It Was Good Work — When We Had It

THE MOST accurately descriptive title I've ever seen for historical literary memoirs (1918-1978) was 80-year-old Malcolm Cowley's "And I Worked at the Writer's Trade." Prior to that my favorite was by another older writer, Robert Graves, England's distinguished scholar and historian, poet, novelist and essayist. He titled his personal literary memoirs Occupation: Writer.

The attitudes revealed in these titles makes it clear that the "professional writers" of the older generation were similar to the old time cowboys in regarding their work itself as the single major element in their lives. Whether they fared well or ill, made a big or small public splash or none at all, their gratification was in being a "working writer" — as the cowboys' was in being "a working (cow)hand."

The legendary cowboy barely survived into the 20th century, with greatly reduced numbers and drastically changed conditions. As the day of the big cattle drives to a railhead became romanticized history, many of the individuals who scorned any other life were reduced to the ignominy of "dude wrangling." Yet, such was the hold on these die-hards of the image of the "working hand" that, after they had finished their chores of escorting dudes along trails, they competed amongst themselves at informal country rodeos on Sundays. Whatever puny prize money was offered, even if none, the men (who were to themselves still cowboys) competed at the skills of a working hand.

The cowboy is used as an illustration in relation to the writer because when his trade was automated into obsolescence, his identification with his work (not for its pay or benefits) kept him on his familiar terrain around horses where he could simulate the old trade and compete with other cowboys in the skills of the trade — which was what the original rodeos were. By now, of course, many of the rodeo performers have never worked cattle at all and are essentially in the entertainment business.

This is by no means a far-fetched comparison with the fate that threatens to overtake the working writer. Taking as a loose definition, those who publish (or have published) prose or poetry in a book or books or in reputable journals, the writer's trade as we have known it is scarcely more than three centuries old.

Of course, tellers of stories and myth-makers must have co-existed with the inhabitants of caves, and for a certainty the inspired men of the Bible produced some beautiful and moving stories. But the writer's trade depended upon two later factors: the invention of moveable type by Johannes Gutenberg, who with his associates first produced a few books in the mid-fifteenth century; the growth of a literate audience who could and did read books — and/or the serialization of books in magazines.

In England, the mid-18th century saw the emergence of Richardson (whose Pamela was probably the first English novel), Smollet, Sterne and Fielding (a lawyer and judge). These milestone figures could scarcely have supported themselves on their literary earnings. Contemporaneously with them, Dr. Samuel Johnson, who of all people did work at the writer's trade, in 1744 published a stinging indictment of the neglect of London's working writers. They starved and shivered in the unheated garrets of Grub Street, received little to no recognition, were plagued with early illnesses, and scrambled for any kind of hack-work to try to survive the struggle of earning a living by writing. These anonymous denizens of Grub Street were as much, if not more, the precursors of the writing trade as the few novelists who became classics. The audience for their wares had not then sufficiently developed.

The audience came in the next century. 100 years after Dr. Johnson's 1744 indictment, just before Christmas 1843, a little book titled A Christmas Carol, written by the popular author Charles Dickens, sold 6,000 copies on the first day of publication.

At that time Americans had been too occupied with the problems and politics of forming, and then expanding, a new nation to be much concerned with literature. The few magazines could not boast of large circulations and, hence, their pay to contributors was small and uncertain. One of their contributors, who also published low-paying volumes of poetry, was Edgar Allan Poe, America's first professional writer. His life of destitution (like a one-man re-enactment of Grub Street) was complicated by unresolved inner tensions, from which he sought escape in alcohol without the biochemical balance to tolerate it.

The Dalton Administration . . . The First Two Years

IN JANUARY 1978, John Nichols Dalton was inaugurated as the 63rd governor of the Commonwealth of Virginia. He was convinced that people were looking for a governor who would address issues in a positive and responsible way, and promised to do his utmost to "make life better for all Virginians."

