IF YOU DON'T SPECIFY GEOTHERMAL, YOU NEVER KNOW WHAT SOME PEOPLE MIGHT TRY.

It's amazing what some people will do to create a comfortable environment. By choosing a geothermal heat pump for your specs, they won't have to worry about it. The high efficiencies and low maintenance costs of this heat pump system will ensure you are specifying one of the most cost-efficient heating and cooling systems on the market today. And if your specifications for state government institutions include a geothermal system, you won't have to worry whether it will be approved. That's because, for the first time, geothermal heat pumps are now included in the State of Virginia Capital Outlay Manual, produced by the Bureau of Capital Outlay Management (BCOM). Not to mention they have also received strong endorsements from the DOE and the EPA. By specifying a geothermal heat pump system in new or retrofit construction, you will provide your clients with the most efficient and comfortable heating and cooling technology available today. For more information, please call us at (804) 775-5101.

SHELTERING AMERICA FOR OVER TWO CENTURIES.

When housing was needed for Hampden-Sydney College, a fine school with a tradition that dates back to 1776, Buckingham-Virginia Slate was selected as a natural roofing material. This is the same non-fading, blue-black, grade A slate that was used on original buildings still integral to campus life.

With a proud heritage of its own, Buckingham-Virginia Slate was often specified by Thomas Jefferson; and is still selected by eminent architects of our time for its permanence and natural beauty. Because it blends with either contemporary or traditional architecture, and helps to blend both, it's a natural, superlative choice for residential work, churches, schools, commercial and municipal jobs.

If you want to create shelter that will be around for generations to come, above all, use a permanent roof of world-class Buckingham-Virginia Slate.

What is an # Architect?

By Robert Vickery, FALA

In considering who the architect is, and what an architect does, a good starting point is to define the term “architecture” itself. One straightforward definition states that architecture is a creative shaping or altering of the physical environment into places that are both useful and pleasurable.

This means that a city park square, bounded by streets and ordered and landscaped with carefully placed statuary, trees, and benches can be architecture. So, too, can a university campus with a clear arrangement of buildings and integrated landscape; so, too, a library with pleasant reading rooms, research areas, study carrels, and books properly stored. And so, too, can a small but elegantly designed and detailed home. In other words, architecture exists when places are formed that we can use and enjoy – and perhaps remember as being beautiful.

Many people can practice architecture in this larger sense. Landscape architects, civil engineers, city planners, lawyers who formulate building codes – even homeowners who lay out and plant their gardens are participating in architectural acts that may shape space into pleasurable form.

We are thus all involved in designing and protecting the physical environment. And the architectural chaos we refer to as strip development – a way of designing and building that chokes traffic, is inconvenient, does not work functionally, and is ugly as well – is a problem for all of us.

So if everyone can “practice” architecture, what then distinguishes the architect? How is the architect different? In its strict legal sense, “architect” is a term that may be used only by state-licensed professionals. To become an architect is a long and arduous task, normally involving six to seven years of university study and three to five years of working under the direction of a licensed architect. This period of education and apprenticeship culminates in more than 40 hours of testing to determine whether an applicant’s knowledge of the structure of buildings; history and theory; mechanical, electrical and plumbing essentials; site planning; and architectural design is sufficient to protect the public’s health, safety, and welfare. It is an exam that many fail. The “architect” is thus a highly trained member of a small profession. The competent architect can be described as a practicing professional trained to solve creatively complex spatial problems.

Many misconceptions abound about how the architect goes about this design task. One such misconception is the belief that the architect creates dramatic new “styles” or “fashions” through his or her designs. However, what is fashionable in our culture is usually determined by critics (including those who “know what I like”), magazines, trend setters, and the fashion industry. The working architect is usually too busy trying to define and then resolve the spatial problem to worry about fashion.

Kolbe & Kolbe Millwork Co., Inc.

Another misconception is the notion that architects are so busy conceptualizing that they cannot come down from the clouds to talk to contractors and craftsmen who actually construct the building. A competent architect must be able through drawings, specifications, and one-on-one conversations to communicate with client, building code inspector, contractor, and workman alike. Architecture does not become architecture until it is built and in use.

Probably the most common misconception, however, is that "building" and "architecture" are one and the same, and that architects are therefore not needed. "Just give me a good builder, and I'll design my own house," is a good example of this thought. However, while building and architecture both involve construction and the shaping of space into form, they differ in a critical way.

Architecture goes beyond building – although building well is certainly a constituent part of architecture. Architecture must also be appropriate for its context, must solve a particular spatial need with clarity, and must encourage pleasurable use. Consider this common client request: "Provide us with a school that is a state-of-the-art teaching facility, but which also is a place that gives us pride in our community, that encourages learning, that inculcates civic values." A building can provide shelter for such a place. Architecture, when successful, must accomplish much more.

