BIG BILL

Big Bill Thacker, of course. United Virginia Bank's big man in local government finance. Chances are you know Bill personally; if not, you know that he deserves to be called "Big Bill" by his record of getting things done.

Bill Thacker rides the whole range of local government financial matters. His expert counsel is yours to help you find effective and efficient solutions to your financing problems—planning bond issues to finance long-term community growth—paying agent and trustee on bond issues—short-term tax and bond anticipation loans—temporary investment of idle funds.

Bill Thacker's office is in Richmond, but he's on the move a lot, working with United Virginia Banks throughout the state—working for Virginia's local government units.

NEWPORT NEWS. WE'VE LAUNCHED MORE THAN 500 SHIPS.

But wait 'til you see our encore. When we started out in 1886, we were just a small ship repair yard. We named the company Newport News. Because we were proud to be doing business here.

Today we're the largest shipyard in the world. And we're still proud to call ourselves Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company. Because a lot of the people who helped put us where we are today come from right here on the Virginia Peninsula.

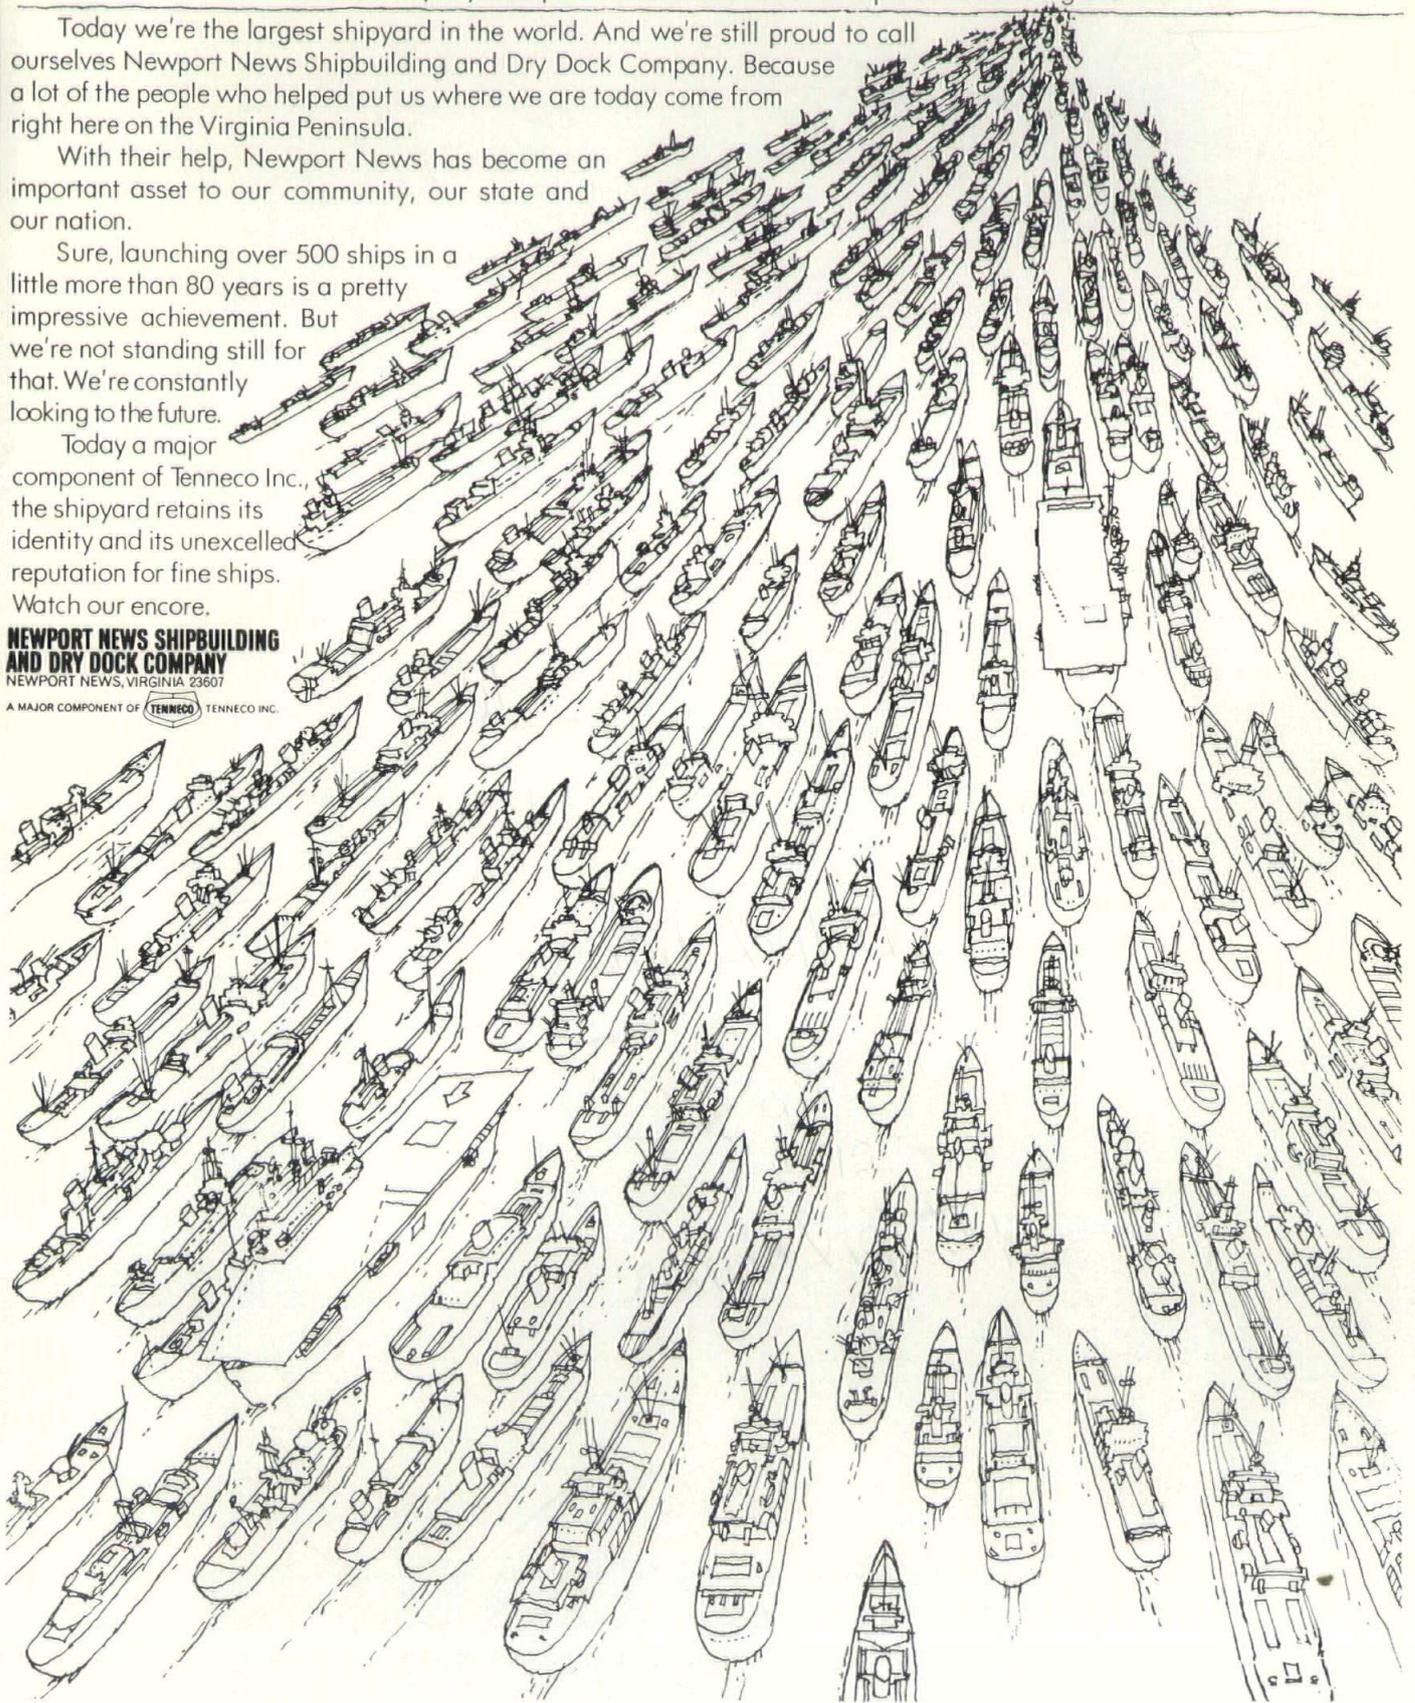

With their help, Newport News has become an important asset to our community, our state and our nation.

Sure, launching over 500 ships in a little more than 80 years is a pretty impressive achievement. But we're not standing still for that. We're constantly looking to the future.

Today a major component of Tenneco Inc., the shipyard retains its identity and its unexcelled reputation for fine ships. Watch our encore.

High in the Virginia Alleghanies, a southern sun adds to the pleasure of winter sports.

