A photograph of a modern, multi-level concrete building with balconies and railings. The building is situated on a hillside, overlooking a large body of water and a forested landscape. The sky is clear and blue. The building's design features clean lines and a mix of materials, including concrete and wood. The balconies are furnished with white chairs and tables, and there are potted plants on some of the levels. The overall atmosphere is serene and modern.

Architectural Precast Concrete

Completed 5 days after steel frame

It was a race to the top on the 32-story, multi-tenant, 312 Walnut Building in Cincinnati. As the steel frame rose during the day, the 638 precast concrete panels kept pace on the swing shift.

The owner, 312 Walnut Limited Partnership, and architect, Glaser Associates, Inc., Cincinnati, selected a combination of thermal finished gray granite-clad precast panels, black polished granite and story-high precast panels containing granite aggregate and sand with a sandblast finish. They also liked the super-fast erection time of precast!

The project was managed by Duke Construction Management, Inc., Cincinnati.

For information on our company, precast and pre-stressed products and projects, contact Dennis Nemenz, Vice President & General Sales Manager.

AIA OHIO ARCHITECTURAL HANDBOOK

This special handbook issue of Architypes is a tribute to the architectural standards of the members of AIA, exemplified by the winning projects of our 1991 Design and Honor Awards competition. The architecture published here is an outstanding example of the numerous award-winning projects by Ohio architects who, when selected for state, national and international commissions, serve thousands of clients, large and small, with skill and dedication.

AIA Ohio is a statewide component of the American Institute of Architects. In conjunction with seven local chapters, we offer programs and services to the 1800 individual members of the AIA, which include registered architects, interns working towards becoming licensed as architects, associates who work in architectural firms and allied members who offer services to architects.

Included in this issue is a profile of over 250 Ohio architectural firms. The firm name is listed along with their address, phone number, fax, principals of the firm, number and description of architects and other employees, major projects and a description of the firm's practice. This information was provided by the firms as part of an annual survey of AIA Ohio members. To be listed, one of the firm's principals/partners must be a registered architect and a member of AIA Ohio.

If you need the professional services of a qualified architect, you will find a suitable firm listed in these pages.

Following the firm profiles, all members are listed by chapter and their membership category: architects, interns, associates, professional affiliates or allied members and emeritus.

We encourage you to keep this directory handy for reference throughout the year. If you aren't sure you need an architect, any of the firms or members listed will welcome the opportunity to meet with you for professional advice and recommendations.

In addition to nearly 2,000 AIA Ohio members, the AIA Ohio Handbook is distributed throughout the year to public and private owners interested in selecting an architect for their building projects. It is also distributed to over 1,500 other design and construction industry leaders across the state, including consulting engineers, interior designers, general contractors and landscape architects.

Upcoming issues of Architypes in 1992 will include special features on commercial, residential, public, cultural, health, recreational, interior architecture, landscape architecture and restoration projects. Future issues will also feature the architectural schools in Ohio and a profile of architectural firms specializing in residential projects.

Your comments and suggestions regarding the magazine are welcome. AIA Ohio members, and others interested in architecture are encouraged to submit projects for publication or articles on topics affecting architecture.

For further information about architects, their practice and the professional services they provide, consider contacting an architect listed in these pages.

A TRIBUTE TO ARCHITECTURAL EXCELLENCE

This year, the AIA Ohio received 109 entries. The entries were reviewed by a jury which met during the AIA Convention in Youngstown and included Chairman A. Anthony Tappé, FAIA, Anthony Tappé and Associates, Inc., Boston; Sylvester Damianos, FAIA, Damianos Brown Andrews, Inc., Pittsburgh; Thomas Levering, AIA, Gwathmey Siegel & Associates Architects, New York.

Winning projects came from three geographical locations: Cleveland, Youngstown and Cincinnati. They included dramatic restoration and renovation, accomplished feats of spatial and gravitational display, graceful beauty in rural settings and strong, evocative statements created with limited funds.

1025 Building—Studio of Richard Fleischman Architects, Inc.

Built as a brewery in the early 1920s, the building at 1025 Huron Road in Playhouse Square is 30 feet wide, 110 feet long, built of steel frame and 2' x 2' wood joists. During the postwar era it became the Dodd Camera Building, and the same tenant occupied it for thirty-five years. Subsequently, it was vacant for five years before the Fleischman firm purchased, renovated and occupied it.

Section

ERIC HANSEN

The building had deteriorated to the point where even the strictest preservationist would have recommended demolition. RFA gutted the facility, including all electrical, heating and plumbing systems. Communication is central in an architectural firm, so opening different floor areas for visual and studio access was critical. Partial floors were removed in fourteen bay modules of the first and second floors. The only elements remaining after demolition were the common walls and the structural floor, including the hardwood floor and the concrete stairways.