Finally, the architect must consider aesthetics. Good architects, artists, sculptors, plastic surgeons – even bridge engineers – for that matter – should never begin their task by saying, "I am going to create something beautiful." The problems at hand must first be identified and creatively tackled. Take the design for a church as an example: Is the building to be a warehouse for people? A place for religious ritual? A place for individual worship? Or a place where God resides? Or all of these on different occasions? These are questions of the first order. But aesthetics are never far behind.

We sometimes say that beauty can be found in "how the whole thing is put together." This suggests that when the architectural task is completed we may discover a hidden pleasure and meaning in the quality of light as it filters through windows, or a "feeling of emotion" in how the rooms are formed to lead from one into the other, or a satisfaction in finding that the site has been developed so that the car may be properly parked, the entrance walk defined, and the front door expertly crafted.

And sometimes – although it is rare – with a farsighted client, a conscientious contractor, and a time frame sympathetic to expressing what is best in our culture, the dedicated architect can design architecture that is a contribution to the well-being of our society. And, yes, that is also beautiful.

Robert Vickery, FALA is a practicing architect and a professor at the University of Virginia. He is currently finishing a book that explains how Thomas Jefferson's ideas of learning and civitas are reflected in his original design for the Academical Village.

WE DON'T JUST GROW SOD. WE NURTURE IT.

At Virginia Turf Farms, we take great pride in our parenting skills. We grow our sod only from genetically pure certified seed not available on the consumer market.

We feed our sod at the right time. If nitrogen is applied too late, it greens up the plant but weakens the root system. Our sod isn't just green. It's healthy.

We don't nurture weeds. We apply preemergence herbicides early in the growing season before weeds such as dandelions have the chance to establish.

Our offspring include grasses that thrive in full sun or partial shade, heat or cold. On lawns as well as football fields, golf courses and soccer fields. And when our sod goes out into the world, it does a world of good. Strong, deep roots prevent soil erosion, filter chemical runoff and purify the earth's water table. Dense, healthy blades manufacture oxygen and absorb harmful pollutants.

Call us and see why sod nurtured by Virginia Turf Farms is a welcome addition to any family.

Finally . . . Consistent Fly Ash!

Everyone knows that fly ash can make concrete better. The challenge has been acquiring an ash that is available and consistent. Fluctuating carbon contents can make big problems for the ready mixed concrete producer. Low carbon content one day, and high contents the next can mean lower placement rates on the project due to air checks and re-dosing, or even strength problems of concrete in places where air content adjustments weren't made successfully.

Six buildings by Virginia architects were honored in 1996 with Awards for Excellence in Architecture in the annual design awards program sponsored by the Virginia Society ALA. The field of winning projects represented a wide range of project types, including a private residence, an elementary school, the rehabilitation of a public housing project, and new visual guidelines for development along the Blue Ridge Parkway. Seventy submissions from architects across the state were reviewed by a panel of leading architects. Awards were presented at the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in Richmond.

A House in the Foothills

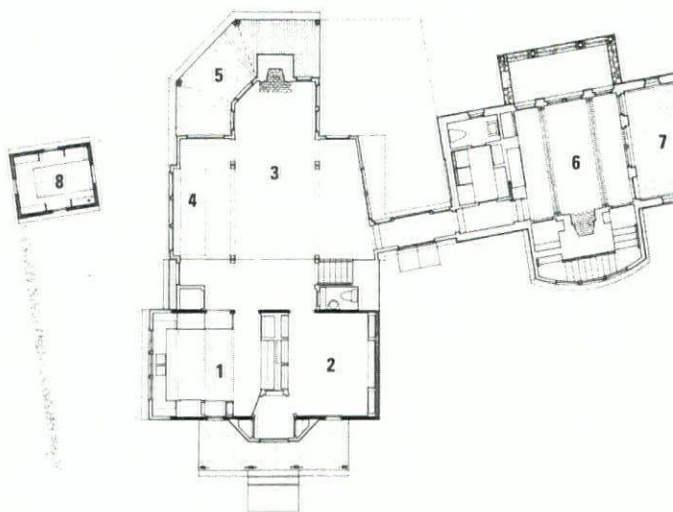

"THERE'S A
PRECISION
UNDERSTANDING
THINGS."

Architects:
Train & Spencer Architects, Charlottesville

A late 19th century Albemarle County farmhouse, unremarkable in its architecture and in poor condition, was renovated with the addition of a master bedroom, sitting room, storage/laundry space, and a screened porch. Yet the modernization of the house was accomplished without diminishing its delicate scale and dominant position astride a low ridge.