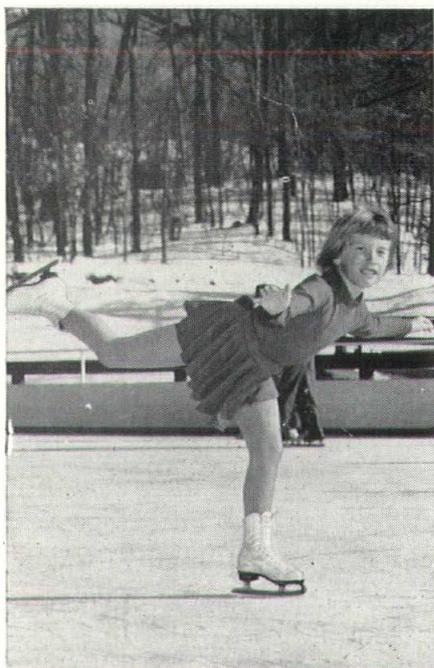

The addition of man-made snow maintains a consistently good skiing surface.

Safe trestle cars carry you almost a mile to the head of the main slope.

HOLIDAY AT THE HOMESTEAD

The skating rink is a favorite with beginners and experts—like the young lady above.

The winter sports lodge includes ski shop, rentals, restaurant, and Sepp Kober Ski School.

After a day on the slopes, a dip in the pool, a rubdown at the spa, then on to music and dancing.

"Which One Is the Mayflower?"

A YOUNG OFFICIAL in the Virginia public school system recently took some visiting Europeans to Jamestown, which he had told them considerably about in advance. He and the visiting couple were part of a tourist line, but the Europeans, in their absorption in the scenes, paid no attention to the other tourists. Then, as the whole group paused when the models of the three ships came into view, in the momentary silence, one clipped female voice rang out clearly. "Which one is the Mayflower?"

The Europeans turned to their Virginia guide with puzzled expressions. "What does she mean?"

The Virginian gave a defeated shrug and said, "All of them are the Mayflower."

If it is true that a good general knows when to retreat, it probably follows that good realists know when to give up fighting a myth. As the school official recognized at Jamestown, looking directly at the three ships, nothing is going to change the national belief that America was founded at Plymouth Rock by the Pilgrims who landed on the Mayflower. Rooted in the mythology that forms the national consciousness, this belief includes the impression that the Pilgrims (or Puritans) moulded the American character, its ethics and values, that this Pilgrim-formed character was reflected in the governing institutions of the American republic, and, in summary, all that was good, virtuous, moral and that typified the ideal derived from New England. So be it.

1972 can mark the heralding of a new age in Virginia if we accept that reality and set our sights on a future beyond the 1976 celebration. This is by no means to suggest that Virginia curtail participation in the 1776 Bicentennial. All our history should be stressed continuously. For that, we are most fortunate in the visual history the state possesses in its historic sites, of which Mount Vernon and Monticello are only the most famous among dozens, including the plantations of Berkeley and Shirley which were settled years before the Mayflower left Britain; the restoration at Williamsburg is unique in all the United States, the re-creation at Jamestown offers a most moving experience, and what real estate developments have left of the battlefields of the Civil War continue to offer a rewarding source of investigation to scholars, avocationalists and the more enlightened tourists.

