From Concept to Completion

Everyone Needs Allies.

Since 1946 Allied Concrete has understood the quality of our products goes hand in hand with the quality of the people we work with throughout the masonry construction community.

To ensure the product application produces the best possible result, Allied Concrete Products' performs a role which is inclusive of architect, engineer as well as craftsman. We strive to provide this service through educational, and tutorial sessions in the field or at our manufacturing facilities.

We strive to work in partnership with architects and engineers sharing our combined knowledge for a greater outcome. Because everyone needs allies.

LPOLIC* produces an amazing array of fully tested Aluminum and Metal Composite Materials for the architectural cladding industry. Brilliant colors, exotic metals, textured metals and faux finishes of beautiful wood and stone, all offering the same advantages the industry has come to expect from ALPOLIC*. Advantages like the rigidity of heavy gauge monolithic metal in a lightweight material with superior flatness, vibration dampening, durability and ease of maintenance. ALPOLIC* panels can be curved or bent with ease, using ordinary woodworking and metalworking tools. ALPOLIC*'s use of incredibly clear Lumiflon* resin paint finish guarantees the most brilliant, most durable ACM panels ever, with a gloss range that's more than twice the industry standard. ALPOLIC* Aluminum and Metal Composite Materials are so far ahead of other products on the market today that using anything else is simply a step backwards. Specify them on your next project and see just how unlimited your imagination can be.

Sometimes, the distance between your design and the right design is this small.

Accessible design and construction of multifamily dwellings is the Law under the Fair Housing Act. A 32" door opening versus a 28" door opening makes a world of difference to someone with a disability. Why, then, do some multifamily units not incorporate the extra 4" for someone in a wheelchair? The Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1983 made this requirement, and others, the law. Avoiding it means that architects and builders could be liable for civil penalties up to $50,000 each. So before you design or build any multifamily housing, call us – to ensure that your plans, along with the dreams of the residents you ultimately serve, don't turn into nightmares.

ach architect has an individual style, approach to design, and method of working. So it's important to find an architect who is compatible with your personal style and needs. To help in your search, follow these fews steps to success.

Build a list of possibilities. Ask around. Find out who designed projects in your community that you like. Get recommendations from friends, relatives, and acquaintances who have worked with architects. Check to see if the architect is a member of the American Institute of Architects (AIA). Membership in the AIA means that the architect subscribes to a high professional purpose to advance standards of practice and service to society. This includes having a code of ethics and access to a variety of professional and technical resources.

Contact your local AIA chapter. Many have lists of member-owned firms that are interested in doing various types of projects. The most complete statewide list is published in this directory, but you can also search for firms on the internet at www.aia.org.

Call each firm on your list. Describe your project and ask the architects if they are available to accomplish it. If so, request literature that outlines the firm's qualifications and experience. If the office is unable to handle your project, ask if they can recommend another firm.

Interview each firm. Interviewing a firm gives you a chance to meet the people who will design your project and to learn if the chemistry between you is right. You may be working with your architect for a long time, so choose someone with whom you feel comfortable. Allow at least an hour for the interview, preferably at the architect's office where you can see where the work will be done. Some architects charge for the interview, so ask if there is a fee involved with the consultation.

Ask questions. How busy is the firm? Does it have the capacity to take on your work? Who will handle the job? Insist on meeting the person who will actually design your project. What is the firm's design philosophy? Talk about a project budget and the range of fees that the architect would anticipate for your project. Before you select an architect, ask to be taken to at least one completed project. Also ask for references from past clients. These are invaluable. In addition, you might want to obtain an Architect's Qualifications Statement (form B431) from the Virginia Society AIA offices. This standardized document may be used to verify an architect's credentials and other information prior to selecting an architect for a project.

Making the final cut. Unlike buying a new car or new appliance, you can't see the product and test it out. The architect provides a professional service, not a product. The right architect will be the one who can provide the judgment, technical expertise, and creative skills – at a reasonable cost – to help you realize a project that fits your practical needs as well as your dreams.

