

Today's News - October 3, 2002

An architect and an artist combine visions for a Bridge of Glass. – Cornell draws up a new shortlist for new Department of Architecture building. – Ground Zero teams aren't showing any images, but a few have something to say; one observer calls it a "big dance." – The Reason editorial presents some juicy quotes from the Libeskind vs. Literati Ground Zero debate. – Big plans for Tabard Square. – Landmark status for a NYC icon challenged by owners (even though they spend a mint maintaining it). – Singapore continues its call to be the next Bilbao; in the meantime, the new Chinese embassy is a sparkler. – Pre-fabricated housing wins big in Australia. – Haymarket plan raises more ire in Edinburgh. – There's much praise for Pelli's new Minneapolis library (and lots of images). – A call to renew appreciation of Lebanon's architectural heritage. – Moon base habitats on the drawing boards...and much more.
