

Today's News - August 1, 2003

We lose the man who took the wobble out of London's Millennium Bridge. – Good news at Ground Zero: a unified vision includes Calatrava (and an impressive team)! – The stellar roster of U.K. architects in China grows. – Hometown architect shines in Chicago. – "Beautiful parking garage" not an oxymoron. – Putting "Park" back in the name of Toronto's Downsview. – Debating an LA landmark (or is it?). – Brick streets making a comeback (how sad they ever went away). – The public feels left out in Seattle monorail design decision. – Rock 'n' Roll and Wright (among others) make national historic landmark list. – Profiling an Italian master. – A Lego master builder seeks new masters. – SPA's silly summer special doesn't disappoint (it's Friday, after all).
