

SECTION 7.1-32. The flag of the Commonwealth shall hereafter be made of bunting or merino. It shall be a deep blue field, with a circular white centre of the same material. Upon this circle shall be painted or embroidered, to show on both sides alike, the coat-of-arms of the State, as described in Section 7.1-26, for the obverse of the great seal of the Commonwealth; and there shall be a white silk fringe on the outer edge, furthest from the flag-staff. This shall be known and respected as the flag of Virginia.

ASPHALT PAVING

The Before and After Surface

Asphalt paving—as an access road or strip—permits vehicles or equipment to use construction sites at the start of the project.

After its temporary service during construction, the layers of asphalt are converted into a permanent surface for the intended use.

Modern, full-depth asphalt is the only kind of paving material that can serve building contractors and their customers before and during building construction, as well as after completion.

How? Well, asphalt paving—as an access road or strip—permits vehicles and equipment to get into and use construction sites right at the start of the project. This kind of paving is called "stage construction." And usually it involves:

From the start of the project, an asphalt paving mat supports trucks, cars, and equipment as they move in and out of the project site. It enables construction to continue, even in bad weather. If it is a road or highway job, traffic can use the paving even before final completion.

After its temporary service during the construction period the initial layers of asphalt paving are easily and effectively converted into a permanent surface for the use intended. Usually, the original courses of asphalt paving serve as a base for additional layers of asphaltic material, thus providing a full-depth surface to serve present and future needs.

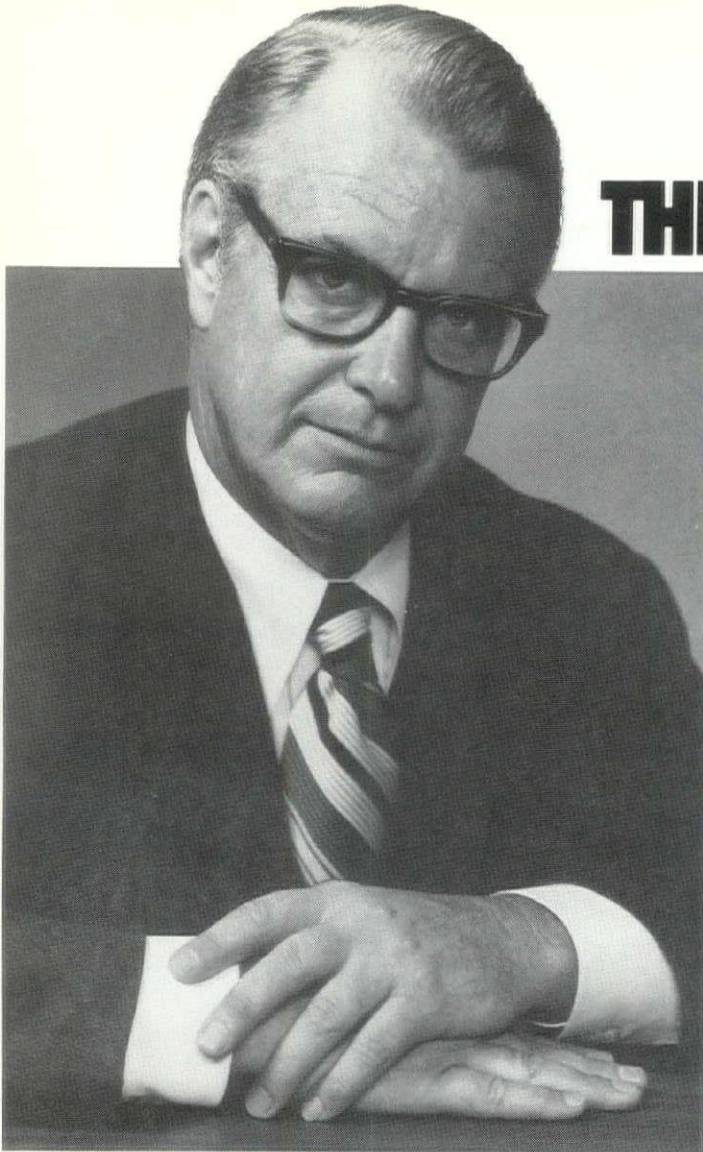

Yes, asphalt is economical, dependable, and versatile. It's the only surface that's with you from the start of your construction work through its completion—and still with you, serving your needs, many years into the future.