Openness in government was stressed by the new governor, who pledged to expand that concept by meeting with Virginians in order to better represent all the people and help them solve their problems. These have not been an easy two years, nor do things look promising for the immediate future, but in spite of adverse conditions, the following report, issued by the Governor's Office in mid-1979, should make even the most pessimistic among us take heart.

The Dalton Administration Major Achievements to Date (Report issued by the Governor's Office in mid-1979)

Jobs and Economic Development

Environmentally sound economic development is a top priority in Governor Dalton's objectives for his administration. The Governor's personal commitment to bringing 40,000 new jobs in the private sector to Virginia annually has resulted in his heading two industrial development missions with top public and private sector individuals. The first mission in 1978 was to Europe and the second in 1979 to Japan, Hong Kong and the People's Republic of China. Governor Dalton's trade visit to China was the first for any Governor since the United States has formalized relations. In trade expansion and bringing domestic and international companies into Virginia, we have realized a gain of 168,700 nonagricultural jobs from June '77 to June '79. Virginia's unemployment rate is considerably below the national unemployment average. The State's economic health has also been recently recognized by the Continental Bank of Chicago, which gave Virginia the top credit rating of all the states.

Governor Dalton's first Executive Order, which prohibited discrimination in State government employment practices, also prohibited discrimination against Virginia's disabled citizens.

Controlling Taxes and Government Spending

A major accomplishment resulting from Governor Dalton's tough fiscal policies and State spending controls has resulted in an unexpended balance of $97.9 million for the first fiscal year of his Administration. This combined with projected cost savings to accrue in FY 1980 should allow the 1980-82 Dalton biennial budget to fund the largest single increase in State aid to local governments without a general tax increase. This $150 million of State aid to localities in the next biennium should help in many areas to reduce property taxes.

The Dalton Administration government hiring guidelines have reduced the increase in authorized government positions to just over 1% in the first fiscal year of his Administration — compared to the average increase of 5.5% over the past fifteen years. As a result of Governor Dalton's request for a local fiscal impact study, which was adopted by the 1978 General Assembly, a bill requiring statement of costs to localities on all pertinent State legislation was passed by the 1979 session and signed by the Governor. These impact statements alert legislators to the continued burdens on local property tax revenues created by State-mandated programs.

Energy

Governor Dalton has led efforts to save energy, with his directives preceding those of the Federal Administration in dealing with government consumption of energy. In March of 1979 the Governor directed State office building thermostats set at 78° in summer and 65° in the winter months. He also ordered the use in all State buildings of energy-saving lightbulbs and encouraged carpooling by State employees. His directive further prohibits use of oil-fired power systems in planning for construction of new State office buildings. Coal, electricity, and solar energy are among the energy sources that must now be considered in heating new facilities. The 1978 General Assembly agreed to a resolution, introduced at the Governor's request, directing the State Board of Housing to incorporate energy conservation measures such as proper insulation into the Statewide Building Code. This will help assure that new homes and commercial buildings in Virginia will be energy-efficient.

In his Administration, the State Energy Office has been merged with the Office of Emergency Services to provide a more effective emergency response for citizens when crisis situations arise, such as the gasoline shortage during the summer of 1979.

The Governor has directed that the potential for coal gasification production in Virginia be re-examined, in view of the present Federal Administration's determination that Virginia should not be a potential site for synthetic fuel plants. He signed the 1979 bill providing an optional separate property tax classification for energy conversion equipment. He is continuing to work with Attorney General Coleman and appropriate State agencies to facilitate promotion of private sector interest in the production of gasohol.

Governor Dalton has continuously promoted the increased production and use of coal by personally testifying at the 1979 Federal stripmining trial in Abingdon; by ordering adequate security measures to assure movement of southwest Virginia coal from the mines during the 1978 strikes; by the inclusion at his request of an additional $3.5 million for the current fiscal year for improvement of bridges on the coal-haul roads serving energy-producing industries; by intensive lobbying of Congress and the present Federal Administration to reduce the burdens on marketing coal in-state and abroad imposed by unrealistic and prohibitive Federal regulations.

