

Today's News - May 7, 2003

EDITORS NOTE: The two lead articles will explain why there won't be a daily newsletter May 8-12...we'll be in San Diego at the AIA convention. The news will return bright and early May 13.

Liverpool names a "design tsar." – Woes for an old San Francisco plaza and a new New York memorial. – Shopping mecca in Shanghai to include a life-sized replica of the Titanic (in the New York zone?!). – A boutique hotel for a funky part of town. – Artist who "loathes making anything practical whatsoever" takes on subway station in Naples (Italy). – Taking big green steps in L.A., Virginia, and Nashville. – Young preservationists take on Pittsburgh. – Swiss engineering as art. – A tight race for Australian Design Awards. – A saint for the Internet.