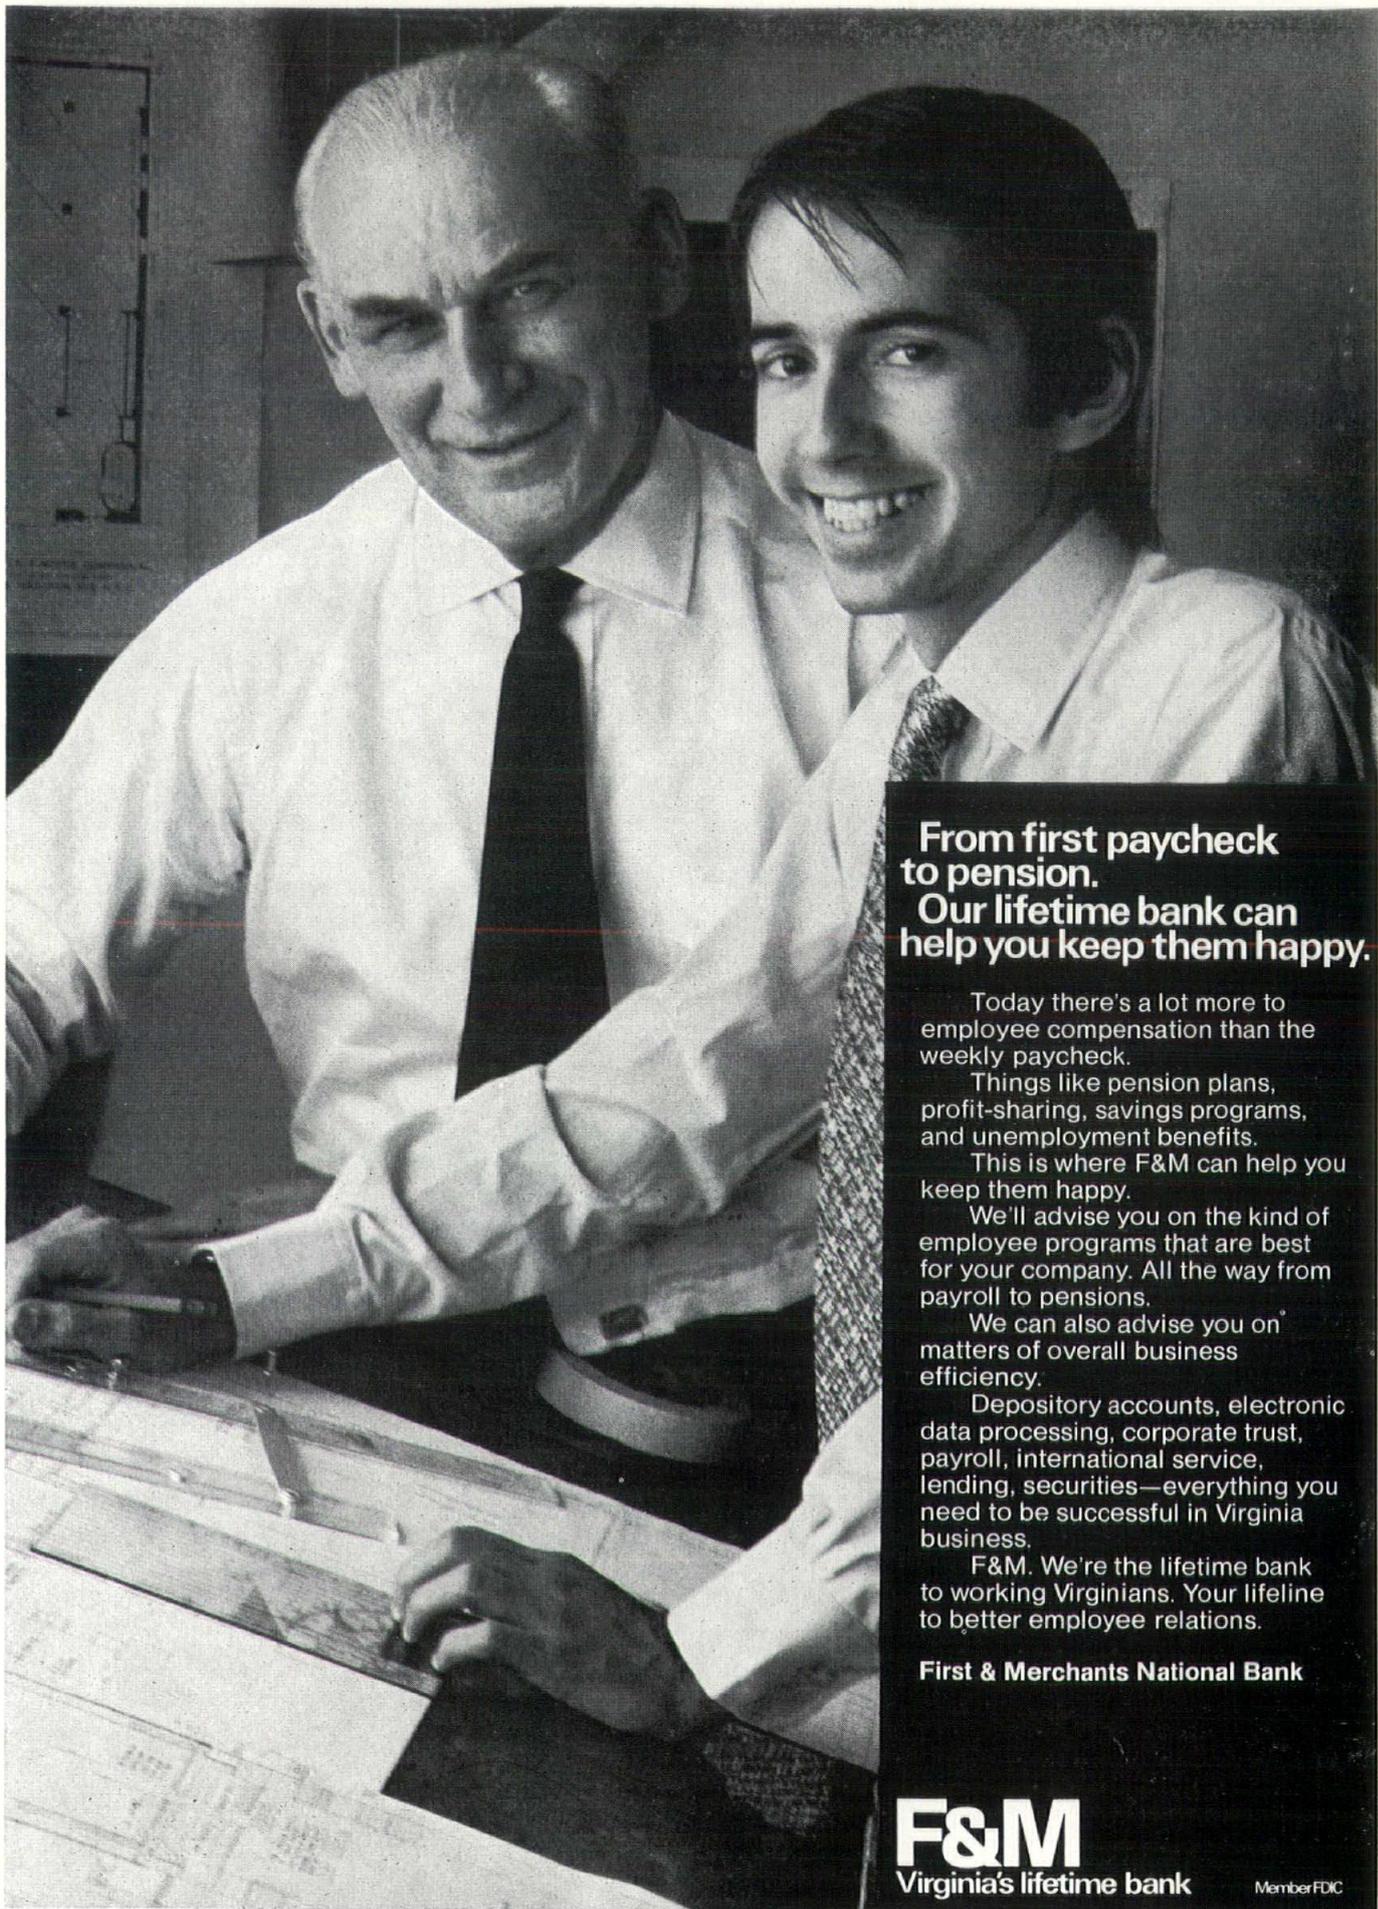

All such sites essentially offer an experience of the past, a sense of another age. But they do little or nothing to change anyone's preconceptions. The more a visitor knows about a place he is going to see before he comes, the more he gets out of a visit; or, without a previous background, the receptive visitor can achieve some recapture through an informed and intelligent guide. Without a guide or previous knowledge, visitors will get little out of a quick view of most historic sites. With this in mind, it seems that the most useful action the Bicentennial Commission can take in commemorating 1776 is to provide facilities such as its proposed "information stations" designed to give visitors an experience with Virginia's past.

It would be pointless to try to re-educate a public (Continued on page 119)

It's nothing to crow about... just yet!

A woodland that's been clear-cut isn't a pretty sight. . . but look for the new forest beside the stumps. It will spring up more rapidly in full sunlight than in the shadow of other competitive growth. The Virginia Timberlands Reforestation Act may offer you financial assistance in reforesting your own acres. Let us consult with you, without obligation.

MICHIE TAVERN MUSEUM

A Famous Tavern
of the 1700's

A wealth of traditional charm clings to Early American taverns. The very words create an atmosphere of candlelight, graciousness and hospitality. At Michie Tavern, the pages of history are turned back over 200 years, where a striking portrayal of pre-Revolutionary life may still be observed.

After your tour of the Museum, visit "The Ordinary," a converted log house where people meet and enjoy the food of yesteryear.

Don't let cancer scare you to death.

If there's one thing we must make you aware of it's this:

When discovered early, most cancers are curable. 1,500,000 Americans who are cured of cancer are proof.

No one on record, however, has ever been cured of cancer by worrying about it.

If you suspect you have cancer, do the smart thing; make an appointment with your doctor.