Two additions, one clapboard and the other stone, reflect the context of the site and the original structures. The new functional areas that were to be added to the house, including the master suite, effectively doubled the volume of the original house, which remains the primary focus of the property. The architects preserved the intimate scale of the original house by locating the new program areas in an independent structure, rather than treating them as an outgrowth of the old farm house. To maintain the visual prominence of the original structure, the architects located the addition well back from the front lawn, its dark stone walls blending into the shadows of mature trees.

"The addition is treated almost like an outbuilding by being in a different material," the jury said. "There's a precision and an understanding of small-scale things here. And an understanding of literalness. And then there's a tendency to try to break out of the literalness."

The Sowell House

Rebuilding a Craftsman's Abode

Architects:
Dalglish Eichman Gilpin & Paxton,
Charlottesville

Built c.1822 by Pleasant Sowell, who was one of Albemarle County's foremost furniture makers, this house underwent a series of changes as it passed down to his great-grandchildren. Abandoned in the 1920s and ravaged by weathering and vandalism, the house was relocated to a new site at Michie Tavern for use as an interpretive house museum depicting rural mid-19th century life.

The architects documented the structure on its original site in sketches and photographs, then supervised its removal by stone masons and other craftsmen who dismantled the house piece-by-piece, identifying each part by number. After grading the new site to resemble the original setting for the house, they rebuilt the structure to show visitors its evolutionary changes between the years 1822 and 1870. Areas of horsehair plaster and lath were left exposed to view as a way of interpreting construction techniques of the period. The contractor, in addition, was able to locate second growth heart poplar for the replacement siding. Investigative analysis allowed for the restoration of original paint colors and the rebuilding of an original front porch and stair, which had long since disappeared.

The jury was impressed by how the construction of the house is explained to visitors by revealing details normally hidden behind solid walls. "As a learning device, it's something you ordinarily wouldn't see in a preservation project," said one juror. Added another: "There's a lot of sensitivity to the interpretation, the kind of didactic quality which you don't normally see in historic preservation. This is really a wonderfully interpretive object. And it's not prissied up."

Pamplin Park

A Civil War Interpretive Center

"IT IS SO CLEARLY LESS A BUILDING AND MORE ABOUT LANDSCAPE. IT SHOWS A KIND OF SENSITIVITY TO THE PROBLEM AND THE PLACE."

Architects:
John G. Lewis, AIA, Associated Architects,
Richmond

Rather than take a conventional approach to the visitors center for this historic Civil War battlefield near Petersburg, the architect found inspiration in the configuration of the site's historic breastworks to develop a solution that is a "non-building." Sculptural in form, the 7,000-square-foot interpretive center is designed to disappear over time – in essence, to camouflage itself in vegetation.

A conscious attempt was made to avoid references to historic or contemporary architectural forms, developing instead a "green form" vocabulary referencing the site's historic earthworks. Its hard-edged western wall, cast in concrete, will eventually be covered in Boston Ivy, whose red fall foliage is intended to evoke the bloodshed that occurred there during the war. The earth-covered east wall takes its cues from the historic star forts of the siege line around Petersburg.

"The interpretive center is interesting because of the landscape relationship," the jury commented. "It is so clearly less a building and more about landscape. But beyond that, the interpretive analysis of this is very thorough and really shows a kind of sensitivity to understanding the problem and the place."

Diggs Town

Rebuilding Community Pride

Architects:
CMSS Architects, Virginia Beach
with UDA Architects, Pittsburgh

Diggs Town, home to more than 1,200 residents in 428 apartments, suffered the problems of many low-income housing projects – physical deterioration, crime, and rampant drug trafficking in the open spaces between buildings. To make the Norfolk community more like a neighborhood than a warehouse for people, the architects took several steps. First they carved the large superblock plan in smaller pieces by building new streets to provide a numbered address for each unit and create parking space near each dwelling. New picket fences give definition to individual back yards, and these are grouped to create small clusters or villages within the larger neighborhood. Front porches were added as outdoor living areas, which foster individuality as each one is furnished and provide an arena for tenants to forge community bonds.

“The views of this with the people hanging out on porches, what it says about neighborhood and community, are just the greatest,” the jury observed. “You can tell before it was just a no-man’s land – very harsh. It’s so friendly now.” They also noted that the design addresses a security problem by creating clear zones of public and private space with new fences. “And the way it’s done is very simple. It’s completely unpretentious.”

