"Indispensable for any public library, any design firm, and any school of architecture, landscape architecture, or interior design ... solid, reliable, and remarkably complete."

Robert Campbell, Pulitzer Prize-winning Architecture Critic, The Boston Globe

"The Almanac of Architecture & Design is more than a mere compilation of numbers and words and charts and graphs. ... It is about ideas as well as information"

Blair Kamin, Pulitzer Prize-winning Architecture Critic, Chicago Tribune

"No comparable resource exists."

Library Journal

"The reader who uses this book well will come away with a richer sense of the texture of the profession and of the architecture it produces."

Paul Goldberger, Pulitzer Prize-winning Architecture Critic, The New Yorker

"The definitive fact book on architecture and design."

The American Institute of Architects

"This is the book that informs decision makers like no other."

Society for Marketing Professional Services

"This almanac, filled with resources, can help all those involved in the building arts to better fulfill this unusual moment's potential."

Robert Ivy, Editor in Chief, Architectural Record

"A core reference title for personal, professional, and academic reference collections."

Introduction

Architecture and design are never stagnant. Here in the 12th edition of the Almanac of Architecture & Design you will find stories of both growth and decline. As we enter the second decade of the 21st century, today's "best of times, worst of times" offers a great opportunity to consider what is important and what has been significant.

Our goal with the Almanac is to chronicle everything of importance in the designed environment. We document design authorship of significant buildings and we offer obituaries of leading designers who shaped our built environment. These have been our community's friends and teachers. Their work confirms the aspirations of the human spirit.

You will find dimensions of inspiration on many of the pages that follow. The directory and awards sections are overflowing with examples that showcase the increasing importance design.

In fact, we have assembled more information on change in the world of architecture and design than ever before. We believe that you will find value in a multitude of ways. Not only are there new statistics to consider, but you will also discover reinvention. Unfolding in these pages is the record of change in the design professions and the A/E/C industry. Despite the global economic slump, there are professional practices that are dominating their markets and earning awards in those realms. In fact, you'll find leadership examples of all shapes, sizes, and differentiated talents.

Billings of the top firms are in some cases up and in other down. Regardless, design isn't just about monetary growth and business; it is about planning the future and getting ready for what's next. The seeds for future success are being sown in innovative ways, and we have identified the movers and shakers in this sourcebook. For this reason, the Almanac serves as the primary media guide for architecture facts.

To be an architect or designer is an awesome responsibility. The end result is an outcome of teamwork. The owners, the designers, the contractors, and the engineers all work together to construct what will be used by groups as small as families and as large as nations. Architecture and design grabs us in ways we are often not conscious of, yet behavior, mood, and human activities are enriched by the success of the form and function of design. Human emotion resonates with the physical properties of a building to create an uplifting, energizing response that transcends expectations.

Here in the 12th edition of the Almanac of Architecture & Design you will find the charts, graphs, lists, and stories of progress and possibility. Thank you for joining us as we digest what's important today along with some hints of what is likely to come next.

DesignIntelligence 333

This chapter features a ranking of America's top 333 architecture firms, along with useful contact information and pertinent data.

DesignIntelligence 333

The DesignIntelligence 333 ranks the top 333 architecture and design firms in North America. To compile the most accurate and up-to-date information, the research staff of the Almanac surveyed firms throughout the United States and Canada during the spring and summer of 2010. Under the direction of the editors, extensive research was conducted by the Almanac staff and the research staff of DesignIntelligence to compile a comprehensive geographically and demographically diverse group of firms that would qualify for inclusion. Professional associations, media lists, client organizations, and conference registrations of the Design Futures Council were also studied to determine the most active leading firms in the US. The Greenway Group also researched additional media sources, such as leading professional and business publications read by clients in each of the areas of specialty.

The firms were mailed a letter inviting them to participate in the survey, along with a copy of the survey. The survey asked for information regarding their areas of specialty, employment counts, number of offices, fields of professional practice, 2009 gross professional fee revenues, leading officers of the firms, and other relevant information. The data collected was also used for the Almanac's Directory of America's Leading Architecture and Design Firms.

Telephone calls and emails followed mailed surveys if additional information was needed. Each firm included in this Almanac was contacted a minimum of three times by mail, email, or telephone. When firms did not respond, estimates were made based on previous surveys completed by the firms for DesignIntelligence, listings in business media, Greenway's private research databases, reliable information on the Internet regarding employee counts, and other credible sources. At least three independent sources were used to estimate gross revenues when the firms did not supply these figures. Blank fields in the ranking section or missing profile information were due to the firm not returning its survey. Totals may not equal 100 percent due to rounding.

To fill out a survey for next year's Almanac, visit www.di.net, call DesignIntelligence at (678) 879-0929, or contact the editor at jwolford@di.net.

This chapter features an alphabetical listing of leading North American architecture and design firms with data about the type of services they offer; their size, headquarters, and geography; the market segments they work in; and metrics from the DI Index.

America's Leading Architecture & Design Firms 2011

This section of the Almanac features an alphabetical listing of leading North American design and engineering firms selected by the editors. Each year, DesignIntelligence polls architects and designers in North America regarding their firms' officers, firm size, primary services offered, market segments and geographical locations served, and the nature of their practices. The firms are invited to participate in additional research underwritten by the Design Futures Council, which includes surveys about trends and market shifts, compensation and fees, technology, mergers and acquisitions, and management strategies.

The key to interpreting the tables is featured below. Firm size, headquarters (HQ), firm type, and markets are determined by DesignIntelligence surveys or from record files. Although the concept of headquarters might be less normative than in the past, this convention is still often used for diagnostic purposes in many market-data studies. If your firm has no headquarters and we have listed one, please make sure to complete a survey next year at di.net. The list of services includes market segments and specific professional specializations. The DI Index was determined by survey responses, with further research conducted by DesignIntelligence and Greenway Group analysts. The criteria include geographic service coverage and reputation (awards as listed in the Almanac of Architecture & Design and recognition in professional and business publications). Of the five tiers, only firms in the top three (as represented by 3-5 stars) are included due to space considerations. Abbreviations were used in some firm names due to space constraints: architecture = Arch.; architects = Archts.; associates = Assoc.; construction = Const.; engineers = Engrs.

Principals of firms who want to be included in our next Almanac can obtain and/or fill in a survey at di.net; email the editor, Jane Wolford, at jwolford@di.net for a copy; or call DesignIntelligence at (678) 879-0929. Firms appearing in this Almanac can expect to receive a copy of next year's survey in the mail soon or can request a survey by contacting DI or the editor.

Richard H. Driehaus Prize for Classical Architecture

The Richard H. Driehaus Prize annually honors an outstanding contributor to the field of traditional architecture. The award was established and endowed by the founder of Chicago's Driehaus Capital Management Company. Winners receive $200,000 and a model of the Choregic Monument of Lysikrates in Athens, Greece, known as the first use of the Corinthian order.

Russel Wright Award

The Russel Wright Award honors individuals who are working in the tradition of design pioneer Russel Wright (1904–1976), a well-known home furnishings and housewares designer whose works date mainly from 1930 to 1950. The award is sponsored by the Russel Wright Design Center, located at Manitoga, the 75-acre wooded landscape Wright sculpted in Garrison, NY.

Star Award

The International Interior Design Association's Star Award celebrates individuals and organizations that have made extraordinary contributions to the interior design profession. As the Star Award is merit-based, it is not necessarily granted each year. Although non-members are eligible, the IIDA board of directors (the selection body) only accepts nominations from IIDA fellows, chapter presidents, and directors.

