Now... the famed Larousse Gastronomique — not for the $20.00 that thousands paid for the publisher's edition — but for only $1.89 with membership in THE COOK BOOK GUILD

...if you agree to accept only four selections or alternates over the next two years

EVER SINCE it was first published, this monumental encyclopedia has been recognized the world over as the supreme authority on food.

Compiled more than 25 years ago by the master chef and gastronome, Prosper Montagné, it was first printed in Paris by the historic publishing house of Larousse. In over a million words and 15,000 entries, it details all mankind's important knowledge about food, and its preparation and enjoyment.

Though the book was reprinted in France no less than 10 times, until recently it was available only in French. To create an English-language edition, a staff of 20 food experts and two noted editors spent four years translating this vast wealth of information.

When the first American edition appeared, it went on sale at $20 a copy and quickly became a nationwide best-seller at that price!

And now—in an introductory offer unprecedented in its generosity—you can obtain this extraordinary volume through The Cook Book Guild at the special new-member's price of only $1.89.

So vast is the scope of this huge 1,100-page encyclopedia; it almost defies description. It is, in fact, several definitive books combined into a one-volume library on food. It is...

—the one master reference work that experts turn to first to check any fact, any ingredient, any secret in the whole world of cuisine. It's the book to settle every argument over culinary questions!

—a fascinating history of food through the ages, highlighted with myriad facts on the origins of foods, wines and other edibles.

—a gourmet's travel guide, with gastronomic maps and descriptions of the 25 provinces of France; recipes for regional specialties and for those of other lands.

—a manual on fine wines, providing a thorough education in their selection and serving.

—a catalog to the world's great cheeses, with 125 of them listed and described.

—a do-it-yourself handbook on everything from canning and freezing to making wine and beer.

—a sparkling omnibus of anecdotes, legends, odd facts and tales about food and famous gourmets.

It is, of course, a master cook book uniquely valuable alongside your other cook books and reference works. With its 8,500 priceless recipes, it brings you the culinary secrets of many of the world's best cooks.

Now, in this remarkable $1.89 offer, The Cook Book

Guild invites you to discover for yourself the many adventures in food that Larousse Gastronomique can help you enjoy.

If you take special pleasure in preparing and sharing unusually good food, The Cook Book Guild will add much to your life. For here is a club devoted exclusively to seeking out the world's great cook books and making them available to you at guaranteed savings of at least 30%.

As a member, you'll learn what great chefs look for when selecting ingredients ... how impressive menus are planned by famous hostesses. You'll discover budget-stretching tips ... family and regional cooking secrets ... delicious ways to diet ... how to save time, effort and money.

Forthcoming selections are described in the free monthly bulletin, The Cook Books News, which also includes a "recipe of the month." You may take as few as four selections or alternates within two years, or as many as you wish. With every fourth book you buy, you may choose a FREE Bonus Book from a list of books on cooking, homemaking, etc.

Somebody had to break the rules.

Suddenly, you could have heard a pin drop on the sidewalk. Making its debut on Fifth Avenue was the world's first mini skirt. The woman who wore it broke the rules, alright. And so did Dash. We've created a breakthrough detergent for automatic washers. But to do it we had to break the rules.

To change things for the cleaner, Dash broke the rules:

- 1 Where conventional detergents recommend you start with $1\frac{1}{4}$ cups per washload, it's only a $\frac{3}{4}$ cup with Dash. Concentrated fury.
- 2 Typical detergents whip up lots of suds. But excess suds can dull your wash. So Dash cut down on suds to give your clothes a clear, clean rinse.
- 3 Traditional detergents are for use in sinks, tubs, pails and everywhere else under the sun. But Dash is only for automatics. After all, that's where you wash your clothes. And so that's where Dash concentrates its talents.

No wonder Dash cleans better than any powder made for all automatics.

DEAR READER

We guess that we have saved about ten years of time—give or take an hour one way or the other—by having been born when we were rather than at some earlier date. What with automobiles, super-highways, automatic toasters, clothes washers, power tools, power lawn mowers, power boats, plus all the other time-saving devices that have come on the market in the last few decades, the time we save each hour, each day, each year is astronomical. The thing that is worrying us at this particular moment is what have we done with all the time saved and what do we plan to do with the time we will save in the hours, days, and years to come? When we save money we usually put it to good use, but when we save time we seem inclined to fritter it away.

Last weekend, we drove along a superhighway pushing our automobile to the limits and then we casually wasted all the time we saved, plus a little more, watching some utter trash presented on the TV set in our motel room. In retrospect, how much more gratifying it would have been if we had finessed the superhighway and its 65 mph limit and taken a slower but infinitely more pleasurable, scenic road. What, after all, was the point in saving time if we were simply going to waste it on some mediocre entertainment? The whole point in saving time, in acquiring time-saving equipment, and utilizing time-saving devices, is not simply to save time but to save time that we can use for our own profit and benefit. How many of us do this?

In spite of all the ways we have at our command to save time—so many more than our grandparents ever dreamed of—the fact remains that few of us ever have time for the things we really want to do—time to spend with people we really want to be with, time to spend reading, time to spend in study, time to spend in the development of interesting hobbies and pursuits. For each minute we save we seem to take on obligations requiring two minutes and consequently we probably have less time at our disposal than the generations of the past.

Maybe one of these fine days, we'll get smart and start utilizing the time we save to our very own advantage. Some time, some day, we might become such time misers that we'll check the time saved and time spent as carefully as we inspect our bank balance. Some day we might reach the point where we will say, "I've saved so many hours on this day and these are hours I have saved for myself, this is how I can best spend them in the most profitable manner."

The way things are going, each of us will have more and more free time at our disposal in the days ahead. We can waste it or we can make intelligent use of it for the benefit of ourselves, our families, and our communities.

"Mommy! Daddy!"

We can read Dr. Seuss all by ourselves!"

You'll know something special is happening the moment your child first turns, wide-eyed, from the lovable DR. SEUSS creatures and their antics to the words that tell about them. Word by word, phrase by phrase, he follows the print... excitement grows until the secret can't be kept a moment longer and he shouts his joyous discovery: "I can read it myself!" That's the way an early love of reading starts... with beguiling BEGINNER BOOKS by Dr. Seuss and his friends, all filled with the humor CHILDREN love, all written in easy "beginner" words your child already knows or will quickly pick up.

Take these
3 BEGINNER BOOKS
$1.49
FOR

(Publisher's Catalog price $5.85)

Beginning Readers' Program

How does love of reading begin? For millions of children it has started with membership in the BEGINNING READERS' PROGRAM — a proven program of reading enrichment, tested and approved by teachers, and loved by parents, teachers and tots alike. The country's largest children's reading program, it is the only one that offers BEGINNER BOOKS by DR. SEUSS and other gifted writers and artists.

A whole parade of sunny, funny books in words young children know or can easily learn!

Belonging to the program is a joy for boys and girls. For BEGINNER BOOKS tell fascinating tales about such fabulous creatures as a firefly who can write in the sky... a lovable animal who can take off his polka dots and put them on people... a cat who wears a hat and can balance umbrellas, fishbowls and layer cakes on his paws!

But the importance of the BEGINNING READERS' PROGRAM goes far beyond the delightful stories and glorious illustrations. For at the same time that it makes reading fun for your child, this planned program subtly helps your child "stretch" his reading and learning abilities.

Each BEGINNER BOOK rewards your child for reading with its humor and excitement... reinforces his desire to read because it makes reading easier... reassures your child with a successful reading experience.

Four isn't too early... Eight isn't too late

The time to bring the program into your child's life is now, during the critical learning years from 4 to 8. The books are just right for children who are beginning to read; they're perfect, too, for reading aloud to pre-schoolers, who become even more eager to start reading on their own.

As reading authority Margaret Maxwell wrote recently in FAMILY CIRCLE magazine about BEGINNER BOOKS, "Children enjoy books that make them laugh... we both chuckled our way through (Dr. Seuss') rollicking rhymes. Quite casually, without formal effort on my part, Robert learned to recognize the words in these simple stories, and by the time he was five years old, he was a beginning reader."

BEGINNER BOOKS are durably designed to live with a small child. They're printed in at least three bright colors and large readable type. As a member of the BEGINNING READERS' PROGRAM, your child will receive a BEGINNER BOOK every month and you will be billed only $1.49 plus a small mailing charge, instead of the publisher's catalog price of $1.95. After four monthly selections, you may cancel membership at any time.

Let DR. SEUSS and his friends delight your child for 10 days FREE!

We invite you to prove the benefits of the BEGINNING READERS' PROGRAM by accepting the three books shown here — a $5.85 value at the publisher's catalog price — for $1.49. Even this small investment in your child's reading and school progress carries no risk. Ten days' FREE trial must convince you the program will stimulate your child's appetite for reading, or you may return the three introductory books and owe nothing. BEHIND THE SCENES

Here are just a few of the fine contributors we called on in preparing this issue on quality. Their work interprets our theme.

Carl Gunther calls himself a small-volume builder and specializes in authentic re-creations of Colonial houses. He's had years of experience in all phases of home building, in drafting, and design. For 20 years he has been in business for himself, building houses mainly in Fairfield County, Connecticut. Mr. Gunther's 11-house complex in Trumbull, Connecticut, is one illustration of his sure knowledge of traditional buildings. The story is on page 96.

Harriet B. Wimmer and Joseph Y. Yamada are consulting and executive landscape architects for the University of California, San Diego, and members of the American Society of Landscape Architects. In addition to their residential work, they have done many major landscaping projects such as Sea World in San Diego's Mission Bay area, the San Diego International Air Terminal, and the San Diego Stadium. Their contribution to this issue is the California garden you'll find on page 91. Wimmer & Yamada, as they are known professionally, worked closely with award-winning architect Robert E. Jones to create this "Happy Blend of Garden and House." They succeeded.

Yung Wang is an associate of the architectural firm, Warner Burns Toan & Lunde, and Ming Wang is a free-lance architect. It's interesting that both Yung and Ming grew up in Shanghai and lived in town houses around the corner from one another. But they did not meet until school, at Yale, where both studied for degrees in architecture. After their marriage, the Wangs moved to New York City and in 1965 began renovation of their own brownstone. (See page 78.)

BOOKS AND BOOKLETS

BOOKS OF HOME INTEREST

Design of Cities. This is an important book on a topic most people know only through isolated newspaper items on proposed changes in their own towns. Edmund N. Bacon, the author and man most responsible for the recent urban renewal in Philadelphia, introduces the layman to problems and processes of planning cities for the people who use them. He shows what is meant by good planning and what is possible to make city life enjoyable. Illustrations supplement an easy-to-read account of the development of the city and aid the reader in understanding complex design concepts. If you're interested in the future of our cities, don't miss this book. $15. (Viking)

Step-by-Step Weaving. Since handweaving is a fascinating subject but one that many people think of as difficult, we were delighted to see this book arrive in our office. Written for the beginner and for the potential weaver, it teaches this craft in a simple, direct manner. If you have a loom, you can start on author Nell Znamierowski's easy-to-follow projects. If not, she shows you how to construct a simple frame loom. Good reading, good weaving, and a reasonable price tag. $1.95. (Golden Press)

For the same price you can buy Step-by-Step Ceramics . . . a complete introduction to this craft, with easy projects, professional advice. By Jolyon Hofsted. (Golden Press)

The Elegant But Easy Cookbook was originally issued in paperback. When authors M.F. Burros and L. Levine revised and expanded it for this hardcover edition, there was one thing they didn't change—their thinking that a hostess can enjoy a party too. The necessary ingredients are good planning and good food that can be prepared in advance—their book includes both. $5.95. (Macmillan)

Candleholders in America: 1650-1900. Beginning with a brief discussion of what is known about the origins of the candle and candle-making, the text goes on to describe the development of candle-burning lighting fixtures. It includes all forms of candle holders during this period, and shows examples of each major style change. Of interest are the illustrations showing individual pieces in detail and in room settings. By Joseph T. Butler. $6.95. (Crown)

For people who are not ashamed of having brains.

Great Books are published by Encyclopedia Britannica in collaboration with the University of Chicago.

Here is the most superb home library ever assembled— Great Books

It may not be popular to admit it, but all people aren't created equal. And the longer they live (and learn), the less equal they get.

You were probably born with a bigger share of intelligence than most of your fellow men . . . and taught how to use it. And you appreciate the difference. You aren't ashamed of having brains. You enjoy using them.

That's why Great Books belong in your home. These are the writings of Plato, Homer, Cervantes, Tolstoy, Freud, Rabelais, Shakespeare and many more. They contain just about every important thought of Western man for the past 3,000 years! A set of 54 beautifully bound volumes containing 443 masterpieces by 74 of history's greatest geniuses.

The $1,000,000 Syntopicon

Included with Great Books (and available only with Great Books) is a unique reference work called the Syntopicon. An amazing index that required 8 years and cost more than $1,000,000 just to write.

Unlike a dictionary that indexes facts, the Syntopicon indexes ideas—every one of the thousands of topics and subtopics within the Great Books.

In minutes, the Syntopicon enables you to look up any idea in the Great Books and find what each of the great thinkers thought about it.

Also available with Great Books are the handsome 10-volume reading plans. And you may also get a remarkable 10-volume set called Gateway to the Great Books as well.

Certainly, the Great Books belong in the home of every thinking person. What do they cost? About the price of a good set of luggage.

Send for this FREE Booklet

To learn more, just fill out and mail the attached card to Great Books, 425 N. Michigan Ave., Dept. 205-K, Chicago, Illinois 60611. You will receive a full-color, 16-page booklet describing the Great Books in detail.

There is no cost or obligation. You don't even need a stamp. Do it now.

GREAT BOOKS

TODAY'S ORIGINALS

It's clever how much fun these handcrafted objects are to look at and, at the same time, how exceptionally masterful they are. The metal sculpture (far right) is a perfect example. The balance isn't all between acrobats and chair. It's between cheerful whimsicality, fine composition, and the artist's skillful manipulation of a difficult medium—metal. Each of the other pieces has the same qualities, and offers us a fresh, new dimension to American crafts. They are neither accurate reproductions nor skillful imitations. They are original, one-of-a-kind pieces that take craft design beyond the confines of skill into art. The collection was gathered from many parts of the United States and is currently displayed and available at America House in New York City. Some of the artworks are useful and some purely decorative. All are thoroughly modern in feeling. Emphasis has been placed on clean, fine lines and a strong integration of materials and concept. Like rare jewels they are beautiful to look at, pleasing to hold. Like fine tools they have a smoothness and balance that will live well with any background. Whether you want an amusing—but excellent—design or an exceptional concept of contemporary beauty you can find it here.

Two small vases by Rose and Ernie Cabot of Arizona. Photograph at left: Silver acrobats mounted on stone by Jo Roper of New Mexico.

Surprise your kitchen with an Armstrong vinyl floor

If your kitchen looks twice its age, maybe it needs a change of floor.

A new Armstrong floor can take years off your kitchen. Just look at the ones on these and the following pages. Here are floors in colors to brighten your spirits as well as your decorating . . . designs to suit your budget as well as your taste. And Armstrong vinyl floors not only start out looking beautiful, they stay beautiful with a minimum of care.

See the whole range of Armstrong floors at any flooring retailer listed on the last page of this ad. You owe it to your kitchen. You owe it to yourself.

CUSHIONED VINYL CORLON.
IT'S SO COMFORTABLE YOU WON'T BELIEVE YOUR FEET.

Here's the most comfortable floor that ever happened to a kitchen. Under its tough vinyl surface, there's a thick cushion of long-lasting vinyl foam. Cushioned Corlon gives every time you step on it, then comes right back. Yet for all its comfort, it's as durable as any vinyl floor Armstrong has ever made for your home.

SABRIL VINYL CORLON.
LOOKS EXPENSIVE, BUT ISN'T.

(Right, above.)

A floor should do more than hold up the furniture. It should add color and appeal to a room. The one you see here is a perfect complement to the fabric-and-wallpaper decorating scheme. Sabril Corlon comes in several colorings, designed to bring out the best in today's kitchens.

THE CORONELLE COLLECTION.

That Spanish tile floor isn't Spanish tile at all; it's sheet vinyl. A beautiful way to set off the rich woods in the kitchen you see here. This is just one of an exciting, new collection of floors that look like the real thing. Each Coronelle floor is beautifully textured and colored like the material it's patterned after: Spanish tile, brick, or slate.

Armstrong

TEXTURED, PEBBLY DESIGN.

EXCELON TILE.
THE DO-IT-YOURSELF FLOOR.

This new tile is topped with a layer of special vinyl formula that gives it the richness of solid vinyl. But because it's sturdy vinyl-asbestos at heart, it's very economical. The Custom Excelon pattern you see in the kitchen here is Shalestone. It's one of dozens of colors and designs you can choose from.

Get your new kitchen floor at one of the Armstrong flooring retailers listed on the opposite page. Many of them offer the new Armstrong Time Payment Plan that lets you have the floor you really want on easy monthly payments. And one more thing: Don't forget to look for the Armstrong name on the roll or carton; it's your assurance of quality. FREE: Sample and literature kit containing additional information about Armstrong floors for your kitchen and the other active rooms in your home. Write to: Armstrong, 6710 Pine St., Lancaster, Pa. 17604.

THE FAMILY PET
By PATRICIA O'KEEFE

THINKING OF GETTING A PUREBRED PUP?

We're having a "pupulation" explosion in purebred dogs.

The lovable mixed-breed pooch may still be the most numerous of pets, but his purebred cousins are giving him lots of competition. Last year, over one and three-quarter million blueblooded puppies were registered by the American Kennel Club. And that's an all-time high for the 89-year-old AKC.

Some of these puppies were bought to be shown. But the majority were bought by people who simply wanted a fine, purebred dog for a pet.

Top dog among these canine aristocrats is the poodle. The poodle's fashionably trimmed coat may make him look like a wind-up toy. But under the fluff there is a real dog with a bright, lovable, witty personality. Highly intelligent, poodles take to good training, and they are hardly lap dogs either. Whether they come in standard, miniature, or toy size (large, medium, or small), poodles make lively companions for adults and children.

Second on the popularity list for purebreds is the German shepherd. This handsome dog makes an excellent watchdog as well as a pet.

Old favorites—cocker spaniels, collies, and beagles—are now enjoying great popularity. But breeds less well known a few years ago are also making great gains.

Some of the small breeds are very much sought after. In addition to the toy poodle, Yorkshire terriers, Maltese, and Chihuahuas lead the teeny-weeny pack. These miniature pets, which can easily be hurt by rough handling, are not recommended for children. But in spirit, personality, and spunk they are all dog.

Another newcomer is the miniature Schnauzer. A smart little terrier with an expressive face and lots of dash and style, the Schnauzer has a bouncy nature that appeals to people who want a dog with spirit.

For those who prefer a placid pet, the Basset hound is often the choice. Short-legged and long-eared, a Basset has the funniest, saddest face in all dogdom—and the heart of a clown underneath it.

The number of really big dogs is also growing at a remarkable rate. Would you believe there are 37 percent more St. Bernards galloping around? How about 23 percent more Great Danes? If you want a big dog, a big house and yard are handy, but not absolutely essential.

KNOW WHAT YOU'RE PAYING FOR

So, if you're thinking of getting a purebred, large or small, shop carefully—and not only carefully in terms of investing your money. You also want to get, out of the 115 different breeds recognized by the AKC, the dog that most appeals to you and your family.

Selecting a kennel or breeder is the first step. Get recommendations from a veterinarian or from a breed club on people in your area who specialize in raising the breed you want. And then visit them to see the dogs.

Don't just price-shop. The cheapest dog is not the best one. The rarity of the breed, the investment the owner has in raising his puppies, and the quality of the bloodlines figure in a puppy's price.

Know what you are paying for. If your puppy is "AKC registered," make sure the breeder gives you the official papers that are the proof of registration. A pedigree form—actually just a paper that lists a dog's family tree—is not sufficient proof that a puppy is registerable with the AKC.

Sometimes it is also possible to get a puppy that is "pet stock." Because of faults in coloring or conformation, pet-stock dogs are not potential show candidates. They are not cheap pets, but they are less expensive than show dogs—and still quality animals that make excellent pets.

The kennel owner or breeder who raises good dogs is truly interested in finding good homes for them. Let him help you select your dog, and you'll make a happy investment—one that will pay off in a dog you can be proud to own.

but it's more.

DECORATING NEWSLETTER

IN ST. LOUIS recently we visited interior designer Thea Ramsey, A.I.D., at her town house. A wonderful mixture of modern, old, and antique furnishings and a wealth of adaptable decorating ideas made our visit particularly enjoyable. For example, the house is entirely carpeted with black cotton carpet. And in the bathroom, Mrs. Ramsey took a damask tablecloth that was the wrong size for her new round table and transformed it into a shower curtain (with a plastic liner, of course). Furniture ideas in the house included an unpainted chest which she covered with a collection of thrift-shop paintings, mostly very romantic-looking landscapes in murky browns and greens. In the kitchen, food staples are decoratively stored in wide-mouthed Mexican glass jars. Mrs. Ramsey added tiny drawer pulls on each for easy removal of the cork tops.

GREAT IDEAS FROM ABROAD: Vacationed in Germany and Switzerland recently. Noted: light switches that glow softly in the dark so they're easy to find. Heard from Swiss friends who moved to a new town and are redecorating, that furniture delivery is just as slow as in the States. But the furniture store where they bought the major portion of their things is lending them basic furniture to make the waiting time comfortable. This is not a single case but an everyday practice. Used: Kleenex "Party-Sets" for roadside picnics. They consist of four plastic plates, knives, forks to match, and a gaily colored package of Kleenex napkins. Price? Equivalent of 50c and worth every penny of it. Admired: porcelain soap dishes, designed for easy cleaning, which project from the bathroom wall and have a small hole to let water escape. Also admired the "telephone" or Swiss hand shower that's a matter of course in all bathrooms; ideally convenient for bathtub cleaning and hair washing.

DID YOU KNOW that October is "Carpet Your Bedroom" month? Only about 38 percent of all bedrooms in the U.S. are carpeted. So if yours is among the vast majority of the bare-floored ones, give some serious thought to bedroom carpeting. Especially with winter just around the corner. A carpeted bedroom is not only prettier, it's warmer, cozier, and much, much quieter.

GROSGRAIN RIBBON, the old-fashioned favorite, is now more popular than ever. Not just to tie back those George Washington hairdos the girls are sporting, but in decorating too. Watch for velvet pillows crisscrossed in gay grosgrain stripes, moiré pillows banded in rolled grosgrain in gentle pastels, and bright felt ones with mitered grosgrain borders. Shown recently at Bloomcraft Fabrics were several room settings using grosgrain in even bigger ways. Fabric-covered walls had dado, chair rail, and panel above outlined in inch-wide solid color grosgrain glued to the fabric. This idea could also be used on painted or papered walls. The edges of a bed canopy were trimmed in grosgrain with bows tying each side together at the four corners. Black-and-white striped grosgrain bordered an emerald green bridge-table cover. The color scheme in this card room: red, black, and green.

START WITH THE FLOOR. And it doesn't matter if you want to cover a basement or attic floor, Robbins' new Ultraflor will work. For an overall-pattern effect this continuous vinyl flooring is also the answer. It comes six feet wide for easy installation—it's even flexible enough to cover the wall. Ultraflor requires no waxing. After installation, a finish coat is applied, adding a high gloss. Available in a chip effect in ten colorations (from beige to sea blue with green), it costs approximately $10 a square yard.

is stainless steel.

The gurgler-maker is the mechanism at the bottom of the pot that makes the coffee perk. In most pots, the gurgler-maker and other inside parts aren't stainless, and bitter oils build up. In this Toastmaster coffee maker, everything the coffee touches is stainless steel, gurgler-maker and all. It stays cleaner and your coffee tastes better. Another thing—Toastmaster's See-Level handle shows how much coffee is left—from 4 to 12 cups. See the Toastmaster model M521 at your favorite store soon.