Jury Comments: "...a museum-like space that is also an excellent work environment. It poses an outreach to the public with its storefront nature. The sophisticated details combine to produce an enriched spatial experience for all who enter or work there."

The Historical Center of Industry and Labor

The architects were asked to design a center for the study and presentation of the industrial history of the Mahoning River Valley. The concept of the design is a series of three distinct interacting objects representing historical elements reminiscent of 18th, 19th and 20th century industrial forms. The center is a three level, concrete, brick and steel structure of approximately 32,000 sq. ft.

HAL TAYLOR

The jury was impressed with the details of the straightforward approach of the architects. The building represents an articulate organization of elements and space. Features such as the central cupola, which is a capped storage tower suggestion, but yet a reference to the Roman Pantheon, bathes the softly painted library with its 2½ story coffered skylit rotunda, are most effective.

Jury Comments: "The building is respectful and evocative in its detailed simplicity. It is an undeniable visual representation of industrial history."

Immerman Residence

The original house, a colonial revival constructed in 1936, had undergone a series of remodelings by previous owners. The most significant was in 1963 involving a lanai and family room addition at the rear of the house in a more modern tradition.

The Immermans purchased the house in 1989. The interiors were fundamentally at odds with their lifestyle, both functionally and aesthetically. But they did not dismiss the house's sizeable attributes: location, size, a handsomely landscaped double lot and views to an adjacent golf course.

Reed and Leskosky left the basic functional arrangement intact, although two utility spaces were combined to create a new breakfast room. Demolition of non-bearing walls permitted a greater integration of spaces, while the articulation and scale were maintained and reinforced through shifts in ceiling height, translucent and transparent screens and built-in furnishings.

A progression from front/public domain to back/private was marked by three lateral walls: the first a dense poche element finished in auto body paint; the second a portal of scratch coat plaster with an not to be reduced to a vessel for the display of objects. To achieve this end, a fairly sensual, tactile palette of materials was selected, in some cases for an inherent kinetic quality. Both the auto body paint and the perforated sheet metal change color, reflectivity and opacity depending on the lighting conditions. Even the paint color of the gypsum board tends to take on chameleon-like characteristics.

Jury Comments: "...a work of art."

GEORGE REMINGTON

The couple had a clear agenda of the issues they wished to see resolved. As owners of a sizeable art collection, they wanted a compatible space to house the collection; the current design was at odds with the collection.

Problems included an overly conventional spatial diagram marked by self-contained rooms that bore little relationship to one another.

Acute drawbacks were an absence of natural light and views in certain areas, particularly in the dining room and lanai, where an existing skylight achieved little more than create a claustrophobic effect and harsh contrast.

infill of pivoting perforated metal screens; and the final, a slab wall constructed of field-stone. These materials also compose a transitional reading from urban/polished to rural/rustic, formal to informal.

The demolition of the walls also helped to balance daylight and bring daylight to internal areas that had previously been quite dark. A lighter material palette throughout, combined with lifting the glazing of the skylight and adding cobalt art glass all softened the light intensity.

Both the clients and the architects wanted the architecture to possess a life of its own,

Isoroff Residence

With a rolling 5.6 acre site containing a large woodland marsh, the owners wanted their house to be respectful of the unique landscape, provide an intimate living environment, and yet have the flexibility to accommodate both large and small groups of guests.

Respectful of the landscape, the 9,000 sq. ft. house is positioned on a bluff looking east with a panoramic view of the surrounding area and marsh below. The approaching driveway, which gives alternating views of the house and fence, culminates in a courtyard on the west side of the house.

Site Plan

BRENDA LEWISON

The internal spaces are organized along a north-south masonry wall which pierces through the house. Circulation occurs along this spine and steps down the hill from the communal areas at the north end to the private areas at the south end of the house.

The entry side on the west elevation, expresses the wall and has only three openings. Once inside the entry, the living room, balcony and dining room flow together via cascading stairways and overlook the striking landscape through large glass walls.

The house is a wood frame construction with an exterior of low E insulating glass and a white stucco finish system. The interior includes oak paneled wall cabinetry and hardwood floors.

Jury Comments: "The jury was particularly impressed with the strong organization and massing of the house and its context which they found to be well-sited and serene."

Mahoning County Courthouse—Exterior and Interior Renovation

During the 1950s, the Mahoning County Courthouse underwent a series of renovations which removed the building's original character. Renowned artwork, high molded ceilings, ornamental brass work and wood detailing were only a few of the historic elements that became masked by modern enthusiasms.

The architectural challenge was to mesh the contemporary physical needs of the building with an architectural language of the past. As each phase of the project unfolded, the architects soon became aware of the extreme sensitivity required in the renovation.

eliminate the need for interior window blinds.

