CHARLES M. GOODMAN, FAIA

A Retrospective

By Gregory K. Hunt

Charles M. Goodman's architectural career in the Washington, D.C. area began in 1935 with his position as a Design Architect in the Supervising Architect's Office in the U.S. Treasury Department. During this period, Federal architecture experienced a significant shift from neo-classical style to modern, and Goodman's designs for numerous public buildings across the country exemplified his modernist tendencies. Noteworthy government buildings of this period include the Federal Building in New Orleans, the U.S. Government Group at the New York World's Fair, the Federal Building and Central Post Office in Evanston, Illinois, and the original designs for the Washington National Airport Building complex.

After establishing his own independent architectural practice in 1939, Goodman began what was to become nearly a four-decade period of designing innovative modern domestic architecture. Prior to the outbreak of World War II, he completed four major contemporary houses in Virginia—the Powell, Brown, Erland and Seavreid residences, each of which was widely published and remains as a significant example of modern domestic architecture. During World War II, he served as Head Architect for the Air Transport Command, planning a number of airport installations around the world, including the VIP Air Terminal at Washington National Airport. Returning to private practice after the war, he became involved with the design of a private plane airport in Secaucus, New Jersey, sponsored by Henry Berliner, designer and producer of the famous "Ercoupe," the non-spinable private plane. This airport design was to serve as a prototype for a series of airports to be built across the United States to facilitate private plane ownership among the middle class. Each airport was to include an elaborate terminal, restaurant, small plane servicing and repair facilities, hotel and shopping unit.

In 1946, Goodman began the design of Hollin Hills, the famed single-family residential community of 450 contemporary houses on 300 acres in Fairfax County. Acclaimed as one of the most significant planned communities in the U.S., Hollin Hills was considered revolutionary at the time of its inception, and both its land planning strategies and various individual house designs had wide influence on the home building industry. Widely published both here and abroad, Hollin Hills received a large number of citations and awards for design and planning excellence. On the occasion of its Centennial in 1957, the American Institute of Architects cited Hollin Hills as being one of the ten examples of "American Architecture at its best, which forecast the future of the architecture in this country." Goodman's interest in land planning and residential community design later resulted in a number of landmark contemporary housing developments in the Washington Metropolitan area, including Hammond Hill, Hammond Wood, Wheatoncrest, Rock Creek Woods and Hollinridge, all in Montgomery County, and Lake Barcroft Estates and Oak Forest in Fairfax County.

Goodman was named one of eight distinguished American architects honored by Rice University during its 1963 Semi-Centennial celebration.

His early investigations into the design of economical residential construction in a contemporary idiom quickly led to research of prefabrication techniques in wood-frame construction, and the renovation of his own house in Alexandria, Virginia, which also included a large addition, became a laboratory in which to pursue this research. Utilizing shop-fabricated wall panels, each 8 feet wide by 10 feet high, the Goodman house (1952) exemplified an innovative approach to residential construction fabrication—an approach that was to be later applied to house design in Hollin Hills and other residential developments.

In 1953, Goodman became consulting architect to the National Homes Corporation, at that time the largest industrial fabricator of housing in the world. During his five year tenure with National Homes, he designed the company's entire line of contemporary houses, over 100,000 of which were built throughout the country. His work with the National Homes Corporation eventually led to the design of several large custom houses that were fabricated in the factory, shipped to the site, and erected with a minimum of field labor. The Price Residence of 1957, built for the Chairman of the Board of National Homes in Lafayette, Indiana, is but one of the outstanding examples of this approach to custom residential design. These experiments with prefabrication continued in other areas, design and produce a system of lightweight precast concrete panel structures. Although originally produced for industrial and commercial uses, the system was eventually used in large-scale home building. After being retained by the Aluminum Company of America in 1957 to research innovative uses of aluminum in architecture, Goodman produced the "Alcoa House of '57," a research house incorporating highly original uses of aluminum. His experiments involving industrialization techniques and their application to the fabrication of buildings were also creatively realized in his River Park project in Southwest Washington, D.C. Built by the Reynolds Metals Company in 1964, this large residential project, for which Goodman served as both the architect and land planner, was widely celebrated for its unique site plan and inventive use of aluminum in its design. In 1960, Goodman was retained by the Lavanburg Foundation of New York to explore ways in which rundown areas of urban communities could be improved. This commission resulted in an illustrated book of design suggestions, entitled Life for Dead Spaces, co-authored with Wolf von Eckhardt and published in 1963.

