, and salt together. Beat shortening, sugar, and eggs together about 5 minutes at high speed on mixer or until light and fluffy. Add flour mixture alternately with milk, rinds, and juice at low speed; scrape bowl often to blend ingredients. Pour into prepared pan. Bake 1 hour and 20 minutes or until cake tests done. Cool on wire rack 10 minutes. Remove from pan; cool completely. When thoroughly cool dust lightly with confectioners' sugar. Cut in thin slices for serving. Cut slices in half, if desired.

TEA FOR A CROWD

The best way to make tea for many people is to make a strong tea concentrate ahead of time. Bring 1 1/2 quarts (6 cups) freshly drawn cold water to full rolling boil in saucepan. Remove from heat. Add 3/4 pound loose tea immediately. Stir to immerse tea leaves. Cover. Let stand 5 minutes. Strain into teapot. When ready to serve, pour about 1 ounce (2 tablespoons) concentrate into each cup and fill with hot water. Makes 40 to 45 cups. Serve with lemon, sugar, and milk.

Want to perk up pork chops?

Serve 'em with Betty Crocker Au Gratin Potatoes. Rich, aged Cheddar cheese in a smooth sauce. Great for the guy who brings home the bacon.

TAKE A VACATION FROM HOUSEWORK

Wouldn't it be nice if somehow at vacation season all our housekeeping chores could magically disappear? Certainly, we can't eliminate them completely, but if you'll follow some of these tips you may find housekeeping so much easier that it will free a little time for vacation-type activities.

Take a second look at your storage setup. If it isn't making things easier for you, try doing this: Store the things you use every day where they're used and where they're easy to get in a matter of seconds. Investigate the tremendous space-saving storage units at your local housewares department and put them to use to help solve storage problems.

Organize your storage so your family can help you. Easy-to-find towels, dishcloths, etc., go on the lower shelves so the children can fold these and put them away for you. (And when it's time to collect the soiled linens they can do this and replace them with fresh.)

Lighten your laundry load. The first step here is to brighten the whole situation! Resurrect your washer and dryer from that dark corner in the basement and find a bright, cheerful spot upstairs for them near the bulk of soiled laundry. You'll find that washing and drying clothes become a simple process once the dismal surroundings that made it seem like such a chore are gone.

Set up a do-it-yourself clothes sorting system. Use divided hampers (or separate laundry baskets) and label each for one kind of washing load (dark clothes, light clothes, wash-and-wear clothes). Put a wastebasket conveniently nearby. Ask each person to sort his own clothes—and empty pockets while he's at it!

If you haven't already, now's the time to investigate permanent (durable) press. You'll eliminate a good deal of tiresome ironing.

Make room for a clutter room in your house! Then all the hobbies, sewing, and clutter-making activities can be confined to one room—and the care and attention you'll have to give to all the other rooms in your house will be cut at least in half.

Make sure all your equipment is in tip-top shape. We'll even go so far as to suggest you have your refrigerator, range, dishwasher, etc., thoroughly checked by a trained serviceman. After all, you periodically check your car to keep it in good running order. Why not have your kitchen equipment checked (not as often, of course) so you can catch a pending disaster before it becomes one?

Enjoy the luxury of air conditioning this summer. If you've got to do housework, at least treat yourself to being comfortable while you work. If you already have an air conditioner, but wish you could spread its bounty of cool air to more areas in the house, try supplementing it with a fan. When placed at strategic corners, a fan makes an excellent supplement to an air conditioner.

Try to shop once a week. Buy foods that store well in your pantry or on your refrigerator or freezer shelves. And take advantage of foods that cut corners to make your cooking easier.

By the way, when you're cooking your family's favorite casserole, it's a good idea to make two and store one in the freezer for a quick meal on a busy day.

Take up a hobby! Do something you have always wanted to do for years but just never had the time for. This summer decide that you will make time. Find out how fast you zip through your housekeeping when you've got something exciting to look forward to. You might even be surprised to find that housekeeping doesn't tire you out, just the idea of it.

HELP YOUR DOG IMPROVE HIS MANNERS

By Patricia O'Keefe

Lord Byron wrote that a dog has all the virtues of man without his vices. Lord Byron was right—up to a point. While it's true that dogs rarely drink, smoke, beat their wives, or bite their fingernails, the noblest of them do acquire minor vices. Bad habits such as shedding hair on the furniture, barking at the mailman, mooching food at the table, chasing cars, or jumping all over company, seem to come naturally to the best of man's best friends.

Life is easier for everybody, including your dog, if you take the time to cure his bad habits with good training. The best time to begin is, of course, when he is young. If you have an older dog, don't let the old saw, "can't teach an old dog new tricks," stop you. Older dogs can be trained. It just takes more time and more patience. A puppy is easier to train, because you can stop bad habits before they start. If, for example, you want your dog to stay off the furniture, always pet and play with him on the floor. When he jumps into a chair, tell him "No!" in a disapproving voice and put him gently but firmly on the floor. Then give him a tickle on the chin and a little friendly conversation to soothe his ego. If you are consistent with correction and praise, he'll quickly learn that the furniture is off limits.

Some dogs sneak a snooze on the furniture when no one is around. They can be cured with mousetraps. This cure is not recommended if you have a cat around the house but it has been proved safe for the canine in the family. Put the set trap covered with a sheet of newspaper on the chair seat or wherever you don't want the dog to be. When he jumps on the furniture, the trap will spring and the snap plus the crackle of the leaping paper will startle him. He thinks Big Brother is watching even though you are not there. A mousetrap is also recommended for discouraging a dog that likes to explore wastebaskets or garbage cans too.

The habit of barking long and loud for no good reason can make you and your dog very unpopular with the neighbors. Naturally, you want him to be a good watchdog, but you can teach him that a few warning barks are really sufficient.

Usually a sharp command such as "Quiet!" or "Stop it!" will quiet him for a moment. If repeated voice commands do not put an end to unnecessary barking, put your hand around his muzzle and hold his jaws together while you repeat the command. Release his jaws and tell him again to be quiet. Praise him when he understands and obeys your commands. A disciplined dog is both a good pet and an alert, efficient burglar alarm.

To teach your dog not to bark at deliverymen, attach his leash to his collar and take him with you when you answer the door. Insist that he sit quietly at your side while you talk to the caller. He will learn to recognize regular visitors such as the paper boy and the mailman, and also to sense from your tone of voice and manner that there is no need to feel apprehensive every time the doorbell rings.

When he understands the command to be quiet, he can be taught to stay alone in your yard for reasonable periods of time. It is never a good idea to leave a dog chained outside for a long time without protection or companionship. He may begin to bark or howl to get attention. Sometimes passers-by will tease a chained dog just to make him bark. This cruel treatment can turn a nice, friendly pet into a nervous, suspicious animal.

