IT'S QUITE A RESPONSIBILITY TO BUILD IN VIRGINIA.

WE THINK IT'S A RESPONSIBILITY WORTH LIVING UP TO.

Back in 1819 Thomas Jefferson set the pattern for fine buildings and craftsmanship in Virginia.

At the Associated General Contractors of Virginia, Inc., we think it's a responsibility worth living up to. And, you shouldn't put up with anything less.

AGC Contractors. Professional builders who can take all the responsibility of producing your job from beginning to end. AGC Contractors will guarantee costs and quality before construction. Will get your job completed in time and at the lowest possible cost.

An AGC Contractor offers you skill, responsibility and integrity. And who can put up with anything less than that? Thomas Jefferson didn't.

For the AGC Contractors nearest you, call or write: Jim Duckhardt at (804)359-9288, 2311 Westwood Ave., P.O. Box 6775, Richmond, Va. 23230.

The Editors

JANUARY 1981
Consider this problem in architecture and human nature. St. Bartholomew's Episcopal Church sits on one of the world's most valuable pieces of real estate, slightly more than an acre in Midtown Manhattan at Park Avenue and 50th Street. For more than half a century its Byzantine-style dome has been a landmark across the street from the Waldorf Astoria.

The structure, impressive in its sturdiness, rests like Peter's Rock at the foot of surrounding skyscrapers. The architect, Bertram Grosvenor Goodhue, described the style as Romanesque of the Italian type, though touches of a Byzantine character grace the interior. A professor of art at Harvard University, Royal Cortissoz, called the three-doored portal one of the noblest works of its kind in modern times. The portal was transferred from an earlier site on Madison Avenue to the building on Park Avenue.

Last fall an unidentified corporation offered $100 million for the church and its property. It would seem, on the surface, to be a God-send. Since 1971 St. Bart's has been running a heavy annual deficit. With more than 70 employees and an annual operating budget of more than $1 million, it also has sizeable expenses in repairs. The deficit for last year approached $400,000.

To refurbish the dome last year cost $250,000. Work on the massive doors will require $350,000. Yet in the face of staggering costs, the rector and the vestry announced last October that "no offer, however big or enticing, would be accepted for the world-famous church building."

At the same time they let it be known that they were exploring the possibility of leasing the 20,000 square-foot site occupied by the community house, gardens, and terrace adjacent to the church building. Along with air rights that would leave space for an office tower of about 900,000 square feet.

The church would have the first several floors in the new building and at the expiration of the lease would own it entirely. The rector, Thomas D. Bowers, has said that no change would be undertaken unless it enhanced the property.

"We'd seek the best architect so that when it was done people would say, 'This is a priceless work of art,'" he said.

With the funds, which might well total $150 million, St. Bartholomew's would not only secure its own mission but would help churches languishing in Harlem, the Bronx, the lower East Side, and Chinatown and would lend a hand to ailing seminaries throughout the diocese. The church officials would seem to have found a way to infuse new vitality in New York's churches.

Yet a portion of the congregation, dedicated to preserving every foot of the property as it is, opposes the leasing. Without the additional funds, one vestryman has cautioned, St. Bart's functions would dwindle to the weekly 11 o'clock service.
As for Bowers, he says: "If Christ has called me to be a curator of a museum, a caretaker of buildings, if that's really perceived as my major purpose in His name, then I'm wasting my time and His resources."

Throughout his career Bowers, a native of Norfolk, has been a bringer of change: "I'm a person who's going to challenge whatever's there and try—as far as I understand it—to make all of us face the gospel."

Educated in the public schools of Norfolk and at the Virginia Military Institution, he fought 16 months in Korea, and studied at Sewanee and the Virginia Episcopal Seminary in Alexandria before beginning his ministry in two small parishes, St. James and St. George, on Virginia's Eastern Shore.

From there he was called by the former Virginia Episcopal Seminary dean, Dr. Felix Kloman, to become the associate minister at St. Alban's, the parish church of the National Cathedral in Washington, D.C.

