The refrigerator that thinks it's an armoire.

Monogram™ built-in refrigerators always were ambitious. This one thinks it's French Provincial. But with the help of custom unfitted cabinetry, it can just as easily assume the identity of a Shaker cupboard. Or an art deco pantry. Your imagination can take over from there.

Of course, Monogram refrigerators were created to integrate with your kitchen cabinets. It is their reason for being. In 36," 42," and 48" widths, they have a shallow design that permits installation that is totally flush with the cabinets (we call it "cabinet friendly").

They are designed to accept decorative panels that completely match your kitchen cabinets with no trim or overlapping edges. You can mount custom door handles on these panels to match the handles on the cabinets.

The interior is also an exhibition of fine design, with flexible space adjustment, efficient storage, good lighting, spill-proof shelves, ice and crushed ice and cold water through the door.

Monogram refrigerators are part of a complete line of flush, built-in appliances designed to integrate with your cabinetry. They come with the assurance of the industry's most extensive network of factory service professionals and the extraordinary GE Answer Center® service on call 24 hours a day every day of the year at 800.626.2000.

Please call for a brochure.

Monogram, from GE.

A synonym for the best in built-in appliances.

Inform encourages open discussion of architecture, design and the arts. Opinions expressed in the magazine are those of the author and not necessarily of the Virginia Society of the American Institute of Architects.

What you are holding in your hands is something of a small miracle, when you consider that this is the one time each year when Inform tries to do the impossible – be all things to all people. As the Virginia Society AIA's primary means of communicating with the public, Inform magazine targets its editorial plans with a general audience in mind. For our purposes, we define that audience as people who have an expressed interest in architecture and design or those who are in a position to influence design decisions. At the same time, this Special Issue contains some of the elements of an internal publication known formerly as the Virginia Architects Handbook, which included a list of AIA members in the state and other types of information pertaining to the practice of architecture.

In 1994, we changed the format of the handbook to direct it more toward Inform's general readers. For those who fall into that group, be sure to take note of the special features in this issue. First, how do you reach the AIA? Look on page 7, where we have published a list of the four local chapters across the state and the statewide society. Second, how do you engage the services of an architect? Refer to page 9, where we offer a brief introduction to the subject, including notes at the end of the article on how to obtain more complete information. Third, you should take notice of the most recent Awards for Excellence in Architecture, coverage of which begins on page 15. Enjoy a look at the best of Virginia architecture, as judged by an esteemed group of jurors with national reputations as designers in their own right. And fourth, when you arrive at the point where you are ready to contact an architect, you'll want to look through the directory of Virginia architecture firms, which offers insight into the expertise of each firm. You may want to begin with the index on page 93, which lists all the firms according to the city where the practice is located.

For the architects who are reading this, be aware that we've made new changes to meet your needs as well. A year ago, we eliminated the alphabetical list of every Virginia Society AIA member from the Special Issue of Inform and published it instead in an expanded newsletter. What we found from our advisory board – and from our own experience in the Society offices – was that many people continued to hold onto their outdated handbooks, where the firm and member directories were combined. Now you'll see that the membership list is back home in this publication. We have also continued the tradition of listing consultants to the design professions as a service to our members. Other information related to the profession, such as Virginia Society by-laws and legal statutes regulating the practice of architecture, is not published here. But it is still available from the Society by request from any member.

We believe these evolutionary changes in the information we publish and how we distribute it will make for an annual publication that better satisfies the needs of both our members and our client audience. From award-winning designs to data on firms, from profiles on our honorees to phone numbers for each AIA member, this Special Issue has a little something for everyone.

Why Should You Hire an Architect?

A Consumer's Guide to Architectural Services

Few people realize how complicated it is to build – that is, until they find themselves lost in the maze of design options, building codes, zoning laws, contractors, and so on. No two projects are exactly alike, so there is no single, clear-cut path to follow.

The architect is the one professional who has the education, training, experience, and vision to guide you through the entire design and construction process. Architects do everything from helping you define what you want to build to helping you get the most for your construction dollar. Architects see the big picture. They don't just design four walls and a roof – they create total environments, interiors and exteriors, that satisfy functional needs and are exciting, dynamic places to be. Whatever the size of your project, an architect can help you achieve a well-designed building that meets your needs and works within your budget and time frame. This happens in a number of ways.

A Wise Investment

Architects are trained to solve problems in creative ways, translating your needs into square feet and three-dimensional space. With their broad knowledge of design and construction, architects can show you alternatives and options you might never think of on your own.

The architect's services are a wise investment, not an added cost to your project. Why? Consider this:

- A well-conceived project can be built more efficiently and economically. Architects plan your project with you. As your ideas evolve, changes can be made on paper much less expensively than later on when construction is underway. Thorough drawings also make it easier for the contractor to price and build your project.