Thomas Jefferson Award for Public All Architecture

The American Institute of Architects grants the Thomas Jefferson Award for Public Architecture to recognize design excellence in government and infrastructure projects. Awards are presented in three categories: private sector architects who have amassed a portfolio of distinguished public facilities, public sector architects who produce quality projects within their agencies, and public officials or others who have been strong advocates for design excellence.

OBITUARIES

This chapter is a celebration of the lives and contributions of the design and preservation leaders, patrons, and advocates who died between August 1, 2009, and July 31, 2010.

Shusaku Arakawa, 73

Shusaku Arakawa, the artist and designer who preferred to use only his surname, died May 18, 2010, of unknown causes. With his wife, artist Madeline Gins, he endeavored to write, draw, paint, and design a reality that challenged the notion that one must age and imminently die. They called their philosophy "Reversible Destiny," and it manifested itself architecturally in buildings that challenged occupants and kept them from forming a comfortable, complacent attitude toward their surroundings.

In the couple's 2008 Bioscleave House (Lifespan Extending Villa) built on Long Island, floors sloped and undulated like dunes, windows were placed slightly higher or lower than expected, switches were oddly placed, more than 36 paint colors were utilized, and no doors separated interior spaces. The intent was to keep those who entered on their toes—to stimulate and to provoke. Arakawa and Gins believed comfort created anxiety because it shortens life rather than prolonging it.

Born and educated in Japan, Arakawa arrived in New York in 1961 with $14 and Marcel Duchamp's phone number in his pocket. He attended art school in the Brooklyn Museum (for the visa, not the education, he said) in 1962 and met Gins there. In their more than 40 years together, the couple collaborated on large-scale paintings and books, among many projects, operating from a SoHo loft. They later suffered large financial losses by investing with Bernard Madoff. A series of 83 large paintings called "The Mechanism of Meaning" was displayed worldwide and supported the couple's projects.

Arakawa and Gins won a competition to design housing for a 75-acre landfill in Tokyo and, though unrealized, a few of the couple's Reversible Destiny lofts were constructed there. Undeniably asserting form over function, rooms in the units are spheres, cubes, and cylinders. The project was dedicated to Helen Keller for demonstrating that reversing one's destiny is possible.

In addition to visual art, Arakawa and Gins wrote several books, including The Mechanism of Meaning (1971), Reversible Destiny: We Have Decided Not to Die (1997), and Making Dying Illegal (2006).

Jeanne-Claude Denat de Guillebon, 74

Jeanne-Claude Denat de Guillebon, known simply as Jeanne-Claude, wife of conceptual artist Christo, died November 18, 2009, from complications from a brain aneurysm suffered after a fall. The pair is responsible for some of the largest, most dramatic public art installations in the world, including covering Germany's Reichstag building in fabric, "mummifying" Paris' Pont Neuf, surrounding a string of islands off the coast of Florida in pink nylon, and erecting 7,500 fabric gates in New York's Central Park. Their projects were executed on a grand scale, first credited only to Christo but later to both. Jeanne-Claude acted as project manager for the couple's theatrical endeavors, while Christo prepared sketches, drawings, and plans that would later be sold to fund the projects. Their temporary installations often relied on millions of yards of fabric and a permitting process that could take years, if it happened at all. Together they completed 19 projects; 37 had to be abandoned because permission was refused.

Born on the same day in the same year, Jeanne-Claude most often spoke for both of them. She was a large personality, with her bright red hair, progressive fashion sense and her focused, intense energy. Introduced to each other in 1958 by Jeanne-Claude's mother, an admirer of his portraiture, she encouraged the young artist, born Christo Javacheff in Bulgaria, to expand the scope of his projects beyond painting and small sculptural installations. Soon he was wrapping cars, trees, and landscape features in textiles. The larger the project, the more publicity it generated.

With their young son, Cyril Christo, they immigrated to New York from Paris in 1964. Six of their projects were the subject of documentary films by Albert Maysles, including "Christo's Valley Curtain" in 1974, which was nominated for an Oscar. It was the first of Maysles' films about the pair's projects, documenting the planning, construction, and display of a giant orange fabric dam in Colorado. At the time of Jeanne-Claude's death, the pair was working on a plan to cover six miles of the Arkansas River with fabric.

Paul Devrouax, 67

Leading DC-area architect Paul Devrouax died March 22, 2010, of a heart attack. His firm, Devrouax & Purnell Architects, with business partner Marshall Purnell, was one of the largest black-owned firms in Washington. Their projects included the Walter E. Washington Convention Center, the Pepco Building, the Frank D. Reeves Municipal Center, and, Nationals Park with HOK Sport + Venue + Event. He had also been a past president of the National Organization of Minority Architects.

Though the firm was founded in 1978, it was 1995 before it contributed a "significant building" to the area landscape. This project, a 190,000-square-foot addition to the Freddie Mac campus in McLean, VA, marked the first time a black-led architecture firm designed a headquarters for a Fortune 500 company. Though not one to invoke the issue of race, Devrouax did tell the Washington Post, "We went to all the meetings and got to know all the movers and shakers. But our phone didn't ring."

Through the years, the firm gained traction and did design many prominent spaces in Washington, including the underground garage and luxury boxes at Verizon Center, an information center at Howard University, the Studio Theater, and the African American Civil War Memorial, as well as historical renovations and some international projects. In 1998 it was awarded the design of a new building for Pepco, a large area electric services provider. Erected between Mies van der Rohe's Martin Luther King Jr. Library and the 19th-century Patent Office Building, now home of the National Portrait Gallery, the modern glass, limestone, granite and stainless steel Pepco Building was hailed for bringing freshness to Ninth Street. Washington Post architecture critic Benjamin Forgey wrote it was "as sure-handed a piece of architectural urbanism as Washington has seen in many a moon."

A native of New Orleans, Devrouax was living with his uncle in Los Angeles when prominent black residential architect Paul R. Williams gave a talk at his high school. He returned to Louisiana and studied architecture at Southern University at Baton Rouge. Following graduation, he worked for a subsidiary of Westinghouse, practiced briefly in Miami, and set up shop permanently in DC in 1973. He was active in many civic and professional organizations and was named a fellow of the American Institute of Architects. Devrouax took great pride in mentoring young architects; former Devrouax & Purnell employees have started over 14 firms.

The firm's other founder, Marshall Purnell, served as 2008 AIA National President, the first African-American to do so in the organization's history.

Joan Goody, 73

Joan Goody, a founding partner of Boston's Goody, Clancy & Associates, died of cancer September 8, 2009. A graduate of the Harvard Graduate School of Design, she became not only one of the first leading women in the field, but a prolific and sensitive designer and civic leader whose many projects dot the Boston cityscape.

The former Joan Edelman married architect and MIT professor Marvin Goody and joined his firm in 1960, becoming a partner in 1968. He died in 1980, and under her leadership the firm grew to over 100 employees with a long and varied project list. In an interview with the Boston Globe, Goody chose a few of her favorites, including Boston's Harbor Point, where she led the transformation of a troubled housing project into a successful mixed-income neighborhood. She also cited the restoration of H.H. Richardson's Trinity Church at Copley Square in Boston; a federal courthouse in Wheeling, WV; the Salomon Center for Teaching at Brown University; and Heaton Court, an affordable housing project in Stockbridge, MA. Recently the firm was selected as lead designer for the transformation of St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Washington, DC, into new headquarters for the Department of Homeland Security.

Goody eschewed showy design and practiced architecture that worked for the greatest social benefit, focusing early on public and urban housing. In the 1970s, she taught at Harvard, and she was active many years in Boston civic organizations. She chaired the Boston Civic Design Commission for many years, reviewing every major building design proposal presented to the city. She also served as president of Boston's Saturday Club, a group that met to enjoy lunch and lively discussions on a number of topics.