"Tom turned out to be an even better preacher than I had remembered," Dr. Kloman said. "He was popular with all ages, particularly the young."

From St. Alban's Bowers went to St. Patrick's, an old, declining church in an exclusive section of Washington on Foxhall Road.

"In every place," Bowers said, "God has given us some theological issue."

The issue at St. Patrick's was whether a church in the nation's segregated capital would accept an integrated membership. It did, but before the struggle was ended, fifty families had left the congregation. New members poured into the church, many from embassies who were delighted at finding a church with doors open to everyone.

After more than 10 years at St. Patrick's, Bowers received an urgent call from St. Luke's Episcopal Church, a fashionable congregation in downtown Atlanta that was dying as its members fled to churches in the suburbs.

The issue in Atlanta was whether the church should join the white flight, stand pat and remain exclusive, or deal with the problems on its doorstep. Under Bowers' dynamic leadership it chose the third course, opening a community kitchen for bums and misfits, starting a school for high school dropouts, setting up a counseling service, beginning a television ministry with its own studio, stressing a ministry for youth.

"Tom's a tornado of energy," said Brad Curry, the chairman of the search committee that engaged him. "St. Luke's was going downhill. In just a few weeks with Tom, it had a new enthusiasm that it hasn't lost since he left."

He left only after seven years when a search committee from St. Bartholomew's came to him three times.

"We had the dickens of a time getting him to come to New York City. Our church had been a very conventional, Edwardian kind of institution," said Marc Haas, chairman of the search committee. "He was on the cutting edge of Episcopal procedures.

"He and his wife were happy in Atlanta. Tom was a leader in the community and had a highly successful television ministry. Finally, after Easter 1978, he agreed. He felt, I think, the need of St. Bart's for aggressive active leadership."

The members of his former parishes look on Bowers and his wife as an untiring, joyous team that devotes an average of 14 hours a day to their mission. She is the daughter of Nat Pendleton, a former member of the Virginia House of Delegates from Wytheville. They have four children.

As has been the case with his other churches, St. Bartholomew's has shown a dramatic increase in attendance and in donations since he arrived. There, too, he has been presented with an unusual challenge.

"Here, as I see it, the issue is between architectural idolatry versus the mission of the church. We've finally got an issue that cuts through the life of the parish and people have to think about what the church means," Bowers said.

One of his vestrymen, Charles Scribner, has observed that the majority of the congregation "appreciates the importance of the enlarged ministry of the church and will stand behind the rector. He's a great Christian gentleman who has taken on a tough assignment and I'm betting on him to pull it off 100 percent."

In the process, if he succeeds, he will infuse new life in the church throughout New York City and become a national religious leader.
pling with practical social issues that most television evangelists choose to ignore.

In mid-January, St. Bart’s took the first step in exploring what to do about leasing a third of its property when the congregation elected, overwhelmingly, a slate of nine vestrymen committed to studying the prospect. None of the six dissident candidates were elected despite editorial support by the New York Times and by its art critic, Ada Louise Huxtable. Huxtable compared what she called “the temptation of St. Bartholomew’s” to Faust’s bargaining with Mephistopheles.

The quality of the church's art and architecture are well known, she wrote, “but the serenity and public availability of its sun-filled and flowering garden in the congested commercial heart of the city are a particular gift of grace to New York. Only in a culture where commercial values have vanquished spiritual values would such a church and its setting not be considered a legacy beyond price from the past to the present.”

Bowers said that the aim would be to have a structure so magnificent, that while visitors were in New York, they would make a special trip to see it. He also said that he would not approve any design that did not provide gardens and open space. He called the victory a clear mandate and evidence of the congregation's new vision of the church's role.

There are other hurdles. If the vestry decides to lease a portion of the property, that would require the approval of the presiding Bishop and of his committee and, finally, the green light from the city’s Landmarks Preservation Commission.

Should all of these hurdles be overcome, Bower’s ministry and the tower that would rise behind St. Bart’s seem destined to give the church a commanding place on New York’s skyline.