Transportation

Governor Dalton supported and signed legislation in 1978 giving Virginia's Secretary of Transportation total planning powers for a coordinated transportation system in the State. The Governor further supported this policy in the 1979 session, in legislation bringing the Department of Aviation into the executive branch of State government, which he signed. The Governor supports continued State financial contribution to the Metrorail system in northern Virginia and has encouraged Congress to pass the bill providing for the full 101-mile system in the metropolitan Washington area, despite opposition by the present Federal Administration. Governor Dalton is seeking to upgrade financially Virginia's ports. A major goal of his missions to Europe and the Far East was the stimulation of trade through our ports.

Education

Governor Dalton's emphasis on the maintenance of a high quality Statewide public school system is reflected in his support for the $6.7 million increase in per pupil payments by the State for the second year of the current biennium included in the Appropriations Act by the 1979 General Assembly session. Recognizing that State mandates for reduced classroom size have caused major fiscal burdens on local governments without guaranteeing significant student achievement gains, the Governor supports the personnel standards recently adopted by the State Board avoiding further mandated decreases in class size and providing for increased staffing only when there is a demonstrated educational need. In his 1977 campaign, Governor Dalton spoke of a need to assure order and discipline in the classroom, and he supported and signed the 1978 bill providing for a new Standard of Quality requiring local school divisions to adopt codes of student conduct. The Governor signed the 1979 bill providing for new Statewide grievance procedures for Virginia's teachers.

Realizing the importance of improved agricultural education programs to future levels of food production, Governor Dalton has supported the increased appropriations for agricultural research and funding for a regional veterinary school at Virginia Tech, for which ground has already been broken.

Corrections

Governor Dalton has called the alleviation of overcrowding in State correctional facilities a top priority of his Administration. With a projected inmate population increase of nearly 3,500 expected by 1985 — to a total of approximately 13,000 — continued improvements are needed to keep convicted lawbreakers in secure detention facilities. An overflow of the existing State institutions has resulted in housing for about 12% of the State load in local jails.

To overcome these problems, construction has begun on a new medium security State facility in Brunswick County, and the Dalton Administration is planning for at least three additional medium security facilities. Construction of a new maximum security facility in Mecklenburg County has also proceeded. The Governor will propose that a major portion of the capital outlay budget for new State construction in the next biennium be earmarked for Corrections.

Health

Sharing the concern expressed by our General Assembly about the rising costs of health care, Governor Dalton signed the 1978 bill creating the Health Services Cost Review Commission. This Commission, composed of consumers and health administrators, reviews audits and other financial records of health care institutions and investigates and promotes cost control methods. He also signed the Local Option bill, providing local governing bodies the opportunity under statewide guidelines to organize and operate, instead of the State, human resource delivery services, such as health care, unemployment services, etc., in a manner specifically responsive to that community's needs.

The Governor has been concerned over the duplication of effort by the many State advisory boards and commissions relating to the needs of Virginia's disabled citizens. He is in the process of eliminating those ineffective and nonproductive councils, as identified by our handicapped community. To assure coordinated policy, he plans to recommend expanding the membership of the Overall Council on the Needs of Handicapped Children and Adults to include representation by disabled Virginians.

Open Government

Following up on the emphasis he placed on openness in government as Lieutenant Governor, so far this year Governor Dalton has taken his Cabinet, along with the Lieutenant Governor and Attorney General, with him to "Open Door" meetings held in Suffolk, Frederick, and Accomack, with meetings scheduled for the next few months in Norton, Lynchburg, and Prince William. Similar meetings were held around the State during 1978. The usual format of these visits includes dinner with local officials from surrounding communities, followed by a public meeting for the hearing of local citizens' concerns.

No other Governor has consistently brought his Cabinet to the people around the Commonwealth to hear first-hand the suggestions concerned citizens have regarding their State government. This unprecedented direction taken by Governor Dalton will continue throughout the remainder of his term.