This brief introduction was excerpted from "Home Delivery," a guide to how an AIA architect can help you realize your dream home. Copies of the publication can be requested by calling the Virginia Society AIA at 804-644-3041.

Sharing a Thought

By Arthur W. McKinney

ccasionally, each of us needs to pause and look up from those triumphs and tragedies that somehow, sometimes, seem to completely engage our working lives. I think all of us, even the strongest, struggle to seek balance in our lives and pursue a life well lived.

Would this mean a different thing to each different person? Almost certainly. For those of us in the professions – those professions given over to the idea that a better environment for human beings can be constructed – it is possible to leave some tangible works. But as Frank Lloyd Wright said, "It's the idea that's important." Things, works, represent ideas. Works, ideas, are worthy of preservation.

We, in the present, are only stewards for a time. Ownership is, in fact, a very transient concept. In stewardship we have the opportunity to leave the world a little bit better than we found it. In one small corner of this thought is an opportunity for you. The Virginia Foundation for Architecture has acquired the Branch House on Monument Avenue in Richmond as a living museum to preserve irreplaceable history and provide a forum for education in this thing we call Architecture. I believe this effort should be important to anyone, but particularly to those who have chosen some facet of the constructed environment as their profession. Sometimes it's just how you look at things.

Consider this story:

A man walks up to three men, each breaking big rocks into little rocks with a heavy hammer. The man asks, "What are you men doing?"

The first says, "Swinging this heavy hammer."

The second says, "Busting up these rocks."

The third says, "I'm helping to build a cathedral to the glory of God."

Help us bust a few rocks. From the musical precision of Wright to the flamboyance of Frank Gehry, there is much to appreciate. As a Trustee of the Foundation, I ask for your help in preserving the Branch House as a center for architectural education and for your continuing support for the Foundation Annual Fund. Simply fill out the information on the envelope in this magazine and return it with your pledge or payment. Gifts are deductible from federal income taxes as charitable contributions.

Art McKinney, P.E., S.E., FACEC, is president and chief executive officer of McKinney & Co. in Ashland. He serves on the board of the Virginia Foundation for Architecture.

leven projects by architects in the region were honored in 2003 with Awards for Excellence in Architecture. The winners, selected from a field of 117 submissions representing the state's five AIA chapters, ranged from pool house addition overlooking the Potomac River to a digital library in Pohang, Korea. A three-member panel of architects from Des Moines, Iowa, selected the award winners. Rod Kruse, FAIA, of the nationally award-winning firm Herbert Lewis Kruse Blunck, chaired the jury, which also included Jason Alread, AIA, an assistant professor at Iowa State University, and Douglas A. Wells, AIA, principal of Architects Wells Kastner Schipper.

Timepiece Residence Carrie Meinberg Burke, with Kevin Burke, AIA

MERIT AWARD

Formed by the forces of light, weathering, and historical context, this copper-clad house in Charlottesville revels in the change and constancy of the seasons. The design is generated from precise alignments with sun angles, so openings in the walls and roof orient every-day activities such as washing and cooking according to the cycle of daylight. In the observatory, the oculus shapes sunlight into a beam whose passage is marked by cross-hairs and lines inscribed into the floors and walls. "The concept generated a beautiful form," the jury enthused. "The plan organization is very strong. And the architecture is not full of cliches—it is very inventive."

Blue Ridge Farmhouse Addition Robert M. Gurney, FAIA

HONOR AWARD

Five hundred acres near Little Washington, Va., provided an idyllic setting for this addition to an old wooden farmhouse. The clients required a generous new living space, plus an accessible bathroom and changing area. But they also didn't want to compromise the original house. The solution was a steel-and-glass pavilion juxtaposed against a white clapboard frame addition. The glass pavilion is transparent and linear, with a low-pitched roof; the clapboard pavilion is more vertical and solid. A flat-roofed circulation spine joins the two. Jurors applauded the addition's elegance and the way in which it is made of parts that seem at home beside the farm's outbuildings.

Owners: Robert and Elizabeth Haskell
Contractor: M.T. Puskar Construction Co.