“YOU CAN

Blue Ridge Parkway

Documenting the Unique

Architects:
Carlton Abbott & Partners, Williamsburg

Recognizing that the cultural landscapes of America are retreating in the face of advancing development, the National Park Service commissioned this study of the features and details that define the character of the Blue Ridge Parkway. The park service's initiative is a first step toward preserving those characteristics along the 470-mile-long parkway corridor that traverses Virginia and North Carolina. As a result of his research – which included extensive study of park service archives, numerous field visits to the parkway, interviews, and workshops all conducted over a four-year period – the architect produced 147 pen-and-ink drawings that illustrate the design themes inherent in the architecture, engineering, and landscape elements of the parkway. The intended audience includes developers and landowners who have built adjacent to the parkway or may be planning new construction near the parkway corridor; park designers and maintenance personnel; historians, educators, and students; and highway engineers building near or across the parkway.

The jury praised the beauty, quality, and comprehensiveness of the drawing portfolio. "It includes both detail and landscape, both big and small, focused and unfocused pieces – and you can understand how the park service can use that. The architect really knows what to put in a drawing and what not to. And there's so much love in these drawings."

This renovation brings new life to an old building by stripping away a dysfunctional 1950s-era addition and replacing it with a new 19,000-square-foot wing that simplifies circulation and offers new classrooms, an administrative area, a library, and a large room that can function as a cafeteria, gym, or auditorium. Because no additional land was available for the multipurpose room addition, the architects excavated the rear of the site and built the structure into the hillside.

Inside the large, open room, an 18-inch-thick concrete wall with an architectural finish was left exposed, enhanced by rooftop skylights that allow natural light to fill the space. Outside, the skylights are topped with colorful pyramids at the playground level. Overall, the exterior is a striking mix of textures, from the original Old Virginia brick to a contemporary darker brick and horizontal bands of colored glass. Natural light penetrates deep into the corridors through new glass-enclosed foyers.

The jury enthusiastically praised the architect's interpretation of the school's functional needs, agreed that a difficult site problem was successfully resolved, and admired the way that the original 1928 school and the new architecture were knitted together to meet late 20th century needs. "It's playful but it still looks serious enough and substantial," the jurors said. "It's a tremendous achievement – to put light into the public area and the classrooms of the school."

IF YOU FORGET TO SPECIFY CAST IRON,

Architecture by Meyer-Greeson.

YOU'LL HEAR ABOUT IT!

During the first dinner party in your new home, would you want conversation interrupted by the noise of waste water in your plumbing system cascading across the ceiling and dripping down the wall? Of course not.

Few construction upgrades will give as much satisfaction as Charlotte's quiet cast iron waste piping. Why? Cast iron systems provide a lifetime of quiet performance.

But what about cost and availability? In a typical residential application, installing cast iron costs only fractionally more than using alternative piping materials — a small price for lasting peace. And you can join Charlotte's cast iron No-Hub pipe and fittings with our plastic pipe and fittings for use in the vent lines to reduce cost. Charlotte's cast iron and plastic pipe and fitting systems are readily available from local plumbing suppliers.

Is installation of cast iron piping a problem? No. Cast iron No-Hub piping actually requires slightly less space in a stud wall than plastic piping. Experienced plumbers recognize that cutting and joining cast iron No-Hub pipe is a snap.

Here's the bottom line, literally a cast iron guarantee: use Charlotte cast iron pipe and fittings and we guarantee you won't have noise problems in your waste plumbing system. You are assured that your new home will be a high-quality, Quiet House.™

William C. Noland Medal

M. Stanley Krause, Jr., FAIA

AS A JUNIOR AT NEWPORT NEWS HIGH SCHOOL IN 1950, STAN KRAUSE WAS LOOKING FOR A SUMMER JOB TO HELP CONTRIBUTE TO HIS WORKING-CLASS FAMILY. HIS FRIENDS WERE ALL CONTENT TO TAKE THE USUAL JOBS AT 65 CENTS AN HOUR IN THE CITY'S GIANT SHIPYARD AND DEPARTMENT STORES. YOUNG STAN'S AMBITIONS WEREN'T HIGH, BUT HE KNEW HE DIDN'T WANT TO FOLLOW IN THE FOOTSTEPS OF FRIENDS AND RELATIVES WHO WOUND UP AT THE SHIPYARD. HE FINALLY LANDED A SUMMER JOB WORKING FOR ARCHITECT WILLIAM W. PATTERSON.

"The only catch was I was making 35 cents an hour," Kraus recalls. "The first thing I did was learn to sharpen pencils." He then learned to turn blank paper into drafting sheets with quarter-inch grids, and later moved on to lettering.

The work was enjoyable. More importantly it led to a scholarship at the University of Virginia and a career in architecture. "I'd never even thought about college or architecture as a career," Krause says. "I fell into it. That's the story of my life. I fell into things."

Over the course of a long and distinguished career, Melvin Stanley Krause, Jr.

fell into enough things to earn the William C. Noland Award presented by the Virginia Society AIA. In the nomination, Krause was cited for his work with the VSAIA (of which he served as president in 1994), the Newport News Planning Commission, the Virginia Art and Architectural Review Board, and numerous community organizations.

