*As the Unsinkable TITANIC was going down,
Its Band Played On.*

Not long ago a national journal carried a critical essay (not a mere book review) on THE ILLUSION OF PEACE; Foreign Policy in the Nixon Years, written by Ted Szulc and selling at $20. The critic was John Calleo, professor of European studies at the Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies. Professor Calleo's opinions of the book – which are, on the whole, favorable – was not the disturbing point with which his critical essay left me.

As he recounts from the book, by now it is generally agreed that Nixon and Kissinger were a power-hungry pair of "cynical manipulators, lusting for personal approval [and] historical recognition ... insecure to the point of paranoia." It was their "thirst for applause which led to a series of flimsy settlements ... which created only 'the illusion of peace.'"

Of this assessment by Szulc, Professor Calleo agrees that it might be sound. But here, as he turns toward the heart of the matter, Calleo writes that "Szulc neither provides nor even exhibits the philosophical foundations for such a judgement. It is not enough to trace the shortcomings of American foreign policy to the weak character of its executors. Liberal opinion in particular has retreated into an unrealistic and strident liberalism rather than confront the harder questions about ultimate ends ... Few critics question the conventional notions of the world order, interdependence or development."

Though in the above, Professor Calleo has been addressing himself essentially to international affairs, I found its implications applicable to much of our recent history prior to the advent of Nixon and Kissinger – especially the Liberals' "strident moralism" which evaded the hard questions about ultimate ends. But then Professor Calleo goes directly to the dismal heart of things, for which no implications are required. "And fewer (critics) still raise the real issue: How long can the United States go on manipulating the world system to enjoy a standard of living which our economy no longer sustains?" (Italics added.)

His answer to his own question is chilling. "It is much easier to blame conflict and failure on bad men rather than on bad ends."

Most of us, I imagine, have indeed found few critics in positions of authority who "raise the real issue" or place the ultimate end (or goal) above the frailties of all-too-human men and their transitory, self-interested and often trivial concerns. But I would suspect that a large number of persons without authority, or any interest in personal political participation, do raise the real issue in their unrecorded thoughts and fears. My guess would be that Professor Calleo's question and his answer to it articulate the feelings of many Americans who have come to doubt the soundness of their country's practices and to be apprehensive of its future.

There is little to reassure them in those certified pundits whose canned columns appear in your daily newspaper or in whatever out-of-town paper you also subscribe to. I don't know precisely when our columnists began also to wear the hat of psychiatrists; but I remember vividly that beginning with LB Johnson, through Nixon, poor Ford and now Carter, the individuals in these administrations became public subjects of depth studies in personality and character. By now the superficiality and repetitiousness of the columnists' analyses seem increasingly remote from the clear and present dangers confronting this nation.

As to TV, I've never been a regular watcher of their "entertainment" programs, except occasionally when sick (or my eyes were in too bad shape to read at night), and the result on those occasions was that I felt sicker. However, for some years I enjoyed moderately the PBC offering of verbal exchanges between knowledgeable reporters. It was not that they, trained to record current "crises" and people, did too much in the way of dealing with Calleo's chilling question. But in speaking freely, without the inhibitions imposed by a newspaper, they often offered an engaging and even light-hearted cynicism which at least suggested that they might be aware of only playing games on the

A Remarkable Man —

JOHN WARREN COOKE

Speaker of the Virginia House of Delegates

By Guy Friddell

IN HOW MANY states would you find a leading Republican trying to persuade the Democratic Speaker of the House of Delegates to run for another term?

That is the situation in Virginia where Delegate Ray Garland, a Republican from Roanoke, has been urging Speaker John Warren Cooke of Mathews not to give up the job when his term expires in 1980.

Moreover, Garland's sentiments reflect those of the vast majority of members of the House of Delegates over which Cooke presides at each day's session. Cooke also appoints the members of the legislative committees, and he chooses the bills each committee will consider.

Political scientists generally consider the Speaker second in power only to the Governor. At some stages in Virginia history the Speaker has wielded more clout than has the Governor.