Poolhouse at Little Falls Randall Mars Architect

HONOR AWARD

This pool house, which occupies a manmade plateau overlooking the Potomac River in McLean, merges comfortably with the wooded environment. Its massive roof seems to float in space when the movable glass walls are slid to one side, exposing the wet bar and spa inside. An interior wall conceals the shower area and a spiral stair to the basement level, where the guest quarters and wine cellar are located. "Everything about this project is elegant," the jury said. "The proportions are great, the heaviness of the roof seems just right. And the whole site plan is really beautiful. There's nothing added just to make design. Everything is there for a purpose."

U.S.S. Monitor Center Smith Group

HONOR AWARD

This $30 million project at the Mariners' Museum in Newport News, as yet unbuilt, will display the recovered turret of the U.S.S. Monitor alongside an interpretive recreation of the ironclad Civil War vessel. Glass will surround the recreated artifact, representing water from above and illuminating the lower level, which contains interactive exhibits and a theater. The adjacent conservation tank gallery will contain Monitor artifacts and a museum shop. The jury commented: "Once you get the idea that the original boat – or an amalgam of it – is floating on that glass plane and you get to walk on top and below it, you're convinced by the power of the idea."

Owner: Mariners' Museum

UNOS National Donor Memorial Garden SMBW Architects

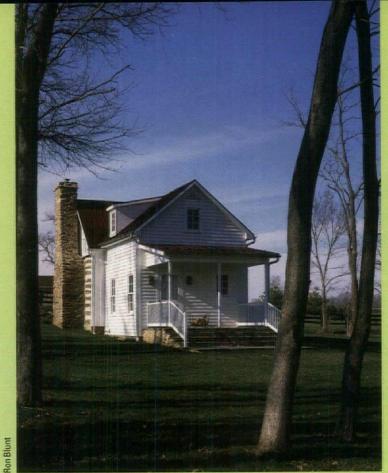

HONOR AWARD

This National Memorial for Organ and Tissue Donors will be located at the headquarters of UNOS, the United Network for Organ Sharing, in Richmond. The memorial honoring the "gift of life" made through organ and tissue donation will transport visitors on a journey. Each of three defined spaces (the grove, the lawn, and the memorial) are reflective in nature. The lower room is organized by a 100-foot-long wall inscribed with niches to hold private mementos. "It seems to have a nice human scale – a place to sit and contemplate," jurors observed. "It also bridges the gap between architecture and landscape architecture, because the plant materials are critical to its success."

Owner: United Network for Organ Sharing

Wheatland Farms Log Cabin Reader & Swartz Architects

HONOR AWARD

The passage of time had taken its toll on the cabin at Wheatland Farms in Waterford, so the owners sought to restore it, remove a ramshackle shed addition, and construct a sympathetic addition. Original rafters, windows, doors, and baseboards were studied in order to duplicate early construction methods. The new addition enjoys plenty of natural light - aided by a glass-floored catwalk that pours sunlight into the kitchen below. Jurors admired the project's balance between restraint and creativity. "The richness of the interior materials provided by the original cabin, in combination with the new construction, creates a vivid contrast that gives the project great depth," they said.

21000 Atlantic Boulevard SmithGroup

MERIT AWARD

This speculative office building is organized along a metal-clad wedge that anchors the building physically and visually. The western side, fronted by the high-speed Route 28, presents a slick reflective façade to motorists. The eastern side displays a more corporate image of precast concrete with punched, grid-like openings. The glass used in both façades is reflective during the day and transparent at night, with the exception of two segments that are always transparent. Jurors noted: "The positives are that – for a spec office building where shapes and forms have to be invented – the architects succeeded at inventing those shapes. It's successfully detailed and resolved."

