Why it's wise for you to insist on sterling

We urge you to remember two things about sterling: It will be with you always. And more than anything else, it will reflect the standard of living you've set for your home.

Reed & Barton artisans take special pride in creating such a proud possession. If you will study the three patterns shown, you will see how adaptable they are. And when you hold a piece of Reed & Barton sterling in your hands, you'll “feel” the fine balance, the solid silver weight.

Remember, too, you may buy Reed & Barton sterling in the same easy way you buy other fine things today. Why not start with several place settings—to “show off your silver”—and pay for it as you enjoy it. Or, you may start with just one piece and add to it. The Reed & Barton sterling pattern you love will always be available.

*Knife, fork, teaspoon, soup spoon, salad fork, butter spreader. Federal Tax incl. At all leading silverware stores, or write Reed & Barton, Dept. A-61.

HOW TO SUCCEED
WHILE YOU'RE STILL YOUNG

IT SURPRISES many people to learn that the average age of the men who respond to our advertisements is closer to forty than to twenty. But it’s not hard to understand why this is true!

Most young men are satisfied with their progress in business. Their native ability and energy are enough to win them regular promotions and salary increases. They find success only a matter of time.

But the day comes, often with a shocking suddenness, when this easy and casual progress ends abruptly.

Many a man wakes up with a start in his thirties or forties to find that his income has leveled off, and that promotions have ceased.

"I’m not getting ahead as fast as I should," he says to himself. "Where am I going to be ten years from now?"

Why does this pathetic pattern appear in so many promising careers?

The answer is simple: Sheer ability and energy can carry a man to the mid-way point in business . . . but only a thorough knowledge of business fundamentals can help him beyond that point.

If you realize that fact while time is still on your side—and act on it—you can succeed while you’re still young.

FREE... "FORGING AHEAD IN BUSINESS"

We do not claim that you must have the Alexander Hamilton Course in order to succeed in business. But we do say that you cannot succeed without what is in the Course!

All the Institute does is offer you a convenient and time-saving means of bringing this knowledge to you in your spare time; and in a form that has proved to be practical and effective for more than forty years.

So that you may judge for yourself whether or not you think the Institute can help you, we have published an informative 48-page book titled "Forging Ahead in Business."

We believe that this little book will help any man get down to bedrock in his thinking; however, there’s no cost or obligation for it because—frankly—we’ve never been able to put a price on it that would reflect its true value.

Some men have found a fortune in its pages.

If you would like a complimentary copy of "Forging Ahead in Business", simply sign and return the coupon below. It will be mailed to you promptly.

Which home is easiest to air condition?

Any home is easy—with Worthington equipment. Worthington Climate Man’s “see-it-yourself” demonstration shows how!

Why throw in the towel over sleepless summer nights, sticky, tiring days, and messy dust and dirt the year ‘round?

Worthington’s CLIMATE MAN can show you how to enjoy comfortable weather in your home from one end of the year to the other. Unique color transparencies demonstrate the equipment you need, where it will fit, how it will look in your home.

And you'll learn about other benefits of Worthington air conditioning . . . how it filters out dust and dirt to keep your home clean . . . and holds humidity in check to keep you comfortable.

Most important, your CLIMATE MAN will show you the complete cost picture, too—with a careful estimate of installation and operating expenses.

Send coupon for free booklet or call your nearest Worthington dealer for an appointment with the CLIMATE MAN. Worthington Corp., Air Conditioning and Refrigeration Div., Section A.6.10-G, Harrison, N. J.

FREE HOME DEMONSTRATION by Worthington CLIMATE MAN explains how to select air conditioning equipment, how much it costs. Color transparencies let you see how installation looks in your home.

It's time somebody did something to take the mess and mystery out of brewing tea. It's natural it should be Ekco, the greatest name in housewares, who at last has modernized the old-fashioned tea pot. Whether you like your tea brewed from bags or leaves, Ekco's new Teamakers will brew tea as tea should be—piping hot and perfect every time, with no muss!

Tea-bagger

TEAMAKER

Designed just for tea bag brewing. Sparkling "see-thru" bowl tells you tea strength at a glance. When tea is ready, lift bag to top of Tea-Bagger—pour. You enjoy perfect tea with no soggy tea bags to dispose of. Smartly-styled Pyrex bowl snaps out of stainless steel frame for easy cleaning.

Attractively gift-boxed set of two, $3.95

Teakoe

TEAMAKER

Ends guesswork in tea brewing. New Flavor Control Basket lets tea leaves uncurl to give you perfect tea in exactly 3 minutes. Then just lift out and all your tea leaves are in one Basket for additional brewing or easy disposal. Graceful modern design in sparkling glass and stainless steel.

In colorful gift box, $7.95.

Ekco Products Co., Chicago 39, III. Available wherever fine housewares are sold in U.S. and Canada

PEOPLE IN HOUSE & GARDEN

John Carden Campbell and Worley K. Wong are a San Francisco architectural team who have shared T-squares and collaborated in creative building designs since 1946. Their blueprint for a "richer, more attractive small house than one can usually do on a limited budget" is on page 67.

In it you will discover how Siamese teak shojis solved problems of water glare, and preserved a view. To Mr. Campbell and Mr. Wong goes the 1956 Progressive Architecture Award (they now have seven), for an impressive number of projects from the firm's drawing boards.

Alice Winchester, under whose editorship Antiques Magazine has become the bible of students and connoisseurs, gives you an article on early American craftsmanship, on page 132. Educated at Smith College, at the Sorbonne and Grenoble, Miss Winchester has brought both love and philosophy to her study of pre-Revolutionary heirlooms. She believes that the heart and history of a people can be read in their belongings, and that to appreciate them is to span both past and present. Miss Winchester helped to organize and is a co-sponsor of Colonial Williamsburg's annual Antiques Forum and has written four knowledgeable books on her subject.

Andy Rooney, whose sociological study of not watching TV appears on page 121, has been well steeped in television's ferment. He wrote for Arthur Godfrey for six years, but got tired of hearing, "What's he really like?" and finally quit. In World War II he was a Stars and Stripes reporter. He has written several books, including Conqueror's Peace. ("Widely read by my father and mother", he says.) He edited a collection of stories by Overseas Press Club members, did radio reporting for CBS, and had a show of his own but was dropped for being "too controversial." Currently he is kept busy not writing a book about Godfrey. (Mrs. Rooney feels that there is no money in this occupation!)

William L. Worden, whose wanderlust produced the cloud-hopping travel article on page 13, has a penchant for visiting tiny islands where nobody else goes. He has been commuting in and out of the Orient for a dozen years, first as a World War II correspondent for the Associated Press, later in the Korean War for the Saturday Evening Post. With Major General William Dean, he wrote "The General Dean Story". A recent tour of the Pacific was his fourth.
The Cadillac car has always been a great favorite with the ladies. And for 1956, we feel certain that it will etch itself even more deeply in their affections. Certainly, they will take it to their hearts all the more for its great new beauty. Surely, they will have an even higher regard for the car insofar as interior luxury is concerned. And once they have driven it, we know they will have even greater admiration for Cadillac's magnificent performance. If you have counted Cadillac as your favorite, we suggest that you see and drive this latest version of the "car of cars" soon. We think you'll find that you've admired Cadillac long enough—and that the time has come to start enjoying one!

If you plan to fly to Tokyo or Manila or to Australia for the Olympic Games, you will be grateful for the stopover islands.

The Pacific and Indian Oceans, plus the South China Sea, are a great nuisance to air lines. Although luxurious aircraft now offer bunks and good bars, nobody yet has managed to wean the things. Until they do, there must be an occasional stop for thirsty engines, no matter how pressing the business in Tokyo or how promising the races in Melbourne. These trans-oceanic stops (excepting Honolulu, which has its own press agents and needs no help from me) are the excuse for this discourse. Taipei, on Formosa, has some intrinsic interest; and Guam supports a tropical chamber of commerce. But all the others share one distinction: nobody ever goes there except to get somewhere else. A hat salesman headed for Prince Rupert, British Columbia, will change planes at Sandspit, in the Queen Charlotte islands, whether he likes it or not; and a flying fisherman has to stop at Annette island in order to catch a seaplane to Ketchikan, Alaska. Cold Bay, on the Alaska peninsula, and Shemya, in the Semichi islands, are alternate stops on the Great Circle aerial route to Asia. Wake island is viewed, willy-nilly, by the Tokyo vacationer on a southern route. Passengers headed for Manila first stop at Guam (free coffee and sandwiches) or Kwajalein; and many riding between Tokyo and Hongkong make the unsettling acquaintance of Taipei. Canton island and Nandi, in the Fiji group, break the long jump between Honolulu and New Zealand or Australia; and Labuan is an overnight stop between North Borneo and Darwin, Australia—and just why anybody should go to either of those places can be a mystery. Cocos is a dot on that good map of Southeast Asia which naturally you always keep handy.

My love affair with pint-sized islands began in 1943, with Shemya, one of the world's most unlikely islands to become enamored of. Still, I think my affection is justified. On a cold Spring morning, I took off from Massacre Bay, on Attu island, in a lumbering seaplane. Below us, hospital ships were rapidly filling; and the fog hiding Attu's mountains was punctuated with gunfire. My natural aversion to whistling lead had been increased during a week's battle ashore, and the main attraction of the upcoming fifty-mile flight was that nobody would be shooting at me personally.

I was less happy when the plane nosed down over three tiny islands of the Semichi group: there was no harbor in the bluff-fringed coastline, the low humps barely stuck out of a gray sea, and the water looked just as it was—barely warm enough to be liquid. Long grass grew in great tufts on the tundra, a thousand puddles wore ice skins, and the frigid wind tore at the plane while bending the low island hushes. But presently I made one wonderful discovery: American soldiers were walking ashore from landing boats, standing up and not even fingering their rifles. Shemya was the best island in the world, because there were no Japanese on it. Subsequent visits haven't changed my opinion greatly. It's no place for a retirement homestead; much of the tundra has been bulldozed flat, piers seldom last out the winter storms, and there is no record of local sunstroke. But in its own way, it's a fairly nice place. In (Continued on page 15)
Island Hopping with BWIA

Fast and frequent service from New York to the Caribbean is now being offered by B.O.A.C. From Bermuda, British West Indian Airways (the Caribbean associate of B.O.A.C.) will transport you on luxurious new VISCOUNTS to such enchanted islands as Puerto Rico, Barbados, Trinidad, Jamaica and Nassau. Each differs in its own way from the others, but all offer excellent accommodations in charming hotels and cottage colonies.

The sun-worshiper will revel in the coral beaches, where the water is as clear as an aquamarine—and about the same color. For the active sportsman, there is skin-diving, sailing, golf, tennis and some of the finest fishing in the world. On arrival in Tobago (a half-hour flight on BWIA from Port of Spain, Trinidad) take a side trip to Bird of Paradise Island. To do this, you will have to obtain a government landing permit (48 cents B.W.I. from your hotel).

What to take: camera, sport clothes, a lightweight topper for evenings (it sometimes gets breezy at night), dancing clothes. Things to try: papaya, mangoes, heart of palm salad, conch.

WHITE SANDS

Berluda's perfect vacation spot: comfort, quiet, exclusive, beautiful sandy beach, defeat accommodations, special family plans. Write, 1943, there was a sea parrot on one of the beaches, a thick-skulled little bird who could by only awkwardly but had the wonderful attribute of not giving a hoot who came to Shemya, went away again or won the war. Shove a finger near him and he'd try to take it off with his hooked beak—but nothing short of a bulldozer could get him off the beach.

