Design Your Next Parking Lot Way Cool...

...With Concrete.

Concrete parking areas are premier entryways that showcase your projects like no other pavement can. Concrete's flexibility gives you more options in terms of colors and patterns, while making it easier to incorporate the pavement, walkways and landscaping into the overall design. Concrete pavements do not use petroleum products which consume our fossil fuel reserves, and concrete lasts decades longer than alternative pavements. Concrete's reflective surface is brighter and safer at night, plus it stays cooler during the day. This cooling effect along with the use of landscaping and trees has been shown to reduce the average temperature in urban areas by as much as 10 degrees F. No matter how you look at it, designing concrete parking areas is "way cool."

Architecture Is Art

And We Have the Colors for Your Palette

You can see it now -- a design that takes your client's needs and creates a new environment that reflects your artistic impression. A design that blends form and function, concepts and colors, to determine the final impression.

You enhance that design by the attention to detail you use in selecting materials, including the color of the mortar.

At Lehigh, we work with architects to ensure cement color standards. Our broad palette of colors meets the needs of design professionals, and our Custom Color Development Service is unsurpassed in its ability to create that particular shade for absolute artistic control.

From drawing board to construction site, from factory to delivery of the pre-blended product, Lehigh ensures control and consistency through our rigid adherence to the highest production standards.

Choice of colors. Consistency and quality of product. Superior service. Lehigh will work to assure your satisfaction from specification to project completion.

The vision is yours. With Lehigh the final product will match the vision of your imagination.

How to hire an Architect

Few people realize how complicated it is to build – that is, until they find themselves lost in the maze of design options, building codes, zoning laws, contractors, and so on. Because no two projects are exactly alike, there is no single, clear-cut path to follow.

The architect is the one professional who has the education, training, experience, and vision to guide you through the entire design and construction process. Architects do everything from helping you define what you want to build to helping you get the most for your dollar. They don't just design four walls and a roof – they create total environments, inside and out, that satisfy functional needs and are dynamic places to be. Whatever the size of your project, an architect can produce a well-designed building that meets your needs and works within your budget and time frame. This happens in many ways.

A Wise Investment

Architects are trained to solve problems in creative ways, translating your needs into an efficient floor plan and three-dimensional space. With their broad knowledge of design and construction, architects can show you options you might never think of on your own. And architects' services are a wise investment, not an added cost. Consider this:

▼ A well-conceived project can be built more economically. Architects plan your project with you. As ideas evolve, changes can be made on paper much less expensively than after construction has begun. Thorough drawings also make it easier for the contractor to price and build your project.

▼ Energy efficient buildings can save you money on fuel bills down the road. An architect can design a building to maximize heating from the sun and let in natural light, which reduces your heating, cooling, and electric bills over time.

▼ The architect can work with your budget and help you select the appropriate materials and workmanship at a fair price.

Architects develop the drawings and specifications to help you get bids for construction that are based on your requirements.

▼ An architect can help you choose materials and finishes that are durable as well as attractive, saving on frequent maintenance and replacement costs. Architects work to stay abreast of advances in roofing, brick, tile, paint finishes, and so forth. Their familiarity with the full range of materials enables them to suggest the appropriate ones for you.

▼ Good design sells. A well-designed house has a higher resale value. A well-designed store draws customers. A well-designed workplace attracts good employees and increases productivity.

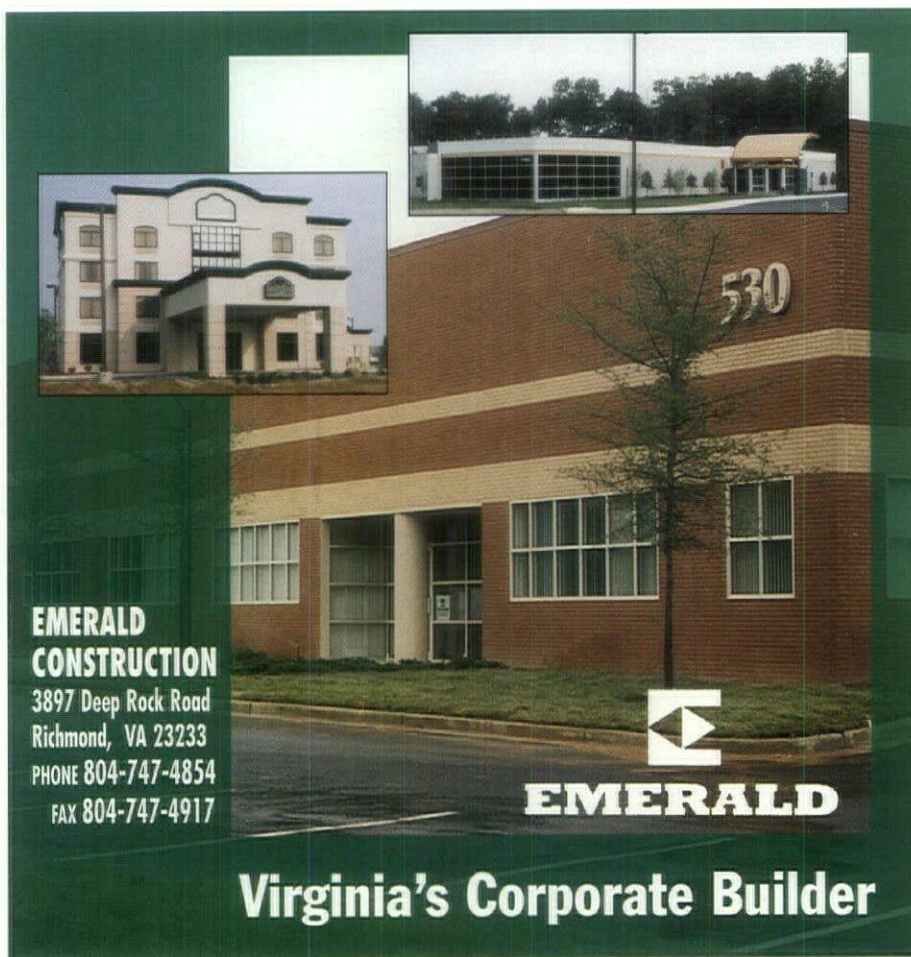

▼ The architect can make life easier. Face it: building is a long process that is often messy and disruptive, particularly if you are living or working in the space under construction. The architect you hire looks out for your interests and tries to find ways to make that process go smoothly.