From his lookout atop the three-decker rostrum, like a captain on the bridge, the dark-complexioned, stocky Cooke — he stands 6 feet but his broad-shouldered, well-muscled frame gives him a sturdy aspect — seems an integral part of the mahogany-hued chamber. Indeed, many legislators can't visualize the House without him.

The senior member of the House — his first term began in 1942 — Cooke became Speaker in 1968. He would, he told reporters, remain aloof from debate on the issues and would preside "impartially and with as much wisdom as I possess." He also said matter-of-factly that he intended to give Republican members seats on the major committees.

That pledge to allow Republicans to take a full part in the legislative process was practically revolutionary in a state that had been dominated more than half a century by the conservative Democratic Organization. Republicans, like good children, were to be seen, not heard.

Successive Speakers banned Republicans to oblivion by appointing them to, say, the Committee on Enrolled Bills that met once a year and then only to prove it was still in existence. Many liberal Democrats fared little better.

Republican Garland arrived as a member of the House the session that Cooke became Speaker. Reviewing the decade, Garland says that Cooke has been "at least 90 percent fair" in making committee assignments. When you consider pressures exerted on the speaker by friends and fellow Democrats, the Republicans have practically no basis for complaint, said Garland.

New Speaker

An acid test was the filling of a vacancy that occurred last year on the House Appropriations Committee. Because that committee prepares the first draft of the biennial state budget, most legislators prize a seat on it above all other committee assignments.

"Despite tremendous, ferocious pressure from the Democrats, John Warren bent over backwards to be fair and because the Republicans were under-represented on that committee on a percentage basis, he appointed a Republican," Garland observed.

"He brings dignity to the House. He's totally free from corruption, and he's not tied in with any vested interest that I've been able to determine except the tradition and heritage of the House of Delegates itself.

"He has engaged in strict neutrality on the major issues. He hasn't tried to tip the balance. I've never known him to go around lobbying for a piece of legislation or a point of view. Nor have I known him to hold a grudge against anybody or let his private feelings affect his attitude toward an individual as a member of the House. He's a great stickler for respecting an individual's place in the House as a mandate of the people. He regards all members as having a certain equality.

"Really I regard him as being irreplaceable in terms of quality. His decision to retire may be irrevocable, but I'm certainly going to continue to ask him to stay. The loss of John Warren Cooke as speaker would mean a decline in the quality of the House of Delegates."

Delegate William P. Robinson of Norfolk, a leading black spokesman, observed that the 63-year-old Cooke is "one of the most considerate, trustworthy men that I have known. He has been absolutely fair to members of the black minority.

"I've grown to regard him as a friend. He has always been encouraging to me, and on occasions after I have had the privilege of speaking under Rule 39 to the entire House on some sensitive matter he has said to me quietly at the close of that session, 'Well done, Billy!'"

The first woman to be appointed to the Privileges and Elections Committee, Arlington Delegate Mary Marshall declared: "John Warren's just been great. As a person I couldn't have been more equal.

"His decision that every member would serve on a major committee did more to make the government of Virginia open and responsive than any other single thing that's happened in this period. Until then the government was in the hands of maybe a third of the members of the House.

"He's a very remarkable man. He just likes people and thinks they deserve a fair break. And he has a very good way of encouraging them. Chairmen of major committees are happy when he says, 'You did a good job on that.'

"Once though when a lobbyist came on the floor of the House I saw John Warren direct a genuine look that kills. The tremendous decorum of the House is due largely to John Warren."

Ask Cooke about his insistence on seeing that minorities receive fair treatment, and he replies briefly: "They were elected to represent the people."

And inquire about his habitual impartiality in presiding over debates on the issues, and he says: "I've never seen a major issue that didn't have two sides. I think it's a good idea to take a look at both of 'em."

To persuade him to agree to an interview is a struggle. He almost bawls in agony at the thought of it. He submits to it, finally, as if getting into a dentist's chair, hoping that the reporter won't show up.

"I never found myself particularly interesting," he protested once to this writer. "I'd rather talk about something else. I really detest talking about myself. I know my own limitations too well."

He put off this interview as long as he could and when the time arrived, he said, with a sigh, "You didn't change your mind, huh?"

To make it easier for him, the first question dealt with what he regarded as the most impressive change that had occurred in the House since his arrival there in 1942.

