

Today's News - January 19, 2004

ArcSpace takes us to Rome and Beijing. – We lose a master of Modernism. – WTC memorial: the critiques continue. – Another competition on another memorial site. – Urban renewal in Dublin includes some mediocre (and some wonderful) new architecture. – Quake-safe housing is a hard sell. – Fanciful ideas for unsightly expressway. – Audubon Society proves green can be platinum. – "Brain drain": a look at where the "creative class" is moving (or staying). – Cleveland puts its museum plans on hold. – Chicago lights up its buildings (and not all are pleased). – Santos is new dean of architecture at MIT. – A new ATM enriches a neighborhood – withdrawal not required. – Some 20th century Scottish architecture ugly enough to call a treasure.
