BLUMCRAFT OF PITTSBURGH, 460 MELWOOD STREET, PITTSBURGH 13, PA.

"A building, like a tree, is part of the countryside in which it stands. It draws its nourishment from the very soil in which it is rooted and from the stream at its feet. The old oak reflects the people, the climate, the soil, the history of this region.

"If the architect would avoid erecting a dead shell which is only a shelter for those who use it, he must do two difficult things: he must (1) learn to know and understand the living spirit of this particular community; and (2) create a body for this spirit using contemporary art forms.

"The architect is conscious today that his talent must be a service to the community. When he works, he must take into account the social and community values which are implicit in city life. Only after looking at these values can he sense his true function — to interpret and mediate between the needs and aspirations of the community and their concrete realization. He sees in his privileged and delicate position how he must have a keen ability for synthesis: a soul open, like a sensitive antenna, to all the deep urges, the many needs, the secret hopes and feelings, the spirit, the living soul of the community he serves. If he has this capacity, his creative work, dimensioning space and time, will speak a language which the community will understand. Then they will be truly grateful to him for his work of mediation and creation."

—Giacomo Cardinal Lercaro, Archbishop of Bologna, April 11, 1957, addressing the Faculty of Architecture, University of Florence. (Reprinted from "Skylines" magazine.)

TILT-UP CONSTRUCTION

Buttress & McClellan, Inc., architect, engineer and contractor.

William P. Neil Co., engineer and contractor.

The Austin Co., architect, engineer and contractor.

These four concrete tilt-up buildings, designed and built by Los Angeles firms, are part of an industrial development in Vernon, Calif. They show how tilt-up walls can be combined with interesting architectural details to create distinctive, modern styling.

In the General Electric warehouse, windows are shaded by concrete canopies. The square pattern in the Mallinckrodt building was formed by wood strips placed in the form before casting. Tilt-up construction details in the Abbott Laboratories are masked by colored window trim and stone planters. The bold Sylvania name stands out against a large plain wall.

In all cases the uniform color and texture in the concrete panels furnish an excellent background for company names and trademarks.

For more information about tilt-up design and construction write for free illustrated literature. It is distributed only in United States and Canada.

A CHAPTER OF THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF ARCHITECTS

MEMBERSHIP ROSTER

INDIANA SOCIETY OF ARCHITECTS
Chapter, American Institute of Architects

This issue is dedicated to those architects who take outstanding pride in their profession, who desired and received not only the recognition of their competency by the State of Indiana, but also the approval of their fellow architects. These men are the Indiana Society of Architects.

It is fitting, therefore, that first recognition be given those who form the Sustaining Membership of the Society.

HOW FUNCTIONAL CAN A COATING BE?

THE ANSWER IS HERE — IN Secoton Elastic Vinyl
TENSILE STRENGTH: 1500 p. s. i. — ELONGATION: up to 500% — FLEXIBILITY: at minus 45° F. — CHEMICALLY INERT — NON-TOXIC — NON-FLAMMABLE and COLORS galore. What other coating is so versatile? — It closes and seals cracks, permanently — Absorbs structural movement — Protects and beautifies — longer than any other coating.

At left: SECOTON Elastic Vinyl Coating easily holds weight of heavy concrete block. Try this with any other coating.

Above: Two powerful men demonstrate elasticity and high tensile strength of SECOTON Elastic Vinyl Coating.

What is YOUR surface protection problem? — Building Water-proofing? — Water Storage? — High moisture conditions? — Corrosive atmosphere? — Sealing ANY surface against air, vapor, gases, dust, light... even radio activity? — Contact your SECO LICENSED APPLICATOR. You'll be glad you did.
