Transition of Leadership: The annual AIA Las Vegas Holiday Celebration celebrated another successful year for the chapter, and marked the transition of leadership for AIA Nevada and AIA Las Vegas. (L to R) David Frommer, AIA, Past-President, AIA Las Vegas and President Elect for AIA Nevada; Mark Johnson, AIA-2002 President AIA Nevada; Ed Vance, AIA, Past President for AIA Nevada; Brandon Sprague, AIA, 2002 President, AIA Las Vegas. Congratulations, thank you and best wishes for 2002.
I hope everyone had a wonderful holiday season and I wish you all a very happy new year. I would first like to thank on behalf of the membership David Frommer, AIA for his tireless devotion in 2001. David you had to address several issues that were complex and unrewarding but have benefited the chapter enormously; the future will bear this out. I would also like to thank the 2001 board members, in particular, the individuals who served as Windom, Reno, and Las Vegas, our parents Denise & Brandon Sprague...and grandpa John LaSpaluto.

We will provide the same membership services in 2002 as we have in the past, omitting the design awards which will be in Reno, except on a slightly tighter budget. This year will focus on us, Las Vegas, our context and history; trying to understand the individual architectural diversity which is shaping our community and to better comprehend the numbness of change we all experience driving in our valley.

We will also be focusing more on design, including: displaying current topical work at the monthly meeting, bringing back the "in-progress" section in the Forum newsletter, and joining Windom who is hosting the AIA National Design Committee Conference at the Lied Discovery Museum in April. It should be a fun year...

Our Chapter offers a great many programs, programs that hopefully have reached out or interested every individual member. We need your continued support and participation to make 2002 a success so we can keep building to the 2005 National Conference.

Welcome to the world, Wyatt Jackson Sprague. Born Saturday, November 24th, 8 lbs & 13 ozs. to proud parents Denise & Brandon Sprague...and grandpa John LaSpaluto.

NEW DESIGN STANDARDS
CITY OF HENDERSON

The City of Henderson Redevelopment Agency is holding a public workshop on January 17 from 3:30 p.m. to 5:00 p.m at the City of Henderson Convention Center (200 Water Street) Grand Ballroom. The purpose of the workshop is to discuss an implementation plan for the redevelopment of Downtown Henderson. In conjunction with the implementation plan, the City is also proposing to enact changes to the zoning code that would promote development in the downtown area and establish architectural design standards. If you would like more information, please attend the meeting or call 565-2474.
AIA NEVADA
PRESIDENT’S MESSAGE
Mark Johnson, AIA
Am I the only one who is not sure what happened to the year 2001? It seems like only yesterday I accepted the position of President-Elect for AIA Nevada, and now Ed has passed the gavel to me. Unfortunately, I expect 2002 will probably seem to fly by just as quickly. Everyone knows that time flies when you are having fun, and I expect that this will be a fun year.

I would like to congratulate Ed Vance and the rest of the 2001 executive committee for continuing the work and programs of AIA Nevada and laying the groundwork for this year and years to come. 2001 saw the creation of the AIA Nevada website, another successful Design Awards program, visits to our Congressional representatives in Washington DC, and an effective lobbying effort at the State Legislature.

Based on those successes, the 2002 executive committee plans to expand the role of AIA Nevada to make sure it truly serves all of our members in the State of Nevada. The first step is the newsletter you hold in your hands. For several years, both local chapters have published individual newsletter. There has been discussion for years about creating a single newsletter, but for reasons ranging from content, to schedule, to cost, this has not been done. However, AIA Nevada has decided to take the first step towards a statewide publication by funding the additional printing and mailing costs to send the Forum to all the AIA Northern Nevada members. Chapter programs, AIA National issues, and statewide programs will now be available to each AIA Nevada member on a monthly basis.

Distributing the Forum statewide is only the first step. The 2002 executive committee is looking into various options for the AIA Nevada website, and its potential to be the distribution point for all chapter information. AIA National has been working on an online distribution of newsletter information for the past year and has been quite successful. Whether we choose to follow its example or not will be determined in the coming months. Feedback from the membership will be critical to our success, so feel free to give us suggestions on what you would like to see.

Another shift at AIA Nevada involves the annual Design and Service Award program. We will continue to alternate the awards between Las Vegas and Northern Nevada, but much of the planning and financial responsibility will be taken on at the statewide level. This is being done not only to create consistency of the awards and program from year to year, but also to reduce the bi-annual financial uncertainty that the program puts on the local chapters. As an early reminder, the banquet will be in Reno this fall.

