

Today's News - December 12, 2003

Ground Zero: Two voices of reason. – Two others who say they're working together. – Architectural Olympians shortlisted for NYC Olympic Village. – A humorously scary evaluation of a "green" development targeting Cultural Creatives. – Denver development targets good schools as selling tools. – Making a sustainable vision reality. – In Australia, Parramatta debates urban consolidation vs. commercial development, and Hobart wants its own Louvre. – An affordable performing arts center for Austin. – A hotel for pigeons and a pigeon poop-covered car in the mix for Trafalgar Square (need we mention the life-size Tomahawk cruise missiles or the amless pregnant nude?). – Maltzan muses on MoMA. – An architect returns to his roots. – The American who made Canberra. – Weekend diversions: Superstudio in New York and OMA in Berlin. – Stocking-stuffer for a good cause: CANstruction calendar.