"Which One Is The Mayflower?"

by calling attention to the events in Virginia which contributed to the precipitation of the Revolution and to the men, trained in the House of Burgesses, who contributed leadership in all areas
—Washington in the field, Jefferson with the pen, Richard Henry Lee with eloquence, Peyton Randolph with parliamentary guidance and Benjamin Harrison in committee. The Americans' belief that the Pilgrims, and not Virginia's House of Burgesses, provided the character that was reflected in the governing institutions of the republic has long transcended the fact that from the founding of the United States until mid-nineteenth century only two one-term presidents, the Adamsses, came from New England, while four of the first five presidents were Virginians and seven Virginians (although Harrison) came via Ohio) had been president by 1850.

The real break with the Virginia influence came not from the Pilgrims but from Jackson, a Carolina-born Tennessean, who was about as un-Puritan as the states could produce. His successor was an elegant product of New York, a state which made its own considerable contributions to the whole Revolutionary movement and whose Alexander Hamilton was a profound influence in the early government. New England provided Benedict Arnold.

But, aside from the futility of continuing a rear-guard action against a myth, 1776 is simply too remote for a people whose minds are shut against their own history. Even the over-celebrated centennial of the Civil War did nothing to change the sets of the public mind, and the Civil War was much closer to our collective consciousness than the Revolution. After a couple of battle re-enactments in 1961, interest faded, and no attempt was made even to call attention to the truly crucial Seven Days Battle in 1962.

That battle was historically crucial because if Lee had lost in his attempt to break McClellan's siege on Richmond, the capitol would have fallen and the war ended before Lincoln issued his expedient war measure of the Emancipation Proclamation—and just imagine how a brief Civil War would be interpreted if it couldn't be said that "Lincoln fought the war to free the slaves." But, as the Centennial went, nothing disturbed the Lincoln myth, and Lee, Jackson, Stuart and A. P. Hill (each of whom hated slavery) descend into history eternally stig-matized as fighting to preserve slavery.
With this example, there seems little chance that the 1976-1983 celebration can do more than entertain with spectacles that mean little the next day except, as mentioned, with information centers to aid those who wish to experience the past.

For the truth of the matter is that the great principles of 1776 have practically no relevance today. The government was formed for a thinly populated country of farmers, and the Virginians contingent particularly believed that cities and their evils belonged back in Europe. The founding fathers believed that the best government was the least government and that we should avoid entangling foreign alliances—i.e., exist in a self-sufficient isolation designed for a people of self-sufficient individualists. As for the grievances held against Great Britain by the colonials, the citizens of the United States today endure more exploitation from their government combine of corporations-politicians-bureaucrats than any thing imagined by George Washington at his maddest.

The conflict between the colonies and the mother country was on the surface very simple. A faction in parliament which was usually able to get a majority, insisted on maintaining the principle of Parliament's right to impose external taxes (similar to sales taxes) on the colonials. Virginians had long submitted to outrageous controls on their economic life, including heavy charges imposed on their big money crop of tobacco, which the growers were forced to sell only to the British market, but they were among the leaders in resisting the principle of Parliament's right to impose external taxes. Actually the slogan, "taxation without representation," covered an amalgam of resentments, varying in the different colonies, and the colonials' awareness of these resentments had increased as they became transformed into a separate people, Americans. The majority of Virginia's leaders, as well as leaders in other colonies and an enlightened minority in Parliament, wanted Great Britain to make changes in its policies which would remove the obvious grievances and prevent secession. One of Jefferson's proposals actually anticipated the British Commonwealth of Nations.

There was nothing in the colonial acts of (what is now called) "self-determination" that would be applicable today. It is true that various economists regard the governmental power of corporations as exercising a modern style colonialism, in which that elusive figure, "the average citizen," is the exploited colonial. At the period of the controversial Lockheed hand-out, the Associated Press discovered that it is customary for the government to hand out millions annually to industries and businesses.

In the highly praised book, America, Inc., documented statements explain how the quota on crude oil imports (introduced by Eisenhower and upheld by Nixon, despite an adverse report on the practice turned in by his own personally appointed committee) costs automobile users $5,000,000,000 a year by removing competition from the giant oil companies. But this cannot be called "taxation without representation," since we have our elected representatives, including the president, there in Washington to make sure that cheaper crude oil does not get imported in sufficient quantities to force the oil companies to reduce prices.

Under the name of "free enterprise," this colonialism permits unions and corporations to pass on continually higher wages in continually higher costs to average Citizens in such monopolies as the automobile industry, the telephone industry, railroads, copper and steel. The technical requirements and the prohibitive costs of starting new companies where a few giants control transportation, communication and basic metals give a few unions and a few corporations a monopoly which allows crippling, disruptive strikes to be made with an abandon that might well appear to reduce poor Average Citizen (who suffers the inconvenience and pays the bills to the status of an exploited colonial. Even the unions might no longer be exempt from industry's colonialism as industry increasingly uses cheap foreign labor for plants and parts.