- Energy efficient buildings can save you money on fuel bills down the road. An architect can design a building to maximize heating from the sun and let in natural light, thus reducing your heating, cooling, and electric bills over time.

- The architect can work with your budget and help you select the appropriate materials and workmanship at a fair price. Architects develop the drawings and specifications to help you get bids for construction that are based on your requirements.

- An architect can help you choose materials and finishes that are durable as well as attractive, saving on frequent maintenance and replacement costs. Architects work to stay abreast of advances in roofing, brickwork, floor tile, paint finishes, and so forth. Their familiarity with the full range of materials enables them to suggest the appropriate ones for your project.

- Good design sells. A well-designed house has a higher resale value. A well-designed store draws customers. A well-designed workplace attracts good employees and increases their productivity.

- The architect can make your life easier. Face it: building is a long process that is often messy and disruptive, particularly if you are living or working in the space under construction. The architect you hire looks out for your interests and tries to find ways to make that process go smoothly.

- If your project requires engineering or other design services, the architect can coordinate the team. The architect sorts out complex building codes and zoning laws. The architect can help you find qualified construction contractors based on your project's needs. The architect visits the construction site to help verify that the project is being built according to plans and specifications.

How Do I Find the Right Architect?

Architecture firms come in a variety of sizes and types. Each firm brings a different combination of skills, expertise, interests, and values to its projects. Statistically, the average firm is made up of nine or ten people. Many firms have one or two architects. Others have staffs of 50 or more. Some firms specialize in one or more project or facility types. Some firms include in-house engineering services (for example, civil, structural, mechanical, or electrical). They may also include other design disciplines, such as planning, urban design, landscape architecture, or interior design. Other architects introduce these disciplines into their projects by involving appropriate consultants with special expertise.

It is well worth investing the time required to select your architect carefully. As you move forward in the process, be reminded that you are engaging the services of a professional. You will work closely with the architect through the life of the project; and your relationship may extend to future projects. Invest at least the care it takes for you to select a financial or legal advisor.

Yours will be a business relationship. Find out how prospective architects do business, how they work with their clients, how responsive they are to your management and decision styles, and how well their work stacks up against their clients' expectations. The best way to find out is to talk with other owners for whom the firm has provided professional services.

Ask questions. Respect the architect as a professional who brings experience and specialized knowledge to your project. At the same time, don't be afraid to ask the same questions you've asked yourself: What does the architect expect from the project? How much information does the architect need? How does the architect set priorities and make decisions? Who in the firm will work directly with the client? How will engineering or other design services be provided? How does the firm control quality? And what is the firm's construction-cost experience?

Be frank. Tell the architect what you know about the process and what kind of performance you expect. Ask for an explanation of anything you don't understand. The more you place on the table at the beginning, the better the chances for a successful project.

And get it in writing. Once you've found the architect, you are ready to put in writing the terms of your agreement on the scope of work, services, schedule, construction budget, and architects' compensation. This agreement can take many forms. The American Institute of Architects has developed a variety of standard contract forms which are used industry-wide. The Virginia Society AIA maintains a complete inventory of the standard contract documents. For a list of them, call us at 804-644-304.

Getting Results

The best building projects are created when client and architect work as a team. Both you and your architect can take specific steps to help meet your quality, time, and budget goals.

Design and building are group activities. Many people and firms come together to do a project: they may not have worked together before and they may not work together again. They collaborate to produce a unique building on a specific site. As the project unfolds, hundreds of individual design decisions and commitments are

Architects Bite!

People have many ideas about architects. Some are informed opinions, many are not. Here are some of the more common preconceptions.

All I need are four walls and a roof. I don't really need an architect.

Not true. Architects help make decisions. After talking with an architect, many people are surprised at their own definite ideas about what they want in a house. Architects help you think about how a building functions. They can design a house that is flexible enough to grow with a young couple who work now but expect children later. They can design an inexpensive, energy-efficient, fully accessible home for retired people on a fixed income. Or they can show how a house built for one family can be remodeled for a group of singles.

A builder or contractor will do just as good a job.

Not true. The architect is the single professional who has the training and experience to guide you through the entire building process. An architect is bound professionally to serve as the owner's agent. As the head of a team of specialists (engineers, landscape architects, contractors, etc.), an architect's first obligation is to look out for your interests. Architects' drawings and construction documents, which tell the contractor precisely what to build, set down your exact requirements. They can help you get construction bids based on those requirements. And architects follow the contractor's work to make sure there are no surprises — you know what you'll get.

An architect is a luxury I can't afford.