Achieving efficient environmental control of the interior presented a monumental design challenge. The task was to provide a complete new heating, ventilating and air conditioning system within a historic structure unaccommodating to current systems.

After extensive demolition, a sophisticated integration of various concealed air-handling units and extensive duct work was implemented resulting in a savings of approximately 65% per year in heating and cooling costs.

The central rotunda space extends vertically through the interior of the building and is capped by a magnificent dome.

allow colorful daylight to grace the interior once again. The faded marble material that united the rotunda with the surrounding corridors was laboriously cleaned and polished to a bright luster last seen decades ago.

The final touch was to accentuate the entire composition with a carefully-designed lighting scheme. New historic replica fixtures were installed at all exposed wall and ceiling surfaces, while more utilitarian high-efficiency fixtures were used where concealed accent lighting was necessary.

Jury Comments: "An absolutely first rate renovation with unusual sensitivity and attention to detail...a tribute to the skills of the artists and craftsmen who participated in the project."

ARTOG, D.G. OLSHAVSKY

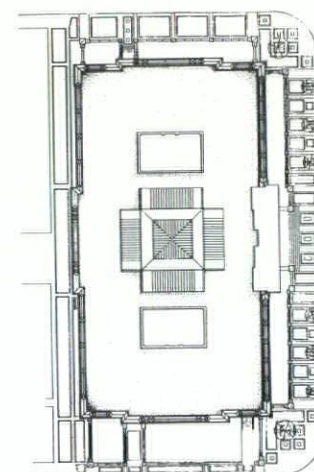

The exterior renovation involved replacing the deteriorated built-up roof with an insulated foam roof system which would easily adapt to the many existing roof penetrations and parapets. The outer facade, scarred with damaged stonework and years of embedded soot from local steel mills, was repaired and chemically cleaned.

A new insulated glass window and door system with bronze framing members replicating the building's historic patterns and detailing, replaced the unsightly and inefficient single-pane steel sash windows and aluminum frame glass entry doors. Adjustable slim shade units were added to subtly protect the facades from severe solar heat gain and glare and

During the restoration, "surgical" investigations were performed to determine the original materials and colors hidden beneath layers of paint. Numerous mock-up paint samples were performed to achieve a well integrated color scheme throughout.

This same sensitivity was used to restore each of the six main courtrooms. Both the rotunda and the courtrooms were adorned with historic murals. Most had become badly faded and deteriorated. Each was meticulously cleaned and restored by trained, professional artists.

All the existing stained glass windows and skylights were removed, completely shop-renovated and reinstalled to

MK-Ferguson Plaza

The renovation of a landmark U.S. Post Office building required the space planning and interior design of the corporate offices and production facilities of the prime tenant, the MK-Ferguson Company, and integrating the building into Cleveland's Tower City complex.

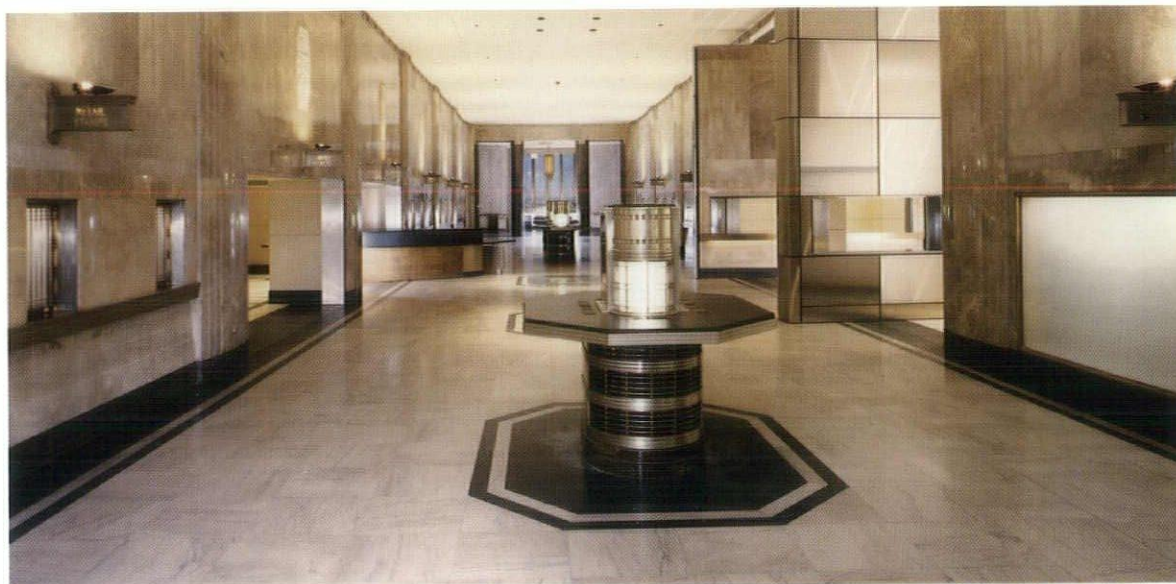

The prime design criteria was to develop a logical circulation pattern at the first floor level, integrate the historic postal lobby with the new east atrium, create a formal entry into the space using the volumes, and preserve the historical integrity of the building.