The dog that jumps on people usually does it with great good humor. He loves everyone and wants attention. The trick here is to convince him that a less exuberant greeting makes people love him even more.

The anti-jumping technique used most often is a gentle but affirmative bump on his chest with your knee, accompanied by a stern "No!" or

"Meet the new plastic specialist... the color tape that's made of plastic

"Down!" This maneuver throws him off balance and offends his dignity. It's just unpleasant enough to make him stop. Follow it up with a warm greeting and a pat on the head when he sits or stands so he understands you are glad to see him in spite of the mistake he made.

Another bad habit which should be stopped before it starts is mooching food at the table. Slip a dog a tidbit once and he's there forever, begging and drooling on your shoes. Continue to feed him scraps from the table and he becomes a fussy, finicky eater. Your dog will be better mannered and better fed if you give him his own bowl of dog food in his own eating area before the family sits down to eat. Insist that he stay away from your dining area until you are finished.

Chasing cars is the most dangerous bad habit. To discourage your dog from doing it, you need an accomplice. Ask a friend who owns a car to ride with you while you drive his car slowly by your house. When your dog dashes after the car, have your accomplice squirt him with a water pistol loaded with a weak solution of ammonia and water. One-half tablespoon of ammonia to one quart of water will not harm your dog, but his supersensitive nose will get a whiff of the disagreeable odor.

If your accomplice is a poor shot, try this method: Tie some empty tin cans together and toss them from the moving car at the dog's feet. The loud clatter makes most dogs tuck tail and run for safety. After a few unpleasant, but harmless, encounters with a car, a dog usually decides car chasing isn't much fun after all.

None of your dog's bad habits can be cured with one correction. It takes consistent, patient, wise discipline followed by equally consistent and sincere praise to train a dog to obey and be well behaved.

A dog has a mind of his own and he uses it. He's often mischievous, stubborn, and contrary, but basically he is eager to please you. A dog is the only domesticated animal that will actually work to win intangible rewards—your affection and approval.

He's smart enough to know when you approve or disapprove simply by hearing the tone of your voice—if you are smart enough to tell him in the right way. Always use the same words for commands—short words such as "No!" "Ba-a-ad!" "Down!" or "Good boy! Good boy!" Speak in a calm, positive way that doesn't allow for ifs, ands, or maybes.

When you lose your temper, shout, or punish too harshly, you frighten him. If you let him get by with bad habits sometimes and scold him at other times, he'll be confused and unsure of himself.

Punishment or correction must come immediately. It is useless and unfair to try to make your dog remember that he was disobedient five minutes ago.

Is it wrong to spank a dog? Definitely not. Most dog trainers agree

*If your cat did her own shopping, that a smack on the rump does many grown dogs a world of good when they are especially disobedient or stubborn. However, it is really not necessary to spank a small puppy.

One or two spanks are usually enough. A rolled newspaper or magazine applied with cracking force to the rear end causes more noise than pain, but gets the message across quickly.

Spanking with the hand is effective, too, if you first grasp the dog's collar, then spank. Never approach your dog head on with your hand raised and blood in your eye. It may make him fearful and defensive whenever anyone raises a hand near him.

Right now, you love your dog in spite of his bad habits. Take the time to help him break those habits and you will love him even more. He will be happier, steadier, more companionable. You will be less indulgent with him, but also less irritable.

You won't have to apologize to friends and neighbors for his misdeeds. You can bask in their compliments about your smart dog. You can even enjoy a little vice of your own—pride. A smart dog usually has a smart owner, someone who understands him, loves him, and helps him mind his manners.

Your outdoor painting problems solved

You can save a lot of money by doing your own exterior house painting. But it's a difficult, time-consuming job that takes a lot of know-how. To help you avoid costly mistakes, American Home has compiled the answers to 17 fundamental questions on the subject. Read them carefully before you pick up a brush.

How often should I paint? Every four to six years, more frequently in wet climates or ocean-front areas. If a paint job lasts significantly less time than this, it means the paint was of inferior quality, a structural fault in the house permitted moisture to get behind the film, the surface was inadequately prepared, the paint was carelessly applied, or the wrong paint was used. Painting too frequently can hasten paint failure.

But I painted only two or three years ago and my house looks terrible. A good washing often does the trick. Use a hose and long-handled brush, starting at the bottom and working up, to prevent streaking. If the dirt is stubborn, try detergent and water.

What kind of paint should I use? You can choose between two basic types—oil base and water thinned. The former type includes the tried-and-true linseed oil mixtures but usually refers to alkyd paints. The most common water-thinned paints are the latex formulas which are often called (erroneously) rubber-base paints. Depending on the type of latex used, these paints might also be called vinyls, acrylics, or vinyl-acrylics.

Another relatively new type of water-thinned paint is based on an oil, which in turn is dissolved in water, thus combining some advantages of both oil and water-thinned formulas.

No one type of paint assures a better job than another. Latex paints are easier to brush than oil paints, dry much faster, and permit cleaning of brushes and tools in water. They also are blister resistant and more amenable to occasional touch-ups of small areas. However, alkyds adhere better to chalky old paint, may be applied at lower temperatures, and are more tolerant of minor omissions committed in preparing the surface. On badly weathered houses, therefore, you might have to use an oil-base primer before painting with latex. Whichever type you choose, be sure the primer and finish coats are compatible. Read the label to find out.

Incidentally, in using latex for the first time, don't let the easier brushing cause you to spread it too thin.

When should I paint? Best seasons are late spring, late summer, and early fall. Try for a windless day that's clear and dry, with a temperature of 50 to 80 degrees. You can go a little lower with oil paints, but definitely not with latex. Start as early as possible after the morning dew has evaporated, and quit in midafternoon, giving the paint a few hours to set before evening dew condenses. Never paint after a rain until the surface has dried thoroughly (although latex can go on a damp—not wet—surface), or if rain threatens before the new paint can set for a few hours. Also, avoid direct sun by painting a side of the house the sun has just passed over.

Caution: read the label for any special weather considerations.

What do I need for the job? Here's a basic list: Extension ladder, stepladder, sandpaper, steel wool, hammer, nails, nail set, putty, putty knife, calking compound, calking gun, drop cloths, rags, scrubbing brush, wire brush, buckets for cleaners and paints, mixing paddles, broad-knife and right-angle scrapers, corner scraper for removing putty and calking, paint-can hooks or holders, brushes and/or rollers (with pans), paint thinner (except for latex paints), and, of course, the paint. You'll add other items as you work. For a two-story house, consider well-built scaffolding instead of the extension ladder. It's much safer.