Not true. Architects' fees are not just added on top of your project costs. They can save you money in many ways. Architects can oversee your budget and negotiate to get the best materials and workmanship at a good price. Much more importantly, an architect's design can greatly reduce your energy and maintenance costs, which add up to many times the purchase price of a home over the years. They can turn a difficult lot into a successful building site. They can spend time planning and developing your ideas fully to avoid costly refinements after construction begins. They can make sure bids for construction are based on exactly what you wanted and expected so you really do get the best price.

The letters "AIA" after an architect's name mean he or she is a leader in the profession.

Absolutely true. Through interaction at the national, state, and local levels, architects who belong to The American Institute of Architects are in touch with the latest innovations to help you realize your dreams. Requirements for being a member of the AIA include fulfilling a rigorous continuing education requirement and adhering to a professional code of ethics. If you want an architect who is serious about his or her profession and providing you with the best your money can buy, just look for the "AIA."

made. Needs and conditions change and work is modified. A strong and healthy relationship between owner and architect is essential to keep the project on track.

Design and construction projects typically involve several steps or phases. These may include programming, schematic design, construction documents, bidding, or negotiation with contractors. However, on some projects several of these steps may be combined. On others, there may be additional phases involved.

The architect's involvement normally does not stop with the preparation of construction documents. Architects also provide construction administration services. These services may include assisting you in hiring the contractor, making site visits, reviewing and approving the contractor's applications for payment, and keeping you informed of the project's progress. The secret to success is effective project management by both owner and architect. The importance of the owner's involvement cannot be overemphasized.

All told, the path to successful results is paved with many challenges and uncertainty. There are literally hundreds of decisions to be made, decisions which have a strong impact on how the project looks and functions over time. Experience tells us that successful projects – those that respond to owner needs and aspirations, that are accomplished within schedule and budget, and that contribute to the quality of our communities and our lives – result from good clients and good architects who form good professional business, and often personal relationships. These relationships are formed early and are nourished by clear communication, mutually understood expectations, and the willingness of both you and your architect to accept your responsibilities for realizing a successful project.

This brief overview of selecting and working with an architect was adapted from two lengthier publications published by The American Institute of Architects, "A Beginner's Guide to Architectural Services" and "You and Your Architect." Copies of these publications may be ordered by calling the Virginia Society AIA at 804-644-3041 or by writing to VSAL Documents, 15 South Fifth Street, Richmond, VA 23219.

U.S. Marine Corps Multipurpose Building

Kerns Group Architects

This building consolidates several varied functions into a student union type of facility at Henderson Hall, a 23-acre military base in Arlington. The design enhances the image of the base and integrates the new multipurpose building with its diverse surroundings by dividing the program into small-scale buildings organized around two courtyards. The 84,000-square-foot building includes a theater, chapel, police department, post office, classrooms, and other offices. Rather than orient the building inward, as is common to many military installations, this design is oriented toward surrounding views. "The project delivers a humane relationship between government and citizenry," said Weinzapfel. "The urban design gestures are both deft and strong. It rises to an acropolis," added Forbes.

"The urban design gestures

A range of functional needs allowed for subdividing the project into moderately-scaled parts, such as offices for the Navy Mutual Aid Association (above). Steps leading from a central courtyard make the pedestrian connection (right) to the nearby Navy Annex.

Tree House Addition

Bond Comet Westmoreland + Hiner

The project began with the client's desire to expand the master bedroom of an existing house to include a sitting area, dressing room, closet, bath, and home office. The logical direction to build was out – above a slope that drops sharply below the existing first floor. Masonry piers anchor the wood-framed tower to the site and its glass walls are framed in wood that, in turn, is sheathed in copper. “This is a gem in terms of its massing, detailing and use of materials. And the whole building is very thoroughly resolved,” said Forbes. “It’s a masterful design – all the elements are beautifully conceived and detailed,” said Schwartz.

Welch Residence

Robert M. Gurney, AIA

A steep site, strict environmental regulations, and unusual community design restrictions greatly affected the final design of this 3,000-square-foot house. Nestled in the woods with views toward a ravine, the house is designed with a series of gabled volumes that steadily increase in size. Oversized windows change the scale of the building while bringing views of the wooded surroundings inside. "The design obviously deals with the rules of the design covenants, but it deals with them very creatively. The white of the window frames and the carving out of interior space are particularly nice," said Forbes.

Boyce Elementary School addition

VMDO Architects

While more than doubling the size of this existing school building, the architects retained the comfortable scale of the 1942 original.