A central energy plant that serviced the entire Tower City complex was integrated into the lower level.

New openings in the east and west walls of the lobby and the east exterior wall were essential for the building to take advantage of the strategic connection to the hotel, retail development and rapid transit station. To accomplish this, two medallioned panels of the lobby's west wall were removed and then reconstructed on new walls angled to their original positions. The new walls create monumental portals that draw visitors from the lobby into the suddenly revealed loft and light of the East Atrium.

Section

GEORGE REMINGTON

The original building included five full floors with a partial mezzanine. Each floor is approximately 100,000 sq. ft., with tall floor-to-floor heights of 19-22 feet.

By capturing the fifth floor for tenant use and adding a new 40,000 sq. ft. mezzanine, a total of 110,000 additional square feet of usable area was developed, for a building total of 475,000 usable square feet.

The conversion of the "warehouse-like" space to office use necessitated some demolition of the building's interior to create two full-height, skylit atria, and retrofitting and introducing natural light into the fifth floor which originally had a mechanical use.

Within the complex, the most significant organizational feature is the massive, central red "datum" wall. Extending through all six levels of the building, the structure separates private from public areas, screens functionally targeted areas and is a cue to orientation within the immense floors.

Jury Comments: "A brilliant conversion...respectful of the original, but inventive within its own right...an imaginative and creative use of existing space providing beautiful public amenities and a useful office environment."

W.O. Walker Industrial Rehabilitation Center

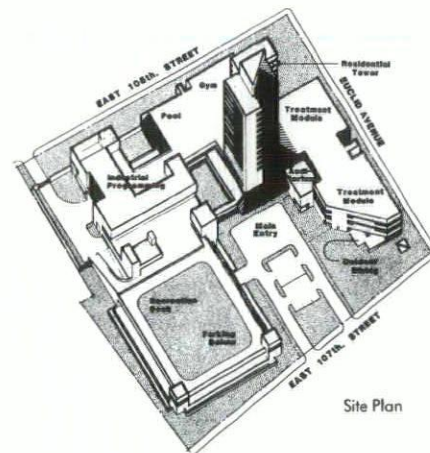

The facility's purpose is to provide treatment and rehabilitation space for injured workers who require a user-friendly facility that is unthreatening and accessible. And since the treatment program is intensive and comprehensive, on-site housing needed to be provided.

The site borders the city, surrounded by key arterial streets. It is the major transfer point for regional transportation. The architects designed a residence tower which provided a terminus to the main street as it angled toward the city. The tower rests at an angle to the art museum lagoon, which provides a natural setting across the street.

Treatment modules were designed to help promote a multi-disciplined approach to client rehabilitation. The plan also included an auditorium, a ¼ mile running track, pool and gymnasium.

Jury Comments: "The architectural design clearly organizes a complex program, and the solution works well at many levels and scales. This is a strong image of a well-planned health care complex exacting in its detailing and follow through."

Buckeye High School

Lesko Associates determined that the site dictated the layout for the new comprehensive high school. The building would replace three older high schools and serve the students as well as the community.

The location was an undeveloped area adjoining a river. The northern portion of the site contained a wooded hillside which ended in a flood plain.

A linear building was designed and situated parallel to the river, well above the flood plain, and built into the lower portion of the hillside.

The silhouette of the building incorporates geometric shapes and movement which work well against the wooded hillside. The setback from the highway affords a dramatic view of the complex.

The building is strongly organized with academic areas defined and separated from common areas. A large corridor runs the entire length of the building connecting all the various areas.

A courtyard in the academic area and the sweeping outdoor views along the corridor provide inspiration and a feeling of community to students and citizens alike.

Centennial Plaza

The architects proposed a street-terminating urban plaza as a means of unifying a complex of three buildings that are to be developed in a not predictable order over an unpredictable period of time. The design problem also involved creating a home for an eight foot tall Venus within the 160 foot by 99 foot, four-to-eleven story void created by the configuration of the three buildings.

The solution involved mediating Venus and the volume of the plaza by introducing a bosque, composed of a three-by-five grid of Halka Locusts. Within the bosque, a pool was created for the Venus.

Plaza Level Plan

MICHAEL MOOSE

Because the serenity of a reinterpreted classical Venus required a tranquil surface, the Glaser team devised a circular basin of black granite with a bull-nosed edge. Water enters through diverters at the bottom of the pool, then sheets over the rounded edge making a pleasant traffic-masking roar as it disappears into a perimeter drain.