How can I figure the amount of paint I need? First calculate the area to be covered. To do this, find the average height of the house by measuring the distance from foundation to eaves. Add two feet to this figure if your house has a pitched roof. Multiply the average height by the distance around the foundation. This gives the approximate square footage to be painted. Now, divide the square footage by 450. Result is the amount of primer in gallons. For gallons (continued)

(continued) of finish paint, divide square footage by 450 and multiply the result by the number of coats.

How should I prepare the surface before painting?

1. Brush away dirt and chalk from the entire area—not just spots that look dirty. If very dirty or chalky, wash as described above and let dry.
2. Remove rust spots with steel wool or sandpaper, then drive any protruding nails below the wood's surface with a nail set. Cover heads with putty and apply primer.
3. Any loose siding should be railed with aluminum, stainless, or hot-dipped galvanized nails. Use 8-penny siding or casing nails. Set, putty, and prime as above.
4. Scrape away loose, blistered, or flaking paint. If extensive, scrape down to bare wood for a considerable distance all around. Feather the edges of the adjoining sound paint, then prime all exposed wood. With latex paint, you may have to prime the entire surface rather than just the bare wood.
5. Scrape out old calking around windows, doors, and flashing, then recalk. Also, remove and replace all deteriorated window putty.
6. Break any remaining gloss on the old paint with sandpaper or steel wool.
7. Clean all gutters and downspouts and make any necessary repairs.
8. Remove shutters and other decorative items and paint them separately.

How many coats should I apply? On a new house, three—one prime, two finish. With good paint properly applied, two coats give good service. Don't go over three. If present paint is sound, but looks faded, dirty, or chalked, wash and apply a one-coat paint.

Any special paints I should know about? Yes. In hot, humid regions, mildew-resistant paints are a must. In industrial areas fume-resistant paints must be used. Local paint dealers, contractors, and paint manufacturers can tell you if such paints are needed in your locale.

The paint on my house is so bad I'd like to strip it right down to the wood and start all over. What's the best way to remove the paint? Forget it. The usual practice of burning the paint off is slow and dangerous—also against the law in some areas. Liquid paint removers work, as do sand blasting and mechanical sanding. However, these methods are impractical and tedious.

Actually, if you remove all loose paint by vigorous scraping, then feather the edges of all remaining old paint, you're safe. If, after you apply the new paint, some of it peels, scrape the area and touch-up right away.

Can I repaint my old aluminum siding with ordinary house paint? No problem at all. First, brush or wash the surface clean. If the factory finish is still

It's not only OK, but aesthetically a very sensible idea.

If the windows have had at least four to six weeks' weathering, you can generally brush or wash away loose dirt, then apply any good primer made for metal. For finish coats, use any good exterior paint.

If windows are brand-new, treat before priming with a solution you can buy at the paint store. This solu-ready described for treating and painting brand-new windows.

Can I paint over anodized aluminum? Yes. Just treat it like ordinary unfinished aluminum.

Is there any trick to painting asbestos shingles? No trick, just adequate preparation of the surface. First, replace all broken shingles. Clean any mildewed areas with detergent and water. In severe cases, a five percent muriatic acid wash might be necessary. Brush entire surface vigorously to remove dust, then wash thoroughly with plain water.

Selection of the right paint is extremely important, as it must be resistant to alkali and adhere to a chalky, porous surface. Therefore, most paint manufacturers have very specific recommendations concerning primers, surface conditioners, and finish coats. Consult a well-known paint company—not a dealer—for correct paints.

Can I use paint to conceal mildew? No. Wash it off with the following solution: $\frac{2}{3}$ cup trisodium phosphate, $\frac{1}{3}$ cup powdered laundry detergent, one quart liquid bleach, warm water to make a gallon. Wear rubber gloves and repeat washings if necessary. Be sure new paint you apply is mildew-resistant.

How can I prevent blistering of paint on my house siding? Blisters are created when moisture gets behind the siding, pushing through it and condensing behind the paint. Around windows, doors, chimneys, and near roof joints, the source of this water might be defective calking or flashing. However, the most usual sources are inside the house—cooking, bathing, a wet basement, etc. Ventilation of the house and provision of vapor barriers will help this situation (See "Don't let Moisture Wreck Your House," December, 1965). On new siding, blister-resistant paints also help.

Can I use an exterior paint indoors—in the bathroom, for example—to get better moisture resistance? Definitely not. Some compounds used in exterior paints are poisonous. Thus, any paint flaking off endangers children and pets, who might eat some of the flakes. For the same reason, never use exterior paint on toys, cribs, or other objects a child might put in his mouth and chew on. ■ sound, but weathered and dull, that's all the preparation needed. If any of the factory finish seems very glossy, break the gloss with steel wool or sandpaper. Finally, if the factory finish is peeling or chipped, scrape away all loose paint and sand the area right down to the bare metal, being sure to feather the edges of the surrounding sound paint. Coat the exposed aluminum with metal primer and apply one or two coats of house paint.

Is it OK to paint my aluminum storm windows to match the rest of my house?

tion generally is mixed with water applied, allowed to stand, then washed off. Follow the manufacturer's directions very carefully.

Many window manufacturers coat the aluminum frames with a clear lacquer. In most cases, this weathers off in the prescribed four to six weeks. However, check to see if the film is still there. If so, and if it is sticking so well that it resists vigorous scraping, paint right over it without a primer. If the coating appears loose, or yields to light scraping, remove the coating with a solvent, then proceed as al-

First we let her check all Daddy's shirts for the "Sanforized" label.

Then she could go to the store and do the same thing when Mommy shopped for blouses.

After a while she even bought a fitted sheet.

See, everybody in our family follows these two rules:

You can't be sure the fabric won't shrink unless you see "Sanforized".

You can't be sure of top wash-and-wear performance unless you see "Sanforized-Plus".

But I think Melissa's going to be the best shopper of us all.

Last week she was looking for some new blue jeans.

And the salesgirl said, "Well, they aren't actually labeled 'Sanforized', but they're just as good as 'Sanforized'."

Melissa bit her.

GET YOUR GARDENING OFF THE GROUND

By Douglas Baylis

You'd love to have a garden but really don't have time for gardening? You have a little lot and problem soil (nothing will grow on it)? The solution is to garden in raised beds.

You can fill a raised bed with good soil and plant whatever you like (flowers, vegetables) without having to dig up, condition, and fertilize large areas of the backyard every year. If you're conscientious about weeding and watering you can have an attractive garden spot without the customary crawling around on hands and knees. In a raised bed the work is closer to you.