Abandoned in 1951, Shemya recently was reoccupied by civilian air line employees. The Orient-bound traveler almost always stops there, but usually is on the ground only half an hour or so. It's time to stretch, perhaps to feel the cold blast of a williwaw, almost certainly long enough to get rained on at least once.

If some airline difficulty makes the stay longer, don't feel too badly. In the worst weather, the buildings will stand up. They've already taken every element the North Pacific and Bering can throw at them; and the place looks much more dangerous in a storm than it really is. If you're lucky enough to have a bright day (there are such, when the sun's brilliant and the sea sparkles) take a walk. Perhaps you can find a surviving Aleut barbara (which will make you appreciate your own home), or a blue fox, or certainly a soaring raven, forever complaining. And if you see a sea parrot on the beach, just tip your hat for me.

Propriety at Cold Bay

The alternate stop at Cold Bay differs from Shemya mainly in that the airfield is surrounded by miles of impassable tundra rather than high waves. It was known in pre-war Alaska mainly as the province of a Russian Orthodox priest who had solved one of the most common problems of the informal Aleut natives. In the good father's domain, there were no illegitimate children. Whenever a village maiden showed certain signs, the priest took measures: he collared the nearest unmarried fisherman and promptly saw to the wedding of the happy couple—being himself big enough to ensure it. His theory was simple: “If he's not guilty of this one, he's guilty of another.”

Of course, not all my favorite island specks are beset by cold winds. For example, Canton island sits 166 miles south of the equator; and possibly fewer people palpatate for it than for She-

If you’re giving up poker and dice for shoes and rice you won’t be interested in the merits of Poker Pal, a most remarkable calculator. It does two things for a player: (1) indicates the hand you need when set for the kind of game, number of players, wild cards; (2) gives odds for making a winning hand. $1. ppd. Perrygraf, 150 S. Barrington, Los Angeles.

In winter the birds find the pickings lean. So why don’t you erect this feeder in your garden? Made of aluminum and rustproof chrome plated fittings, it has two 15" trays finished in baked green enamel. Mount it on a 5/8" (inside diameter) iron pipe or hang it. Holds 1/2 pounds of feed. 99.50 ppd. From Cowap, Dept. H62, 2423 Ridgeway, Evanston, Ill.,

You can make professional looking French pleats on your draperies if you use Pleat-A-Minute, your new drapery crinoline. Easy to handle, it is completely concealed by your fabric. A bathroom as gay as a spangled skirt is practical, too, with American-Olean Tile! Even when a little circus queen behaves like an untrained seal in the tub, her splashes and puddles cause you no worry.

This "Circus Bathroom" is typical of the delightful effects you can achieve with standard sizes and colors of A-O Tile. Many others are shown in full color in the new booklet, "New Ideas in Tile". Send ten cents for your copy, today!

Candy colors, and more fun than a circus!

IN A ROOM AS MERRY AS A MONKEY—A-O TILE

1. Tiled floor is puddle-proof, needs no waxing or polishing, wipes clean with a mop, won't fade or indent.
2. Walls tiled from floor to ceiling may cost no more than half-tiled walls, yet can't be harmed by steam or moisture, are far more practical for many years.
3. Because dust swishes right off, tiled ceiling areas and tile-lined towel niches save you work and worry, while they add attractiveness.
4. Glazed china bathroom accessories are made by American-Olean in the regular wall tile colors... smartly designed to suit every need.

WE TURNED TO G-E TEXTOLITE®

“For years of wear... with minutes of care”

We're a G-E Textolite family now! No more hard-to-clean surfaces in our home—and no costly refinishing jobs either! We're sold on the long-wearing beauty of G-E Textolite plastic surfacing for counters, furniture and walls. Stop in at your G-E Textolite dealer soon and see the tremendous variety of patterns and colors. For Full Color Folder, illustrating G-E Textolite patterns and colors, just send 10¢ to General Electric Co., Dept. HG 2-6, P.O. Box 5911, Cleveland 1, Ohio.

DAD has more free time with G-E Textolite. No more costly refinishing jobs—due to stains or cigarette burns. Textolite is specially designed to resist heat, stains and scratches.

MOM loves G-E Textolite because it's so easy to clean. Just a wipe with a damp cloth keeps it bright and new looking. General Electric Textolite needs no special care.

DEBBIE is so proud of her G-E Textolite bathroom... counters and walls are G-E's new Marble design. Distinctive G-E Textolite adds a "luxury" look to any room.

PETER likes G-E Textolite as a "work" surface because Textolite isn't affected by accidents like spilled glue or ink. Playtime is a happy time with G-E Textolite surfacing.

TAFFY is almost never in the dog house now. That's because G-E Textolite stays lovely, despite hard usage... it gives "years of wear... with minutes of care."
JACKSON & PERKINS
(The World's Largest Rose Growers)
announces the most amazing new rose of the 20th century!

SPARTAN
The Wonder Floribunda Rose that produces hundreds of fragrant blooms like these on a single bush—blooms again and again all season long!

Never before a Rose like this! For sheer beauty, breathtaking color, exquisite form, profusion of bloom, exceptional hardiness— for a combination of all the qualities looked for in any type of Rose—Spartan simply can't be beat!

The unusually lovely flowers start displaying their stunning beauty early in the season as scores of gorgeous burnt-orange buds begin to appear on the attractive plant. Slowly, the buds open revealing large high-centered Hybrid-Tea shape blooms, with 35 to 40 petals each—and a truly different color—a deep rich Orange-Red! Blooms as big as Hybrid Teas—yet produced by the hundreds on a single bush! And they retain their beauty right to the end—softening to a reddish-coral color.

Guaranteed to Live and Bloom in Your Garden This June
This amazing J&P Wonder Floribunda has a sweet, old Rose fragrance, too...and more unusual still are the long, long stems—over 100 of them on a plant, ideal for cutting. In fact, there's no end to the flowers available for house use...for the vigorous plant is always in bloom from early Spring to frost!

Without question, Spartan is destined to become the most popular Floribunda Rose of all time! So be among the first to enjoy its thrilling beauty in your garden this June—by ordering NOW, $2.75 each; 3 for $7.20; 12 for $28.80.

Spartan is available at all leading nurseries

Above — The seats of the Caribbean series cars are reversible and they add a strikingly new note to the beauty of the car's interior. Here, plump, sleek leather fits perfectly into the outdoor sports picture.

Below — On more formal occasions, the beautiful brocade fabric is especially appropriate. Notice the ingenious and practical separation between the comfort-contoured seat cushions and back-rests.

For 1956 Packard Presents America's easiest-handling, safest-riding car... and certainly the Smartest!

The 310 h.p. Caribbean — America's most exclusive convertible.

Here, in the new Packard for 1956, is trend-setting styling that you, yourself, might have dictated.

Typical of this brilliant Packard touch are the Caribbean seats, the first reversible seats in any automobile. They are as new and original and finely fashioned as a decorator's smartest creation... and they permit you to change your car's decor from sleek leather to glowing fabric at the flip of a cushion.

Naturally, Packard's performance is on a par with its style. Packard's advanced Torsion-Level Ride offers comfort, handling ease and safety that no car relying on coil and leaf springs can even approach. America's most powerful V-8 engine puts 310 horsepower at the tip of your toe. Packard's Ultramatic, smoothest and swiftest of all automatic transmissions, now enables you to select gears by simply pushing a button on its Electronic Push-Button Control panel.

Your dealer invites you to drive the limited edition Caribbean, the regal Patrician, the care-free Four Hundred. When you do, we believe you'll agree that this is the greatest Packard of them all... America's easiest-handling, safest-riding car, and certainly the smartest!

"We're looking for people who like to draw"

by Albert Dorne
Famous Illustrator

If you like to draw—America's Most Famous Artists are looking for you. We want to test your art talent!

Too many people miss a wonderful career in art—simply because they don't think they have talent. But my colleagues and I have helped thousands of people get started. Like these:

Three years ago Don Smith knew nothing about art—even doubted he had talent. Today, he is an illustrator with a leading advertising agency in New Orleans—and has a future as big as he wants to make it.

Harriet Kuznirowski was bored with an "ordinary" job when she sent for our talent test. Encouraged by us—she started to study at home in her spare time. Soon she was offered a job as a fashion artist. A year later, she became assistant art director. Today, she does glamorous full color fashion illustrations!

Cowboy to Artist
A cowboy from Miles City, Mont., studied art with us. Now he paints portraits and sells them for $500 each. And gets all the business he can handle.

John Busketta was a pipe-fitter's helper with a gas company—until he did something about his urge to draw. Now he's an artist in the advertising department of the same company. At a big increase in pay!

A great-grandmother in Ohio decided to study painting in her spare time. Recently, she had her first "show"—where she sold thirty-two water colors and five oil paintings.

S agriculture, in West Virginia who liked to draw, got a job as an artist, later became advertising manager of the best store in Charleston.

Free Art Talent Test
How about you? Wouldn't you like to find out if you have the talent for a fascinating money-making art career (part time or full time)? We'll be glad to send you our remarkably revealing 8-page talent test. Thousands of people formerly paid $5 for this test. But now we'll send it to you free—if you sincerely like to draw. No obligation to you. Simply mail the coupon provided below.

THE NEW TREND IN BATHROOMS

Something wonderful is happening to bathrooms! It's an exciting new trend which takes its inspiration from colored bathroom fixtures — first introduced by Universal-Rundle. Today, new colors and materials, new ideas in design and decoration are the vogue. See how the richness of the Jonquil Yellow fixtures is accentuated by the full tones of the brightly colored panels and the mellow cork walls.

This is but one of 18 dynamic bathrooms created by a leading designer and found in this wonderful U/R book. In it, too, you'll learn how to give your bathroom a "personality"; you'll find ideas for any-sized bathroom, powder room; new materials and extra "touches." So, send for your copy today!

Fixtures of Distinction for Half a Century

You'll marvel at the perfect harmony of design — the graceful panel motif as it carries throughout each U/R suite. Here, too, is perfect color match — scientifically controlled for lasting beauty. And the fixtures are long lasting! U/R's one-fire "Hi-Fired" process assures a lifetime bonding and surfaces that are harder than steel...resisting scratches, chipping and stains for years. If you prefer white, insist on U/R Arctic White fixtures because they are white by scientific test! Ask your plumbing contractor, builder or architect for the world's finest bathroom fixtures by Universal-Rundle.

Send today for your Bathroom Idea Book. Get the thrilling story behind this New Trend in Bathrooms — see these fresh ideas on building or remodeling bathrooms using exciting new materials.

Your Invitation to FRESH, THRILLING WINDOW BEAUTY

Kirsch Vertical Traverse Blinds

Luxurious, Practical for any Room

Picture the smart, really different decorative effects you can create with Kirsch "Verticals." This exciting new product—by world-famous Kirsch—combines the beauty advantages of draperies and the wonderful control of light and air you get only with blinds. A truly advanced development for modern window decorating. And Kirsch "Verticals" are not only beautiful but so practical!

No cleaning problems! You've seen for yourself that dust and dirt just don't collect on smooth, up-and-down metal surfaces. And your Kirsch "Verticals" have no tapes, to ever need cleaning or replacement. Give any room in your home a smart new look, with Kirsch Vertical Traverse Blinds . . .