Throughout the 1960s, Goodman's practice spanned a broad range of planning projects and designs for a number of custom residences, corporate headquarters, residential developments, mixed-use complexes, and office parks. Notable projects receiving wide publicity and acclaim include: Hickory Cluster, one of the first cluster housing developments for Reston, Virginia (1962); Houston House, a 35-story high-rise tower of 410 apartments over a multi-level parking garage in Houston, Texas (1963); the Parrish Residence in Washington, D.C. (1965); and the Brick Institute of America Headquarters Building in McLean, Virginia (1968).

Charles M. Goodman was named one of eight distinguished American architects honored by Rice University during its 1963 Semi-Centennial celebration. These architects were described as being the People's Architects—a new breed of professionals who have an innate and highly developed design talent, who possess a deep sensitivity to people's needs, who have a profound feeling of social responsibility, and who have successfully incorporated human values into their buildings.

This retrospective exhibition, mounted nearly twenty-five years after this accolade, attempts to demonstrate just how accurately these words describe the architecture of Charles M. Goodman, FAIA.

Hollin Hills, begun in 1940s.

Initially, the idea of conveying the essence of an architect's career through a retrospective exhibition of his work involves inherent limitations. The necessity to encapsulate the many accomplishments of a professional life in a modest number of exhibition materials inevitably restricts the viewer's awareness of an architect's prolific creative output. At the same time, the numerous aspirations, professional challenges, frustrating defeats and exhilarating successes that characterize the nature of any long architectural practice remain distant from the viewer, entombed in the photographic images, renderings and drawings before us. The retrospective exhibition thus presents a visual abbreviation of the architect's creative life, compressing it into staccatoed segments that may be studied as singular architectural acts, necessarily of their own time and place. When the individual segments, on the other hand, are considered collectively, they transcend the specifics of time and place and represent the true poetry of an architectural life that is constantly searching, questioning, exploring and proposing through both unrealized projects and built work.

A Hardheaded Look at Hard Hats.

Just putting on a hard hat doesn't make a person a skilled worker. It's what goes on under that hat that makes the difference. Things like pride in accomplishment. A commitment to increasing skills and training. And dedication to the American free enterprise system. You'll find these qualities under every Merit Shop hat. Which means you'll find these qualities on every Merit Shop job.

If you're planning a construction project, and are concerned with the spectre of strikes, unrealistic wages, and costly work restrictions, consider building The Merit Shop way. Our aim is to bring your project in on time and right on the dollar.

Looking for efficiency, productivity and responsibility on your next building job? Call our Executive Director. Let him steer you to the Merit Shop general contractor or subcontractor who best suits your needs.

Organizing the Goodman Exhibition

By James W. Ritter, AIA

Have you ever wondered what becomes of an architect's drawings and photographs as his practice begins to wind down? Especially those of a particularly important and influential architect?

I did, and this is the story of how an exhibition came to be.

It began with a chance telephone conversation between George Graves, who was working in my office, and the noted architect, Charles M. Goodman, FAIA. George is a VPI & SU graduate who attended the university's urban studio, the Washington/Alexandria Center for Architecture, where I am an adjunct professor, and he suggested that the students might benefit from seeing some of Mr. Goodman's work. Much to our surprise and delight, Mr. Goodman agreed to allow us to put together an exhibition.

Being familiar with Mr. Goodman's projects, Professor Gregory K. Hunt of the Center and I were positive that his work deserved something more than being tacked up with push pins, so funding was needed. The Northern Virginia Chapter of the A.I.A., seeing this as the first of an occasional retrospective on the work of its members, agreed to co-sponsor the exhibition with the Center, and later the Mid-Atlantic Region of the A.I.A. gave us a matching grant.

And so began the fun part! Professor Hunt and I made an appointment with Mr. Goodman and his wife to begin the assessment of the available material. Our visits with the Goodmans were both enlightening and entertaining, and they had both spent much effort in preparing huge stacks of photographs and drawings from which we could choose. The quantity of material was truly staggering, and we were like two kids in a candy shop. In the end we carried away many more photographs than we could possibly use, but that gave us the flexibility to arrange everything to maximum advantage, both visually and for the sake of explanation.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR: James W. Ritter, AIA, adjunct professor at the Washington/Alexandria Center for Architecture, VPI & SU, maintains a private practice in Alexandria. His designs have won both Northern Virginia Chapter and Virginia Society AIA honor awards. He won the 1984 Grand Prize for Innovations in Housing. Mr. Ritter is 1987 President of the Northern Virginia Chapter AIA.