And suppose you're not conscientious, suppose you don't seed over the played-out tulips, and you let the petunias get scraggly—your garden won't look as though you'd moved on to another campsite if there's a horizontal architectural line to distract the eye and guide it away from plants that have long since passed their prime.

Even more important, though, is the fact that you can grow plants with odd soil requirements or that are very fussy about drainage (it's almost perfect in a raised bed), without a lot of expense or backbreaking labor.

Raised beds are good space dividers and organizers and can be built as retaining walls. A raised bed is an ideal area divider between the terrace and parking strip, for example, or between your lawn and kitchen garden. Build a raised bed in front of the foundation for your choice evergreens. A raised bed is really a king-size plant box and you can have one on a deck, a city apartment terrace, an upstairs porch, or in the entry. It can be part of a fence, screen, or storage area.

Raised plant beds are easy to build out of materials such as wood, brick, stone, or (continued) concrete blocks, and work on flat lots or hillsides. On flat lots they introduce a new level in an otherwise monotonous situation. And if you're trying to garden on a slope, a series of raised beds or terraces will provide you with level areas to plant in.

Would you like to grow acid-loving plants like azaleas, camellias, or pieris, even though you have very alkaline soil? Fill a two-foot-high raised bed with peatmoss or one half peat and one half leafmold—success is practically guaranteed.

Do you lose plants from drowning and root rot every time a heavy rain raises the water level to the soil surface? Fill a raised bed with one half topsoil and one half peat, or a half of peat and one half fine sand, and you can forget all about troublesome drainage problems.

It's easier to deep-water a raised bed because the sides confine the water, like a tub or pot. There is no waste or runoff. Deep-watered plants have stronger, healthier root systems, and you can water less often than is necessary with surface beds.

Not only does weeding a raised bed require less stooping, but there's no encroachment of grass or weeds from other parts of the garden. And no edging or border plantings are necessary. If you're planting near trees, you don't have to worry about tree roots robbing the bed of its precious water and nutrients.

If spring comes late to your garden, you can advance the growing season a week or two by planting in raised beds. Fill the beds with a light soil mix—it will dry out and warm up faster in spring, which means that seeds and plants will wake up faster. If you're growing tender perennials or choice evergreens that need winter protection, you can easily convert a raised bed into a coldframe by building up the sides and covering the bed with glass or plastic film.

If you want to try your hand at growing some of the so-called difficult plants like daphne, gardenia, wild flowers, or some of the dwarf conifers (usually labeled for experts only), put them in a raised bed. Suddenly, you're an expert!

SUCCESSFUL POOL PAINTING

Owning a pool requires a program of maintenance painting in order to protect the pool's beauty and make cleaning the surface easy. The following steps will help you keep your pool in top shape for swimming.

SCHEDULING THE JOB

The best time to paint your pool is either in the spring or fall. Avoid extremely cold or hot weather, and humid, moist air that retards the drying and causes blistering and peeling. Warm, dry weather is a must for a good job.

It is best not to paint after a rain or when the temperature is below 40°. If it rains in the middle of your paint job, wait until the walls dry out before painting again. Don't paint over frosted or wet surfaces or when you are handicapped by dust, wind, or insects.

Painting should be done from midmorning, after the dew has evaporated, until midafternoon, so the paint will be dry before dampness settles in the evening.

SURFACE PREPARATION

This is one of the most important steps. Masonry surfaces must be perfectly clean and completely dry before painting. Cracks, holes, and surface breaks must be repaired with grout or a patching mixture. Cracks over a half inch should be filled with a cement mix. Wet the area thoroughly before the cement mix is forced into the crevice. After filling holes, sweep the pool thoroughly.

Unpainted concrete is rarely ready to be painted as it is. New concrete or masonry pools must age at least two months before painting. The pool should be filled with water to dissolve salts in the concrete. After draining, let pool dry one or two weeks. Plaster-lined pools require at least 30 days to cure.

Grease, oil, and dirt should be removed from the surface. Rinse and allow to dry before etching.

New concrete pools should be acid-etched with a 10 percent solution of hydrochloric acid and water. This cleans the surface and prepares it for paint by faintly roughening it to make it more porous and by neutralizing the alkali on the surface. Apply the solution with a stiff brush, one gallon per 200-300 square feet. Allow to stand at least 15 minutes or until the surface stops foaming. Hose down several times with plenty of water and let dry before painting.

With previously painted pools, old paint in poor condition should be removed. The pool then must be scrubbed. Cleaned and patched areas should be acid-etched as for bare concrete and scrubbed. Old paint in good condition may be painted without further treatment.

Ultraviolet light resistance. Pool surfaces are subjected to extreme amounts of sunlight, which is intensified by the water, and tends to degrade poor-quality paint.

Chemical and mildew resistance. The paint should not be deteriorated by chemicals used in pools or by mold or fungus often found in pools.

Specific adhesion. The paint should adhere firmly to either new or previ-

No shoes with nails should be worn in the pool. Sneakers or rubbers are preferred for this kind of job.

The amount of paint and thinner you need depends upon the surface to be painted, its area, porosity, texture condition, and number of coats required. Average coverage is about 30 square feet per gallon. The second coat usually covers more, or up to 350 square feet.

On bare concrete or previously painted surfaces the first coat should be thinned (approximately one pint of thinner per gallon of paint) and brushed well into the surface. The first coat on bare concrete penetrates and fills surface voids to provide a good base for the final coat. The second coat should not be thinned.

To mix, pour off most of the paint into another bucket. Stir the remaining paint in the bottom of the can and gradually pour back the rest of the paint. After the mixture is uniform, add the thinner. Finally, pour the whole mixture back and forth from one container to another several times.

APPLYING THE PAINT

If it is extremely warm, it is more comfortable to paint the east and south sides of the pool in the morning, the west and north sides in the afternoon. You will then be painting in the shade.

The corner of the pool is a good place to start. Begin at top and work down from left to right so the danger of running or dripping over a newly painted area is avoided. Try to finish one side at a time and try to finish the work at a corner of the pool to avoid laps or lines. Save leftover paint for touch-ups.

Allow seven days drying and curing time after applying the second coat and before filling the pool to attain maximum water resistance.

SEASONAL CARE OF POOL

Cracks must be patched and sealed with paint to eliminate any moisture build-up under the coated surface.

When a pool is drained, the water-saturated masonry will release moisture through the paint film for some time until the moisture in the concrete balances with the atmosphere. When refilling the pool, the process is reversed. These alternating wet and dry conditions are rough treatment for any paint and may result in loss of adhesion and damage to the paint. Keeping water in the pool at all times avoids this.

Clean dishes: the only thing you really need from a dishwasher detergent.