"The much larger volume of business that has to be done in the relatively same amount of time," he said promptly.

The resort to annual sessions — introducing a 30-day session between the regular 60-day sessions — had helped, he said, but neither session is long enough, and to rely on extending them by a two-thirds vote of both houses is "too iffy." Lengthier sessions ought to be provided permanently, he believes.

He also has warned the General Assembly that it must look to arranging larger chambers in which to meet, even if it means moving out of Mr. Jefferson's Capitol.

"The chambers are just not large enough to accommodate the crowds," he said. "I was looking the other day at a panoramic picture of the House taken a decade or so ago and there were only seven or eight people in the gallery at the time of its convening.

"Now there's not a day from an hour before the convening until after the session is over when 120 people aren't crowded into a gallery which was designed to seat 90. A large number of legislative aides also are on the floor from time to time, plus a great many more members of the news media than formerly covered the sessions.

"There's nothing abnormal about it. The growth is natural, concomitant with the times, but the traffic is such that people are falling all over each other."

The Speaker of the Virginia House of Delegates is the son of a Confederate veteran. To a stranger that might bring to mind the little figurine seen in souvenir shops, a defiant, bow-legged man in a Rebel uniform, exclaiming, "Retreat, Hell!"

That stereotype doesn't fit the soft-spoken, amiable, moderate-minded John Warren Cooke. But then his father, Major Giles B. Cooke, who trained troops at Manassas Junction and was on General Robert E. Lee's staff at the close of the war at Appomattox, fit no stereotype either.

A clergyman after the war, he and two other ministers opened a school for Negro children in Petersburg. When someone asked why he took work "among the colored people," the Major replied, "Because no one else would."

"He just thought the newly freed Negroes had to be educated in some fashion," said his son. "A lot of his friends wouldn't speak to him for a long time."

Late in life the Major became Rector of Christ Episcopal Church in Mathews. There John Warren was born February 28, 1915. The Major was 76 then, but he lived to be nearly 99, so that the man who rode with Lee had 22 years to inculcate principles in the boy. He advised him never to forget that the war had been a tragic error, and he showed a constant concern for the underdog.

Young Cooke attended the Virginia Military Institute and returned to Mathews to begin his public career as a clerk of the Mathews County School Board and as deputy court clerk. Only 27 when he was first elected to the House, he now represents a district that embraces Gloucester, Mathews, New Kent, Charles City, and Middlesex counties.

Virginia shifted from a predominantly rural state to one with an urban majority during Cooke's legislative career. The "most troublesome problem" was that of the integration of schools during the 1950s, he noted.

"That's the toughest thing we've come up against, knowing that you had to do something about it and trying to make people see that something had to be done," he said.

"I thought I understood at the time — and I reckon I still hold the same view — that it would take some time for the citizenry to become accustomed to it. I know there are pockets of resistance here and there, but, by and large, I think it's working pretty well."

Although Cooke was a protege of the old-time Organization, he was floor leader for Governor J. Lindsay Almond Jr. when the Governor was at odds with the Organization. ("He shot square with me," Almond has said.)

Also when some of the other Organization leaders kept silent or backed the Republican nominee for President, Cooke always has voted for the Democratic ticket and his newspaper has endorsed the party's nominee, although, he observed the other day, the endorsements "for one or two have been pretty doggone weak."

The two-party system, he said, "is vital to the preservation of our form of government. There has to be minority and majority parties. I hope we can keep two strong parties alive in this nation."

Starting in 1968, he presided over five Democratic state conventions during the party's most turbulent passage in this century. Norfolk Senator Joseph Fitzpatrick, the outgoing Democratic State chairman, calls Cooke "the epitome of the perfect convention chairman."

In 1968 in Roanoke the state convention seemed about to come apart in the early, organizational stages as disputes — "shootouts," Fitzpatrick called them — flared on the floor. Then Cooke was elected permanent chairman and he came to the rostrum and took the gavel and in his businesslike way began running the proceedings as if nothing untoward had occurred.

You could feel the massive crowd coming to order under his firm hand and the convention righted itself like a storm-tossed ship coming to an even keel.