Mainly, there were photographs, mostly taken by Robert Lautman, but there were also many original drawings by Mr. Goodman himself, including renderings by him of federal projects he had designed in the 1930s. There were original renderings by Helmut Jacoby for several projects, and we even came across a series of schematic sketches for the Structural Clay Products Institute Building (on the backs of envelopes and the like!), and we were able to show these in addition to photographs of the model and the finished building, a rare situation, especially for work done nearly twenty years ago.

The exhibit became a "learning project" for the architecture students at the Center, and they were organized into teams to plan and organize every phase of the exhibition, including the budget.

We decided to stage the show for 30 days in the Center's quarters in Alexandria, kicking it off with a reception coinciding with a meeting of the Northern Virginia Chapter. The evening was a big success, attracting a big turn-out of members and other associates and friends of Charles Goodman. Robert Lautman and three locally prominent architects who had worked for Mr. Goodman, David H. Condon, Eason Cross, Jr. and Robert Calhoun Smith, all participated in leading an informal discussion about "what it was really like" in the Goodman office, with many good stories and anecdotes, all of which seemed to reinforce the image of a first rate architectural office dedicated to good design. (Unfortunately, because of poor health, Mr. Goodman could not attend this evening in his honor, so the students at the Center videotaped the evening for his later enjoyment.) The exhibition, in conjunction with the program, proved to be a positive learning experience for the students and a real inspiration to the rest of us in practice. Because the Center's exhibition gallery is open to the public, many area residents also viewed this retrospective of Mr. Goodman's work.

But the story doesn't end there. When the curator of the Octagon, Judy Schultz, saw how well Mr. Goodman's work had been documented over the years, we began negotiations with the staff of the Octagon for a possible expanded show to be held there next year.

And so what began as a simple showing of one man's work for the sake of our architectural students is turning into a celebration of the work of an important architect.

The moral? Architects—save those drawings and photographs!

Pella's new Type E System stands for Energy Savings.

Summer and winter, night and day, Pella's new Type E System saves you more energy and keeps you more comfortable than triple glass.

At a lower cost, too. Whether you choose Pella products with Type E glass or with the Type E Slimshade® blinds between the panes, you'll enjoy the view and sunshine without heat buildup, heat loss or furniture-fading ultra-violet rays.

The Type E System is based on a nearly invisible energy-reflective metallic surface which holds in the warm rays of the winter sun and blocks out radiant heat in summer. We haven't seen a comparable window with as low a U value, the energy rating that tells how much heat gets through the window. A Pella double glass window with the Type E Slimshade, closed, has a spectacular U value of only .23. That says a lot for Pella's beautiful wood construction.

Come find out more at your Pella Window Store. We have Type E glass or Type E Slimshades in Pella windows, doors, sunrooms and skylights. And we can install either Type E System in your existing Pella double glass windows.

ASPHALT
THEM ALL!

94% OF OUR NATION'S HIGHWAYS
and for a lot of good reasons.

- Asphalt's versatility permits construction at just the right thickness to meet the needs of any paving project. Construction is fast and economical and the results are long-lasting.
- Smooth, joint-free asphalt results in superior riding qualities that other surfaces just cannot equal. Fuel consumption and tire wear are greatly reduced. "Black top" creates less glare, greater marking visibility, quicker melting of snow and ice.
- Asphalt is noted for its low maintenance costs—and when repairs are needed around utility cuts and installations they can be accomplished quickly and economically without special expensive equipment.
- It's no wonder that hot-mix asphalt is the most sensible choice. Stronger . . . safer . . . quieter . . . and 100% recyclable.

VDH & T Offers 'Highway Helpline'

Besides clearing the highways during and after a winter storm, the Virginia Department of Highways and Transportation (VDH & T) now is providing citizens with information on general road conditions around the state through its toll-free HIGHWAY HELPLINE, 1-800-367-ROAD.