WRITE FOR FREE FOLDER

Send a card or letter today for the new full-color folder on Kirsch "Verticals." It's free—and you will also receive the name of a nearby dealer who will be pleased to show you this latest dependable Kirsch product. Address Kirsch Co., 415 Prospect St., Sturgis, Michigan.

INSPIRING CHOICE OF DECORATOR COLORS

Plain colors in soft pastel tints . . . also grained, patterned, and textured effects. Your blinds can be made up in a color combination of your own selection! And every color is in that bone-hard, baked-on finish that has made Kirsch the choice for long-lasting quality.

INCREASE FOR LIGHT-AND-AIR CONTROL

Not only do Kirsch "Verticals" draw open and closed, like fine draperies . . . the slats rotate, like Venetian blinds, for extra control of view and ventilation. They can be closed for privacy.

SO USEFUL FOR ROOM-DIVIDING, TOO!

A new and welcome way to "divide" rooms for extra utility yet retain decorative beauty. Kirsch "Verticals" can be made as tall—or short—as you wish, and up to thirty-one feet wide!
After Weldwood, see what a difference! V-Plank paneling makes fireplace a focal point, gives the whole room a new air of charm and spaciousness. Matching built-ins help make this living room a beautiful family room. All V-Plank paneling shown costs just $105.

See how you and wood panels can make a room lie about its age

Before Weldwood, here's what this fireplace wall of a 35-year-old house looked like. Wood panels and built-ins made the difference.

Here's a 1920 living room with 1956 ideas. Look how Weldwood real wood panels helped make it more beautiful, more livable.

Look at the cherry V-Plank paneling on this fireplace wall—its warmth and cheerfulness invite you to relax and enjoy yourself.

Matching Weldwood built-ins tell you this is a room for today's living. At right: a handy desk-bookcase unit perfect for homework and thank-you notes. At left: a neat nook for kindling and logs, plus a home entertainment center with radio, hi-fi equipment, and space for record storage.

You and Weldwood paneling can do the same in your home. Your lumber dealer will show you the actual woods—textures like Surfwood® and Weldtex®, pre-finished panels like V-Plank, and extra-easy-to-put-up Plankweld®. He can help you plan and he'll be glad to suggest reliable carpentry help if you're not doing it yourself.

Why not get started now—so it can be finished during winter's leisure indoor hours?

For details on this room and other Weldwood paneling, send coupon for booklets; to see the complete Weldwood line, visit any of our 87 offices in principal cities. In Canada: Weldwood Plywood, Ltd.

Choose from 6 fine woods in Weldwood V-Planks: (from left) walnut, $85; koa, $79; marais mahogany, $85; sunwood®, $72; cherry, $79; oak, $79. All V-Plank comes completely pre-finished and waxed—ready to put up. Prices are for a typical 12' x 8' wall.

Advice for a girl in love with a much younger man

Next to you, he loves peace and quiet and comfort best.
When he's very, very young, quiet carpet turns the sharp, startling clatters of housekeeping into a soft hum of activity.
When he gets a little older, carpet's softness turns his house into a big, warm and comfortable playpen that deals gently with the hundreds of falls of babyhood.
And when your baby grows up to be a cowboy, or an Indian, or a hurricane roaring through the house, carpet will not only provide safe, sure footing for him, it will be your best sound blotter for the hundreds of noises a cowboy, or an Indian, or a hurricane makes.
Carpet does so much to take care of your whole family, yet is, itself, so easy to care for—and it costs so much less than you may think. Wouldn't you like to have lovely new carpet on your floors?
See the new patterns and colors at your store now—you'll be glad you did.

Don't delay. Enjoy your carpet while you pay. Take advantage of new convenient budget terms offered by carpet retailers who represent these American manufacturers:

ARTLOOM • BEATTIE • BIGELOW • CABIN CRAFTS-NEEDLETUFT • DOWNS • FIRTH • GULISTAN
HARDWICK & MAGEE • HIGHTSTOWN • HOLMES • KARASTAN • LEES • MAGEE • MASLAND
MOHAWK • NYE-WAIT • PHILADELPHIA CARPET • ROXBURY • SANFORD • ALEXANDER SMITH
CARPET INSTITUTE, INC. • 350 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK 1, N. Y.

Home means more with carpet on the floor—more comfort, quiet, safety, beauty, easier care.

ANTIOQUES takes you to historic CHARLESTON
in the February issue

Tutt February issue of ANTIQUES visits historic Charleston, South Carolina—the city noted for its eighteenth-century character. Through the photographs Samuel Chamberlain took especially for ANTIQUES, and guided by Narcissa Chamberlain, the reader enters thirteen gracious homes filled with heirlooms.

Plus Private Ceramics Collections in Rich Color
With beautiful reproductions in full color, the Editor, Alice Winchester, presents four famous ceramics collections as they are displayed in the private homes of their owners. The rich color gives life to the delicate porcelain and stoneware in their attractive antique cabinets.

START YOUR SUBSCRIPTION TODAY and receive this outstanding February issue plus the next eight months of ANTIQUES. You will get nine magazines—worth $6.75 postage price—for only $1. Champagne on the fire

Sir:
Thank you so much for Myra Waldo’s recipes (Champagne Cookbook, December). We all take pride in turning out dishes in the grand manner once in a while.

MRS. E. B. W., St. Louis, Mo.

Sir:
Myra Waldo advocates egregious waste of an Elysian beverage which should never be contaminated except, perhaps, by a lacing of good Cognac or Armagnac on rare occasions. After stewing in a pot, any dry white wine will give food the same flavor. In fact, I defy an expert to detect the difference.

Sir:
We were pleased to find an article on champagne and champagne cookery but dismayed at the inaccurate references to California sparkling wines.

These statements were made: “Any French champagne is matured in the bottle, a complicated process taking from six months to four years. Domestic champagnes, apart from some New York State brands, are fermented in bulk.”

This is not correct, and does great harm to the many California producers of bottle fermented champagne and other sparkling wines. Bottle fermented sparkling wines have been produced in California since 1855. There are presently fourteen wineries in California producing bottle fermented champagne. There are also twenty-six wineries producing bulk process sparkling wines. Incidentally, the Charmat process of bulk secondary fermentation of sparkling wines was developed in France and is widely used there.

F. S. W., Wine Institute, San Francisco

H & G’s apologies to the 14 of California’s 40 fine wineries. Our research has been banished to the cellar for further aging. Ed.

In defense of hop

Sir:
Someone should enlighten Deems Taylor (Rising Sound of Music In Your Home, December) about current musical trends and tastes. I refer to his repeated use of the word “hop,” which he claims is so popular with the “aesthetically savage teenagers.” It doesn’t take a Juilliard graduate to tell us that the musical junk currently the rage with teenage record buyers is about as bad as music can get, but it is definitely not “hop.” Hop is, or was, a school of jazz which came into prominence during the early ’40's. It grew from the minds and talents of great musicians [whose] ideas and styles have greatly influenced all modern jazz and serious jazz musicians.

L. S., Wynnewood, Penna.

Sir:
The statement is made (Sound and the Music in Your Home, December) that “any speaker system gives its best performance when it is installed in a corner of the room.” This is a complete untruth, for there are many loudspeaker systems designed to go along one wall and/or away from any wall.

O. B., Beverly Hills, Calif.

The best hi-fi equipment gives outstanding performance in the installations for which it has been designed, but it is the consensus among technicians that corner installation does improve low frequency tones. The improvement is most noticeable in less expensive equipment. Ed.

Split-level laureate

Sir:
The collaboration of Ogden Nash and Robert Osborn (I’ll Eat My Split-Level Turkey in the Breeze-way, December) is funny—but also painfully pertinent. Mr. Osborn’s do-it-yourself Santa Claus is my favorite cartoon of the year.

MRS. P. L. M., St. Paul, Minn.

Sir:
Any time Ogden Nash will honor my porte-cochere, I shall give him the run of my cluttered attic, provide a hoist for my 1923 bathtup and feed him turkey a la mansard. Let’s have more of his verse in House & Garden.

J. C. D., Nashville, Tenn.

Hurd’s Southwest

Sir:
If Peter Hurd (The True Colors of the Southwest, December) were not so fine a painter, I would say that he had missed his calling. The article is a distinguished piece of writing.

E. L. G., Cincinnati, Ohio

in a Hydroguard controlled shower. You can really enjoy worry-free bathing. No more dodging sudden shots of cold or scalding water.

More Convenient
... Hydroguard installations for shower and tub (shown above) or in shower stall are uncluttered with various valves. There’s only ONE dial to turn instead of 2 to 4 valves. Hydroguard’s simplicity eliminates confusion, simplifies piping and tile work and improves appearance.

Its Modern Styling Adds Glamour to Shower Baths

Powers Hydroguard is Thermostatic. It always maintains shower or tub temperature wherever you set it... regardless of temperature or pressure changes in water supply.

Thermostatic Safety Limit Protects You from Scalding. It prevents flow of water to shower or tub above 110°F. Should cold water supply fail, Hydroguard instantly and completely shuts off hot water.

Conserves Water formerly wasted while adjusting various valves before bathing and jumping in and out of shower because of temperature changes.

GOOD OLD TRANSITIONAL

It is getting more difficult all the time to make sense about style in architecture and design. This is partly because making a home is as close as most of us ever get to a creative art in our lifetime; we are therefore understandably subjective and sensitive about the whole thing. And to make matters worse there are few subjects of everyday experience in which we suffer a greater handicap of language. There seems to be no idiom common enough to permit us to communicate with any precision what we think about a house and the things that are in it. Our adjectives grow ever more ambiguous as the hard word is discarded for the soft euphemism.

No two words of the jargon are less precise or more abused than modern and traditional. It is not just a problem of relativity: of defining now vs. then (although it would be quite a feat to find any two persons who would agree on how old something has to be before it ceases to be new). In any case the two words long since ceased to connote time and are now commonly used to describe substance (a glass house) and form (a flat house). Contemporary is the proper synonym for modern because it suggests absolutely nothing beyond now in use.” The most tactful of all terms is that reliable old weasel transitional, which can be used to describe everything from the Toonerville Trolley to Picasso’s latest painting.

The trouble is that most of us are getting lazy, and it is easier to use labels than to think critically and speak clearly. One articulate exception is the gifted and thoughtful young architect Thornton Ladd. In our conversation with him (page 92) he describes his own distinguished work as a synthesis of many styles. Because it is still evolving, it will defy a label until his last house is built. Ours, Ladd says, is an age of synthesis in all art forms. He deplores the arbitrary rejection of the past by the self-consciously “modern” architect as an abstraction that is “unnatural and undesirable.” His conclusion: The best modern evolves from the best traditional.

We agree. For one thing we do not always know just what is new under the sun. How very new is the wheel compared to the atom; yet how much longer have we known one than the other. What we have long known is that a thing is not good or beautiful or true just because it is new or old.

We agree too with another thoughtful man, Lord Chesterfield, who in another transitional age two centuries ago wrote: “Speak of moderns without contempt, and of the ancients without idolatry.”

Best Living Ideas of Our Time

Our American living is in the midst of a revolution, which differs from most revolutions in that it creates faster than it destroys. As if compelled to foster obsolescence, industry pours out new devices and new materials for our homes, and we snatch them up—not because there was really anything wrong with the old ones but because the new ones are more useful, more efficient or more beautiful. The new devices and materials are worthy of new ideas and new uses, and these we are getting, too, from artists, from designers, from architects and even from industry. Less and less often do we hear the question, “Why didn’t somebody think of this before?” Somebody already has thought of it. It may be a basically practical idea, like kitchens-in-a-package; an aesthetic one, like fresh beauty in the bathroom, or a grand conception in architecture that changes not merely the look but the life in our homes. Some of these ideas are radically different from what we have cherished in the past, but they are living ideas for today and they will surely affect your homes sooner or later.