Former Delegate Lewis McMurren of Newport News, Cooke's close friend, calls him "the best-informed man on state government" and regrets that none of the several moves to promote him for governor came to fruition — mainly because Cooke didn't offer much encouragement to them. "He'd have been fine on the top floor," said McMurren.

The Senate respects his expertise as the head of the House. Senator Adelard Brault of Arlington, Democratic majority leader, observed that Cooke "brought a refreshing change to the House of Delegates through his outstanding fairness in giving representation with committee assignments to all areas of the Commonwealth."

As a matter of fact, added Brault, he may have gone to extremes in some of the assignments he has awarded Republicans in Northern Virginia.

Cooke enjoys the respect of everyone with whom he works and for all his amiability he has firm control of the House, said Brault.

"You can deal with key members of the House on procedural matters, reach an agreement with them, and all of a sudden it falls apart and you find out that what's happened is that John Warren didn't agree with what they had agreed to and changed their minds," said Brault.

He suspects that Cooke blocked the Brault-sponsored move to have the three-member electoral boards appointed on the basis of the party in power rather than on the basis of the party that holds the governorship.

"I'm satisfied that he did," said Brault. "Everything was going along fine and all of a sudden everything came to a grinding halt."

Cooke is a good presiding officer who keeps things going at as fast a pace as the House of Delegates will permit, said Brault. The House won't take the short cuts the Senate employs — "They debate and explain everything" — but Cooke "moves it along as much as anybody could." (Garland's only regret is that the speaker is not always as permissive of floor debate as he would be.)

"John Warren is a typical Virginia gentleman," said Senator Brault. "You would never find a more genteel man than John Warren Cooke. He treats everybody exactly the same whether you are a Democrat, a Republican, or an Independent."

For all of his easy-going manner, Cooke is almost always on the move, either in Richmond working in his office in the House of Delegates or busy at home with his duties as publisher of the Gloucester-Mathews Gazette-Journal.

He and his wife, the former Anne Brown Rawn, have two children, Giles Buckner Cooke II and Elsa, both of whom work with the Gazette-Journal.

Cooke has "a little skiff," which he rarely uses. His scant leisure is spent reading — "too much history, I reckon." He just finished reading the recently published biography of Admiral Lord Nelson.

He is sanguine about the future.

"Oh, yes, the state and the nation are going to survive. I just don't accept all the tales of woe the newspaper editors would have us believe. We have quite a wonderful Constitution, and the good sense of the people usually keeps us on the track."

"In fact, I'd like to be living 50 years from now. Today's youngsters have a wonderful future before them. They are much more knowledgeable than we were. They have a sense of world affairs and high ideals for public service. I think that's great," said Cooke.

The Speaker paused. He had said enough. A glum expression came to his face.

"I just hope you don't write too much," he said, earnestly. "Strain yourself on something a little more important."

AUSTIN
Detonating Cord assures best results with maximum safety

Austin Detonating Cord travels at the rate of better than 20,000 feet per second along its entire length . . . is offered in grades that possess more than enough strength to initiate an entire column of explosives, blasting agent primers and even some blasting agents.

It's safe, too. There is little danger that it will be set off by vibration, friction, shock, sparks and stray electricity. It even offers protection against such extreme hazards as thunderstorms. And, in case of a missed hole, it can be hooked up and shot or more safely dug out.

Write for bulletins.

We're committed.

Over 120 million seedlings set out in recent years back up the commitment to regenerate our forests.

Encouraging cooperative forestry programs throughout our region has also been an important part of Chesapeake's reforestation program. When equipment scheduling permits we will reforest private land at cost or will give the landowner, at no charge, up to 10,000 seedlings on a matching basis to reforest his land.

At Chesapeake we believe in the forests. They have to be protected and wisely used to supply man with his growing needs.

Forest regeneration. Just another way Chesapeake is working with nature to serve man.

Our professionally trained foresters will be glad to advise you on any questions you may have concerning forest management. Contact: Director of Forest Information and Education, The Chesapeake Corporation, (804) 843-5375, or The State Division of Forestry in Charlottesville.

The best... because our people are.