Calgonite® gives you the most cleaning action ever concentrated in a dishwasher detergent.

Clean dishes / Calgonite. You need both.

SELECTING SWIMMING POOL PAINT

The right paint saves you money and time and produces a watertight coating that is durable and attractive. A good paint must possess these qualities to overcome pool problems:

Alkali resistance. This is important to combat a cement pool's natural alkaline surface which can attack the paint film.

Moisture resistance. The applied paint must be relatively impervious to water and at the same time should be capable of breathing to allow moisture to escape from the subsurface.

ously painted pool surfaces.

Short drying time. Although some paints may dry quicker, it is recommended that 24 hours elapse between coats for best results.

Stain, scratch and fade resistance. A must in swimming pools.

PREPARING TO PAINT

For ordinary painting, a brush three-and-a-half to four-and-a-half inches wide is fine. A relatively smooth, dense masonry surface can be painted with a roller.

Carefully clean your painting shoes.

I'm convinced the human brain is capable of thinking up anything under the sun if someone says he wants it. Careful what you say you want—our ingenious manufacturers and food processors are equipped to bring it to you. Here we are happy to report another innovation to make life easier, SpaghettiOs—canned spaghetti you can eat with a spoon! This intriguing new Franco-American product boasts four sizes of spaghetti circles in rich tomato sauce with cheese.

We took a tip from the Taylor Wine people the other day and it was one of the happiest finds! When a bottle of dinner wine is opened, use a little to moisten dry mustard for cocktail spreads. It's zesty, all right!

From the consumer's friend at Johnson's Wax, Lucile Bush, here's a good tip for using aerosol air fresheners, or any aerosol container. Hold the container upright while spraying so that the dip tube stays in the liquid. If the container is partly empty and you tip it on its side, the dip tube may come out of the liquid—when you press the button you'll only release pressure. This means you'll run out of pressure before the contents are used and you won't be able to empty the can.

To all you corned-beef-and-cabbage and coleslaw lovers—from the United States Department of Agriculture comes word that we can look forward to the best cabbage crop in 10 years. With this abundant supply in the markets, it would be worth your while to know the qualities to look for in selecting cabbage. Prime-quality heads are firm and heavy in relation to size.

To eliminate waste make sure the stems are trimmed close to the head. Cabbage with yellowing leaves, burst heads, or outer leaves separating from the head usually means that the cabbage has been stored too long.

We were invited by the Kelvinator people to visit their Rogue's Galley now on display at Chicago's National Design Center. This is a fascinating, multiple-living area which is a fusion of today's realities with tomorrow's possibilities—an interesting glimpse of appliances of the future.

We had a special communiqué from our good friend Mrs. Helen Tangen, Home Service Director at Hamilton. Knowing that the month for brides and grooms is upon us and being a champion for better laundries, she suggests a laundry shower as a perfect send-off for the bride—pretty packages of assorted soaps, detergents, and water conditioners, wrapped in tea towels of "her" color; gifts of bleaches of all kinds; a stain-removal kit; fabric softener; spray starch. Ideas and combinations are endless!

The Pillsbury kitchens have had a busy winter, evidenced by the array of tasty new products that just arrived for our pantry shelves. Have you tried one of their new freezer dessert mixes yet? Something Different is a creamy frozen dessert, in chocolate, lemon, or pineapple flavoring (it does live up to its name). And do keep your eye peeled for these two new cake mixes—All-Butter Cake Mix and Sour Cream Fudge Cake Mix. They've got a flavor bonus of real butter or real sour cream right in the mix.

Seen at the latest housewares show a first from Revere... the introduction of a new method of making coffee automatically with the new Electric Drip Coffee Maker. It is thermostatically controlled with a signal light that flashes on when the coffee is ready. Brews 25 ounces in seven minutes from plug-in to turn-off. $24.95.

There's a new twist on the old problem of what to bring the dinner hostess. Ekco Housewares Company has just come out with a line of popular kitchen gadgets packaged on unique and humorous contemporary greeting cards. Potato peelers to pizza cutters!

An innovation in appliance design—a compact, under-counter automatic gas waste disposer—is being unveiled by Magic Chef. This new concept brings waste removal right to the homemaker's kitchen. The operation is smokeless and odorless and the unit will dispose of up to a half bushel of refuse, including wax paper, cartons, and food scraps, at the simple turn of a dial. Sells for less than $200.

EVERYDAY ETIQUETTE

"Come on Over for Coffee"

It's nine in the morning, John's off to work, the youngsters are in school. It's time for a small breather—home equivalent of the office coffee break. Two, or three, or four of us get together to visit and talk . . . no big deal, no real plan, just coffee, maybe a bit of coffee ring, usually cigarettes.

Does such an informal, almost happenstance event require any special etiquette? Well, a few ground rules can possibly improve this kind of get-together, steer it away from some proven impossible pitfalls.

Rule No. 1: Don't drop in. Invite or be invited. Even "best friends" will stay that way longer if each respects the other's privacy. There are many times when you have a special use for that early morning time that doesn't include sitting down for coffee and visiting.

Rule No. 2: Establish a time limit. Half an hour is a breather. Start stretching the time out—and a whole morning has disappeared. (Also too much coffee and too many cigarettes have been consumed.)

Rule No. 3: Neat and tidy, please. You the hostess, or you the invitee, don't look too appetizing with fat curlers, no makeup, and a come-as-you-are grab-bag outfit.

Rule No. 4: Give it an air. However you serve, whatever you serve, there should be no telltale signs of the earlier breakfast, no anything—old cup and saucer, no slightly messy place mats. Easiest way to give your morning coffee break an air is to serve on trays, with pretty china and silver. You'll find paper place mats are a help here too.

Rule No. 5: You don't have to reciprocate. "Come on over for coffee" is not necessarily a reciprocity matter. One neighbor is apt to have more freedom, more space, hence the coffee session is more apt to be there. It is pleasant, however, to rotate the supplier of the coffee cake or Danish.

Rule No. 6: Don't make a thing about dishes. There aren't enough to tire the lady of the house—and she probably prefers not to have you come into the kitchen—which may not be cleaned up after the earlier family breakfasts.

Rule No. 7: Watch those words. The line between healthy exchange of the minor irritations that beset all wives and real complaining is thin, but it's definitely there. Also, steer clear of gossip. If you don't have something nice to say about someone, don't say anything!

They're easy "rules," really only reminders, but they make this brief respite a better launching pad for the busy hours ahead.

WHO NEEDS THE "AFFLUENT SOCIETY"?

