President's Letter

Dear Members:

The annual Architects' Day — in case you missed it — was a great success, in spite of the fact that someone got mixed up when ordering the weather. Springfield did it again, and will be a hard act to follow. Our heartfelt thanks to all who contributed to the day's activities, and to the members, officers and directors who made the past year one of achievement.

It is with the usual apprehension that your president begins his term, when thinking of the goals we hope to reach and the progressive course set by our predecessors. If this year is to be a productive and useful one, it will only be through the assistance of the membership, committees and committee chairmen. Being confident of this assistance, we have high hopes for MARA.

The accomplishments of an organization such as this have to be viewed on the long-term basis. As you know, there are no immediate cures for most of our problems, and seldom does a great success occur during any single administration. Every gain is the result of the efforts of many people over an extended period of time. This is why we feel it important that all members maintain an active interest in MARA and be willing to assist where possible. We would like you to examine the committee listings in this issue. It is impractical to list the entire membership in committee assignments, so if you are not named to one and feel you can serve, we will be most happy to put you on a committee of your choice.

Architects' Day 1967, with its focus on the architect and his education, moved the architect closer to his goal of illuminating the role of the architect in today's and future societies by emphasizing the values — and needs — inherent in the training of the architect.

Educators and practicing architects participated in the program which drew widespread audience participation and saw the awarding of a $300 scholarship to an architectural student.

Also, at the meeting officers and directors were elected for the year, the association's by-laws were revised, and members reviewed MARA's legislative activities.

Under the convention theme, "The Architect and his Education," keynote speaker Walter Eugene George, chairman of the department of architecture of the University of Kansas, saw the computer playing an increasing role as a tool of the architect. Providing an almost endless variety of design and structural possibilities, the computer will store for the architect a vast amount of technical information, he said in his view of education in the future.

A panel of educators and architects, moderated by Peter Keleti, Kansas City, reviewed the status of today's education. Keleti, a practicing architect and former member of the faculties of Washington University and the University of Kansas, (Continued on Page 6) presented a comprehensive program for the development of architectural education in Missouri.

At luncheon speaker's table, from left, are Gene Stanley, Kansas City Producers Council; Professor Eugene George, Chairman of the Department of Architecture, University of Kansas; Fred Schaeffer, Presiding Judge, Greene County Court; E. L. Anderson, Mayor Pro Tem, Springfield; Dean John Dowgray, University of Missouri, Kansas City, luncheon speaker; President Edwin C. Waters, III; Honorable Durward G. Hall, Congressman from Missouri 7th District; Colonel E. I. (Mike) Hockaday, Superintendent, Missouri State Highway Patrol; and M. E. Monsees, President, Missouri Society of Professional Engineers.

Based on the increasing need for a state school of architecture in Missouri, a need compounded by the state's expanding construction and growing number of Missouri students compelled to seek their architectural education in other states, the recommendation called for a survey by an independent research firm to accurately document this educational shortcoming in the state.

Panelist Edward J. Thias, St. Louis, teacher of architectural design and painting at the University College, Washington University, and a practicing architect, pointed out that Missouri is in a poor position to provide architectural education to meet the demand of its residents. He outlined the possible approaches which might be adopted in the formation of a state school of architecture, citing feasible locations, initial curriculum and cost estimates.

Panelist Hurst John, Columbia architect, emphasized the need for a state school operated in cooperation with the practicing architect to provide essential practical experience along with classroom studies. Hurst John also saw MARA playing an increasing role through expanded activities in bettering the working environment of the architect through legislative activities and public information programs.

Panelist John Dowgray, dean of faculties, University of Missouri at Kansas City, outlined the facilities and teaching philosophies developed there to meet the growing educational needs of the state.

Dr. Duane Meyer, dean of instruction, Southwest Missouri State College, spoke on the need for continuing education.

Also of Southwest Missouri State College, Professor Edgar Albin in a talk illustrated with slides, related (Continued on Page 7) certain architecture to history, tradition and physical surroundings.

Springfield student, Jerry R. Whitlock, currently attending the Kansas State School of Architecture, was presented a $300 scholarship for his winning design in MARA's annual student award contest. The contest was developed to generate interest in professionalism within the student bodies of the architectural schools serving Missouri.

Roy J. Pallardy, Jefferson City, was elected MARA president, moving to the post from the vice presidency he held last year. James T. Darrough, Columbia, was elected vice president after serving the past year as secretary. Donald D. Buller, Sedalia, was reelected treasurer; and Gerhardt Kramer, St. Louis, was elected secretary.