▼ If your project requires engineering or other design services, the architect can coordinate the team. The architect sorts out complex building codes and zoning laws. The architect can help you find qualified contractors based on your project's needs. The architect visits the site to verify that the project is being built according to specification.

Finding an Architect

Architecture firms come in a variety of sizes and types. Each firm brings a different combination of skills, expertise, interests, and values to its projects. Statistically, the average firm is made up of nine or ten people, but can range from one to 100 or more. Some firms specialize in one or more project types. Some include engineering services, such as civil, structural, or mechanical. They may also incorporate other design disciplines, such as planning, urban design, landscape architecture, or interiors. Other architects introduce these disciplines into their projects by involving consultants with special expertise. It is well worth investing the time required to select your architect carefully. As you move forward in the process, be reminded that you will work closely with the architect throughout the project. Invest the same care it takes to find a financial or legal advisor.

Yours will be a business relationship. Find out how prospective architects do business, how they work with clients, how responsive they are to your decision styles, and how well their work stacks up against clients' expectations. Talk with their former clients.

Ask questions. Respect the architect as a professional who brings experience and specialized knowledge to your project. At the same time, don't be afraid to ask: What does the architect expect from the project? How much information does the architect need? How does the architect set priorities and make decisions? Who in the firm will work directly with the client?

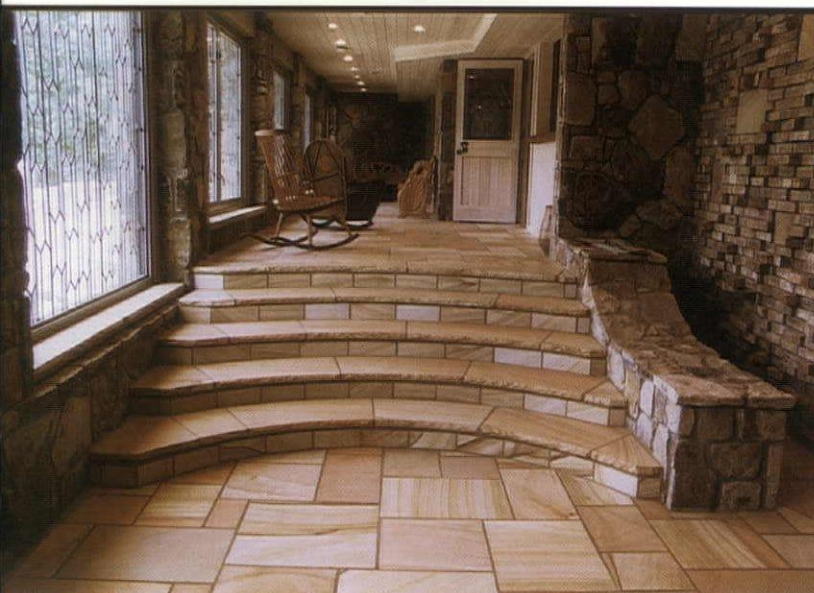

Be frank. Tell the architect what you know about the process and what kind of performance you expect. Ask for an explanation of anything you don't understand. The more you place on the table at the beginning, the better the chances for success.

And get it in writing. Once you've found the architect, you are ready to put in writing the terms of your agreement on the scope of work, services, schedule, construction budget, and architects' compensation. The agreement can take many forms. The AIA has developed a variety of standard contract forms which are used industry-wide. The Virginia Society AIA maintains a complete inventory of the standard contract documents. For a list of them, call us at 804-644-3041.

All told, the path to successful results is paved with many challenges. There are literally hundreds of decisions to be made, decisions which have a strong impact on how the project looks and functions. Experience tells us that successful projects result from good client and good architects who form good professional, business, and often personal relationships. These relationships are formed early and are nourished by clear communication, mutually understood expectations, and a willingness of both you and your architect to accept your responsibilities.

Wish List For New Home Buyers

1. Solids

2. Liquids

3. Gas

90% of new homes prefer the comforts of natural gas.*

Sure, they need to look nice and have a good location, but don't forget the majority of new homes also have natural gas. And with reason. (Well, several actually.) Natural gas can save money on everything from dishwashing to doing the laundry. It's clean, comfortable and reliable. Hot water is fast and plentiful. And for those chefs out there, it allows precise temperature control for cooking. Whatever the size, shape, or place of a home or business, natural gas is definitely one wish on the list that can easily come true.

1997 Design Awards

Four projects by Virginia architects were honored in 1997 with Awards for Excellence in Architecture by the Virginia Society of the American Institute of Architects. The winners, selected from a field of 67 submissions from architects across the state, represented a wide range of scales, from small residential projects to a regional airport terminal in Manassas. The awards were presented formally on November 14, 1997, at the new Library of Virginia in Richmond.