After reading the foregoing, heartening report, we as Virginians can truthfully say the state is in good hands. However, our cooperation and input are necessary to keep the Commonwealth in "good health." Governor Dalton has shown, by example, his concern for Virginia and Virginians. His Open Door meetings can accomplish a great deal, but they will be useless unless he can be assured that the citizens of Virginia will attend and express their views for the good of the whole. No man and no body of the legislature can be all things to all people; we are fortunate to have leaders in this state who desire to implement the wishes of its citizens.

We as citizens, however, must consider the good of the entire state when we approach our governmental representatives. It is a time for selflessness rather than selfishness. We can, by working together as in the past, make the future even brighter for our State of Virginia in this new decade.

We're committed.

Over 120 million seedlings set out in recent years back up the commitment to regenerate our forests.

Encouraging cooperative forestry programs throughout our region has also been an important part of Chesapeake's reforestation program. When equipment scheduling permits we will reforest private land at cost or will give the landowner, at no charge, up to 10,000 seedlings on a matching basis to reforest his land.

At Chesapeake we believe in the forests. They have to be protected and wisely used to supply man with his growing needs.

Forest regeneration. Just another way Chesapeake is working with nature to serve man.

Our professionally trained foresters will be glad to advise you on any questions you may have concerning forest management. Contact: Director of Forest Information and Education, The Chesapeake Corporation, (804) 843-5375, or The State Division of Forestry in Charlottesville.

NATURAL SLATE

An ageless beginning---yet today Natural Slate is "of age" in the modern designing trend. Its neutral color and velvet-like finish complement perfectly today's colorful decorating schemes.

Only a product of Nature can provide such dependable service under hard usage conditions. Natural Slate is sanitary, durable, strong, non-absorptive and will not contract or expand.

A LOT OF THE ABUSES CHILDREN ENDURE ARE EVEN WORSE THAN BROKEN BONES.

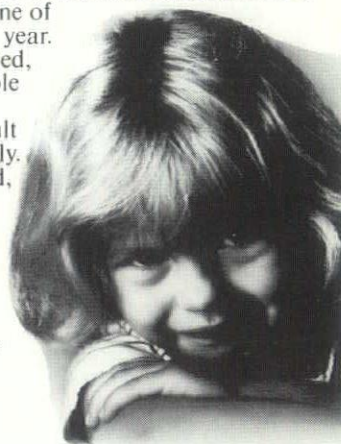

Battered children are what most people think of when they think of child abuse. But horrible as it may seem, physical abuse is only one of several ways over a million children are abused each year.

Some are emotionally abused. Constantly belittled, teased or made to feel inferior in light of unreasonable parental expectations.

Others are sexually abused. Generally by an adult who is a trusted friend or member of the child's family.

Still others suffer from neglect—the lack of food, clothing, shelter or medication when necessary.

All of these abuses can and do kill. About five children die from abuse every day. Those who survive are scarred for life, often ending up in mental institutions or jails. Many grow up to abuse their own children. The situation is desperate but not hopeless. Over 80% of the abusers can be helped. We know what to do but we can't do it alone.

Abused children are helpless. Unless you help.

Home Builders Association of Virginia Installs Officers for 1980

• Ted S. Schlossman, a Virginia Beach businessman, was installed December 7, 1979, by Congressman G. William Whitehurst as president of the Home Builders Association of Virginia, a statewide trade association representing more than 3,600 members and 20 local associations.

Ceremonies were held at the Richmond Hyatt House during the association's fourth annual Mid-Winter Conference. The conference featured two days of meetings highlighted by the President's Banquet and Ball and the installation of officers.

Schlossman, a native of Atlanta, is partner in two apartment projects, a land development company, two building corporations and a shopping center. He is founder and president of Wall to Wall Ltd., a Virginia Beach floor covering company, and of the Virginia Products Corp., a new company which manufacture prime windows and doors for national distribution.

Schlossman has been active in the Home Builders Association on the local, state and national levels. He is a past president of the Tidewater Builders Association, has previously served as secretary, treasurer and vice president of HBAV, and has served as a director of the National Association of Home Builders eight years.

