

Today's News - February 28, 2003

Perhaps the "unnamed officials" leaked news of Libeskind's win on Wednesday night to allow the pundits to gather their punditries - the good, the bad, and the ugly - for today's editions (we added our 2 cents yesterday). - Meanwhile: "intelligent life in architecture" can be found at the Whitney. - Two large urban regeneration projects gather steam in the UK. - Atlanta honors its treasures, while a Wright gem remains tarnished. - Architectural education takes on global proportions; and students design winning memorial in India.