Data Processing Grows with County

Chesterfield County, Virginia, its 446 square miles of woodlands, farms, small towns, planned communities, shopping malls and industrial parks stretching just across the James River from the Commonwealth's capital of Richmond, is a good place to call home. That, at least, is the feeling of residents who have accounted for a doubling in population to 140,000 in the last 10 years and the 500 persons who each month join them. That is the feeling, too, of a number of businesses, many of them major U.S. companies, that have established operations in the county.

Commercial, industrial and residential expansion, which began in earnest in the mid-1970s, is regarded by most as a natural result of the county's overall attractiveness, its physical proximity to Richmond, and its close economic ties with the metropolitan area, an area that enjoys an unemployment rate far below the national average. For Chesterfield officials, the concern is not so much with growth, but coping with it.

While pursuing the traditional avenues of generating resources from both private and public sectors to ease the individual taxpayer's burden of translating growth into meaningful progress, Chesterfield has taken a less traveled path in making its own operations and the services it provides to citizens more efficient. To an increasing degree, this is achieved by computerizing operations previously performed manually, and extending online teleprocessing to various government departments for their direct use.

Immediate Information

County Administrator Nicholas M. Meiszer sees the use of the computer in municipal governments as expanding beyond the point of just performing more jobs faster — such as producing payroll checks, utility bills and report card grades — to where elected officials can immediately receive the information needed to make an informed decision at the time that decision has to be made.

"As local governments get more involved in sophisticated equipment," he says, "I believe a systems approach is necessary. We have to ask, no matter what the function is, 'why are we doing this? Why is it necessary? What could we be doing if we weren't doing this?' If it is something we should be doing, let's make sure we find the best way to handle it. Then, when we computerize it, we will be sure that we are getting a cost-effective product."

Mr. Meiszer feels such an approach was taken with the county's recently-installed online library circulation system. "Two years ago we were asked to join with a neighboring county to develop such a system for our mutual use. While at first it seemed the most feasible route to follow, we investigated and determined that we would initiate the system with our own resources. As a result, I think we have a better system than we would have ended up with — one specifically tailored to our needs and at less cost. The library system is a real step forward for us; it provides the impetus for several refinements — including an automated, detailed street locating function and a complete vehicle maintenance system — that are used by other county departments.

The fire department will employ the location system to pinpoint not only the source of the fire, but also the source of the water supply. All departments now employ the vehicle system to keep track of the cost, over the life of each of the county's 600 vehicles, in various categories ranging from fuel, to maintenance, to repair. Data gathered at the county garage when a vehicle is serviced is entered into the system online via a 3276 terminal to form the basis of the history file, and to generate an interdepartmental bill, transferring the cost to the appropriate user's account.

"Since telecommunications is a relatively new involvement for many of the departments," says F. O. Parks, director of data processing, "we generally begin by providing them with terminals for the purpose of online inquiry. As they gain familiarity with terminal use and overall system benefits, we can add the data entry functions. For example, via the terminal, the county assessor can inquire into the files to determine the current assessments against the various parcels of land, accounting can query the general ledger file, and the utilities people can determine the status of sewer and water billings."

Online use of the terminal for data entry is a major function of the fire department's fire incident and reporting system. After responding to a call, each of the county's stations compiles data about the action, including number and types of equipment used, location and nature of the fire, the structure involved, false alarms, the result, etc. This data is entered online to update files and produce daily reports on fire alarms and monthly reports for fire analysis.

Increased benefits are being derived from use of the online purchasing and accounts payable system which is tied to the general ledger. Basically, purchase orders are entered through the terminal into the system and transferred to the general ledger where funds are encumbered. When a check is written against the invoice, that information is entered in the system and transferred to the ledger files, relieving that encumbrance and posting it as an expense against the appropriate department.

Says Mr. Parks, "If a department tries to purchase something and the encumbrance takes the balance into the negative — they try to spend more than they have on hand — the purchase order can't be entered. This has given departments better control of where overages and shortages are occurring and enables the county to do a better job of money management."