The men and women of Newport News are part of a rich legacy of pride and craftsmanship passed on by four generations of shipbuilders. It's because of these people—and the ships they've built for nearly 100 years—that Newport News Shipbuilding can proudly call itself "the best in the world."

NATURAL SLATE

An ageless beginning - - - yet today Natural Slate is "of age" in the modern designing trend. Its neutral color and velvet-like finish complement perfectly today's colorful decorating schemes.

Only a product of Nature can provide such dependable service under hard usage conditions. Natural Slate is sanitary, durable, strong, non-absorptive and will not contract or expand.

For your protection insist on Slate quarried in Pennsylvania, U.S.A.

MUTUAL FEDERAL
A PROFESSIONAL CORPORATION

Now, let's talk retirement plans.

Incorporating your practice can mean a much larger tax deduction each year than the $7,500 currently allowed for your old Keogh Plan.

Let Mutual Federal show you how. We have prototype defined contribution plans for corporations which will enable you to shelter thousands of dollars more each year.

Now that you are incorporated, call our retirement plans consultant. He will help you select a plan from one of the following types:

- Money purchase
- Profit-sharing
- Target benefit

You and your financial advisors can then tailor the adoption agreement specifically to fit your individual requirements.

The advantages are many.

Plan administration is greatly simplified. No actuarial reports are required.

Using one of our prototypes will greatly expedite approval of your plan by the Internal Revenue Service, and simplify the procedure. IRS approval on some corporate plans can take up to a year or more, so you'll save time as well as money.

These copyrighted plans are flexible with contributions insured for up to $40,000 for each participant. There is no risk of ever losing any of your investment.

The plans are funded with FSLIC-insured high-yield certificates of deposit at Mutual Federal, one of Virginia's oldest and largest savings and loan associations.

There are no charges for our services.

Call us now.

Because there's more to incorporation than letters on the door.

For consultation without obligation on corporate plans, IRA or KEOGH accounts, call 804/623-1202.

Alexandria to Honor George Washington at Annual Parade and Gala

• Alexandria, Virginia, the historic seaport town where George Washington lived, will honor the nation's first president during the month of February with the annual George Washington Birthday Parade and traditional Birthnight Ball.

More than 1,000 people, including 90 Colonial regiments in full dress uniform, will march in the parade which begins at 2 p.m. on February 19 in Old Town Alexandria. High School marching bands and drill teams, clowns, fife and drum corps and bagpipe bands will wind down thirteen city blocks past restored 18th and 19th century homes. Antique cars, official military bands, masonic units, color guards and commemorative floats also will be featured in the nation's largest parade honoring George Washington.

Alexandrians have celebrated Washington's birthday since the late 1700s, after their fellow townsman was elected president. The first Birthnight Ball was held at Gadsby's Tavern in 1791. George and Martha danced at the annual gala in 1798 and 1799.

This year, the traditional colonial costumed Birthnight Ball will be held at Gadsby's Tavern Museum, 134 N. Royal St. on Saturday, February 17. Minuet dancers in Colonial dress will perform in the historic 18th century ballroom and a string quartet will play classical music. A banquet at the nearby Holiday Inn of Old Town at 480 King Street will

A blood clot the size of this dot can cause a Heart Attack.

Or a stroke.

Every year, thousands die because of a blood clot. Thousands more become disabled, some permanently.

What's being done to stop it?

Plenty.

We're the American Heart Association. We're giving scientists the chance to find out more about blood clots.

How to detect them. How to treat them. How to keep them from happening.

We're fighting hard. With new drugs. New kinds of treatment. Better ways to help heart attack and stroke victims return to a normal life.

And it's only a part of the total war we're waging against the number one cause of death in this country: heart disease and stroke.

But we can't fight without your money. When the Heart Association volunteer asks for your dollars, be generous.

The blood clot is small, the problem is enormous.

Please give generously to the American Heart Association

WE'RE FIGHTING FOR YOUR LIFE

Word of Mouth

Avoid those piping hot foods, scalding tea and coffee and heavy liquor intake. They may cause changes in your mouth that could lead to cancer. Don't forget a regular dental checkup since it's easy for your dentist to spot oral cancer. When treated very early, oral cancer is usually curable, says the American Cancer Society.