Krause's approach has been described as both diplomatically firm and fiercely autocratic, but those who know him say he has made a difference wherever he directed his considerable energies.

"He does not easily suffer fools, but he could be quietly persuasive," says Paul L. Miller, director of planning and development for Newport News. "He could be fierce in his determination to get things done."

After graduating from the University of Virginia, where he distinguished himself academically and played varsity lacrosse, Krause studied in France, earned a master's in city planning at MIT, served in the Army, and taught full-time at the U.V. School of Architecture. He returned to Newport News permanently in 1962, as partner in the firm of Rancorn, Wildman & Krause.

He joined the city planning commission in 1985, became chairman three years later, and served until 1993. During his tenure, the city developed an award-winning comprehensive plan, "Framework for the Future," relying on extensive broad-based citizen participation, including a task force of high school juniors and seniors.

Looking back, Krause says the students made a significant contribution. "The students were more creative. Their minds weren't cluttered with things that cluttered the minds of others."

Miller says Krause's intelligence, commitment, and dual training in architecture and city planning made him a formidable chairman. "He's been quietly as effective as anyone in this community. He measures up well, and I've been in the business forty-three years."

A year after joining the city planning commission, Krause was appointed to the state Art and Architectural Review Board. He served the maximum of two four-year terms, both as chairman. In that role, Krause says he tried to engender a spirit of "positive criticism and cooperation," while working to dispel the perception that the board was a regulatory body whose only agenda was to impede projects. Approaching architecture as "a series of design compromises," Krause says his design philosophy is guided by a preoccupation with context. "I think it's important that architecture be of the place," he says. "I don't think you should be doing buildings that are a monument to yourself. Things need to fit in."

One project that didn't fit in, according to Krause, was Virginia Commonwealth

University's plan in 1990 to expand into Richmond's Oregon Hill residential neighborhood. It was, Krause says, a case of administrators telling planners what to do. "It was a bad plan, frankly. Philosophically it wasn't the direction to go in. They were not at all considering the lives that the plan was impacting."

Samuel A. "Pete" Anderson, architect for the University of Virginia, credits Krause with changing the entire character of the board. "In my opinion, Stan brought that group into the 1990s. He made it businesslike and useful," says Anderson, who presented many projects to the review board and later served on it with Krause. Stan began to get some kind of standards that would be current in the Commonwealth and not just in the heads of individual architects. He made it into a professional organization – a quite remarkable achievement."

Anderson says Krause took meticulous minutes, clearly voiced his concerns, and wrestled with projects until he got them the way he wanted them, which in general tended toward simpler solutions and always with an eye toward making a positive contribution to architecture. "He was fairly autocratic. He made no bones about how he felt on a matter," Anderson says.

In his private practice, which totaled some 2,000 commissions over thirty-five years, Krause is most proud of projects – a number of them schools – that were innovative, fit in, or simply served the needs of the people. His former firm is best known for the Virginia Air and Space Center in Hampton, but Krause seems just as pleased with his work on Todd Stadium in Newport News, which features a raised perimeter around the field as a promenade for students to strut their stuff. "It was unique in that it recognized the culture of a high school," he says. "In high school, a big function is meant to be seen."

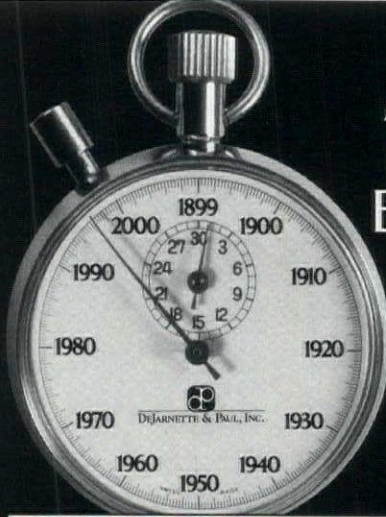

Besides raising buildings, Krause has raised four children, as well as award-winning daffodils in all their surprising variety. His wife, freelance writer Carol Miller Krause, got him involved in daffodils. "We got bit by the bug, so to speak," Krause says. "It's like boating, where you just pour money into the water. I pour it into the ground with daffodil bulbs." A testimonial to that fact: He recently gave his wife a special bulb priced at $100.

Krause retired from Rancorn Wildman Krause Brezinski in June of 1996, but by August he was doing some work for Christopher Newport University in Newport News. Before long he had fallen again – this time into a full-time position as university architect. "I started having so much fun that I decided to stay," he says. "It was a short retirement."

The fun is in overseeing a new university master plan. Several major projects are already in the works, including a $30 million performing arts center designed by I.M. Pei, his first building in Virginia, and a $20 million sports and wellness center.