"The HIGHWAY HELPLINE can be used by citizens who plan to travel to another part of the state and want information about road conditions en route to their destination," said Highways and Transportation Commissioner Ray D. Pethel. "For specific information about road conditions in their immediate areas, citizens should call the local highway and transportation office, which is listed in the telephone directory."

During severe weather conditions, an operations center in the agency's Richmond office is staffed to track road conditions around the state. During the department's normal business hours and when a large area of the state is affected, the center will have a HIGHWAY HELPLINE operator available to answer citizens' questions about general road conditions.

Outside the regular hours and when a storm is isolated to a small area of the state, HIGHWAY HELPLINE callers will hear a recording of road condition information.

During a snowfall, VDH & T's snow crews concentrate on keeping the main roads passable for public transportation and emergency vehicles. The crews rarely plow the roads out of sequenced priorities. In life-threatening emergencies, citizens should contact local police and fire departments. Police and emergency vehicles are equipped to reach an emergency call quicker than a street can be plowed.

Spring Will Bring Historic Garden Week to Virginia

by
Charlotte Taylor Massie

A mix of old and new adds to the charm of The Garden Club of Virginia's 54th Historic Garden Week April 18 through April 26. It represents untold hours of thorough and careful planning by the members of The Garden Club of Virginia to insure the club's maintaining the quality of its garden week year after year.

The 200 homes and gardens chosen for the tours in 32 areas of the state show the variety of architecture and garden design in Virginia from its beaches to its mountains. More than half of these are newcomers to this springtime event this year. Despite distinctive designs and different ages, the homes have a common interest—good taste—be it the simple cottage of long ago; the historic homes of early colonists; the mansions on rolling estates; the elegant town houses; or those of contemporary design. A visit to the tours is a source of information—history comes alive for the historian; fine examples of Jacobean, Federal, Queen Anne, Georgian, Gothic Revival, Italian Renaissance and contemporary architecture for the architect and builder; period furniture and accessories for the antique lover; paintings, portraits and great works of art for the connoisseur; designs of large and intimate gardens for the horticulturist.

Among the houses open for the first time is Newmarket. Built in 1721 in Saint Martin's Parish in Hanover County, this striking example of 18th century Colonial Tidewater architecture and its irregular facade recall English folk architecture. Originally located in Doswell near a gravel pit, it was moved in 1978 to its present site near Studley. Neither time nor transportation have destroyed the charm of Newmarket.

Another new offering is the Noe Home on High Street in Petersburg. Built between 1891 and 1899, the exterior yellow brick structure with grey brick and granite trim has remained unchanged.

Tetley Plantation is located in Orange County. Completed in 1840, it has 26 rooms and 14 fireplaces and commands a panoramic view of the Blue Ridge Mountains.

The Bickham Home on the Suffolk Tour is located on one of Suffolk's rare hillsides in the Chuckatuck Burrough. Each of the five fireplace mantels has a different design and there are eight different sash styles used in the windows.

The Austin Home is a style not at all indigenous to the Staunton area. In a setting of native oak and dogwood, the contemporary style chalet hugs the natural slope of the landing and is completely successful in seeming to belong where it is.

Shibui at 1304 Mockingbird Place, Birdneck, Virginia Beach, is a 16 room house built on 8 levels. The exterior is designed with outward reaching angles, different from every direction. The interior is equally unique. Dramatic yet simple, most rooms on the lower level open into one another, defined and divided by different elevations of the floor or ceiling, fireplaces or guardrails. Portions of the main living rooms span three levels.

A 176 page guidebook, giving detailed information about all the homes, gardens and landmarks open for Historic Garden Week will be available March 1, free of charge, at the Historic Garden Week Headquarters, 12 East Franklin Street, Richmond, 23219. If requested by mail, the headquarters would appreciate a donation of $1 toward the cost of the postage for the informative book. The Virginia Department of Highways and Transportation publishes a special map giving the locations of the homes and gardens and marks the roads and highways with green directional arrows for the convenience of visitors. The map also is available at the Historic Garden Week Headquarters.

Your Government has published thousands of books to serve America. And now the Government Printing Office has put together a catalog of the Government's "Bestsellers"—almost a thousand books in all. Books like The Space Shuttle at Work, Starting a Business, U.S. Postage Stamps, and National Parks Guide and Map. I daresay there's even information on one of my favorite subjects—printing.