FOR THE RECORD

Lockwood Named to Highways Post

• Richard C. Lockwood, 39, has been named state transportation planning engineer for the Virginia Department of Highways and Transportation.

Assistant head of the Transportation Planning Division since it was formed four years ago, Lockwood succeeds Oscar K. Mabry, who was recently named director of planning for the department.

The Transportation Planning Division, which has a staff of 70, is responsible for conducting the information developed by regional planning districts and local jurisdictions as part of the transportation planning process.

Lockwood is a native of Schenectady, New York, and holds a bachelor's degree and a master's degree in civil engineering from Georgia Tech. He joined the department in 1963 as an engineer trainee and has spent most of his time in the Traffic and Safety Division and in the Transportation Planning Division's predecessor, the Metropolitan Transportation Division. He joined the Metropolitan Division in 1969 and was named assistant division head in 1973. When the Transportation Planning Division was formed in 1974, Lockwood was named one of three assistant division heads.

department's broad planning studies for rural and urban highways and highway-related transit. It maintains liaison with the state's planning district commissions, local governments, and others with an interest in transportation planning.

Upon request of local governing bodies, the division has also participated in the review of a number of rezoning and site plan applications to assist in identifying planned transportation improvements, and continued its reviews of land use

CBN UPDATE NEWS DEBUTS

• The Christian Broadcasting Network, Inc., (CBN) made its entrance into hard news programming in mid-November with the debut of Update News over more than 400 cable-satellite systems.

Anchored by former Memphis, Tenn. commentator Bob Trotter, Update News can now be seen weekdays in more than four million cable-satellite households across the nation.

The approximately minute and one-half news broadcast can be viewed at about 4:58 p.m. EST. Three additional segments during prime time hours are scheduled with 24-hour service and eventual half-hour daily news commentary planned.

Headline coverage will be provided from United Press International (UPI) on breaking news, sports and features on both the domestic and international scene. UPI video feeds are scheduled to begin in January 1979.

"Of course, we eventually plan to get more in depth, but basically what we will be providing now is a headline news service to our cable systems," Jerry Straub of CBN Network Operations said.

CBN Network Program Manager Lloyd Watson said Update News will be filling a void in the current news commentary field.

"We will be making available, the latest, freshest news on a limited scope now but eventually on a 24-hour basis," Watson said. "That will be something no one else is doing and will be the best method by which we can best prepare for a major half-hour news presentation. It is the first step toward building a strong foundation for a worldwide news organization and will establish credibility in the broadcast industry."

Update News will be fed off of RCA's Satcom I to the more than 400 cable-satellite systems offering CBN's 24-hour programming.

CBN is the first Christian organization to own and operate a satellite earth station, a move that has put CBN in a position to establish the nation's first truly competitive fourth network. Earth stations are now being installed at CBN's four owned and operated stations and a network of earth dishes located at major market areas across the country is being implemented.

surface of important matters. However, in time they too became repetitious in chewing over the same old topics on individual personalities.

The factor which more or less completed our alienation from the tube might seem to be totally unrelated from the "real issue" raised by Professor Calleo. Yet, it very much concerns a diminution, or even a perversion, in the standard of living we are supposed to enjoy but cannot actually afford.

During the depths of the Depression, in 1932, when I was living in New York, I became a devotee of professional football. As this was long before the time when pro football became an advertising medium for the TV networks, the teams were smaller than the squads of today, and there were less than half as many teams as we now have. With this condition, a regular speculator would become familiar with all the players on all the teams, and intense rivalries developed, building to the one untelevised championship game between the

The New Cities

• The CCS community of Portsmouth, Va., hosted the latest CLEAN COMMUNITY SYSTEM Project Team Training Workshop, Sept. 20-22. Five communities from Virginia and North Carolina were certified after representatives from government, business and the civic sector received training in the fundamentals of adapting the CCS to their communities. The new communities are Arlington County, Hampton, Henry County and Lynchburg, Va., and Wilmington/New Hanover County, N.C., bringing the total number of CCS cities to 132 (in 37 states).