100 new decorating ideas for the personal world of Bed and Bath

Our public and personal worlds have only a door between them, yet they are as different as day and night. When we cross the threshold into the bedroom and bath, we are in the world of our own choosing. Here is rest and refreshment and dreams and even singing. It is where we are ourselves and at ease. Happily, today we can pamper ourselves with the colors and the comforts of a new luxury. Extending far beyond the size of a mattress or the temperature of a bath, this luxury is shown in the eclectic elegance of the bedroom of Princess Archil Gourielli on the opposite page, and in the rooms which follow. In this 12 page portfolio H & G presents decorating ideas for your own personal world.
Authentic cupboard beds are teamed with traditional toile
The personality of Mary Martin, whose radiance has won the love of theatre audiences while her talents were arousing their cheers, is reflected in the furniture she chose for her Connecticut house. She and her husband, Richard Halliday, feel at home with unpretentious French Provincial pieces, which they mix with objects collected in their travels. In the guest room (opposite) and Miss Martin’s own bedroom (above) the focus is on beds treated in the French Provincial fashion. One bed in the guest room (with its steps) is an original lit clos, or open-front cupboard bed, popular in Brittany and the Vosges mountains. Its mate (at right) is a line-for-line reproduction. The rococo paneling frames a figured bed covering made of a toile whose motif depicts French traveling players. Behind each bed are a bookshelf and reading light. The needlepoint rug, designed and made by the Hallidays, is one of a pair for the guest room. In the other room a similar effect is created by placing a bed in a niche and setting it off with valance and tieback curtains of another toile with a theme of meandering flowers. The same fabric is used inside the niche on the walls, windows and as the dust ruffle beneath a bed covering of pleated tulle.
Striped flock paper and India cotton saris make a pavilion of the bed area in the corner of a small guest room designed by photographer Horst P. Horst. A bookshelf was built in around the bed, and the wall between shelf and bed padded in quilted material. Bedspread motif and color scheme derive from Meissen china “Onion” pattern.

Curtains with a Roman motif key the decoration of actor Tyrone Power’s bedroom in his New York apartment. Louis XVI furniture was chosen for its restrained lines in keeping with the classic theme. Desk, night tables are scaled to a man’s taste.

Tested bed placed flush with wall between doors leaves more floor space for other pieces of furniture. Sheraton drop-leaf table beside bed is also used as a desk. Stacked pair of English campaign chests forms a handsome chest of drawers. Striped denim on bed and windows adds a fresh note.

Built-ins for books and bed linen make a small room shipshape. The light wood paneling gives added depth. Ship’s lamps hung on the sides of shelves save table space. To tie the room scheme together, small-scaled sofa-bed and armchair are slip-covered in the same plaid used for curtains.
Embroidered organdy in "Monterey" pattern gives feminine look to singer Jane Froman's bedroom in New York. Walls and carpet are in her favorite color, blue. Chaise is where she knits, desk where she writes thank-you notes.

Carpeted bed in the New York penthouse of opera singer Patrice Munsel serves as a roomy sofa. Books and bound music scores are within easy reach. Bedside storage pieces are painted to match the walls in deep restful gray. Blown-glass lamps diffuse light softly. Windows are curtained simply so as not to detract from skyline view.

Allover wallpaper design makes a small dormer room seem more spacious. Used on walls and ceiling, it erases the angular lines. The delicate fern motif suggests a greenhouse. Window is curtained in light, airy tambour organdy.

Patterns that lift the eye help to enlarge a small dormer room. The walls are papered in vertical pastel stripes, and pointed coverlets are used over tailored petticoats on the spool beds. To give importance to the small windows, white linen curtains trimmed in ball fringe are hung to the floor over a tier of café curtains.
His or Hers?

Which sex should have the say in the bedroom? William Pahlmann, decorator, and Dino Levi, Venetian designer and importer, argue a burning question in the art of decoration.

Mr. Pahlmann: “No man should have to wade through yards of ruffles in his own bedroom. The most successful rooms are always those where a man can put his feet up and relax. Dinky furniture, Dresden, petit point and spindly beds are unsuitable. A man requires more substantial things.”

Mr. Levi: “Luxury and comfort don’t have to be incompatible. Don’t you think Louis XV was comfortable in Mme. Du Barry’s boudoir? A man doesn’t want a bedroom to remind him of his office. He wants to forget his functional furniture, metal desk and swivel chair. The bedroom is a woman’s room, and a man has nothing to do with decorating it.”

Mr. Pahlmann: “A man shouldn’t be made to feel (or look) the fool in his bedroom. A woman should always be conscious of his comfort. She can turn her boudoir into a princess’s castle, but she can’t turn him into a Prince Charming. The ideal master bedroom is a sitting room as well as a bedroom. It is pleasant to have breakfast, tea or even a cocktail at a small table in the bedroom. The woman should have a chaise longue for herself and a comfortable chair and ottoman for her husband; otherwise he will throw himself on the bed. With each chair should go a good reading lamp. If there isn’t enough space for this kind of seating in the room, at least use a practical spread on the bed so that the man can stretch out on it if he wants to. (No man is going to fold back a bedspread.) A bedroom must function in two ways: it must give comfort and it must be easy to keep neat. Bedside tables with drawers and space for books, magazines, glass of water, ash tray and small radio should be provided at each side of the bed. Marble or plastic tops are good. Each table should have a reading light with switch placed low enough to reach without groping. (I frequently attach an interrupter switch on the cord about six inches from the base.) The man should have a telephone on his side but seldom gets it.”

Mr. Levi: “What you have described is a cold room. I don’t like austere bedrooms; they remind me of monks’ cells. What’s more, for all your paraphernalia the bedroom would have to be very large. When a bedroom is oversized, you lose the intimacy, which is the best part. In the 18th century when rooms were huge, people took refuge in great poster beds with canopies. They could pull the curtains around them and escape all that emptiness. The bed is a modern invention, you know. The Romans didn’t have beds. They had couches to recline on, but they slept on the floor. The bed originated in Italy in the 16th century. During the Renaissance, it became a big apparatus, a room within a room. There is a story about Martin Luther’s first glimpse of a bed in the papal palace during a visit to Rome. He was shocked at the feminine look of the bed and the idea that anyone would indulge himself with such a monument of laziness. Today the bed is accepted, and the woman is queen of the bedroom. Men have a lot to say about furniture and equipment all through the rest of the house, because it has become so functional; the bedroom is the only place left which a woman can decorate to suit herself. The man can have his big easy chair in the den or in a corner of the living room. I am afraid, Mr. Pahlmann, that you have deep-rooted bachelor habits.”

Mr. Pahlmann: “I am a bachelor, but I have decorated a couple of hundred highly successful master bedrooms. The American husband is a hard-working man. He needs a place to relax and read his paper before dinner. Most men are willing to let the woman have the say in decorating, but she should respect his needs. It all adds up to mutual respect for each other’s wishes. If he likes sunlight in the morning, and she doesn’t, she will just have to wear an eye mask.”

Mr. Levi: “Nonsense. A married man has to compromise practically every five minutes.”

Mr. Pahlmann: “If a woman wants to dress up the bedroom to impress her friends, that’s all right as long as she is always conscious of her husband’s comfort. He is no dashing Don Juan with flashing teeth. Some men are apt to accept fussier bedrooms than others. A room can be done in the most delicate French style, but the selection of colors, fabrics and the way they are used will determine how feminine or masculine the room will look. A restrained style of bed covering is preferable to flounce after flounce after flounce. There is no reason why a woman cannot use tambour organy curtains on the window, provided she doesn’t...” (Continued on page 133)
H&G COLORS FOR YOUR PERSONAL BED AND BATH

Our choices throughout life are largely influenced by color from the moment we first reach for the bright red toy. People respond to different colors in different ways, and in the personal world of bed and bath it is natural to surround ourselves with the colors we like the best. Often a person prefers colors that provide a complete change from daily associations. Patrice Munsell, whose bedroom is shown on page 59, loves flamboyant red and wears at least one red costume in any vivacious role she sings. But when it comes to her bedroom, she prefers a restful gray background. Pastel color schemes or varying shades of one color are soothing and relaxing. People who wake up easily in the morning and like a room flooded with sunlight may prefer warm, bright shades, perhaps the new sundrenched colors. When two people with different color preferences share a room, a compromise can be reached by choosing one color for the background and using accents of another color. The Sky Blue bedroom (opposite), with its spice-colored accents is a good example. HOUSE & GARDEN’s collection of colors makes it possible to create any scheme under the sun. These colors are picked to be used together and are equally effective in any room of the house. In a bedroom, it is best to keep the color scheme simple. Combine tones of one color such as a family of blues or warm and cool pinks, or use close-harmony colors such as Saffron, Citron and Tangerine against a neutral background. You can carry out an H&G color scheme to the last detail, using sheets with printed borders and blankets in vivid accent colors. The same color scheme can be repeated in an adjoining bathroom in tiles and equipment as well as in the towels, bath rugs and accessories. There are many delightful patterns in wallpapers and fabrics to add interest to any room, and you can point up a whole scheme with the glitter of gold.

Serene and restful: a background of soft blues shading from Sky Blue walls and bedspread to deeper Cerulean Blue carpeting. Mocha-striped bed sheets and harmonizing blanket spice the scheme. The bathroom is treated as an extension of the bedroom by using identical blues and repeating the stripe in wallpaper. The hand-brushed stripes in H&G’s Sky Blue and white give relief to the sleek tile and plastic surfaces.

Young and pretty: a delicate range of pinks from cool Carnation to warm Siamese Pink. A small-scaled butterfly wallpaper makes the room seem larger. Matching chintz petticoat on the bed is tailored with corner kick pleats. When the bed is turned down, pink lace turns up on the printed borders of sheet and pillowcase. In the bath, pink is repeated, with Lemon Peel accents. Wallpaper pattern is taken from an antique button collection.

Bright and cheerful: sun-drenched colors silhouetted against white walls. Curtains and dust ruffle are made of Tangerine felt, a material that can be cut in any pattern and need not be hemmed. Bed linens with borders printed in a baroque scroll with monogram are set off by a Citron Yellow blanket. Towels and curtains carry out the same color scheme in the bathroom against walls papered in black and white.

Shopping information for the following three pages on page 116. List of stores carrying bed and bath merchandise in H&G colors is on page 116.

Three new looks for bed and bath

The brass look brings delicate glitter to your bath. You can change the tones of all the fixtures from aluminum to brass and add gold-finished accessories: jars, ash tray, even a scale. Or, keep the chromium fixtures and introduce a flash of gold in a different texture: towels, for example, in diagonal stripes or solid colors with metallic-woven borders. If you are redecorating a bathroom, there are metallic-printed wallpapers in slim harlequin designs or fleur de lis motifs with bath rug to match in a larger scale. With painted walls you can use a copper-toned curtain and waste basket or a metallic woven blind. Beds made up in Saffron blankets will glow to match.
The sun-drenched look brings a new group of colors to bed and bath. These are the bright and coppery tones of sun and sun-ripened fruit (cantaloupes, lemons, apricots). Pair two for the best effect in bedroom or bath. They are striking against neutral backgrounds or black and white tiled baths. Designs such as the bold harlequin, multi-colored plaid, Spanish tile or oak leaf add interest to a bathroom that is completely tiled. If the tile stops halfway up the wall, you can paint or paper the upper half to match a brick-red towel, an apricot shower curtain, or champagne bath rug with sunburst motif.