Krause was slowed down temporarily in early 1997 when complications from diabetes claimed one of his legs. But it wasn't long before he was back on the job full-time with a prosthetic limb. "I'm not going to let it slow me down," he says. "There's too much to do." —Joseph Cosco

Architecture Medal for Virginia Service

Clinton Webb

The Architecture Medal for Virginia Service was established in 1984 to honor an individual or organization that has made an unusually significant contribution to Virginia's manmade environment or to public awareness of that environment. Clinton Webb, who has distinguished himself through his quiet support of the building campaigns of Virginia's preeminent cultural and historic institutions, received this distinction in 1996.

As President of the Mary Morton Parsons Foundation and the Windsor Foundation, Webb's support was instrumental in the "Building a Vision" Campaign to restore the Barret House, owned by the Virginia Foundation for Architecture and headquarters of the Virginia Society of Architects. That support is typical of his philanthropic emphasis on impact rather than scattered token support. In his work with numerous foundations, Webb has directed support toward buildings and programs of The Valentine Museum, the Science Museum of Virginia, the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, Maymont, the James Branch Cabell Library, the Virginia Historical Society, and Union Theological Seminary, among others.

Webb has served as a trustee of the Historic Richmond Foundation for thirty years and of the William Byrd Branch of APVA for twenty. Among his latest interests is Prestwold, a late 18th-century plantation near Clarksville which in 1995 completed the first phase of its interior renovation. The latest news in his purposeful career as a friend to architecture, preservation, and the arts is Webb's receipt of the Gabriella Page Historic Preservation Award from the APVA and the dedication of the Clinton Webb Arts Tower in the recently completed fine arts complex at the University of Richmond.

Society Honors

THE RECOGNITION OF SOCIETY HONORS MAY BE GIVEN TO INDIVIDUALS OUTSIDE THE AIA WHOSE EFFORTS COMPLEMENT THE WORK OF THE ARCHITECTURE PROFESSION. TWO SUCH AWARDS WERE GIVEN IN 1996.

Alex Marshall

As a writer for The Virginian-Pilot newspaper in Norfolk, Alex Marshall has shed light on the often-complex urban issues emerging in metropolitan Norfolk-Virginia Beach. He fearlessly confronts the thorniest of issues with detailed analysis, revealing in a clear prose style the complexities of issues ranging from the redevelopment of East Ocean View to the insertion of a colossal shopping mall into downtown Norfolk. Marshall's pointed coverage of the value of public libraries in cities such as Chesapeake also underscored the shortcomings of library systems in Norfolk and Portsmouth. And his financial analysis of museums such as Nauticus in Norfolk focused debate on the unreal profit expectations often associated with public initiatives. Marshall's writing also dealt with the role of good design in the vitality of communities and, in the process, underscored the importance of architecture in creating communities that work.

The Honorable C. Richard Cranwell

During the 1996 General Assembly, a forward-looking group of legislators created Virginia's first statewide tax incentive targeted to historic sites. The bill's chief patron, C. Richard Cranwell of Vinton, introduced the legislation, which passed both houses unanimously. The law encourages private-sector investment in historic neighborhoods; it does not force a change in use for properties to qualify; and it provides for tax credits that help offset five years of declining state support for preservation. While Delegate Cranwell led the charge, the other sponsors of the bill deserve equal credit, including Delegates William Barlow, Robert Bloxom, Whittington Clement, Jay DeBoer, George Grayson, William Howell, Panny Rhodes, Marian Van Landingham, Mitchell Van Yahres, and Clifton Woodrum – and Senators John Chichester, Stanley Walker, Joseph V. Gartin, Patricia Ticer, and William Wampler.

A Award for Preservation

THIS AWARD TO RECOGNIZE HIGH ACHIEVEMENT IN THE REALM OF HISTORIC PRESERVATION CAN BE GIVEN EITHER TO AN INDIVIDUAL OR ORGANIZATION. IN 1996, TWO AWARDS WERE GIVEN.

Gregory L. Rutledge, AIA

Expert knowledge has earned an outstanding reputation in the field of preservation for Greg Rutledge, an associate at Hanbury Evans Newill Vlattas & Co. in Norfolk. Among his noteworthy accomplishments: Rutledge spearheaded the effort to preserve the Historic Family Quarters at Forts Myer, McNair, and Belvoir, which required the formation of a complex alliance among a host of government agencies and review boards. With the coalition's support, Rutledge led the team that surveyed the structures; established a 10-year master plan that included guidelines for repair, renovation, and maintenance; developed a guidelines booklet for each housing type; and produced plans for the complete renovation of eight prototypical houses. His efforts resulted in a 1995 Federal Design Achievement Award, an honor bestowed only every four years by the National Endowment for the Arts.