Artists were invited to create works which referred to the plaza in some relation to Venus, the pool, the geometry, or the concept of a garden within the city grid.

The project was a first tenant finish of an 18' x 78'6" leased space for a retail shoe store in a new upscale shopping mall. The space included several free standing, structural columns and occurred at an offset in the mall's interior facade.

Several discreet elements which allude to the richness of the urban experience are superimposed on one another to create a variety of overlapping spaces and a tension between juxtaposed forms. Color, contrasting materials and lights work to enrich the spatial experience.

According to the jury, this "playful and inventive treatment engages the customer in a relationship with the merchandise."

Private Residence

The existing one story house was sited on a heavily wooded bluff overlooking the Ohio River Valley, occupying an uncharacteristically secluded parcel of land only one-half mile from Cincinnati's central business district. The existing structure no longer met the needs of a growing family, so the owners, recognizing the virtues of the locale, chose to undertake an ambitious expansion and renovation project.

J. MILES WOLF

Several constraints beyond the existing structure factored in the evolution of the building's design. Foremost was the potentially unstable hillside beneath the house and the high wind loads that accompany a hillside exposure.

Senhauser stabilized the hillside and provided resistance from the wind loads by constructing a three story rigid frame. The support came from five steel trusses which rest on a network of concrete cribbing and piers anchored into the bedrock with steel tie backs.

The support shelters the inset glass walls from direct sunlight and rhythmically diminish the apparent mass of the house.

The completed home contains slightly over 5,000 gross square feet excluding decks and roof terraces.

Ursuline Motherhouse Chapel Renovation

The existing chapel of the Ursuline Sisters of Youngstown, built in the late 1950's, had become outmoded for the expanding and diversifying ministries of the Sisters of this Roman Catholic Order. The Sisters expressed a need for a more intimate worship space that would be more open and accessible to the outside community.

Buchanan Ricciuti and Balog recognized that three principal ideas governed the re-imagining of the space: the unity of the space as a covering for worship; a focus for the gathering aspect of worship and communion; and the reinforcement of procession and other symbolic liturgical elements.

In the renovated chapel, the fixed pews, side aisles, and axial focus of the 30-year old chapel give way to a progression of spaces that begin with an entry re-oriented to the public area of the convent and culminates at the center of the worship space.

Additionally, the original architecture had become outmoded and inefficient in heating the chapel. The architects supplemented the existing in-slab radiant heating system with a new forced air heating and cooling system. Insulation was applied to the interior of all perimeter walls and above the new ceiling line.

Jury Comments: "...the design reshapes the existing chapel spiritually as well as spatially. The details, such as the architect's design of the furniture, are impressive."

value of design integrity and unremitting service to the profession. For this achievement, the firm was selected by a jury of peers to receive the AIA Ohio Gold Medal.

Established in 1973, the Phillip Markwood Architects' clear objectives are to "regularly probe the practice of architecture to examine design issues, influence the educational process and serve the advancement of the profession."

Juries and owners have responded to the firm's work by recognition in five design competitions and the selection of thirteen projects for design awards, nine in the last six years, including three regional and two national awards.

The availability of the firm's resources has been a hallmark of its service to local architectural students, to the community and to the American Institute of Architects (AIA). The firm's principal, Phillip Markwood, FAIA, is a nationally recognized leader in the architectural community, serving as a vice president of the AIA.

Gold Medal

A. Notley Alford, FAIA

A. Notley Alford, FAIA, received the 1991 AIA Ohio Gold Medal, the association's most significant honor. The medal is presented to those individuals who exemplify the highest standards of practice in the architectural profession.

Throughout his career, Notley has been actively and prominently involved in the advancement of the architectural profession. Since his entrance into the profession, Notley Alford has served his clients by striving to meet both budget and program needs. He is a respected member of his community and a recognized leader in Ohio.

Over the last two decades, Notley's tireless and continued efforts in programs of the American Institute of Architects (AIA) were judged to be exemplary. Since 1983, when elected to the institute's national board, Notley has served or chaired over 20 councils, committees and task forces. During this period, he was instrumental in publishing the new Handbook of Professional Practice; You and Your Architect; and The Implementation of Peer Review and the AIA "Code of Ethics."

Notley presides as chairman of the National Judicial Council, the ethics council of the AIA. He also continues to be one of the primary peer reviewers in the country, serving as a team coordinator for reviews nationwide.

"Since his entrance into the profession, Notley Alford has been actively and prominently involved in the advancement of the architectural profession. He is a respected member of his community and a recognized leader in Ohio."

During the 13 years he served as project manager for Lorenz and Williams, Notley worked on three of the firms most notable projects: the NCR World Headquarters, the Gem City Savings Building and the Old Post Office, all in Dayton. He was elected president and CEO of Lorenz & Williams in 1988.