MAINLY FOR MEN

1 Until now the home craftsman who wanted a drill with more muscle than the usual 1/4-inch model went to a 3/8-inch. For anything larger there were only the professional-sized 1/2-inch models which are big and more costly. Black & Decker has changed the picture, however, by introducing a 1/2-inch drill that is little larger than a 1/4-inch unit. It hefts nicely and has an auxiliary handle for easy holding during use. Speed is 550 rpm and price is $26.66.

Speaking of drills, the average do-it-yourselfer gets only a fraction of the usefulness out of his drill. For this versatile tool can do literally hundreds of jobs. All you need is the right accessory.

Recently, we used a 1/4-inch drill equipped with a 68c sanding disk to dress down some edge-glued cabinet doors. The disk is made of rubber and mounted on a short arbor. The sandpaper clamps to the front. To use, you grasp the drill body and tilt it at a slight angle to the work so that less than half the disk lightly touches the surface, cutting parallel with the grain where possible.

We've used the same attachment to feather the edges of chipped paint before refinishing a wall. It does the job in seconds. Doing this takes care, to avoid cutting the plaster, but spackling the accidental cuts takes only seconds.

Another time, we equipped a 1/4-inch drill with a small cup-shaped wire wheel to literally whisk the chipped, crumbling paint off a window frame. Again, the job took seconds and saved much hand scraping and sanding. The glass seemed impervious to the wires.

And a man we know uses a cloth buffing wheel to bring his shoes to a high shine in seconds. (If you try this, touch the leather very lightly or you'll end up with suede shoes.)

In using drill accessories, the relatively high speed of a 1/4-inch drill is often a disadvantage. A variable speed drill or a lower-speed, heavy-duty unit are easy answers. Or, get a speed reducer. One type works with any power tool by varying the amount of current reaching the motor. Another, which uses gears, goes in chuck.

So, before tackling your next project, look around a good hardware store. Chances are you'll find a drill accessory that will save you hours of time and lots of effort.

2 Another work saver comes in the form of self-adhesive wall and flooring materials. Latest examples of the former come from Decro-Wall. That firm has introduced a realistic three-dimensional imitation of sunbaked terra-cotta. It's a vinyl material in 12 by 12 inch squares. To apply, you remove a paper backing, uncovering tabs of adhesive. Press the panels onto any sound wall surface and you're done. You get eight panels for $3.50. Also from Decro-Wall are a stick-tab cork in richly textured dark brown (about $4 for four square feet) and a good-looking marble pattern selling for $3.50 per six square feet. (continued)

Did your wife decorate your house in Genuine Elegant Uncomfortable?

Recognize yourself? Squirming and shifting, trying to get yourself comfortable in a chair that refuses to let you.

We think it's time you stopped sitting around complaining and stood up for your rights.

Every man who works eight hours a day supporting a wife and kids deserves a chair he can call his own.

And that chair is a Stratolounger.

The Stratolounger is a reclining chair he can really and truly relax in.

A chair that lets him put up his feet without his wife putting him down.

The Stratolounger can move in as many positions as you want. For every one of your "fidgets," there's a comfortable position.

Whether you're lounging around watching T.V. or just plain relaxing, your feet, your legs, your neck, your back, your "everything" never had it so comfortable.

There's another side to a Stratolounger that you may not care about, but your wife does.

A Stratolounger isn't ugly. In fact, some people have grown to love it.

There are Stratolungers in a lot of different colors, fabrics and styles from Early American to Mediterranean to Modern. Many are even protected with Scotchgard stain-repellent.

You can buy a Stratolounger for as low as $99.

But this is no time to think about money. Not when the head of the family is walking around, searching for a place to sit down.

Flintkote has come forward with the first self-adhesive flooring material we've seen. Called Peel and Stick, it's a vinyl asbestos that comes in 9 by 9 inch squares. Again, you remove a paper backing and press into place. The adhesive grabs with tremendous force, as we found when trying to remove a tile we tried in our office. Tiles are suitable anywhere in the house, as long as the floor is flat, clean, free of wax. Tile for an 8 by 10 foot room costs under $30.

3 Fastest and simplest way to spruce up a front entry is to change the door. This particularly handsome design is made of ponderosa pine with strong dowel joints. The Fiesta, made by Ideal, is 3 feet by 6 feet 8 inches and costs about $60.

Hotpoint's Porta-Cold refrigerator, a 2.1-cubic-foot unit finished in white or deep beige, is perfect for TV snack times. It sells for $89. Cart is $20.

5 A new line of circular saw and saber saw blades is coated with heavy-duty Teflon. They're made by H.K. Porter under the Disston brand name. Coating prevents rust, gum buildup, and provides lubrication. Thus, you cut faster and cleaner, with less motor wear. Circular blades from 6 1/2 to 10 inches in diameter cost $3.55 to $5.45. Saber blades come in 1/4-inch universal shank style and 1/2-inch reciprocating shank style. Sizes run 3 to 10 inches, at 65c to $1.49.

6 The trouble with hacksaw blades is they won't change direction readily. But the Super-Saw changes that. This tool is a rod that fastens to a hacksaw in place of the blade. Bonded to it are particles of tungsten carbide, which act as teeth. They are hard enough to cut tool steel, glass, and tile. And, you can change direction just about at will. From International Fiberglass; about $3 each.

7 Seamless resilient flooring, previously a contractor item, is now available in a do-it-yourself kit. Marketed by General Polymers Corporation, it contains materials for a colored base coat, multi-colored vinyl chips, and several coats of polyurethane. Covers 25 square feet and the price is $14.95. Applied with paintbrush and roller, this flooring goes over any clean, sound floor surface. It's said to be extremely durable and maintenance free.

8 Going from home to office, more and more busy executives find that portable tape recorders are ideal for recording conferences, making notes in the car, and dictating letters while traveling.

One that we've been using to good effect is a cartridge-loading General Electric model that retails for $69.95. Loading and flopping tapes is literally a snap, and clearly labeled push buttons take all the guesswork out of recording, playback, rewinding, etc. Another good choice is a new reel-to-reel type from Wollensak. It gives good fidelity for its price class ($89.95) and features a choice of automatic or manual control of recording level. Recording time runs as high as six hours on a five-inch reel. Both machines operate on regular current or flashlight batteries and come with earphones.

The Civilizing of the Shag.

For years shag rugs have been those wild things that bachelors or career girls put into their first away-from-home apartments. Very soft. Very shaggy. Very non-Mom. In civilizing the shag we wanted to keep that bachelor essence, but maybe attract a mom here and there.

So, we snipped some of the shag, but snipping doesn't necessarily mean shaving. And we twisted each fiber for extra strength.

©1967 Lees Carpets, a Division of Burlington Industries

The result is a soft wiggle-your-toes kind of carpet, easy to vacuum, even easy to walk in in high heels. In lots of fibers, some under $9.00 a square yard. From tame to very, very wild. (As a matter of fact the colors are the only thing about the shag we didn't civilize.)

Come on, Mom, how about it?

PLANT A CROCUS SPRING!

Is there a happier, more familiar harbinger of spring than a clump of crocuses poking through the snow? As long as flowers have been cultivated, crocuses have warmed winter-weary hearts and brightened bleak landscapes. If you ever visit the palace of King Minos in Crete, you will see them blooming in frescoes painted 4000 years ago!

So you won't miss out on the pleasure of repeating history in your garden next spring, get outdoors now and dig! Crocuses have to be put in the ground before it freezes, so don't delay. Planting is easy: Dig a hole about six inches deep, mix bone meal with the soil at the bottom, then add soil until the hole is about three inches deep. Plant crocus corms in clumps rather than singly and set them from three to six inches apart.

After you've planted your crocuses, they will need no further care, other than the customary weeding and watering in dry spells. They'll multiply and produce more flowers for you than you ever expected. Dividing is not necessary unless the clumps become very crowded. Good drainage is a must.

Crocuses need very little fertilizer in established gardens. They do best in a sandy loam laced with humus, but no fresh organic matter. Work some bone meal into the soil in the spring, after the shoots come up. In new gardens, enrich the soil with bone meal and dried cow manure before planting. Never give bulbs, including crocuses, a fertilizer that's high in nitrogen or a quick-growth fertilizer. To assure that your bulbs will have adequate nourishment from year to year, never cut off their leaves before they turn brown!

*Depending on where you live, you can expect crocus bloom as early as February or March. Some of the earliest to flower are Crocus imperati, lilac, sieberi, purple, anacyrensis, orange-yellow, 'Cloth of Silver,' lilac and white stripes, and susianua ('Cloth of Gold'). The blooms we show are 'Blizzard,' left, and 'Queen of the Blues,' right. Both are giant hybrid Dutch crocus.*

The Warners had a deep-seated decorating problem.

See how beautifully Ethan Allen helped them solve it.

The Warners' problem was Mr. Warner. He didn't fit into the type of dining room Mrs. Warner wanted.

She dreamed of a delicate, elegant room. And delicate was something Mr. Warner was not.

So the Warners took their problem to our Ethan Allen gallery. You see above the happy solution we helped them find.

We're not just furniture salesmen, but skilled home planners, anxious to help with any decorating problem. We listened to Mrs. Warner's ideas. Looked at Mr. Warner. Then suggested American Traditional in gracious Sheffield cherry.

We helped Mrs. Warner coordinate her carpet, draperies and wallpaper panels. Sconces, candlesticks and accessories are all from the Ethan Allen collection—each carefully chosen to achieve the delicate elegance Mrs. Warner was after.

Mr. Warner? He finds American Traditional "downright comfortable".

Decorating problem at your home? Let us help. There are over 2,000 designs in the Ethan Allen collection. All open stock. All "in style" forever.

You'll find them all pictured in color in complete room settings, along with many important do's and don'ts on decorating, in our 9" x 12", 336-page Ethan Allen Treasury. You'll also see our many lamps and accessories. For your free copy, stop by your nearest Ethan Allen gallery.

ARE YOU FINANCIALLY READY TO MOVE?

Among home buyers, financial planning is like motherhood—the need for it is so obvious that it's not talked about enough. Result: for some families the enjoyment of home ownership is impaired, if not destroyed, by a rash of unexpected bills.

Fortunately, it's not difficult to solve this problem. All it takes is some hard, analytical, advance thinking about all the financial ramifications of your new house.

Perhaps the key to this discussion lies in the phrase, "all financial ramifications." For most families are correct in assessing their ability to cover the down payment, mortgage, taxes, some repairs, heat, etc. But they fall down by not realizing how many fringe expenses can result from buying a house and moving to a new location.

Ironically, the second or third home buyer—the experienced home buyer we hear so much about these days—can fall down just as readily as the first-time buyer. And he sometimes does.

IF IT'S A "BETTER HOME"

The children are growing up and need more room. Of course, that's not really all they have in mind. The family income has gone up. They've grown understandably status-conscious. All of which is fair enough. But will a move to the second or third home accomplish what they're aiming at? Will the higher price of the bigger and better home justify the move, with its accompanying expenses, in all the ways important to the breadwinner?

A pleasanter neighborhood, with a prestige connotation and better schools is surely a prime objective. An environment that invites participation in a more enjoyable social life is an appealing prospect for the growing family. Then there's the desire not only for more space in the house itself, but for a little more elegance—perhaps bigger and better bathrooms, more living areas such as a music room and study, and professional landscaping outdoors.

The point is: a home and area that can provide all these things cost money—often enough money to make the buyer scale down his objectives to the point where he ends up with a home that's just a little bit bigger, a little bit better, and just a little bit more expensive. He settles for a halfway house that presupposes still another move before he gets where he really wants to be.

If the above paragraphs sound as though we're talking about you, stop and think. From a purely financial point of view, the halfway house can prove more expensive than a costlier home bought in, say, three to five years from now, when you're better prepared.

Remember that the moving costs alone to the halfway house would run into hundreds of dollars. Closing costs may be as much as $400 to $500. Then there's the basic expense of discarding certain furnishings that won't fit in and buying replacements. These are substantial extras when you consider that you'll have to repeat them in a few years when you take another step up in house hunting.

Let's assume you now have an equity of $4500 in your present home, with a $15,000 mortgage for 25 years on your $18,000 house. Monthly payments are $91.35. You're seriously considering moving into a $27,500 house, with a $22,000 mortgage for 25 years at 6 1/4 percent.

Your income is $12,000, or $9600 net. That's $800 a month. You figure on making a down payment of $5500. This sum will come out of the profit from the sale of your present home plus your equity. With real estate values having increased about three percent you can expect to sell for about $20,700.

After paying off the mortgage, if there's no prepayment penalty involved, you'll have about $7200. After the down payment on the new house, about $1700.

Now how will you stand?

Your new mortgage payment of $145, plus another $90 for taxes, insurance, and heat, puts your monthly housing costs at $235, in round figures.

THE ABC'S OF INVESTING

Today, one of the most readily available commodities around is investment advice from the man who shouldn't give it. Unfortunately, an ability to forecast the stock market didn't come packaged with the first shares he ever owned and which he bought yesterday. All he really knows about what the market's going to do is what J. P. Morgan learned in a long and moneyed lifetime: "It will fluctuate."

But people today are hungry for know-how in investing money. Years of inflation behind, and almost certainly ahead, have shaken their faith in the fixed dollar as a sole dependence. In a restless mood, they figure there's some place they can plant a dollar today and reap some variable cost-of-living dollars in a foreseeable tomorrow. But where's the most fertile field for planting?

About 20 million men and women are actively seeking it. Some figure they've found it. At least that number, it's estimated, has some financial interest in America's business and industry.

According to the New York Stock Exchange, more than 600,000 people are members of investment clubs of one kind or another. Member firms of the Exchange estimate that more than 200,000 individuals deposit a fixed amount of money in some kind of monthly investment plan. And the National Association of Investment Clubs says there are about 132,000 individuals participating in neighborhood investment clubs.

If you're a potential investor in today's sophisticated money-conscious atmosphere, you may be going on the assumption that you know nothing, and neither does your best friend. But maybe you've decided you want to learn the language of the investment world anyway, and then possibly take a crack at it—when you're also prepared to take a risk.

There are a number of ways to learn some ABCs: Through lectures and courses set up by the New York Stock Exchange, available in many cities around the country; through neighborhood investment clubs; through films and seminars that explain how mutual funds work; through commonsense books and brochures by the pros who don't guarantee that you'll become rich overnight.

INVESTMENT COURSES OFFERED

The Investors Information Department of the New York Stock Exchange has prepared two courses on investments and securities that more than 4000 brokerage houses around the country offer to the uninitiated. One is a one-shot session, the other a nine-session course. Both are free and anyone can attend. Their aim is to dispense information about market operations, investment terminology, basic steps in buying stocks, how to read stock listings and market reports. The nine sessions, of course, are more rewarding than a one-time session could be.

These courses take it for granted you don't know much, if anything, about investing, so there's no obligation on your part to look intelligent. You only have to listen. The sessions may be held at brokerage houses, adult education centers, or libraries. Sometimes they are set up for civic clubs.

If there's no brokerage house or stock broker in your community, a request for either of these courses can be made to a broker in a nearby, large city. Or a request can be sent to the New York Stock Exchange, Investors Information Department, 11 Wall Street, New York, N.Y. 10005. They will cooperate in arranging courses for a community provided, of course, an organized group is sufficiently interested to assure a justifiable attendance. The nine-session course is usually arranged for evening hours, so that husbands and wives can attend together.

There's also increasing opportunity for the more experienced investor to keep abreast of the financial world. Individual stock brokers give brief, more technical courses, usually geared to the audience that already has its feet wet and is prepared to grasp technical analysis, options, convertible bonds, etc.

Another indication of the growing public interest in investments and securities is the Saturday morning session held by a Stock Exchange member firm in a medium-size eastern city. The firm invites a local business executive to discuss market trends as he sees them from his position in industry. Some Saturdays as many as 400 people come to listen.

NEIGHBORHOOD CLUBS

Learn by doing is the idea behind the neighborhood investment clubs which have formed around the country. They now number 8000 with an individual membership count of more than 130,000 according to the National Association of Investment Clubs. It's estimated that 25 percent of the members are women—a claim that seems substantiated by club names such as "Bulls, Bears, and Bunnies" and "Dowager Jones."

While these names may be facetious, the intent of the clubs is earnest enough. Through group activity, members learn how to make use of study materials, set up steering committees, read financial reports, and pool their $10 a month apiece (usually) in an actual stock purchase.

The NAIC, which declares itself an independent organization not owned by an individual or company, will supply such groups with a manual ($3) explaining how to set up a neighborhood club so that it can function efficiently, what to do at the first meeting, how to use study materials, and plan programs. The association also puts out a monthly magazine which reports on market activity and on the doings of the neighborhood investment clubs.

Anybody who wants to start a neighborhood investment club can discuss it with a local broker or write to NAIC, 1300 Washington Boulevard Bldg., Detroit, Michigan 48231.

MUTUAL FUNDS FILMS

Steadily increasing is the number of would-be investors who want to know more about mutual funds that offer the individual professional money management. As a result, the Investment Company Institute, securities dealers, and individual funds are expanding their channels for dispensing information to the public.

As one example, private groups and civic organizations around the country can avail themselves of two films explaining what mutual funds are and how they work. During the past year some 150 women's clubs in various areas requested these films, which are free from the Investment Company Institute, 61 Broadway, New York, N.Y.

10006. One is a cartoon-type film, the other a straight presentation. A request for showings can also be relayed to the Institute through a local securities dealer.

Brochures on mutual funds prepared by the Institute (free on request) include one directed at the increasingly large audience of women who want to realize some return on their money at a reasonable risk. It is called "A Woman's Guide to Mutual Funds."

Mary Feeley has her own Family Financial Planning Service in New York City and is author of Associated Press's syndicated column, "Live Within Your Income."

Gridline™ Cushiontone® Suspended Ceiling

Pinehurst Cushiontone Tile Ceiling

Have you put off covering up that tired, cracked, or peeling ceiling because you don't want to install a new ceiling yourself? Wait no longer! All you have to do is visit the nearest Armstrong Certified Ceilings Center (see opposite page), and talk to the people there. They're ceiling pros. They'll help you choose your new ceiling and have it installed, too. The only thing you have to do is make up your mind which Armstrong Ceiling you want. (If you change your mind and want to do it yourself, they'll advise you on that, too.)

cover-up for an unsightly ceiling. And Gridline is easy on the ears, too, because it's acoustical.

Wood Grain (center). This ceiling gives you the look of rough random planks; Wood Grain has a deep, grainy texture that's ideal for recreation rooms and dens.

Pinehurst Cushiontone (right). You get a handsome, swirled-plaster effect with Pinehurst. But these tiles won't crack, chip, or peel. This ceiling has been installed with staggered tiles—an imaginative touch that can be lent to any Armstrong tile ceiling.

There are 30 more Armstrong Ceilings where these came from. The people at your Armstrong Certified Ceilings Center will be happy to show you the complete selection. Why not pay them a visit soon.

COOKING WITH

Kellogg's

crusty SPAMbake

New idea for dinner: you make it quick with SPAM and Kellogg's Corn Flake Crumbs.

- ½ cup KELLOGG'S CORN FLAKE CRUMBS
- 2 tablespoons brown sugar
- ⅛ teaspoon ground cloves
- 1 12-ounce can SPAM
- 2 tablespoons prepared mustard
- Pineapple slices
- Melted butter

1. Combine Kellogg's Corn Flake Crumbs, brown sugar and cloves.
2. Cut SPAM crosswise into eight slices. Spread both sides of slices with mustard, then coat generously with a flavor crust of Corn Flake Crumbs mixture. Place SPAM and pineapple slices individually in a foil-lined shallow baking pan; do not crowd. Brush pineapple slices with butter.

3. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) 20 minutes. Serve on heated platter, placing a SPAM slice on each pineapple slice. Add parsley, if desired.

Yield: 4 servings of 2 slices each.

THE MOST FROM YOUR AUTOMOBILE

By WILLIAM J. TOTH

THE 1968 CARS ARE HERE

The 1968 cars are here and so are the federal regulations concerning the safety standards they must meet. Although a few of the original standards have been shelved, most of them will be found on the new models.

However, don't go to the showrooms expecting to see radically modified styles and a car immune to accidents. Most of the safety equipment and devices are not obvious nor are they completely new. In fact, many of the devices have been available in the past as options.

Manufacturers are not told what to install but rather what the performance standard is. The type of equipment to meet this standard is left up to the builder. For instance, the government says a car must be able to stop within 342 feet from 80 miles per hour. The manufacturer is left with choices of a disc or drum brake as long as it performs within the set limits of 342 feet.

Briefly, here are some of the important safety standards you can look forward to in your 1968 automobiles:

- Breakaway or nonprotruding control knobs labeled clearly and within the driver's reach even though being restrained by a seat belt.
- An improved collapsible-on-impact or energy-absorbing steering column.
- More efficiently working window defrosters.
- Windshield wipers that will sweep a minimum of 90 times per minute.
- Chrome-covered devices must be dulled so as not to reflect glare.
- Fuel tanks must resist rupture and leaks in case of an accident.
- Sharp projections such as spinner hubcaps are outlawed.

- Door latches and locks must be stronger to resist impact opening.

- Window glass must be improved to reduce splintering.
- Outside mirror is mandatory.
- Inside mirrors must break-away on impact.
- A dual brake system in case of a front or rear-brake failure.
- Seat anchorages must be strong enough to resist break-aways on an impact.
- Mandatory lap and upper torso belts for outside front seat positions with lap belts for other seats in the rear.

ABOVE AND BEYOND THE CALL OF FEDERAL REGULATIONS

Besides the mandatory safety standards, manufacturers have added many devices voluntarily that will add to your safety. Here are a few:

- A breakaway gear shift lever on impact.
- A horn-rim control built into the steering wheel.
- Head restrainers.
- Padded and flattened spoke steering wheels which will cushion you on impact.
- New antitheft devices, including better locks on doors and steering wheels.
- Better exhaust control.
- Plastic coat hooks to prevent injury.
- Side lights or reflectors front and rear.

AMERICAN MOTORS

The big news at American is the all-new Javelin sports car. It's a clean-looking, semi-fast-back that will compete in price and performance with Mustang.

The Rambler American with its tremendous price cut in 1967 will remain in this exclusive position to seriously compete with all U.S. and foreign compacts.

The solid, well-appointed station wagons will prove to be quite popular and will be a real temptation to the buyer with a family in mind.

Besides many refinements and improvements, three outstanding features are:

- Door handles outside are set flush in the door panel; guaranteed not to break fingernails.
- New preset impulse locking system on the front doors.
- Tread-wear indicator molded into the tire tread.

CHRYSLER CORPORATION

Basically the family car intermediates will undergo the most drastic changes. But remember that Chrysler cars underwent big changes and quiet ones last year so they will be riding with minor modifications.

The Dodge Charger has perhaps undergone the most radical change. It lost its fastback roof and significant changes were made inside to lower production costs and to improve its appeal for a larger market.

Chrysler took a cue from Ford and has its own dual-opening tailgate on the station wagon. Rear vision is being improved by adding devices to keep rear windows clear of rain, dust, and fog.

Besides changes in grilles and rear ends, look for the following:

- A more powerful engine in the Barracuda which basically will remain the same in design.
- Fastback models in the Coronet Dodge and Plymouth Belvedere.
- Side panel changes in Dodge Polara and Monaco.
- Comfort and convenience improvements in the luxury car Imperial. No major changes.

FORD MOTOR COMPANY

The Lincoln Continental Mark III will make its debut as the top car of the company in luxury as well as price. The family car of Fairlane and the whole line has undergone a bumper to bumper change.

Interestingly, bucket seats on many seem to be fading in favor of the bench seat on many models. This of course, eliminates the center console and gives more room for a third person. Some of the things you will see at the Ford-Lincoln and Mercury dealers are:

- Slight grille changes and subtle improvements to refine the Thunderbird.
- Quality improvements in the Cougar but basically it stays the same.
- A sporty two-door hardtop fastback called the Torino which should capture the dashing and the young.
- Fords with concealed headlights and a broader crossbar in the steering wheel to absorb energy on impact.
- Power and performance will be added to the Falcon.
- Mustangs are staying with present design but will have more options.
- The Mercury intermediates will be called Montegos.
- Mercury Cyclone will be another eye catcher in fastback design.
- The big Mercury Brougham offers a wider selection of interiors.
- The traditional design will be maintained in the Lincoln and the convertible will be dropped.
- Rancheros will be equipped with almost everything a passenger car has, but will still serve as a light truck.