Schlossman has also been active in many civic affairs. He is a past president and currently on the board of directors of the Oceans Condominium Owners Council. He is a director of the Virginia Beach Cancer Society and a former director of the American Red Cross.

Other officers installed during the conference were: Lloyd G. Flint, Jr. of Lynchburg, vice president; William H. St. Clair of Newport News, vice-president-associate; Lamar M. Jolly of Williamsburg, treasurer; and Roland Specter of Petersburg, secretary.

Boyer Elected NVBA Head

• More than 700 member firms of Northern Virginia Builders Association have elected new officers for 1980, with Cecil M. Boyer, Jr. of the Boyer companies, Ltd. at their head.

NVBA is an active group of concerned members of the construction industry interested in providing excellent quality workmanship to the consumer and determined to offer financial and community assistance to the public. NVBA is the parent organization of HOW of Northern Virginia. Home Owners Warranty is a 10 year buyer protection plan protecting home-owners against defects in material and workmanship.

"HOW is just one facet in our effort to serve the Northern Virginia community," said Cecil M. Boyer, Jr., newly elected NVBA president. "We also actively pursue our Manpower Training program to better educate apprentice workers and foster higher quality product. And, NVBA is completely endorsing the E-7 energy program to aid builders in their conservation efforts."

Mr. Boyer has been involved in the commercial & homebuilding industry for almost ten years. A graduate of the University of Missouri, he has been actively involved with NVBA for the past several years.

Other new officers include Leonard I. Abel of Richmarr Construction Company as first vice president, Robert Koury of Kour-Tipton Homes as second vice president, L. Randolph Williams of the LRW Corporation as treasurer, and Sidney O. Dewberry, of Dewberry, Nealon & Davis as secretary.

Meyers Joins Breeden & Collier

• Breeden & Collier Company pleased to announce that Stuart P. Myers has joined the firm. Myers is a Richmond native and an electrical engineering graduate of the University of Virginia. Formerly with Duke Power Company and Appalachian Energy Services, Charlotte, North Carolina, he has a broad background in mechanical equipment and control.

Breeden & Collier Company, manufacturer of energy conservation systems for 25 years, is located at 68 Staples Mill Road in Richmond.

Was Good Work— When We Had It

Following his death in 1849, from the 1860s on through the rest of the century, more and more writing was published, but the number of actual working writers — such as Mark Twain — was relatively small in comparison to the academics and other dignitaries to whom their work as writers was not central to their lives. Indeed, as late as 1920, the American Academy included amongst its academicians who had also published, two senators, a former secretary of state, five ministers or ambassadors, the presidents of Harvard, Yale and Columbia, and the president of the United States (Woodrow Wilson).

Yet, as this old generation was dying off, along with its rear-guard defense of "the genteel tradition," a new generation of actually working writers was forming the nucleus for what would develop into the writer's trade in the 20th century. Among many others who published in the early part of the century, probably the best known today would be Jack London. Then in the 1870s, three professional writers — Theodore Dreiser, Willa Cather, and Sherwood Anderson — were born within five years of one another in the Midwest (although Miss Cather was born in Winchester and taken as a child to Nebraska), and became early giants in the 1920s.

Dreiser had a tremendous impact by the frankness of his material and a power which transcended the clumsiness of his writing; the artistic purity of Miss Cather won many enduring admirers, but she inspired no imitators; the extremely kind, unaffected Sherwood Anderson was probably the greatest single influence on the younger writers born around the turn of the century and who began to publish in the twenties.

The 'twenties might be regarded as the watershed in the solidification of the writer's trade in America. Along with the fine publishing houses, both old and new, there were the big mass circulation magazines topped by the Saturday Evening Post which offered good and quick-paying markets to all kinds and conditions of working writers, and the enormous, though modestly paying markets of the pulp-paper magazines ("the pulps") which were useful for beginning writers. Also, the publishing houses, the big magazines and the pulps, and the few "quality" magazines, such as the Atlantic, Harpers and Scribners, offered an abundance of editorial jobs. Both Dreiser and Miss Cather had worked in popular magazines before they were established, and Sinclair Lewis was a Post writer before his 'twenties hit, Main Street.

