

Today's News - June 20, 2002

Our latest featured project is the San Diego office of a leading advertising agency that The McCulley Group has transformed from a typical 1980's configuration of enclosed, isolating workspaces to an open and - dare we say - fun environment.

The rest of Today's News (click at left) is a truly international mix. Amusing: Richard Meier's essay in Time magazine. Good sign: revamp of Chicago zoning codes could be a model for other urban centers. Surprising: the increasing coverage of architectural issues in Lebanon's The Daily Star. Two awards stories: a Swiss architect wins in France; and a British firm that didn't win speaks out...and much, much more...