Owner: Lerner Enterprises

Contractor: J.A. Jones/Tompkins Builders

University of Virginia Baseball Stadium VMDO Architects

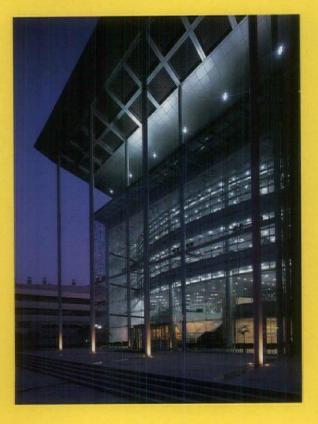

HONOR AWARD

The design for this new stadium incorporates a canopied grand-stand that recalls baseball's classic parks. The dynamic steel roof structure wraps around the field, creating a sense of enclosure and intimacy. Spectators approach the stadium through planted grounds. An earthen ramp along the left field line continues the circulation path leading directly to the concourse level and maintaining the connection between spectator and sport. Jurors lauded the organization of the stadium on the site – the way people move along the concourse and into the seating, and the placement of support services on the opposite side from which spectators enter. "The sloped hill that acts as the seating is such a greatidea," they agreed.

Owner: University of Virginia Construction Manager: Martin Horn, Inc.

Postech Digital Library Smith Group

HONOR AWARD

At the heart of campus at Pohang Institute of Science and Technology in Korea, this new digital library and computer center positions the institution at the head of the digital age. The building creates a focal point, boasting its tectonics in a cylindrical atrium encased in a skin of metal and glass. The ground floor entrance penetrates a five-story-high glass wall; inside is a stone lobby that leads to a telecommunications center and media rooms. Visitors from the upper campus enter on the 5th floor across a posttensioned steel bridge. Jurors called the main steel-and-glass façade "an impressive structure" and praised the integration of the building with a major pedestrian pathway.

Owner: Pohang University of Science and Technology
Contractor: POSCO Engineering & Construction Co.

Occoquan River House Robert M. Gurney, FAIA

MERIT AWARD

The design of this 3,400-square-foot residence is shaped by its location along the Occoquan River. The house is composed of four forms: a masonry rectangle, a metal-clad trapezoid, a wood-and-glass connector, and a three-dimensional ellipse wrought in oxidized steel. These forms interact to create dramatic views and defined living spaces. "We were intrigued with the massing, use of materials, and simplicity of expression on the exterior," the jury said. "A lot of the volumetric expression on the interior was very good. It's an incredibly elegant, well-detailed, clear articulation of pieces."

Owners: Joanne Lindenberger and Benjamin Schutz

Contractor: Chandler Construction Co.

Georgetown Day School Studio 27 Architecture

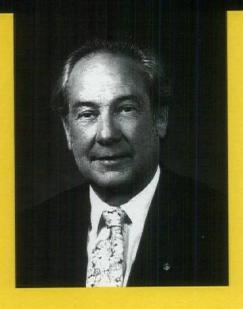

MERIT AWARD

This unrealized plan for an addition to a private high school in Washington, D.C., was designed to add nearly 70,000 square feet of space and 200 parking spots. Limited by a small site, the solution creates distinct volumes that articulate the school's different, but interconnected, academic disciplines. Most of these elements are placed inside a three-level facility that incorporates sustainable strategies such as roof gardens, glass panels, and stormwater collection facilities. "What we liked about this project was the organization and the clarity of the plan," the jury said. "The massing appears to be based on a response to the environment—which makes it more interesting than just form—making."

Hugh C. Miller, FAIA

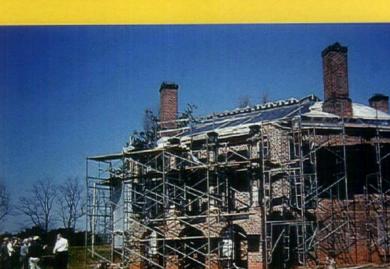

By Rebecca E. Ivey

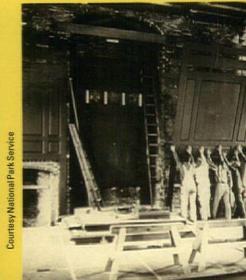

Hugh Miller is a modest man. When colleague Helene Combs Dreiling, FAIA, suggested in 1999 that he "go for the Noland," Miller told her she was crazy. Four years later, Miller took the stage at the Virginia Foundation for Architecture's Visions for Architecture gala to accept the honor. "My success has been the joy of experiencing buildings and places, learning about what makes them wonderful and how they are put together and how to keep them well," he commented. "This is what historic preservation is about today."