These are just the issues we are looking at during the first month of the year. I expect that there will be more as the year continues. As always, the AIA Nevada executive committee is here to serve our members. If you have comments/suggestions on our existing activities, or ideas you would like us to take a look at, please let us know.

ARCHITECTURE LAS VEGAS
What do you think?

The first issue of Architecture Las Vegas was published in January of 2001, and it set a very high standard as a quality publication. Throughout this last year the editorial committee has faced many challenges in managing the second issue of our “official publication”. Through the process we have learned that sometimes, for many differing reasons, the completed project does not achieve the original concept and design. The important question now is where do we go from here. Our next issue will be published in October 2002, and the work for this issue will begin in January.

YOU are a member of AIA Las Vegas, and as such, YOU have a voice in the actions and decisions of the Chapter. In order to make the best decisions regarding the future of our magazine, we need to know what you think. Please take a moment and consider the following questions...then phone, fax or email your thoughts to the AIA Las Vegas office.

1. Should the AIA Las Vegas Chapter endeavor to publish a magazine designed to generate public awareness of architecture in Southern Nevada?
2. How should projects and editorial subjects be selected for inclusion in the publication?
3. Who should serve on the AIA Editorial Committee?
4. How should the publication be funded? Who should be responsible for publishing, advertising sales and distribution?
5. Should the magazine be a “showcase” for projects? Or, should it provide a serious critical dialogue on architecture in Southern Nevada?

Please provide your comments (preferably in writing) to Randy Lavigne, Executive Director - Phone: 702-895-0936 / Fax: 702-895-4417 Email: rlavigne@aianevada.org
The design of the Paradise Park Recreation Center reflects a sense of community. The stand-alone facility creates a strong relationship to the park's mature landscape and a primary east-west axis connecting both sides of the park. One enters the building through a radius inverse battered, rising wall; illuminated within, welcoming the community into the facility, park and neighborhood. The facilities spatial organization, through clear visual connections to major activity areas from the lobby, creates single-point security and control. Designed within the lobby are custom tile handprints from children of the surrounding neighborhood bringing involvement, sense of ownership and personalizes the building. The exposed structure, finishes, duct-work and lighting that shape the facilities character reinforce the honest use of materials, building systems and cost effective design. The gymnasium's orientation provides access to outdoor courts and extends out to the parks activities. The use of natural light, building orientation and durable construction materials constitute equally important aspects to the design. Paradise Park Recreation Center is to become a social hub and focal point for community activities related to sports, recreation, health and fitness.

"Las Vegas: Past, Present & Future"
A panel discussion of where we are, how we got here and what the future holds for Las Vegas with
Senator Richard Bryan,
State Historian Frank Wright
Community Developer Ed Roski
Dean of Fine Arts, USC Ruth Weisberg
Moderated by Robert Tracy, Assoc. AIA, Interim Director, UNLV School of Architecture

Let's begin the New Year by taking stock of where we are...how we got here....and what we can expect in our future. Our January meeting will bring together a distinguished panel composed of Senator Richard Bryan, State Historian Frank Wright, Community Developer Ed Roski and Ruth Weisberg, Dean of the Fine Arts Department at the University of Southern California. We are a global community.....Las Vegas is an International City.....How did we become this most unusual city...and how does this impact you and your practice in 2002 and beyond? Moderated by Robert Tracy, Assoc. AIA and Interim Director of the UNLV School of Architecture, the panel will explore the economic, political, planning and design issues that impact our community.

In addition, we hope to provide exhibits from the current City Hall projects for Las Vegas, Henderson and Mesquite.

The 2002 Intern Design Competition will be launched with a brand new challenge, providing a $1,500.00 traveling scholarship to the winner. Robert Tayco, last year's recipient will report on his travels.

Next time you are traveling near 3036 E Russell Road have a glance at the IGS Building by Sandberg & Small Architecture. While the firm works primarily on larger projects they occasionally seek out a "Fun Design Challenge" for a client with particular taste and a willingness to provide a good budget. The IGS office building is one such work.