Separate but Equal

Killpatrick Residence Addition Moore Poe Architects

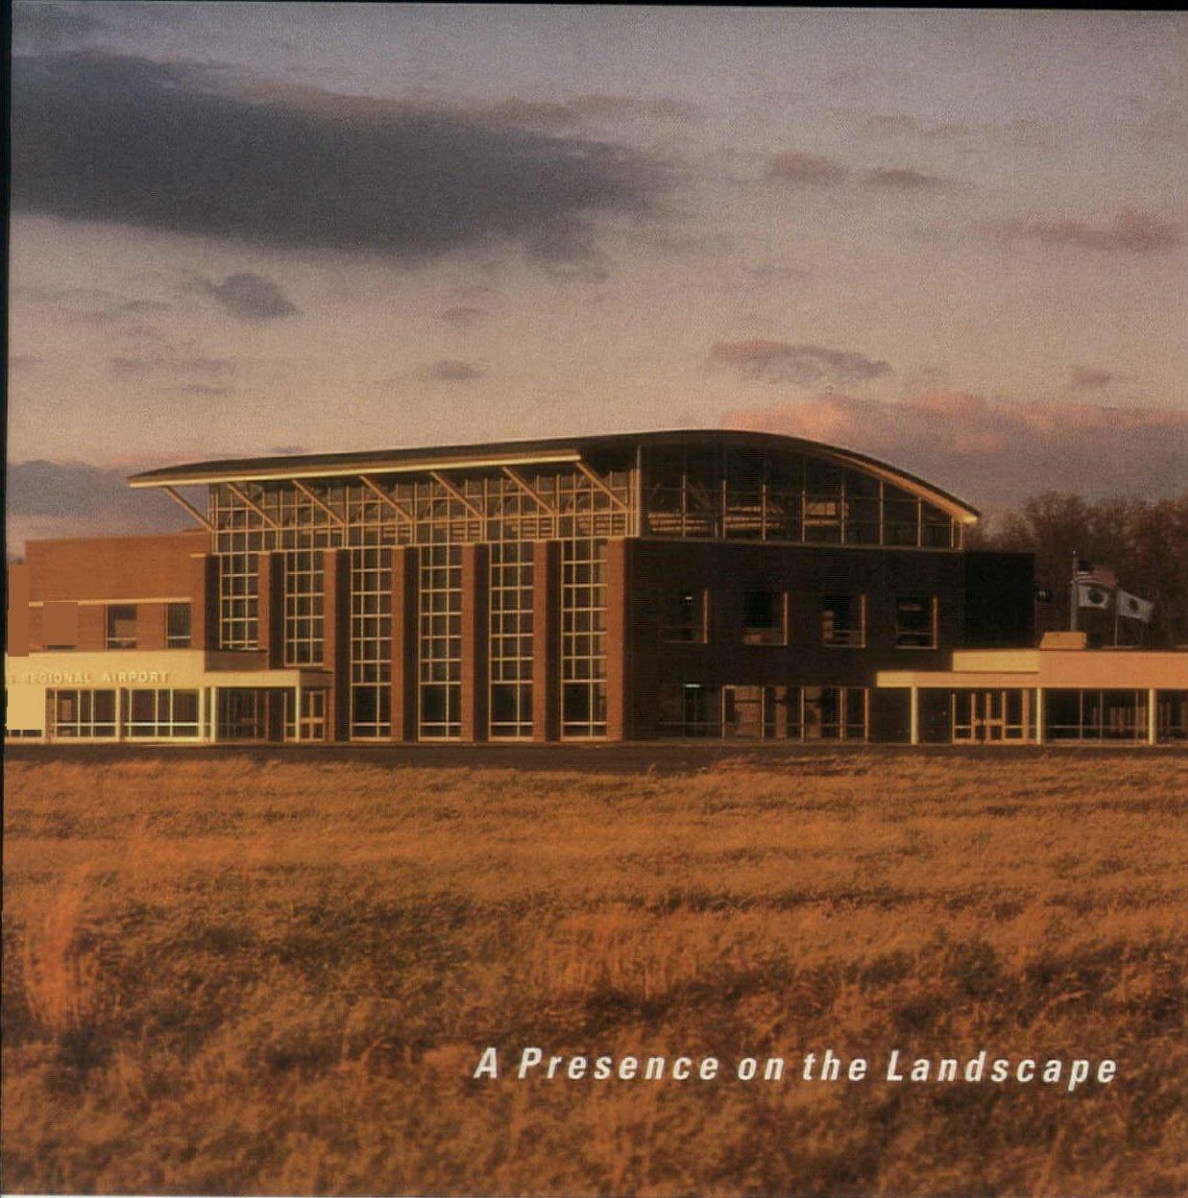

The charge for the architects was a seemingly simple one: add a master bedroom to an existing three-bedroom, two-bath house. But this is not just any house – it is one of the Modern prototypes built during the 1950s in the Alexandria development called Hollin Hills, designed by architect Charles Goodman and planned with the aid of landscape architect Dan Kiley. The contemporary addition was designed to respect the existing character of both the original house and wooded site. It remains separate from the house – connected only by a small enclosed bridge. The addition employs many of the original design ideas, such as a butterfly roof, transparent corners, painted vertical wood siding, and large overhangs.

"This is a sensible design," said the enthusiastic jury. "It is intelligently positioned on the site and it complements the original house wonderfully. Everything that was done to the original house makes the site so much more a part of the whole design. You always think of needing to add things to engage an existing building, but here they have very cleverly put penetrations in what was originally an ordinary box. We also appreciate the level of precision and discretion that has been used. And the effort towards a timeless attitude is compelling."

Manassas Regional Airport Odell Associates, Inc.

The Manassas Airport Terminal serves as home for a variety of functions that were previously scattered about the site. Built to house one of the east coast's busiest general aviation operations, the $3.2 million terminal will handle projected growth for the next decade or longer. Visitors approaching by car encounter a landscaped plaza and a façade made up of textured masonry walls, deep-recessed windows, and precast architectural details that recall the flavor of Manassas' historic Olde Town. Modern references to airplane technology appear in the metal entrance canopy and the curved roof above the two-story lobby. The main functional spaces abut the lobby directly, while less vital areas overlook it from the second floor.