GENERAL MOTORS

Cadillac will top the field with the largest engine and this will be reflected down the GM line. But in order to keep extra lights going and power-consuming devices operating, extra horsepower is necessary.

Front-door window vents are disappearing in favor of a full window while windshield wipers are disappearing down into a concealed slot on the hood. Numerous special features on the GM cars are:

- Slight body changes in the Camaro.
- A completely new body in Chevy II.
- A longer Chevelle with crisp lines.
- The traditional sculptured flowing side fenders of the Buick.
- A further refined Buick Riviera.
- Similar grille designs in all Pontiacs with the Grand Prix retaining concealed headlights.
- A simple, clean grille and bulging fenders will identify the Olds F-85.

- Subtle refinements in the Olds 98.
- A longer, lower, cleaner Corvette.
- A strikingly beautiful front on the Toronado, improving its looks.

THE CHOICE IS STILL YOURS

Which car should I buy? Sit down and determine your needs and how much you can afford. Shop around and then make the choice.

Millions of dollars go into building safe roads and safe cars and thousands of people including your family are concerned about your safety. And yet with all of this concern the most important factor is whether you have the desire to drive safely all the time. This important choice is still yours also.

Your husband says, "How come you can't make a great cup of coffee like my sister?"

Maybe you need a Corning Ware coffee maker like the one you gave her last year. This year, give your husband great coffee. Give yourself a Corning Ware coffee maker. We make it easy for you to make a great cup of coffee.

A Corning Ware coffee maker is easy to clean because it's made from Corning's unique Pyroceram® brand material. Coffee oils don't cling to it. So when you make today's coffee you don't wind up serving a little of yesterday's coffee.

You can have a Corning Ware percolator in the size you want: 4, 6, or 9-cup. Prices start at just $8.95 in either All-White or with the familiar Cornflower emblem. No matter which one you select, make this the year you give yourself a Corning Ware coffee maker. Your husband deserves it.

WHAT'S NEW IN SIGHT AND SOUND

When Tom Edison recorded "Mary had a little lamb" on a tinfoil cylinder in 1887, he was a far cry from the quality level of today's phonographs. Indeed, his "talking machine" might have been completely unintelligible to listeners of his day had he not recorded something that would have been familiar to any five-year-old. However distant sounding and scratchy the voice intoning "MAY — ree — HA — duh — LIT—tull . . .", a listener knew from the cadence that the lamb would surely follow.

FROM LOW TO HIGH FIDELITY

From this cranking start, recorded home entertainment began its painfully slow climb toward Olympian excellence, a peak unseen and only dimly imagined. The race to the summit—to push a metaphor perhaps too far—came in the late 1940s with the introduction of the long-playing record and the first stirrings of what might be called a real hi-fi movement. The movement is important.

Dedicated music listeners—as much as the manufacturers of audio components—have been responsible for the high quality, sound-reproducing equipment available today. That's right. High fidelity wasn't promoted into existence like in-flight movies and chlorophyllized puppy biscuits. People don't know they want such things until they're promoted. But music? Music lovers didn't have to take their cue from anyone. They knew they wanted to feel Beethoven's energy without the restraints imposed by technical recording problems. And they wanted to experience every nuance of the orchestral color on Debussy's palette. They wanted, in short, the concert-hall realism so long promised and so little realized. Today, they can have it.

AUDIO EQUIPMENT

Of course, not everything that is hi-fi in name is hi-fi in fact. And the person just venturing toward its enjoyment has to learn what's available in terms of equipment performance. It helps at the outset to know that our ears are capable of perceiving, at best, sound waves ranging in frequency from a low of 16 cycles (vibrations per second) up to 15,000 cycles, give or take a few thousand. The fundamental tones of all the instruments of an orchestra do not cover so wide a range, although their overtones do.

As a consequence, today's hi-fi equipment makers set forth performance specifications directly related to our ability to hear. Amplifier manufacturers, for example, will boast of being able to reproduce tones from 30 cycles to far beyond our listening capacities—out to 30,000 cycles. And this broad frequency range will be stated in terms of both distortion (cleanliness of sound across that broad spectrum) and power (loudness of sound).

Incidentally, the lab procedures by which these standards are derived have been established by a self-regulating industry group, the Institute of High Fidelity (IHF) and the specifications of different brands can be compared as an index of quality.

Loudspeakers are a different breed of audio gear. Like other components their performance is measurable. But performance specifications are not the whole story. Two different brands may have the same specifications but sound quite different. How so? Well, it's like the difference between violins; a Stradivarius and a Guarneri will play the same range of notes but with difference in tone even though both are played by the same musician. When you shop for loudspeakers, you have to listen for comparable differences.

THE ALL-IN-ONE SET

So far, our concern has been with component high-fidelity equipment—which is to say, hi-fi in parts. But the same general rules apply to appliance high fidelity—the all-in-one cabinet set. In the past, manufacturers of appliance hi-fis made few claims for their products in terms of specifications. They believed that the general public, unlike the hi-fi hobbyist, wasn't overly (continued on page 114)

See how harmony reigns over diversity of style and finish in Rapport. The Mimosa Yellow of the custom painted Flemish cabinet enlivens the ash veneer of the lamp table... the walnut veneer of the cocktail table. And this, with a thoroughly contemporary glass top on a Baroque base is an articulate example of the Rapport "mix."

A Happening in selective decorating: adventurous Rapport by Drexel

At last.

Something new that isn't Modern. Something important that isn't Antique. And with its finger on the pulse. Rapport: tradition—broken out of the mold! Tradition with a contemporary point of view.

Spirited. Warm. Unshackled. For a generation with a polite lack of reverence for sacred cows, but a healthy regard for great design.

Rapport takes historical forms... accentuates them slightly... treats them in an unhistorical fashion. Creating a brand new look all its own.

It takes from many periods in the prevailing mood. A bombé cabinet is Flemish. A commode Venetian. A vestry mirror Portuguese. And so it goes—French, English, Modern, Mediterranean.

A spicy mélange. With a vital common denominator: affinity. So that your personal mix is always harmonious. And utterly individual—a fact furthered by an uncommon choice of woods, of finishes, of high-style custom paints and gilds.

People seeing it in your home will think you've been places. They'll also know you're going places. With great Rapport.

HEALTH IN THE HOME
By ANNETTE FRANCIS BENJAMIN

HEADACHE: THE COMMONEST HUMAN COMPLAINT

There is almost no one over the age of 21 who has not experienced a headache of one kind or another. While the majority of headaches are transient, a few keep recurring frequently over a period of months or years. Some headaches bring only slight discomfort; others are so severe that the sufferer must be given a strong pain-killer to bring relief. Headache itself is not a disease—it is a symptom of many diseases and functional disturbances.

COMMON CAUSES

Among the most common causes of headache are nervous tension and emotional problems. An emotional problem can be conscious or unrecognized and can precede the headache by days. Contrary to popular opinion, a "nervous" headache can be more painful than one produced by disease.

Headache may accompany infections of the nose, throat, eyes, ears, sinuses; a "common cold," influenza, pneumonia. In these cases the headache is cured when the underlying ailment is cured.

Overindulgence in food and drink are responsible for many a headache. The "morning after" an evening's entertainment can give a person a headache from too much alcohol, tobacco poisoning, plain gluttony, and simple fatigue.

Food allergies have been thought to produce certain headaches after meals, sometimes accompanied by nausea.

Many women experience headaches several days before or during their menstrual periods. Also, headaches can occur as part of menopausal symptoms.

High blood pressure is rarely a cause of headaches, contrary to popular belief. When it is, medical treatment is usually very effective in reducing high blood pressure and alleviating the headache that goes with it.

Acute infections of the nervous system—meningitis, encephalitis, or polio—are frequently heralded by severe headaches. Diseases of the nerves leading to the face and head can also be responsible.

A headache associated with nausea and vomiting, or a headache on one side preceded by spots before the eyes or blurred vision, is frequently a migraine. Many factors are involved in determining the cause of migraine headaches, and anyone who suffers from recurrent headaches of this type should consult a physician. Effective treatment and prevention are now available.

Other causes of headache include constipation, eyestrain, hunger, fever, hypersensitivity to drugs such as sedatives and sleeping pills, head injuries, dental problems, bright lights, noise, poor illumination, smog, poor ventilation, excessive heat, tight hatbands or headbands.

WHEN TO CALL YOUR DOCTOR

You should report to your doctor any headache for which there is no obvious explanation such as tension, fever, or eyestrain; any headache that is not relieved by medications that were previously effective; any headache that is different from the types of headache you have experienced before; and any headache which is dramatically sudden in its onset.

Your physician should also be consulted if you suffer from chronic or recurrent headaches.

The diagnosis and treatment of headaches have come a long way since ancient times when holes were bored into the skull to allow the "evil spirit" causing the headache to disappear.

Sometimes looking for the cause of headache requires a complete physical examination—with tests for the eyes, teeth, blood pressure, blood, urine, nerve reflexes, and other functions.

Of great importance to your doctor are the answers to such questions as: Where is the pain located; is it dull or sharp; what time of day does it get worse; is there a history of migraine or high blood pressure in your family?

HERE'S HOW TO MAKE REMOVABLE UPHOLSTERY

You can make upholstery that can be removed when cleaning time comes around. Our instructions are for a removable chair covering, using Velcro fastener tape.

1 Drape your fabric down chair at top, inside back; pin in place. Cut, allowing one inch extra for welted edges. Make tiny folds at top corners for smooth fit. Pin sides. Smooth fabric down inside chair back. Tuck in at back of seat as far as it will go. Then, bring fabric over seat to front. Mark with chalk along front edge of seat for cutting guide. Cut one inch outside of chalked line. Drape fabric over arms; tuck fabric in at sides of arms. Push chalk into tuck-in; mark cutting lines. Straighten lines before cutting. Drape, pin, and cut fabric for outside of arms and back of chair. Allow one inch extra for all required seams. On all bottom pieces, allow two inches extra to go under chair seat.

2 Cut one-inch-wide strips of fabric on the bias. The length will depend on the size of your chair. Fold this over ordinary butcher's cord to make narrow welting. Sew on machine using cording foot. Sew welting on all edges of fabric where it will butt against wood frame and when joining seams (where welting is desired).

3 Pull Velcro fastener tape apart. (Velcro tape is a product that insures a smooth, flat fit. It comes in two parts—a loop side and a pile side. When pressed together with fingers they hold fabric securely.) Pin looped side of fastener on old upholstery, along all areas of chair where new fabric is to be secured, close to wood frame. Pin a strip on bottom of chair—on all four sides. Slip-stitch fastener directly to chair's old upholstery on both edges of the fastener.

4 Press pile side of fastener to the loop side of fastener that's already stitched to chair. Place fabric cover in exact position on chair. Pin fabric only to pile side of fastener. Gently pull cover from chair.

5 Stitch pile side of fastener to new upholstery fabric. Sew on top and bottom of strip so it lies flat and secure.

When sewing, be sure the raw edges of welting already sewn on cover also are flat and concealed under the fastener.

6 Finished chair!

NOTE: To hold fabric securely between arms, back, and seat, make three tight rolls of heavy canvas—or terry toweling—about one inch in diameter and just a couple of inches shorter than inside of arms and seat and between back and seat. Thrust these rolls in place.

HOW TO BUY GLASSWARE

Most people know that glassmaking is an ancient art, but no one knows exactly how ancient. We do know, however, that the Syrians used glass as a glaze for clayware, the Egyptians had a thriving glass industry as early as 1500 B.C., and that the Phoenician discovery—in 300 B.C.—of the blowpipe completely revolutionized glassmaking.

Glassblowing is an art that is still practiced today, and some of our finest glass products are made by this method. Other methods are also used, and the types and designs of glass each produces is practically unlimited.

TWO MAIN TYPES

Crystal, lead or flint glass is to glassware what porcelain (or fine china) is to dinnerware. It is a clear, colorless glass that is made by combining red lead with sand and potash. Easily worked and of exceptional sparkle, it is used for stemware as well as for vases, candlesticks, and decanters. In addition to appearance, a piece of crystal can be identified by tapping it gently. If the sound produced is a bell-like tone, it's crystal.

Lime glass, made from sand, soda, and lime, is used for inexpensive glassware such as tumblers, plates, bottles, and light bulbs. It is practical because it resists scratches and marks but it lacks the brilliance, weight, and tone of crystal.

HOW GLASS IS MADE

Glassware can be categorized by the method used to shape it.

Hand-blown glass. The hand blowing of glass is particularly fascinating to watch because of the craftsmanship it requires.

In general, a lump of molten glass is gathered on the end of an iron blowpipe; then the glassblower blows through the pipe to form a hollow ball. The size, shape, and wall thickness of the object being blown can be controlled by the amount of air that the glassblower forces in. The mass is shaped by spinning and revolving the iron. Additional lumps of glass are added to form handles, feet, or stems. Before the glass goes to an annealing oven where it is cooled gradually, it is removed from the iron rod. A rough mark often remains on the base. Usually this mark is ground smooth; if not, a shallow depression, called a pontil mark, remains.

Molded glass can be made by hand or machine. The molds can shape the glass or decorate it with raised patterns. Much of the quality glass produced today is blown into molds. Inexpensive glasses can be molded entirely by machine.

Pressed glass is used for table, oven, and cookware and is made by a fully automatic process. In this method, a plunger is substituted for the air used in glassblowing. The plunger forces the glass material through a mold and shapes the inside of the object. Since glass can be made very quickly by this method, modern pressed glass is priced comparatively low.

DESIGN EFFECTS

The following design effects are used on fine glassware as well as on the more inexpensive types.

Cut glass is one of the most popular types of decorative glassware. The fine-cut patterns done free-hand or by machine on an abrasive wheel, require great skill. Cuttings can be in geometric, diamond, scroll, or floral designs. The price for cut-glass items depends on the amount and depth of cutting and the intricacy of the pattern.

Etching is a fine line of tracery on glass, usually in a lacy design. The design is transferred to glass by printing and is then etched out by acid. Another method, using a moving needle for the tracing, is often employed because it is less expensive than etching with acid.

Frosted effect is produced by exposure to acid or sandblasting.

Embossed or carved glass has its design raised in relief, while the background is etched away by acid or sandblasting.

Colored glass is made by adding various kinds of mineral salts to the basic material. All white milk glass is an example. On color-decorated pieces surface color is applied directly by hand, decalcomania, or by screen or stencil printing. Gold and platinum bands are applied by hand, and then the glass is placed in a kiln for slow firing to fuse the band to it.

QUALITY IN GLASS

In buying glassware look for clarity, luster, and a clear color (no blue or green tinges). In stemware, the bowl, stem, and base should be symmetrical and well balanced. Edges should be even and smooth. If the glass has cuts, they should be sharp and accurate. If etched, detail should be clearly defined.

Slight variations and tiny imperfections in glass are indications that it was made by an individual, not a machine. A small bubble or a slight difference in height or diameter among a group of goblets is the hallmark of handmade crystal. Machine-made glass comes closer to being flawless.

BUYING GLASS

Generally, crystal glasses are sold individually, but there's a growing trend to selling glasses like flatware—in place settings.

As a starter place setting, three pieces are adequate: a water goblet (10½ ounces), an all-purpose wine (6 ounces), and a dessert-champagne, all with stems. You may want to add the following glasses later: cocktail, juice, cordial, brandy snifter, pilsner, sour, or on-the-rocks. And, in addition to the all-purpose type, there are wineglasses designed for specific service. For example, there are sherry glasses and glasses for red, white, and Rhine wines. These vary in shape and size from three to six ounces.

Tumblers are flat-bottomed glasses without stems and are usually sold by the dozen or half dozen. They come in sizes ranging from a four-ounce juice to a tall, 16-ounce cooler; from beer glass, beer stein, cocktail, collins, and highball, to water and soda glasses.

REPLACEMENT

When purchasing crystal, check to see that the particular pattern you want is available on an open-stock basis. This means you will be able to add other pieces on a one-by-one basis. Also inquire how long the pattern is going to be made by the company.

CARE OF GLASSES

Glasses should be stored with enough breathing room between them—rims up—never stacked.

Use a soft brush for washing cut glass. Dry with a lint-free towel. Most glasses can be washed in a dishwasher, but arrange them carefully. Many gold- or platinum-banded glasses made today can be machine washed.

Even cocoa lovers agree: Our Easy Chocolate 'n Chocolate Frosting can only be made with rich Baker's Chocolate. Never cocoa.

It's double chocolate. Double fudgy. Dark deep chocolate over rich chocolate. The kind you can make only with the real thing, pure Baker's® Unsweetened Chocolate.

Impossible to duplicate with cocoa, because cocoa has most of its chocolate richness removed.

And another blessing, it's easy. Two frostings from this one recipe.

Easy Chocolate 'n Chocolate Frosting

6 squares Baker's Unsweetened Chocolate
5 tablespoons butter or other shortening
6½ cups sifted confectioners' sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ cup (about) milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Melt chocolate and butter over very low heat, stirring constantly. Cool slightly; set aside ¼ cup. Combine sugar, salt, milk and vanilla; blend.

Add remaining chocolate mixture; mix well. Let stand, stirring occasionally, until of right consistency to spread. (If necessary, add additional milk a teaspoon at a time.)

Fill and frost top and sides of three 8-inch* or two 9-inch layers. Pour reserved mixture over top and allow to drizzle down sides.

For our "Famous Chocolate Frostings Made Easy" recipe booklet, send name and address with ZIP code; plus 10¢ and a Baker's Unsweetened Chocolate doily to: Box 1303, Kankakee, Ill. 60901.

DECORATING CLINIC

We welcome your questions about decorating and will answer them as space permits.

Question: We have a Tudor-style house with a rather nice-size living room, 14 by 22 feet, but practically every wall is broken by windows of different sizes or by doorways. To be specific, the two 14-foot walls have double casement windows; one wall has a fireplace flanked on one side by a single casement window and, on the other side, by an unattractive door leading to the terrace. How can I, inexpensively and attractively, treat these openings to give my room a more unified look?

Answer: Use wall-to-wall, floor-to-ceiling draperies where you have the double casement windows. Preferably these should be as simple as possible. Emphasize the texture rather than pattern for interest. You could use a sheer linen, a textured casement cloth or, if a more formal look is desired, a silky-looking gauze. It would be best if these draperies were white or the same color as your walls.

As for the fireplace wall, a louvered door and shutters offer a good solution. On the single window, use two sets of shutters, double hung, with adjustable louvers for the right amount of light and privacy. The door could have two narrow panels, louvered above and solid below. In this way the window and door would appear to balance one another and give unity to the room. Color suggestions are the same as for the draperies—in white or to blend with the wall color.

Question: All the lamps in my living room need lampshades. Must they all be made of the same material, or can I use different materials such as linen on the floor lamp and parchment on the two portable lamps?

Answer: Our first suggestion would be to use the same shade material for all your lamps. Decide on either opaque or translucent silk or paper shades and then stick with it for all the other lamps.

If you want dark shades (black, blue, or green), use these for the portable lamps and beige or white shades for all the other lamps in your living room.

Question: We're having trouble deciding on a living room rug. We do not want wall-to-wall carpeting. The salesman in our store suggested an area rug almost as large as our living room. The trouble with this rug is that some of our furniture would be half on and half off the carpet. What should we do?

Answer: Rather than get a room-size rug, why not try a smaller area rug? Individual pieces of furniture should stand either completely on the rug or completely off it—not two legs on and two legs off. You can arrange your furniture about the smaller rug, perhaps a coffee table on it, without worrying about crowding.

Question: I have just ordered a six-foot credenza and hutch for my dining room. The hutch has glass shelves and a glass front and sides. What should I put on the shelves—china, silver, glassware—and in what order should I place them?

Answer: Sometimes even the loveliest china and silver in the most handsome china closet will look jumbled. The reason usually is just a matter of the size of the individual pieces and their particular style. If you have very flowery Limoges china don't try to mix it with simpler patterns or pottery. If you plan to include your silver, it should relate in style—Victorian china with Victorian silver, Georgian silver with simple gold-banded china.

The size and scale of each piece should dictate its position in the cabinet. There is no set rule, but placing the largest and bulkiest pieces in the center with smaller ones on each side is a safe bet. Avoid too many tiny pieces unless you have a good collection all the same size. Flat pieces such as spoons are apt to be lost on a china-cabinet shelf. Glass goblets and tumblers should be placed neatly in rows on shallow shelves with one or, at the most, two rows on each shelf.

In a china cabinet less is always better than too much. Don't crowd in everything you own—only the prettiest pieces with empty space around each one.

Question: Our bedroom gets a great deal of strong sunlight. I have just finished redecorating this room with new draperies and bedspread. It was suggested that we install window shades to protect fabrics from fading, but I feel nothing's worse than walking into a bedroom (continued) in the middle of the afternoon and finding total darkness. Is there any other way for me to cut out the strong sunlight?

Answer: Translucent window shades would be ideal in this situation. Contrary to public opinion, these shades which let light filter through offer just as much protection from the sun, and also as much privacy as the opaque or room-darkening shades.

Question: We are building an Early American house and we prefer wooden counter tops to the laminated plastic ones. Everyone tells us that the wooden tops will stain or scorch from hot pans. Is there some preservative finish to prevent burning?

Answer: As far as we can learn, there is no burnproof preventive for wood counter tops. But don't let this deter you. If you are concerned about burns and scorches you might insert tile or glass ceramic into a portion of the counter near the range. Or keep an ample supply of attractive trivets on hand. Natural hardwoods (such as maple, oak, or cherry) should be used and thicknesses up to two inches are recommended. The maple top is the type used by butchers to cut on—commonly known as butcher block. If you happen to burn or stain a hardwood counter, sanding with steel wool or sandpaper will remove the mark. To keep the wood looking handsome and to preserve it, it is recommended that you apply boiled linseed oil, rub it in, wait a few minutes, and then remove excess. What's better, in our opinion, is cleaning with hot sudsy water, rinsing, then rubbing with melted vegetable shortening.

Question: Our upholstered furniture is quite shabby looking, but we don't want to do a complete reupholstery job at this time. However, we do wish to have slipcovers made and want to make our living room fresher and more modern. What fabrics could we use? Our carpeting is deep beige and the wood furniture, mahogany.

Answer: Bravo for slipcovers—and not just as a makedo until you reupholster! Consider using them all year. (See "Slipcovers Are Not Only for Summer," page 136.)

For wintertime slipcovers we suggest a brilliant tomato red suede cloth or corduroy for the sofa; brown, black, and red plaid on the two chairs; and deep brown piped in red on the smaller chairs. If you have a round table, top it with a tablecloth in the same fabric and color as sofa. Finish bottom with a double banding of brown grosgrain or braid.

A lively scheme for summer would be a white sailcloth fabric with a flower design in black, taupe, and sharp green for the sofa. A homespun fabric in taupe would be good for the club chairs and a tiny geometric pattern in green and white for your pull-up chairs and throw pillows.

Summer is the time to clear the bric-a-brac in the room. Just leave a few necessities such as ashtrays, and add a large glass vase full of fresh lemon leaves.

If all your wood furniture looks dull, consider lacquering one piece in shiny black. It will spark both summer and winter schemes.

Question: We are about to wallpaper our bathroom and kitchen. I have heard that a plastic-coated or vinyl wall covering is recommended, but don't know which type of vinyl is the best. Can you advise me?

Answer: All scrubbable or washable papers or vinyls are recommended for baths or kitchens. Plastic-coated papers are the most washable and the least stainable of the paper wall coverings. Most of these can be washed with a household detergent. Plastic-bonded papers may be washed but can stain when subjected to certain liquids. Vinyl wall coverings backed with paper or fabric are usually stain resistant and scrubbable and are the most durable. What you must decide is how much rugged wear your walls will be subject to before choosing.

quality and construction are "top drawer."
Look inside the top drawer

You can tell a lot about furniture quality by opening the top drawer. If you see the manufacturer's name there—the name you recognize—you can be sure he is proud of his handiwork.