Special guests at the Portsmouth Workshop were Robert W. Slocum, Commissioner, and John Jackson, Assistant Commissioner, Virginia Division of Litter Control, Vincent R. McKewin, Account Supervisor, Marsteller, Inc. (KAB's volunteer ad agency for the "concerned Indian" campaign) and George W. Hayden, Campaign Manager, The Advertising Council, Inc.

winners of the eastern and western divisions. As my wife grew up in Tidewater, which I understand has been a hotbed of Redskin rooters since the days of Sam Baugh, she shared my enthusiasm for pro football when it began to be regularly televised.

Now that the game has become almost as departmentalized as medical practice — with offensive players and defensive players, special team players to cover punts and punt returns, kick-offs and kick-off returns, punters who cannot kick field goals for conversions and kickers who can do nothing else, with all manner of "spot" players — there is so much running about of the men in their martial equipment that it is difficult to be familiar with the players on the team you mostly follow. All these specialists, with high salaries and pension funds, as well as the proliferation of the number of teams, is largely due to TV revenue.

As we all know, commercial television is primarily an advertising medium, and somewhere in the hierarchy that decides which programs bring in the largest advertising (most commercials) the decision was reached that straight football by itself is not sufficiently enticing for big-spending advertisers. Now, what once was a game has become a spectacle involving high finance and low comedy, with show business features whose ambition seems to be to resurrect old burlesque techniques, announcers who act as strident pitchmen for coming "attractions," and color-men whose incessant nonsensical chatter causes a person interested in football to turn off the sound. When the pattern of a game is thrown into disarray by the distractions of untimely commercials, gradually the football enthusiast goes from turning off the sound to turning off the tube.

I submit that this debasement of a game for the basest motives serves as an illustration of a fundamental falseness, spuriousness, in our vaunted standard of living. Americans have allowed themselves to become deluded into finding "enjoyment" in any distraction which requires no use of the mind or the finer sensibilities and, indeed, removes them from the awareness of having inner faculties which could partake of the higher aspects of an advanced Western civilization.

Having been accused of being the most materialistic people on the planet, they daily confirm this description by the pursuits of greed, great and small. They have come to personify Oscar Wilde's definition of a cynic as one "who knows the price of everything and the value of nothing."

To return to Professor Calleo's "standard of living," this surely must imply — and it requires a sort of foolhardy courage in the present climate to use these words — at least some elements of what used to be called "the good life." Despite the many, glaring failures of the nigh half-century of the Democrats' remedies based on finding more projects on which to spend more of the people's tax money and more printed money, making our dollar more of a sick symbol than a monetary standard, from all sides and all groups come demands for more and more ... when more manifestly has not enhanced the quality of life, just as more and more tawdry hijinks have not enhanced the quality of football.

As if unaware of or indifferent to any place for the good life in this fast shuffle, our elected representatives in both Houses of Congress debate endlessly over the details of the divisions of the spoils and end in that compromise which Carlyle called "the grave of the soul." The post-Vietnam and Watergate congresses are called independent. What are they independent of — the president, the people, their own parties? They are certainly independent of any of the consequences of doing their part in digging the "grave of the soul" of their country.

At this unenlightening spectacle, we can't use the old line, "Don't shoot the piano-player: he's doing the best he can." Because these compromises and short-range bargainers are, God help us, our representatives. Since we put them there and keep some of them there into their senility, they reflect us and our obsession with a standard of living which practically excludes the play of the mind and the exaltation of the human spirit. We make only scattered and futile protests at the proliferation of privileges and power of a bureaucracy which to justify its existence (and pass the time for those with nothing else to do) delivers imperial edicts for changes in our institutions.

As Professor Calleo wrote, we have plenty of "bad men" to go around. We've had their equivalent since before the Civil War, though never before in such numbers, as to make Washington something akin to a city-state. There are, of course, as there always have been, some "good men." But where are the good ends?

Granted that Nixon and Kissinger (along with hundreds of others less visible) would not be admirable characters in an Horatio Alger age. But that age is buried in a haunted past. Now we are led, without goals of national purpose, without calls on the uses of our minds and spirits, in an age where petty politics and wheeler-dealing comprise the piper who plays the tune leading to the grave of the nation's soul.