The jury agreed that the building is an exemplary study in massing. "In a building program that typically would be incredibly linear, there is a desirable compactness here," they said. "And there is a good space inside. The floor plan succeeds in breaking the box into components that create a sense of balance. So the building has a certain presence."

Puller Residence Renovation by James Noel, Architect with David Jameson Architect

This project involved the reworking of a series of spaces that lead into an antique collector's residence in Alexandria. Completed on a budget of $9,500, the work includes new mahogany doors and windows that were inserted into existing openings to bracket new copper panels applied on the exterior wall. Inside, the stairwell leading from the upstairs public spaces to bedrooms below is a sculptural combination of rich woods and fine metal detail. The stair rail incorporates a cantilevered cherry buffet that serves the adjacent dining area.

The jury lauded the fact that the architect made something so impressive from such a small commission. "It has been done with a leanness and a sure hand," they said. "And it exhibits an understanding of how to select materials and have them resonate. There's a sensuality to the materials."

House in Randolph County Train & Spencer Architects

Located in the foothills of the Allegheny Mountains, this West Virginia house is arranged in a courtyard configuration with a guest wing to one side, garages to the other, a master wing skewed at an angle upon an outcrop, and the main block of the house on a ridge that fronts a pond. As a result, the farmlike assemblage has a scale that neither overwhelms the setting nor is dwarfed by it. Constructed of stone that was quarried from surrounding fields, the 12,000-square-foot house merges comfortably with the rock outcroppings that frame it on each end.

"We applaud the architect's ability to take a large amount of space and, instead of creating a huge edifice, divide the house into different components and integrate them into the landscape," the jury said. "As an overall concept, it is very powerful. More important, the building has been extremely well-crafted."

William C. Noland Medal

John Paul C. Hanbury spent part of his Navy career in Charleston, S.C., which many consider the birthplace of the preservation movement. "It had a profound influence on me," he says today. "I thought about my own hometown and about why we had never done anything to highlight the importance of our architectural heritage."

Discharged from the Navy in 1959, Hanbury went home to Portsmouth, Virginia, to find bulldozers ready to level acres and acres in the heart of the city. A boomtown through World War II, the city had long since lost its luster. Its waterfront warehouses, once teeming with trade, were rat-infested. Weather-beaten wooden bulkheads were rotted. Worst of all, many of the city's citizens had fled to suburbs. There were no more sailors and soldiers to frequent the bars and shops on High Street. There were no more reasons for going "downtown."

Blight, like a dread disease, had taken over many neighborhoods. "Things were being pulled down without certainty that anything would take their place," Hanbury recalls. "It was indiscriminate. There was no thought. The wholesale destruction appalled me. The thought that we could eliminate history and culture and build characterless buildings to increase the tax base, with no regard for aesthetics, was frightening."

At that moment, Hanbury dug in his heels and began his fight to alter the course of urban renewal. He has had a prominent role in reshaping the city's center and in making Portsmouth's rebirth a model for other communities.

John Paul Conwell Hanbury, FAIA

Hanbury raised awareness of preservation with his work on the Portsmouth Courthouse (top). In 1997, he completed the restoration of Shirley Hall, an example of Colonial Revival architecture originally designed by Peter Hepburn, the restoration architects of Colonial Williamsburg.

From helping to complete the first survey of the English basement-style homes in the Olde Town District, to participating in the redevelopment of the waterfront, Hanbury has demonstrated to his profession that preservation is not enough – there have to be modern-day reasons for historic structures to exist. In that sense, his was a pragmatist's campaign. He has shown by example that architects not only have professional obligations to participate in their communities, but personal ones.

Perhaps there is no better example of this than the 1846 Portsmouth Courthouse. In his 20-year battle to save the building, Hanbury says, "the trick was to find viable uses. The courthouse would never been saved if there had not been a carefully developed reuse plan." The city didn't have a plan, but Hanbury did. He helped organize a local arts commission and oversaw the courthouse's conversion to a Fine Arts Gallery. "A lot of my interest begins as a public citizen. When I became involved in the courthouse, it was not my intention that I should be involved in its restoration, other than as a force for good within the community." But the museum has been a major force in downtown revitalization. From this genesis arose the Children's Museum of Virginia, located in an abandoned department store. Another abandoned building adjacent to the courthouse contains arts programs for a local community college.

At a time when urban renewal was synonymous with tearing down, Hanbury proved that imagination, preservation, and activism were as effective as bulldozers in changing the course of a community. When others fled a decaying downtown, he had the courage to live and invest there. He dedicated personal resources to save the first of several homes in a doomed neighborhood before others had the fortitude to try. When City Hall wanted to construct a gasoline station in an area that later would become a conservation district, he taught city officials that prosperity could be achieved in other ways.

Hanbury's influence extended beyond preservation into redevelopment issues and arts advocacy as he worked to make Portsmouth's waterfront a place where people want to gather for festivals and art shows. He actively sought ways to bring office and retail space back downtown. His professional and personal contributions of 38 years not only set a powerful example, but saved some irreplaceable national architectural treasures. He helped turn a run-down shipyard town into a significant historical and tourist attraction.

What he learned from Portsmouth he has invested in other communities throughout Virginia, North Carolina, and Washington, D.C. The restoration of the 1913 Wells Theatre, for instance, served as a catalyst for downtown Norfolk's revitalization. Buildings of national import such as the Governor's Office in the State Capitol, designed by Thomas Jefferson, bear his signature as well.

Through Hanbury's dedication as a director and officer of the Virginia Foundation for Architecture, he has been a constant guide for the stewardship of the historic Barret House and has been at the center of efforts to restore, furnish, and interpret the Richmond landmark.