C. Wynn Brady, Columbia, and Hal W. Hawkins, Springfield, were elected to four-year terms on the board of directors.

Past President Maxwell T. Sandford, left, presents Honorary Lifetime Membership for former Executive Director, Paul N. Doll, to David M. Brey, Kansas City. Brey, also a past MARA prexy, accepted in absentia for Doll who could not be present. Sandford pointed out that Doll was merely following suit of Hollywood Oscar winners who sent proxies to accept awards.

Architects' Day 1967 is proclaimed in the City of St. Louis by Mayor A. J. Cervantes, center. Looking on are, left, Kenneth O. Brown, St. Louis Building Commissioner, and Edward J. Thias, former President of MARA.

Although Architects' Day will go down in history as one of the most "working" conventions, it will also be known as one of the most fun-filled conventions in MARA annals.

Congeniality and conviviality marked the social and fun affairs. Two cocktail parties, one hosted by the Kansas City Producers Council and the other by Carthage Marble Corporation, highlighted MARA's "social season." The dinner-dance, Saturday night, was immensely popular.

The Women's Activity Committee prepared a particularly outstanding entertainment program for the ladies. In all, it was a well-rounded convention, providing work sessions and play sessions for all. The photographs on these three pages highlight this fact.

MARA has grown rapidly in membership and in stature, gaining respect as the statewide voice of the profession. We wish to continue this growth. One of our major projects at this time is the establishment of a State School of Architecture. Other programs such as legislation, ethics and other committee projects are no less important to all architects and the profession. Therefore, we cordially invite you to lend your support to your Association. We would like to hear from you — suggestions, gripes, whatever you have.

I believe you will find this issue of MISSOURI ARCHITECT a meaty one. In addition to the full report on Architects' Day, it also contains the latest directory of all members. Our grateful appreciation to Rama-dyne and Wendell Locke for all the blood, sweat and tears they had to suffer to achieve this final product, on top of all the other burdens we gently deposit in their "IN" basket.

Here's to greater stature (and greater prosperity) for all Architects.

Sincerely,
Roy J. Pallardy
President

Architects' Day also saw extensive revisions in the organization's bylaws, bringing them up-to-date to coincide with current activities and needs.

Outgoing president Edwin C. Waters was presented a plaque in recognition of his service to MARA the past year. Former president Max Sandford made the presentation.

EXAMPLES SOUGHT FOR ARCHITECTURAL EXHIBIT

W. Philip Cotton, Jr. is seeking examples of important or interesting architecture in Missouri, from the early French to the present, which may have been overlooked because they are not published in any of the standard books covering Missouri architecture.

Particularly desired are examples from the southeast, southwest and northern parts of the state. They are needed for consideration in an exhibition of Missouri architecture under a project commissioned and sponsored by the Missouri State Council on the Arts.

Mr. Cotton will appreciate those with information about such examples letting him know. Write or call W. Philip Cotton, Jr., 419 Wainwright Bldg., St. Louis, Mo. 63101 (314 GA 1-1667).

rector, Paul N. Doll, was presented by Maxwell Sandford and accepted by former MARA president David M. Brey in behalf of Doll who was unable to be present. In connection with the award, the association had Doll's unique collection of color photographs comparing ancient and modern architecture specially framed and mounted for presentation.

In less formal ceremonies, the convention delegates enjoyed cocktail parties hosted by Carthage Marble and the Kansas City Producers Council, a dinner at Riverside Inn, a luncheon and the annual banquet followed by dancing.

It was both a significant and fulfilling convention, reflecting MARA's growing programs and expanding activities.

BLOK-MESH
BLOK-JOINT

Quality masonry work calls for both joint reinforcement and control joints. Blok-Mesh reinforcement and Blok-Joint control joint meet the most exacting specifications.

Blok-Mesh is available in either a truss type, for maximum strength, or a ladder type for greater economy on lighter requirements. Both come in choice of wire sizes, widths and plain or galvanized.

Blok-Joint is the original cross shaped rubber extrusion for forming control joints. It is available in the standard size for use in any wall thickness or with a wide flange for speed and economy in 8” walls. Both types are used with standard metal sash blocks and conventional caulking for complete weatherproofing of the joint.

A good roof deck is a combination of two things: the materials that go into its construction; and how they go in.

ZONOLITE® VERMICULITE INSULATING CONCRETE is the ideal roof decking material. This fireproof, seamless super heat stopper weighs only 1/6 the weight of structural concrete. And since it is poured in place, it easily conforms to the variety of forms and shapes found in today's modern design.

Approved Zonolite Applicators have the know-how to do your job right. By following rigid industry standards and keeping a running progress log on your job, they offer not only the finest insulating roof deck available, but a written certificate that your Zonolite concrete was mixed and applied as specified.

When there's no question about the quality you're looking for in a roof deck, specify Zonolite Vermiculite Insulating Concrete.

For more information on the best between you and the weather, contact your Approved Zonolite Applicator or the nearest Zonolite office listed below.