Sympathetic materials and roof forms were used in transforming the school from a single-building unit to a unified compound organized around a prominent bell tower. Threading through the interior is a corridor system which is modulated with offsets, changing ceiling heights, and varying lighting effects to create distinct zones. "I like the use of the large gymnasium to form the entry sequence. A lot of program had to be accommodated in this design," said Schwartz.

Stiles Residence Pool Complex

Carlton Abbott and Partners

An addition to a residence completed in 1970, this project features new improvements placed in a way that expands the vistas from the existing house. A new swimming pool, bath house, and hot tub are arranged to define landscaped areas. New decks, edge walls, walkways, and plants were used to create visual relationships with the existing house. "The design is jazzy, spirited, and very sensitively sited," said Weinzapfel. Forbes noted that the design raises the status of the swimming pool. "Here it is no longer an adjunct to a house, but a celebration of water, a celebration of the landscape – an extremely powerful design."

*Centerbrook Architects and Planners

This 120,000-square-foot museum in Norfolk houses exhibits that describe maritime science and industry. The client asked that the building be designed as a water-front landmark to attract visitors and herald the region's preeminence in marine technology. Thus the building shape recalls the scale and form of marine vessels, without parroting any one in particular. The carefully orchestrated flow of visitors begins with entry along 70-foot-long gangplanks that lead into the Wonder Hall, where a sloped people-mover lifts them to the upper floor. "The building is bold, lively, and appropriate to its use," said Weinzapfel.

Architects sought to create a form and mass that is reminiscent of seagoing vessels, without literally copying them (above). A sloped people mover (left) penetrates the Wonder Hall.

The New College

Tod Williams Billie Tsien & Associates with VMDO Architects

This project at the University of Virginia was the creation of a new residential college. Students and faculty live in close conjunction and living, dining, learning, and social functions occur within the same physical realm. Fingerlike dormitory blocks step down a hillside toward the dining hall, which abuts a new plaza. While relying on traditional materials, the architecture makes little reference to Jefferson's buildings on The Lawn, seeking instead a new expression of college residential living. "It is so breathtaking in the skillfulness of its siting and massing," said Forbes. "The project is both sculpture and building combined – you cannot separate the two."

"It is breathtaking in the skillfulness of its siting and massing."

The "2/3 House"

Donald R. Sunshine, AIA

For this commission to convert a 140-year-old Patrick County cabin into a weekend getaway, the architect first plunged into books and gathered oral history to find out more about the original house. The research led to his learning of the "2/3 House," a regional prototype designed with a center hall and flanking rooms, but often only partially built due to cost. His solution was to upgrade the cabin by completing the remaining third – while preserving original elements such as the worn staircase and repairing other aspects, including the stone chimney. "We all loved the didactic nature of the solution. It makes the design beautiful," said Schwartz. "There is clearly a definite love of materials exhibited here," added Weinzapfel.

Washington - Richmond Rail Corridor Study

Community Design Group

This study is part of a state effort to improve passenger rail service between Richmond and Washington, D.C., one of six priority high-speed rail routes in the nation. The study seeks to encourage growth by increasing mobility and promoting efficient urban design patterns. Recommended are locations for 14 stations and the types of development that would best occur around them. Four representative communities are examined in detail. "This is a very large and responsibly developed study. By establishing an overlapping matrix to set development directions along the corridor, it recognizes the different nature of the various towns," said Forbes.

One of the sites studied in detail was Lorton, which a hypothetical town design was proposed (left). The study also shows how a variety of development patterns can produce livable, high-density communities (series below).

North Wing Restoration, Ash Lawn-Highland

Browne Eichman Dalglish Gilpin & Paxton

This reconstruction entailed extensive design of architectural components to resemble details which were present during the lifetime of President James Monroe, original owner of the house 175 years ago. The architect's charge was to research the structure's original condition, analyze unaltered portions of the building, work closely with archaeologists, and use specialized methods to reconstruct the north wing to its 1816 appearance. A mid-19th century porch enclosure and late-19th century siding were removed and new siding was installed. A stone ground gutter also was reconstructed around the perimeter. "This is an elegant job," said Forbes, "and the exterior room made with the landscaping is very well resolved."

Siding, windows, and trim dating from the late 1800s were removed and replaced with new trim and siding that matched original molding profiles (above). Site plan shows the formal garden that relates to the north wing (left).

Kilper Residence

Dennis J. Kilper, ALA

Located on a steep south-facing slope, this house contains two levels of living space above a lower-level artist's studio. The tilting west wall of the house minimizes the heating effects of afternoon sun and accepts shade from trees on higher ground. A roof terrace provides for informal living and draws cooling breezes through the house. Schwartz complimented the straightforward floor plan while praising the house's free expression. "This house is trying many things and most of them are well controlled. There is a good order of structure and a nice serenity in the interior spaces," said Forbes. Added Weinzapfel: "The exterior is very brash and arresting, with a boisterous skin."