Miller knows this because he was in the thick of it. Throughout five decades of preservation practice, serving as chief historical architect of the National Park Service, as the first director of the Virginia Department of Historic Resources, and as a planner, teacher, and advisor, Miller has remained committed to the values of preservation. Preservation was not a subject of study when he was in school. His work at the park service began with restoration, followed by six years in the Middle East, where he first saw integrated philosophy and application of preservation practices. "I was teaching at a university that had a real preservation program dealing with villages and monuments," Miller recalls. "There was nothing like that in the U.S." After his return, he began working on the Independence Hall assembly room restoration as project architect. He calls the effort a learning experience, and considers it special, as the first major restoration based on scholarly work that the park service undertook.

Miller was executive architectforthe Statue of Liberty restoration (right).

During his 28-year career with the park service, Miller rose from project architect to chief historical architect, lending his expertise to many high-profile projects, such as the Statue of Liberty restoration, another one of his favorites. "It was pretty amazing to be able to work on both of these icons of American architecture and history." He initiated the park service's first service-wide training for cultural resource managers, followed by courses for preservation maintenance managers, historical architects, and trades mechanics ultimately, through workshops and programs, creating the knowledge base for preservation practice.

At the Virginia Department of Historic Resources from 1989 to 1994, Miller spearheaded new programs identifying heritage places and encouraged contextual design in historic districts. He expanded the survey and documentation of historic places and initiated recognition of African-American and Native American sites. "When I came to Virginia," he says, "I realized that there were still large groups of people whose history was not being discussed. That seemed like a great opportunity - to not only talk about our architecture and our history, but also the diversity of our people." He also urged developers and architects to use the federal rehabilitation tax credit program. Because of these programs it's often more advantageous to restore an old building than to tear it down, which Miller believes has dramatically changed the practice of architecture, contributing to increasing interest in preservation.

The burgeoning field of landscape preservation flourished under Miller's guidance. As part of a small group in the 1970s, Miller became concerned with landscapes as cultural elements in need of preservation. He commissioned a study on cultural landscapes for the park service, and began creating policy in the early 1980s. In 1988, the park service formally identified landscapes as a type of cultural resource; Miller was made an honorary member of the American Society of Landscape Architects the same year.

Miller continues to share his preservation expertise through publications and lectures, and teaches preservation technology-or "building geriatrics," as he calls it - as adjunct professor at Goucher College's Masters of Arts in Historic Preservation Program. He sits on advisory boards for Thomas Jefferson's Poplar Forest, the University of Virginia's Academical Village, and Stratford Hall, among others. And he has no intention of slowing down just yet.

The following lesson, which Miller shared at the Visions gala, is a good summation of his career. He said that after working on the Statue of Liberty he decided there are five key questions that apply to all projects involving old buildings.

What is working? If a building is standing up, something is working.

- What is limiting? It could be construction methods or planned configuration.
- What is changing and how fast?
- Whatwentwrong?
- · Finally, what is the fix?

"Most clients want to answer the last question first," Miller said. "My response is that you have only one chance to do it right, so spend the time and the money to find out what 'right' is. This lesson from landmarks is perhaps also a lesson for living life."

Miller's resume includes work on the restoration of Independence Hall (near left) and, more recently, advisory service to Poplar Forest (far left).

It's all in the details.

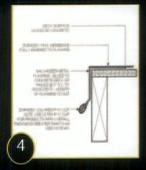

With over 30 years of technical expertise, Duradek is the leader when it comes to water-proofing details and installation techniques. Duradek is a factory engineered PVC sheet good with an outstanding life span. Certified for both roofing and pedestrian traffic, Duradek is the logical choice for 'walkable waterproofing'.