Realizing she had a responsibility to help mentor younger women trying to enter the design profession, Goody helped found an advocacy group called Women Architects, Landscape Architects and Planners (WALAP) in 1970. In a room of over 100 women at that time, Goody was one of only two principals.

Goody married poet and writer Peter Davidson in 1984. He was editor of Atlantic Monthly for many years and published numerous books of his own poetry. Though he died in 2004, Goody remained close to his children and grandchildren. She died in the converted Beacon Hill carriage house where she lived many years.

Bruce Graham, 84

Bruce Graham, designer of Chicago's iconic John Hancock Center and Sears Tower (now Willis Tower), died March 6, 2010, of complications from Alzheimer's disease. He led the Chicago office of Skidmore, Owings & Merrill from the 1960s through the 1980s and has been called the most important Chicago architect of his generation. With a staff that included Gordon Bunshaft, Walter Netsch, and famed structural engineer Fazlur Khan, SOM was a design powerhouse during this period, responsible for prominent contributions to the built environment all over the world.

Graham is himself responsible not only for the Sears Tower, the world's tallest building for many years and still the tallest in the US, and the Hancock Center ("Big John" to locals) but for projects in London, Barcelona, Egypt, Korea, Guatemala, Houston, Los Angeles, Boston, Atlanta, Kansas City, Milwaukee, Wichita, Nashville, Tulsa, Madison, and many other locales. Famed for his gruff, steely countenance, Graham is of course best known for his tall buildings in Chicago. Their revolutionary design, engineered by Khan, placed the structural supporting elements on the outside, greatly reducing construction costs and providing vast open interiors. The Hancock Center especially, with its hefty exterior X bracing, defined the "muscular" style for which Chicago became known. And in its wake, a distinguished area of tall buildings and commerce now graces a formerly bleak section of the city.

Born in Colombia to a Canadian banker father and a Peruvian mother and raised in Puerto Rico, Graham's first language was Spanish. He arrived in the US to study engineering, but a stint in the Navy during World War II interrupted his studies. When he returned to school he changed his field of study to architecture and graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1948. His first wife was from Chicago, so Graham headed there and he sought counsel from Mies van der Rohe, who advised him to apprentice with Holabird, Root and Burgee. Graham did so from 1949 to 1951 and then departed for the growing firm of Skidmore, Owings & Merrill. By 1960 he was a design partner and would remain in leadership at SOM through his retirement in 1989.

His 1957 Inland Steel building—the first significant office building constructed in downtown Chicago since the Great Depression—featured the use of structural columns on the building's perimeter and a separate adjoining tower for elevators and other services to open up the interiors. It was named an official landmark by the City of Chicago in 1998, its trademark stainless steel exterior an icon of mid-century design on West Monroe Street. Similarly, the Hancock Center won the AIA's 25-Year Award, presented to a significant, successful building over 25 years old, in 1999.

With William Hartmann, another partner at SOM, Graham developed the Chicago 21 Plan of 1973 for the Chicago Central Area Committee, a group of business leaders that Graham himself led in 1980. It called for alterations and additions to Chicago's lakefront as the city entered the 21st century, including rebuilding the dilapidated Navy Pier into a tourist destination and the creation of the museum campus—projects that had a transformative effect on the city. In the mid-1980s, however, a plan he helped develop with other architects for a 1992 Chicago World's Fair failed to come to fruition as local governmental support and objections by community activists to the 500 planned acres of infill along the lake doomed the project.

Following retirement, Graham and his second wife Jane, a former interior architect at SOM, established the practice of Graham and Graham. She died in 2004.

Lawrence Halprin, 93

Landscape architect and environmental planner Lawrence Halprin died October 25, 2009, of complications from a fall. Based in the San Francisco Bay area, Halprin designed some of the country's most famous public spaces, including Ghirardelli Square in San Francisco and the Franklin Delano Roosevelt Memorial in Washington, DC.

He was married to a dancer, the former Anna Schuman, and described his blend of modernism, environmentalism, and movement as a choreography. It was a blending of materials, including concrete, and attention to how places should influence the interaction of people, predominantly in urban settings, that distinguished his work. Before committing to a design, he often held a workshop with different constituencies—artists, community activists, clients, developers—to gauge emotional responses to different places.

His many projects included the plazas and grand fountains of Portland, OR; Seattle Freeway Park; Nicollet Mall in Minneapolis; and the Approach to Yosemite Falls in Yosemite National Park, dedicated in 2005. One of his most prominent projects was not an urban area but a residential development on the California coast that required great environmental sensitivity, Sea Ranch. For this Sonoma County development of 1,500 homes on 5,000 acres, Halprin preserved and enhanced the natural features of the site, planting more than a half-million trees. It was the subject of his 1995 book The Sea

Ranch...Diary of an Idea. Halprin wrote nearly a dozen books during the course of his career on projects and the process of design.

Born in Brooklyn, Halprin's mother took him to Palestine in 1933 to work on a kibbutz near Haifa. He returned to study plant sciences at Cornell University, and then he did his master's degree work in horticulture at the University of Wisconsin, where he met his wife. A trip to Taliesin in Spring Green, WI, at her suggestion, inspired Halprin's interest in design, and he then pursued a second bachelor's degree from Harvard's Graduate School of Design. During World War II he served on the destroyer USS Morris in the Pacific, and was injured when a kamikaze attack destroyed the ship. He was sent to San Francisco for leave, and set up his practice there.

Halprin's many awards included the Thomas Jefferson Foundation Medal in Architecture, the AIA Gold Medal for Distinguished Achievement, the National Medal of Arts, and the Design Medal from the American Society of American Architects.

Robert Lautman, 85

Architectural photographer Robert Lautman died of pancreatic cancer on October 20, 2009. Based in Washington, DC, Lautman's meticulous photographs of commercial buildings, institutions, and residences earned him a Gold Medal for Architectural Photography from the American Institute of Architects in 1973. He is perhaps best known for his images of the Washington National Cathedral, which he documented for over 40 years.

Born in Butte, MT, Lautman, a twice-decorated photographer during World War II, worked in New York for several years and then settled in Washington in 1948. He opened his studio just as modernism was creeping into American design, and he had many loyal modernist clients. Developer James Rouse sent him across the country in 1960, and he worked regularly with architects Hugh Newell Jacobsen, Charles M. Goodman, and Arthur H. Keyes. Lautman's work began appearing regularly in magazines like House and Garden, House Beautiful, Architectural Digest, Elle, Smithsonian, and Architectural Record. He carried pole-climbing equipment with him and sometimes shot from a construction crane. He left no detail unattended, from the choice of camera or lens to waiting until the light moved into a perfect position.

Lautman shot a series of 19th-century-style photos of Monticello for documentary filmmaker Ken Burns' PBS series on Thomas Jefferson, and those photos became the subject of a book. When the old Pension Building in Washington, DC, faced destruction, his series of pro-bono photographs of the structure is credited with helping save it. The building now houses the National Building Museum, to which Lautman donated over 30,000 of his prints and negatives in 2006.

William Mitchell, 65

Former MIT School of Architecture and Planning dean William (Bill) Mitchell died June 11, 2010, after a long battle with cancer. An architect and urban theorist, he founded and led the Smart Cities research group at the MIT Media Lab and oversaw a $1 billion building campaign on the campus.

Mitchell's work with the Smart Cities group explored the relationship between cities, people, and digital technology. Theorizing that cities are becoming smarter—more aware of the activities of their inhabitants—he looked for ways to improve the urban experience for residents and the environment. He was particularly interested in transportation, and he helped develop the CityCar, a folding stacking electric vehicle with all essential mechanical systems housed in its wheels. His lab also produced designs for a folding electric RoboScooter and GreenWheel, a design to turn an ordinary bike into an electric-assisted one.