He believes the furniture is built to last. You can be confident of a sound investment for the future, and sure of authentic style and design. It is the manufacturer's way of assuring you honest value for your money. The brand name grows with the quality of the product and the integrity of the manufacturer. It's the way the manufacturer tells you he is proud of his product. He wants you to know whom to contact if something goes wrong.

With furniture though, you have to snoop to find the brand name.

It may be tucked inside a drawer. Or on the underside of a table. Or hidden beneath the cushions of a sofa. Or on the end of a mattress.

That way, the brand name never detracts from the furniture's appearance. But it does add tremendously to your confidence and satisfaction.

For the woman who knows the difference between a good buy and a bad bargain:

A product is no bargain unless it does the job. That's why Jifoam is made to be, first and foremost, a better oven cleaner than the rest.

A little company like ours can hold its own only by making a product that is outstanding. Others may sell for less, and some do. But when it comes to cleaning an oven, we know you want something that will do the job effectively. And the quicker the better.

Actually, one application of Jifoam costs amazingly little, especially when measured in the results it gets for you. Ounce for ounce, Jifoam cleans your oven quicker and better than anything you've ever tried before.

In 5 minutes flat, Jifoam unsticks that burned-on grease and grime so you can wipe (yes, wipe) it away with a damp cloth or sponge or paper toweling. Jifoam sprays on evenly. Uses your oven's natural heat to help it work. No mess. No fuss. No rubber gloves.

If you've tried other cleaners and been disappointed, you may find it hard to believe there is one that more than lives up to its claims. Jifoam does. Takes less out of you, and your pocketbook. But most important, Jifoam really does the job. And that's what makes it a good buy.

By JEANNE LAMB O'NEILL

ANYONE FOR HALLOWEEN?

Everyone's entitled to his favorite holiday. And don't think I'm Scroogey, unthankful, or un-American, but I'm hung up on Halloween. Halloween brings out the real me. The night-people me that thinks nothing good happens before midnight. The let's-pretend me that loves fancy-dress balls. The goose-pimples me that screams in fun houses and lifts both feet when we pass a cemetery.

Granted, I had to pick the shortest holiday of the lot. Any other holiday is good for at least a day, but Halloween is over before you can say boo! At least, it should be. Don't ask me why the supermarkets insist on putting out their chicken corn in September, the day after you've got the children back in school. Don't ask me why scaredy-cat mothers shove their little ones out to trick-or-treat at the witching hour of noon. They ought to have their windows soaped and their front gates swiped. There's no such thing as All Hallow's Eve day. You might as well celebrate the third of the Fourth of July or Easter Sunday Saturday. Halloween begins at sundown October 31 and ends whenever your mean mother and father say it does—or when you can't lift your candy bag any more. Ever since Sean was a toddler and Cindy a lurching one-year-old, they've rung their doorbells in the spooky, witchy, spine-tingling dark. I wouldn't have it any other way. Besides, I refuse to hide behind people's bushes in the broad daylight.

Obviously, I'm strictly a behind-the-bushes celebrant now—and not even that, literally. But that's fine with me. I couldn't make it around the block even if I only rang the doorbells on one side. I wouldn't know what to do with 39 Milky Ways, 15 Hersheys, 11 Juju Fruits, and 20 pieces of bubble gum. And I hate ducking for apples, anyway—especially with lipstick on.

I can still cut out jack-o'-lanterns and make any kind of face I want to (everybody gets his own pumpkin to play with in our house). I can still stuff myself on doughnuts and cider. And I can still have a hand in the Halloween costumes. No common, store-bought Sleeping Beauties or skimpy, prepackaged Batmen for us. Our Halloween costumes come from where all good costumes come from—the attic.

Not that our attic-born costumes are always screamingly original. Cindy's been a fairy princess at least twice, because little girls like to be fairy princesses—and Sean comes on a pirate every other year—but they're never the same princess and pirate. And just show me the likes of our jack-in-the-box on any store counter. Or our pumpkin that grew out of a pouffy apricot silk bridesmaid dress. Or the old-fashioned girl whose skirt came off Cindy's dressing table—and her baby bassinet before that.

Maybe Halloween isn't what it used to be. Maybe today's TV-bred children don't turn a hair at ghoulies and ghosties and long-leggity beasties and things that go bump in the night. Maybe they have to have fancy orange tote bags to collect their loot in—and they turn up their noses at apples and doughnuts and paper napkins filled with unsanitary, unhermetically sealed candy. Maybe they settle for sleazy, assembly-line costumes and wouldn't want to be ghosts in sheets with two holes for eyes even if their mothers still had any white sheets. Maybe they don't even get to keep their pennies.

But I, for one, can't wait for October 31st. I can't wait for the sun to go down and the goblins to come out—the lights to go off and the leering jack-o'-lanterns to go on—the doorbell to ring and the streets to fill with ghostly, giggly princesses, Indians, and witches. Halloween is my night to howl—in an adult, sit-by-the-fire way, of course.

And don't be silly. I don't envy Sean and Cindy one bit. I wouldn't give a nickel to be out there with them. But there's no reason why I can't change into scarlet Chinese lounging pajamas, is there? With maybe just a tilt of eyebrow pencil at the corners of the eyes?

BEAUTY AT HOME

THE TROUBLE WITH HAIR

The trouble with hair is—but you know the trouble with hair! Either you simply can't find the flattering hairdo, or you know exactly what's flattering and your hair won't cooperate. But with new problem-solving hair cosmetics coming out every other week and a cagey strategy of styling and setting, you can outwit your hair yet!

To begin with, one of the most common problems with hair is the doomed attempt to make a given head of hair do what it characteristically can't do. For example, very fine or even medium-fine hair will not hold a curly hairdo as well as coarser hair unless you change its texture with hair coloring or give it body with a permanent. A wave, no matter how slight, will prevent the stick-straight swing you want—unless you abolish it with a straightener. The message: don't ask more of your hair than it can deliver. Either change your hair—or change your hairdo.

Start with the right haircut. All experts agree on that. A good cut can survive a bad set; but the most marvelous set can't do a thing for a poor cut. Finding a good haircut is something else again. Begin by realizing that haircutting really is an art. When you make an appointment, ask in advance who in that salon specializes in cutting. If the answer is "All our operators give good cuts, madame"—shop further. Of course the reputation of the shop is some guide, but it does not necessarily lead you to the best cut unless you pin down the star cutter. If you live in a small town, you may find a local whizz. If so, you're in luck. If not, it might pay to travel occasionally to the nearest city for an expert job. One other possibility is your children's barber. If you are pleased with the shape and hang of the children's hair, try him.

The last reason in the world to pick a hairdo is that it looks great on a magazine model, because you admire it on a friend, or even because it's the latest fashion. Never mind all that! What counts is that your hairdo gives you a heady little lift every time you glance in the mirror. Of the almost unlimited ways to wear hair, there is one shape, line, and look that has your name on it, the one that does everything good and nothing bad for you.

To find it, you might try the classic shampoo trick. Work up a thick lather on your head and experiment before a mirror. Push your hair high, low, full, flat. Curve, slant, angle it. Bare your brow, cover it. At some point you should see a look you like—a look that gives you cheekbones or makes you stop hating your nose or causes your eyes to look huge. Now, hanging on to the idea that any line looks the way it does because of the lines, angles, and curves adjacent to it, try to figure out what's causing all that flattery. Is it the fullness? The bare brow? The curve near the eyebrow? Once you've identified what it is that does so much for you, naturally that's what you aim for in a hairdo.

Now you may need to modify your hair to hold that hairdo. Are you as up on the latest in hair cosmetics as you are on, say, convenience foods? Did you know that the latest permanents, both for home and salon, don't dry your hair because they now include conditioning agents to restore natural oils as fast as they are lost? Have you considered that, even if you have no intention of changing your hair color, some colorings enhance your own shade as well as give you the side benefit of greater manageability? Have you heard about the latest in hair coloring, formulated to restore childhood fairness to the girl who was blonde as a child but gradually became darker? Why are you still using water to set your hair, when one of the new setting gels may be just the ticket? Really, shouldn't we abolish "I can't do a thing with my hair!"?

The Bribe

All over the country women are being bribed with four pieces of silver. They're being offered a silverplated tea service for $5 if they buy an 1847 Rogers Bros. Silverplate flatware service for 8 (for $99.95). The tea service is ordinarily $35 (and looks much more, according to many eyewitnesses).

The International Silver Company is behind the whole deal. Following are statements by several women who couldn't pass it up.

Agatha Davis, Coopersville, Ind.: "One day I looked in the mirror and said, 'Agatha, with a face like that, you'd better have more than a couple of doilies in your hope chest.' Now I do."

Mrs. P.L.G. Van Akin, Manhattan: "Young man, my great-great-great-grandfather turned down the chance to buy some island for $24. ('Who needs it?' he said.) Do you really think I'd let something like that happen in the family again?"

Mrs. A. W. Taylor, Los Angeles: "Even though I knew it was a bribe, I was tempted. So my analyst said, 'Go in the store once a day to see the silver. You'll get tired of it.' So I went in once a day. Then twice. Soon three times. I loved the silver even more. When it got to be five times, I gave in. My new analyst says I should have done that in the first place."

Mrs. Kin Sang Chang, San Francisco: "For many year, we eat with chopstick. Honorable old custom. For many year, I very tired of chopstick. Honorable old husband is not. When I see offer, I say, 'Hy lu!' Number one chance. When husband see most beautiful tea service, he is happy. When he hear how much it cost, he so very, very happy he not mind Western style chopstick—honorable new Heritage."

Mrs. X, Athens, Ga.: "If you use my name, I'll sue. I gave my daughter-in-law the tea service for her birthday, and she thinks it cost a fortune. Now I eat with them twice a week. (I used to see them twice a month.)"

One unimpeachable source said the bribe would be offered until December 31, 1967. (To make it even more tempting, each piece of 1847 Rogers Bros. Silverplate is guaranteed for life.*)

Can the women of our country resist such a bribe?

One man answered, "If they have a lot of will power, maybe they can. If they're smart, maybe they won't."

*If any of the 48 pieces in the service for 8 should not give satisfactory service with normal use and care during your lifetime, it's resilvered at no charge.

You've been married two years—five years—ten years. Short span or longer, during this time you've had at least several different kinds of hairdos, experimented with pale to fiery lipsticks, lengthened or shortened your skirts. You've found ways of resolving the inevitable disagreements with your husband, sometimes by managing to convince him you were right, other times by having to change your own point of view. And above all, you've acquired a growing family and that in itself confronts you every day with its process of change. You've made new friends, perhaps even lost one or two old ones. You've made a few decisions that you've regretted, and some you're thoroughly pleased about. In other words you've experienced change in all sorts of ways.

You may be living in the same house or apartment where you began your married life, but more than likely you've moved once or twice to other neighborhoods or even to other towns. But what about the rooms inside your home? How much have they changed since the pains and pleasures of your first decorating assignment? Have they kept pace with the changes that have occurred in you, as a person?

Oh, of course, the furnishings are a little older and show certain signs of wear—but generally speaking, they probably make the same statement about your taste as they did when you chose them some years back. We would like to suggest that you take a new look around your house, with what must surely be a different pair of eyes from those with which you saw things earlier. Take your bedroom set, once so glossily modern, so splendidly geometric, so proudly solid and spacious. See it fresh, as if for the first time in a stranger's house and you'll realize it no longer expresses the present you—the you you've become.

You've changed so much in so many other ways, why not also change the way your house looks if it's a visible denial of your own progress! Taste is not static—it is a matter of evolution, through exposure, observation, learning. It has little to do with fashion and everything to do with growth—your own. A dictionary definition is: "Ability to perceive and enjoy what is appropriate, harmonious, or excellent." No one is born with taste and only those who keep an open eye and an inquiring mind acquire it.

At an auction recently we had a fascinating conversation with a woman in her early thirties. She knew exactly what she wanted and we were intrigued by her unusual assurance. "When I was newly married," she said, "I wanted nothing but Modern. It was fashionable and it seemed practical. I know that it's still fashionable, perhaps even more so now than then, and I was lucky enough to have chosen pieces that stand up well as designs. But I'm very different now and it doesn't go with me any longer. My taste has changed. I've learned to love and appreciate antiques and period styles, and that's what I want to live with. I've done a lot of research, walked miles through museums, gone off to visit all the restorations I could get to (Williamsburg, Boscobel, Winterthur), and watched for new model-room displays the way some people watch for theater opening nights. It's interesting that I started out disliking period furniture. It seemed so out of today, so unsuitable for this crazy age of ours. Now I find the soft colors peaceful, not dull—the curves and carvings beautiful, not disturbing—the presence of the past very comforting, not anachronistic."

"What about the children's rooms?" we asked. "They're getting the best of the old Modern, with bright, strong colors, and since they'll be under the same roof with both the new and the old they'll have a head start for comparing when it comes to choosing for themselves."

Well, all right, everybody's husband doesn't let them start all over again from scratch—but that doesn't mean you have to stand paralyzed in your first insecurities or limited convictions. And in point of fact, the other side of the coin is that the more you enrich your perception, the better able you become to value with affection things you were originally uncertain about. Your appreciation of them grows as your awareness grows—out of your pleasure in knowing that a certain chair really was well designed for sitting. Or the way an odd blue bowl, neither finely made nor particularly useful, continues to delight you with its pure color. Or the realization that the afghan your aunt made for you, despite its garish colors, is indeed a charming piece of genuine folk art. These become the anchor points in your surroundings, the things that go along with you into any new decor, and they are absolutely right in terms of the dictionary definition—"appropriate, harmonious, or excellent."

We have watched with great joy the taste evolution of a young friend of ours. Ten years ago it was not so much the presence or absence of taste that dictated her first decorating, but the painful absence of money. Hand-me-downs and secondhands served their functional purposes because they had to. She managed to dress well on her limited budget but somehow it didn't occur to her to apply the same principles of color, line, and form, of proportion and appropriateness to her home furnishings. Today even though her family increased faster than her husband's income, what money she has spent on her home has been with successfully cultivated taste. She has introduced pleasant and related colors through paint, slipcovers, draperies. The few furniture replacements are agreeable in scale, good in design. Accessories were chosen for simple beauty of color or texture. Wall plaques of fake wood in pseudo-period motifs are gone, and in their stead are an honest painting done by a friend, a felt collage that she made herself, and a small shelf of foreign toys, all with character and natural fineness. Highlighted in the living room are a pair of Bohemian glass bottles and a velvet-covered, silver-clasped picture album, both neglected family heirlooms before she learned to value them and appreciate them through educated eyes.

How did she accomplish this? By the somewhat mysterious process of personal growth—by teaching herself to be aware, to appreciate, to judge. And she used her new perceptions to achieve a home which speaks eloquently of her own widely expanded horizons.

Is it time for you to change your home to reflect the woman you are today?

Quality has been on this earth through the centuries. You see it in a vase just unearthed in some far-off cave of antiquity. You see it in a Greek temple, an Italian sculpture, a Dutch painting. But what is quality? Many associate it with permanence. The older it is and the longer it lasts, the better it is. Not necessarily—our latter-day Victorian fortresses are proof of that. Is it artistry, design, craftsmanship? Materials, color, construction? Yes, all these and more. And even though each of us may have his own interpretation of what quality is, it is our appreciation of it that is important. For it is this appreciation that now gives quality its new dimension. Houses are being built to give us the very best of the past, others the very best of the future. Whole new communities are sprouting up to provide us with a pleasing environment—privacy for ourselves, play areas for our children. Travel teaches us the finest of foreign cuisines. Line-for-line reproductions of fine antiques remind us that design and attention to detail are still earmarks of quality. The new modern is here to excite us with its daring and basic good design. Both are relatively inexpensive. Today, quality surrounds us on all sides. It is more available than ever before—in the houses we live in, the furniture we buy, the foods we savor, the gardens we relax in. This issue is devoted to a look at these new dimensions of quality.

This house, a completely redesigned New York one-family attached house, is an outstanding example of modern with a quality look. Study it and learn from it—for it often takes more sophistication to judge good modern from bad than it does with traditional. Although its appeal is mainly architectural, with a minimum of furnishings, this house is an object lesson in applied modern design, honest use of materials, warmth, and beauty. Redesigned by architect Yung Wang and his soon-to-be-architect wife Ming, there is nothing to bore you here. Both texture and color catch the eye. Though both are exceedingly subtle, they are repeated throughout the house. The terra-cotta of the brick walls is found in a rug; the slate floor repeats in a charcoal carpet. The overall appearance is monolithic with vast undecorated wall spaces; monumental piers rising to the ceiling; huge, low couches. But there is also contrast—with tiny objects, tightly grouped in the display cases, minute fireplace openings exposed where the huge mantelpieces were removed. And against all the hard-edge design of slate, concrete, marble, and brick, there is the soft luxury of fur, wool, and corduroy.

Even though you may not want to copy this house outright, you may well want to capture some of its modern beauty without going to the length and the expense the Wangs did. We suggest you turn to page 82 and take a look at some of the new, modern designs in furniture and furnishings. The sleekly handsome, pared-down look of these pieces will give you the wood tones every interior needs. For this very purpose the Wangs used the magnificent old doors and shutters with which their house was blessed. The lines of this new furniture, reassuringly massive, echo the comfortable lowness of the Wangs' built-ins. They will serve to make your low-slung modern ceilings seem much higher.

HERE'S A QUALITY HOUSE TO LEARN BY

By Vera D. Hahn

A completely integrated architectural statement accounts for the feeling of quality that pervades the Wang house. In the living room (above and opposite) most of the furniture and all of the lighting are part of the architecture. Even the free-standing pieces have a strong, architectural look. White display cabinets were designed to hold Mrs. Wang's collection of minute toys and memorabilia.

A QUALITY HOUSE

The bed dominates the Wangs' street-level, garden-view bedroom. Display, storage, and lighting niches to the left and right give it importance, as does the concrete canopy overhead. Wooden closet doors and a thick wool blanket used as a throw exert a softening influence.

Staircase (right) was stripped of handrail and banisters but the decorative newel post was retained. Stair carpeting is charcoal to match slate floor. Old oak doors now slide on tracks to save space.

Dining room (above and left) gives access to entry. Closet-lined passage toward living room is flanked by two concrete piers. Kitchen counter is faced and topped with butcher block. Bentwood furniture has long been a Wang collection hobby.

DECORATING WITH MODERN

Turning the average modern apartment or builder house into a home with distinction and beauty is no easy task. But we think you'll find the medium-price furniture shown here a great help. From the new American modern groups and collections, their straightforward good looks, ample, rather massive proportions are reminiscent of modern classics and custom-made furniture. Since most modern interiors today lack wood tones because doors and windows are often framed in metal, these pieces will supply much needed warmth. Keep your backgrounds as simple and uncluttered as you can. The contrast of soft and hard materials is of prime importance. If your architecture is modern, try the softening influence of rugs and carpets. For accessories, shop department store and discount-house art galleries for inexpensive prints by modern artists and reproductions of sculpture, both modern and ancient.

BE AUTHENTIC WITH TRADITIONAL

Authenticity was uppermost in the minds of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Weil

when they went about restoring this late 18th-century Massachusetts farmhouse. Quality appeared almost on its own accord. In their search for authenticity, the Weils sought out workmen who had been trained in the old craft methods, and they insisted on using nothing but old or at least true-to-the-period materials and furnishings. The strongest influence on their taste was nearby Deerfield Village where they studied the period of their choice firsthand. Although a lot of structural work was done, the Weils were careful not to change the basic character of the house. The large L-shaped living room with its two fireplaces was once three tiny rooms. The paneling was designed and installed by the Weils themselves. Using old wood, they stripped it of paint, rubbed it down, and waxed it. (continued)

Small fireplace in the living room was known as a grandmother's fireplace and was once in a small room where the family bible was read on Sunday. Featheredge moldings of new paneling are true to the period. At the windows: draperies from an old copperplate chintz, inexpensive tobacco-cloth curtains. Oriental rugs were a big favorite during Colonial and post-Colonial days.

BE AUTHENTIC

The kitchen was also completely rebuilt (see above). Although it is only one year old, it is actually located in the oldest part of the house. The fireplace is an exact replica of one in Old Deerfield, all the bricks salvaged from an old cutlery mill. Once the structural changes were made, the Weils proceeded to lavish their home with period pieces—Queen Anne chairs, Windsor chairs, a Chippendale mirror to name a few. Fabrics and wallpapers are modern-day copies of those used in the 18th century. Accessories are collector's items—Lowestoft and Benningtonware, old lanterns and chandeliers, antique cookware, and pewter. Wherever reproductions are used, they are faithful copies of the originals. One lesson to be learned: If you want a traditional home, we suggest you follow the Weils' lead no matter what your style preference might be. Visit restorations, museums, and antique shops to form your own taste and judgment. Get to know your historical period as intimately as the Weils did and then pay meticulous attention to details of the period you want.

With all its 18th-century look, the kitchen (left) is fully equipped with 20th-century appliances. Floor bricks are modern, treated with silicone for stain resistance (note the difference in size and shape from fireplace bricks). Bench under the window once belonged to Daniel Webster. Chair in front of fireplace is an early Brewster. Tabletop is maple set on an old chestnut base. Dining chairs are bow-back Windsors.

DECORATING WITH TRADITIONAL

To give a new home—even one that's lacking the architectural assets of an old house—atmosphere, charm, and warmth, try furnishing it with authentic period reproductions. If you've always thought reproductions were expensive, often as expensive as antiques, you're in for a pleasant surprise. What's new about reproductions, at least those shown here, is that they are within reach. Now mass-produced, they cost about as much as contemporary pieces of comparable quality. What's more, you can create a completely accessorized period room with reproductions. There are line-for-line copies of antique rugs, lamps, ceiling fixtures, and above all, decorative accessories and works of art. Many of these bear a museum's seal of approval. Also exciting—you can find these reproductions in department or furniture stores and in museums and book shops all over the country.

HAPPY BLEND OF GARDEN AND HOUSE

Here, in the garden of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bruck of La Jolla, California, is a shining example of how the fusion of architecture and landscape can bring forth a quality environment that is an aesthetic experience as well as a joy to be in. Structure and light, plant forms and textures, water and fluid shade are the elements that comprise this private world—to be enjoyed from the inside as well as admired from without. The Brucks wanted a low-maintenance garden which would blend with the native plants of their hillside. They wanted coolness, shade, and privacy. To achieve their goal they used redwood strips overhead and predominantly evergreen, easy-to-care-for plants. They probably would not have succeeded if the architect and landscape architect had not worked together to integrate house and garden. The result: a landscape that has elegance but is organically related to the wild plants of the hill and a house open to the light and a view of the Pacific Ocean on the north.

By Alan C. Borg

THE QUALITY ENVIRONMENT

As our world grows smaller and smaller, it becomes increasingly difficult to find refuge and privacy from the activity around us. Many communities across the nation have increased their zoning requirements (an acre of land or more per house) to assure privacy and restrict growth. This hardly makes sense though, with increasing space demands from a growing population and ever-rising maintenance and municipal tax costs. The obvious answer then is better planning of our land and houses to provide maximum physical use (with minimum physical effort for maintenance) as well as visual and spatial pleasures. This applies to the whole scale of residential construction, from the small builder to the developers of planned communities. It requires better understanding of land planning by our zoning and planning authorities. On these six pages are examples of what some progressive and sensitive builders are doing to provide quality environments. The first four pages are devoted to contemporary houses that are significant contributions to mass single-family housing. They provide seclusion on small lots and allow maximum use of the lots. Moreover, they are being built in a planned community that will eventually house 75,000 people. The last two pages are devoted to a much smaller and more conventional approach to both land use and architectural design—an 11-house complex with Colonial design and careful detailing. Each contributes in its own way to a quality approach to our physical surroundings and style of living.

SECLUSION IN A COMMUNITY

The families who move into a house such as this one in Colony Park, Westlake Village, California, are fortunate. While most of us have to maintain our yards for the visual delight of our neighbors, here, on narrow 60- and 70-foot lots, just about all of the property is used for family living. Only the driveways and small planting strips are open to public view. The rest is secluded behind privacy walls that completely enclose the properties. Houses in this builder group sell from $34,000 to $41,000. Designed by architect Robert Jones to be total units, lot and house become one, with each adding to the other. To see another house in this distinctive planned community, turn the page.