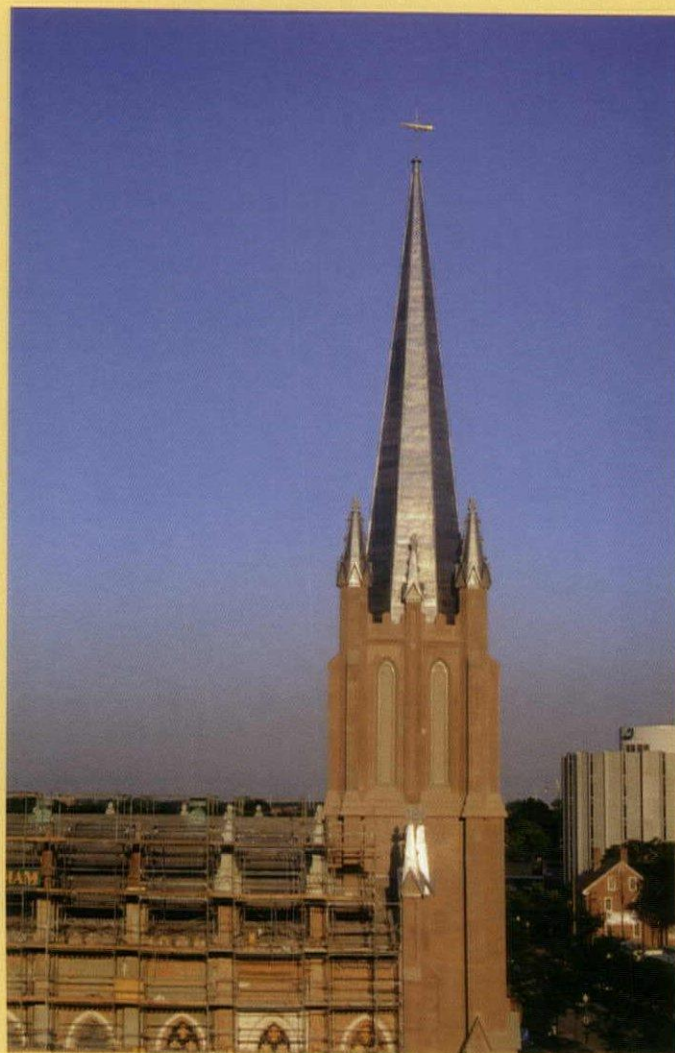

His expertise has also been sought by other communities. One of the best examples is Thalian Hall in Wilmington, N.C., which was a less-than-functional theater space. Not only did Hanbury develop a creative plan to make the theater work, he found space in an attic for a City Council Chambers. The hall now serves two significant civic roles.

Hanbury's civic, personal, and professional commitment is what makes his contributions stand out. Through his volunteer efforts, he has been a steady force in the cultural community, promoting the arts through his leadership of entities such as the Portsmouth Fine Arts Commission, the Cultural Alliance of Hampton Roads, the Business Consortium for the Arts, The Chrysler Museum, and the Portsmouth Chapter of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts. By example he has demonstrated that an architect's role is not only to create, but to protect and advocate.

It is one thing to be a distinguished architect, a recognized Fellow of the American Institute of Architects. It is another when that individual is a quintessential "Citizen Architect," devoting his talents, energies, and passions to the preservation and improvements of his own community. His public service career exemplifies his strong belief that an architect can enhance the well-being of any community through strong advocacy and active involvement.

Architecture Medal for Virginia Service

For unusually significant contributions to Virginia's built environment or to public awareness of it.

In 1964, the Walter and Inger Rice sought an architect to design a modern house that would celebrate the charms of a secluded island on the James River in Richmond. Mrs. Rice set no limits on her search for an architect, starting with a list of one hundred and whittling it gradually to one: Richard Neutra, a native of Vienna who was practicing in Los Angeles. Neutra selected a commanding ridge as the site, topping it with a stripped-down house of strong horizontal lines and planes – juxtaposed with the massive natural boulders that thrust from the ground. Unlike his earlier houses in California, which were covered in white stucco, the stout walls of his Virginia house were built of Georgia marble.

Historian Richard Guy Wilson noted, "At a time when most Virginians sought safety in replicating a past architecture, they had the fortitude to challenge such complacency." In 1996, the Rices announced their plans to give the house to the Science Museum of Virginia for use as a guest residence and study center – a gift to architects, science, and the people of Virginia. This gesture reveals the Rices' generosity and respect for educational opportunity.

Baskervill & Son

Founded in 1897, Baskervill & Son has maintained a consistently distinguished level of service to the community and the profession, accomplishing that rare feat of transcending generational change with a consistency of purpose, constancy of focus, and quality of work. The firm's roots first took hold when architect and engineer Henry Eugene Baskervill joined with architect William C. Noland to form Noland & Baskervill. Henry's son joined his father in 1932, when the firm took on the name that still survives today. Over the decades, Baskervill & Son has amassed a project list that comprises a virtual survey course in Virginia architecture. Those buildings include the 1902 wings to the State Capitol, Beth Ahaba Temple, the Jefferson David Monument, Swannanoa, the U.Va. Field House, and Richmond's popular baseball stadium, The Diamond.

Accolades for their work continues – recently in the form of a Virginia Society AIA Design Award in 1993 for their work on the Richmond Newspapers Production Building and by their selection as the architect for the sprawling Motorola Semiconductor facilities west of Richmond. A century after its founding, Baskervill & Son continues to extend its reach by forming a new company, the GSCB Technology Group – a union of firms that focuses on the design of biotechnology and research and development projects.