Designer Ken Small AIA, CSI was faced with a common design problem. This project was in a transitional neighborhood. Many of the homes in the area were being rezoned. The client had purchased a very tacky 1960's stucco and brick home that had been a "Pirated" office. They directed the firm to 'add on and remodel'. The client was looking for an end product that would present well to a few occasional customers visiting from out of town and be a home for a family owned and operated telecommunications related business. They wanted the clients to know that IGS had their own office building by seeing the exterior picture of it in IGS's brochure (not a converted house).

The solution is a stucco, galvanized steel and copper building that says "Quality Commercial Building" without overshadowing the nearby neighborhood. It exemplifies the idea that an office building conversion can uplift the neighborhood with the vision of quality office space. The clean horizontal stucco banding distances itself from the "Add paint and paving" house reconstructions that are commonly found in Las Vegas without overpowering the scale of the nearby development. Small wanted to convey the symbiosis of the simple use of technology and high standards that the company exemplifies to it's customers by using simple forms and a limited number of quality materials in an imaginative way.

Adding to the quality of this building is an outstanding professional quality interior finish selection and artwork selection done by the IGS family group led by Lloyd Goudreau. The interiors are characterized by high contrast colors including black marble and brightly colored tile. A variety of spatial forms from intimate private offices to the shock scale entryway and "Command Central" completely conceal the original form of the structure and instead offer a wide array of areas for various sized working teams. The office space is well integrated with a luxury warming kitchen and huge family style back porch for the staff.

The 3400 square foot project was completed in 2001 by LF Harris General Contractors.
2002 MEETINGS AND EVENTS

JANUARY MEETING
LAS VEGAS: Past, Present, Future

The January Membership Meeting will bring together Senator Richard Bryan, noted developer Ed Roski, Ruth Weisberg, Dean, School of Fine Arts, University of Southern California, and state historian, Frank Wright, for a panel discussion of our city's past, present and future. Moderated by Robert Tracy, Assoc. AIA, Interim Director of the UNLV School of Architecture, the panel will explore the economic, political, planning and design issues that impact our community.

In addition, we hope to provide exhibits of the current City Hall projects for Las Vegas, Henderson and Mesquite.

The 2002 Intern Design Competition will be launched with a brand new challenge providing a $1,500.00 traveling scholarship to the winner. Robert Tayco, last year's recipient, will report on his travels.

The meeting will be held at the Flamingo Hilton Hotel on Wednesday, January 16th. Reception at 6PM, Dinner at 7PM and the Program at 8PM. Make plans to attend and get your AIA year started right. RSVP's are required for attendance. No charge for AIA members, Guests are $35.00. Call 895-0936 to make your reservation.

CACE EXECS TO VISIT LAS VEGAS

On January 23-27, AIA Las Vegas will host the Executive Directors from components in the Western Mountain Region. ExeCs from Arizona, Colorado, New Mexico, Wyoming, Utah and Northern Nevada have been invited to Las Vegas to discuss the challenges and opportunities of 2002, and to compare notes, share ideas and problem solving methods in an effort to build stronger Chapters and benefit their members.

FEBRUARY MEETING
"SHINING BROW: Frank Lloyd Wright Opera"

The February Meeting will be the one-concert performance of "Shining Brow" the Frank Lloyd Wright Opera, being presented and recorded by Paul Kreider and the UNLV Opera Theatre on Wednesday, February 20th.

The evening will begin at 6PM with a reception for AIA members and guests in the Judy Bailey Theatre Lobby, followed by the performance at 7PM in Hamm Hall. To attend AIA members must RSVP to the AIA office and pick up their complimentary ticket.

This production of "Shining Brow" will be followed by three days of recording sessions for ARSIS Audio, which will release the world premiere full recording of the opera. The part of Frank Lloyd Wright will be sung by Paul Kreider, Associate Professor and Chair of the Music Department at UNLV. This performance will be the first to be recorded and distributed nationally.

To help underwrite the costs of the production and the recording, sponsorships are being offered to individuals and firms in the architectural community. For $1,000.00 (or more) the names of supporting firms will be included on the CD cover graphics. For less than $1,000.00, supporting firms will be included in the printed program of sponsors. Please contact Randy Lavigne at 895-0936 if you would like to support this recording through sponsorship.