Hurricane Protection System

Carlton Abbott and Partners

Innovative conceptual solutions were the goal of these proposals for a hurricane and flood protection system along the Virginia Beach oceanfront. The primary problem of the study area is its vulnerability to direct wave action, which jeopardizes existing dunes and bulkheads and threatens adjacent developments. If built, the new protection system would replace the existing seawall and boardwalk. An engineered storm protection barrier integrates necessary urban amenities for pedestrians and cyclists who use the boardwalk. "It is good to see that there are appropriately different responses to the rural and urban conditions along the total length of the study area," said Weinzapfel.

27

Less developed sections of the beach include boardwalks that preserve sand dunes (top). In more urbanized areas, engineered structures offer protection while giving beach access (left). Aerial view shows the kind of erosion that occurs without intervention (above).

William C. Noland Medal

Eason Cross, Jr., FAIA

Eschewing the latest fads and highbrow designs often favored by his contemporaries, architect Eason Cross has sought out only the most creative design solutions that concentrate on function. His steadfast commitment to both economy and utility without aesthetic sacrifice, his professional leadership, and his writings to promote good architecture and design earned him in 1994 the William C. Noland Medal, the highest honor given to an architect by the Virginia Society AIA.

30

Shaped by his training under Walter Gropius at Harvard and by his apprenticeship under Washington, D.C., architect Charles Goodman, Cross went on to create his own architectural sensibility, plying his craft without pretention and with great respect for the art of building. At work on the boards since the early 1950s, Cross has concentrated on the practical forces of contemporary design. He witnessed the changes in housing that the post-World War II era brought, then went about redefining mass-produced housing into more efficient and more tranquil living space.

At Harvard's Graduate School of Design in the heyday of Gropius, Cross was influenced by the best of the Modern movement. In addition to learning from Gropius, he was trained by Hugh Stubbins, John Harkness, and Leonard Currie, who would later take over the architecture program at Virginia Tech. At Harvard, Cross shared top honors for a weekend sketch problem presented jointly to the students of Harvard and other nearby architecture schools. Years later, while serving as chairman of the Virginia Society AIA Design Committee, Cross recalled the pride and encouragement he felt from that collegiate prize and helped to institute a similar competition for students at the University of Virginia, Virginia Tech, and Hampton University. It was, and is, a mechanism for confidence building, says Cross. "It is also one of the few opportunities while in school to show one's ability to organize and perform under a deadline."

So committed is Cross to recognition of student and professional alike that, during his tenure with the Design Committee, he also helped launch the Test of Time Award. This program reexamines noteworthy building 25 years after completion, analyzing it in terms of its context, continued use, and physical condition.

After college graduation, Cross worked in Cambridge for a short while, then moved to Washington, D.C. He spent a year drafting for Deigert and Yerkes, but his professional career began in earnest in 1952 when he joined the offices of Charles M. Goodman Associates. At the time, Goodman was considered the Capital area's foremost Modern architect and was likewise being hailed as a national leader in the design of prefabricated housing. "I found a niche as Goodman's backroom designer. I would get first crack at a client program, produce a solution which Goodman then improved upon or changed the rules on or used as a comparative measure. It was a great apprenticeship," says Cross, who executed Goodman's renderings until 1959. In addition to institutional and educational buildings, he worked on housing for builders, custom homes, and prefabricated houses, taking charge of a massive manufactured housing project for National Homes.

Today his favorite memories of the years with Goodman center on the Hollin Hills development in Alexandria, a unique subdivision of contemporary homes begun in the 1950s. Cross moved his family into one of the 1,200-square-foot Hollin Hills houses in 1956. And while he did not design the builder house he bought, he added an addition in 1962 that improved circulation, expanded sight lines, and visually belied its small volume. His own home is an outstanding example of his ability to create space that has an easy rhythm and that lives larger than it is.

To this day, Cross's hand continues to shape the development, says Virginia Tech professor of architecture Gregory Hunt, another Hollin Hills resident. "His many residential additions in Hollin Hills over the years display an obvious respect for the early Goodman designs. Yet they creatively engage the programmatic requirements of contemporary living and result in thoughtfully designed, sensitively proportioned projects," Hunt says.

By 1959 Cross was anxious to learn more about how buildings were put together. He ventured from under the wing of his mentor to the offices of Keyes, Lethbridge, and Condon, preparing working drawings for institutional and commercial projects. Two years later Cross was ready to open his own practice. He asked Harry B. Adreon to join him, and Cross and Adreon Architects was launched.