Behind the entry gate the owner controls a world of his own—completely protected from neighbors and passersby. Two-story house in background is windowless on this side. Ancient oaks have been spared.

Rear walls of lots border on common open areas which provide automobile-free walkways to schools, playgrounds, and neighborhood shopping.

Sliding windows open up kitchen to counter next to pool. Family room is to right of kitchen. Whole complex forms a complete center for family living and informal entertaining, demands little maintenance.

Motorists' view of development is one of changing wall patterns from house to house with planting strips between sidewalk and walls. Three-car garages are becoming important in California.

Pools, patios, and decks add even more to the total effect since they were thought of in the original design and not added on later, as is the usual case. Moreover, a house-to-house relationship has been considered in the original planning so that the positioning and design of each works with its neighbors on either side. In essence then, we have well-planned houses working well with their sites; each house and site related to its neighbor. The house shown here is one of the most popular models. Sales experience indicates that most buyers have owned a house before and that 50 percent are coming from larger and more expensive homes. These seasoned home owners are buying for two reasons—the planned community aspect is one, but more important is the knowledge that they are buying a surrounding that is completely theirs and one that they can easily maintain themselves or with minimum help. They are buying a quality environment.

Plan shows relationship of house to outdoor areas and privacy walls. Note how each room has indoor-outdoor relationship.

LIVING IN PLANNED COMMUNITIES

Despite the appealing photos shown here, we can anticipate a nagging thought in some readers' minds about life in a planned community. Just what would it be like living there? Would it be like having a social director who schedules your free time with brigades called out for bridge every Wednesday, square-dance lessons on Friday, and group discussions on Mondays? We can assure you that buying a house in a planned community isn't going to put a straitjacket on you or your schedule, since it's the community that's planned, not your life. Actually, it should have the opposite effect and provide freedom from external restriction instead of any inevitable compliance with group living patterns often found in today's suburbs. That pattern usually begins with everybody getting up to take Daddy to the train.

And then there are the scheduled deliveries of offspring to school, outside lessons, and playgrounds, with Mom's shopping fitted in between. Then meet Daddy at the train, have dinner, and everybody in bed after the 11 o'clock news to get the rest needed before catching tomorrow morning's train. A planned community can provide freedom from many of these chores by putting shopping areas nearby and accessible without a car, as well as schools and recreation. The photo above shows a common green behind the houses in Colony Park, part of the planned community of Westlake Village currently being built near Los Angeles. The green leads to elementary schools, shops, and play areas, so that children are protected from traffic and can walk there unescorted. With public landscape maintenance done by the community and no need for chauffeuring the family around, parents will find more time for the things they want to do—including whatever happens to be offered at the community center. In effect, you're given more choice by life in a planned community, not restricted by what circumstances put in the schedule for you. We have the seeming paradox of a planned community offering a less rigid framework for family life than an ordinary town. And for a very good reason. Most towns just happened, with little regard for building in the amenities of life except for the very rich. By contrast, a planned town starts with these basic requirements and nothing is allowed to interfere, whether it's traffic (which is usually shunted away from residential areas) or commerce and industry (conveniently reached, but not the dominant factors in the townscape). It's been said before, but it's worth repeating: The aim of planned communities is to combine the convenience of city living with the country pleasures of open spaces and recreation areas.

COLONIAL CHARM & DETAIL

Although quite different from the California houses on the preceding pages, this Connecticut community is a quality environment too. Relying upon charm and careful detailing, this 11-house group shows what the small builder can do with dissimilar but related traditional styles. While the land concepts used in California are just as valid in the East, the use of the half-acre lots here has been beautifully handled. Builder Carl Gunther of Trumbull used his rolling, wooded site in the best traditions of the area. The native-stone walls and careful integration of the buildings to the land create a pleasant environment for the Colonial house designs.

Proportions and groupings of buildings contribute an important part to the general feel of the environment. A contrast of natural wood siding and painted siding adds to the visual interest. Molding details are important on many of the houses. All details in the different houses are true to the various periods they represent.

The massing of outbuildings was an important part of Colonial design and is important here. Garages are attached to the houses by connecting links that form family rooms or breezeways. The builder had many windows made at a local mill, but many were stock units.

Designs range from that of earliest settlers to the more formal Williamsburg period. Scattered placement on the land gives picturesque view from one house to another. Typically the entries were carefully planned to give each house a good approach. Stone retaining walls were used to make up differences between grade levels. Walls are mortar-free as they were in Colonial days.

The view above shows the general character that is built into this community. The streets are curving and the lots are not in a gridiron pattern. Trees were preserved wherever possible and grassy "sidewalks" are bordered by stone walls that follow the curve of the streets.

One of the most dominant features of the grouping is the chimney and chimney-cap design. Mostly made of used brick, they vary in shape on each house. They are all well-proportioned and are indicative of the thoughtful detailing found here. Wood shingle roofs blend well with the used brick.

VEST-POCKET GARDENS

A garden can be anywhere you choose to enjoy it. It may be a tubbed tree on a terrace outside your bedroom window, a definitive bed of herbs a snip away from the kitchen, an exotic jungle basking in the humidity of your bath. The important thing for you is that it set a mood and enliven a window with a view uniquely its own—your own special outdoors when you're in that room. Whenever a specific type of garden, whether herb, vegetable, or tropical, is impractical on a large scale, think of it postage-stamp size—framed in a particular window—especially if the present view is unappealing. Our pictures were chosen to inspire you to design small landscapes for your own windows next season.

The Japan-inspired sitting garden (right) opens off a master bedroom. A simple redwood bench close to the ground, a soy-tubbed pine tree, and coarse bark groundcovering create a landscape of serenity for watching the changing of the seasons.

This garden (left) is three steps below the level of the bathroom beyond an exterior wall of glass with a sliding door. Only 8 by 18 feet, it is carpeted with helxine (baby's tears) and planted with Australian tree fern, fuchsias, gardenia, and bougainvillea.

Photographer: Richard Gross Landscape architect: Joseph Copp Jr.

Sunlight filtered through a plastic screen (right) is the perfect environment for an herb garden. A step away from the kitchen, it contains basil, tarragon, mint, parsley, chives, anise, dill, rosemary, and rue. Bougainvillea grows on the fence, Hahn's ivy is in the clay pot.

Photographer: Bruce Harlow

This small garden sheltered by a redwood and plastic shoji fence is an oasis in the city and provides the kitchen-dining area with a view of green and growing things. For easy maintenance, all the plants are in pots or tubs. There are bonsai deodar cedars and pine, ivy, hydrangeas, pelargoniums, and ferns. Out of camera range were papyrus, palm, dwarf maple, bougainvillea and trumpet vine.

SO YOU'RE LEARNING TO COOK is there anything more tempting than a cookie jar heaped with irresistible morsels? Keeping it filled to the brim may be a little difficult, but refilling it's as easy as baking a new batch of cookies. There are so many kinds of cookies, too, that you'll be able to mix up a different recipe each time you bake. And there's always room for your own variations. One of our favorites is the delightfully spicy, ginger cookie. Try our recipe for that coming Halloween party.

Here are some things you'll want to know before you begin to make cookies:

- Choose the right cookie sheet. There are three standard sizes available. Select a size that is two inches narrower and two inches shorter than your oven so the heat can circulate around it while the cookies bake.
- If the recipe calls for a greased cookie sheet, coat it lightly with shortening. Spread it evenly with a pastry brush, a piece of wax paper, or paper towel.
- Cookie dough will melt if it is put on a hot cookie sheet, so have a second, cool one for the next batch to be baked. Let the hot cookie sheet cool before you use it again.
- Be careful with flour. Measure accurately for the recipe and don't use too much when you roll the dough. Too much flour will make your cookies tough and dry.
- Make each cookie the same size and thickness for uniform baking.
- Use a broad spatula to pick up rolled cookies from the board. It helps keep them from stretching.
- Remove cookies from the cookie sheets as soon as they come from the oven. Again, transfer them with a broad spatula and place them on wire cake racks in a single layer.
- Don't overlap cookies when placing them on wire rack. This could cause them to stick and lose their shape.
- Avoid overbaking. Remember, cookies continue to bake after they are removed from the oven until they are taken from the cookie sheet.

- 4½ to 5 cups sifted all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon ground ginger
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon ground cloves
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup butter or margarine
1 cup sugar
1 cup molasses
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 egg, beaten

1. Sift flour, baking soda, ginger, cinnamon, cloves, and salt together. Set aside.
2. Put butter or margarine and sugar into a large bowl.
3. Put molasses into a small saucepan. Heat to boiling.

4. Pour molasses over butter or margarine and sugar. Add vinegar. Stir until well blended. Set aside and let it cool.

5. Add beaten egg to cooled molasses mixture.

6. Add sifted flour mixture gradually, mixing well after each addition.

7. Cover bowl with aluminum foil, wax paper, or transparent plastic wrap. Chill overnight.

8. Heat oven to 375° F. Grease a cookie sheet lightly.

9. Divide dough into four parts. Roll out one part at a time on a well-floured board, rolling from center to the edge. Keep rest of dough in refrigerator while rolling one part.
For soft, fat cookies roll the dough ¼ inch thick. If you want your cookies thin and crisp, roll the dough ⅛ inch thick.

10. Put a small amount of flour in a small bowl. Dip cookie cutter in the flour. Shake off the excess.

11. Cut out cookies, keeping the cuttings close together and cutting as many as you can from each rolling.

12. Pick up cookies one at a time with a broad spatula and place them about 1 inch apart on cookie sheet.

13. Bake 8 to 10 minutes. Remove from oven. Transfer cookies to wire racks with a broad spatula. Don't stack or overlap them. Cool completely.

GINGERBREAD MEN

1 recipe for Ginger Cookies
Raisins

Milk or water

1 cup sifted confectioners' sugar

1. Prepare and chill dough for Ginger Cookies.
2. Roll dough out ¼ inch thick.
3. Cut out with floured gingerbread-man cutter.
4. Transfer to greased cookie sheets with a broad spatula or pancake turner.
5. Press raisins into dough for eyes, nose, and mouth.

6. If you wish, move the arms and legs carefully, so the gingerbread men will look as though they are running after they are baked.

7. Bake as for Ginger Cookies.

8. Remove carefully from cookie sheets with broad spatula and place on wire racks to cool.

9. Stir enough milk or water into confectioners' sugar to make an icing easy to force through a pastry tube, yet firm enough to hold its shape. Do it slowly by teaspoonfuls for you may need only a tablespoon of liquid or less.

10. Press through pastry tube in thin lines to make outlines for the collar, cuffs, belt, and shoes.

TWO POPULAR BLUEPRINT HOUSES

Be ready to break ground when spring breaks and order working drawings for either of these two popular houses in our Blueprint series. One of them (BP 103) is a handsome New England traditional style. The other (BP 104) is a trim, dollar-stretching contemporary. To order plans, use the coupon below. Blueprints are $10 per set, $25 for three sets of the same design. A set contains complete working drawings and a list of materials needed.

This New England traditional house with the typical central-hall plan has four bedrooms and two baths. The siding is true-to-style narrow clapboards. Garage and utility room are attached to main house in wing at one side. There are 2368 square feet of space plus the garage. Living room has a fireplace, and dining room has built-in corner cupboards. The sitting room could double as a study or guest room. Ask for BP 103.

This handsome contemporary house can be built on almost any lot without extensive grading. Entry bridge leads to main living area on upper level. Each level has 1650 square feet. Lower level may be left unfinished until needed. Exterior is sided with red cedar shakes. Rear of house (shown here) is similar to front but has large play deck instead of the entry bridge. Nancy Evans made a hit with the team... 'cause dirt can't hide from Intensified Tide!

One ball game followed another and although the team was winning, their uniforms weren't. Knees, seats and elbows were getting grubbier and grubbier. Then Nancy, dedicated fan (and mother of the short-stop) discovered New Intensified Tide's tremendous cleaning. The news spread like wildfire and soon the team looked as good as it played. Dressed in the sharpest, snappiest uniforms around, morale soared to an all-time high. Why those uniforms were so clean... even the umpire could see the difference. Announcing: the strongest pain reliever you can buy...

With a $28,000 mortgage on the $38,000 house (for 25 years at 6½ percent) and a down payment of $10,000, monthly payments to amortize the loan would be $189.06, plus another $125 for taxes, insurance, and heat would total $314.06. And you'd have the house you wanted all along. No need to move again.

IF IT'S A FIRST HOME

If you're a first-time buyer, the considerations are somewhat different. In the first place, are you going on the theory that you can afford to pay 2½ times your annual gross income for a home? That's often accepted as a rule of thumb for a reasonable purchase price. But don't buy that formula right off the bat. It may be right for some people but it may not necessarily work for you. There are too many variables involved. The price you can afford will depend on the size of the down payment you can make; the length of time the mortgage will run; the interest rate you can get; plus closing costs and moving costs. Then you must ask yourself: After meeting the down payment, will we have any emergency funds left in the bank?

Then consider the monthly mortgage payment. Say you're now paying $110 rent. The mortgage payment on a $21,000 house will be, say, $102.21 a month—cheaper than the rent. So the price is right, you figure. But wait a minute and think:

How long will this house you have in mind contain your growing family? How soon will the children overflow the bedrooms and want rooms of their own? Will the community require many more school buildings in the near future? Are there businesses and industrial firms to share the tax burden? Also, what other improvements in the way of sewage and sidewalks are in the offing? Answers to these questions are often available from the town clerk or other officials.

And what about those other expenses which will be tacked onto the monthly mortgage payment? You won't really be paying $102.21 a month, remember. You'll have to figure on an additional sum (from three to five percent of the purchase price each year) for property taxes, heat, and insurance. Let's assume it's four percent, or $70 a month. So you'll find you're paying $172.21 a month, when you're accustomed to budgeting your take-home pay on the basis of $110 rent.

WILL THE FORMULA WORK?

housing about $150, a realistic budget for your family of four could be $675. This has been allowing you about $125 leeway a month for savings and insurance.

You're thinking that the difference in housing will be only $84 if you move, so you can make the grade with a few economies. And you'll have that $1700 after the sale of your present house for closing costs, moving, and other extras.

But keep in mind that a certain amount of your "leeway" money will be absorbed in heating and maintaining a larger home. Other utilities will probably cost more. There are bound to be outlays for decorating, remodeling, new furniture and carpets, an appliance or two, and perhaps some landscaping. All of which is fine, except that this isn't really the house you and your family want. You'll be duplicating many of these expenses in a few years.

But what if you decide to postpone this less-than-satisfactory move in favor of a better one a few years from now? How will your finances shape up in three years, five years?

In three years, the equity in your present home would amount to about $5700. In five years to about $6580. You can logically expect a continued increase in property values. Then assume you decide now to allot $75 a month to savings, instead of paying it out on the new house. Without counting interest, this sum would add $2700 to your equity figure in three years—for a total of about $8400. In five years, about $4500 to your equity figure—for a total of about $11,080.

How much interest these savings could earn over the years would depend, of course, on where you put them to work—on whether you wanted a sure, fixed yield or were willing to take a certain amount of risk in hopes of higher yield.

In five years, then, your savings will have increased. Your income will, probably, have increased (if not, then you might have avoided buying too expensive a house). Your equity in your present house will have built up. The profit from the sale of the house can be expected to be larger. So you could consider a move into a $38,000 home. With this financial setup, you're more likely to find the kind of house and neighborhood you really want.

Assuming an annual gross income in five years of $15,000, you'd have a monthly net income of $990. After the sale of your home at its increased value of $23,000, and after full payment of the existing mortgage, there will be $11,580. Plus savings of $4500 or more—a total of about $16,000.

READY TO MOVE?

costs $22,500. They can put down $4500, with a mortgage of $18,000 at 6½ percent for 30 years.

The monthly mortgage payment, they cheerfully figure, will be $113.78—which shouldn't be too uncomfortable. But adding the cost of the taxes, insurance, heat, etc., there's another $75 tacked on—for a total monthly housing cost of $188.78.

After deductions, the husband's take-home pay is $640. His fixed commitments each month are these:

Housing, $188.78; utilities, $25 including water; life insurance, $20; car payment, $50 (six more months to go); car insurance, $15. Total, $298.78 a month.

Now if he takes on this house, he must meet the following expenses: Food, $135; household supplies, $20; clothing, $48; personal allowances, $50; medical, $20; miscellaneous (church donations, etc.), $25; car operation, $40. Total, $338 a month.

Adding his fixed expenses and his flexible expenses (flexible only to a degree, of course), he's spending $636.78 a month—and only bringing home $640.

So he comes out with $3.22.

But that doesn't tell the whole story. He has nothing to put aside in savings. The family will need a second car because the home they want to buy really calls for it. There are no surplus funds for recreation or babysitters, no emergency funds in the bank. His savings went for the down payment and closing costs. He has no opportunity to build up his insurance program while he's still young enough to benefit by less expensive premiums.

Wouldn't this family be wiser to settle for a house that would cost less—allowing for a little more financial elbowroom? One that would allow them to operate without a second car for the time being and start to recoup their savings.

POINTS TO CONSIDER

Thoughtful analysis of the family's budget figures is the realistic way to arrive at the right price. And after that, continuing costs must be considered as well as the advantages of increasing equity. Maybe these costs won't seem formidable at all if you're really in a position to handle them. But don't fail to be aware of them.

Have you looked into the rate of property tax rises over recent years in the particular community where you want to buy? Have you determined how much home protection in the way of insurance you will want to buy? Do you know how much it will actually cost to heat this house you are looking at longingly? And how about the cost of electricity, water, garbage collection? How about minor repairs, outside and in, which will need doing? Will transportation costs go up in this new neighborhood?

Other factors to weigh before you even start house hunting:

How much job security can the breadwinner reasonably count on? Is his company one that tends to send its men from pillar to post? Must a house be looked at as much from the resale standpoint as from its appearance and livability?

How soon will college costs become a major item in the budget?

Buying a first home almost invariably puts extra special expenses on a young family. There's the matter of furnishings—and if the move is from a small apartment to a sizable house, this can be a real financial load. Taking on a big monthly installment payment for furniture in addition to the mortgage can leave even a good income feeling pinched.

Does this paint a discouraging picture? It shouldn't really, for all the above points are readily learned from experience, and people still buy houses, and will continue to do so. But you'll be a lot happier with the house you buy if you carefully study all of its financial ramifications.

Here are four rooms decorated with more taste than money, with ideas rather than costly furnishings—and each a do-it-yourself example of how imagination can expand your budget. We presented designer Joan Lerrick with this challenge: Take a room roughly the size and shape of the third bedroom you find in many houses and redecorate it inexpensively for four different purposes. What Joan has come up with are get-away areas designed for each member of the family. There's a room for the husband, the wife, the children, and a "his-and-hers" version. Each is worth a long look. The budget furnishings are available no matter where you live and whatever carpentry is needed is geared to the skills of the home handyman.

Sewing-guest room is wallpapered in a stylized fruit pattern. Curtained French-style bed has flanking cabinets to hold sewing in everyday canisters turned neat as bandboxes with wallpaper. Up to the cornice in shelves and there's lots more storage space in those deep drawers tucked under the bed. For whimsical detailing we like the old posts that support the cornice.

Male retreat has a wall-to-wall desk made of thrift-shop drawers. The wallpapered top was vinylized and the old swivel chair treated to a new caning job. For postwork lounging there's a low-slung wicker beach chair and ottoman. The army surplus cot plus mattress can sleep an overnight guest. White bamboo blinds at the window silhouette a growing collection of model birds. Bold plaid rug has lots of style.

MAKE A LISTENING TEST

But whether you shop for component hi-fi or the appliance kind, one aspect will be common to both: The preference for one brand over another will be decided by your ears. You'll have to listen—and listen carefully.

Want to make the listening test more meaningful and your shopping more rewarding? Take your favorite record along and ask the dealer to play it on the various models you're considering. Your ear—accustomed as it is to the record—will quickly perceive the differences between sets. You'll also discover—or should—that your record contained far more music than you thought.

NEW LOOK AND SOUND IN RADIO

Interested in radio alone? The new models are as easy on the eyes as the ears. The boxy look that prevailed is being phased out since designers have gained new latitude with miniaturized circuits and transistorization. The result: slim lines (some sets are only 4½ inches deep), bigger speakers (for better sound), and more variety in styling. There are more woods—veneers and solids—being used than heretofore. And they are being tastefully combined with plastics and metals for a sleek, contemporary look.

You get more for your money with FM radio than ever before. And it costs less; prices start in the $30 range. There's another important difference—one which may surprise you if you haven't listened to FM recently. Programming has expanded from what was almost exclusively serious music to appeal to a much broader audience. Listen across the FM band today and except for the much higher quality, you can hardly distinguish it from AM.

What features should you seek in an FM radio? Automatic frequency control (AFC) is one. This simply means that tuning is locked in—that the reception won't drift off station.

A muting circuit is also desirable to reduce "white noise"—the hissing sound between stations. Better sensitivity—the ability to tune in more stations across the dial—is a feature of the better sets. They'll also exhibit better capture radio, a fancy way of saying less interstation interference.

The first step in buying FM radio is to listen to the finest, most expensive set you can. Until you do you cannot by audio circuits that are only moderately good and design and space considerations restrict the size of the loudspeaker that can be used—with a consequent restriction in the quality of the tone. In some models, the loudspeaker isn't a front-firing type; that is, what we hear is reflected from walls and ceiling.

What about the TV picture? What guidelines have we for evaluating the it all the way up. There should be brightness-to-spare, more brightness than you can use.

Try the channel selector knob. Does the picture break up or become distorted when you go from one channel to another? It shouldn't.

Look at the picture carefully. Is it a distinct and integral image—equally clear at the center and at the edges of the screen? It should be. And a close-up examination of the image should reveal the scanning lines to be sharp and clear.

The purchase of a color set requires extra care. Take your time. Don't be rushed into a purchase. And don't be distracted by the unusual redness of the package in the soap commercial or the colors of the model's dress. The package should be the right shade of red and the model's skin tones are more significant than the color of her dress. Skin tone is your best gauge of color fidelity; it must be close to lifelike. Using this for your guide, compare brands.

Note, too, whether the colors bleed—run together at the edges of the picture tube. They should be the same intensity from one side to the other. Neither should the scanning lines bend at the edges of the picture tube.

In choosing between brands, do some dial fiddling on your own. Adjust the color to what you think it should be. Then change channels. When you switch from color channel to color channel, the color reception should be locked in. Only a little touch-up should be necessary. In switching from color to black-and-white, the picture should be perfectly clear; you shouldn't have to touch the controls.

Incidentally, some aspects of set buying are purely practical and have nothing to do with electronics or picture quality. Still, many people overlook them. You should, for example, measure the place where the set will stand and make certain you buy the proper size.

Check, too, for electrical outlets and be sure that the cord from the set is long enough to reach it.

The UL (Underwriters Laboratory) label is an important gauge of the set's safety; look for it.

One final word. Choose your dealer with care. Will he install, guarantee, and service your purchase? Has he his own service facilities on the premises? If not, then you're better off doing business with one that has.

The frosting that spreads easier, tastes creamier than your homemade.

It's homogenized. You can't beat it.

Homogenizing makes Betty Crocker Ready-to-Spread Frosting smoother than any butter cream frosting you can whip, blend or beat at home. That's why it spreads easier, tastes creamier than homemade frosting. Try: Chocolate, Milk Chocolate, Vanilla, Butterscotch or Lemon. They're all unbeatable.

know the joys of FM listening or appreciate how genuinely pure it can sound. Listen to the best and use this as the standard against which you can measure less expensive models.

TV GUIDELINES

The purchase of a TV set hardly compares with buying a radio or phonograph. Obviously the eye must judge more than the ear and, indeed, our ears are treated as secondary senses by TV makers. As you might expect, you get what you pay for. Less expensive sets are distinguished visual side of home entertainment? The following tips apply equally to black-and-white and color sets.

In comparing brands, don't be satisfied with a partial picture. Look from one to the other. Does one set cut off the tops of people's heads? Choose the set that does not. And make sure that none of the action on the screen is lost.