As dean of architecture and planning, he served as advisor to then MIT President Charles M. Vest on an ambitious building plan, adding nearly 1 million square feet of space to the university's campus. The project included five buildings by some of the world's leading designers: Frank Gehry's Stata Center, Kevin Roche's Zesiger Sports and Fitness Center, Steven Holl's Simmons Hall, Charles Correa's Brain and Cognitive Sciences Complex, and Fumihiko Maki's Media Lab Complex. Mitchell wrote about the process of realizing the five buildings—from conception to completion—in his 2007 book Imagining MIT.

A native of Australia, Mitchell joined the MIT faculty in 1992 after serving as director of the Master in Design Studies Program at the Harvard Graduate School of Design. He had also been head of the architecture/urban design program at UCLA's Graduate School of Architecture and Urban Planning, and had taught previously at Yale, Carnegie-Mellon and Cambridge universities.

His many books included Reinventing the Automobile (2010) with Christopher Borroni-Bird and Lawrence Burns; World's Greatest Architect: Making, Meaning and Network Culture (2008), and 1977's seminal work Computer-Aided Architectural Design. Mitchell had been a leading early voice in favor of computer-aided design; by integrating it into the university curricula where he taught, he is credited with playing a large part in its adoption.

Following undergraduate study in Australia, Mitchell received a Master of Environmental Design from Yale and a Master of Arts from Cambridge University. The recipient of six honorary doctorates, he was a fellow of both the Royal Australian Institute of Architects and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

John Carl Warnecke, 91

To those of a certain age, John Carl (Jack) Warnecke is remembered as "Kennedy's architect," the designer who helped shape the District of Columbia and plan John F. Kennedy's grave at Arlington Cemetery. To a younger generation, he is the man revealed to have been romantically involved with Jacqueline Kennedy following her husband's assassination, as reported in outlets from People magazine to TV newsmagazine 60 Minutes. Warnecke, whose San Francisco firm was once the largest in the US, died in April 17, 2010, of complications from pancreatic cancer at his ranch in Healdsburg, CA.

The son of architect Carl I. Warnecke, Jack rose to prominence as a leading contextualist. As a Stanford University undergraduate, Warnecke played left tackle on their undefeated "Wow Boys" team of 1941. He then enrolled in the Harvard Graduate School of Design where he studied under Walter Gropius, completing the three-year course of study in one year. After a short stint with his father's firm, Warnecke established his own practice in the early 1950s and began designing acclaimed schools and university projects. Later, his 1950s design for a new United States Embassy in Bangkok, though never realized, was widely praised for its unique blending of Western and indigenous styles. He similarly fused modernism with 19th century Hawaiian design in his plan for a civic center and capitol building for what was then a new state.

Warnecke's work with the Kennedys began in the early 1960s when he was asked by President Kennedy to redesign Lafayette Square, a historic area across from the White House. A plan previously submitted by another firm that called for the razing of historic buildings there to construct modern office buildings spurred Mrs. Kennedy to persuade her husband that a new plan should be developed. Over the course of the next decade, Warnecke's design took shape, preserving the historic row houses and integrating two office buildings—the National Courts Building and the New Executive Office Building—in courtyards behind them.

These buildings reflect the context-sensitive approach that was a common thread in his work. Warnecke was a pioneer of the concept of urban contextualism in which he believed that a building could relate to its neighbors and the general locale through its architectural details, historical overtones, and climatic considerations. By integrating these principles into his designs, Warnecke strove to create visual harmony by evoking a sense of place rather than producing buildings that dominate and exclude their surroundings.

President Kennedy appointed Warnecke to the Commission of Fine Arts in 1963, a body that approved all federal building projects in Washington. He had developed a new master plan for the Naval Academy at Annapolis and was working with the president on early designs for his presidential library when Kennedy was killed. He was then called upon to design the Kennedy gravesite at Arlington. Warnecke's design for the memorial was unveiled in 1964 at the National Gallery of Art, and the final project was completed in 1967. Critically acclaimed, his plan called for a four-part landscape design, leading down to a grave platform with the Eternal Flame at its center.

By the mid 1970s, Warnecke's firm, John Carl Warnecke & Associates, was the nation's largest with offices in San Francisco, Los Angeles, New York, Boston, DC, and Honolulu and was responsible for many diverse, large-scale projects of the era. These included the AT&T Long Lines Building in Manhattan; the Soviet Embassy and Hart Senate Office Building, both in DC; and the South Terminal at Logan Airport in Boston. He began to scale back his practice in the late 1970s, eventually retiring to his picturesque ranch in Alexander Valley in Sonoma County where he grew a variety of grapes that were used to produce many award-winning wines.

Frank Williams, 73

Frank Williams, an architect of many New York tall buildings, died February 25, 2010, from esophageal cancer. Though not a marquee name, Williams quietly designed or collaborated on over 20 high-rise buildings in Manhattan, including Trump Place and 515 Park Avenue. He had a reputation for good quality and good contemporary design (i.e., not too Modern) that made for good relationships with clients, mostly developers.

Born in Georgia, Williams attended the University of California, Berkeley, and then received his master's degree from the Harvard Graduate School of Design before locating permanently in New York. He taught at Columbia University four years before opening his own firm, Frank Williams and Partners Architects. During this period, Williams was a consultant to the Regional Plan Association in New York City and, with Rai Okamoto, authored 1969's Urban Design Manhattan, an influential study on managing growth in Midtown Manhattan.

During the lean years of the 1970s in New York, Williams worked abroad in Iran before receiving a commission in 1983 (with Theodore Liebman) from developer William Zeckendorf Sr. for the design of the Columbia, an apartment house at 96th and Broadway. Williams continued to design high-rise luxury apartment towers for Zeckendorf, as well as work for Donald Trump, Madison Equities, and the Monian Group. At the time of his death, Williams' Mercury City tower in Moscow was nearing completion, and towers in Dubai and Seoul were on the drawing board. In New York, Williams was also responsible for designing the W Hotel at Times Square, the residential portion of World Wide Plaza on Ninth Avenue, and the Four Seasons Hotel on East 57th Street in collaboration with I.M. Pei. He is the subject of a 1995 monograph by Michael J. Crosbie, The Architecture of Frank Williams.

Raimund Abraham, 77

Austrian architect and educator Raimund Abraham died March 3, 2010, in a car accident following a lecture at the Southern California Institute of Architecture, where he was a visiting faculty member. He also taught and lectured at Pratt Institute and Cooper Union. Renown for his drawing, Abraham was responsible for several significant buildings, including the 2002 avant-modern Austrian Cultural Forum on East 52nd Street in New York.

Günter Behnisch, 88

Günter Behnisch, a prominent German architect credited with helping reshape the face of post-war Germany, died July 12, 2010. His airy modern buildings included the Munich Olympic Stadium (with engineer Frei Otto) for the 1972 games; the 1992 Plenary Complex of the German Parliament in Bonn, Germany; 2003's Genzyme Center in Cambridge, MA; and 2005's Centre for Cellular and Bimolecular Research in Toronto, Canada. He opened his office in Stuttgart in 1952, and it evolved into Behnisch & Partner, which dissolved in 2008.

Aaron Benjamin, 78

Urban planner and housing specialist Aaron Benjamin died June 13, 2010, of complications from pneumonia. He worked 22 years for the US State Department's Agency for International Development (USAID) as the Housing and Urban Development Officer. He was involved worldwide, often following a disaster, in reconstruction, export development, and disaster preparedness response programming. He received degrees in urbanism and city planning and then worked in the architectural offices of Victor Gruen and Skidmore, Owings & Merrill. He served on the New York City Housing and Development Board and was the director of planning and development for the City of Elizabeth, NJ.