THEY'RE LOOKING TO YOU TO SELECT A BUILDER.

NOW, WHO DO YOU TURN TO AND WHY?

A professional. An AGC builder who can take all the responsibility of producing your job from beginning to end.

A builder who can guarantee costs and quality before construction.

An AGC builder is an individual you can rely on. He's a professional who'll stand between you and a million uncertainties, and make sure your job is completed on time at the lowest possible cost.

But most of all he's a businessman, like you, who knows the importance of sound business practices. And who'll apply his years of know-how and experience to making sure construction proceeds smoothly for you.

As a member of the Virginia Branch of the Associated General Contractors of America, he can offer you skill, responsibility and integrity. And that's a pretty good reason for selecting a builder, and a good foundation to build on.

of America.

FINE BRICK IS A LOT LIKE FINE CHINA

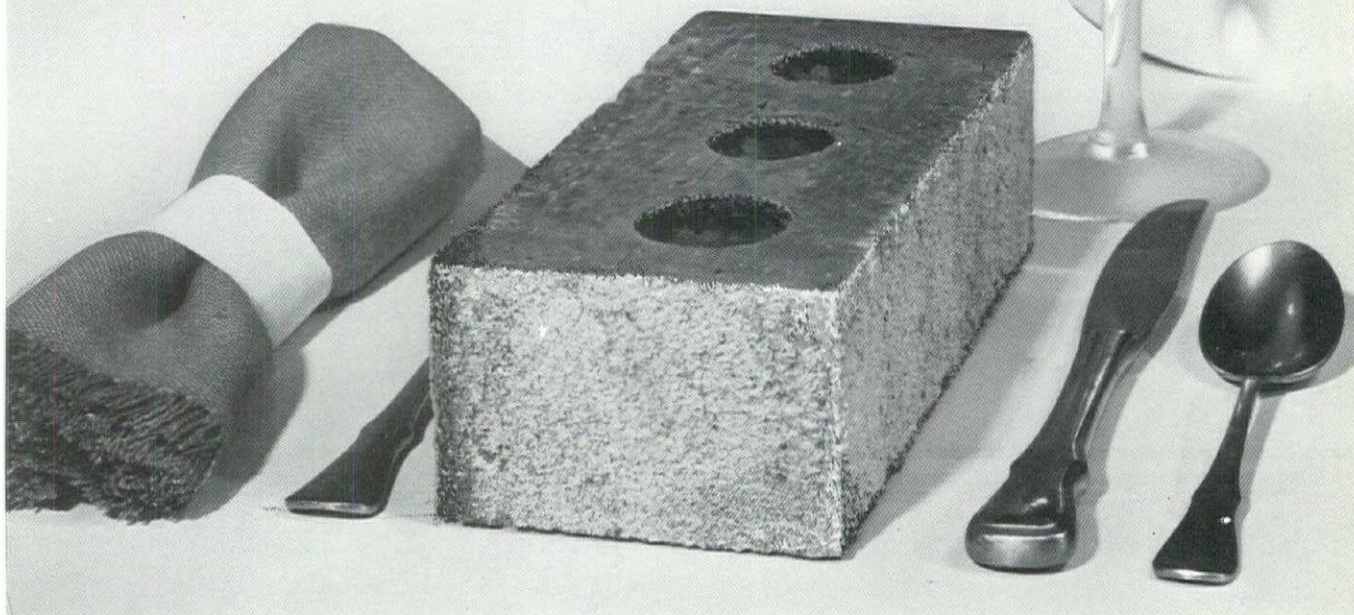

When tapped together, fine brick, like fine china, produces a ring all its own. And, like china, the ring of brick is an indicator of its quality.

The tones produced by brick vary according to the finish and texture of the end product. (A ceramic engineer will often make a quick kiln test for cracks by listening to the ring of the newly fired brick.) The sound range is enough that brick from the Sanford Brick and Tile Company has been used to record such songs as THREE BLIND MICE, ROW ROW ROW YOUR BOAT and MARY HAD A LITTLE LAMB.

Of course, your interest in brick is to build buildings — not play games. But then the ring of quality produced by Sanford Brick can make music in your next building project.

"There really is a difference in brick"

Super Tree.