The flower look brings a breath of spring to a feminine bath or bedroom. For the bathroom there are towels printed in meadow blossoms and carnations. If you already have flowered paper or curtains, use flowered accessories instead: decorative brush holder, cologne bottle or bowknot towel bars. In the bedroom you can now have a motif of flowers (or flower colors) from the mattress up. Complete wardrobes for the bed come in widely scattered daisy prints in Blue Mist, tiny all-over designs of Citron rosebuds, and in petal colors from Carnation ticking to Clover Pink or Hyacinth blankets.
The three houses you are about to see qualify as unique. One-of-a-kind in character and spirit, they are of frankly advanced design. They embody the architectural thinking that will influence house planning in 1956 and later years, and they offer us some of the best building ideas of our time. The first house shows the wisdom and happy results of planning house and site as a single entity. The indoors borrows space outdoors, and the outdoors opens up the whole interior. The house walls are not physical limits and the lot lines are not visual limits for this house. The result is an expansive way of living on a relatively inexpensive scale. The second house illustrates the maturing of the contemporary style. It has the flat roofs and enormous glass areas which are so often frowned upon as stark and monotonous. Yet it is neither cold nor barren; it is a house of great warmth and imaginative design as you may see on pages 70-75. It is modern; yet it shows the significance of Oriental traditions. The third house, on pages 76-78, presents a new building method which is simplicity in itself and permits almost unlimited freedom in the planning of interior space. As a result this house may also be opened up to light, air, and view. All three houses are, we stress, houses that forecast the future. What can such houses offer you in planning a new but perhaps more modest house? A great deal. In them you may find ideas, large or small, to inspire, to shape, to direct your thinking for your new home, which can be as individual and distinguished in its way as these three.

1. MERGING HOUSE AND SITE

This small house near San Francisco seems twice its 1,550 foot size to its owners, Mr. and Mrs. James Byrne, because house and site were planned together. Two decks and a garden terrace add 1,100 feet of outdoor living space to the five indoor rooms. Every room opens directly outdoors and window walls vastly extend the confines of the rooms. The deck at the water’s edge, overlooking Belvedere Lagoon, serves as an extension of living room, dining room and master bedroom. It is open for sunbathing, enjoying the breeze and the bay view. The other deck is a shaded spot out of the wind and overlooking the small, sheltered garden. It also enlarges the rooms. Although its location endows the lot with wide horizons of water and mountains, the lot itself is only 75’ x 102’ with every inch of it planned for best possible use.

Entrance is at side of the house. Grayed redwood walls frame it; garden path leads to it.
Outdoor areas double living space

Dining area opens wide to front deck at one end of house, to lagoon deck at other. It brings light and air through the house.

Kitchen is just a few steps from front and rear decks as well as dining room. Pass-through is also snack bar.

Opposite end of dining area shows lagoon deck beyond. Living room to right, bedrooms to left.

Architect: Worley K. Wong and John Carden Campbell
Owners: Mr. and Mrs. James Byrne
Location: Belvedere, California
Landscape Architect: Thomas Church
Overlooking the water the living room has ceiling-high windows for full view outdoors and greatest illusion of space indoors. To subdue glare from sun and water in the late afternoon, teak frame shojis (made of plasticized beige pulp paper) slide across the glass. They can be arranged in many ways to let in light and air but keep out sun.

Living room walls and floors are Siamese teak planks; mantel and hearth are black marble; ceiling is painted peacock blue. Antique furniture from China and Japan blends well with the room's modern pieces.

BUILDING IDEAS

- Three outdoor areas expand the five rooms of the house.
- Good site planning makes fine use of 73' x 102' lot.
- Natural wood walls inside and outside house reduce maintenance.
- Sun control screens temper sun glare and light on west exposure.
- Dining room opens at two ends, acts as breezeway for good ventilation.
Entrance court of house with adroitly landscaped lily pond faces the southwest, and is a protected, all year, sunny spot.
When Mrs. Jackson Burke decided to build a house, she wrote her architect a letter expressing in general terms her conception of what a house should be. She was emphatic in her preference for contemporary design. "I choose to live in a modern house," she wrote, "because I want to live in the present. I want to take advantage of new techniques and ways through which one can express beauty and attain comfort." But she had qualifications. Her house, said Mrs. Burke, must not possess "an impersonal, anti-septic, institutional quality." The result of Mrs. Burke's views and her architect's interpretation is the house shown here. Built on Center Island overlooking New York's Long Island Sound, it embodies both the beauty and the comfort its owner sought. It is large, open and spacious, three stories high at the back, with a guest wing which is almost a separate unit. In the house, privacy may be easily found. The living room, for instance, is two stories high, with a wall of glass panels on one side and a great upper window on the other. But at one end of the room is a fireplace cove which provides a snug contrast to the openness. Although the house was designed to accommodate a busy social life, it also includes an "escape" area—the master bedroom-sitting room suite, which is the only living space on the third floor. Two large sun decks and promenade decks running around most of the main floor offer many beautiful vistas.

Plastic bubble over dining table brings in sunlight, starlight and sky dome view of trees.

Dining room window walls open to decks.
6 outdoor living areas
give the house variety

The Burke house has decks, gardens and terraces on three sides. They add interest and variety to the interior. As the owners say, "Guests feel the house is full of surprises. They can never predict just what will be around the corner." This change in the treatment of space as you move from one area to another is the hallmark of an interesting house. In the two-story living room the rear glass wall allows a sweeping view of Long Island Sound. The windows slide open to a deck which extends around three sides of the house. In contrast, the bedroom wing overlooks a small, informal garden, which has a brook running through it under weeping birch trees. The dining room opens two ways—to the lily pond in the entrance court at the front and to a view of beach and Sound. The two-room suite on the upper floor, which the owners reserve to themselves, has its own private deck, perched like the bridge of a ship overlooking the water. The side terrace, on the facing page, is a favorite place to survey the gardens. And the sixth area, often used by beach bathers, opens off the family room which is beneath the living room. Note spiral stair to deck.

BUILDING IDEAS

- Variety of materials, wood siding, stone and painted brick, suits the setting.
- Design of house and design of landscaping are completely integrated.
- House is versatile and varied; it spreads in three directions, rises to three floor levels and provides six outdoor areas in which to entertain or just relax.
- Complete privacy is possible for the owners and their guests.

Three levels overlook the Sound. Each has its own outdoor deck or terrace looking down or leading down to the beach.
Side terrace overlooks gardens, is right size for quiet chat and relaxation.

Landscape plan shows lily pond in front courtyard, brook garden in front of bedroom wing, outdoor living areas surrounding the house. They complement the rooms of the house and were planned as an integral part of the home's living space.

Stair hall has sliding glass windows opening to terrace shown at top of page.
Open planning need not mean a house without privacy

Living room occupies separate area in house, and most of it is two stories high. At this end it is an expansive room with windows on three sides and a pleasant grouping of comfortably oversize furniture. The music wall at the far end of the room houses TV, radio and record player and has storage space. The deck outside the sliding glass window wall extends the room in size and adds view of Sound.

Fireplace end of living room sets a different mood. It is one story high, enclosed on three sides by solid walls. A place for cocktails or conversation, it gives the owners a change of scene; a contrast to the views through window walls. A cove sofa is bright orange Siamese silk against brick walls painted black. Long sofa is gray Siamese silk; silk pillows are blue, yellow, orange. Wood walls are mahogany.

Owners’ suite, on second floor, has bedroom, outside deck, sitting room and dressing room-bath as shown in plan (left). It is a private world at the top of the house where complete seclusion is possible. A fireplace wall separates the two rooms, giving each its own hearth. Storage for books and magazines as well as clothing is generous. The sitting room holds a huge work table-desk. Private deck overlooks beach, is a prize asset.

The first floor, spread out in three general areas for living, sleeping, service, is almost surrounded by decks and terraces. As the owners say, “It’s a marvellous house for entertaining. You can open the sliding glass doors on almost every side of the house and people can come and go as they wish.” Each zone of the house closes easily for privacy.

Bedroom wing is like a private guest house. Its diminutive design contrasts with the big scale of the rest of the house. Inside, as shown in plan above, are two bedrooms and two baths. As in a Japanese house, the doors (glass in this case) slide open to a long, shallow porch. A landscaped brook flows in front of the entire wing.
Pillar-and-slab construction (see front of house) permits unlimited use of glass walls and unobstructed living space. This house was built on two levels so that a full view of Biscayne Bay (at the back of house) might be had from all rooms. Wooden louvers are set in the glass walls for privacy and ventilation; louvers around the roof, railings along the second floor balcony act as sun visors to reduce glare from the sky and heat from the sun.

3. THE USE OF NEW BUILDING METHODS

Miami motorists passing the Albee E. Miller home on Palm Island almost invariably slow down for a second, searching look. A good many even make their way to the house and request a tour of inspection or an explanation. The explanation is simple.

The Miller house, 2,460 sq. ft. in size, is essentially two layers of open living space suspended between concrete floors and roof. Supporting the second floor and roof are fourteen poured concrete columns arranged in two rows of seven each. Although this building method has been used for many years in industrial construction, its application in home design is rare. The advantages, however, are impressive. Because no supporting walls are needed, the architect may open up outside walls as he chooses, may place indoor partitions wherever he wishes, or he may leave them out altogether.

On the second floor of the Miller house partitions separate three bedroom-bath areas. But on the main floor only a single partition stands, separating living room and kitchen from the carport. Aside from the construction method itself, the most remarkable feature of the house is its cooking center. An integral part of the living room, it is an elaborate steel cooking island. A restaurant executive and amateur chef, Mr. Miller designed the island so that he could prepare meals without leaving his guests. For pictures and details of cooking island, please turn page.

BUILDING IDEAS

- With floor and roof supported by concrete pillars, entire walls may be opened up for view and ventilation. Inside partitions can be placed anywhere.
- Good design combines living-dining room and kitchen in one attractive area for easy entertaining, easy upkeep.

Cutaway drawing shows how 14 pillars and 2 slabs permit complete freedom for planning interior space.

Swimming pool on Bay side is separated from the house only by a sliding glass wall. A transparent plastic screening, two stories high, bars insects completely and surrounds pool.
How to plan your own kitchen

Here and on the next 12 pages are kitchens whose keynote is individuality

Today freedom and flexibility have replaced fad and formula in kitchen planning. You can have a floor plan to suit any space, living pattern or cooking idiosyncrasy. You have complete freedom of choice in equipment, colors and materials. Yet this freedom poses a responsibility. In order to have the kitchen that reflects your personal taste in color, cooking and living, you should decide what you want of your kitchen and know how to get it. In order to give you practical planning pointers, H&G consulted the experts who designed the kitchens shown on the following pages.