George Bissell, 82

California architect George Bissell died on January 2, 2010, of complications from lymphoma. His many California projects included the San Francisco Solano Catholic Church in Rancho Santa Margarita, Our Lady of the Rosary Cathedral in San Bernardino, and a redesign of the Bowers Museum in Santa Ana. He was also active in the American Institute of Architects, where he was also a fellow, serving as president of the Orange County chapter, president of the AIA California Council, and director of the AIA National Board. He received a lifetime achievement award from the AIA California Council in 2002.

Frances L. Brody, 93

California philanthropist and art collector Frances Brody died November 12, 2009. The daughter of advertising magnate Arthur Lasker, Brody was a founding benefactor of the Los Angeles County Museum of Art and a guiding patron of The Huntington in San Marino, CA. Encouraged to collect art by her family, Brody helped found and later became president of the UCLA Art Council in the early 1950s, and helped bring a ground-breaking Matisse retrospective to UCLA as well as an important Pablo Picasso exhibit in honor of his 80th birthday.

Leslie Buck, 87

Leslie Buck, a paper cup company executive who designed the iconic "Anthora" Greekmotif cardboard coffee cup, died April 26, 2010, of complications from Parkinson's disease. The cup, with its Greek key trim and "We Are Happy To Serve You" message, is a cultural icon as synonymous with New York as the Statue of Liberty or Grand Central Station. It sold hundreds of millions annually and is still available, though no longer a standard catalog item.

Pierre Cabrol, 84

Pierre Cabrol, an architect with Los Angeles firm Welton Becket and Associates died October 8, 2009. The firm's iconic projects included the Capitol Records Building, the Pan Pacific Auditorium, and the Cinerama Dome, a project that Cabrol led. While with Welton Becket, he worked as a designer on many projects, including the General Electric Pavilion at the 1964 New York World's Fair and the Grand Ole Opry House in Nashville, TN. A native of France and graduate of the École des Beaux-Arts in Paris, Cabrol attended the Massachusetts Institute of Technology on a scholarship, studying under Buckminster Fuller.

Jack Ladd Carr, 84

Jack Carr, the first planning director of Annapolis, MD, died January 10, 2010, of complications following a heart attack. He joined the city in 1961 and later was a planner for the Roman Catholic Diocese of Maryland. In the mid-1960s, he was a senior manager of statewide historical, cultural, and art programs for the state; in the mid-1980s he was named deputy director of all programs concerning the historical heritage of the State of Maryland. A native of Philadelphia, Carr was a World War II veteran and a graduate of St. John's College and Temple University.

Eduardo Catalano, 92

Argentinean architect and professor Eduardo Catalano died January 28, 2010. Born and educated in Buenos Aires, he was awarded scholarships to study at the University of Pennsylvania and later the Harvard Graduate School of Design under Walter Gropius. He taught at North Carolina State University School and then the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for almost 20 years. Among his many projects he is best known for the modernist home he designed for himself in Raleigh, NC, in 1954 that was razed in 2001. The home, with its innovative 4,000-square-foot undulating parabolic roof over a glass-walled structure, was named "House of the Decade" in the 1950s by House and Home magazine.

W.I.B. Crealock, 89

Yacht designer, sailor, and author William Ion Belton Crealock died September 29, 2009, after breaking his hip. In his studio in Newport Beach, CA, Crealock meticulously crafted by hand mostly fiberglass boats of every size—from dinghies to yachts—for boating enthusiasts, including many members of Hollywood's elite. His Pacific Seacraft 37 design was inducted into the American Sailboat Hall of Fame in 2002. Born in Great Britain, Crealock studied nautical architecture at Glasgow University and worked in the Glasgow shipyard during World War II. Following numerous sailing adventures in such exotic places as the South Pacific, he settled in California.

Joe Deal, 62

Photographer Joe Deal died June 18, 2010, from bladder cancer. He had been a founder of the New Topographies photography movement as well as a university professor. Concerned with the changing American landscape, his artistic portraits of scenic vistas marred by new tract homes, smog, and other indications of man's relentless sprawl were a highlight of his early career. He taught at numerous schools, including the University of California, Riverside; Washington University in St. Louis, where he was dean of the art school; and the Rhode Island School of Design, where he served as provost. He is also known for documenting the construction of the Getty Center; his decade's worth of photos hung inside the facility when it opened in 1997.

Vernon Phillip Deines, 80

Vernon Deines, a cofounder and early chair of the American Planning Association's Small Town and Rural Planning Division, died March 30, 2010. A professor at Kansas State University for 40 years, he taught architecture, mechanical engineering, and regional planning. He was also a founding member of the APA and the American Institute of Certified Planners, and was involved in the process that eventually resulted in the APA/ACSP accreditation program for planning schools.

David Dillon, 68

Longtime Dallas Morning News architecture critic David Dillon died June 3, 2010, of a heart attack. He had been with the paper for 25 years. A native New Englander, he also taught architecture at Amherst College and the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. Dillon was the author of over 200 articles in such publications as Architectural Record, Domus, and Harvard Design Review. He also wrote more than a dozen books, including Dallas Architecture: 1936–1986, The Architecture of O'Neil Ford, and Extending the Legacy: Planning the Nation's Capital for the 21st Century.

Alfred Eckersberg, 89

Alfred Eckersberg, a leading Chicago-area planner who helped lead the city's 1950s urban renewal, died January 10, 2010. A native of the city, Eckersberg received a master's degree in economic planning from the University of Chicago and served as senior planner and assistant executive director of the Chicago Plan Commission as well as director of planning for the Chicago Conservation Board. An expert in real estate analysis and projections, Eckersberg later became senior vice president of the Real Estate Research Corporation and a principal in CASL, consulting on many real estate developments worldwide.

Barry Elbasani, 69

Barry Elbasani, a founder of ELS Architecture and Urban Design, died June 29, 2010, from brain cancer. Through the years, ELS gained a reputation as leading planners and designers of projects that helped revitalize urban spaces. Working with the Rouse Company through the 1980s and 1990s, ELS designed the Grand Avenue in Milwaukee; the mixeduse Pioneer Place in downtown Portland, OR; the Shops at Arizona Center in Phoenix, AZ; and the Village of Merrick Park in Coral Gables, FL. The firm also created the master plan for Summerlin, NV, and designed the Denver Pavilions in Colorado. Elbasani was also a lecturer at the University of California, Berkeley's College of Environmental Design.

David Van Fraser, 79

Atlanta, Georgia, architect David Van Fraser died May 3, 2010, of prostate cancer. After studying at Virginia Tech and Auburn University, he settled in Atlanta and spent many years in private practice there, contributing to many of the city's most prominent buildings and many area schools. He became director of architectural services for Norfolk

Southern Railway in 1978, supervising a staff of 11 that designed hundreds of projects for the company across 21 states.

Lane Greene, 74

Leading Georgia preservationist and architect Lane Greene died December 20, 2009. Over the course of his 30-year career, he was responsible for the preservation of numerous homes, churches, businesses, and community buildings throughout Georgia, particularly in the historic city of Madison and in surrounding Morgan County. He was a graduate of the Georgia Institute of Technology and worked for many Atlanta-area architecture firms before establishing his own practice in 1978. He is credited with the preservation and/or restoration of numerous structures in Georgia, including the First A.M.E. Church and Morton Theater in Athens; the Crawford W. Long House and Madison County Courthouse in Danielsville; and the Wren's Nest, home of Uncle Remus author Joel Chandler Harris, in Atlanta.