25 Year Building Award

25 Year Building Award

Notre Dame Academy Toledo, Ohio

Emulated both in the region and throughout the state, the Notre Dame Academy, a private high school for girls built in 1959, has been awarded the AIA Ohio 25 Year Building Award. The original program stressed that the design be strong, direct, decisive and exciting. That effect was achieved, and remains so to this day.

The subject of national attention in educational circles at the time it was built, the school was extremely efficient in design, with the original construction an incredibly low $12.50 per sq. ft. Despite its relatively low price, the school contains such high quality, lasting materials as terrazzo floors, full height wood doors, concealed spline acoustical tile ceilings, structural facing tile walls in utility areas, plaster walls throughout plus woods ceilings in many areas.

The facility's setting, enhanced today by the now maturing original landscape, remains one of its strengths. By utilizing the advantages of abundant natural light and exposing the beautiful views, the building is personal, inviting; enhancing the residents educational performance. It's a building ahead of its time with its use of daylighting, orientation and other passive solar concepts.

Unlike other girls schools of the era, the academy's science labs were so fine that college credit courses were taught on-site. Art and commerce facilities were first-rate. Munger incorporated other forward-thinking systems, such as educational TV, a clock/speaker/paging systems, built-in vacuum systems for cleaning and a baseboard forced-air heating system, which were not traditionally integrated into schools at that time.

Sound, practical design, real efficiency in planning, understanding and implementing the positive Bauhaus concepts...are all reasons the building has worn well for over a quarter century. The architecture of the Notre Dame Academy remains a testimony to why the school is still the premier private girls' school in Northeast Ohio.

SELECTING AN ARCHITECT

A well-designed building, one that is handsome, highly functional, responsive to its site and enjoyed by those who use it, is a creation of lasting value, whose worth increases over time. To design such a structure, an architect must balance four distinct forces: aesthetics, or how the building should look; technology, how it is built; economics, the financial constraints; and function, what the building is intended to do.

Responding to their clients' expression of building requirements, architects bring to this art of balancing forces a broad diversity of services, which may be as minimal as preliminary consulting or range across the board to total design, contract development and construction management. As reflections of their education and experience, architects also offer clients their knowledge of site selection and planning, space planning and building materials, and zoning, environmental and construction codes. Negotiating the entire permit process also falls within the purview of architectural services.

Critical to the success of the building process is the quality of the relationship between architects and their clients. Many clients understand this and for them, selecting an architect or architectural firm becomes one of the most important elements in the construction process.

Several criteria come into play when a client selects an architect for a particular project, including education, expertise, outstanding past performance, the ability to communicate fully and well, and a certain chemistry that should click into place between the two.

One approach to an effective selection process entails compiling a list of candidates based on suggestions from friends and associates, and the client's own knowledge of architects whose work they have admired. AIA Ohio and any one of the seven chapters can also provide lists of architectural firms in various regions of the state. Architectural firms will frequently provide brochures and other informational material on request.

When the list is winnowed to a few candidates, clients may arrange an interview with selected firms to discuss their proposed projects. The interview is an integral part of the selection process, providing the potential client an opportunity to ascertain the quality of the firm's work, its experience relative to the client's particular project and the capacity to take on the work.

An interview and, frequently, a full presentation indicate whether or not a firm comprehends the requirements of a specific project. This is where ease of communication becomes so important. With excellent communication, the best ideas of architects and clients can result in a highly effective synergism.

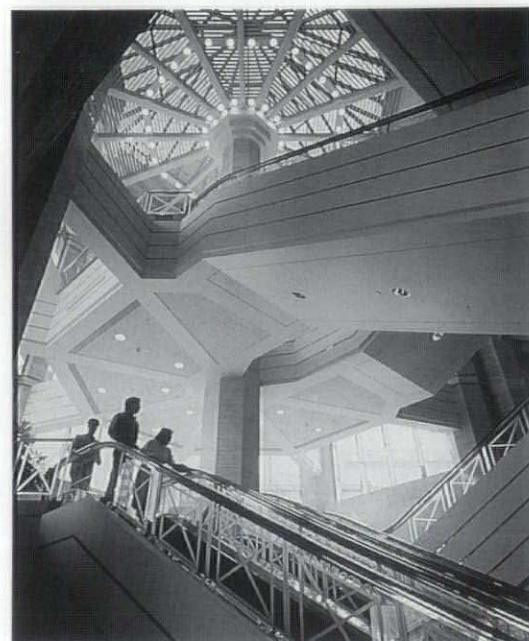

Architects are able to assist clients in clearly defining a project and in seeing new solutions they hadn't considered. The ability to address a wide range of alternatives in the pre-planning stage is part of an architect's professional armory, a preliminary to unleashing the creativity and practical knowledge that translate clients' ideas into structural reality.