Recent installation of the IBM 4341 provides Chesterfield with three times more processing capability and has significantly improved terminal response time. Says Elmer C. Hodge, Jr., director of the Management Services department, "The very reason more capacity was needed — increased usage of the several systems by various departments — enabled us to justify implementation of the 4341 on a price/performance basis and pave the way for the growth of new applications."

Library Circulation System

One application — implementation of the library circulation system — is typical of the efficiencies the county is bringing to its services management role.

The six-branch library system centers on the use of IBM 3276/78 keyboard/displays equipped with hand-held optical character recognition scanners that read unique OCR numbers previously affixed to each of the libraries' 275,000 holdings (book and non-book items) and 32,000 patron ID cards. Through either the terminal keyboard or scanner, 4341 files are accessed to transact circulation, fines payable and online maintenance functions. Overdue and fine notices may be requested manually, or generated automatically. Additionally, management and statistical reports, most of them not available under the manual system, are generated through batch processing and cover all aspects of library system operation.

"The system benefits both library personnel and our patrons," says director of Chesterfield libraries Gene H. Knoop, "because we can now process our annual circulation of about 750,000 faster and more accurately, and immediately determine the exact location of each of our library items whether it is on loan, at the bindery or available at a particular branch."

The decision to automate library functions was based in good measure on a cost analysis showing that while book circulation was growing at the rate of 15 percent a year, the time spent on managing and processing the paperwork associated with higher circulation increases geometrically. Moreover, the study demonstrated that the projected expansion of the library system, linked with continued population growth, would require an inordinate number of staff people and disproportionately increase costs.

States Mrs. Knoop, "Because the system automates so many time-consuming tasks previously performed manually, it allows us to hold the line on the number of new positions required and make more efficient use of our present staff. After some initial start-up expenditures, our annual cost savings with the new system versus the essentially manual method will mount, and in five years we should be realizing a yearly cost savings of around 25 percent."

According to Mr. Hodge, "Three or four years ago, if we were interested in developing an application, we would visit other representative communities to see how they were functioning, and determine if we could either apply or refine their programming to suit our purposes. Today, with a relatively small staff and budget, we are increasingly developing our own applications, specifically designed for our special requirements ... and, we think that they are solid systems."

What Mr. Hodge fails to add is the fact that in growing numbers, representatives from communities across the nation are now making the trip to Chesterfield.

Some of our tour guides are pretty wild creatures.

You'll see plenty of pretty wild sights on our Nature Trail. Just pick up a tour booklet at the trail and you'll discover 44 different types of plants, flowers, trees and interesting attractions marked along the way. And in addition to seeing such sights as the Devil's Walkingstick and the Tree-of-Heaven, you just might have a bear or a raccoon or wild turkey as your companion. Open every day till sunset, our self-guided walking tour covers 1.5 miles and takes about 2 hours to complete. So, take a walk on the wild side. Chesapeake's Nature Trail is located on Route 33, three miles west of West Point, Virginia. For tour group information contact Chesapeake's Director of Forest Information and Education.

A LOT OF THE ABUSES CHILDREN ENDURE ARE EVEN WORSE THAN BROKEN BONES.

Battered children are what most people think of when they think of child abuse. But horrible as it may seem, physical abuse is only one of several ways over a million children are abused each year. Some are emotionally abused. Constantly belittled, teased or made to feel inferior in light of unreasonable parental expectations. Others are sexually abused. Generally by an adult who is a trusted friend or member of the child's family. Still others suffer from neglect—the lack of food, clothing, shelter or medication when necessary.

All of these abuses can and do kill. About five children die from abuse every day. Those who survive are scarred for life, often ending up in mental institutions or jail. Many grow up to abuse their own children. The situation is desperate but not hopeless. Over 80% of the abusers can be helped. We know what to do but we can’t do it alone.

Abused children are helpless. Unless you help.

VIRGINIA RECORD  Founded 1878

National Recognition For State Highways

- Virginia highway facilities have won two of the seven first place awards for design excellence in nationwide competition conducted by the U.S. Department of Transportation's Federal Highway Administration (FHWA).