Henry T. Hopkins, 81

Henry Hopkins, a former director of the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art and later an arts leader in Southern California, died September 28, 2009, from complications caused by a brain tumor. A graduate of the School of the Art Institute of Chicago, Hopkins began his arts career in 1961 as assistant curator and an educator at the Los Angeles County Museum of History, Science and Art (now the Los Angeles County Museum of Art). He relocated to Texas in the late 1960s, serving as the head of the Modern Art Museum of Fort Work for six years, and then became director of the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art for eight years. He later went on to chair the UCLA art department and then become director of the Hammer Museum.

Stephen Kanner, 54

Stephen Kanner, a Los Angeles architect and cofounder of the Los Angeles Architecture and Design Museum died July 2, 2010, of cancer. Among his award-winning designs are the Harvard Apartments in Koreatown and the In-N-Out Burger on Gayley Avenue in Westwood that is a tribute to 1950s jet-age architecture. Inspired by a museum he had seen in Finland, in 2001 he cofounded the Architecture and Design museum in Los Angeles to promote architecture and design.

Claude Lévi-Strauss, 100

The French anthropologist, considered by many to be the father of modern anthropology, Claude Lévi-Strauss, died of natural causes on October 30, 2009. His theory of structuralism—which argues that common features exist within human societies—provided a level playing field for Western civilizations and so-called primitive societies, which he cautioned were not societies without advanced thought processes but rather were "societies without writing." The implications of his theories to architecture are essential to understanding the universal importance of honest contextual buildings built with indigenous materials expressive of a particular culture. "One of the giants of the 20th century" (dubbed by UNESCO Director-General Koichiro Matsuura), Lévi-Strauss studied law and philosophy at the Sorbonne and went on to teach at the newly created University of São Paulo while visiting the Amazon interior and living among various tribes for four years while formulating his groundbreaking theories about universal human principles of existence and habitation.

Barbara Lukermann, 79

Planner Barbara Lukermann, an educator at the Humphrey Institute at the University of Minnesota, died April 23, 2009, from cancer. A former chair of the American Institute of Certified Planners, she served on the AICP committee that developed the profession's first certification exam. Her expertise was tapped numerous times at the local, national, and international levels, including work on the National Academy of Sciences steering committee for the Cooperative Agreement with the Navajo Nation, as a delegate for the Municipal Planning Board of China, and as a trainer for USAID environmental programs in Romania. She received the American Planning Association's Award for Distinguished Leadership by a Professional Planner in 2004.

Donal McLaughlin, 102

Donal McLaughlin, an architect and graphic designer whose design for the United Nations logo has become one of the most recognized symbols in the world, died September 27, 2009, of esophageal cancer. Working as the head of graphics for the Office of Strategic Services (the precursor to the CIA), McLaughlin led a team charged with putting together the printed elements for the 1945 United Nations Conference on International Organization in San Francisco, including the emblem that eventually became the UN's logo. Trained as an architect, he collaborated with Walter Dorwin Teague and Raymond Loewy on exhibits for the 1939 World's Fair and designed a bottle for Pepsi-Cola and the interiors of Tiffany & Company's Fifth Avenue store before joining the OSS to develop visual material for the military.

Jack Meltzer, 88

Urban planner Jack Meltzer died May 5, 2010, from complications from emphysema. He helped plan and design the controversial 1950s urban renewal of Hyde Park, the South Side Chicago neighborhood that surrounds the University of Chicago. As director of planning for the South East Chicago Commission, he was charged with reshaping the majority of Hyde Park in what was widely recognized as an effort to keep minorities out of the area, including demolishing older structures and planning new development in their wake. A graduate of Wayne State University, Meltzer later started his own urban planning firm. He had also been chair of the public affairs program at the University of Chicago's School of Social Service Administration.

Bitte Bertilson Miller, 75

Bitte Bertilson Miller, Swedish artist and long-time companion, caregiver, and confidant to architect John Carl Warnecke, died July 2, 2010, in Sonoma County, CA. While still mourning Warnecke's death only 10 weeks after his passing, she suffered a ruptured aortic aneurysm. As an accomplished artist she excelled in many mediums—painting, ceramics, fibers, sculpting. An award-winning vintner and gourmet cook, she always selflessly gave of her time and talents to Warnecke's fellow architect/friends during their relationship spanning two decades.

Allyn Morris, 87

Allyn Morris, a Southern California modernist architect, died August 1, 2009. Though not widely known, his many residential projects are products of a unique vision. His first residential design was 1956's concrete, glass and steel Brubeck House in Eagle Rock, CA, whose multileveled interlocking spaces created a dynamic effect not found in most modernist architecture of the period. He also designed numerous houses and apartments throughout Los Angeles, including the Murakami house and his own studio-home. His work was photographed by Julius Shulman and Marvin Rand and included in the Guide to Architecture in Los Angeles & Southern California.

Barbara Morris, 90

Barbara Morris, a curator at Britain's Victoria and Albert Museum, died July 15, 2009. An artist, she joined the V&A circulation department in 1947 and under Peter Floud helped organize the 1952 exhibit "Victorian and Edwardian Decorative Arts." The program helped establish the museum as a leader in the field of Victorian design, and she later became an expert in the Arts and Crafts movement and led the museum's department of ceramics, retiring in 1978. She then worked six years for Sotheby's as part of its educational department, and finally joined the team of experts on the BBC's Antiques Roadshow.

Kemper Nomland Jr., 90

Southern California architect Kemper Nomland died December 25, 2009, of natural causes. He designed Case Study House No. 10 with his father; they formed their firm Nomland & Nomland after World War II. Their Case Study home, part of a program sponsored by Arts & Architecture magazine that promoted the design of modernist postwar housing, was constructed in 1947 in Pasadena. Nomland later designed a home for actress Jane Russell as well as over a dozen others in the Los Angeles area.

Bob Noorda, 82

Bob Noorda, a leading mid-century graphic designer who brought the clean look of modernism to corporate communications as well as the New York City subway system died January 11, 2010, from complications from a fall. With Massimo Vignelli, among others, he was a founding partner of the international graphics firm Unimark International. A native of the Netherlands who spent his career in Milan, Noorda and his firm were hired to redesign the look of the signage and wayfinding system for the New York City subway in 1966. Their clean designs, use of sans serif type, and color-coded markings remain largely intact today. Noorda also briefly led design for the Italian tire maker Pirelli and later worked on signage for the Milan and Naples subway systems in Italy and in São Paulo, Brazil.

Perry Norton

Perry Norton, a leading planner, teacher, and author, died December 23, 2009. He was the first full-time executive director of the American Institute of Planners, a predecessor of the American Planning Association. He had also been a member of the commission of the American Institute of Certified Planners; he was inducted into the AICP's first class of fellows in 1999. Norton was a frequent contributor to the urban planning website Cyburbia.org, where many of his writings on planning are posted.

Monica Pidgeon, 95

Monica Pidgeon, former editor of the British architecture magazine Architectural Design and a strong voice for modernism in the UK, died September 17, 2009. With Theo Crosby, later a cofounder of the design firm Pentagram, Pidgeon is credited with transforming the magazine into a thought leader in the design and art worlds. The pair also collaborated on the book An Anthology of Houses (1960), featuring cutting-edge modernist designs of the 1950s. In 1979 she began interviewing well-known architects and designers, and in recent years she made that material available online at the Pidgeon Digital Archive.

