Minnesota Association of Architects to be Host at Annual Regional Conference

The Minnesota Association of Architects, A.I.A., will be host at the Annual Regional Conference of the North Central States District, A.I.A., in St. Paul on Nov. 7 and 8. As a climax to the conference, is the football game, the afternoon of the Eighth, between Purdue University and the University of Minnesota.

In notifying the Secretary of the Wisconsin Architects Association, Gordon M. Comb of the Conference Arrangements Committee, writes:

Our plans have not yet reached the stage at which the program can be announced, but we do hope that your members will reserve the dates. We are making every effort to maintain the standard set by the Minneapolis, Milwaukee, and Chicago meetings.

We might observe that there will be an encounter on the football field of Memorial Stadium between the forces of Purdue University and the University of Minnesota the afternoon of November 8th. Since most U. of M. home games are sell-outs, it would be advisable for those who may wish to see the game to order tickets at $3.60 each from the Athletic Ticket Office, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis 14, enclosing also 25c with each order (not per ticket) for postage. Purdue alumni can, of course, order through that school.

Maurey Lee Allen Prize Awarded to Milwaukeean

Robert N. Strauss, Milwaukee, a junior at Lawrence college, was awarded the Maurey Lee Allen prize offered to the student in advanced architectural design who submitted the best project for 1952.

The prize winning design was a proposed theater, drama department and conservatory of music for Lawrence college. The plan involved a modern semi-circular form with the theater rising above two lower wings, making a monumental as well as a practical structure.

The jury which judged the competition was composed of two A.I.A. members, Noel Ross Safford of Green Bay and William Vogt Kaeser of Madison, and a layman, John G. Strange.

Maurey Lee Allen, Appleton architect, a former board member of the Wisconsin Architects Association, is always a source of welcome news, constructive to the business of architecture.

"Modular Coordination"

WASHINGTON — An evaluation of the Modular Method by a panel of experts, representing five different branches of the building industry, as to its real effectiveness in raising building efficiency will be most helpful to those who are encouraging the conversion of the nation's construction industry to this system, according to William Demarest, Jr., Secretary for Modular Coordination at the American Institute of Architects in Washington, D.C.

A discussion of the Modular Method as an approach to cost reduction in the building industry was a feature of the Third National Standardization Conference, convened in Chicago by the American Standards Association in conjunction with the Centennial of Engineering currently being celebrated by the American Society of Civil Engineers. Colonel Willard T. Chevalier, Executive Vice-President of the McGraw-Hill Publishing Company, was Moderator of the session in the International Harvester Theater of Chicago's Museum of Science and Industry, September 8th, sponsored jointly by The American Institute of Architects, the Producers' Council and the National Association of Home Builders.

The Modular Method is a simple system of coordinating the designer's dimensions for a building with the actual unit sizes of the materials with which it is to be constructed. A major feature is that it facilitates more thorough pre-planning of a structure by the designer, giving greater construction efficiency on the site. Mr. Demarest's Modular Coordination Office serves as a center of information regarding the Modular Method.
Like automobiles, wiring systems must be engineered and designed to meet present day demands. Wiring that "filled the bill" in years past is no longer adequate. The job has outgrown old type wiring and demands on wiring systems continue to grow.

Our experience with hundreds of actual cases, over a period of many years, proves the necessity of Certified Adequate Wiring in all residential, commercial and industrial buildings. Certified Adequate Wiring is planned to meet future demands due to increased use of low cost electricity.