The Landmark Theatre

With its refurbished interiors, Richmond's Landmark Theatre remains an architectural breath of fresh air. Completed in 1927 as the Acca Temple Mosque, the building was designed by a team headed by Marcellus Wright, Sr. But it was no ordinary theatre. The building also contained a swimming pool, bowling alley, banquet hall, rifle range and hotel rooms. The design, commissioned by the Shriners during the 1920s, introduced the Moorish influence with minarets and rich tile work that carried through to the interior murals. After nearly 70 years as the city's primary fine arts venue, the theater was overhauled in 1995 by architects Marcellus Wright Cox & Smith. Their task was to restore and upgrade the building, including the paintings, tile work, and gold leaf on the ceiling domes. Then and now – it is a jewel of a building.

Distinguished Achievement Award

Michael Bednar has taught at the university level for three decades, mostly at the University of Virginia. His interest in urban design is evidenced by eight years of service on the Charlottesville Planning Commission. He also has sat on the Charlottesville Board of Architectural Review and the Downtown Board of Architectural Review and chaired the city's Urban Design Task Force. Bednar's research on interior public spaces produced two books, including "The New Atrium," named Architectural Book of the Year in 1986. The restoration of an 1827 residence by him and his wife, Elizabeth Lawson, AIA, received a preservation award from the APVA. Bednar's work on behalf of the AIA includes service as a board member of AIA James River and president of the Charlottesville/Albemarle Section.

In nearly three decades of teaching at Illinois-Chicago, Hampton University, and Virginia Tech, Donald Sunshine has pushed the boundaries of education by combining his appetite for knowledge and his desire to build. As an educator, he aspires to contribute to his students, the environment, and society at large. He has been recognized for teaching excellence at Virginia Tech and his research has generated discussion on topics such as urban planning, religious spaces, energy conservation, and the relationship of architecture schools to professional practice. He received design awards for the Savior Divine Lutheran Church, A House for Joanna, Mountain Lake Pavilion, and the Two-Thirds House. In 1995, he was president of the Virginia Society AIA.

CASE IN POINT

During the summer an office building's two 820 ton chillers were started at four in the morning to have the building cool enough by nine. The chillers then ran at capacity for most of the day.

"Since 80,000 square feet of Llumar Window Film was installed, the improvement in our ability to control and maintain temperatures has been dramatic."

CASE IN POINT

A detailed analysis of a 43 story, 6,200 window building's environmental characteristics to the fitting of Llumar Solar Control Window Film.

"The film provided sufficient energy savings to pay for itself in approximately three years and vastly improved the aesthetics of the building's exterior."

CASE IN POINT

A photographic museum's vintage exhibits are intensely sensitive to the degradation of visible and ultraviolet light. Task: Reduce visible light to less than eight foot candles per square inch and reduce UV light by 99%

"The installation of the special Llumar R 15 G Window Film cut down the transmittance of visible light by 93% and virtually eliminated UV light (99%) within the exhibit area."

CASE IN POINT

After installing 1015 square feet of skywindows, a world famous food retailer's shop was getting too much light, heat and glare. Fruit was ripening much too quickly and hand made candy was melting.

"With the installation of Llumar Window Film, not only has the problem of melting merchandise ended, but glare from reflecting sunlight has been totally eliminated and the temperature in the store is much more consistent and comfortable."

W. Bedford Moore III and Jane Tarleton Smith Moore

Award for Preservation

To recognize high achievement in the realm of historic preservation.

For their joint efforts to preserve and protect the landmark property known as Shack Mountain, Jane Moore and her husband, the late W. Bedford Moore III, have been recognized by the Virginia Society AIA with the Award for Preservation. Their Neoclassical residence in Albemarle County, completed in 1938, was designed in the Jeffersonian style by architect Fiske Kimball as his retirement home. At the time, Kimball was director of the Philadelphia Museum of Art, but Virginians knew him first as the founder of the University of Virginia School of Architecture. The Moores acquired the house in 1956, shortly after Kimball's death. At their direction, a perpetual easement was placed on the house and its 102 acres. The easement, which is overseen by the Commonwealth of Virginia, protects the house and grounds from ill-advised alterations. Listed as a National Historic Landmark, the house has been cared for accordingly by the Moores during more than forty years in residence there.

Honorary VSAIA

For his accomplishments as the City of Roanoke's Director of Facilities, Bane Coburn was named an honorary member of the Virginia Society AIA. Over the past 20 years, he has worked with practically every architect in the Roanoke Valley on city-sponsored projects. He calls himself an advocate for "getting things done right" – and, from their vantage point, local architects agree. By reputation, Bane Coburn facilitates good design and planning by ensuring that civic projects get the programming effort and financial support they need. He also welcomes new technologies. Just one example: he is importing new treatment methods from Europe in an $18 million upgrade of the city's water pollution control plant. In addition, Coburn oversees design and construction for Roanoke's transportation facilities, parks, detention facilities, and fire stations.

Richmond Better Housing Coalition

Formed in 1988 to provide safe and affordable housing to urban residents in deteriorating neighborhoods, the Richmond Better Housing Coalition has become an effective intermediary, providing financial and technical expertise to communities which establish grassroots nonprofit groups to improve housing in their neighborhoods. Both through bricks-and-mortar projects and by influencing public policy to stimulate community revitalization, the coalition has become a positive force in many corners of the Richmond community.

Arthur Miller Studios

For two decades Arthur Miller has been enhancing Richmond's architecture through his stained glass artistry. Miller has applied his skills with uniform care on everything from monuments to single family residences. Recognized for his innovative use of glass in both decorative and functional applications, he is also called upon for jobs requiring great technical expertise. Miller has been called upon to relocate Tiffany windows, advise in the removal and reinstallation of valuable windows that survived the devastating fire at Richmond's St. James Episcopal Church, and repair the priceless windows at the Cathedral of the Sacred Heart, also in Richmond. The studio's work can be seen in historic properties, restaurants, schools, and private collections.