- Interstate 77 in Carroll County was selected as the best new rural highway and the restored Meems Bottom covered bridge in Shenandoah County was cited as the best example of environmental preservation and enhancement.

- The prize-winning facilities were planned and constructed under the direction of the Virginia Department of Highways and Transportation, and were selected from among nominations submitted by 66 governmental agencies in 40 states and 26 localities throughout the country.

- I am extremely pleased at this much-deserved national recognition for our engineering and construction staff, which has contributed so much over many years to the development of Virginia's highway system," Harold C. King, the department's commissioner, said when he learned of the awards.

- The 25-miles of Interstate 77 between Poplar Camp and the North Carolina state line in mountainous Carroll County was chosen for its excellence in design, alignment, and location, and its preservation of surrounding natural areas," federal officials said.

- The highway, which parallels the curving US 52 through the mountains, provides a safer route for local residents and travelers. It also opened up one of the most beautiful sections of the eastern United States and made the area more accessible to tourists and industry, they said.

- In many sections, the highway was built as two individual roadways to avoid disturbing any more of the natural landscape than was necessary. At some points, the two-lane southbound roadway rises as much as 100 feet above the three-lane northbound route, whose extra lane was provided for slow-moving trucks climbing up the mountain.

- The Interstate project, opened in two sections in July and December 1977, was one of the toughest jobs the department ever tackled due to the rough terrain the mountains offered, King said.

- The nearly century-old Meems Bottom bridge just south of Mount Jackson was brought back to life by the department after it was virtually destroyed by arsonists on Halloween 1976.

- The structure's heart pine twin arches survived the fire and made it possible for the department's engineers to duplicate the original bridge, whose unique arch-truss design was patented by Aaron Burr's brother. Warped arches were realigned, joints and timbers were sandblasted and filled, and steel bars were placed for reinforcement and safety.

- The original timber was protected with a fire-retardant varnish and the new lumber was pressure-treated with preservative and a fire-resistive coating. The tin roof was replaced with special stainless steel which kept the original charm, but minimized maintenance costs.

- The reconstructed bridge, opened in August 1979, is a state historic landmark which is enjoyed by local residents and other travelers alike. It is located on secondary Route 720.

- Other first place winners in the federally-sponsored competition were by North Carolina Department of Transportation, which also won two first-place awards, the Washington and Pennsylvania state departments of transportation, and the city of Raleigh, North Carolina.

Keep Virginia Beautiful

DEPOSIT ALL LITTER.

Interstate 77 (top) through Carroll County has made some of the most beautiful scenery on the East Coast more accessible to tourists and industry, while historic Meems Bottom Bridge (bottom) lends its charm to Shenandoah County after its reconstruction from a devastating fire. Both projects of the Virginia Department of Highways and Transportation received first place awards in highway design excellence in a nationwide contest conducted by the Federal Highway Administration.
Virginia invites you to visit the most beautiful homes in America’s history.

An inside look at the homes where America grew up is just part of the excitement as Virginia welcomes fall with open arms and garden gates. And presidential masterpieces like Mount Vernon and Monticello are just the beginning.

You can explore America’s great indoors along the James, too, as it flows back to the golden age of the plantation in room after room filled with antiques and memories. At Shirley, home of the Hill-Carter family for nine generations. At Carter’s Grove, “the most beautiful house in America.” At Berkeley, where Thanksgiving began in 1619.

You can visit the oldest brick house in English America—Adam Thoroughgood built it near Norfolk 350 years ago. Or you can go north along the Potomac to Stratford Hall, home of the Lees’, and on to George Mason’s Gunston Hall. But wherever you go, from Patrick Henry’s Red Hill to the Fredericksburg home of Washington’s only sister, give yourself time.

Time for winding garden paths, mountains blazing with crimson and gold, and beaches still warm with the last of summer. Time for roadside shops, lush green eighteens, and feasts of ham and peanut soup. Time to savor whatever you love.

Because, from Jamestown to Yorktown to Appomattox, whatever you love is here. And wherever you are, you’re at home.