For 25 years the partners made their mark, first on Washington. Then more of their commissions came from Virginia. They moved into an Arlington office and watched their practice vary in volume and building type. "We gained most of our early success from the builder housing we did in Washington, Potomac, and Bethesda." Among the awards these projects earned were the AIA House and Home award in 1966 and 1967.

Throughout their association, Cross and Adreon repeatedly were recognized for their achievements. A joint venture with Stephenson Flemer for a Westmoreland County athletic center brought them an AIA national Honor Award in 1968. The Virginia Society AIA honored the firm in 1980 with an energy award and then in 1984 with a design award. Ready for a change, Cross withdrew from the partnership in 1986 to work out of an office in his house. At about the same time, he was completing the design of Pohick Regional Library, which would garner great attention from both the public and the press for its successful passive solar design.

Today Cross Associates operates as a one-man firm, but without the limitations that often implies. Cross and five other architects – Jack Kelso, Robert Easter, Robert Larson, Janet Reiss, and Nathaniel Neblett – formed the cooperative firm Virginia Architects Accord in 1990. As a group, they share work and compose an entity that allows them to compete for larger-scale projects, yet each maintains an identity as an independent practitioner.

Two years ago, Cross won first place in a competition sponsored by the Virginia Society AIA and the Virginia chapter of Architects, Designers and Planners for Social Responsibility to design a compact and low-cost house. Plans are to build the house in Richmond for Habitat for Humanity. Materials for the single-family house are projected to cost less than $35,000, thanks in large part to the influence of his associate Janet Reiss, who introduced Cross to a foam panel system. Cross smilingly refers to the design as the "Easonian House," and says his own living experience has taught him how to get the most out of a 1,100-square-foot house, the required size.

Author as well as architect, Cross regularly wrote the "Architectonica" column for the now-defunct Virginia Record. Another of his projects has been to enlighten the public about the unique aspects of Hollin Hills. "Eason's nearly indefatigable efforts over the years to promote good architecture and design have involved him in a number of activities, from writing to his professional service within the AIA," says Hunt. "Emphasizing the principal design and planning features of Hollin Hills, his writings have alerted a large number of residents to its significant architectural legacy. His pen has educated, cajoled, criticized and celebrated."

Recently Cross and his son built a weekend retreat on the Rappahannock River in King George County. A tower and bow-shaped deck that overhangs the water refer to a maritime theme, as does the narrow configuration which makes the most of the river views. The architect spends most of his free time there, but he spends more time in his office searching for creative solutions to design challenges.

Cross takes pride in his record, noting he has strived to produce handsome, functional buildings with no allegiance to fashion. "My design approach is currently out of favor with the architectural cognoscenti, but I expect that to change. It always does."

Cement, admixtures, and aggregate used in the manufacture of units shall conform to applicable ASTM specifications and shall be suitable for use in cured concrete masonry. ■

ALLAN BLOCK RETAINING WALL SYSTEM

Complete specifications for scope, materials, and installation of Allan Block™ retaining walls are outlined comprehensively in The Allan Block™ Design Manual available from E. Dillon & Company upon request. ■

MANUFACTURER'S RECOMMENDATIONS

FIELD PANEL - It is recommended that a field panel (mock-up) be erected on the job site for architectural approval of color, joint treatment, and workmanship. This panel should be maintained throughout construction of the project for use as a standard for the above. The panel should be cleaned in the same manner as planned for final clean down.

CLEANING - Use Sure Klean 600 or equivalent detergent cleaner. Small trial cleanings are recommended to determine appropriate concentration and method. Emphasis is placed on consistency of method for all wall sections.

FIELD COATING (FOR GROUND FACE UNITS ONLY) - Though not required, it is recommended that a final job site application of acrylic be applied to the finished wall (after thorough clean down) to provide coating over mortar joints and to re-coat scratches and/or chips that may have occurred during installation. This application will further enhance the lustre of the finished wall and provide a most satisfactory appearance.

EXECUTION - When laying E. Dillon's Premier Line™ architectural units, the most careful masonry practices must be adhered to. All Premier Line™ units are integrally colored for maintenance free wall systems. Walls should be kept covered and clean in progress. Wall sections and units stored on pallets should be protected from workers in other trades, splashing mud and other job site contaminants. Care should be taken in the handling of the units to minimize chipping.

CONTACT E. DILLON & COMPANY FOR MORE INFORMATION ON ANY PRODUCT IN THE PREMIER LINE™. FULL SIZE SAMPLES AND COLOR SELECTION KITS ARE AVAILABLE UPON REQUEST.

