ArcSpace brings us a curious Kurokawa in Tokyo. – Farrelly calls Sydney’s new Biodiversity Banking Bill just a phony fix: “a purchasable license to destroy, without even an eco-assessment of the land in question.” – Maybe they haven’t read Sir Nicholas Stern’s report that puts “a price tag on global warming, but also argues for an economically viable solution.” – Another report says we better get ready for millions of “sea level refugees.” – Some British architects are designing for higher water levels. – Study shows homes of 1500s were easier to heat and better insulated, casting doubt on modern building rules (and traditionalists cheer). – A new source for materials selection evaluates what’s know - and not known - about green products. – Cities finding an unorthodox solution for affordable housing: build atop branch libraries. – A river runs through it: Designers are adapting to the risks of flood-plain living. The government estimates 1.6m people in Britain are at high risk of flooding; the number is forecast to grow to 2.3m-3.6m by the 2080s as the climate changes. – PCKO Architects; Will Alsop; Spaceover; The Times (UK)

The green house of the future - built c.1550: Homes of 1500s easier to heat and better insulated. Survey casts doubt on modern building rules. The surprise result is an indictment of recent government regulations but it has brought some pleasure to traditionalists of the architectural community such as the Prince of Wales. - Guardian (UK)

The Weetabix house: This eco-charity’s new HQ is packed with bales of natural fibre – Green Light Trust; Modece Architects - The Times (UK)

A walk on the wild side: Its walls are lined with sheep’s wool, its toilets flush with rainwater, and its funnels glow at sunset. Jonathan Glancey is captivated by a striking new hide for nature lovers. RSPB’s new Purfleet Environment and Education Centre – Van Heyningen and Haward Architects [image] – Guardian (UK)

The Future of Materials Selection: Project Pharo... a navigational aid for those seeking building materials that are good for people and the planet... materials evaluation system that provides users with a 360 degree view of what is known—and not known—about products and materials. - Healthy Building Network

Stranger Than Fiction? Having People Live on Top of Branch Libraries: Library redevelopment is becoming one of several unorthodox approaches to producing low-priced housing in cities. - New York Times

Preserving the city’s cultural patrimony. Far more measures needed to protect prized buildings: The succession of fires that has destroyed three Adler & Sullivan buildings...presents a daunting challenge to city officials: How to prevent fire from sending more of Chicago’s architectural treasures to the graveyard? By Blair Kamin - Chicago Tribune

Architects ‘stake out the turf’ in approaches to Still Museum: ...private status may impede the flow of some information, but it may give the design a chance to thrive. By Mary Voelz Chandler – Brad Cloepfil/Allied Works Architecture; Mark DuBois/Ohhhausen Dubois Architects; Elizabeth Diller/Diller Scofidio + Renfro – Rocky Mountain News (Denver)

Museum mania? The next one up is University of Colorado at Boulder: ...museum is the fifth art institution in the Denver metropolitan area this year to complete, start or unveil plans for a new building or an addition. By Kyle MacMillan – Kallmann McKinnell & Wood Architects; Oez Architecture - Denver Post

New Condors Inspired by Africa: ...the Kalahari condominium complex is a kind of symbol for the social and economic forces shaping Harlem. – Frederic Schwartz Architects, Studio JTA/Jack Travis - New York Times

A Modern gamble: The Watermark’s developer believes the time has arrived for its cutting edge design. Will prospective tenants agree? Following a national trend, Modernist buildings have sprouted in Charlotte. ...Perhaps...Modernism after years on the outs is getting a second chance. – Perkins + Will; LS3P; John Portman; Duda/Paine Architects [image] – Charlotte Observer

When manic meets minimal: Mr minimalist architect gets a job at the Opera House with the wild man of dance. So, what happens next? If classical ballet had anarchists, McGregor would be their leading spokesman. Which makes his collaboration with the architect John Pawson all the more unexpected. – The Times (UK)
Coalition for Health Environments Research (CHER) Becomes Part of Center for Health Design (CHD) - Center for Health Design

New Jiang Wan Cultural Center, Shanghai: While the skyline explodes in a thicket of skyscrapers, a cultural center beckons to a new era of environmental concerns. — RTKL
[images]— ArchNewsNow

Note: Pages will open in a new browser window.
External news links are not endorsed by ArchNewsNow.com.
Free registration may be required on some sites.
Some pages may expire after a few days.

Yesterday's News

© 2006 ArchNewsNow.com