Ever since it was organized we have been trying to become a member of the "affluent society" but now it's pretty clear that we aren't going to make it. Our problem, like many others, is one of money. It takes a dreadful sum after taxes to get into the affluent society and what's more, you can't spend too much of your time making the money or else you won't have the time to spend it in a truly affluent manner.

Actually, being a member of the affluent society isn't so wonderful anyway. It has many drawbacks you never hear about. For example, if you have a town house, a country house, and a vacation house in the mountains it will make the family cat neurotic because cats dislike constant change. You just can't leave a family cat always alone—so what you have is a nervous and upset cat on your hands.

Searching through the atlas for places to go where no tourist has ever been before may sound like a good idea but when you get to that undiscovered place what have you got? No Hilton Hotel and a bunch of people who can't speak any recognized language. What kind of a vacation do you call that?

Owning a $200,000 house is an attractive thought but how many owners of such a home lie awake at nights worrying that a tribe of termites may be eating away at all the capital investment? And anyway, suppose you want to sell the house—who's going to buy it? Probably some gangsters. And think of what this will do to the neighborhood.

It might be nice to have both an indoor and an outdoor swimming pool until you consider the children will insist on being driven to the local town beach or lake so they can swim and play with the other kids. So you end up with two unused pools rather than one pool.

A houseful of servants certainly eliminates the problem of who is going to clear the dishes off the table but also remember that in this age it will be the servants who run you and not the other way around. Also they usually get first dibs on anything that is cooked for the family.

Many non-affluent people dream of someday getting into the society and owning a big expensive yacht but if you watch the big yachts pass by you'll notice the owners are always frowning. They are continually mad at all the "freeloaders" who are attracted to expensive yachts. No, now that we've had a chance to think about it we're glad that we aren't in the affluent society. It may be a nice place to visit but it's really not the sort of place for sensitive people such as we.

have SPRING COLOR in your fall garden

Are you acquainted with the wonderland of autumn-flowering perennials and bulbs? It's a world of more subtle colors than those flaunted by chrysanthemums and frost-touched leaves. Richly variegated in form and texture, the fall bloomers will give your borders new depth and brilliance.

There are autumn-flowering crocus, colchicum, Formosan lily, speciosum lily, day lily, hosta, scilla, hardy amaryllis, allium, sternbergia, hardy cyclamen, bugbane, Japanese anemone, lobelia, monkshood, closed gentian, snakeroot, hardy ageratum, and candytuft. All are like Topsy—they just grow. The bulbs stay in the ground during the winter and many of them multiply year after year.

CROCUSES

Just as you begin to see and feel signs of fall in early September, porcelain-white sprouts of autumn-flowering crocus push through the earth. No leaves herald their approach. They appear after the flowers, long and narrow with a silver midrib. The blossoms make drifts of color and naturalize freely. A few bulbs soon create a carpet of bloom. When they become too crowded, replant them in July while they're dormant.

Plant the bulbs as soon as they arrive in August, about two inches deep in a place where their blooms won't be covered by a heavy fall of leaves. Put them in sun or light shade at the edge of a border or among such groundcovers as phlox, sedums, or myrtle.

Crocus medius, almost the showiest of the species, has deep orange-scarlet stigmas, a distinct contrast to its violet petals. It flowers freely and multiplies rapidly. Crocus sativus is the plant that produces saffron, the delight of gourmets. Varieties of Crocus speciosus are the giants of the genus. When fully open, their flowers are four inches across and seven inches tall. Colors range from blue, lavender, rose, violet, and purple to pure white. C. speciosus albus is one of the most spectacular of the fall-flowering crocuses. Its large, snow-white flowers have bright scarlet stigmas. C. speciosus artibir, blue with darker feathering, and C. speciosus cassiope, a violet-mauve with fiery orange stigmas, are exquisite. 'Oxonian' is a clear azure blue. Bright blue globosus blooms from late October into November.

Crocus zonatus, earlier than speciosus, is yellow-throated with a beautiful rosy-lilac cup and bright orange spots at the base of each petal. The scented, late-blooming longiflorus with violet cup and tangerine throat is decorated with yellow anthers and red stigmas, the most brilliant ornaments of all the autumn-flowering crocuses. This variety blooms until Thanksgiving when laevigatus fontenayi begins to blossom, sometimes until mid-January. This little one is only one inch high. The exterior of its petals is buff, decorated with purple feathering. When in the sun, the petals spread wide open, showing a bright lilac interior, with a deep yellow throat.

COLCHICUMS

The colchicum, with flowers similar to those of the autumn-flowering crocus, belongs to an entirely different family. Colchicums are bolder and brighter than the autumn-blooming crocuses. In the spring, they produce coarse, lush green leaves a foot high which look like spinach. The leaves wither away in July, leaving no trace. What a happy surprise when the first colchicum bloom appears in September! One follows another and you'll think there is no end to them. Pick them for the house, and the next day more appear. They are so bursting with life that sometimes they're in bud when they arrive from the nursery late in August.

Plant colchicums, in August or September, in front of shrubs. Since they naturalize well, they could be planted in a meadow or at the edge of the woods. They will grow in any kind of soil, but, like all bulbs, they must have good drainage and plenty of water during the growing season. Place them six to eight inches apart and deep enough so that the tops of the bulbs are about six inches below the surface of the ground.

The most familiar colchicum is C. autumnale with rosy-lilac, four-inch flowers. C. autumnale album is a beautiful white variety. The late-blooming colchicum 'Water Lily' has breathtaking double flowers of deep pink. Autumnale minor with rosy star-shaped flowers is one of the latest to bloom. Bornmuelleri has five-inch, rosy-lilac flowers with pure-white centers. Speciosum, whose blossoms measure six inches in diameter, is one of the finest of the genus.

Colchicum hybrids have even larger flowers and are sometimes covered with a checkerboard pattern. 'Disraeli' has a checkered pattern on its light blue petals. 'Autumn Queen' produces huge clusters of deep, rosy-purple flowers. 'The Giant' is rosy-lilac and very fragrant. The bright mauve flowers of 'Lilac Wonder' grow as large as magnolia blossoms and are eight inches tall. 'Garganteum,' violet with a white center, is the latest to flower and has a strong honey scent. Order your colchicums as soon as the bulb catalogs come in What happened?

No more limp excuses that don't fool a soul. No more murmurs of sympathy from the other girls—murmurs they don't really mean. You're out on the courts, down at the bowling alley, over at the discotheque any time of the month. And you find that activity does a lot to chase away monthly blues.

Girls who use Tampax tampons almost invariably become more active. One reason is that they feel so unhampered; they can forget about chafing, irritation, odor, tell-tale bulges. A Tampax tampon is out of sight, out of mind. Small wonder that millions of girls have used billions of Tampax tampons. Worn internally, they're the modern way. Why don't you try them this very month?