(I have omitted the high purposed, low-circulation magazines of literary criticism and controversial opinion for personal reasons: their vehement causes, which they are never without, seem to have more zeal than reason, and some of their contributors assume a lofty holier-than-thou attitude, although others are sensible and do good work by any standard.)

Back to the watershed of the 'twenties then, that generation of writers produced the familiar names of Fitzgerald, Dos Passos, Hemingway, Thomas Wolfe and Faulkner, among countless others less known. When at the beginning of 1926 I took my first job as assistant editor on a detective weekly and the old and once famous Argosy, both owned by the venerable Munsey Company, which also published the N. Y. Sun then a big afternoon paper for whose Saturday

Book Page I wrote reviews), I felt that I had landed in an ancient stable publishing business which would never change. I felt that all I needed do was immerse myself in the world of literature, work hard, and enjoy the American reward of "upward mobility."

Up to a point, shortly after World War II, this worked fine. The writer's trade, apparently fixed in time, seemed a paradise in the new hurly-burly of an America where the dominant characteristic seemed to be hustling after dollars and dollar-bought status. At first, the changes came slowly and not too drastically. Then changes sped up and became so drastic that in the past decade, not only is the whole publishing world I entered fifty or so years ago now like a vanished era, but book publishing today bears only faint resemblance to the book publishing business as it existed something over forty years ago; when my "upward mobility" was climaxed by the publication of my first novel. The changes came both from the inside among writers and publishers, and from the outside in "take-overs."

If this change concerned only writers, editors and publishers, it would be no great matter in a country that has seen the passing of the corner druggist, the family grocer, and of a Broadway that once meant fine drama — with famous actors and actresses — and the obsolescence of countless jobs. After all, the membership of the Author's Guild has just reached 5,000 — 5,002 to be exact — of published writers. Not all the members are by any means working writers now. Age has caused many to produce little if anything, while age with illness or some other misfortune has reduced a number (known, as are their names, to only a small committee) to destitution, which is relieved by contributions from still producing Guild members. These contributions are not designed as grants or subsidies for work to be undertaken, but as relief for workers in a trade which as no pension funds or sick benefits.

The importance is that the changes which have already come and the worse changes that are threatening, could so cripple the trade of the working writer that the class of the professional, particularly in fiction, would be so diminished in numbers, talents and opportunities (which would include confidence) as to make the future of creative literature an even bleaker part than it is today of American living.

One major change from the outside is the passing of the pulp magazines and the big magazines of huge circulations. While removing jobs, writing experience and good pay, these two groups have been largely replaced by television into which writers and literary people disappear never to be seen again.

The other major change is the absorption of publishing houses by conglomerates. Publishing houses became attractive to conglomerates when the mass-market created by paperbacks and the proliferation of book clubs caused an explosion in readership. In a Guild anti-merger petition before the Senate, Herman Wouk said, "Since publishing has become big-time, big money has gotten interested. Wall Street... has discovered Grub Street."

Writers do not see these take-overs in a beneficent light because the interest of the conglomerate is only in making money. In what we might call "the old days" the publisher or the editor usually needed to make a profit though not a fortune (always they published some scholarly books they did not expect to pay expenses). But, as was said by writer John Brooks also at the hearing, "the publisher was balancing that [the profit motive] with literary, artistic and social values... He actually worked on your book."

Now, Brooks went on, "one finds oneself faced with what is called an acquisition editor... a book broker. His job is to find a book project that he believes will make money, to get the book... to the press, often without having read it... He or his department are a profit center combining with other profit centers, within a large firm of which they are a part."

In his conclusion, Brooks said, "generally speaking the pecuniary function has taken over in the publishing house and the workmanship function is in the process of disappearing. I can't believe that this trend serves literary, artistic and social values as they apply to the American people."