Believe it or not, this tiny seedling will be the parent of a whole forest of stronger, healthier trees. Super trees, as they are called by forest geneticists. They're a result of Chesapeake Corporation's forest genetics program.

By grafting cuttings from a superior tree onto a sturdy normal tree, such as this seedling and thereafter controlling pollination, it will produce seed with all the characteristics of the super tree.

Has The "Fatted Calf" Returned?

NOW THAT WE HAVE (I hope) completed the celebration of what was called, in the face of all demonstrable historical fact, the Bicentennial, of the founding of the United States, in 1977 Americans might address themselves to what as a people they might do in the next twelve years to make sure that the United States as now known will be around to celebrate 200 years of its existence.

A start (admittedly rather hopeless) would be a reteaching of the history to correct the general impression that the Revolution started and ended with the successful emergence of the United States in Boston, led by the Adams Family with some help from other New Englanders. To say the least, this makes it odd that George Washington was elected by acclamation as first president, and that Virginians occupied the White House for 32 of the first 36 years of the United States. Where was all the supposed Boston/New England influence during those formative decades of the republic?

This is in no way to denigrate Bostonians and New Englanders, but to try to introduce some perspective in the understanding of our country's founding. From the very little I heard about the Bicentennial celebrations, there was a great to-do about brave pioneers and ethnic groups. Nothing indicated that Virginians were the first pioneers (and Indian fighters) on this continent, and that Virginians along with other Southerners had become the largest, if Unmentionable, body of ethnics in the United States after 1865. For Lincoln did not save the Union. The military might he amassed destroyed one of the original parts of the original America, and after his death powerful men of ambition formed a new union to which the South, after a period of military occupation which completed the war's destitution, was a poor stigmatized attachment.

It's only one example of omissions to make no mention of the reality that for half its existence, the U.S. was in effect two nations. This so falsifies the journey of America from Jamestown to . . . as to reduce the realities to empty slogans. In this last quarter of the twentieth century, with the West in disarray whilst the Soviet giant looms menacingly, I do not believe that a nation can maintain a high morale with a combination of ignorance and delusion about itself.

Just after World War I, Yeats, probably one of the three great poets of this century, wrote these now famous lines:

*Things fall apart: the center cannot hold,
Mere anarchy is loosed upon the world,
The blood-dimmed tide is loosed, and everywhere
The ceremony of innocence is drowned:
The best lack all conviction, while the worst
Are full of passionate intensity.*

No sentient adult, without either self-deception or a program of deceiving others (maybe both), could fail to be impressed by those words written half-a-century ago. An Optimist (whether professional or out of plain stupidity) might believe that a changing of the guard at the White House along with some new faces in Congress and new alignments in committees, will make everything right on a planet whose physical changes and populational shifts arouse but a scant, scattered and superficial interest.

The best... because our people are.

The men and women of Newport News are part of a rich legacy of pride and craftsmanship passed on by four generations of shipbuilders. It's because of these people—and the ships they've built for nearly 100 years—that Newport News Shipbuilding can proudly call itself "the best in the world."

Some of you probably didn't even know we existed, until A.T.&T. got scared and began spending millions of dollars in advertising trying to tell you how good their big monopoly is, and how bad our small competition is. But one thing they didn't explain . . . If we're so bad, how come they're so scared? The reason is simple; we're not bad at all. Our business phone systems are often less expensive, and more innovative than the phone company's, and we'll match our service against theirs any day. Because Jarvis systems are designed for your individual needs, our company has been very successful, and we're growing quite rapidly. If you're not happy with your present business phone system, or are moving into new offices where you'll need a new system, give us a call locally at 231-6261. We're sure you'll be pleasantly surprised by what we have to offer.

We think of it all as a very un-vicious circle. The more business we get, the more frightened Ma Bell becomes . . . the more frightened they become, the more they advertise we're around . . . and the more people know we're around, the more business we get. Thank you Ma Bell.

Sincerely,

There are larger steel fabricators. (But not many of them!)

Bristol Steel is up to an annual capacity of 120,000 tons from its six plants in Bristol and Richmond, Va., and in Bessemer, Ala. That's a 400% growth in about 12 years. Who knows what will happen in the

Don't feed it buried cables

It's happened. Foundations have gone in, and phones have gone out. Because no one thought about buried cables.