Architecture Medal for Virginia Service

Robert E. Simon

The Architecture Medal for Virginia Service – the Society's most prestigious public award – was created to honor an individual or organization that has made an unusually significant contribution to Virginia's manmade environment or to the public's understanding and awareness of the built environment. Robert E. Simon, known to many as "the Father of Reston, Virginia," was selected to receive the award in 1994.

When Simon sold Carnegie Hall in New York in 1960, he determined to reinvest the proceeds in suburban real estate. Having found a suitable tract in Fairfax County, he chose to develop it as a New Town. Many say Reston set a standard for community design that has yet to be surpassed in more than 30 years. Simon's intentions for the town included the provision of a wide selection of recreational and cultural amenities. He also demanded a full range of housing types and styles, so that people would not be uprooted from Reston as their personal resources grew. He stressed the importance and dignity of each individual, and saw to it that Reston became a viable place to work as well as a place to live. Beauty, he said, is a necessary component of the good life, and he saw to it that the New Town of Reston was as attractive as it was functional. Last on Simon's list was the requirement that Reston be a financial success.

The dividend of this commitment goes well beyond the borders of the community. Even today, many consider the beginning of Reston as a high-water mark in Northern Virginia's architectural history. Reston has identity, character, beauty, and a sense of place that is directly attributable to Simon's vision and effort.

Award for Preservation

James Murray Howard, AIA

Murray Howard holds the rare distinction at the University of Virginia of Curator and Architect for the Academical Village. Over the course of his career, Howard has gained notable state, national, and international recognition for his research on historic architecture. He has received academic awards from the American Institute of Architects, the National Endowment for the Arts, and Phi Kappa Phi Honorary Fraternity, as well as the Rexford Newcomb Prize in Architectural History. But Howard is most widely known for his writings, lectures, and research on the restoration of the Jefferson Pavilions at the University of Virginia. Under his leadership – and through the work of the Jeffersonian Restoration Advisory Board – the university has met the challenge of managing this museum-quality historic district as a dynamic architectural ensemble. In no small part because of Murray Howard's leadership, U.Va. is a model for historic preservation theory and practice – yielding exemplary research of the historic fabric, innovative restoration of the unique roofs and interiors, as well as imaginative solutions for access of the disabled.

This honor is presented as a means of signaling distinguished achievement by an architect in any one of the following categories: design, practice, education, service to the public, and service to the profession. In 1994, three members of the Virginia Society AIA received the Award.

Distinguished Achievement Award

Carlton S. Abbott, FAIA

As principal of Carlton Abbott and Partners in Williamsburg, Carlton Abbott has demonstrated a longstanding commitment to design excellence – evidenced in part by the firm's tally of 41 AIA Design Awards since 1968 at the state and local levels. In 30 years with the firm, his talents have been directed toward architecture, urban planning, landscape architecture, sculpture, and graphic arts. He lectures at universities and museums in Virginia, twice serving as Visiting Professor at the University of Virginia. His past service to the Society includes chairmanships of the Design Committee, Publications Committee, and Handbook Committee. In 1992 he headed a task force created to redesign the Noland Medal. He also was among the core group of members who organized the first Virginia Design Forum in 1994.

Delmar L. Dayton, Jr., AIA

Delmar Dayton is a principal with Architects Dayton Thompson & Associates in Richmond. Throughout his career, Dayton has served his chapter, the Virginia Society, and his profession with enthusiasm and distinction. As a committeeman, director, and chapter president, Dayton showed the professional dedication that led him to the rare distinction of serving two successive terms as Society president in 1991 and 1992. He also has chaired the Society's Government Affairs Committee. In addition, Dayton has been active in the Construction Specifications Institute, serving as president of the Virginia Chapter, and continues in his roles as Chairman of the Curriculum Advisory Committee for J. Sargent Reynolds Community College, a trustee of the Richmond Carillon, and a member of the Richmond Board of Fire Code Appeals.

Robert A. Steele, AIA

Bob Steele is principal of Steele + Associates Architects in Richmond. He has worked for the profession through the James River Chapter and the Virginia Society at committee levels, serving on the Chapter board for two years. His service to the Society includes active participation on the Design and Communications committees. Notable among Steele's achievements is his leadership of Building Better Communities, an ad hoc group which sponsored a 1993 competition for community development projects in low-income Richmond neighborhoods. The competition brought attention to areas in dire need of architects' participation. In 1994, he initiated the first Art by Architects Auction at Building Virginia to benefit the Virginia Foundation for Architecture.

Richard Guy Wilson

One of America's most distinguished architectural historians, Richard Guy Wilson has been a professor since 1976 at the University of Virginia. He is widely known for organizing exhibitions on decorative arts, design, and architecture throughout the United States; both "The American Renaissance" and "The Machine Age in America" were widely heralded. In 1992, he was co-curator of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts exhibit entitled "The Making of Virginia Architecture" and contributed to its catalog. In 1993, he organized "Thomas Jefferson's Academical Village: The Creation of an Architectural Masterpiece," which is traveling nationally.