The opera is composed by Daron Aric Hagen, with Libretto by Paul Muldoon. "Shining Brow", the translation of the Welsh Taliesin, is the name Wright gave to his homes in Wisconsin and Arizona. The period of time covered in the opera, includes some of the most tumultuous years of Wright's life, from 1903 to 1914. The work portrays Wright's relationship with client, Mamah Cheney, who leaves her husband, Edwin, for the architect. Their affair is further complicated by the fact that Catherine, Wright's wife, refuses to grant a divorce. Wright visits Sullivan in Chicago, and it is here that he learns that Taliesin has been destroyed by fire. Mamah has been killed, along with six other victims. As the opera closes Wright imagines rebuilding Taliesin in Mamah's memory.

To secure your ticket to the reception and performance, contact the AIA Office at 895-0936. You must have a ticket to attend.

COMMITTEE FOR LIVABLE COMMUNITIES (CLC)
Chuck Kubat, AIA
Co-chair, CLC

The Growth Committee has changed its name to the Committee for Livable Communities. This will more closely align with the national AIA Center for Livable Communities P.I.A., and reflect the mission of the committee to work to increase the livability of the Las Vegas Valley.

The specific objectives for the coming year are:
1. Provide education and information to members on valley-wide growth and livability issues.
2. Coordinate AIA responses to city, county, regional and state proposed development standards, regulations and legislation.
3. Define AIA positions on growth and livability issues.
4. Provide continuing education credit for educational sessions.

In order to support the objectives of education for members, the following topics were suggested as the focus for committee meetings during the year.

* School site selection process and new design challenges
* North Las Vegas 7,500 acre Master Plan
* County planning for new South County airport and environs
* Henderson urban design initiatives such as Water Street
* City of Las Vegas CCDC development efforts
* McCarran Airport CMA planning and objectives
* Monorail station design

The January committee meeting will continue our organizing and brainstorming efforts. "School site selection and new design challenges" was selected as the topic for the March 26th meeting of the committee, to be presented by Dale Scheideman, Clark County School District.

COMMITTEE ON THE ENVIRONMENT

The COTE (Committee on the Environment) have meetings scheduled for Tuesday January 8th and Tuesday, January 22nd at Lucchesi Galati Architects office, located at 500 Pilot Road, Suite A, the meetings will be from 5PM to 7PM.

Please contact Lance Kirk by phone at 263-7111 or by email at ljkirk@lgainc.com if you have any questions or need additional information.

UNLV REPORT
Bob Tracy, Assoc. AIA
Interim Director
UNLV School of Architecture

As this newsletter is being printed, the faculty and students of the School of Architecture are currently going through Jury Week, which will be followed by final examinations as the Fall '01 semester rapidly comes to a close.

The students, faculty and staff are looking forward to the semester break and the holiday season. We also look forward to the Spring '02 semester where instruction begins on January 22, 2002, and anticipate with excitement and enthusiasm the NAAB accreditation team's visit in April.

From everyone here at the School of Architecture, UNLV, we wish you the best for the holidays and the coming year. We would also like to thank all adjunct faculty from the professional community who helped fill our curricular needs this Fall '01 semester and look forward to working with you in the Spring.

Best wishes for the New Year.

BUILDING SECURITY THROUGH DESIGN

A primer for Architects, Design Professionals and Their Clients

The American Institute of Architects has published a new 24-page booklet entitled "Building Security Through Design. This booklet, a product of the Institute's new security design resource center, is intended to help our members get a quick grasp of building security as it relates to architecture practice.

This primer will stimulate architects to think about security issues and to begin identifying information and tools that can help them enhance the security dimension of design. Briefly discussed are the functions of security; the definition of security needs through security assessment analysis; and strategies and design opportunities architects can use to respond to their clients' security needs.

The AIA Las Vegas office has a limited quantity of these booklets. If your firm would like to receive one, please contact Randy or Kelly at 702-895-0936 or go to the Building Security Through Design website at www.aia.org.

WHY DO ARCHITECTS HAVE CLAIMS?
C.E. Luncheon - 2 AIA CE Credits
Presented by American Insurance & Investment
Thursday, January 31, 2001
11:30AM - Macayo's on Charleston

In a recent study by a major insurance carrier, DPIC, 8687 claims files from professionals from 1996 to 2000 were analyzed to determine what were the driving factors that cause claims. Architects' claims experience has deteriorated from a previous study done for 1989-1995, while the claims for all other disciplines of design professionals has decreased or remained stable.

Find out what the primary Risk Drivers are for claims and what puts your firm at risk. Lora J. Paluso, and Bill Valent, insurance agents with American Insurance & Investment, will share these latest results. They will also discuss other risk management products for architects.