Until it was too late. Then the job's delayed while the cable's fixed. So next time you're digging, call us. We'll tell you where the buried cables are.

Before some backhoe chews them up.

Remember. Before you dig, call us.

Being cold anywhere is no fun. Being cold in your own home because you're too poor to afford heat is a terrible thing.

Yet there are thousands of people who may not make it through the winter. Some will outright freeze to death. Others will suffer slowly from ailments brought on by the lack of heat.

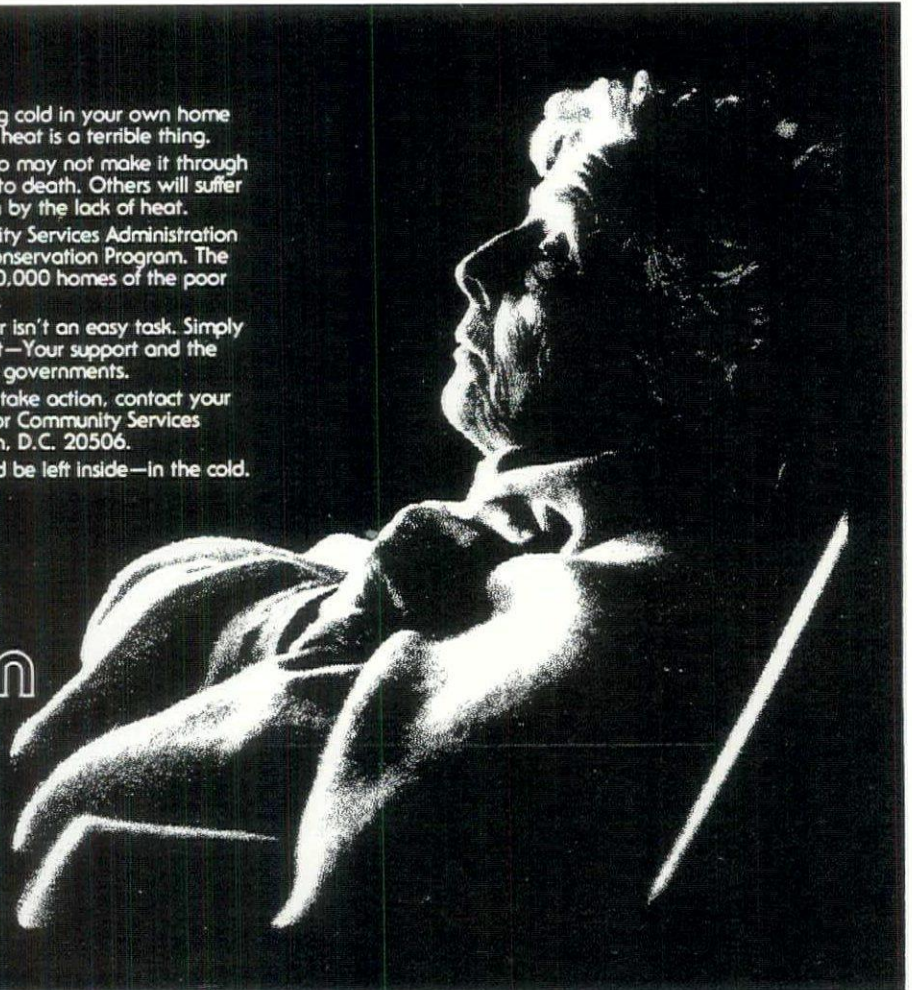

To remedy this situation the Community Services Administration has set up the Emergency Energy Conservation Program. The program has weatherized some 150,000 homes of the poor and elderly.

Helping people get through the winter isn't an easy task. Simply put, it demands community support—Your support and the support of local and state governments.

If you think this effort is worthwhile, take action, contact your local Community Action Agency or Community Services Administration Washington, D.C. 20506.

Keys unlocks new doors

Say, Richmond, give us a call. We're E.C. Keys and we've got what you're looking for in wholesale building supplies. Every quality item a builder needs at reasonable prices.

We've got patio doors, rolling aluminum windows (with wood surrounds), interior steel doors, gypsum wallboard, steel stud gypsum accessories, and fireplaces that can be the key to your hearth.

For home security, we have Honeywell smoke and fire detectors.