I have quoted at such length to obviate the suspicion that I might be giving only my opinion. When such fine houses as Knopf and Random are first combined and then taken over by RCA, can big profits be far behind? When big profits become the primary and almost the only motive in getting a book before a mass market, the first casualty is the working writer whose modest profit is from books in print. All such books are stricken from the lists of publishers who have become big business.

Unless this seems a plaint of aging writers, the president of Bantam Books, the leading paperback publisher, has written of the sorry state of the paperback trade which concentrates on the big best seller while ignoring the books of quality. For what Mr. Brooks' "acquisition editor" sees in a book as a "project" is how well the project will fare with book clubs, paperbacks, motion pictures and/or television. In brief, what was a work of literature to the old-fashioned publishers, has become or is becoming a product that can be merchandised in mass markets, such as supermarkets.

In this situation, the huge successes are manufacturers of mass-market escape, rather than writers of novels. They deliver projects to an acquisition editor who begins on its way the merchandizing of his product of loveless sex and violence, masochism and adultery, sadism and miscegenation, and sensationalized combinations mixed with perversions KraftEbing never dreamed of. For a single package of book club rights, paperback rights, film and/or television rights, a "writer" as project-manufacturer will earn before publication more than most of us have earned in a lifetime writing books.

There are, of course, some traditional writers, mostly older, who believe in a coherent story and the development of characters, but they are not your big sellers and their books do not lend themselves readily to the package-deal. The true opposites of the escape-merchants for the mass audience are those writers who scorn story (the word is anathema to them), and character itself, let alone development or change, and of all things eschew coherence. As Malcolm Cowley said, they write "anti-novels for anti-audiences." Those I've tried, and given up on, seemed mostly the interior vapors of a disordered non-person called "I."

Between the product manufacturers and the spewers of unintelligible fantasies (who are acclaimed by those critics whose pretentious writing is also unintelligible) the novel has fallen into something of disrepute and, more practically, now sells less well than non-fiction. Because of this, I don't think individuals will cease writing, even if on a spare-time basis for little or no monetary returns, as the cowboy whose work became largely obsolete, played at his skills at Sunday country rodeos.

But I do think the writer's trade as it flowered and flourished in this century is in danger of drastic change. Already the composers of the characterless non-story, faithfully written in whatever technique is for the moment fashionable amongst their like, subsist on grants of various sorts and sizes (in a modern version of the monetary favors once sought from members of the peerage in England) or hold forth for varying periods as Writer In Residence at Cromagnon Tech and Abnormal State.

However, the short day of the working writer as we have known him in America is not free of the transience and novelty, passion for the new and new diversions that have increasingly come to characterize America. Writers go out of fashion like clothes. Unless a writer has out a new book or books, is in the news, and (even with the exceptions of Ernest Hemingway and Norman Mailer) most writers are private persons, he or she is soon forgotten by the general audience.

Esquire published in August 1977, under the title, "American Writers: Who's Up, Who's Down?" the result of answers supplied by novelists and critics to a questionnaire. Faulkner, Fitzgerald, and (the critic Edmund) Wilson were, as Cowley reported, "cast into outer darkness along with" Hemingway. Thomas Wolfe and Dos Passos had disappeared long before that.

Thus, between the trends of transience a novelty and the change of book publishers in impersonal parts of production for mass audiences, to paraphrase the already quoted John Brooks, I can't believe these trends serve social values as they apply to the American people. But then, I don't believe I know what does serve social values for the American people.

As for honest writing itself, I imagine that will never cease; but I doubt if in time these individual efforts will be more than peripheral to the writer's trade, which so recently drew the talented young to work of their choice for a livelihood. As a survivor of that Old Guard — who once enjoyed close association with editors and great publishers, in their offices, their homes and in my home — I confess to the fear that the future of the whole publishing world will become like the present television world of which Markiewicz and Swerdlow wrote in their REMO CONTROL: "There are neither good nor bad people, but only good or bad businessmen."