The three factors you should take into account first are the space you have, the way you live and the amount of money you want to spend. Draw up a floor plan of your kitchen, including all doors, windows, closets, utility connections and wall breaks and make several sketches of different locations of equipment. Include any special features you want such as a planning desk or dining space. Whether you want a U-shaped, L-shaped, peninsula or island arrangement, keep a work-triangle relation of refrigerator, sink and range. Take into consideration the fact that you use the refrigerator five times as often as any other piece of equipment and that the family will need access to it while you are working. Look your plans over for several days and pick the one that is most workable and attractive to you. Now is the time to make elevations and estimate cost (you will (Continued on page 131)

A SELF-SUFFICIENT KITCHEN

Ever since the days of the root cellar and the ice house, adequate and convenient storage has been a problem for families living in the country. When marketing is done in bulk and infrequently, the kitchen must be a domestic supermarket capable of storing anything from a quarter of beef to a case of wine. The self-sufficient kitchen shown here was designed for a family with young children who live on a ranch in a California farming area. Ceilings up to 14 feet in height allow plenty of wall storage space (seldom-used items are stored at the higher levels), and a flexible floor plan provides the connected yet independent work areas needed for large-scale preparation, cooking, and freezing of food. A sweep of windows (overlooking the terrace where the children play), a lofty roof and a cool, fresh color scheme give this efficient kitchen an open-air feeling of freedom.

Large freezer, broom closet and case-goods storage are in a walk-in closet behind wall ovens. Pans are kept in two-way cabinets between ovens and sink. The breakfast corner in foreground has a grill built into the countertop. Sliding glass panels beneath hanging china cabinet permit serving to terrace.

Breakfast corner, top right, extends the kitchen counter space and links it to the living and dining rooms. The tiled counter zigzags around the wall, ends beneath two-way storage cabinets and pass-through which serve the dining room. Living room and breakfast corner share a two-way fireplace, pass-through bar and sink. Wood, glasses and liquor are stored by the bar.

Cooking center (bottom right) is arranged in a wide bay with a triangular island to keep it free from busy traffic. Sink with disposal is next to refrigerator. Counter has a big built-in chopping block.

A KITCHEN THAT HAS EVERYTHING

The proof of a good kitchen is in its performance, its ability to fulfill your living and entertaining requirements. The kitchen on these pages was planned for the David Selznicks (she is actress Jennifer Jones) who have three active children, a household staff and entertain frequently. They needed a more than average amount of cooking equipment, refrigeration and storage space and a kitchen where many activities could go on at once, easily. Main work centers are set apart from each other. Ovens, burners and barbecue are concentrated in one center. Another area has sitdown sink and a baking counter with dry storage. Vegetable bins and refrigerator are opposite. The pantry has tray and bottle storage and a wall refrigerator; drinks and snacks can be fixed without going into the kitchen.

Four work centers allow several jobs at once

Cooking center is shaped to give maximum working space and elbow room with burners grouped in twos, wedges of countertop between. Stainless steel behind cooking surface is quilted for added strength. Striking pattern of floor is made by combining four 9" black vinyl tiles in an 18" block and outlining them with a 1" white strip. Ceiling is acoustical tile.
Wall refrigerator-freezer in pantry area supplements full-size refrigerator near cooking and clean-up centers. Tray storage is below countertop; individual place settings for trays are stored on sliding shelves so breakfasts, snacks, can be quickly arranged. Cabinets are white-painted pine with barber-scissor pulls in dull black iron; walls are of bleached mahogany rubbed with white for a soft finish.

Electric wall ovens, rotisserie-barbecue and top gas burners provide for every kind of cooking in one compact area. Metal hood with strong fans draws away smoke.

Vegetable storage cabinet has chopping block top. Narrow sliding shelves built in at the sides of the vegetable bins make good use of otherwise wasted space.

Built-in cabinet in kitchen dining area has deep drawers which store quantities of linens, silver. Lower doors fold back like shutters, use minimum of space when open.
Wall refrigerator with 10 1/2 cubic foot capacity has a small freezer storage section, door dairy storage. Pull-out freezer drawer below has a 6 cubic foot capacity.

Wall oven with French doors is easy to clean. Built-in filter disperses smoke. Oven shelf moves out when doors are opened. Drawer and shelved cabinet hold baking pans.

Base cabinets under preparation and cooking counter are specially designed to store cans, bulky utensils. Spice shelf over cooking unit controls has drop door.

Pot and pan storage is in compartmented base drawer. Built-in bins hold flour, sugar. Drop-down surface cooking units have eye-level controls out of children's reach.

If you want THE NEWEST

At last you can plan a kitchen for your home in any arrangement to suit your space, needs and budget. Frigidaire will introduce this year a kitchen package deal consisting of every type of kitchen unit integrated in color, size and style. Expensive installations, such as lighting, plumbing, wiring and ventilation, are built in, a money-saving point when you are remodeling an old kitchen. Standard kitchen units (oven, refrigerator, cooking units, sink with disposal, cabinets) are designed in multiples of feet (the oven is two feet, refrigerator, four feet); fitting them to your wall and floor.
THING IN KITCHENS

Space is a matter of simple arithmetic. The units are hung on a framework of steel struts which can be set against kitchen walls or erected in any part of the room for a cooking island or peninsula divider. No unit is attached to the wall itself; you can switch equipment at any time. Shadow-free lighting is built into soffits above top cabinets; strip lights are set over work surfaces. The counters have two heights, 36” for normal working, 32” for beating and mixing to prevent arm fatigue. They are topped with a new heat-resistant plastic, can be used for chopping. For illustrated booklet write to H&G Reader Service.

Drop doors on cabinets eliminate bumps from awkward projecting corners. Interior is illuminated by soffit light filtered through translucent panel. Shelves are adjustable.

Steel struts inserted in slots of a master rail bolted to kitchen floor act as free-standing walls to which units are attached, giving complete flexibility of floor plan.

Floor level drawers below base cabinets are 12” deep, use otherwise wasted space for bulk storage, vegetables. Drawers slide smoothly. Front panel is scuff-resistant.

A KITCHEN FOR

A LARGE FAMILY

A large family poses a special problem in kitchen designing. Storage should be plentiful and well planned. The cooking center must be out of the way of family traffic. Dining space is essential. In this kitchen designed for a family of seven (the children range in age from five to fifteen), a center island divides the kitchen into two main areas. One area is for cooking, preparation and clean-up, the other for storage of dishes, glass, linens, appliances. Canned goods and vegetables, bought by the case and crate, are kept in walk-in closets near the laundry area and service entrance. The color scheme of Flame countertops, yellow walls and natural ash cabinets was designed to blend the separate work and storage areas together visually.

Silver serving pieces needed for big parties are stored in compartmented cabinet between doors to breakfast and dining rooms. Linens are in drawers at right.

Hospitality corner in storage area is a kitchen within a kitchen. Two burners and sink are handy for snacks, party preparations. Shallow cabinet stores china, glass.

A self-contained work center saves steps in a big kitchen

Sink and storage area is compactly arranged. A double-door refrigerator and freezer are at the right of the countertop, a dishwasher is built into the base cabinets. Deep corner shelves store electrical appliances at point of use. A high bank of cabinets was extended across the window to give ample storage for dry and bottled foods used in cooking. Doors of cabinets above counter slide up and in, do not block ready access to the other storage shelves.

Built-in cabinets by door to dining room store large quantities of china and crystal. Pull-out hamper holds used table linens until they are removed for laundering.
Center cooking island opposite sink area has twin wall ovens, appliance outlets, surface burners spaced far apart to accommodate four big saucepans at once. Pans are stored above and below the cooking units. Cabinet built around hood is an effective storage idea. Pull-out chopping block doubles for meat carving. Dining area and barbecue oven are at right of cooking center. An acoustical ceiling assures blessed freedom from clatter.

A COUNTRY-STYLE KITCHEN

Deep rooted in the American heritage is a romantic picture of the country kitchen as a symbol of warmth and family solidity, filled with good things of nature's providing. The two kitchens shown here, though completely different, are examples of real country kitchens of today. One is in a ranch-style home in Michigan; the other is in a remodeled house (originally a miller's home) set in the Pennsylvania Dutch landscape. In the modern house the kitchen color scheme was borrowed from nature; a window wall lets in a view of woods and stream. Its materials are simple and warm-toned: brick, fieldstone, birchwood, cork and copper.

The pine-paneled traditional Pennsylvania Dutch kitchen faithfully preserves the Early American look and retains the traditional closed-in atmosphere of security. Its stainless steel equipment (hard-wearing modern equivalent of the silver-toned pewter and zinc of old-time kitchens) blends with the background of pine cabinets. (A white enameled refrigerator is concealed behind a door.) It is a living kitchen whose hospitable air encourages guests to sit around the dining table or flagstone hearth while the hostess cooks dinner, and to linger after the meal is over.

A gourmet kitchen with a rustic air

A liking for informal entertaining and gourmet cooking influenced the planning of this modern kitchen. It has two wall ovens, a barbecue, a pastry counter with marble slab, a workmanlike cooking island and planned storage, including a floor-to-ceiling wine closet. The materials and colors were chosen to create a restful, hospitable atmosphere. The room's work and dining areas face the view, so guests and hostess can enjoy the pleasures and the tranquility of nature in the heart of the kitchen.
A kitchen true to its tradition

Traditional country kitchen proves that modern efficiency can be combined with yesterday's atmosphere. In the L-shaped work area, a stainless steel cooking top, sink and oven are built into pine cabinets (the under-the-counter oven is less noticeable). An antique seven-foot Dutch cupboard stores linens, silver and china. A metal hood and flagstone hearth were added to the fireplace. Furniture, accessories, rugs are traditional, chintz curtains suggest a documentary print.

A KITCHEN FULL OF COLOR

The kitchens on these pages show how well chosen color schemes can help to solve your problems

To give a sense of space to a compactly designed kitchen, the color scheme suggests a garden. The walls are Blueberry. Cabinets are Sky Blue with Sand countertops. Alternating stripes of Emerald Green and white vinyl tile make the floor area seem wider. Plants and butterfly-print curtains stress the garden theme. U-shaped cooking center makes efficient use of 12' x 15' floor space. Designed by John Hannon Associates for the Union Gas Corporation.

To link indoors and outdoors, this galley kitchen with pass-through window has a color scheme based on natural materials and tones. The floor is cork. The cabinets have natural birch doors and the sink countertops are maple. The cooking center, opposite the sink, has counters of stainless steel and Pastel Sky Blue Formica. Laundry and storage units are in the hallway to the right. Designed by James Durden for Mr. Stuart Durkee, Pasadena, California.

To integrate many work and storage areas, a harmonious background of Pastel Citron walls, natural wood cabinets and Flame countertops was chosen for this large kitchen. The cabinets have clear plastic handles to keep the wall surface visually smooth. Bamboo blinds control the light. Dining area is between the island cooking center and built-in barbecue wall oven. Designed by Peggy Calloway.

To blend cooking and living areas in an open-plan room, the on-a-wall efficiency kitchen has a simple matching color scheme. The cabinets are Japanese ash, painted black and rubbed with white for a soft finish. Countertop is Flame. White equipment is set at an angle to take advantage of limited (13' x 3') floor area. Luminous shoji-like ceiling gives a shadow-free over-all light. Designed by Ralph and Jane Bennett for American Gas Association.

To create a hospitable atmosphere in a kitchen planned for entertaining and family meals, the walls were covered with pastel harlequin wallpaper, and the equipment is a harmonizing pink. Strong accents of black and white—black-and-white tile floor, black hood and lighting fixture, white curtains, point up the soft colors. Marble-topped table is used for buffet parties. Owner and designer: Dorothy Paul.