Notice what happens when a person on camera walks across the screen. If the image distorts, reject the set.

Test the "brightness" control. Turn

Delicate, delectable veal, so young and tender, has many personalities because of its happy compatibility with seasonings, piquant sauces, savory vegetables. Veal is unexcelled among meats in its subtle flavor and it is this very quality that makes it so versatile. Italy is one of the countries that understands it best and many of its veal specialties are finding their way into American kitchens. Pictured here is a rolled shoulder of veal—a cut that tends to be overlooked among your other roast favorites but should star in its own right. For the classic Veal Scaloppine and our Cooking Lesson No. 3, turn the page.

VEAL SCALOPPINE

In our third lesson, American Home Chef Jacques Jaffry helps us to rediscover the many ways of veal. Here in 4 simple stages he demonstrates how to cut and prepare veal scallops. He also offers an unusual recipe for you to try that goes beyond the familiar scaloppine cookery of the parmigiana and piccata schools: Veal Scaloppine Farcite. See the recipe on the opposite page for this delicious example of veal's versatility. Scallops are stuffed with ham, cheese, and mushrooms in a superbly prepared dish that will remind you how much you've missed this special meat in your menu. For additional recipes and some useful tips on the cuts and characteristics of veal turn to page 122.

PREPARING SCALOPPINE OF VEAL

1 You can buy scaloppine already sliced or you can cut your own from a piece of top or bottom round which you purchase from the butcher. This way you will get more uniformly tender scaloppine. First remove the trimmings. Insert a sharp knife between meat and membrane. Keep blade at an angle so as not to cut into meat. Slide along the meat to remove trimmings.

2 Place one hand firmly on the cut surface. This helps control the slicing. Raw meat is too soft to slice evenly as cooked meat. Cut across the grain, cutting a slice about $\frac{3}{8}$ of an inch thick.

3 Put each slice between two pieces of wax paper and pound with a wooden mallet or other heavy object until slice is about half as thick—less than $\frac{1}{4}$ inch.

4 Here you can see just how thin the pounded veal is.

PREPARING VEAL SCALOPPINE FARCITE

1 Place a slice of prosciutto on each of 6 slices of veal. Top with a slice of mozzarella. Arrange sautéed mushrooms on the cheese.

2 Cover each one with a second slice of veal, placing it carefully so you don't disturb the stuffing, and bringing the edges together neatly.

3 Pound all around the edge with a wooden mallet or any other heavy object to seal the edges of the two pieces of veal. Season and flour veal.

4 Sauté scaloppine in hot fat over medium heat until brown on both sides. Cook only as many as the pan will hold. Remove and keep warm as others cook.

5 Arrange veal on platter. Prepare sauce and pour over veal.

LOOK WHAT YOU CAN DO WITH CAKE MIX!

Baking a cake from scratch can be a delightful experience if you're using a treasured recipe or when you have time to putter in the kitchen creating a masterpiece from special ingredients. And yet, as heretical as it still may sound to some ears, we are here to testify that cake mixes are mighty good. And they're getting better all the time! We are not only confident of their quality and taste but of their results—foolproof. Moreover, there is such a variety available in our supermarkets today, creative cooks have an inexhaustible supply for inspiration. Just look what you can do to make them individually yours—by adding ingredients, experimenting with shapes, drizzling, swirling, garnishing. We used eight favorites—chocolate, yellow, lemon chiffon, angel, lemon, spice, devil's food, and white. Recipes for the cakes shown here and others begin on page 124.

 devil's food mix, chocolate frosting, and a chocolate mint glaze.
 Next, a delicate Lemon Chiffon
 Roll; a heavenly Angel Parfait Cake; and a Rum Cake, made from yellow cake
 mix. The little Glazed Fruited Gems are a different way to bake cupcakes. Last is Pecan Peach Crown, a spice cake enriched with peaches and whipped cream.

Veal is a very delicious meat when cooked to perfection. Quality is, of course, the first thing to look for to get the best results. The flesh should be smooth and of a very pale pink color indicating a milk-fed animal.

Roasts may be made from top and bottom rounds; saddle, usually boned and rolled; and shoulder, always boned and rolled. Rib rack is usually cut into chops and will also give a beautiful but expensive roast. Veal should always be cooked well done but, owing to its delicate texture, care should be taken not to overcook it.

Veal is very often roasted but braising with a small amount of liquid will give better results. In this case the veal cut is browned in butter or oil in a roasting pan or Dutch oven and removed. Diced vegetables (onions, carrots, celery) are then sautéed in the same fat, the meat is returned to the pan and moistened. This liquid is reduced by half, then the meat is cooked in the oven. The meat will need constant basting while it cooks in order to avoid drying.

Veal cutlets and veal for scaloppine are slices of meat cut from the leg. Top and bottom round are the cuts usually used. Top round, a solid piece of meat without muscle separation, is the better cut. Bottom round will give good results, although it is a little less tender. They are sautéed quickly. Cooking time will vary, but considering the thinness of the slices, the meat will ordinarily be done when golden brown on both sides and resistant to the pressure of the finger.

Don't have a Pot Roast Dinner. Have a Pranzo di Manzo, instead.

To make the Antipasto:

It means "before the meal" and that's when you serve it. This Italian appetizer is really made of non-Italian things you may already have in the house. Like ham, olives, peppers, tomatoes and hard-cooked eggs. Serve on a platter with oil and vinegar, and that's an Antipasto.

To make the Frutta:

After a meal, Italians eat frutta. Plain fresh fruit. Serve yours with knives for peeling, and cheese alongside. Any combination will do (apples and Bel Paese is a good one). For this dessert, it's not what you serve that's Italian, it's the way you serve it.

To make the Pane:

Bread is pane (pah-nay) in Italian. Buy breadsticks, or a long thin loaf of "Italian Bread." Slice halfway. Then to make it even more Italian, dot with butter, parmesan cheese and a little garlic salt; wrap in foil and warm in the oven.

To make the Manzo: Pranzo di Manzo means "dinner of beef," but you don't have to know how to say it to make it. Because Chef Boy-Ar-Dee® makes a spaghetti sauce that's so Italian, it can make a pot roast Italian. Just cook the Chef's savory sauce right into the meat, the way Italians do. Let its special Italian spices and rich tomato goodness add their lively flavor to your roast. That's all it takes to make sure that instead of ordinary pot roast, this will be something special: real Italian Manzo.

3 pounds beef (pot roast cut)	2 tbsp. oil
½ tsp. salt	2 cans Chef Boy-Ar-Dee
¼ tsp. pepper	Spaghetti Sauce with Mushrooms

1. Season meat with salt and pepper. 2. In a large heavy saucepan, brown all sides in oil. Pour off excess oil; pour on Chef Boy-Ar-Dee Spaghetti Sauce with Mushrooms. 3. Cover and cook slowly 2½ hours (or until tender). 4. Serve sliced with extra sauce poured on.

1 package (2-layer) sour cream fudge cake mix or dark chocolate cake mix
1 tablespoon instant coffee
1/2 cup very finely chopped walnuts
1 package (about 14 ounces) creamy white frosting mix
3/4 cup dairy sour cream
1/4 cup softened butter or margarine
1 teaspoon instant coffee

Heat oven to 350° F. Grease and flour two 9x1 1/2-inch layer-cake pans. Prepare cake mix according to package directions; blend in instant coffee. Fold in chopped nuts. Pour into prepared pans. Bake as directed on package. Cool in pans 10 minutes; remove from pans. Cool completely on wire racks.

Combine frosting mix and sour cream; blend well; chill thoroughly. Stir soft butter or margarine and 1 teaspoon instant coffee into frosting; beat 1 minute at low speed on mixer. (Overbeating will make frosting too thin.) Fill and frost cake. Decorate as desired.

PECAN PEACH CROWN

1/2 cup melted butter or margarine
3/4 cup light brown sugar, firmly packed
2 1/2 tablespoons light corn syrup
1 1/2 cups shelled pecans
1 package (2-layer) spice-cake mix
1 pint (2 cups) heavy cream
1/2 cup confectioners' sugar
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1 package (12 ounces) frozen peaches, thawed and well drained

Heat oven to 350° F. Grease and flour the sides of one 9x1 1/2-inch layer-cake pan and one 6-cup ring mold. Combine melted butter or margarine, brown sugar, and corn syrup; blend. Spoon approximately 1/3 the sugar mixture into bottom of ring mold; spoon remainder into layer-cake pan. Arrange pecans over bottoms of both pans.

Prepare cake mix according to package directions. Spoon cake batter very gently over pecan layer in ring mold, filling pan only half full. Pour batter gently into layer-cake pan. Bake cakes 28 to 35 minutes or until cake springs back when lightly touched with fingertip. Invert round layer onto serving plate; invert ring onto wire rack, leaving pans over cakes for two or three minutes; remove pans; cool cakes.

Whip cream, sugar, and nutmeg together until stiff. Fold in peaches. Spread layer of whipped-cream mixture over round layer. Place cake ring on top. Fill center with remaining cream mixture. Chill 1 to 2 hours or until serving time.

GLAZED FRUITED GEMS

1 package (2-layer) lemon cake mix
1 package (3 3/4 ounces) lemon-flavored instant pudding
1 cup water
1/2 cup pure vegetable oil

ALMOND TORTE

1 package (2-layer) white-cake mix
1/2 teaspoon almond extract
2 egg whites
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
1 1/2 teaspoons lemon juice
3/4 cup slivered almonds
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1/4 cup sugar
1 1/2 cups milk
4 egg yolks, slightly beaten
1/2 teaspoon almond extract

Cool in pan 10 minutes; remove from pan. Cool on wire rack. Combine sugar, 2 tablespoons water, 2 tablespoons rum, and orange rind; simmer 5 minutes. the wine guide.

The label on a Taylor red dinner wine is classically simple. There's Burgundy—hearty, deep-red. Claret—crisper, drier. Our new one—Lake Country Red, delightfully in-between. And delicate, all-purpose pink Rosé. (And we even price them all the same.)

No pocket guide needed.
No tongue-twisting names you need a cram course in languages to cope with.
How nice for you.

Back at the winery, things are not so simple. To start with, we take only the choicest grapes from our famed Finger Lakes vineyards. (You're really drinking 4 generations of American history.) Then we patiently blend a variety of them from different years. So the fine character of America's favorite premium-quality wines never varies.

Your every sip is our best.

TRIPLE CHOCOLATE FUDGE CAKE

- 1 package (2-layer) devil's food cake mix
- 1 square unsweetened chocolate, finely grated
- ½ cup butter or margarine, softened
- 1 package (1 pound) confectioners' sugar, unsifted
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 egg
- 1½ teaspoons vanilla
- 3 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
- ¼ cup milk
- ¼ cup sugar
- ¼ cup water
- 2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
- 1 tablespoon milk
- 3 drops oil of peppermint

Heat oven to 350° F. Grease and flour two 8x8x2-inch pans. Prepare cake mix according to package directions; fold in grated chocolate. Pour batter into prepared pans. Bake 35 minutes or until cake springs back when lightly touched with fingertip. Cool in pans 10 minutes. Remove from pans. Cool completely on wire racks.

Cream softened butter or margarine in small bowl on electric mixer. Beat in about half the confectioners' sugar gradually. Add salt, egg, vanilla, and 3 squares melted chocolate; beat thoroughly. Beat in remaining confectioners' sugar alternately with ¼ cup milk; blend well. Fill and frost cake with chocolate frosting.

Combine ½ cup sugar and water in small saucepan; bring to boiling; boil ½ minute, stirring constantly. Stir hot syrup slowly into 2 squares melted chocolate; blend well. Blend in milk and oil of peppermint slowly. Beat or stir glaze until cooled and thickened. Spoon around top of cake making a border about two inches wide, allowing some to drizzle over sides of cake. Let cake stand until glaze has set.

ANGEL PARFAIT CAKE

- 1 package (about 15 ounces) white angel food cake mix
- 3 or 4 drops red food coloring
- 2 drops peppermint extract
- 3 or 4 drops green food coloring
- ¼ teaspoon almond extract
- 3½ cups sifted confectioners' sugar
- ½ cup boiling water
- ¼ cup butter or margarine, softened
- ½ teaspoon vanilla
- 2¼ cups (½ package) confectioners' sugar, sifted
- 1½ to 2 tablespoons milk
- Red food coloring
- Green food coloring

Heat oven to 375° F. Prepare cake mix according to package directions. Divide batter quickly into approximate thirds. Fold 3 or 4 drops red food coloring and peppermint extract into one third; fold 3 or 4 drops green food coloring and almond extract into one third; leave remaining third plain. Spoon batters gently into 10-inch tube pan, alternating colors. Bake according to package directions. Invert cake; cool completely. Remove cake from pan; brush off all loose crumbs. Place angel cake, top side down, on cake plate.

Combine 3½ cups confectioners' sugar and boiling water; stir until smooth; add more sugar, if necessary, to make glaze a good spreading consistency. Spread glaze over top, around sides, and in center of cake. Let cake stand until glaze is set.

Blend butter or margarine, vanilla, 2¼ cups confectioners' sugar, and milk in small bowl; beat well. Divide mixture in half; tint one half pastel pink with a few drops red food coloring; tint other half pastel green with a few drops green food coloring. Add more sugar, if necessary, to make frosting hold a stiff shape. Pipe pink rosettes around base, top, and center ring of cake; repeat with green frosting.

Note: Rosettes may be made with packaged, colored frostings in tubes or pressurized cans.

LEMON CHIFFON ROLL

- 1 package (1 pound, 8 ounces) lemon chiffon cake mix
- 1½ tablespoons grated lemon rind
- Confectioners' sugar
- 1 cup sugar
- 6½ tablespoons cornstarch
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1½ cups water
- 2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine
- 1½ tablespoons grated lemon rind
- ¼ cup lemon juice

Heat oven to 350° F. Prepare cake mix according to package directions. Fold in 1½ tablespoons grated lemon rind. Divide batter evenly between 2 ungreased 15x10x1-inch jelly-roll pans. Bake 12 to 14 minutes or until cake springs back when lightly touched with fingertip. Invert pans; cool cakes in pans 10 minutes. Sift confectioners' sugar over clean towel. Loosen cake from pan; turn out onto towel. Roll up cake and towel. Cool on wire rack. Repeat with second cake.

Combine sugar, cornstarch, and salt in saucepan; blend in water gradually. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until thickened. Cook 1 minute longer. Stir half the hot mixture into egg yolks. Blend egg-yolk mixture into filling remaining in saucepan. Cook 1 minute, stirring rapidly. Remove from heat; add butter or margarine, 1½ tablespoons grated lemon rind, and lemon juice; cool. Unroll chiffon roll. Spread with half the filling; reroll. Repeat with second roll. Chill rolls well. At serving time dust with additional confectioners' sugar. Garnish with lemon wheels, if desired.

Note: Chiffon batter may be baked as 1 roll and 1 loaf cake (use a 9x5x3-inch loaf pan). Invert loaf cake to cool. Wrap loaf; freeze for later use, or slice and serve with fruit and whipped cream. Lemon filling may be divided in half and used for 1 chiffon roll.

Oh, yes it does. Food leaves a film of grease on Teflon. You can't see it, but it's there. Building up. Making the non-stick stick. Don't think soapy water alone will get it off. You've

COMING TO
DINNER

Entertain at dinner with some of the delightful foods of Mexico. But don't think of chili, enchiladas, or refried beans. Good as they are, the varied cuisine of the country offers so much more. We chose to start our dinner with a delicate noodle soup made with vermicelli and garnished with avocado. Our main dish, stuffed flank steak, has its Mexican touch in its stuffing and its seasoning. You can get it ready ahead, refrigerate it, and then let it cook an hour or more before the party. Accompany it with vegetables and a salad of ingredients common to the land south of the border, but easy for us to obtain. And don't forget the tortillas. You can buy them made or in cans. Dessert is the famous Cocoda, a rich, creamy coconut concoction made early so it can be well chilled.

ON THE SPOT WITH OVEN CLEANERS

We aren't all lucky enough to have a self-cleaning oven, where our job is limited to setting the proper controls. In fact, from the display of oven cleaners at the supermarket, quite a few households are still in the do-it-yourself oven-cleaning stage. If you're in this category, there's one thing you can be thankful for. Oven cleaning today is a far cry from the job it was a few years ago, thanks to a new breed of oven cleaners. In addition, many of today's ovens can be taken apart and put together with ease. (Just check your range instruction booklet for a guide.)

WHAT ARE THESE "NEW" CLEANERS?

Oven cleaners generally fall into two categories: spray-on and paint-on. The paint-on kinds are the older of the two and have been around for quite a few years. Granted, they're a step above the stifling ammonia-in-the-oven method of cleaning; but they still relegate you to stooping and painting all the surfaces. They're also very strong and must be neutralized with vinegar and water on removal.

The newer cleaners are the spray-on or aerosol variety. Their great step ahead in convenience lies in two main points. First, they spray on quickly and easily. Second, they take only three to five minutes to work and need only a damp sponge or towel for removal. In addition, a few of the aerosols eliminate the necessity of wearing rubber gloves when you wipe out the oven.

HOW DO THEY WORK?

Although aerosol cleaners differ in some degree (be sure to read individual can instructions carefully), most involve the following simple steps.

- Preheat the oven. In most cases, this is recommended as part of the fast three- to five-minute cleaning action of the cleaner. All cleaners may also be used in a cool oven, but will take longer (15 to 30 minutes) to work. One of the newest aerosol cleaners does not recommend a warm oven—it works very effectively in only five minutes on a cool oven.

- Turn the oven off after you've preheated it. It is not necessary to extinguish the pilot light with most aerosol cleaners.
- Spray the whole oven, holding the can eight to 12 inches from the oven surface. Be careful not to spray electrical outlets and light sockets.
- Let stand the recommended time.
- Wipe clean with a damp cloth or

- All containers specifically state the materials that cleaners can and cannot be used on. They are generally harmless and often used for cleaning ceramic porcelain, stainless steel, glass, and chrome.

- They can be very harmful to aluminum, painted or plastic surfaces, floors, electrical switches and sockets. For this reason, we suggest you carefully avoid any oven trim, etc., if materials: the porcelain enamel exterior surface or covering, knobs and trim, burners or elements and drip pans.

The porcelain enamel surface is smooth, hard, and durable. Because of this, it is very easy to keep clean by regular wiping with a damp cloth. Don't clean it while it is still warm (it could crack from sudden change in temperatures) and don't use harsh abrasives on it.

Trim and knobs can be made of a variety of materials. Unless you have specific information on what they are and the recommended cleaner, your best bet is to remove them and clean in hot sudsy water.

Gas burners and electrical elements and all their components (chromium rings, reflector pans or drip bowls, drip pans) are removable in varying degrees. The easiest and safest way to clean these is to remove as many as you can and wash with one exception, soak in hot sudsy water, using a mild abrasive if necessary. The electric heating elements are the one exception. These are self-cleaning and should never be placed in water!

KEEPING YOUR RANGE CLEAN

Though it's impossible to cook in your oven or on the cook top without some degree of spattering, spilling, and dripping, there are several tips which will help cut cleaning to a minimum.

Be sensible about the foods you cook. Don't load a pan or a casserole so full that it's bound to bubble over the sides.

Cook meats at the recommended temperatures. Too high a temperature will increase spattering.

Catch a spill as soon as possible. The longer it stays and bakes on, the harder it is to remove.

If you're particularly interested in an always spotless oven, you may want to follow this suggestion: Make spraying your oven with an aerosol oven cleaner a regular part of your after-dinner cleanup. Just give your still-warm oven a quick spray in the soiled areas, then five minutes later wipe it off. Takes only a few minutes of your time, but saves you from attacking a very dirty oven with built-up grease.

At Brennan's, in the heart of New Orleans' historic French Quarter, a dinner favorite is Shrimp Romanoff. Here's how to make it with Betty Crocker Noodles Romanoff.

- 1 pkg. (4-serving size) Betty Crocker Noodles Romanoff
- 1 can (4½ oz.) shrimp, rinsed and drained
- 1 cup shredded Swiss cheese
- 1 tbsp. chopped chives

Heat oven to 350°. Prepare Noodles Romanoff as directed on package except—increase milk to ½ cup.

In 1½-quart casserole, layer half the noodles, the shrimp and cheese; top with remaining noodles. Sprinkle with chives. Cover and bake 15 to 20 minutes. 4 servings. Dinner rolls and a garden-fresh salad round out the meal.

Note: 1 can (6½ oz.) tuna, drained, can be substituted for the shrimp.

sponge. Rinse the sponge frequently.

- A final touch—polish with a soft dry cloth, if you want.

As in most cleaning situations, particularly dirty areas may need a second application of the cleaner or longer waiting time.

REMEMBER THESE PRECAUTIONS

- Aerosol oven cleaners are very strong cleaning solutions and must be used with care.
- When using one, protect your face and clothing and spread newspapers over your kitchen floor.

- Wash off any cleaner which may get on your hands or arms. Even with the cleaners that don't require rubber gloves this is a wise precaution.

- Store containers out of reach of youngsters. If an accident should occur, remedies are clearly printed on all containers; read these carefully and follow them.

LOTS FROM LITTLE

Take a very little bit of space (in this case an apartment kitchen), add a vivacious woman whose love of cooking and entertaining demands a lot of space and a congenial husband who likes to get his two cents' worth in the kitchen—and you'll have the problem Chet and Eleanor Stackpole of New York City had. With careful planning on what they personally needed for a good kitchen, the Stackpoles squeezed quite a bit out of their tiny space.

Plan (below) shows how the basic Pullman layout was improved by careful attention to details and planning of specific work areas.

SLIPCOVERS ARE NOT ONLY FOR SUMMER

Have you ever thought of changing the season with slipcovers? Don't be put off by thinking they're just for summertime sprucing up. Why not slipcover for winter and give your rooms a new zest for the holidays just around the corner? With Christmas coming up you're probably not prepared to reupholster or to buy new furniture.

And anyway, with all the excitement, brightness, and color of fall in the air, you're tempted to do something about that wilted-looking sofa. So slipcover it. Those dining room chairs you inherited with seat cushions in blue? Don't just sit there wishing they were red. Slipcover them. You have doubts about the club chair you bought for such a bargain? Take another look. All really needs is a slipcover.

Slipcovering will give you the opportunity you've been hoping for to restyle your furniture. You can do away with that leggy look and take on sleek, light line by putting a tailored skirt on your slipcover with a crisp pleat in each corner. And don't be afraid to enjoy yourself. Apart from the useful aspects of slipcovering, you should find sheer pleasure in creating something new from something old by this simple decorating device of camouflage.

SLIPCOVER OR REUPHOLSTER?

How do you decide whether to slipcover or reupholster? Let's consider the possibilities. We'll use an ordinary sofa as a test case since this is usually the first piece of upholstered furniture to show signs of fatigue. Whatever the reasons, the sofa looks drab and says so.

To determine the essential pull back the muslin duvet cover on the bottom to see whether the construction is in good condition. Are the springs sagging? The webbing frayed or splitting? Take a look at the cushions too. They may need more pepping up than a new cover can promise. If this is the case, you should probably reupholster.

But let's assume your sofa is in good shape except for neglected, faded, or otherwise unattractive face. This is the case for a slipcover.

CHOOSING A FABRIC

You'll save yourself grief if you recognize at this stage what a frustrating chore deciding on a fabric can become. The choice is too wide and life is too short to consider them all. Favorite and ideal fabrics for slipcovers include natural linens, cottons, combinations of natural and synthetic fibers, sailcloth, denim, twill. Don't get lost. Look at a few samples and bury the impulse to research the entire market.

If your cover will be only for the winter, consider suede cloth, corduroy, or felt fabric. Here's a good tip: chintz or lightweight cotton can be quilted in any number of patterns and have a clever way of bulking up a thin-looking sofa. They can also make a contemporary piece look traditional. In any case, select a firm, close weave so that as the slipcover it will hold its shape and position.

Patterns, colors, and designs in slipcover material are coun-

The Art of Almond Cookery

Almonds are the wonderfully versatile nuts you use for everything from appetizers to luscious desserts. Now they're available in several ready-to-use forms, each of which lends its own subtle color, texture and flavor to recipes like these.