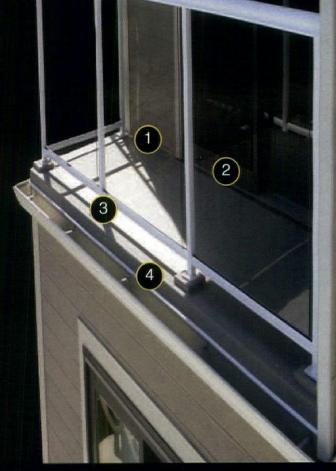

Homeowners love Duradek because of it's clean appearance and low maintenance. Add Durarail powder coated aluminum railings, which never rust and never need painting, and you've got a virtually maintenance free outdoor living space!

T. David Fitz-Gibbon Architecture Firm Award

VMD0 Architects, P.C.

For more than a quarter-century, VMDO Architects of Charlottesville has produced cutting-edge educational architectural design. From a 1976 campus plan for Woodberry Forest School in Orange to the University of Virginia's baseball stadium completed in 2001, VMDO's award-winning projects attest to the firm's success in raising the caliber of architecture in the Commonwealth – and beyond. Their design awards total four dozen, including a 2003 VSAIA Award for Excellence. Time and again, providing students with educational environments that enhance learning, VMDO has shown its clients that good design doesn't have to be expensive.

Founded in 1976 by University of Virginia architecture professor Robert Vickery, FAIA, as Vickery & Associates, the firm's remaining founding principals, Robert Moje, AIA, and David Oakland, AIA, are joined by Todd Bullard, AIA, and Joseph Celantano, AIA, at the helm. Joseph Atkins, AIA, Terry Forbes, AIA, Randy Livermon, AIA, and Kenneth Thacker, AIA, serve as associate principals. Last year, the firm recognized the significant relationship between architecture and landscape by establishing its own landscape architecture studio. All of VMDO's staff members are active in community service, including city task forces, proposal review committees, and the Board of Architectural Review.

The Fitz-Gibbon Firm Award is named for Hampton Roads architect T. David Fitz-Gibbon, the Virginia Society AIA's 1971 Noland Medal recipient. Fitz-Gibbon made the single largest gift to date to the Virginia Foundation for Architecture, from which the Foundation realized more than $500,000 in bequests.

Distinguished Achievement Award

Edwin J. Pease, AIA

Architect, artist, educator and inventor, Ed Pease possesses a commitment to design excellence acknowledged by more than a dozen awards. Pease has used his design skill to serve the profession and community through numerous positions as juror, moderator, volunteer, and critic; he is a former chair of the Virginia Society AIA's Design Committee. His belief that excellence in design should and does occur at all scales – from the W5 Museum in Belfast, Northern Ireland, to Williamsburg Montessori School – is contagious. His work is contextually sensitive to place and rich in both form and content. Pease continues to design museum facilities and exhibitions in collaboration with H.O., Inc., of St. Petersburg, Florida, as well as projects through his own firm, Edwin J. Pease Architect. He is also an associate professor in the Department of Art and Art History at The College of William and Mary.

Willard M. Scribner, FAIA

Will Scribner, a founding principal of Richmond's SMBW Architects and a past president of the Society, has served his profession and community for more than 30 years. During his eight years as a member of the Richmond Planning Commission, Scribner was involved with updating the city's master plan and downtown plan. His firm oversaw the expansion of the Greater Richmond Convention Center and designed the Turning Basin complex along the Canal Walk. SMBW, which has received numerous design awards, is currently recladding the exterior of Richmond City Hall. In addition to his service to the VSAIA and other cultural and social service organizations, Scribner served as chairman of the Virginia Foundation for Architecture during its acquisition of the historic Branch House.

Bruce R. Wardell, AIA

Charlottesville architect Bruce Wardell, together with the firm he founded in 1985, has produced medical, ecclesiastical, and residential designs that have frequently been cited for recognition. Before beginning his career in the Commonwealth, Wardell served in the Peace Corps as a government architect for the Kingdom of Tonga. As one of its founders, Wardell has actively volunteered for Greater Charlottesville Habitat for Humanity throughout his career, just one reason the AIA Central Virginia Chapter honored him with its 1999 Community Service Award.