Maybe you'll want to look over our permanent concrete stains that won't chip, crack or peel. Or check out Tex Cote, a new texture coating that covers most building materials with a uniform, long-lasting colorful finish.

Brick? We've got just about any size, shape and color you need. Plus block, cement, and masonry products. Along with roofing shingles. Not to mention a contractor paint line. And the list goes on and on.

Come see what goes on behind our doors. They're not locked.

We've got what you're looking for.

Has the "Fatted Calf" Returned?

On the other hand, a Pessimist is not necessarily begloomed into resigned despair. Yet, anyone with concern for his country, and the Western World of which it is a part, can scarcely escape alarm at the way "things" continue to "fall apart."

Endless studies have been published on facets of "the center cannot hold." We all now know (or should) that potential voters, especially in the 18 to 34 age bracket, stay away from the polls in droves, and that (according to Daniel Yankelovitch in a Public Agenda report) "trust in government declined dramatically from 76% in 1964 to 33% in 1976."

We know that organized religion has lost much of its authority and appeal, and that the illy educated arise in proportion to numbers processed through "halls of learning" and the sums of money spent on this helter-skelter industry.

We know the fragmenting effects of the loss of the configuration of the former "extended families," and daily we are deluged with news of crimes against persons on the streets and in the home, in railroad stations and in the air. Daily too we read of new theories of the prevention and/or punishment for crime, while the victims begin to read like the casualty list of armies. But are any of these trends reversible or manageable?

In 1929, before the Depression, D. H. Lawrence wrote an introduction for a novel, Bottom Dogs, by Edward Dahlberg, whose work has been extravagantly praised by critics but largely neglected by the public. Personally, I must say that I found the novel too unrelievedly grim. Lawrence himself, the son of a North of England miner who rose by his talents out of harsh circumstances, said in his sympathetic introduction, "I don't want to read any more books like this."

But the major point of his introductory essay was that, "I realized with amazement how rapidly the human psyche can strip itself of its awareness and its emotional contacts, and reduce itself to a sub-brutal condition of simple gross persistence . . ." Dahlberg, "taking the non-intellectual line, is in revulsion against the intellect too, so we have the stark reduction to a persistent minimum of the human consciousness."

Lawrence finds it "a willed minimum, sustained from inside by brute resistance against any flow of consciousness except that of the barest most brutal egoistic self-interest." Lawrence, a world traveler, believed the phenomenon then (1929) was preeminently American, "but the flow of repulsion, inward physical revulsion of man against man, is passing all over the world. It is only perhaps in America, and in a book such as this [about the dispossessed], that we see it most starkly revealed." The book "reveals a condition that not many of us have reached, but toward which the trend of consciousness is taking us, all of us, especially the young." Then in passing, Lawrence makes this prophecy, "The next step is legal insanity, or just crime."

Though countless reasons are offered for the rise of crime in general, this is referring to those mindless crimes against persons and property that, gratifying some inner compulsion, have spread from the dispossessed as of 1929 to include many different categories. And referring again to Yeats, we also exist with "mere anarchy loosed upon the world."

In this listing of illustrations of breakdowns of the moral structure of America and the world as we once knew it, there is nothing new. What is alarming about the old-hat nature of these breakdowns is that the growing segment of non-voters in the population appear to be the single largest group who try to correlate all the moral collapses into a single tendency in the American society.

According to Yankelovitch's Public Agenda report, the non-voters "fear that the country has been trending toward a psychological self-interest so all-embracing that no room is left for national and community interests." Noting that "'moral leadership' has become one of the central questions on the American mind . . . they fear that we are losing something precious to the meaning of the American experience . . . They fear that the very meaning of the public mood is disappearing in a sense of self-seeking."

They (the non-voters) "fear that in pursuit of their organizational goals, the politicians and the businessmen and the unions and the professions are indifferent or worse to anything that does not benefit—immediately and directly—themselves or their institutions."

Like any such sweeping statement, this one holds considerable truth, but it also omits exceptions in all cases. While it is true that most businessmen regard with distrust the motives of social critics, politicians as venal or worse, and the press as lacking the knowledge on subjects about which they presume to inform the public, the majority are serious about their own role in the society and many businessmen are driven by strong impulses to participate in shaping a more moral society. Even in Congress there are honest men of principle, but they are rendered futile by a majority whose interest is in self-perpetuating their positions in the tight, insulated microcosm of Washington.