Tampax tampons are available in your choice of three absorbency sizes (Regular, Super and Junior) wherever such products are sold.

early summer so that you'll be sure to receive the varieties you want.

LILIES

Would you like to see Easter lilies blooming in your garden from September to November, or possibly, December? Plant Lilium formosanum which is so similar to our Easter lily. The plant is six feet tall and each stalk has a cluster of from three to five trumpets, flushed with rose on the outside of the petals, and fragrant as gardenias. Plant the bulbs four to six inches deep or sow the seeds in winter for flowering the following fall.

The lily family provides a succession of bloom all summer and well into the fall. Don't despair after the regals, madonnas, day lilies (hemerocallis) and some hybrids have finished flowering. If you haven't planted August-blooming speciosum lilies, you may expect a delightful experience. The rubrum lily is a most unusual shade of deep pink with darker, velvety spots on curving petals, and the most heavenly perfume. A cluster of these, blooming in late August and September, is a striking reminder that winter is still some weeks away from your garden.

We think that the deep pink Lilium speciosum rubrum is lovelier than the white variety, Lilium speciosum album, but the white one blooms until frost. Why not have both? A third speciosum, 'Garnet Fire,' has fragrant, deep-red blooms edged with silver. The flowers of 'Imperial Crimson' are brilliant red on a white ground and measure eight inches in diameter. We have all four varieties. You'll have to wait for bloom until nine months after the bulbs are planted in November.

Each year brings introductions of beautiful, fragrant lilies that bloom in August. Among the new hybrids are 'Bonfire,' 'Empress of China,' 'Empress of India,' and 'Empress of Japan.' 'Pink Beauty' and 'Pink Delight' are two fascinating imports from New Zealand.

The miniature day lilies (hemerocallis) bloom later than other day lilies. They bring lemon yellow and rusty red to your garden long after the blooms of 'Hyperion' and 'Morocco Red' have withered.

Hosta subcordata grandiflora with its fragrant white flowers makes bold accents among the broad, green leaves. The blooms resemble Easter lilies but are about two thirds as large.

It's fun to read the flower catalogs and select plants whose botanical names include "autumnalis." Welcome as scillas are in the springtime, the element of surprise seems to make them even more welcome in the early fall. Scilla autumnalis has lilac-rose flowers, eight inches tall, which come before their leaves. Their starry bells make lovely drifts of color in a space where there is light shade.

charming when naturalized among ferns in light, not very deep, shade.

ALLIUMS

The varieties of allium, which have fragrant blossoms, are always a delight to grow. You can be so nonchalant when you say, "Oh, it's just an onion." The flowers of Allium odorum and Allium tanguticum are sweet relatives of the pungent garlic.

the winter sun but prefer the shade of deciduous trees in the summer. Unlike most small bulbs, leaves and blossoms appear at the same time.

CYCLAMEN

You know the cyclamen plants that fill the greenhouse with winter bloom, delicate butterflies hovering over silver and green leaves. Have you grown the hardy, miniature varieties of cyclamen with their thick, marbled foliage and profusion of pink, white or rosy-crimson flowers? They are enchanting. Plant the bulbs two inches deep at the base of stone walls, in the rock garden or in the shade of shrubs where there is plenty of humus. You won't believe that they can survive temperatures as low as 32° below zero. They will amaze you by blooming above the snow in December. The dainty flowers are perfect for small arrangements and the foliage, green all year, will be distinctive whenever you use it.

One enthusiastic nurseryman claims that it is not unusual to have over one hundred flowers at once on a mature bulb. Try Cyclamen europaeum with its fragrant, rosy-crimson flowers that come in August and September. Or plant C. neapolitanum whose rose-pink blossoms are produced until December. Cyclamen cilicium has a touch of crimson at the base of each pink flower and blooms in October.

BUGBANE

An autumn variety of bugbane with the unlikely name of Cimicifuga racemosa simplex is a godsend to shady gardens. The white spikes, four feet high, make a fine showing in the late garden and fill vacant spaces in an all-white, mass flower arrangement.

ADDITIONAL PLANTS

Three familiar plants for your shady garden are cardinal flower, Japanese anemone and monkshood. Plant Lobelia cardinalis among green ferns. The clear rose, red, and white of Anemone japonica and the deep blue Aconitum fischeri are scarce colors in fall.

The closed gentian, Gentiana makinoi, adds another blue to your shady border in September. Plant clumps of them in spring or fall.

Grow these hardy members of the prolific composite family: gayfeather, ageratum and candytuft. Ask for the tall, white Liatris spicata alba, lavender-blue Eupatorium coelestinum and iberis 'Autumn Snow'. ■

AMARYLLIS

Have you missed the glory of the potted amaryllis, that bright addition to your houseplants last winter? Garden amaryllis will bloom in fall. Plant the hardy variety, Lycoris squamigera, four inches deep and eight inches apart in your garden when the bulbs are dormant in June. Like colchicum, its foliage appears in the spring and then disappears in July. In late August or early September, the flower stalk emerges and bursts into bloom bearing a cluster of delicate pink trumpets. It is

The British Miracle That Creates SUPER PLANTS IN THE GARDEN—IN THE HOUSE

Yes! From the greatest gardening nation on earth—England—comes a fantastic discovery! Developed by Britain's leading gardener—winner of the famed Victoria Medal for horticulture! Already used today by OVER THREE MILLION British gardeners! And now released to you—through this advertisement only—to try in your own garden WITHOUT RISKING A PENNY!

Think of it! Here is a gardening development that almost defies belief! It is a CONCENTRATED GROWTH FORMULA, prepared in the form of tiny pellets! It costs only pennies per treatment! And even a child can drop them in the ground in as little as ten seconds.

But once these tiny pellets are placed near the roots of your starved plants, they perform a scientific miracle that has been every gardener's dream for centuries! They SLOWLY . . . AUTOMATICALLY feed your plants the life-giving nutrients they need—CONCENTRATED RIGHT AT THE ROOTS OF THESE PLANTS—POURING LIFE-GIVING ENERGY INTO THE VERY HEART OF THOSE PLANTS—DAY AFTER DAY—THROUGH EVERY VITAL STAGE OF THEIR GROWTH!

Just picture this breathtaking scene to yourself. The first result you will notice—almost immediately—is that these amazing English pellets give your plants a tremendous new burst of growth! Whether your plants are new or old—they send out dozens of hidden shoots and buds! Some of your plants may actually DOUBLE in height and breadth in the very first month!