To encourage family get-togethers in a large living kitchen, the color scheme is bright and inviting. Floor, mosaic tile countertops and refrigerator are Cerulean Blue. Walls are covered with plastic resembling natural burlap that matches the blond wood cabinets. Tile table top repeats curtain pattern. Chairs and stools at snack-cooking counter are upholstered in deep blue plastic. Owner and designer: Jacquelyn Ross.

To subdue strong light in this kitchen that faces west, the walls, ceiling and countertops are light-absorbing gray. Carnation Pink cabinets and pink-toned marbleized tile floor bring stimulating color and warmth to the work areas. The cooking island saves steps and makes use of the large expanse of floor area in this 16' x 18' kitchen. Utility room is to the right of the kitchen. Designed by Marguerite Selnick Associates for Mr. and Mrs. CORE P. COLLINS, Dallas, Texas.
You drive up the hill as far as you can go until Pasadena begins to look like an aerial photograph through the fringe of eucalyptus trees. The road stops at the house called "The Hilltop" and there, beside the swimming pool, is the young man you hear talked about in California wherever people talk houses. You shake hands and comment about the spectacular view; he smiles and proposes to take you around The Hilltop: he wants to show you how he is remodeling his living room—the first change made since he built the house more than five years ago. So you follow him through the interior gardens of rock and sand and tropical shrubbery, through sliding textured panels into rooms whose glass walls face the sky and make you forget the difference between outdoors and indoors.

In the living room now being extended outward over the valley you gaze down into the Rose Bowl and up into mountains: wide windows, with a cluster of push buttons controlling panels of linen shades and trellises below to hide the highway with a screen of flowers. Standing there, you begin to ask Ladd questions about himself and his house.

First the biographical data: born in Oregon 31 years ago, moved to Santa Barbara when he was ten—and attended school in Southern California—went around the world in 1939.

Music had been his chief interest

"That year in Egypt we had a house near the pyramids that I helped to remodel. I was fifteen. I began by helping the workmen lay bricks and became intrigued with the idea of redesigning the house. I suppose that was my first direct experience with architecture."

Music had always been his chief interest: when he entered the University of Southern California he thought of majoring in music but chose architecture instead. "To this day I don't know why."

He studied architecture for six years—with time out for a year in the Navy.

Why six?

"I took an extra year studying landscape architecture. It seemed like the logical extension of architecture. I saw that I needed to know the mechanics of landscaping in order to integrate internal and external space."

While at school he planned Hilltop and built it in 1950 for his mother.

"The house was a laboratory experiment for me. I devoted all my energies to the problem of adapting this house to the land we had bought two years before. This was high land, surrounded with sky, and I became interested in the problem of describing space with architecture. I don't know if that means anything to you. Actually I wasn't analyzing what I was doing at the time—that's always a mistake anyway. I was just experimenting with forms—using walls to cut off views, giving a sense of space behind them. I was learning things, learning that the function of architecture is not only to provide shelter but to handle light, and create a mood with light and space. I experimented with new materials."

Ladd pointed to the stairway of smooth white slabs that seem to drift up from the driveway to the level of the swimming pool.

"This is precast concrete reinforced with steel supports. It was something new—it worked. That's what I mean when I call The Hilltop a laboratory."

Ladd is articulate: he chooses his words carefully. Yet he speaks warmly and expressively, smiling easily, gesturing with his hands, thoroughly absorbed in what he is saying yet attentive to your questions.

You ask him who has influenced his work—Wright? Le Corbusier? He considers the question for a moment.

"Oh, I suppose everybody influences you a little. But in my case—well, I'd have to say Bach and Mozart. One uses forms in architecture the way a musician uses forms in a composition. If I'm floundering around with a problem in design, some contrasting tonal effects will flash through my mind and my problem—whether it involves roof links or contrasting textures—begins to solve itself. When one studies a score—counterpoint is a good example—one sees that many aesthetic structures in music are similar to those one must cope with in architecture."

How would he classify himself as an architect? Does he identify himself with any particular school?

An Age of Synthesis in all art

"My work is a hodge-podge—or to use a more elegant term, a synthesis. I think I have absorbed something from many different sources. My own style is evolving, and you can't define a style until it's completed, finished—like the Gothic or Byzantine. Today you have a so-called International School that stresses purity of form, discipline, functionalism; and you have the so-called Wright School—which has great warmth, extravagance and organic freedom. I am one of those who are trying to find a proper equilibrium between discipline and order on the one hand and warmth and emotion on the other. We are in an age..."
of synthesis in all art forms: the hard crust of tradition has been shattered by rebels and idealists and now we have to adapt their new ideas to what is valid and worthwhile in the past.”

Does this mean that Ladd is critical of most contemporary architecture?

“Put it this way: there is something grotesque about any product that is selfconsciously ‘modern’. The kind of contemporary architecture that arbitrarily rejects the past is a kind of abstraction. I think it is both unnatural and undesirable to break with tradition. The best modern work evolves from the best in traditional architecture.”

Is there a “California School”, and does Ladd identify himself with such a group?

California is a good laboratory

“The essence of contemporary architecture is on a residential level, and California happens to be a good laboratory for this sort of work because of its climate, its freedom from convention, its willingness to experiment. Here you find bankers willing to give loans on houses that would look very strange and very risky to people in the East, who are inclined to have a more conservative outlook. You find contractors, artisans—plasterers for example—eager to try out new materials and willing to use new techniques. As a result, you will find some extraordinary houses tucked away in the hills around here. In another fifty years, what you call the California School will be written about and talked about as something that had a tremendous impact on American architecture.”

Is Ladd still doing residences exclusively—or is he designing other things?

“Like most architects, I wouldn’t want to specialize. The greater the range of your activity, the greater the stimulation. At the moment we are working on large and small residences, a hotel and restaurant, a bank, some factories and several stores. I say ‘we’—two years ago when I opened my office I had only one draftsman. Now I have seven people working with me. The factories we are doing fascinate me because of the problem of integrating one function with another. I find that the brain handles this problem in the same way that it works out the geometry of any aesthetic problem. Defining the relation between a manufacturing department and an assembly department is very much like deciding how to put two textures together.”

What has Ladd learned about the practice of architecture since he opened his (Continued on page 125)

a 16th century cure for the 20th century’s scrawl

In revolt against a frequently indecipherable scrawl that passes for handwriting among today’s young, several British schools, including Eton and Harrow, are teaching a handsome calligraphy called Chancery, or Italic, Script. Imported from Italy in the 16th century, the script lost its purity in the curlicues of the next 300 years but now is restored to its original beauty. This crystal-clear lesson, in a letter from a convert, shows how you may improve your handwriting.

"Sunyside", Uplyme,
Lyme Regis, Dorset
1955 Feb. 4

To the American friend of Mr. Sandeman Allen:

Dear Sir,

The alteration I have made in my handwriting in the past few weeks has evoked a response which has taken me by surprise. I made the change largely as a result of the increase in my correspondence of recent years, when I have received so many letters from people who could not be called illiterate, except for their almost indecipherable handwriting. Usually my answers have been typewritten, but I was led to re-examine my own form, and decided that something ought to be done about it.

I have, since a youth, been interested in calligraphy, but as a decorative art rather than a utility; now it was time to bring it from its niche and apply it to everyday use. A revival of fine writing has been going on over the past fifty years, but within the present decade it has rapidly been popularised, and is now being taught in many schools—even Eton and Harrow. There has been ample demonstration that the style which was characteristic of 16th century Italy, and now known as Chancery Script (cancellaresca corsiva, used in the Papal Chancery), is well suited to modern use, is as speedy as any other clear hand, and is easier to write well.
For anyone interested, I cannot do better than recommend the following two slim books:

Good Handwriting, by John C. Tarr; Phoenix House, Ltd., London. 5/-
Better Handwriting, by George L. Thomson; Puffin Picture Books 2/6

The latter will be found in any good book shop, and the former, if not in stock, can be ordered.

To demonstrate what it is all about, I will show what can happen. The hand in which this is being written is what I formerly used for all ordinary purposes; its faults can in part be attributed to the need for making rapid shorthand notes at school, when I wrote them after school.

It is a little, but not much, faster than this. People speak about 'deformed' handwriting; I would not like mine judged by this. As writing, it is deplorable. My new 'hand' is not yet properly formed; there is a dead weight of scrabble to overcome, but at least it is legible. I do not claim that it is written at scribbling speed, but it is just enough for ordinary personal correspondence.

If something more deliberate is required — say, for addressing parcels — a slight slowing-up will give a hand which, while remaining simple, has more consideration for elegance. So far, in this letter, I have been using a cheap fountain-pen. At this point I change to a steel nib. The fountain pen can never give the crisp hairlines that pedantic writers like to have at their command. The ideal pen is the quill; but since what is desired is that everyone should write better, and there are not enough geese to go round, I say no more about that.

When it comes to writing which is to be looked at as much as read, we are entering the art of calligraphy, in which the Chinese excel, rather than the daily business of handwriting. Perfection in that must be left to those able to attain it; but anyone can write well enough to give the reader a chance to know what it intended, instead of having to guess. Mumbling speech is considered untruthful, but not mumbled writing; yet literacy might be expected to start with letters, even if it went no further.

Here endeth a pretty lesson!

Yours sincerely, [Signature]
French Cooking
Without Tears

Simplified recipes for famous French dishes

by Ruth C. Rosen, from her forthcoming book "Pardon my Foie Gras."\(^*\)

Because the words "French cooking" conjure up awesome names like Escoffier and Louis Diat, the hazards of intricate sauces and recipes peppered with such bewildering terms as \textit{fagot} and \textit{farce}, American housewives tend to regard French cooking as expensive, difficult and time-consuming. This is true of the \textit{haute cuisine}. But cooking for the average French table is more a matter of everyday (often economical) ingredients prepared with care and appreciation. This type of cooking can easily be adapted and simplified to suit our time and tastes. American cooking equipment and appliances can do a faster job than French stoves with their low, slow heat. Ingredients may be cut down without altering the essential flavor. Care is the great consideration. Once you have mastered the sauces on which the success of many recipes depends and have learned the art of seasoning and tasting for flavor, you can gradually build up a repertoire of fine French dishes, without loss of time, temper or tears. This sampling of recipes, ranging from the peasant simplicity of Petite Marmite or Boeuf Bourguignon to the more sophisticated Poulet Madeira, can be your introduction to the principles and philosophy of French cuisine. Philosophy is involved, for to the French the kitchen is the backbone of family life and cooking a labor of love.

POT AU FEU
Serves 4

3 lbs. rump or top round of beef
1/2 lb. beef bones
1 veal knuckle
3 qts. cold water
1 T salt
4 peppercorns
5 dried mushrooms
1 sprig parsley
1 sprig chervil
1 bay leaf
1 clove garlic
4 whole cloves
4 onions
4 carrots
2 leeks
1 turnip

Place beef, bones and salt in large thick-bottomed pan with water. Bring quickly to boil and skim, reduce heat and simmer for a minute. Bring to boil again and skim. Reduce heat and simmer loosely covered for 1 hour. Tie parsley, chervil, bay leaf, cloves in cheesecloth bag and add with remaining ingredients cut in slices. Simmer 2 to 3 hours over very low heat until meat is tender. Place meat on hot serving platter surrounded with vegetables. Serve broth as first course or strain and use as bouillon for onion soup or stock for sauces.