So, while it is not strictly true that the nation is composed of knaves who see no further than their own self-aggrandizement, the exceptions are too few and isolated from one another to change the perception of the whole by the non-voters or to relieve their (or anyone's) anxiety about the lack of "moral leadership." But it is on the subject of "leadership," moral or otherwise, that Yankelovitch's survey seems to be superficial.

It is totally good that Americans are concerned about a moral society, but it is totally delusory to expect a moral re-shaping to come from the top—of what we carelessly call "leadership." In the Western World, we seem to be past the Age of Leaders, and in America we have had no history or habit of producing leaders since 1865.

In my time, Roosevelt in his first term, and possibly in his second, at least appeared to be a leader in that he took hold of a bewildered terror-stricken people and gave them faith, along with countless acts that, helping some immediately, provided the illusion of wrestling with the Depression. Since we now know Roosevelt acted with unphilosophic but enormously self-confident expediency, and improvisation, his "leadership" led us ultimately—through events and his successors—to an Age of Affluence through credit and expectancy with less inner faith in the people than when he charmed them in another time, another world, 46 years ago.

During that near half-century, with its almost complete break with the Old America, the much discussed leveling process—with social passing grades in educational institutions and quota passing grades in medical colleges—the bureaucratic-dominated public has been leveled to the degree where they would not recognize a true leader if he appeared among them. At least the non-voters, in their muted frustration recognize the absence in our political parties.

In the next twelve years leading to the actual 200th anniversary of the founding of the republic, the best hope is to educate a new generation—those now 18 and younger—into the values and characteristics of those leaders who were truly the Founding Fathers. Washington, a man of action, was great in character, and Jefferson, a man of brains, had true greatness of mind, but neither was a good speaker, and I believe they rather detested public speaking. On the other hand, Patrick Henry, the fiery orator, possessed little vision and opposed the union of states.

Those who envisioned and built were elitist products of an elitist society, trained for responsible actions and decisions in large affairs. Today such labels alone would defeat them in the egalitarian country, and there seems little more likelihood of developing an effective majority who comprehend the implications of power than of recapturing the Old America in whose mental climate the Washingtons and Jeffersons flourished.

Even so, it seems to be an absolute necessity that the coming young should be taught the true "meaning of the American experience." Only with an emotional knowledge of this once precious experience can the coming generations fit themselves to become a populace of potential leaders.

Leadership cannot be imposed from outside, unless it is the leadership of a dictator, and then we shall have lost even lip-service to democracy. For in dealing with the future, the people must first know who they are by learning from whence they came.

No reference is made to the present because I believe it is a shabby period, without promise. Changes have come so swiftly, with the momentum gathered for future change, that those on the scene belong to a transitional politicalized period of expediency of another day. They—citizens and backslid citizens and the representatives—seem transfixed and unable to conceive of the future. There are endless discussions on peripheral and trivial matters, while the bold attitudes of the "revolutionaries" of the sixties and early seventies are as dead as Hoover collars.

We need to go to the rising generations, now 18 and under, because only they can be newly taught and newly conditioned to receive the American experience, which can provide the ground and the climate for a moral reshaping, a re-defining of goals and purposes, and generalized leadership amongst the populace. If the coming populace cannot do this for themselves, but continue these grisly charades of finding a "leader," then we might as well all join in the dying revels: steal and cheat, kill and maim, make merry around the new Fatted Calf of Greed, for tomorrow, or some tomorrow, we shall join those lost empires whose histories many of our students find "irrelevant" or "not work-related."

A new name, but an old friend.

We've changed names, but we wouldn't change places for anything. On the list below you'll find the old name of the place where you've been banking and, nearby, its new name. That's the only change listed, because that's the only change there is. At every bank, there's still the old management, old ownership, old staff, old service. A new name, but an old friend.

“Nobody runs our credit union but us.”

Whenever you think of a financial institution, you probably think of some ultra-conservative type in a pin-striped suit who has to stare at you for a minute before he remembers your name.

We think that's why you'll like our credit union. Because you're more than a customer. You're part of the family.

When you join our credit union, you have a voice in the management of a responsible financial institution. You own it. You help run it. You share in the profits. Through a good return on your savings and a fair interest rate when you borrow.

Join your credit union. It's where you belong.