WHOLE NATURAL • Sprinkle with seasoned salt; serve with curried beef or lamb • Chop and add to tuna or salmon mixture for salads or sandwiches • Add, with a thimbleful of Sherry wine if you wish, to thick white sauce; pour over hot cauliflower • Add to apple Betty • Stuff, with cream cheese, into dates • Use to garnish puddings, Bavarian creams, cheesecake.*

WHOLE BLANCHED • Salt lightly, add to fresh fruit salad plates • Sprinkle over frozen or canned chicken chow mein or chop suey • Chop, add to meat loaves • Add to sauce or gravy for chicken or salmon souffles • Mix into fruit cake batters; use with peach upside-down cakes • Sprinkle over ice cream topped with butterscotch, fudge or pineapple sundae sauce.*

SLICED NATURAL • Scatter over creamed baby onions or tiny buttered new potatoes just before serving • Mix into cheese sauce for asparagus or broccoli • Mix with mayonnaise, sour cream or cottage cheese, fill pear or peach halves • Add to Hollandaise sauce for steak • Mix into filling for cooked green peppers • Fold into frosting mix with dried fruit and a little apricot liqueur or nectar.*

DICED ROASTED • Mix with butter, chopped onion and parsley, fill mushroom caps and broil for a delicious hors d'oeuvre or meat garnish • Mix into tartar sauce for fish, or barbecue sauce for burgers • Sprinkle with crumbs over tuna-noodle or macaroni and cheese casserole • Add to batter for chocolate or oatmeal cookies • Mix into streusel topping for apple, peach and berry pies or puddings.

GROUND BLANCHED ALMONDS • Toss with grated lemon rind and melted butter, sprinkle over cooked spinach and broil until lightly browned • Use for coating broiled, baked or fried chicken or fish • Mix into stuffing for fowl, fish or baked stuffed lobster • Use in Scandinavian-type cakes and pastries; in crusts for pies and cheesecake.

less. Keep in mind the shape of the piece in relation to pattern. While rectangular forms take readily to stripes, plaids, and all-over patterns, curvilinear shapes should have an irregular pattern or one with a motif that can be centered on the seat or back.

MEASURING FOR FABRIC

You'll find it's folly to buy fabric unless you're sure of your measurements or ask advice on how much to order. Tell the sales person the height and width of your sofa or chair, whether it has loose or tight cushions, and if it has a skirt. This will make a difference in the amount of fabric you purchase. And naturally, the narrower the width the more yardage you'll require.

If you want a large pattern you will need more fabric than a solid requires because you need enough to match the design. You also may want to order enough extra fabric to make curtains, pillows, or "sleeves" that can be removed easily for washing.

SOIL-RESISTANCE AND SHRINKAGE

When you've made your choice ask about soil-resistant processes fabrics can be treated with today. You'll realize it's worth the small extra charge when you won't have to remove the slipcover for cleaning as often.

Since slipcovers should be well-tailored and glove tight, minimum shrinkage is allowable. Most fabrics are pre-shrunk, of course, in addition to being treated for fading but, by all means, don't take it for granted.

WHAT WILL IT COST?

Well, are you going to make them yourself or have them made? If you make them yourself your costs will be more or less confined to fabric, trimming, and zippers. Unless you fall madly in love with an expensive fabric you should be able to find something just right for about $5 a yard.

If you decide to have them made professionally, you will have an additional cost for labor. An average labor charge for sofa slipcovers is between $55 and $75, and between $35 and $55 for a large, upholstered chair. Slip seats for dining chairs are from $10 apiece for a simple covering to $15 if the seats need reupholstering. Labor prices for slipcovers make it important that the piece you are covering is worth it, otherwise it's better to put your money to-

Del Monte Stewed Tomatoes...your shortcut to flavor. Ready-seasoned with onion, celery, green pepper. Great-value tomatoes. You and Del Monte make a good thing special.

TOMATO STUFFED PEPPERS

1 lb. pork sausage or ground beef
2 cans (1-lb. each) Del Monte® Brand Stewed Tomatoes
1 cup fresh bread crumbs
½ tsp. salt
Dash pepper
1 Tbsp. cornstarch
Shredded Parmesan cheese

Cut peppers in half lengthwise. Remove seeds and membrane. Parboil 10 min.; drain. Brown meat; drain off excess fat. Add 1 can Stewed Tomatoes, bread crumbs, seasonings. Mix well. Stuff peppers with meat mixture. Place in individual casseroles or 12x7-in. baking dish. Blend cornstarch with second can Stewed Tomatoes. Cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Pour over stuffed peppers. Bake at 350°F., 25 min. or till peppers are tender. Serve with Parmesan cheese. Serves 4.

ward reupholstery or the purchase of a new piece. Reupholstering is usually almost double the cost of slipcovering. While the labor charge for reupholstery is only about a third more you will probably spend twice as much for your fabric. This is reasonable, after all, since they serve different purposes.

Interior designers charge for their services as well as fabric and labor costs. On the other hand, most upholstery departments in furniture stores offer free customer service whereby a representative from the store will bring fabric samples to your home, measure, and estimate the price (which will include the cost of both the fabric and the labor).

Unlike many decorating jobs which you may be considering, you will find that making slipcovers or having them made for you is one of the most practical, inexpensive, and best ways to give your room just the lift it needs—for any season.

WHAT TO LOOK FOR IN WASHERS AND DRYERS

By Virginia T. Habeeb

We ask more of our laundry equipment today than ever before. As always we want a washer that will wash our clothes clean and a dryer that will dry them. But a new dimension has been added to our laundry load—special finishes and fabrics that demand special care, such as selective water and drying temperatures, variable wash, spin and dry speeds, even special cycles to “iron” your clothes. There are washers and dryers on the market today that can do just that—at varying degrees of convenience to you! Our Buyer's Guide below lists the major washer-and-dryer features that are available. The ones that give the most flexibility and convenience will naturally cost more. But remember, it is not always necessary to buy the top of the line to get quality performance. Even economy-price models offer some flexibility for your wash load.

TYPES OF WASHERS

Programmed washers

These machines are so automated you only set a single control—for the type of load you are washing (such as normal, delicate, permanent press, or wash-and-wear)—and the machine is preset to make the decisions about water temperatures, agitation, spin speeds, etc. If you do not have or do not wish to take the time to concern yourself with making these decisions and setting the proper controls, you might seriously consider spending the extra money for this feature.

Automatic washers

These machines have an assortment of push buttons and controls to regulate individually speeds, temperatures, time, etc. If you want the flexibility and the responsibility of making these decisions yourself, you will find many models of this type of washer—from the very inexpensive with only basic components for good washing results to top-of-the-line models with maximum flexibility for specialized washing.

WASHER FEATURES

If you are a busy housewife or a working mother with a voluminous weekly wash load . . . if you take full advantage of no-iron fabrics and finishes . . . if you'll pay extra for convenience, these features will interest you:

Complete water temperature selection

Multiple agitation and spin speeds

Slower agitation speeds are important for delicate fabrics, slower spin speeds for no-iron garments. Most washers with multiple speeds offer a selection of 2, 3, or 4 speeds. However, a few washers with solid-state controls (which have no moving parts) have an infinite range of speeds (very slow hand wash to regular wash-speed).

Permanent press or wash-and-wear cycle

These cycles generally provide in some way for a “cool down” of the clothes during the transition period between hot-water washing and spinning to minimize wrinkling of clothes.

Automatic dispensers for detergent, bleach, and fabric softener

If you're a young married with many demands for your money such as acquiring a home or buying furniture . . . if your weekly wash load is small with a minimum of items requiring special conditions, you may want to confine yourself to some of the lower-price models and investigate basic features for good washing results:

Limited water temperature selection

Two wash waters (hot and warm) and one (warm) to two (warm and cold) rinse-water choices.

Two to three washing cycles

Normal for most of your washing, delicate for wash-and-wear or lingerie, and soak for extra-dirty items.

Safety spin

Lid locks while washer is spinning or spinning stops when lid is raised or washer opened.

Water level selection

You can adjust the amount of water you use according to the size of the load.

Unbalanced control

TYPES OF DRYERS

Automatic drying controls

Electronic sensing controls actually feel the moisture in your clothes, turn off the dryer when they are dry. This takes guesswork out of drying—a good investment if your budget allows.

Timed controls

A timer control turns the dryer off at the end of a specified length of time which you set. Good for limited budgets but does require more time and attention to get wash properly dried.

DRYER FEATURES

Automatic cycles

Provide the correct temperature and timing for the type of load you are drying. Controls are set for the load type (heavy fabric, delicate, damp-dry, permanent press, or wash-and-wear).

Wash-and-wear or permanent-press cycles

Optimum drying temperature for these fabrics with special cool-down period at end.

Speed selection

Signal

Lets you know when drying has stopped.

Basics to do a good job of drying include:

Many dryers offer at least two temperature selections—a normal all-purpose drying temperature and an air-only setting with no heat.

Some dryers in the medium-price range also offer a wider range of temperature settings.

Cool-down period

Most dryers now incorporate a cool-down period (5 to 10 minutes of tumbling with no heat) at the end of the drying cycle. This makes clothes comfortable to handle and minimizes wrinkling of permanent-press or wash-and-wear items.

Features to consider in all dryers include:

Lint filter

Venting

The hot, moist air given off by a dryer must be disposed of in some way. This is easiest done by venting it to the outdoors. If you cannot do this, there are no-vent models which condense the water vapor with cold water. These dryers need a cold-water connection and a drain.

WASHER AND DRYER SPACE

For a standard washer and dryer, you'll need about 26x30" of floor space for each unit.

If space is tight and you don't have the room for both a washer and a dryer, you may be interested in a combination washer-dryer or washer and dryer models that stack. These take about the same space as a single washer or dryer.

Also available is a portable dryer, two-and-a-half feet high, that can be stored in a closet. It uses a 115-volt circuit, holds about half of a normal dryer load.

HOW CLEAN YOUR CLOTHES?

There are many pros and cons on the cleaning powers of the various designs of washer agitators and tub formations. Actually they all do a satisfactory job of cleaning your clothes with the proper amount and kind of detergent, careful sorting, and the right amount of clothes for the size of the tub (they should be able to move freely in the tub) and the water level.

There are many good brands that merit your attention. Buy quality—a good brand name from a reputable dealer who promises good service. Prices range from as low as $150 for washers, $110 for dryers (these have a minimum of special washing and drying features) to around $320 for washers, $270 for dryers (these incorporate the ultimate in automation and convenience). The following are manufacturers who have sent us a listing of their latest automatic washer and dryer features: AMC, Blackstone, Centrex, Easy, Fedders, Frigidaire, General Electric, Hamilton, Hoover, Hotpoint, Kelvinator, Kenmore, Maytag, Norge, Penncrest, Philco-Ford, Speed Queen, Wards Signature, Westinghouse, Whirlpool.

Maybe your automatic washer isn't automatic enough.

Most manufacturers say their washers are automatic—and then expect you to clean the filter by hand.

Whirlpool thinks this is a dirty trick. After all, if you wanted to clean things by hand, you wouldn't buy an automatic in the first place.

So we've invented a filter that cleans itself. The Magic Clean® filter.

You never have to touch it. You may never even see it. We tuck it away in the heart of the machine.

So we've written Magic Clean filter on the control panel.

We want you to remember we didn't just sell you an automatic.

BUILD A BASEMENT THAT'S EASY TO REMODEL

By MAXWELL C. HUNTOON JR.

Every so often, thumbing through magazines, I run across pictures of sumptuously remodeled basements. They are bright and spacious, with sparkling floors, richly paneled walls, and off in a corner there is a bar that is big enough for a nightclub.

These pictures are always accompanied by such cheerful phrases as, "You too can turn your basement into a palace of pleasure like this."

My basement? Go soak your head. My basement is a perilous cavern with pipes crisscrossing under the ceiling joists and teensy little windows that keep out light but let in cold air. One room is finished off and it's a vast improvement on what used to be there. But the ceiling is so low that a friend of mine who is six-foot-six gets a wild, claustrophobic look in his eye at the mere mention of the place. And the rest of the basement is hopeless. I'd have to spend a fortune to move the pipes. There's a beam that catches the top of my skull (I'm only five-foot-ten). And the only reason there aren't three inches of water on the floor during spring thaws is that I had a big, expensive waterproofing job done.

Granted there isn't much I can do about this situation now. But if I could start all over again from scratch, I'd build a basement that could be turned into a veritable Taj Mahal.

This sounds like it involves a lot of money, but it really doesn't. Remember we're only talking about designing it so that it can be finished later on. Even in a big house, an extra $200 or $300 can make the difference between a basement like mine and one that can be turned into a living area almost as nice as the upstairs. How? Listen closely.

MAKE THE CEILING HIGHER

There's a tradition among builders that foundation walls should have eleven courses of concrete block; if you deduct four inches for the thickness of the floor slab, this makes the basement ceiling just over 7 feet high—too low for comfort. One more course of block will raise it to 7 feet 8 inches, almost as much as upstairs ceilings, and two more courses will make it fit for a basketball game.

For a house 36x28 feet, one extra course will take about 90 blocks; the cost will run between $50 and $75 in most areas. The excavation will have to be deeper so the house doesn't stick too far out of the ground; an hour or two of extra bulldozer work, worth about $25 to $50, should do it.

BUILD WITH GIRDERS FLUSH

Girders are those heavy beams that run down the middle of the basement to support the first-floor joists; the usual practice is to rest the floor joists on top of them. But if the girder is raised and the joists hung off the side of it, there won't be a beam sticking down into your future poolroom.

One more thing about girders: If they are made of steel instead of wood, they will need fewer lally columns—steel posts—for support.

TUCK PIPES OUT OF THE WAY

Some pipes can be run up between the joists, but those that run at right angles to the joists have to be hidden somewhere else. Here's a trick stolen from a builder friend:

On top of the foundation wall there is a continuous piece of 2x6 lumber called a sill; the joists rest on it, leaving a pocket about 4 inches deep and 1½ inches high. If a second 2x6 is put on top of the first, forming a double sill, the pocket becomes more than 3 inches high, and there is adequate space to run several pipes. The cost should be no more than a few dollars.

A point to remember: Some of these pipes will have valves. They should be grouped together as much as possible, so that when you close in the ceiling a couple of hinged panels will provide access. And put labels on the valves; once the ceiling is up, you won't be able to trace the pipes to see which valve controls which fixture.

If the house is heated by hot air, the ducts will prove harder to hide than hot-water pipes. The best answer is to keep the ducts out on the perimeter of the basement, have them made wider and flatter than usual, then paint them or box them in when you finish off the ceiling.

PUT IN BIGGER WINDOWS

The only problem here is that big windows require more of the basement wall to be above ground, while most houses look better when they hug the ground. A practical compromise is to put the windows along the rear of the house where the higher foundation won't show as much. The extra cost will depend on the window size and type.

WATERPROOF CORRECTLY

Most builders do some waterproofing, but few do enough. Block walls should have at least two heavy coats of asphalt waterproofing compound on the outside before the excavation is backfilled. And if the site is unusually wet (like mine), the walls could be covered with panels containing a substance called activated bentonite costing about 5¢ a square foot. Expensive, but it works.

That's all there is to it. Now you can look at those magazine pictures and smile smugly. Your basement can be even better.

WINTERIZING YOUR POWER MOWER

By ROBERT J. BERGER

The time to clean and lubricate your power mower is not next spring but now, before months of idleness cause rust and deterioration troubles.

BURN OUT ALL GAS

First, start the engine and allow it to run until the gas supply is exhausted. Merely draining the tank won't do the trick. Gas will remain in the carburetor and fuel lines and form a clogging, gummy varnish that will make the mower hard to start when you take it out of storage in the spring.

If the tank is nearly full you can speed storage servicing by draining off most of the fuel before starting the engine. For safety's sake, do not drain fuel while the engine is running. Ignition sparking may ignite the vapors, causing fire.

If the gas tank doesn't have a drain plug, you'll have to uncouple the fuel line so that the gas can run out. Leave enough fuel in the tank so that the engine can run several minutes. That will be sufficient for a thorough warm-up.

After the engine sputters to a stop, undo the spark-plug cable. If the air cleaner contains oil, remove its bowl. Next, raise the mower on its side and unscrew the crankcase drain plug. On most mowers the drain plug is located under the blade housing. To avoid damaging the corners of the drain plug, it should be removed with a wrench, not pliers. The plug may be tight, and even a good-fitting wrench can slip, so turn the blade to a position that will allow plenty of knuckle room.

Some mower manufacturers place a copper gasket under the drain plug. The gasket can easily fall off unnoticed if the plug is removed carelessly. After removing the drain plug, stand the mower back on its wheels and allow the oil to drain. Running the engine will have warmed the oil so that it will flow out completely. This is bound to be a messy operation—if you're working indoors spread newspapers on the floor and use a pan to catch the oil.

When the oil has been drained, re-install the drain plug. Half fill the crankcase with kerosene. Then rock the mower back and forth as vigorously as possible to slosh the kerosene around. Flushing in this way will loosen sludge that has accumulated in the crankcase. Next, remove the drain plug and allow the kerosene to empty completely. If the drained kerosene appears very dirty, flushing should be repeated. Finally, flush with a small quantity of light oil (SAE 10) to wash away remaining socket wrench. Lacking this, a box wrench will do but pliers are taboo. They're apt to slip and crack the body of the plug.

Discard the plug if it has been in use a full season or if the electrodes (the parts where the spark occurs) are badly worn. Indications of excessive wear are a center electrode burned down nearly flush with the threaded part of the plug, or a side recommended, this is something most home owners do, if only because the automotive plug happens to be handy. The wrong plug may cause hard starting or erratic running. Most lawn-mower engines require specially designed "industrial plugs." Plugs are marked with a code number—look for it on the porcelain base of the plug. If you're in doubt that the plug is the right one, make a note of the plug code number and consult your dealer.

When installing a new plug, don't neglect to check the spark gap (the distance between the electrodes). The gap is not preset at the factory, as is often assumed. Consult your mower manual or engine instruction label for the recommended gap. Usually, this will be .025 inches. If you do not have a feeler gauge, several thicknesses of a road map will provide that spacing. Adjust the gap by bending the side electrode until you can feel a very slight drag on the gauge as you slide between the electrodes. To reduce the gap, lightly tap the side electrode with a small hammer or the end of a screwdriver handle. To increase the gap, bend the side electrode outward with slim-nose pliers; use care to avoid damaging the center electrode.

If the old plug passes inspection, clean the electrodes with a penknife blade and wire brush, then set the gap as already described.

While the plug is out, pour a tablespoon of engine oil into the plug hole. Crank the engine slowly to distribute the oil over the cylinder walls, piston, and valve. This will provide a protective coating that will last through the storage period.

Install the plug by turning it in hand-tight. Then turn it with a socket wrench until it is snug. No more than 1/8 to 1/10 of a turn with the wrench will be needed. Overtightening may break the plug, strip the threads in the spark plug hole, or compress the plug gasket to such an extent that it cannot provide a seal.

SPRUCE-UP BLADE

With a putty knife, scrape off the caked dirt and grass cuttings that have accumulated on the underside of the blade housing. Follow this by scrubbing the surface with a stiff brush dipped in kerosene. After thoroughly cleaning the housing, inspect it for cracks. Vibration or stones propelled by the blade may have caused such damage. If the (continued)

PUMPKIN PIE

2 envelopes Knox
Unflavored Gelatine
1/2 cup cold milk
1/2 cup milk, heated to boiling
3/4 cup firmly packed brown sugar
2 cups canned pumpkin
1/2 teaspoon salt

1 teaspoon cinnamon
3/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1/4 teaspoon ginger
1 cup heavy cream
1 cup ice cubes or crushed ice
9-inch graham cracker

Sprinkle gelatine over cold milk in blender container. Allow to stand while assembling other ingredients. Then add boiling milk; cover and process at low speed until gelatine dissolves. If any gelatine granules cling to container, use rubber spatula to push them into mixture. Add brown sugar, pumpkin, salt, spices and cream; cover and process at high speed. Add ice cubes one at a time. Process until mixture is smooth and ice melted. Chill about 5 minutes and turn into prepared crust. Chill until firm. Yield: One 9-inch pie.

After reinstalling the drain plug, fill the crankcase with fresh oil. Consult your mower instruction manual or check the engine label to find what grade of oil is recommended. If in doubt, use SAE 30. Don't use a heavier oil (one with a higher number) in the mistaken belief that it will provide better lubrication.

CAREFUL WITH PLUG

Brush thoroughly around the spark plug to remove all dirt and bits of grass, then remove the plug with a electrode that has become deeply grooved. If you're at all uncertain, buy a new plug. To make certain that you get the right one, jot down the name and number of your engine. Your dealer will need this information because plugs differ greatly and poor performance results if the wrong type plug is used.

Incidentally, don't assume that the plug presently in the engine is of the proper type. You or someone in the family may at some time have installed an automobile spark plug in the mower engine. Though definitely not

So why isn't he painting? Repairing a rusted downspout? Or freeing a window that's stuck? Instead of just relaxing? □ Those chores don't exist where he lives. His house is wrapped in vinyl siding with color that goes clear through; painting is unnecessary. Gutters and downspouts are vinyl, too, and can't rust out. Even the windows are cased in vinyl, slide freely in all kinds of weather. Vinyl shutters add lasting beauty. □ New products made of Geon® vinyl enter the home building picture regularly. As each one does, homeowners get more leisure time. Vinyl is easy to maintain, resists weather, won't conduct heat or cold, will not support combustion. housing is cracked, or if any other professional service is required, take the mower to your dealer now, to avoid the rush next spring.

If the blade hasn't been sharpened since last season, remove it by pulling out the cotter pin and undoing the nut on the drive shaft. Let your dealer sharpen the blade. It's possible to do the job yourself, but it's not really worth the trouble. And accurately balancing the blade to keep vibration to a minimum is a fussy job.

When reinstalling the blade, snug up the nut tightly. Use a new cotter pin. The blade may turn as fast as 4000 revolutions per minute and exert a force of more than 10,000 pounds per square inch. So for safety, double check all your work to be sure everything is securely fastened in place.

AVOID FUTURE TROUBLE

Clean the outside of the engine with brush and kerosene. You'll find it easy to remove dirt from tight spots if you work with a cloth wrapped around the tip of a screwdriver. Use this technique to clean out the fins on the cylinder and head. If deposits are allowed to build up, heat won't be dissipated properly and the engine may eventually be damaged.

With wrench or screwdriver tighten any bolts or screws that may have become loosened by engine vibration.

If the throttle linkage has pivots or other points of friction, lubricate with a drop or two of light oil. Axles should be lightly greased.

Chipped spots on the engine or blade housing can be touched up with an aerosol spray paint. This is important not so much for appearance as for rust prevention. If the surface is chipped down to bare metal, sand thoroughly to remove rust, then spray with metal primer before applying finish paint. To insure good adhesion, wipe the surface clean before priming. Touching up the engine calls for a special paint that can withstand heat. It's a standard item at auto supply stores.

CLEAN AIR FILTERS

If you drained oil from the air cleaner, refill with new oil to indicated level. Dunk the filter element in gasoline to remove dirt and grit. Shake the element until it is dry, then reassemble. Some air cleaners do not contain oil. These use a metal foil filter or a dry filter element. Either of these can be removed after taking off an outer screen. If your mower uses a metal foil filter, clean the filter and the outer screen in gasoline. Allow the filter to dry, then soak it in oil, let the excess drip off, and reassemble. Filters of the dry type can also be cleaned with gasoline, but require no oiling. A filter element that is torn or otherwise damaged should be replaced to avoid engine damage.

RIDING-TYPE MOWERS

Storage servicing is similar for large, riding-type mowers, but additional steps are required. Remove the battery and store it in a cool, dry place. It's recommended by most manufacturers that the battery be charged before storage and recharged every month during the storage period.

To prevent corrosion from forming, grease the battery terminal posts with petroleum jelly or other lubricant after cleaning the posts thoroughly. Large machines having drive belts, cables, or chains under tension should have these parts slackened.