Robert S. Reich, 97

Robert Reich, the longtime Louisiana State University professor who is regarded as the "father of landscape architecture in Louisiana," died July 31, 2010. Known to friends and colleagues as "Doc," Reich joined the LSU faculty in 1941; intending to stay for a year, he retired from full-time teaching in 1983 when he reached the university's mandatory retirement age of 70. He founded the school's world-class landscape architecture program in 1946; it was renamed the Dr. Robert S. Reich School of Landscape Architecture in 2007. He was awarded LSU's highest teaching award, Alumni Professor, and won the American Society of Landscape Architect's ALSA Medal in 1992. He was the recipient of the ALSA's Jot D. Carpenter Teaching Medal for sustained and significant contributions to landscape architecture education in 2005.

Alan H. Rider, 79

Architect Alan Rider died May 25, 2010, of congestive heart failure. He had been an associate with John Carl Warnecke & Associates in the 1960s, and worked on many significant projects for the firm, including the memorial for President John F. Kennedy at Arlington National Cemetery. A resident of the Georgetown area of Washington, DC, Rider also helped develop a master plan for the US Naval Academy in Annapolis and the hangar for Air Force One at Andrews Air Force Base. He later joined the firm of Daniel, Mann, Johnson & Mendenhall where he contributed to renovations at the Pentagon as well as buildings at the Naval Academy and Howard University.

John B. Rogers, 85

John Rogers, a cofounder of Denver-based architecture firm RNL, died July 12, 2010, in his sleep. His wife Bette preceded him in death by 14 hours. Rogers and Jerry Nagel founded a firm in 1961, and five years later merged with another firm to form Rogers Nagel Langhart Architects and Engineers. Today RNL has over 200 employees working from offices in Denver, Los Angeles, Phoenix, and Dubai. Rogers' many designs included the Colorado History Museum, the Rocky Mountain News building, and Colorado's Ocean Journey aquarium. He was elected to the AIA College of Fellows in 1979 and was named Architect of the Year by AIA Colorado in 1991.

James Rossant, 81

Architect and planner James Rossant died December 15, 2009, at his home in Normandy, France, of complications of leukemia. His many projects include the planning of Reston, VA, and the 1966 master plan of lower Manhattan that led to the building of Battery Park City. He also taught architecture at the Pratt Institute for 35 years and urban design at

New York University. His first significant project was the co-design of 1962's Butterfield House, a modern apartment building in a Greenwich Village neighborhood of historic townhomes. It was named one of the 10 best post-war apartment buildings in New York by architecture critic Paul Goldberger. His partner for that project was William J. Conklin, with whom he practiced until 1995. Their design for Reston, a city of 75,000 outside DC for developer Robert E. Simon, included planning commercial and residential districts, landscaping, recreation, and culture. He was a graduate of the University of Florida and the Harvard Graduate School of Design where he studied under Walter Gropius.

Daniel Rowen, 56

Daniel Rowen, a New York architect with a client list that included hotelier lan Schrager, art dealer Larry Gagosian, and Martha Stewart Living Omnimedia, died November 17, 2009, of neuroendocrine cancer. A protégé of modernist Charles Gwathmey, he formed a firm with Frank Lupo, another former Gwathmey employee, called New York Architects. He later formed his own firm, Daniel Rowan Architect. Whether designing an all-white Park Avenue apartment; the expansive headquarters for Martha Stewart's company with its combination of small, well-appointed workspaces and large loft-like areas; or the office and apartment of Schrager, Rowen's work was always in demand.

David Sarkisyan, 62

David Sarkisyan, director of the Shchusev State Museum of Architecture in Moscow, Russia, and a champion of that city's architectural treasures, died January 7, 2010, of lymphoma. A former physiologist, pharmacologist, and film director, Sarkisyan embarked on his "fourth life," heading the museum, in early 2000. With nearly all of its state funding cut and its infrastructure crumbling, Sarkisyan became a champion, not only of his own institution but of Moscow's many historical buildings, many of which met the wrecking ball despite his efforts. He planned many successful shows at the museum and brought the work of some of the world's best contemporary architects to Russia. Nicolai Ouroussoff writing in the New York Times said of Sarkisyan: "He was an extraordinary if anachronistic example of what a single person at the helm of a crumbling institution with few financial resources could accomplish—even in a world that seemed bent on silencing him."

Mario L. Schack, 81

Longtime Baltimore architect, educator, and design critic Mario Schack died June 17, 2010. He had been an architecture professor and department chair at Cornell University and a partner in several Baltimore-based firms, including RTKL Associates; Marks, Cooke, Schack and Thomas (now Marks, Thomas Architects), and MLS Associates. He had served on several panels charged with reviewing building proposals for the city of Baltimore, including the Design Advisory Panel, the Architectural Review Board, and the Urban Design and Architecture Review Panel. As a designer, Schack's projects included the Charles Center South office tower in Charles Center in Baltimore, the Albin O. Kuhn Library on the University of Maryland campus, and the Geological Sciences building at Cornell. He was named an AIA Fellow in 1980.

Der Scutt, 75

Der Scutt, the designer of Manhattan's Trump Tower, died March 14, 2010, of liver failure. He was a developer's architect, and his many New York projects included One Astor Plaza overlooking Times Square; 100 United Nations Plaza Tower; and the Corinthian at First Avenue and 37th Street, designed with Michael Schimenti. In recent years Scutt redesigned facades for older buildings, often replacing masonry with glass curtain walls. It was his early 1980s addition to Fifth Avenue for Donald Trump—a bronzed glass modern tower that brought new energy to its stodgy block—for which Scutt is best known. Before founding his own firm in 1981, Scutt worked for Kahn & Jacobs and then for Swanke Hayden Connell Architects. Following graduation from Yale's graduate architecture program, he ran the office of Paul Rudolph, then dean of the program, for several years.

Karle Seydel, 59

Denver architect and urban activist Karle Seydel died May 12, 2010. He is credited with having an instrumental role in the siting of Coors Field and for his efforts to revitalize the neighborhoods around the stadium. He advocated for better lighting and street beautification for the lower downtown area of the city and worked to preserve some of the older and sometimes neglected buildings there. Seydel operated his own design firm, Urban Options.

Dennis Sharp, 76

British architect, writer, and educator Dennis Sharp died May 6, 2010. He was a practicing designer with a keen interest in British modernism, environmental design, and professional activism. A graduate of the Architectural Association in London, Sharp remained involved with the school for the rest of his life as a vice president and a teacher. His firm, Dennis Sharp Architects, was responsible for many historic renovation projects, including Norman Foster's Renault Distribution Centre in Swindon, Wiltshire. Sharp also designed Strawdance studio, the least-expensive national lottery-funded project to date in the UK, using straw bales, timber, and clear plastic. He was also the author of many books and articles on British architects and 20th-century buildings.

James Stageberg, 85

James Stageberg, a leading Minnesota architect and longtime University of Minnesota professor, died July 7, 2010, of complications from Parkinson's disease. A graduate of the Harvard Graduate School of Design, Stageberg practiced many years in Minnesota. His many projects include the Walter Library, Elmer L. Andersen Library, and Aquatic Center at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis; the Mary Mother of the Church in Burnsville; and many houses. He was awarded the Gold Medal by AIA Minnesota and was voted by its members as one of the state's 12 all-time best architects. The first hire for Ralph Rapson, Stageberg was awarded the U of M Ralph Rapson award for Distinguished Teaching in 1991. With his wife, Susan Allen, he wrote 1991's A House of One's Own: An Architect's Guide to Designing the House of Your Dreams.

Stewart L. Udall, 90

Conservationist and former US secretary of the interior Stewart Udall died March 20, 2010. His long career in public service was highlighted by his work on land and environmental conservation, especially in his native West. Born in Arizona and a graduate of the University of Arizona law school, he was elected to the congress from Arizona in 1954, and served as secretary of the interior under presidents Kennedy and Johnson. He spearheaded the addition of 3.85 million acres of new holdings to the National Park system, including the Appalachian National Scenic Trail and Redwood National Park in California. Udall also had a hand in the enactment of many environmental laws, including the Endangered Species Act. He also worked to preserve historic sites, including Carnegie Hall in New York. He was the author or co-author of many books, including his bestselling 1963 book foretelling a conservation crisis, The Quiet Crisis.