Yet, the contemporary American colonials certainly are in no position to experiment with an assertion of independence: when the Southern States tried to duplicate the early revolutionaries with their self-determination movement, and that only 70 years after the founding of the republic, they were branded as traitors or worse, and have been castigated ever since.

No, it is better that we do not seek any guidance from 1776. We are in a world that would have been inconceivable (as well as highly undesirable) to the leaders of that pastoral age, and an element in the current muddle undoubtedly results from the pernicious misinterpretations of Jefferson's ill-advised vaporings about "every man is created equal." As mentioned earlier, it is fine to call visitors' attention to the "quality of life" in 1776 Virginia, qualities which produced individuals of vision and the courage of their convictions. But what we need more is the quality to produce individuals of vision for today's problems and needs: we need to produce leaders who can act for our future as the leaders in 1776 acted for their future.

For one distinction of the Virginians of the 1776 era was that they led toward a future which, in their day, was totally uncharted. In our day America, including Virginia, seems always on the defensive about its problems. Not confronting problems until they have reached crisis proportions, governments at all levels rush into hasty remedies which create new problems without getting at the roots of the existing problems. Governments at all levels—national, state and local—simply ignore a complex of worsening fundamental problems.

Probably the most obvious quality lost from the 1776 days is the sense of responsibility to society. Today's lack of responsibility ranges everywhere from the individual who tosses empty beer cans into your front-yard flowers to the big operators with expertise in avoiding high taxes. Industrial plants got a lot of adverse publicity in the sudden awakening to pollution, but individuals and families do their unsung best to contribute to the problems of environment, and litterers are spoiling national parks "from sea to shining sea."

Maybe the country is too big and sprawling, containing too many diverse elements and too much of the population in perpetual motion on wheels, for the majority of citizens to feel a sense of responsibility to the society. For such responsibility has historically begun at the community level, expanding toward the whole, and it is a commonplace that the individual's identity with a community has been generally dissipated, in some localities more than in others. In Virginia, where place-identification was formerly intense, the population shift to metropolitan urban centers tends to dilute the old community sense. Further to weaken the community sense, the state's political structure has suburban counties actually in conflict with the old urban core cities which they surround. Certainly the qualities of leadership and responsibility shown in 1776 would change an antiquated system which has members of the same community working in opposition to one another, and introduce new political entities in which all energies could work for the same ends. This would be a start in Virginia toward reestablishing the community sense with which the state could again be among the leaders in acting for the future.

A conservatively progressive state such as Oregon, for instance, has become the first in the nation to act to control the littering of its environment.

A bill, which passed both houses with large majorities, will make mandatory a 5¢ deposit on all beer and soft-drink cans and bottles, and outlaw all cans with detachable pull-tab openers. In the neighboring state of Washington, a comparable bill was defeated after industry waged a concentrated campaign in which it was charged that as much as $2,000,000 was spent. There the neo-colonialism exists side-by-side with forward-thinking community action.

While Oregon is an example of the type of action a state can take for the future, in Boston private business set a different kind of example. Prudential Life, which has about 700 employees commuting into Boston by car, offered 150 free parking spaces in the basement of its building to employees who would come in car pools, preference going to the car with the largest numbers of riders. Five clerical workers would win a space over four executives. With an average of four per car, this would have only 150 cars as opposed to 600 clogging the Boston streets in mornings and afternoons. If ten other companies would follow the lead, there would be a significant decrease in the estimated 33,000 automobiles entering and leaving Boston every work day.

As the Ontario premier said, when the cabinet permanently halted work on an expressway into Toronto on which $73,000,000 had already been spent, "the city does not belong to the automobile." But here in Virginia, where money is being allocated for the bicentennial celebration of the deeds of forward-thinking men who risked their lives, our governor has published a report on our future transportation needs which takes the position that "the whole state belongs to the automobile."

Projecting a need of 18 billion dollars for all transportation facilities, from 1974 to 1990, Governor Holton marked 17.2 billion of this to highways. As this comes down to the state's citizens, in those sixteen years each of Virginia's residents will pay $265 a year for new highways, $10.25 a year for mass transit, $3.50 for airports, and all of $1.00 to railroads, and 50 cents to ports. As of now, more than half of Virginia's citizens live in the three major urban areas of Washington, Richmond and Norfolk-Newport News, and more than three-quarters live in major or lesser urban areas, with a steady drift toward further concentration. Instead of emulating those Virginians who risked to change the future, Governor Holton—in effect, dismissing alternatives to automobile commuting—plans to perpetuate the unsatisfactory system (with its ravages of the countryside and derangement to the cities) which the vice-president of his own political party has spoken of changing.