What is an architect?

The architect is the one professional person, registered to practice architecture under the laws of the State, who is equipped by education, training and experience, to guide you through the design and construction of your building or renovation project.

The architect will consider your functional needs, your budget, the restrictions of your site, building codes, engineering principles, and construction technology to design a building for you with creativity that is beautiful, strong and functional.

Architects may be involved in the design of anything used by people—from cities, 100 story office towers, hospitals, schools—to houses, interiors, furniture, or even dishes. Since the beginnings of civilization architects have been practicing their art in much the same way, although today's architects make extensive use of modern technology to assist in design and drawing.

Professional Education

On the national level, to achieve licensure and the privilege to use the title "Architect," most licensed architects today will have completed a four year pre-professional degree in architectural studies coupled with a professional Master of Architecture degree, accredited by the National Architectural Accrediting Board (NAAB).

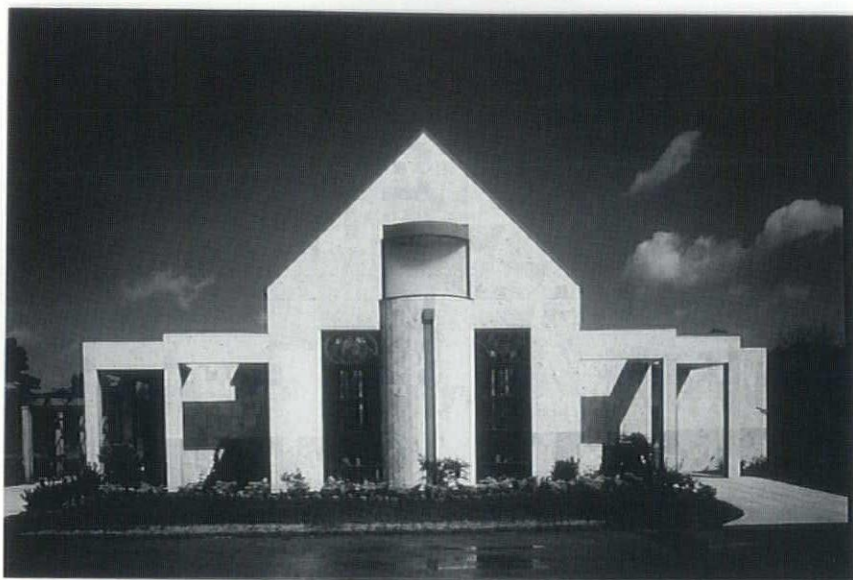

However, a candidate's professional education is but a prelude to the required three year professional practice internship of diversified practical training serving as an employee of, and under the direct supervisory control of, a practicing licensed architect.

What is a registered architect?

At present, the NCARB Architect Registration Examination (ARE), is given in 49 states and five U.S. jurisdictions (excluding the state of California which administers its own state examination).

Project: McDonough Chapel, Resurrection Cemetery

Location: Youngstown, Ohio

Architects: Buchanan Ricciuti & Balog Architects

Each applicant must pass examination in the following areas: pre-design; site design; building design; structural technology-lateral forces; structural technology-long span; mechanical plumbing, electrical and life safety; materials and methods of construction; and construction documents and services.

Why hire an architect?

Whether your project is a small renovation or a large new building, it is important to hire an architect as soon as possible after you have decided to remodel or build. He or she should be the first professional you consult. Your architect will bring you an independent and fresh look at your needs and suggest creative ways of meeting those needs. He or she will be able to save you time, money, and avoid many problems during the building process. In the United States, as in most countries, drawings for buildings and changes to existing buildings, by law, must be prepared by a registered architect.

How do you select an architect?

Typically, architects are generalists and produce a great variety of projects. There are no two projects that are alike, and each new building brings with it a unique mixture of needs, people, location and money.

Architectural firms come in many sizes and types. The average firm is made up of 5 to 10 people, but many are smaller (1 to 2 people), and some have over 100 architects on their staff. Some firms specialize in one or more project types, others do not. Some have structural, mechanical or electrical engineers on their staff, while others select the consultant most appropriate to work for them for each specific project. Each architectural firm brings a different combination of skills, experience, interest and values to its projects.

You should arrange interviews with several architects to personally review their capabilities, define the scope of the projects, discuss their fees, and determine your compatibility to work together throughout the project.

Successful projects result when good architects and good clients form good relationships with each other. The most thoughtful architects are as careful in selecting their clients as owners are in selecting architects.