INSULATED CONCRETE FORM WALLS

For Commercial Buildings

Cost Competitive — ICFs and concrete material prices are stable. ICFs are simple to assemble and consolidate several construction steps into one.

Durable — ICFs are built using steel reinforced concrete to provide the building owner with a durable structure.

Fire Resistant

Studies prove concrete outlasts other materials when exposed to fire, remaining structurally sound for as much as 4 hours.

Energy-Efficient

Structures built using ICF exterior walls require an estimated 44% less energy to heat and 32% less energy to cool than comparably built wood frame structures.

Disaster Resistant

ICFs have withstood the devastating forces of nature, such as hurricanes and tornados, again and again in every area of the

Sound Attenuation

Compared to a typical wood frame wall, about one-quarter to one-eighth as much sound penetrates through an ICF wall.

Evelyn Chandler

Evelyn Chandler's unflagging energy, attention to detail, and shrewd political acumen have proved invaluable in the salvation of a number of the Commonwealth's important properties. Among the Carrollton community activist's accomplishments are the documentation of the Hampton neighborhood Aberdeen Gardens and of Isle of Wight's Boykin's Tavern.

Peter Hunt

The ruins of Rosewell Plantation might have languished in the weeds were it not for Peter Hunt's leadership in fundraising and management. Instead, visitation is increasing as more and more people discover this important colonial property. Hunt, a Zanoni resident, also offers his dedicated service to the Gloucester Community Foundation and the Preservation Alliance of Virginia.

Harry Kollatz, Jr.

Writer and editor Harry Kollatz Jr. has long served as an advocate for architecture through his articles in Richmond Magazine. His provocative and thoughtful remarks encourage the public to respect the architectural heritage of Virginia's capital. Kollatz, a Richmond native, is also a playwright, actor, and a co-founder of the Firehouse Theatre Project, a decade-old adaptive reuse of Station #10 in Richmond.

K. Edward Lay

University of Virginia Prof. Edward Lay began his lengthy teaching career in 1967. Documenting Virginia's historic resources, Lay has recorded more than a thousand structures in Charlottesville and Albemarle County, emphasizing the importance of vernacular architecture. Among his numerous publications are A Virginia Family and Its Plantation Houses and The Architecture of Jefferson Country.

Mrs. James C. Wheat, Jr.

Wiley Wheat, together with her late husband, Jim, restored Blandfield in Essex County, with the guidance of G. Alan Morledge, AIA, and architectural historians Paul Buchanan and Edward Chappell. The Wheats' comprehensive and accurate restoration of Robert Beverley's 1772 residence benefits students of architectural history and preserves a grand historic structure for future generations of Virginians to appreciate.

The Award for Preservation

Elizabeth W. Brothers

A spiritual descendant of pioneer preservationist Mary Wingfield Scott, activist Betsy Brothers has transformed her native Suffolk through timely leadership and organization, advocating on behalf of several properties. Her contributions to Suffolk provide a model for historic preservationists everywhere, as creating livable communities from aging towns must begin at the community level. Brothers is past president of the Suffolk-Nansemond Historical Society and Preservation of Historic Suffolk, Inc., an entity that continues to purchase and restore significant properties. She is currently president of the Suffolk Center for Cultural Arts Foundation, which is converting the town's old high school into an arts center.

The Historic Monument Avenue and Fan District Foundation

The concerted efforts of this organization have fostered the rebirth of Richmond's grand boulevard, Monument Avenue, over the past quarter-century, as well as brought countless homes back to singlefamily status. From its purchase of four Grace Street houses in the 1980s to its restoration of two historic properties at Grove and Harrison Streets completed in 2003, the Foundation's work is a catalyst for the Fan District's strong wave of renovation. Its 2001 coffee-table book, Richmond's Monument Avenue, recently went into a second printing by the University of North Carolina Press. Through its combination of fundraising, educational programming, publication and sweat equity, the Foundation elevated the Monument Avenue Historic District to National Historic Landmark status and continues to preserve the neighborhood's architectural legacy.