Satyendra Singh Huja

As the City of Charlottesville's director of planning and community development for some 20 years, Satyendra Huja has been the dynamic force in revitalizing the central city, in promoting effective land development control and incentives, in creating a framework for effective historic preservation, and in developing an urban design plan. His dedication to high principles, community welfare, and participatory planning are impressive to all who work with him. Today he continues to spearhead community efforts to create a quality of life that is exemplary in the Commonwealth of Virginia.

Maxwell MacKenzie

An architectural photographer based in Washington, D.C., Maxwell MacKenzie has dedicated his career to work that promotes architectural excellence. His photos have appeared on the covers of numerous magazines, including Architecture, Architectural Record, Interiors, and Historic Preservation. His stunning photographs of weathered barns in Otter Tail County, Minnesota, were exhibited in 1994 at the Barret House in Richmond after premiering at the AIA headquarters. While he often documents subjects in the greater Washington/Baltimore area, MacKenzie has photographed buildings spanning across Virginia.

How to Use This

Directory

FIRST

If you are trying to locate architects in a particular area, but don't know the firm by name, look in the index on page 93. That's organized by city and town.

SECOND

If you know the name of the firm you are trying to locate, simply turn through the following pages and find the name in the alphabetical listing.

THIRD

Here's what you will find under the firm listing.

1 Name, address, and phone number.

2 Principals and Firm Personnel
If you want to talk about a possible commission, ask for the person listed as "client contact." If you want to talk to the firm about using a new product or service, ask for the person listed as "vendor contact." In smaller firms, these contacts will be the same person.

3 Principal areas of practice
While architects pride themselves on being generalists, many firms develop particular strengths over the years. This listing includes the four most important areas of a firm's practice, though other project types aren't necessarily excluded from the range of work a firm is qualified to do.

4 Firm specialties
Here is where many firms take the opportunity to elaborate on the type of work they do or to make qualitative statements about how they go about practicing their profession. This statement may help you understand the intangible qualities of the firm a little better.

5 Recent projects
We have limited each firm to naming no more than five of the recent completed buildings. Take note: Many of the buildings may have been recognized for design excellence or other attributes. If you are considering hiring this firm, go take a look at some of the buildings first and ask the building owners about their level of satisfaction with the results.

LAST

A few words about this directory. Contained here are the architecture firms which have a member of the Virginia Society AIA as a principal. There may be other principals and employees at the firm whose names are not listed. The information published here is provided by the firms and we assume it to be accurate, though we do not assume liability for its accuracy.

Our goal is to create places, with the client, of character, richness, and spirit, designed from within the expression of the client's individuality and independence — different not to be different, but because the client is unique and special. Making places that are physically and aesthetically in harmony with our environment, natural and organic, marks a definite departure from the cliché and shallowness of style and fashion.

SoftPlan & SoftPlan Lite... Design Software You Can Build On

We say that you can quickly create floor plans, 3D renderings, roof designs, framing diagrams, elevations, cross sections, decks, detailed kitchen & bath layouts, material lists, cost estimations - with an ease and efficiency that just doesn't exist in other CAD systems. The nice part is over 5,000 builders, remodelers, designers and architects who use SoftPlan to create residential drawings agree with us. Even the NAHB has given their seal of approval.

And now we're introducing SoftPlan Lite - a pre-configured architectural design software that is economically priced. You even have the option to upgrade from Lite to the full-feature SoftPlan. So whether you choose SoftPlan or SoftPlan Lite, we have the CAD tool to help your business.

Ralph Wilson Plastics Company just got a whole new look....

On June 14, 1995, Ralph Wilson Plastics Company became Wilsonart International. Our new name and company logo are the symbols of growth and accomplishment, made possible by our customers.

Over the next few months, you will see that other things are different as well. Like the shape of our sample chip, the look of our sampling devices and brochures, and most importantly, the size and scope of our product offering.

Today, we're the leading producer of decorative laminate in the world. We manufacture and distribute a full range of interior surfacing options including Wilsonart® Laminate, Wilsonart® Gibraltar® Solid Surfacing and Wilsonart® Custom Edges.

But in the midst of our transformation, Wilsonart International, The Smart Source, will also stay very much the same. So the broad range of surfacing choices, performance options, and customer-first attitude you've relied on for years will be exactly what you expect. The best.

The steps we take will not only help you move your business forward, but will shape the future of surfacing. Which as you can plainly see, is Wilsonart International.