Edgar Wayburn, 103

Former longtime Sierra Club president Edgar Wayburn died March 5, 2010. He is credited with protecting more parks and wilderness areas than any other American. For his years of service, Wayburn was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom well as the Albert Schweitzer Prize for Humanitarianism. A native of Georgia, Wayburn graduated from Harvard Medical School in 1930 and moved to California to practice medicine. He joined the Sierra Club in 1939 so he could participate in the group's burro trips into the Sierras. During his work with the group he is credited with helping establish Redwood National Park, the Golden Gate National Recreation Area, Point Reyes National Seashore, and many others.

Malcolm Wells, 83

Architect Malcolm Wells, a pioneer of the green roof movement, died November 27, 2009, of congestive heart failure. A practicing architect many years, Wells refocused his priorities after realizing the pavilion he designed for RCA at the 1964 World's Fair would soon be torn down and consigned to a landfill. He then looked for ways to build in harmony with the land and to leave as light a footprint on it as possible. He designed numerous homes and offices with green roofs, most with passive heat. Wells wrote numerous books and articles on the subject and lectured at architectural schools and universities across the country throughout the 1970s and '80s.

Norval White, 83

Norval White, co-author of the AIA Guide to New York City, died December 26, 2009, of a heart attack. Authoritative and opinionated, the guide is credited with playing a pivotal role in increasing America's awareness of its architectural past. A native New Yorker, White taught architecture at the Cooper Union and then became founding chairman of the City College School of Architecture and Environmental Studies (now the Bernard and Anne Spitzer School of Architecture). The original guide, with its notes on neighborhoods, landmarks, and other less-known buildings, introduced readers to a host of little-known designers and increased appreciation for their work.

Tobias Wong, 35

Conceptual artist Tobias (Tobi) Wong died May 30, 2010; the cause of death was suicide. He rose to prominence through his provocative reimagining of designers' products and his own subversive work. He created a "pad" of $100 bills, a gold-plated McDonald's coffee stir, and a duvet made of bulletproof Kevlar. He turned a Phillippe Starck Bubble Club chair into a lamp, and fashioned a copy of Karim Rashid's book I Want to Change the World into the shape of a gun. Fashion icon Issey Miyake issued a cease-and-desist order when Wong made computer-screen covers from his Pleats Please dress. Wong's work was included in the MOMA's 2005 exhibition "SAFE: Design Takes on Risk."

BUILDINGS | Awards

Buildings are highlighted in chapters 6 and 7. Awards to buildings are presented here: the skyscraper building type is followed by general awards, then specific award types, such as schools and libraries, and industrial design.

(Note: Bolded text indicates additions to the existing list.)

Best Tall Building Awards

The Best Tall Building Awards recognize projects that have made extraordinary contributions to the advancement of tall buildings and the urban environment, including sustainability. The projects must also exhibit processes or innovations that have enhanced the design profession and enriched the cities and lives of their inhabitants. The program is sponsored by the Council on Tall Buildings and Urban Habitats.

Emporis Skyscraper Award

Emporis, an international provider of architectural and building information, bestows its annual Skyscraper Award to an outstanding building over 100 meters (328 feet) completed in the previous year. The selection process favors solutions that provide for people's physical, social, and economic needs as well as respond to cultural and spiritual expectations. Particular attention is given to buildings that use local resources and appropriate technology in an innovative way.

Twenty-five Year Award

The American Institute of Architects' Twenty-five Year Award celebrates buildings that excel under the test of time. Eligible projects must have been completed within the past 25 to 35 years by a licensed US architect, though the buildings may be located worldwide. Winning designs are still operating under the tenets of the original program, demonstrating continued viability in function and form, and contributing meaningfully to American life and architecture.

Aquariums

The opening of Boston's New England Aquarium in 1969 ushered in a new age for aquariums, combining the traditional ideas found in the classic aquariums of the early 20th century with new technology and revised educational and research commitments. Aquariums have since proliferated. The following pages highlight the major free-standing aquariums in the United States.

Minor League Ballparks

Half of today's AAA ballparks were built within the last 10 years, and baseball's other minor leagues have also seen quite a bit of building activity, their increasingly sophisticated ballpark designs following the trend of the major leagues. The following charts list all the AAA ballparks and their requisite architectural statistics, as well as other minor-league ballparks that have opened since 2000.

SUSTAINABILITY | Green Design & Historic Preservation

Sustainability for the stewardship of our planet's resources is the subject of this chapter in its dual aspects of green design and historic preservation. Recent winners of sustainable design awards (buildings, products, and leaders), in addition to historic preservation awards and timely alerts, are presented.

Beyond Green Awards

The Sustainable Buildings Industry Council grants its annual Beyond Green Awards to recognize initiatives that shape and catalyze the high-performance building market. Entries are judged on their successful application of the whole building approach and their ability to balance the design objectives (accessible, aesthetic, cost effective, functional, historic, productive, safe/secure, and sustainable) of a high-performance building with energy and environmental considerations.

Pulitzer Prize for Architectural Criticism

Joseph Pulitzer created the Pulitzer Prize to encourage excellence in journalism, music, and letters. The Pulitzer Prize Board currently confers 21 awards, including one for distinguished journalistic criticism. First granted in 1970, the criticism award encompasses such areas as music, film, theater, fashion, visual arts, culture, and architecture; therefore, an award for architectural criticism is not necessarily bestowed each year. Since 1980 the board has also recognized the finalists, which are included below.

About the Editors

James P. Cramer is the founding editor and publisher of the Almanac of Architecture & Design as well as DesignIntelligence, a journal on trends and strategies published by Greenway Communications on behalf of the Design Futures Council. Cramer is one of the country's foremost management consultants to the design industry and is the founder and CEO of the Greenway Group, a leading strategy consulting and business networking firm. He is the author or co-author of several hundred articles and several books, including the critically acclaimed Design Plus Enterprise: Seeking a New Reality in Architecture and the bestselling How Firms Succeed: A Field Guide to Design Management Solutions. Cramer is the former chief executive of the American Institute of Architects, a Richard Upjohn Fellow of the AIA, and a Fellow of the International Leadership Forum. He is president of the Washington, DC-based think tank the Design Futures Council and has more than 80 honors to his credit for service to the architecture and design community.

Jane Paradise Wolford, Ph.D., is an architectural historian and the editor of the Almanac of Architecture & Design. She is also a senior consultant with Greenway Communications and an editor for the Ostberg Library of Design Management. Wolford has a doctorate in architectural history, theory, and criticism from the Georgia Institute of Technology as well as a Master of Science degree in architectural history from there. Her doctoral thesis established the theoretical and practical framework for architectural contextualism in its definitions and aspects of construction that enable buildings to relate better to each other and encourage a more sustainable, cohesively built environment. She is a LEED accredited professional. She also studied at Westmont College in Santa Barbara, CA, where she earned her bachelor's degree in English, and the University of California Berkeley, where she received her teaching credential. She and her husband, Arol Wolford, founded Construction Market Data in 1981, a leading international construction information service. Enlightening the public about the transformational potential of architecture is her quest.

Jennifer Evans Yankopolus is an architectural historian and the editorial advisor to the Almanac of Architecture & Design. She works with numerous architecture and design publications as an editor. In addition to a master's degree in architecture history from the Georgia Institute of Technology, she holds a master's degree in heritage preservation from Georgia State University and a BS in business from Drake University.