Test of Time Award

Scope and Chrysler Hall Complex

Norfolk's distinctive performance venue, completed in 1971, retains the functional and appealing qualities that earned it the Test of Time Award. The dramatically domed 10,500-seat Scope arena features more than 4,000 triangle-shaped precast concrete forms, spanning 325 feet. The building's 60-foot buttresses were cast in place on the site. In addition, the complex includes the 2,500-seat theater, Chrysler Hall; an 80,000-square-foot convention facility; and an underground parking garage. The complex sits on a raised brick plaza featuring a reflecting pool, fountains, and extensive landscaping.

The Scope's concrete dome and flying buttresses have taken on landmark status in the eyes of Hampton Roads residents. The Scope and Chrysler Hall Complex, an adventurous urban renewal project that replaced 17 blighted acres, endures as one of the Commonwealth's most impressive downtown spaces.

AIA/Hampton Roads member E. Bradford Tazewell Jr., AIA, was the complex's architect of record. His firm at the time, Williams and Tazewell, worked in conjunction with Italian engineer Pier Luigi Nervi and local firm Fraioli, Blum & Yesselman.

Honorary Membership

Deborah Stephens Burns

Under Debbie Burns' guidance, the AIA Northern Virginia Chapter's newsletter has doubled in size, once inactive committees have flourished, and a new sponsorship program has blossomed. The executive director of AIA/Northern Virginia, Burns often offers her expertise to new component executives at the request of the national AIA. An architectural historian, her publications include Pennsylvania Architecture and contributions to Hollin Hills: Community of Vision.

The Honorable W. Tayloe Murphy, Jr.

As a delegate to Virginia's General Assembly, and now as Secretary of Natural Resources, Murphy has emphasized, endorsed and encouraged planned development, adaptive reuse, and historic preservation. And his devotion to the Chesapeake Bay and its ecology has benefited citizens of the Commonwealth and the region beyond.

How to Use This

Directory

FIRST

If you are trying to locate architects in a particular area, but don't know the firm by name, look in the index that begins on page 70. That is organized by city and town.

SECOND

If you know the name of the firm you are trying to locate, simply thumb through the following pages and find the name listed alphabetically in the directory.

THIRD

Here's what you will find under the firm listing.

- Name, address, and phone number.
- Principals and firm personnel

If you want to talk about a possible commission, ask for the person listed as "client contact." If you want to talk to the firm about using a new productor service, ask for the person listed as "vendor contact." In smaller firms, these contacts will be the same person.

Principal areas of practice

While architects pride themselves on being generalists, many firms develop particular strengths over the years. This listing includes the four most important areas of a firm's practice, though other project types aren't necessarily excluded from the range of work a firm is qualified to do.

Recent projects

We have limited each firm to naming no more than five of their recent completed buildings. Take note: Many of the buildings may have been recognized for design excellence or other attributes. If you are considering hiring this firm, go take a look at some of the buildings first and ask the building owners about their level of satisfaction with the results.

LAST

A few words about this directory. Contained here are the architecture firms that have a member of the Virginia Society AIA as a principal. There may be other principals and employees at the firm whose names are not listed. The information published here is provided by the firms and we assume it to be accurate, but you may wish to verify data on a particular firm by calling directly to inquire.

"WE ONLY USE ALUMINUM METAL ROOFING."

— Eugene A. Delmar, FAIA, Delmar Architects, P.A..

"The cost of aluminum has never been an issue for us. It's a life cycle issue. Aluminum delivers a longer service life."

— Tom Hutchinson, Principal, Hutchinson Design Group, Ltd.

"The cost of aluminum is not an issue for us. We quote on 2-3 jobs per day and have never won or lost a job due to the cost difference of aluminum. The increased cost is only pennies. The cost of labor is the real issue, not the material."

Jim Donovan, Westar Roofing Corporation

For projects located in coastal regions, aggressive environments, or areas subject to acid rain, PAC-CLAD® Aluminum may be the product of choice for metal roofing applications. Inherent properties include superior corrosion resistance, lighter weight panels and ease of installation. PAC-CLAD® Aluminum is available from Petersen in over 35 standard colors and a wide variety of UL-580 Class 90-rated roofing profiles.