Born and educated in England, artist and craftsman Paul Kitchin of Lynchburg has a long history of working with his hands. Prior to his formal education in fine arts, he completed a seven-year Guild Apprenticeship in Canterbury, England. He has worked on numerous historic houses in Britain and restored religious artifacts in the cathedrals of Sienna, Italy. His major project involved the interior restoration of the historic "Latter Memorial Library" in New Orleans, where he was responsible for painted effects, plaster, and wood restoration. In Lynchburg, Paul Kitchin has performed stunning transformations of the Beaux Arts-style Academy of Music Theatre and Jones Memorial Library.

David P. Hill, ASLA

Roanoke landscape architect David Hill has led the effort to make the eight-state Appalachian region a better community through design awareness. Hill has completed more than five-hundred design and planning projects, including a 1990 analysis of the Blue Ridge Parkway that resulted in a popular exhibition at the National Building Museum. As an adjunct faculty member, Hill teaches history at Roanoke College and architecture and liberal arts at Virginia Tech. His keen commitment to Roanoke is evidenced by a multitude of pro bono efforts in urban design, planning, and neighborhood development.

... and now the
is here!

The NEW ASTM F-1867
Cove Base Specification.

Roppe

In a market flooded by product confusion, it's time to set the record straight. As the world's largest rubber cove base manufacturer with over 40 years of experience, we're proud to offer our customers quality in every wall base we offer. We also recognize the importance of providing you, our valued customer, with the accurate, unbiased information you need to make the right choice.

Not All Cove Base Is The Same.

At one time, there were just two types of cove base covered by the Federal Specification SS-W-40A. They were: Type I, Rubber and Type II Vinyl. When these specs were written, there were no blended bases on the market (i.e., rubber was rubber, and vinyl was vinyl).

Now, there is a third type of cove base being sold – a vinyl-rubber blend called TPR (Thermoplastic Rubber).

The Confusion? Until TPR, architects and specifiers were getting an SBR real rubber cove base every time they specified "rubber". Now, they could be getting a product that's 95% or more vinyl, but labeled "rubber".

The Problem? Because it has some rubber content, TPR base has been installed on jobs where rubber base was specified when it did not meet the material requirements of Section 3.1 in the Federal Specification.

With Roppe, when you specify rubber, you get rubber. And when you specify vinyl, you get vinyl. We've now introduced a new line, the 700 Series. This is a beautiful, quality, TPR base. It is appropriate for many applications. The point is: we are selling it for what it is ... TPR. What you see is what you get.

In this flyer, you'll find detailed information that we hope will help you. It is our goal to provide you with the best cove base possible – whatever the situation. And, to do so honestly.

Which Cove Base is for you? No one is as interested in helping you find the right product as we are. Call us today.

In March, 1998, the ASTM Committee F.06 on Resilient Flooring approved a new cove base specification, F-1861, which replaces SS-W-40A and which recognizes and distinguishes between the three separate types of cove base so that in the future the specified product will be the actual product installed in the job.

ROPPE is ahead of its time in having all three of these products available now.

Type TS - Thermoset Vulcanized Rubber SBR
Type TP - Thermoplastic Rubber TPR
Type TV - Thermoplastic Vinyl

ASTM F-1861 Type TV - Thermoplastic Vinyl VINYL BASE

The Good

Benefits

- Co-extruded top layer resists scuffs and scratching, and won't fade, crack or chip.
- Inexpensive because it is made from PVC vinyl.
- Top lip design helps base fit tightly against the wall.
- Available in 2 thicknesses, .080" and 1/8".
- Ribbed back for positive adhesion.

Disadvantages

- Wall irregularities can telegraph through .080" base.
- Possible shrinkage problems.
- Must be acclimated to room temperature 24 hours before installation.
- Coils need to be unrolled at least 24 hours before installation.
- Forming corners is more labor-intensive.

ASTM F-1861 Type TP - Thermoplastic Rubber 700 SERIES

The Better

TPR (Thermoplastic Rubber) products are a step up from vinyl base products.

Benefits

- Less expensive than SBR rubber.
- More flexible than vinyl due to its rubber content (general guideline is 2 - 8%).
- The 1/8" thickness hides many wall irregularities.
- Top lip design helps base fit tightly against the wall.
- Ribbed back for positive adhesion.

Disadvantages

- More expensive than vinyl base.
- Manufactured like vinyl (some are extruded, some molded).
- Cuts and installs like vinyl.
- Shrinkage possibilities same as vinyl.
- Must be acclimated to room temperature before installation.
- Coils need to be unrolled at least 24 hours before installation.
- Forming corners is more labor-intensive.

ASTM F-1861 Type TS - Thermoset Vulcanized Rubber

RUBBER BASE

The Best

Vulcanized SBR Rubber Base

Benefits

- Manufactured from 100% virgin synthetic rubber.
- Very flexible, cuts like butter, easy to install.
- Cleans easily with soap and water for years of worry-free wear.
- Will not shrink.
- Will not cup.
- The 1/8" thickness hides many wall irregularities.
- Ribbed back for positive adhesion.
- Does not have to be acclimated to room temperature.
- Coils can be installed immediately as you uncoil.
- Forming corners is easy.
- Color is inherent throughout the entire base, and the exclusive low gloss satin finish resists scuffing, gouging, and most chemicals.

Disadvantages

- Its price. It costs more to produce and vulcanize a rubber product, but so does quality in any product.

Finally . . .
Consistent Fly Ash!

Everyone knows that fly ash can make concrete better. The challenge has been acquiring an ash that is available and consistent. Fluctuating carbon contents can make big problems for the ready mixed concrete producer. Low carbon content one day, and high contents the next can mean lower placement rates on the project due to air checks and re-dosing, or even strength problems of concrete in places where air content adjustments weren't made successfully.