Rutledge (above) spearheaded the revitalization of historic family quarters at Fort Myer (top).

The Preservation Alliance of Virginia

Through its public advocacy efforts, technical assistance programs, information networks, and educational initiatives, the Preservation Alliance serves as a statewide voice for preservation in Virginia. The umbrella organization – which is composed of more than 150 preservation and conservation organizations – monitors the sessions of the Virginia General Assembly. More importantly, it advocates for legislative action when the time is right. Major issues such as improved design in historic districts, better land use legislation, affordable housing, the future of Virginia's Civil War battlefields, and protection of the James River corridor have all been targeted for studies and programs by the Alliance. Among its recent victories is the passage by the Virginia General Assembly of the Historic Preservation Tax Credit, House Bill 1453, which was chiefly designed through the efforts of the Alliance.

Distinguished Achievement Award

THIS HONOR IS PRESENTED AS A MEANS OF SIGNALING DISTINGUISHED ACHIEVEMENT BY AN ARCHITECT IN ANY ONE OF THE FOLLOWING CATEGORIES: DESIGN, PRACTICE, EDUCATION, SERVICE TO THE PUBLIC, AND SERVICE TO THE PROFESSION. IN 1996, A SINGLE MEMBER OF THE VIRGINIA SOCIETY AIA RECEIVED THE AWARD.

Charles W. Steger, FAIA

Today Charles W. Steger is Vice President for Development and University Relations at Virginia Tech. But to hundreds of architects who graduated from the university, the urge is still strong to call him "Dean" Steger. From 1981-1993, he headed the College of Architecture and Urban Studies and, in those years, exerted a profound influence on the school and its programs.

Under Steger's direction, Virginia Tech consistently ranked in the Top 20 architecture schools in the nation. With his guidance, the college's Washington-Alexandria Architecture Center expanded from an in-house experiment into an international consortium of seven universities from five nations. And, largely through his persistence, the Virginia Tech Foundation accomplished a rare acquisition of Swiss property – the Villa Maderni in Riva San Vitale, now home to Virginia Tech's European Studies Center.

Under Steger's leadership, the college has developed a broad-based research program that crosses many disciplines. Present funding levels place Tech in the top tier of environmental design and planning schools in the country. A new Research and Demonstration Facility, built while Steger was dean, opens new possibilities for materials testing to students. And the college's indoor air quality research program is considered among the world's elite. Although his administrative role has changed, Charles Steger remains a good friend to architecture and architects.

Test of Time Award

The Stiles Residence

This award, which may only be given to buildings that are no less than 25 years old, recognizes the lasting value of good architectural design. In 1996, the award was presented to the Stiles Residence, one of the earliest commissions by Williamsburg architect Carlton S. Abbott. Completed in 1969 for Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Marvin Stiles of Newport News, the house is a Modern essay in wood and glass. A soft gray object in a field of green, the residence floats above a moat of white stones. Its main entrance is approached on axis along a slate bridge. The other three entries onto the front and rear porches consist of three simple risers. Parallel planes are layered within the house to reinforce water views while providing a demarcation between spaces within the home. The house was first honored for design excellence in 1970 by the Virginia AIA and has remained a part of Abbott's professional life through the years. He built a garage on a corner of the property in 1988 and added an award winning pool complex in 1994.

FIRST

If you are trying to locate architects in a particular area, but don't know the firm by name, look in the index that begins on page 91. That's organized by city and town.

SECOND

If you know the name of the firm you are trying to locate, simply thumb through the following pages and find the name in the alphabetical listing.

THIRD

Here's what you will find under the firm listing.

1 Name, address, and phone number.

2 Principals and Firm Personnel

If you want to talk about a possible commission, ask for the person listed as "client contact." If you want to talk to the firm about using a new product or service, ask for the person listed as "vendor contact." In smaller firms, these contacts will be the same person.

3 Principal areas of practice

While architects pride themselves on being generalists, many firms develop particular strengths over the years. This listing includes the four most important areas of a firm's practice, though other project types aren't necessarily excluded from the range of work a firm is qualified to do.

4 Firm specialties

Here is where many firms take the opportunity to elaborate on the type of work they do or to make qualitative statements about how they go about practicing their profession. This statement may help you understand the intangible qualities of the firm a little better.

5 Recent projects

We have limited each firm to naming no more than five of their recent completed buildings. Take note: Many of the buildings may have been recognized for design excellence or other attributes. If you are considering hiring this firm, go take a look at some of the buildings first and ask the building owners about their level of satisfaction with the results.

LAST

A few words about this directory. Contained here are the architecture firms which have a member of the Virginia Society AIA as a principal. There may be other principals and employees at the firm whose names are not listed. The information published here is provided by the firms and we assume it to be accurate, though we do not assume liability for its accuracy.