Compensating Your Architect

Experienced clients recognize that adequate compensation for the architect is in their best interest as it assures the type and level of service needed to fulfill their expectations. You may have questions about how to arrive at the appropriate compensation for your project. Some of the most frequent questions are answered here:

How much should I expect to pay an architect? Your payment to an architect is generally a matter

Project: Student Dormitories, Antioch College

Location: Yellow Springs, Ohio

Architects: Schooley Caldwell Associates

of discussion between you and the architect. Payment will generally reflect the types and levels of professional service provided. Compensation will vary depending on the amount of services you need and how complex or experimental the project is.

What methods of compensation are available? These are most common:

- A stipulated sum based on the architect's compensation proposal
- A stipulated sum per unit, based on what is to be built (for example, the number of square feet, apartments, rooms)
- A percentage of the construction cost
- Hourly rates

What is normally included in an architect's services?

The services provided by the architect and his or her interdisciplinary team are subject to negotiations between the architect and owner and depend on the size and complexity of the project and the owner's needs. The contract should set forth clearly what services the architect will provide.

The following list includes services which may be provided by the architect's team in a typical project:

- Building code analysis
- Building program review
- Conceptual design
- Design development
- Civil engineering
- Structural engineering

In addition, an architect may also provide one or more of the following services if you need them:

- Detailed functional programs
- Site selection assistance
- Feasibility studies
- Existing building inspection and evaluation
- Measured drawings
- Environmental impact studies
- Landscape architecture
- Interior design
- Kitchen equipment selection
- Hospital equipment design
- Facilities management
- Perspective rendering
- Finished presentation models
- Product design
- Computer drawing database
- Construction management
- Full time construction representation

- Post construction use evaluation
- Cost estimating

What is a successful building project?

A successful building project is one that responds to owner and user needs and aspirations, is built in time and within budget, and contributes to the quality of our communities and our lives within them.

Successful projects result from clients and architects who form good professional, business, and often personal relationships. These relationships are formed early in the design process, and they are nourished by clear communication, mutually understood expectations, and a willingness of both client and architect to understand and accept their responsibilities for realizing a successful project.

PROFESSIONAL LIABILITY INSURANCE

save you money.*

Now, there are even more ways to save money with the CNA/Schinnerer professional liability program* for architects and engineers.

Longevity and loss prevention, for example, both pay off because we give firms with good claims experience:

- A 5% credit if they've been CNA/Schinnerer policyholders three to four years.

Or,

- A 10% credit for being CNA/Schinnerer policyholders for five or more years.

Plus,

- A 5% credit for implementing their own loss prevention programs.

These credits are in addition to our traditional underwriting credits for firms with acceptable claims experience.

You work hard to manage your risks—both professional and financial. Let CNA/Schinnerer support your efforts. Have your independent agent contact Schinnerer.

*The CNA Insurance Companies and Victor O. Schinnerer & Company, Inc. are proud to have earned the commendation of the AIA and NSPE/PEPP.

Nearly 100 years of experience, over $30 billion in assets and high ratings from independent financial rating services** demonstrate CNA's ability to pay claims now and in the future.

Call to Save 55%

The AIA Trust has developed a new, lower cost health insurance alternative that's especially designed for small firms and sole proprietors.

Called the Capital Saver Plan, the premiums are up to 55% lower than other plans. Yet it has excellent coverage to protect you financially from the high cost of medical bills for major illnesses and injuries.

In addition to $1,000,000 of major medical coverage, the Capital Saver Plan also includes life insurance and accidental death and dismemberment coverage. Plus, you can choose to include dental/orthodontia and disability benefits for even more comprehensive protection.

To receive a free information kit about the AIA's Capital Saver Major Medical Plan, just call TOLL FREE

HOT DIP GALVANIZING WHY GALVANIZING WORKS

The excellent corrosion resistance of hot dip galvanizing steel is due to the twofold nature of the coating. The zinc coating provides barrier and cathodic protection to the underlying steel surface.

During the galvanizing process, steel reacts with molten zinc to form a series of zinc-iron alloy layers which, together with the outer zinc layer, are metallurgically bonded to the surface. The resulting barrier coating has a very low corrosion rate and, because of the hard alloy layers, is highly resistant to mechanical damage. Galvanized steel is much less susceptible to coating damage from handling than is painted steel.

As the name implies, hot dip galvanizing requires complete immersion of the work piece in molten zinc. This process ensures a uniform coating on all surfaces, even on those areas not normally accessible to mechanical applicators.

Zinc corrodes preferentially to steel and provides cathodic protection to areas of bare steel (up to 1/4 inch wide) accidentally exposed in service. The sacrificial nature of zinc prevents the steel from corroding adjacent to the galvanized coating, thus preventing undercutting and blistering of the protective film. In comparison, exposed steel on painted surfaces will corrode immediately. The resulting rust occupies several times the volume of steel from which it was formed, causing the lifting and subsequent flaking of the adjacent paint film.
