MSA PRESIDENT’S MESSAGE

Roger Margerum, AIA

By the time this article is presented to you, the AIA Convention will be over and the California Council/AIA will have introduced to the Convention a resolution that is of major importance to us. They describe the intention of the Proposal to accomplish the following:

a. Develop a strategy for state component assistance in the event a state component is faced with a registration issue that they have inadequate resources to address.

And further, to present the strategy for consideration by the AIA Board of Directors.

b. Act as a component clearinghouse on registration matters.

c. Establish a definition of practice of architecture as distinguished from the practices of related professions and practices.

It is intended that this definition would serve as a guideline for state components in defining the practice within the context of registration, in a manner which is consistent with other states.

"The American Institute of Architects, as an old and respected institution, is quick to recognize emerging issues and develop new programs and strategies in response. However, the Institute should also recognize its fundamental responsibility to the membership to defend and protect the scope and practice of architecture. While the state and local components must take the lead, the Institute, recognizing that developments in one state often times create precedents for action in other states, can develop and coordinate the resources of its 36,000 members.

This Resolution addresses a fundamental concern of our membership and therefore transcends the issues of "Big State/Little State," "Big Chapter/Little Chapter," and "Big Firm/Small Firm." This is a Resolution which reaffirms the Institute’s concern for the well being of the profession and establishes registration issues as a priority of the Institute. In summary, this Resolution not only helps preserve the practice of architecture for those now practicing, but, more importantly, it preserves the integrity of the practice of architecture for future generations of Americans."

Michigan has similar problems and will give support to the concepts and actions preserving Architectural Registration.

Set aside October 12th, 13th and 14th of this Fall for the MSA Convention in Grand Rapids. The headquarters is the Amway Grand Plaza Hotel, a recently renovated, Four-Star establishment with a new 27-story addition.

The Convention will explore the potential for expanded influence of our profession in these areas:

- Interior Architecture
- Urban Design
- Energy Technology
- Concepts of Creative Financing
- Innovative design and Production Techniques
- Utilizing the CAD Systems

Each day of the convention promises to be special, with interesting topics and top-notch speakers in exciting architectural environments.

Day One of the Convention includes a course on the CAD Systems, usually offered by A/E Systems ’83 for $285.00. For the price of Convention registration, this four-hour course is available to all Convention participants. A workbook of course information can be purchased for $30.00.

Topics covered in the Course will include how CAD systems work, how to organize your office for the CAD System and how to set realistic goals for CAD System use.

During the first day, escorted tours of Herman Miller in Zeeland and Grand Rapids will be available and then all conventioneers are invited to the Exhibitor’s groundbreaker that evening. This is the time to meet these loyal supporters of our State Convention and learn more about the products available for our industry. Invitations will be made available for the Groundbreaker by the Society and the Grand Valley Chapter for allied professionals and guests.

Next month we’ll tell you more about Day Two of the Convention. Start now to plan to attend the Convention next Fall.

THE ARCHITECTURE OF ALDEN B. DOW

The MSA is pleased to announce the publication, The Architecture of Alden B. Dow by Sidney K. Robinson.

During the mid-seventies the MSA Board of Directors investigated the possibility of a monograph series under the chairmanship of Denis Schmiedeke and this book is the result of what started out to be a series of monologues. The book is published by Wayne State University Press with grant assistance from the Michigan Council for the Arts.

The book is the first comprehensive review of the architecture of Alden B. Dow. It examines Dow’s singular approach to the design of private houses and public buildings.

According to Robinson, "The son of the founder of the Dow Chemical Company, Dow found a receptive clientele in Midland, where over three-quarters of his work is located. He was a student of Frank Lloyd Wright, but his statements on aesthetics and the philosophy of the individual recorded in this volume show an independent and thoughtful mind."

The author, Sidney K. Robinson is associate professor of architecture at Iowa State University in Ames. His undergraduate studies were at Columbia University and he received his doctoral degree in architecture from the University of Michigan. He is registered in Michigan and a member of the AIA and Society of Architectural Historians.

The book is available from the MSA Bookstore — $13.95 paperback.