Grasspave<sup>2</sup>

NEW "100 m<sup>2</sup> Roll" covers 1,076 square feet! You may remember when we sold our grass paving in 80 sq ft rolls. Now they are back and bigger than ever! Other large roll sizes are available to meet project requirements.

Go Orange, Go Green, Go Grasspave<sup>2</sup>!

The University of Miami renewed their contract at the Orange Bowl Stadium when the overall site was improved with grass parking by Invisible Structures, Inc. The city of Miami researched all the grass paving products and found that Grasspave<sup>2</sup> gave them the best of everything — 100% grass finished appearance, compatibility with asphalt aisles, low staff requirements for unmonitored self-parking, 92% root area for best grass health, good for the environment, and ideal for tailgate parties.

Your design game will begin with technical support from our landscape architects. We have programmed details, drawings, and specifications onto CADD disks — no charge. Your contractor will score big savings with fast installation. Your client will be the big winner and you'll be the hero of the game.

Grasspave<sup>2</sup> Large Rolls

New 100m<sup>2</sup> roll covers 1,076 square feet! Shorten your installation labor time with the largest grass paving pieces ever sold. The peg and hole connections that are child's play to assemble have been fastened for you.

Vertical flexibility over natural terrain has always been a Grasspave<sup>2</sup> bonus for designers and installers. Now you can visualize the lateral flexibility too. Lay the roll straight or introduce some slight curves. Shape for tighter radii by cutting out pie-shaped wedges. Maintain loading strength by keeping rings whole and cutting the back-ground grid with pruning shears.

The 50-meter-length rolls (Models 1550, 2050, 2550) are too heavy for two workers to lift. We recommend using a small tractor with a bucket. See the diagram with two rods and chain used to aid in lifting. Start at the far end so the tractor will reverse over the base course as the roll is laid down. 40" and 48" sod rolls will also save time on large jobs.

 Gwyn Gilliam has practiced architecture for fifteen years, and has designed a wide variety of building types both in this country and abroad. The guiding force in her work is understanding a particular client's rituals and requirements in order to design a building to reflect and support them. Her buildings relate clearly to the traditions of architecture yet acknowledge the spirit of the present through attention to detail and the unique use of materials.

Context, fit, and appropriateness of each project characterizes the firm's practice, which is founded on the strong conviction that the creation of successful buildings and spaces is best served through a collaborative process with the client. Our approach makes little distinction between architecture and interior design and has produced a strong portfolio of projects, which have received local, regional, and national recognition. The firm's present clients are primarily institutions and corporations.

As a small firm, we are dedicated to customer satisfaction with innovative designs, practical solutions, quality documents, and an open ear. We specialize in projects under $3 million, and work with clients' needs and budget requirements. We believe that an architect can never finish his education; rather, he should strive throughout his career to improve and refine his knowledge and skills. We approach all projects as opportunities, not as another number or award.

SMBW has produced award-winning office buildings, operations centers, and interiors for the corporate and development community. The firm's commissions are distinguished by a quality of design and execution achieved within the often tight business constraints of each client's pro forma. Particular emphasis is placed on shaping the building envelope and its interior environment to meet the precise programmatic needs of each user. The firm has recently extended its practice to include projects for research and development. Other project types include the adaptive reuse of historic urban structures for mixed-use multi-family housing and business tenants.

When you're specifying school lab equipment, it's no time to experiment.

An investment as important as this should not be left to outdated designs. That's why we sell equipment that has been developed for the current and future needs of students and teachers—Sheldon.

Sheldon Laboratory Systems stand up to years of hard use. Only the highest quality materials go into their cabinets, tables, sinks, lab centers and instructional aids. But the secret to building truly functional equipment is Sheldon's extensive research and testing to make sure you get the safest, most efficient learning centers possible.

So if you're planning to equip a new facility or remodel an old one, give us a call at (804) 288-8291. We'll help you plan for the future with proven success.

Lighting, as a design element, completes your design concept. By understanding and applying lighting's three initial design elements (providing visibility, defining form, and controlling focus) we create the fourth element—mood. Whether it is a romantic dinner or a bustling office, mood is what you are after and it is what we deliver for interior and exterior spaces. Projects include commercial, institutional, residential, and theatrical facilities.

If music is the universal language, few people are more eloquent than Marvin Hamlisch. His timeless melodies and award-winning scores include "The Way We Were" and "A Chorus Line." Yet few things in life give him more pleasure than the view from his recently-remodeled vacation home. By replacing three small windows with six sliding french doors, Marvin created his favorite place to recharge his creative spirit. Which doors met his uncompromising standards? Marvin Hamlisch chose Marvin.