If the mower has pneumatic tires they should be inflated to the correct pressure. Then the mower should be placed on blocks. Complete storage servicing by attaching the mower instruction manual and any special tools to the mower handle, to save searching next season. Finally, don't save a partially filled container of gas for use in the spring. Condensation may form, and cause starting problems. Besides, stored gasoline is lethal—both poisonous and flammable.

By following the above procedures now, you will save a lot of bother next spring—possibly even a repair bill. By following them each fall, you'll be assured of maximum life and efficiency from your mower.

GARDENIAS FOR YOUR INDOOR GARDEN

How many gardenia plants failed you before you reluctantly decided you couldn't raise them indoors? We would like to encourage you to try again—keeping in mind this time that it is not a house-plant you can place on the windowsill and simply water now and then. The gardenia demands daily care but you'll be rewarded by rich green, glossy leaves and sculptured flowers with the headiest perfume on earth.

Veitchi, cape jasmine, and radicans gardenias are easy for beginners to grow. Cape jasmine has the largest blooms, and radicans is small and spreading with tiny flowers and leaves. Radicans blooms almost all year long but is most prolific in late spring. Veitchi is the most commonly sold and a relatively inexpensive gardenia. It has shiny green leaves and flowers from two to three inches.

THE RIGHT CLIMATE

No matter what type of gardenia you select, you won't succeed unless you give it proper attention. Put your plant in the sunniest window—gardenias must have full sunlight all year round. Soil must be rich, acid, and quick draining (half soil, half peat-moss works well), with more or less constant moisture. But gardenias don't like cold, wet roots. Experiment with watering until you hit on just the right amount. Gardenias also must have high humidity in the atmosphere around them, so spray the foliage every day—several times a day during the summer. It's good to grow them on gravel over water-filled trays—evaporation will raise the humidity of the air.

The temperature is also important. It should not go above 70 degrees during the day or below 60 degrees at night. Electric heating cables (10 or 12 watts) under the plants will keep them warm in winter if room temperature falls below 60 degrees. Water less in winter. Your plants won't respond to constantly wet, cold soil.

KINDS OF PLANT FOOD

Gardenias need lots of plant food. Any complete house-plant food will do. Use half the recommended amount once every two weeks, or full amount once a month. Or feed gardenias once a month with a solution of ammonium sulfate (one ounce in two gallons water).

WHAT AILS YOUR PLANT?

Almost everyone who has grown gardenias has been confronted with yellowing leaves. This is caused by extremely alkaline soil and may quickly defoliate a plant. To remedy it, treat the plant with a solution of iron sulfate—one ounce in two gallons of water. Feed plant with this once a month to maintain soil acidity and to keep leaves glossy and healthy.

The most frustrating gardenia ailment is bud drop. Just when you think that fat bud is going to burst into flower, it falls off the stem. Don't be discouraged. Move it to a sunnier spot and give it more water. If the air is dry around it, mist the foliage with water every day.

Gardenias may need pampering but they will respond with gusto to your tender ministrations.

HOW TO MAINTAIN GUTTERS AND DOWNSPOUTS

By MERLE E. DOWD

Well-cared-for gutters and downspouts are just as important for a dry house as a watertight roof. Stopped-up or leaky gutters can:

- Direct a trickle of water into an attic or ceiling area.
- Allow water seepage into masonry walls, resulting in efflorescent stains and possible rotting of the wood framing.
- Wet the under surfaces of wood or shingle siding to cause curling or paint peeling on the exterior.
- Stain brick, stone, or painted wood siding from dirty runover water.

CLEANING

Check gutters at least twice a year, certainly after leaves have fallen, before winter sets in. Check again in the spring before heavy rains. A brush nailed to a stick allows you to clean a long stretch of gutter from one ladder position. A scoop formed from heavy aluminum foil in the shape of the gutter can help remove leaves and debris, provided accumulation is not excessive.

Strainers at the gutter outlets prevent leaves from plugging downspouts. A continuous metal leaf guard across the top of gutters keeps debris out. Simplest to install and to remove for painting or maintenance is a series of three- or four-foot sections that snap into standard gutter sections. Also available from hardware or mail-order sources is a continuous roll of six-inch-wide aluminum mesh or hardware cloth. Slip one edge under the drip edge of shingles. Water can run into the gutter, but leaves and twigs blow or roll off.

Downspouts become clogged most often at the elbow joints. Remove screws at the joints and disassemble downspouts from the wall. Pick out the twigs and leaves. Be especially thorough if downspouts connect directly into tile that leads to a storm sewer or dry well. Wash down the unclogged gutter and downspout with a hose before reinstallation.

If a plugged downspout cannot be easily removed for cleaning, use an auger designed for unplugging sewer drains. When a small opening is bored through the blockage, attack the rest of it by flushing with a hose.

PAINTING

Gutters are often painted outside to match the rest of the house. But each different gutter material presents problems. Peeling paint most often is the complaint.

Galvanized steel is the most-used gutter material because it is least expensive, strongest (fewer supports

Aluminum gutters usually have an oily coating left from rolling or forming which prevents paint or primer from adhering. So, clean the surface with a grease-cutting solvent. Prime the clean, dry surface with zinc chromate or other primer designed for aluminum.

Plastic gutters may be either a solid vinyl or a polyester resin reinforced with glass fiber. Neither gutter mate-after the gutters are in place, and with a coating specifically intended for this purpose.

Wood gutters are the easiest to paint. Apply a prime coat thinned 50 percent with turpentine or linseed oil. Follow with two coats of oil-base house paint.

TREAT INSIDE OF GUTTERS

Ordinary paint inside gutters is, at best, ineffective.

- Galvanized gutters deteriorate rapidly after standing water rusts through the zinc coating, particularly if leaves are allowed to accumulate.

To protect the bottom trough of gutters, brush on a thick layer of asphalt roof coating, preferably one containing asbestos fibers and aluminum flakes. Or make your own coating from a plastic roof cement thinned to a thick brushing consistency. Recoat every two years. More expensive but longer lasting is a coating of polysulfide rubber, either a two-part or one-part mixture (available usually from larger building-supply or building specialty houses). Remove all dirt and loose rust or particles of any previous coating. If rusty, prime the rust spots with a damp-proof metal primer before coating with roof cement.

- All aluminum, copper, bronze, vinyl, or glass-fiber gutters need no interior treatment.

- Wood gutters are usually pressure treated before installation and may be cut from naturally decay-resistant redwood or cedar. The life of wood gutters can be extended by treatments with boiled linseed oil or pentachlorophenol, which is an excellent rot inhibitor.

REPAIRING LEAKS

Small leaks in zinc-coated gutters can be closed with a daub of elastic roof cement. If you find one leak, examine the entire gutter and head off further leaks by coating the bottom. Large holes may need a patch. Clean the area, coat with plastic roof cement, then lay a heavy canvas or aluminum foil piece over the sticky cement. Cover the top and edges with another smoothed layer of plastic cement. If an entire section of several feet is riddled with holes, saw out the section with a hacksaw and solder in a new section. A long-term solution for gutters that are built in and expensive to replace is to line the leaky gutter with a layer of glass-fiber matting and resin. Buy both from a marine store (continued) needed), and can be soldered easily for leakproof joints. But the bright zinc coating is too slick for paints when new. Two solutions are possible: 1) Let galvanized gutters weather naturally for six months to a year. 2) Clean thoroughly with a grease-cutting solvent such as mineral spirits. Rinse thoroughly. After weathering or cleaning, prime the gutters with an undercoat specifically designed for galvanized metal. If you can find a color match, apply final coating of a moisture-resistant paint suitable for application to metal surfaces.

rial needs painting for protection. But, if you want the gutters to match the house, there are paints available for application to these materials. Just be sure the one you select is for exterior use.

Copper or bronze gutters and downspouts will stain light-colored brick or wood unless coated. Clean thoroughly and apply a metal primer. Follow with matching paint, preferably a paint for metal. If you prefer to see the copper or bronze color, spray or brush on a clear coating. This should be done as quickly as possible or by mail. Clean the metal surface, apply a coating of resin, and press the glass-fiber sheet into the wet resin. Apply a second and possibly a third coating of resin over the top. Either fold liner over top of metal gutter or cover with cup flashing.

Gutters assembled with slip joints may leak when the old sealant hardens and cracks. Clean out the old sealant, then reassemble joints with silicone or polysulfide rubber, which remains flexible for 10 to 30 years.

Soldered joints in galvanized or copper gutters may break loose. Wire-brush the surfaces to expose clean metal, then resolder. Use a high-heat soldering iron rather than a propane torch to control heat. After soldering, apply a slurry of sodium bicarbonate around the joint; rinse to remove any acid flux.

CHECK DRAIN SLOPE

Leaks frequently result from water that stands in low spots of the gutter. Standing water also may allow mosquitoes to breed. House settling or slippage of supports may have disturbed the gutter slope. A slope of 1/16 inch per foot is about the minimum necessary to assure draining. A quick way to check slope is to rub cement a 1/16-inch strip at one end of a one-foot level. With the filler end toward the outlet, center the bubble for correct slope. Adjust hangers as necessary for even and distinct slope from high end to the downspout outlet. As a final check, pour water from a bucket at the high end to check proper flow. If flow is sluggish, or if water remains in any spot, correct the situation.

KEEP BASEMENT DRY

Surest way to a damp basement is wet ground around the foundation. Check the connection between the downspout outlet and an underground storm sewer for leaks. If the tile inlet is plugged, water will spill out onto the ground. If downspouts dump water directly onto the ground, install a concrete trough to carry the water away from the foundation. Better still, if a storm sewer is not available, develop a dry well near the corner of your lot and connect downspouts to it through underground tile.

WINTER WATER PROBLEMS

Repeated partial melting and freezing of roof snow can develop ice dams that force water under shingles and into the attic or ceiling. Prevent ice dams by installing a heating cable in a succession of W-shapes at the edge of the roof. Connecting the cable to an electric outlet supplies enough heat to prevent ice dam buildups. Cables are available from mail-order houses.

Plugged downspouts may also freeze, causing water to spill out of gutters or downspout joints to soak siding and possibly leak into the house. Removing leaves and twigs before cold weather hits is still the best way to prevent ice plugs. But if an ice plug does form, melt a small opening with a pressing iron or heating pad, working upward from the bottom end. As soon as a small passage is open, connect a hose to the hot-water supply inside the house and melt out the rest. If debris which caused the original stoppage remains, clean out as described previously.

In melting the small opening, remember that you're working with electricity in the presence of water. Wear rubber boots or overshoes, and be sure the electrical cord is in good condition. Use a heavy-duty extension cord to provide power, not the light-gauge type generally sold for indoor use with lamps. If you prefer, a gasoline or propane torch might be used to heat a soldering iron which, in turn, can be used to melt an opening.

One last word: leaks, rust and costly replacement of your gutters and downspouts can be prevented by a program of regular checks and thorough attention. Spend the necessary time and money now, to avoid a much higher bill later.

WHAT PRICE MAINTENANCE?

We've all been through it at one time or another. We stand nervously before a grave-faced man in a white coat who is saying to us:

"It's too bad. If you'd brought in your (car, TV set, lawn mower, toothache—check one) six months ago it would have been easy to fix. Now, I'm afraid, it will be a big job." It will also be an expensive job.

High on the list of potential wallet grabbers stands the house. It takes a heavy and continuous beating from the elements. And when something does go wrong there's often no time to dicker over prices or consider alternate cures. A leaking roof in April has to be fixed then, and the contractor who can resist the urge to charge emergency prices under such circumstances is a rare bird indeed.

Now there aren't any guarantees against bad luck. But assuming that your house was reasonably well built to begin with, a regular program of maintenance for its outer skin is a pretty good guarantee against the usual run of trouble. And there are only half a dozen or so areas that need to be occasionally repaired.

COSTLY TO DELAY PAINTING

Paint is thought of as purely cosmetic treatment by a surprising number of people. Actually it's all that stands between wood and weather, and if a good paint film isn't kept on the house, things go to pot in a hurry.

I deeply regret being able to offer my own house as an example. The previous owners were very, very casual about painting, and the result is that 1) all my windows need puttying, 2) half a dozen shutters have rotted out and need to be replaced, and 3) two casement windows have rotted and started to fall apart. There are big peeled areas on the trim that are going to take a lot of scraping before they can be repainted, and the house in general looks scrofulous.

Now if the paint had been well maintained, a fresh coat would cost me about $400; if I repainted every four years, the average cost would be $100 a year. (This doesn't count the occasional touching up of bad spots, which I would do myself.)

But as things are now, I am faced with this basket of goodies: about $200 worth of carpentry repairs before the painter can even start work, and then a scraping, puttying, priming and painting job that will separate me from $1200—if I'm lucky.

GUTTERS CAN BE EASY

Gutters represent on the one hand a very simple maintenance job (see "Maintaining Gutters and Downspouts," page 146) and on the other hand some nasty possibilities. Keeping gutters clean requires a hose, a stick to pry loose matted vegetation, a ladder, and a casual attitude toward heights. If you prefer keeping your feet on the ground, $15 to $20 should hire someone to get old leaves out, leaders flushed clean, and downspout strainers cleaned and properly repositioned. Unless you're in a real forest, one or two cleanouts a year should be plenty. But suppose this little job is ignored, and gutters clog.

Most gutters today are hung right up against the fascia board—the front plank of the eave structure. If they are perfectly hung they will overflow over the front lip, and only your foundation planting will suffer. But not all gutters are perfectly hung, and in any case a heavy rain will cause overflow over the back as well as the front. If this happens over a long enough period the fascia will start to rot, and if the gutter is wood it will rot too. Replacing both will cost at least $4 a lineal foot.

Want more? O.K., hang on. If the house has little or no roof overhang, gutter overflow may find its way behind the fascia board and into the wall. This can cause all sorts of fun and games: ruined plaster inside, peeled paint outside, and rotted studs and useless insulation in between.

DON'T FORGET THE ROOF

Roofs need astonishingly little maintenance considering the kind of beating they take, but it's still a good idea to have a competent roofing man go up and take a close look every couple of years. Otherwise the first sign of trouble may be a patch of wet, disintegrating plaster.

One type of roof, however, does need to be part of your regular maintenance program: cedar shingles. Left to themselves they will eventually curl, crack, and go to pieces. But if you treat them every five or six years with a preservative (roofing men and some painters know the formula) they will last just about forever. The cost shouldn't be much more than $100.

If you let a wood roof go to the point where it must be replaced, you'll face an unpleasant choice: a new cedar roof at jolting prices—as much as 75¢ a square foot—or a new asphalt roof which, while far cheaper, won't have the character of wood.

Termite protection can be covered in a very few words: If you're in termite territory and don't have an expert examine your house every year or so, you should have your head examined. If there's any question, have a termite-proofing job done—even though it can cost up to $300.

It may seem that we've been putting some big hunks of cash into maintenance. True—but don't forget the grave-faced man I mentioned earlier. Not spending will, in the long run, prove murderously expensive. By Maxwell C. Huntoon Jr.

PATCHING CONCRETE AND MASONRY

By BERNARD GLADSTONE

You probably think concrete is a permanent material that never needs repair. You are partly right. It is permanent, and it will last almost forever—but repeated freezing-thawing cycles, combined with settling of soil and foundation, can cause cracks.

These may be scarcely noticeable at first but they permit water to enter. If this water freezes and expands, the crack opens further and can cause bricks and blocks to work loose. In addition, ice-melting chemicals and strong solvents may cause flaking or powdering. Fortunately, if tackled soon enough most masonry repairs are fairly simple.

BASIC MIXES AND READY MIXES

For years, the basic patching material has been powdered Portland cement mixed with sand or with a combination of sand and gravel plus water.

For patching cracks in concrete walls and floors and small repairs on stucco, a mixture of one part cement and three parts fine sand is used. This is also used for patching defective mortar joints. However, for laying bricks or cement blocks, a mortar mix consisting of one part cement, one part lime, and three parts sand should be used.

If you have to replace a missing piece of sidewalk—or where a patch several inches deep is required—then you will need a concrete mix of one part cement, two parts sand, and three parts gravel.

With any of these, mix all the dry ingredients then add the water. The amount of water will vary with the type of job and the moisture content of the sand. For most cement-and-sand mixtures, add enough water to make a pliable mortar that will still be stiff enough to hold its shape when held on your trowel.

To eliminate measuring the ingredients and trying to buy materials in small quantities, you can buy dry, premixed concrete in bags.

These ready-mixed materials come in all three combinations and in sizes from 10 to 80 pounds. The only thing you add is the water. When using any of these premixed materials, first empty the bag into a pail or wheelbarrow. Mix the dry ingredients thoroughly with a shovel or hoe. Do this even if you plan to use only part of the bag. You can then pour the unused portion back, only adding water to the amount you need.

REPAIRING TECHNIQUES

Before making your patch, regardangular-pointed trowel for cracks and small patches, but you will need a plasterer's square trowel for the larger patches. Avoid excessive troweling which brings too much water and fine grit to the surface, weakening the patch.

If you are replacing a broken section of a sidewalk or patio floor, you will use a gravel mix, rather than a sand mix. Otherwise the procedure

One is a dry powdered mix fortified with vinyl or epoxy; the other is a two-part latex cement that consists of a dry powder and a liquid latex packaged separately.

The vinyl compound requires only the addition of water. The latex type is prepared by mixing the liquid latex and the cement without using water. Either one will form a bond that is much stronger than ordinary patching cement without additives.

The vinyl and the latex cements both eliminate the need for undercutting the edges of cracks, and they do not require that the surface be dampened beforehand. They can be smoothly spread on in layers as thin as a sixteenth of an inch, permitting you to neatly "feather" edges.

These materials are ideal for resurfacing rough walks or steps without chopping out all of the old concrete first. Since ordinary patching cement must be at least a half inch thick to bond properly, and will not hold unless the patch is more than one inch deep in all places, you can use these plastic cements when you have only a small chip or broken corner to patch.

They also solve the problem of cementing bricks or blocks along the edges of stoops or walls. With ordinary cement or mortar you'd have to chip out all the old mortar first. These new types permit you to spread on a thin layer that will hold the brick just as well as thick mortar.

Because many of them will bond to painted surfaces, vinyl and latex cements also provide the ideal solution for smoothing over chipped or cracked areas on painted basement floors, etc. You mix and apply them much as you would patching plaster or spackling compound.

Many of them will bond to wood and metal also, so they simplify patching where the concrete butts up against other materials.

Since the new plastic masonry patching materials are considerably more expensive than cement-and-sand mixtures, you'll find them practical only for small jobs.

LIQUID ADDITIVES

There are also special liquid additives you can use with ordinary patching cement to help increase the bond. These liquids may be added to freshly mixed cement or applied to the edges of the area to be patched.

Whether you use new materials or traditional ones, a small patch done now avoids a big job later.

For women with more exciting things to do than scrub floors: ONE-STEP FLOOR CARE

It cleans and waxes at the same time!

New-formula One-Step combines ammonia and detergents for extra cleaning power . . . plus tough wax for a bright, long-lasting shine. Cuts your work in half, saves you time!

By the maker of Armstrong FLOORS less of whether it is a small crack or a large section that needs replacing, use a hammer and cold chisel to chip away the loose and crumbling sections and to undercut the edges. This insures a good mechanical bond when the fresh cement is applied. Brush out all loose dirt.

Wet down the edges of the old cement first. This keeps it from drawing water out of the new patch. Pack in the concrete or mortar with a trowel, making certain you work it into every corner.

You will find it easier to use a tri-is basically the same. If necessary, use the edge of a 2x4 to level it off.

To achieve the slightly roughened texture that will match most walks and driveways, final troweling should be done with a wood float. This is nothing more than a block of wood with a handle, rubbed over the surface in a circular motion after the concrete is partially hardened (when the wet look is almost gone).

NEW PATCHING MATERIALS

NEWS AND NOTES

It seems to me one of the features that spells quality in modern apartments is facilities for laundering. We have long had laundry rooms in the basement for the use of the entire building, and more recently, smaller ones on each floor. Now, I am pleased to see a move toward plumbing facilities in individual apartments for optional installation of laundry equipment—the washer-dryer combination especially, which is a natural for apartments. I hope that one day it will become as standard as dishwashers have in many apartments.

At the recent National Housewares Exhibit in Chicago, Illinois, which we attend twice a year, the most outstanding trend we noticed was toward the home facial sauna which uses the principle of gentle steam and mist therapy for deep cleansing and a healthy skin. We're glad to see more thought being given to beauty care. We've talked about electric combs, brushes, manicure sets before . . . but the idea that facial care has become important is a healthy sign.

Other health and beauty-care products we noted at the show were more dental-spray units for teeth and gum care (a portable variety for traveling), electric denture cleaners, hair dryer with a built-in radio for teenagers, more electric body massagers and foot-care products, small humidifiers, tabletop vanity for storage of makeup, bathroom scales with unusually gay designs.

Also seen: dishwasher-proof wooden bowls, beautifully colored and unusually sophisticated designs in cookware, corn poppers with transparent lids that double as serving bowls when corn has finished popping, a blender with a built-in spatula, fondue cookers in stainless . . . more evidence that fondue entertaining is growing in popularity; and—believe it or not—a battery-operated table crumber.

We were interested in a recent study made by the American Hobby Federation of personal food, hobby, entertainment, and sports preferences of boys and girls between the ages of 13 and 19. To the question, "What is your favorite vegetable?" potato chips came out as the number-one choice, followed by spinach, string beans, beets, zucchini, tomatoes, and lettuce. To the question, "What is your favorite main dish?", in order of preference—meat loaf, hamburgers, steak, roast beef, ham, turkey, frankfurters, chicken, veal, and liver. Apple pie and ice cream were top dessert favorites. This is not music to a food editor's ears. These foods may be great favorite standbys—but they make me wonder where the imaginative food ideas from our Test Kitchens are going. Certainly not on these tables!

Supermarket news to cross our desk: From General Foods—low-calorie imitation Grapeade Mix and new Brown Sugar-Cinnamon flavor for Toast 'Em Pop-Ups. From Betty Crocker—New Orleans style Chocolate Flavor Spice Cake Mix and Chocolate Flavor Walnut Frosting Mix. From Sego—stronger, richer flavors in liquid diet food—Very Vanilla, Very Chocolate, Very Marshmallow, Very Strawberry.

Carnation's powdered diet food, called Slender, needs only mixing with whole or skim milk; in chocolate, Dutch chocolate, French vanilla, wild strawberry, and Jubilee cherry flavors. Campbells have just introduced an unusual line of Bounty Canned Puddings in French vanilla, Dutch chocolate, Butterscotch, Lemon and Rice with Cinnamon. Quaker Oats has two new presweetened cereals reinforced with B vitamins and iron, Quisp and Quake. Look for two new Royal No-Bakes, Devil's Cream Pie and Lemon Confetti Pie.

More announcements on the electric self-cleaning oven scene: Roper, Thermador, and Hotpoint!

In a recent announcement by the USDA scientists we learned that hot water dips and hot air treatments will kill many decay organisms that attack fruits and vegetables during marketing. They tell us that the result is more attractive fresh fruits and vegetables that will keep longer in your refrigerator. The treatments, they say, have no adverse effects on appearance, firmness, or taste and are cheaper, safer, and easier to use than chemical decay controls. We wonder about the length of keeping time as a result of this treatment and would like to know more about the safety of chemical controls. We're told some of the treated produce now or soon to be available in stores are cantaloupes, peaches, mangoes, lemons, apples, berries, peppers, sweet potatoes.

Hard to believe that it's Trick or Treat time again. And perfect for the occasion are smaller versions of our Gingerbread Men on page 100. Wrap them individually and serve to visiting ghosts!

But no drops, no spots with Cascade.

Wonderful how Cascade gives you such spot-free dishes! The reason? Chlorosheen—the exclusive spot-fighting ingredient that makes Cascade the best detergent you can buy for your dishwasher. It makes water rinse off in clear sheets, so that drops that spot don't form. And what results! Instead of spots, you get shine. Instead of towel touch-ups, you get spotless dishes you will be proud to take straight from the dishwasher to the table. No wonder women have made Cascade the nation's most popular dishwasher detergent!