The solution is ProAsh®. ProAsh is fly ash that is produced with a patented process technology that makes the carbon content stable and predictable. Stable and predictable materials make concretes that are superior to those made without that quality edge.

Don't Copy AIA Documents Or Ask Others To Do It.

It's against the federal copyright law to copy AIA Documents or to ask others to do it for you. These Documents are protected by law and using original AIA Documents protects you, too. Documents that have been copied might contain obscured changes or be outdated, containing old language that does not reflect current case law and construction industry practices. Using copied Documents could increase your liability significantly. It's just not worth the risk...and it isn't worth putting others at risk either. We're your AIA Documents Distributor. ## FIRST

If you are trying to locate architects in a particular area, but don't know the firm by name, look in the index that begins on page 95. That's organized by city and town.

SECOND

If you know the name of the firm you are trying to locate, simply thumb through the following pages and find the name in the alphabetical listing.

THIRD

Here's what you will find under the firm listing.

1 Name, address, and phone number.

2 Principals and Firm Personnel

If you want to talk about a possible commission, ask for the person listed as "client contact." If you want to talk to the firm about using a new product or service, ask for the person listed as "vendor contact." In smaller firms, these contacts will be the same person.

3 Principal areas of practice

While architects pride themselves on being generalists, many firms develop particular strengths over the years. This listing includes the four most important areas of a firm's practice, though other project types aren't necessarily excluded from the range of work a firm is qualified to do.

4 Firm specialties

Here is where many firms take the opportunity to elaborate on the types of work they do or to make qualitative statements about how they go about practicing their profession. This statement may help you understand the intangible qualities of the firm a little better.

5 Recent projects

We have limited each firm to naming no more than five of their recent completed buildings. Take note: Many of the buildings may have been recognized for design excellence or other attributes. If you are considering hiring this firm, go take a look at some of the buildings first and ask the building owners about their level of satisfaction with the results.

LAST

A few words about this directory. Contained here are the architecture firms which have a member of the Virginia Society AIA as a principal. There may be other principals and employees at the firm whose names are not listed. The information published here is provided by the firms and we assume it to be accurate, though we do not assume liability for its accuracy.

Our practice is small and personal. We seek to create architecture that in some way makes a positive contribution to the built environment and is also responsive to the aspirations of the owner. This is a challenging enterprise whatever the building type. But whether the project is a single house or a large-scale facility, we believe that if it's worth doing at all, it's worth doing well. Our clients and our planet deserve nothing less.

Baskervill & Son, a full-service architectural, engineering, and interior design firm, brings more than 100 years of imagination to the design and planning process. Throughout our history, our mission has been to strive for the highest possible level of professional services for our clients. Our belief is that significant achievements in architecture and engineering occur only when client, architect, engineer, and contractor function as a team. Good communication and a tightly driven management process are critical to the success of all projects. We have worked to employ talented professionals with a spirit of cooperation, who create buildings imaginatively, memorably, and cost-effectively.

You Can Lose A Lot By Copying AIA Documents.

Loss of credibility, accuracy, reputation...and even loss of income are all possible if you copy AIA Documents. Current Documents reflect current industry and construction practices and are designed to protect the rights of all parties to the construction contract. Using outdated Documents can result in problems a lot more worrisome than a jammed photocopier. There's no need to copy. As your AIA Full Service Documents Distributor, we stock more than 120 Documents that cover virtually every contract situation. Call us.

Free Plan Review for Projects with Brick Veneer & Metal Studs Exterior Wall Systems.

Michael Gurevich a Structural Engineer/Masonry Consultant of New York City Brickwork Design Center will be conducting the free plan reviews. He has developed high quality hour-long brick masonry technical seminars for design and construction professionals. Over the past 11 years, he has presented these seminars to over 750 groups of architects, engineers, developers and contractors involving over 21,000 people. During the plan review, Mr. Gurevich will cover the following:

- Movements in brick veneer and design of expansion joints
- Vertical & horizontal expansion joints-configuration, size and locations
- Rain water penetration problems and solutions
- Thermal bridging at exterior wall system and rating of insulation
- Condensation analysis and proper installation of wall insulation
- Adjustable masonry tie selection and proper spacing
- Selection of flashing material and weep holes spacing
- Cavity wall system drainage design
- Mortar mix specifications and proper tooling of joints
- Structural analysis of walls including wind load and deflection limits
- ACI 530 Code, Chapters 10 & 12 requirements
- Brick veneer installation, field inspections and quality control

When you're specifying school lab equipment, it's no time to experiment.

An investment as important as this should not be left to outdated designs. That's why we sell equipment that has been developed for the current and future needs of students and teachers—Sheldon.

Sheldon Laboratory Systems stand up to years of hard use. Only the highest quality materials go into their cabinets, tables, sinks, lab centers and instructional aids. But the secret to building truly functional equipment is Sheldon's extensive research and testing to make sure you get the safest, most efficient learning centers possible.

So if you're planning to equip a new facility or remodel an old one, give us a call at (804) 288-8291. We'll help you plan for the future with proven success.

Lighting, as a design element, completes your design concept. By understanding and applying lighting's three initial design elements (providing visibility, defining form, and creating focus) we create the fourth element — mood. Whether it is a romantic dinner or a bustling office, the mood is what you are after and it is what we deliver for interior and exterior spaces. Projects include commercial, institutional, residential, and theatrical facilities.

HOW

If music is the universal language, few people are more eloquent than Marvin Hamlisch. His timeless melodies and award-winning scores include "The Way We Were" and "A Chorus Line." Yet few things in life give him more pleasure than the view from his recently-remodeled vacation home. By replacing three small windows with six sliding french doors, Marvin created his favorite place to recharge his creative spirit. Which doors met his uncompromising standards? Marvin Hamlisch chose Marvin.