But this is just the beginning! Within one or two short weeks—without you even touching your plant these amazing pellets AUTOMATICALLY aid your plants in the second vital stages of its growth! Automatically—still more wonder-working nutrients enter into every cell of your plants' bodies—fill those cells with health and strength and sturdiness and wonderful new resistance to disease and pests! Great, tall stems stand up with military precision! Giant buds begin to swell with vigor and vitality! Even tired old shrubs that you had almost given up for lost—begin to straighten out—fatten up—send out the young green growth that you had never hoped to see again!

And then—the most remarkable part of all! When these fantastically beautiful plants have reached their full glorious height and strength, simply drop another Magic Pellet next to them! These tiny English pellets automatically liberate still more wonder-working ingredients! These final concentrated stimulants pour into your roots—carried up through the stems and trunks and branches of your plants—are finally delivered to the great giant flower buds at the top of those plants.

And when those precious ingredients reach those ripe buds—THEN YOU WILL BE BLINDED BY THE EXPLOSION OF COLOR THAT GREET'S YOU IN YOUR GARDEN!

Flowers So Beautiful You Can Hardly Believe Your Eyes!

Yes! When you follow this Streeter plan, you will walk through that garden as though you were in a dream! You will see rose bushes weighed down by masses of blossoms, of a richness and perfume and color that you have never imagined before! You will walk past solid, blazing rows of chrysanthemums so thick that you can't even see a leaf in between! You will see dahlias, and asters, and gladioli and zinnias so massive, so exquisite, so breathtakingly beautiful that you hardly believe that they are the same plants that you put into the ground. And when your neighbors begin to pour into your yard—when you watch them bend and touch these flowers to see if they are real—THEN YOU WILL KNOW A FEELING OF GARDEN ACCOMPLISHMENT AND PRIDE THAT YOU MAY NEVER HAVE DREAMED OF BEFORE!

A housewife from Kent, England, who raises her own vegetables. This cabbage grown with Streeter's Pellets—weighs sixteen pounds. She can hardly lift it. But this is the proudest day of her life!

GUARANTEED FOR THE FULL SEASON!

These Magic English Pellets—called FRED STREET-ER'S PLANT GROWTH TABLETS—cost only $2.98 for a package of 125 pellets; or $4.95—a saving of $4 for two packages, or 300 pellets. Since only a few pellets are required to treat the average plant, this is an investment of only a few pennies a plant for the most astounding beauty you have ever seen!

And these results are completely guaranteed! Here is what we ask you to do, when you receive your Magic Pellets next week!

USE THEM TO CREATE SUPER-FLOWERS! Place one tiny pellet beside each of your hydrangeas, zinnias, chrysanthemums, a couple beside your roses—any kind of flower that you want super-blooms! And if you don't see fantastic new growth within just a few short weeks . . . if you don't watch with amazement while handfuls of magnificent new blossoms burst forth from those old plants—then simply return the empty package for every cent of your purchase price back!

USE THEM TO CREATE SUPER-VEGETABLES! And pick huge, breathtaking beauties within a few short weeks . . . thrill your family with the sweetest, juiciest, tenderest vegetables you've ever known—or every cent of your purchase price back!

YES! USE THEM IN YOUR ENTIRE GARDEN! Use them on hard-luck plants, where you've almost given up hope! Use them on the hardest-to-grow house plants that you know! Yes, even use them in sand, and absolutely astound your friends! And if you don't agree that this British invention is a true gardening miracle . . . if your garden isn't the showplace of your neighborhood all season long—then simply return the empty package at any time—for every cent of your purchase price back!

This guarantee is unconditional. It protects you for the entire season—entirely at our risk! You have absolutely nothing to lose! Act TODAY!

PROVEN IN 100,000 AMERICAN GARDENS

"Tried your pellets on all my house plants and my garden orchids. Some of our house plants had not budded new leaves for over a year. But after the first feeding, we had many new leaves. The plants seemed to awaken from a long sleep. They also made our orchids bloom. For 1½ years we did not have any flowers, then after feeding the pellets, we had a profusion of blossoms." Mrs. T. D. L., Los Angeles, Calif.

"When I applied the pellets, the Rose of Sharon plants almost doubled in height in just one month. My hypericum, which bloomed poorly in past seasons, is literally covered with golden flowers." Mr. C. L. Bellmore, L. I., N. Y.

"Used on the following plants (all greenhouse grown) tomatoes, cucumbers, hill peppers, dahlias, lettuce, corn. Have had wonderful success. As the soil in my greenhouse is new soil, and most of the soil in Alaska is almost sterile, this should be very good proof of your pellets' potency." Mrs. R. W., Kokhanok Bay, Alaska

Yes! Share these thrilling achievements yourself—entirely at our risk! Send for these Magic Pellets Today! Your garden, your flowers, your shrubs and your trees must burst into breathtaking new beauty in one short month—your friends must actually stop short and gaze at your garden in amazement—OR EVERY CENT OF YOUR MONEY BACK!

WARNING

Gentlemen:

Thanks a lot for sending me another light bulb for my Black Light Insect Trap.

I would have written this sooner but was waiting for a story and picture that was coming out in our local paper.

Believe me, this Black Light Trap is a real bug catcher. After this picture was taken I caught a bigger pile of them in four nights than that shown in the picture.

Thanks a lot for all this fine service you have given me.

Yours sincerely,

Richard Brightwell

For intimate marriage problems tiny Norforms assures easier protection than internal bathing

Guards against germs and odors—effective for hours

Tiny Norforms® is the modern feminine suppository that makes douching old-fashioned and unnecessary. Internal bathing just cannot give you the convenience, plus the germicidal and deodorant protection, of Norforms.

Each Norforms is tiny as your fingertip. Yet it's amazingly effective against germs and odors. At contact with the body, Norforms starts to form a powerful antiseptic film that protects delicate tissues as it eliminates odor-causing germs. And this protection lasts for hours.

Tested by Doctors

Doctors have found Norforms' deodorant protection outstandingly effective. You stay free from embarrassing odor. Norforms has been proved safe, too—won't irritate sensitive tissues.

No Measuring, No Mixing, No Apparatus

And—unlike awkward internal bathing—dainty Norforms is the easiest method of protection. Simply insert a tiny Norforms . . . and feel fresh, feminine, so secure. No bother, no mess, no doubt! Norforms is at your drug counter now.

Save 2 feet*

*Your own

A recent test with 358 busy wives showed that an extension phone could save them an average of 76 miles of needless steps a year. Why? Because when the phone rang, they took fewer steps to answer it. And when they wanted to make a call, a phone was handy. An extension in kitchen or bedroom or den could save steps for you and your family, too. The cost? Only pennies a day to double your telephone convenience. To order, just call the Business Office or ask your telephone man. Why not now?