Woodlawn Plantation Exhibit

Open To All Stitchers

- Attention all needleworkers! You are invited to enter your handiwork in the 18th Annual Needlework Exhibit at historic Woodlawn Plantation.

Men, women, and children are eligible to compete for ribbons. All types of work done with a needle are eligible. Knitting, crocheting, and hooked pieces are not eligible.

All proceeds go to Woodlawn Plantation, which was George Washington's wedding gift to his wife's granddaughter, Nelly Custis, and his nephew, Lawrence Lewis. Mrs. Lewis was an ardent needleworker and there are many pieces of her work in the Woodlawn collection.

This popular exhibit, which last year drew some 15,000 visitors, will be open to the public March 7 through March 29, 1981. The exhibit will be judged by Doris Bowman, needlework and lace specialist at the Smithsonian Institution; Margaret Gilman, Editor, McCall's Needlework and Craft Magazine; Hope Hanley and Erica Wilson, well-known authors, teachers and experts in the field of needlework; and Christine Meadows, Curator of Mount Vernon.

For additional information and entry blanks, call or write Woodlawn Plantation, P. O. Box 37, Mount Vernon, Virginia 22121, (703) 557-7880.

BUILDERS NAME

New Officers and 1980 Man of the Year

- Leonard I. Abel of Richmarr Construction Company has been elected President of the Northern Virginia Builders Association (NVBA) by its more than 800 members.

NVBA is a group of the area's builders and others allied with the building industry concerned with quality construction and training in the commercial and homebuilding industry. NVBA is the parent office of Home Owners Warranty (HOW) of Northern Virginia, a 10-year buyer protection plan for consumers, and the Manpower Training and Development Program, established to recruit, train and develop apprenticeship workers.

In addition to HOW and the Manpower Program, another facet of our service to the Northern Virginia community is the E-7 Energy Program which aids builders in their conservation efforts," said newly-elected Abel.

Mr. Abel has been actively involved with NVBA and has been on the Board of Directors since 1978. A life-long resident of the District of Columbia, he graduated from the University of Pennsylvania with a Bachelor of Science degree in Economics. Since 1971 Mr. Abel has been associated as a principal with Richmarr Construction Corporation and is currently its Executive Vice President.

Other new officers include Robert Koury of Koury-Tipton Homes as first vice president; L. Randolph Williams of LRW Corporation as second vice president; Monte L. West of West Homes, Inc., as treasurer; and Sidney O. Dewberry of Dewberry, Nealon & Davis as secretary.

Man-of-the-Year

Douglas R. Fahl received the Northern Virginia Builders Association's 1980 Man-of-the-Year Award from Cecil M. Boyer, Jr., 1980 president. Mr. Fahl has been a member of the NVBA Board of Directors for the last three years and has been Chairman of the Planning and Land Use Committee since the early 1970s.

He obtained a B.S.C.E. degree from the Virginia Polytechnic Institute and studied Urban Transportation and Analysis at Georgia Institute of Technology. He is now Director of Planning and Assistance to the Partners for Dewberry, Nealon & Davis, an engineering, architectural, planning and surveying firm in Fairfax.

"NVBA gives this honor to an individual for outstanding dedication, accomplishment and leadership in the building industry and in the association," said Mr. Boyer.

MEAG: $1 Billion Later

The first financing for the Municipal Electric Authority of Georgia was accomplished in 1977. Three years later, MEAG has raised $1 billion dollars through seven financings.

MEAG’s progress has been remarkable, considering the size and complexity of its program—47 participants and ownership interests with an investor-owned utility, a cooperative and a municipal utility in eight generating units. In fact, MEAG is regarded as a bellwether among joint-action power supply programs.

First Boston is very proud to be the investment banker for MEAG since its inception. The professionals at First Boston know the public power market, just as we know and are involved in every phase of investment banking. And we are willing to use both our knowledge and capital to meet the financing requirements of our public power clients.

Put a well-capitalized, experienced investment banking firm to work on your next financing—contact John R. Raben, Vice President, (212) 825-2311.