Vice-President Agnew made the point that we need to combine a good highway system with a good urban transportation system. "For too long," he said in speech, "we have thought in terms of having either rapid transit or automobiles and trucks as the backbone of city's transportation. We now know, our friends overseas have accepted along, that it is a combination of both. While no one would advocate eliminating the motor vehicle, as Agnew said, "We can reduce our dependence on by enhancing the attractiveness of other forms of transportation."

There is nothing spectacularly forward looking in this advice: urbanologists have been writing for years about the absolute necessity of breaking the dependence on the automobile and developing alternatives, and the deteriorating effect of this dependence on our cities is apparent to all. So what must Virginia, while preparing to celebrate the past glories of a community-conscious citizenry, lag in the rearguard of all programming for coping with the future problems of today's already fragmented citizenry? Is it true, as hostile critics say of Virginians, that we look back too much to have the capacity to look forward?

While this is not intended in any way to minimize the beneficial aspects of the bicentennial (including especially the commercial advantages in increased tourism), it is to suggest that if our state government wished to act upon the lessons of 200 years ago, a true emulation of the revolutionaries would also form a commission similar to Daniel Bell's to prepare for the Year 2000. However, it must be said in all honesty that such a suggestion is strictly in the realm of wistful wishfulness. Most likely, after 1983 a commission will be formed to celebrate the quadricentennial of Jamestown in 2007. For that commission, here is a highly practical suggestion: feature the arrival of the Mayflower at Jamestown.

We handle our money as if it were yours.

Because it is.

As the plan that protects one out of every three people you know, Blue Cross-Blue Shield feels a real obligation to help you get the most for your health care dollar.

By working with hospitals and physicians within the communities we serve, we can accomplish a great deal. The following cost-control activities are designed to assure Virginians the finest health care available at the lowest possible cost.

We provide more outpatient benefits to help reduce hospital stays.

To eliminate or shorten expensive hospital stays and keep our rates down, we encourage the use of less costly outpatient care by offering benefits for accident care in a hospital emergency room, minor surgery, X-ray examinations leading to admission within 30 days and certain other pre-admission tests.

We work with hospitals and doctors to ensure reasonable payment for services.

Through a continuing study of Virginia hospitals and physicians, we can keep abreast of the current rates charged for different services. Comparison and cost reviews tell us whether these rates are related to the costs of providing the services and, therefore, equitable to both provider and public.

We investigate duplicate coverage and eliminate duplicate payment.

We help to hold down our rates by checking to see that Blue Cross-Blue Shield pays no benefits which should, in fact, be paid by Medicare, Workmen's Compensation or another group health care program.

We search out any medically unnecessary claims or billing errors.

By regularly examining both hospital and physician claim reports we make sure that Blue Cross-Blue Shield rates are not inflated because some subscribers received benefits not provided in their contracts or remain in the hospital longer than necessary. We also check for any possible billing errors to certify that our subscribers are not inadvertently overcharged or the providers underpaid.

We work within the community to help plan new services and facilities.

To promote the most efficient and economical use of facilities, Blue Cross-Blue Shield works directly with hospitals, doctors, and community leaders to help assure that the community has hospital rooms where they're needed most, and that, wherever possible, expensive equipment is shared within an area, so that duplication doesn't cause inflated health care costs.

We keep our operating costs down.

We make sure that our methods of prepayment for health care and our activities to control health care costs consume no more than 10¢ out of every dollar you pay us. The rest—every penny of it—is paid out to doctors and hospitals for services rendered to our subscribers.

Your Employees Should Ask About A Credit Union - - -

Could You Answer?

The Following Facts May Help - - - - -

1. A Credit Union is an association of people, owned and democratically controlled by their members who agree to save their money together and to make loans to each other at low interest.
2. Membership is open to all within the group regardless of race, color or creed.
3. A Credit Union teaches its members thrift by encouraging them to save regularly. Members are paid dividends on their savings.
4. A Credit Union provides its members low cost loans. The interest rate on Credit Union loans is established by the elected officials of the Credit Union. There are no extra charges.
5. Most Credit Unions offer Loan Protection Insurance without additional charge to eligible borrowers which means that loans are automatically repaid in case the member dies or becomes totally and permanently disabled.
6. A Credit Union's funds are protected in many ways:
 - a. Credit Unions are chartered under either Federal or State Law and are supervised by the chartering agency. Examiners inspect Credit Union records regularly.
 - b. The Supervisory Committee of members audit Credit Union records each year.
 - c. Credit Unions are required by law to carry surety bond coverage.
7. A Credit Union is a separate corporation, owned and operated entirely by its members and the sponsoring organization has no legal or financial responsibility for it.