- 1/4 t salt
- 1 t baking powder
- Grated rind of lemon
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 1 c milk
- 1/2 c sweet butter
- 3 T confectioners' sugar
- Juice of 1 orange
- 2 T grenadine
- 1 T each cognac, rum, Cointreau

Sift flour, 1/4 cup confectioners' sugar, salt and baking powder. Add lemon rind, beaten eggs and milk. Heat greased 6" pan and add very thin layer of batter. Brown pancake first on one side and then on the other. Lift to warm plate and repeat for each pancake. Sprinkle pancakes with a little confectioners' sugar. Blend butter and 3 T sugar, juice and grenadine. Stir constantly. Add folded pancakes, turning them in sauce until well covered. Add liqueurs, light with match and turn pancakes in flaming sauce until well flavored.

CHARLOTTE RUSSE

Serves 4

- 1 lb. lady fingers
- 2 T powdered sugar
- 1 c heavy cream
- 1/2 t vanilla
- 1/2 c candied fruit

Line large mold with lady fingers. Whip ice cold cream stiff, then add sugar gradually and vanilla. Whip until quite firm. Fill mold with whipped cream filling. Garnish with candied fruit. (Continued on page 115)

The appeal of simplicity: dinner set and served French country style

A traditional, hearty French dish, such as the famous pot au feu (see recipe on page 97) can be the basis for an informal winter dinner party and the inspiration for a cheerful table setting. Lay the groundwork with the familiar red-and-white checkered tablecloth of the bistro or auberge, choose plates with a traditional pattern and set the silver face downward in the French manner. Add goblets of Cerulean Blue glass, matching napkins, copper accessories. Bring on the steaming pot and the wine. The verdict? C'est magnifique.

Six basic garden projects
and how to cope with them

The structural elements of your garden give it individuality and give you a chance to be creative. They include a terrace to provide a garden viewpoint; boundary fences for privacy; walls to hold banks and provide sunny enclosures; paths along flower borders, and to link special areas; steps to reach different levels; a reflecting pool for cool serenity and garden images. To create many of these is both an appeal and a challenge to your skill with mortar, brick, wood and stone. But while each project, with improvisation and ingenuity, may achieve a happy result at little cost, some will require professional help. You can build a whole terrace for $25 and a handful of blisters. You can pay $10 a running foot for sky-blue plastic fence panels. You can lever a few stepping stones into a path or lay a pierced brick wall. But whatever you tackle, do not over-estimate your capacity for hard labor or under-estimate your own competence, especially when you are working for your own pleasure and satisfaction.

1. TERRACES

To enlarge your living and entertaining space, and give you a wide garden view

Shelter corner of terrace is made of redwood. Diagrams show roof front and section (1); screen fence of horizontal 1" x 1" strips (2); slat bench (3); 4" poured concrete slab with redwood spacers on 8" cinder bed (4); plant box (5).

Opposite No-fade garden terrace in a city yard unifies fresh ideas of color and design with good selection of green plants. Cement pigments substitute for flower colors, are always bright. Some areas are troweled smooth; others have a pebbled surface. Redwood spacer strips in varying widths are laid on base and painted or stained. Rectangular plant beds are integral parts of structural design. In planters are ivy, sedums, fescue tufts, dwarf cryptomeria, other perennials for foliage and texture. Privacy is gained by fencing, screens of eucalyptus and poplar. The terrace is bordered by ivy. This example of happy outdoor living space is based on meticulous planning, practical construction, imaginative use of color, and one of the simplest, most satisfactory types of terrace paving for gardens.

San Francisco garden of Dr. and Mrs. A. B. China. Ebbes, Reyston & Williams, landscape architects.
2. FENCES

To define a boundary,
create privacy
and frame a garden

Vertical bamboo poles make a novel and distinctive variation on the paling fence theme. These poles, wired together, conceal a concrete retaining wall at the rear and give an unusual background to garden plants within the wall. The large diagram shows basic construction section, proportion of footing width to wall height, sloping rear side and drainage stones. The small one illustrates method of attaching wire fasteners against wall. Redwood or cedar stakes would give similarly emphatic vertical effect.

3. WALLS

To hold a slope, change a grade,
create a background

Dry stone wall, at left, is given an S-shape to add interest to a gentle and otherwise featureless slope. Curved line permits greater informality of construction and creates a good garden setting for plants. As shown in the diagram above, dry stone walls should be set on firm base below frost line, sloping outward at rear for strength and at front to catch rain for plant pockets formed in joints. Stones of almost any size and shape may be combined so long as each stone rests firmly on those that support it.
Upright board fencing is shown here in two versions. In the left section: 6" boards are spaced 4" apart and attached, top and bottom, to each side of a 2 x 4 framework. The boards are staggered so that those on one side of the frame are opposite openings on the other. This gives privacy but allows air to circulate. In the right-hand section: upright boards are set between top and bottom boards but at an angle like Venetian blind slats. This cuts off view of adjoining property, while still providing air flow. Square 4" support posts, set in concrete, are 3' apart.

Translucent screen panels serve to fence boundaries, admit light, but completely mask undesirable views. Of corrugated plastic, available in colors, they are easily framed by 2 x 4's at top and bottom, and 4" square supporting posts. Standard 4' x 8' panels set horizontally, as shown above, can be angled to permit good air circulation, an important factor in massed garden plantings. They can be set on end where high screen is preferred. Asbestos cement panels serve similar purposes, as do basket-weave fences of wood or composition board strips.

Concrete blocks are easy for amateur masons to handle and especially good for low walls where structural strength is required. They should be set on concrete footing, which can be poured directly into cleanly dug trench if ground is firm. Get special blocks for corners; cap top blocks with cement to shed water. For retaining walls more than 3' or 4' high, better have a professional check plans or do the job; reinforced concrete or special construction may be needed. Recessed mortar joints create shadow lines. Cement paints give blocks decorative importance.

Pierced brick wall 4" thick is most economical type, and not difficult to construct, once you master the knack of "buttering" (applying mortar to the bricks in the foot-square reinforcing columns. Wall sections are easy to lay since end joints are open. Maximum interval between bricks in each row or course is 4". Concrete footing must be provided below ground as for cement blocks. Single-thickness brick walls cannot be used for retaining or reinforcing slopes. Variant is serpentine curved wall, which requires no columns but is more difficult to build.
4. WALKS

To connect important landscape areas and protect garden from traffic

Stone and pebble path is easily made by laying a single row of large, flat stones on a wide path of pebbles. This type of walk establishes a firm, all-weather surface between house and driveway. The pebbled bed is laid on a 6" tamped cinder base and kept in bounds by an edging of vertical paving blocks (see diagram above). In winter, a walk of close-set stones is easier to keep clear of snow and ice. Pebbled bed adds textural interest. It needs an occasional smoothing with garden rake to stay neat.

5. STEPS

To make every garden level accessible, and to decorate a slope

Wood and concrete steps like those connecting sunken carport and garden at left have a section of each tread filled with earth to hold succulents and other small flowering plants. Diagram at right above shows how steps are framed with 2"-thick planks and spacer blocks to hold plants at one end, concrete with rough pebbled surface at the other. Sectional diagram, left above, shows 3" concrete tread surface on 4" cinder base, also way in which 8" redwood rounds are set in pebbles and cinders.
Irregular flagstone walk has a curb of stones on edge between it and flower beds. This arrangement retains foundation layer of gravel or cinders, keeps both flowers and grass roots out of stone joints and permits interplanting the flagstones with thymes, sedums, other ground cover plants in pockets of good loam at joint intersections. For a more formal effect, the flagstones can be laid in 4" of cement on a cinder base. On level land, walks with cement-filled joints should be slightly sloped towards one side (½" to ¾") for drainage. With solid masonry construction, side curbeds are unnecessary.

Brick paths can be laid on bed of sand with sand swept over the joints and washed between them with a sprinkling can. Path gains in perspective, especially when curved, if bricks are laid lengthwise along path rather than crosswise. Stylized patterns such as basket weave or herringbone are best adapted to straight sided walks. Diagonally laid sawtooth brick curb looks well, helps keep sand in place. Brick walks should be crowned higher in center than at edges, both to shed water and to allow for the settling that comes with use. Re-cleaned common bricks are least expensive, give best effects.

Fieldstone steps are especially suitable on irregular rocky slopes and in rock gardens. Conforming to many different kinds of terrain, they may be of any practical width, vary greatly in design and layout. Treads should measure between 10" and 17" from front to back, risers of 3" to 5". The deeper the tread, the lower the riser should be for safe walking. All step stones should rest on absolutely firm base of other rocks, gravel or tamped cinders. Rock steps lend themselves well to informal planting with bulbs, small shrubs, ground covers, may be designed for formal settings.

Heavy timber steps that form gently inclined stairs for long wooded or grassy slopes are held in place by wood stakes. Old railroad ties are well adapted for steps and should be laid on beds of stones or gravel to prolong life of wood, minimize frost action. The timbers actually serve as front edges of wide treads that may be of turf, pine needles, or tamped earth. Each step should rise at least 5" high and the width of areas behind step edges should be sufficient (at least 3') to make climbing easy without requiring awkward changes of stride. Slope tread areas 1" in 12".
6. POOLS

To create an oasis for water-loving plants and reflect cool garden images

Free-form lily pool has rock garden at back, level turf in front. While your pool may be designed in any shape you wish at ground level, be sure the sides and bottom are curved in one continuous surface to forestall leaks, as in diagram, left below. Allow depth of 2' to 2\(\frac{1}{2}\)' for plant tubs (for reflecting pools depth as little as 4'' is practical). Dig earth and tamp to shape of pool; allow 6'' for thickness of concrete. Heavy poultry or form wire fencing, cut and formed to pool shape, reinforces stiff concrete which is applied all at one time. Rocks and curbing are added after concrete has set, and may conceal inlet and overflow pipes. Large pools should have a clean-out drain.

Ready-made reflecting pool, shown opposite and in diagram at right, is bottom part of a steel tank resting in a gravel-lined hole dug in firm earth. Pool is centered in a sunken panel with pocket-size flower beds at corners. When it overflows during rains, water trickles over rim and drains to stones below. For cleaning, the pool is siphoned with garden hose. Similar types may be of plastic, metal, part of barrel or hogshead. Allow at least 3 ft. in diameter for one water-lily plant. Metal should be coated with special asphalt or plastic paints. Light blue-green best reveals flashing goldfish, sets off beauty of water plants; dark colors give best reflecting surface.

WHEN YOU DECIDE TO REMODEL

Any house worth modernizing is worth Crane.

When you remodel a "vintage" bathroom with new Crane fixtures, you are getting far more than first choice in beauty and good taste. Crane fixtures, styled by famed designer Henry Dreyfuss, are advanced today, will be modern tomorrow when others are beginning to look old-fashioned.

And, if you ever decide to sell, a Crane bathroom will make your house worth much more than the cost of remodeling.

Ask your Crane Plumbing and Heating Dealer about the wide selection of designs and prices in the complete Crane line.

"COUNTESS" lavatory fits into tile or Formica counter-top. Ready to install, prices start at $42.90. (Suggested consumer price)

"CRITERION" lavatory either fits into counter-top or stands alone. Ready to install, prices start at $117.15. (Suggested consumer price)

COME TO CRANE FOR IDEAS

Want some wonderful bathroom ideas? You'll find lots of them in these two booklets, "Crane Bathroom Modernizing Ideas" and "Crane Counter-top Lavatories." Both are free. CORKSCREW

THE BREATHELESS VOGUE FOR VODKA

By JAMES A. BEARD

Vodka has been a pleasant influence in my life ever since the day in my flask-carrying, party-going youth when my father presented me with a large, mysterious package wrapped in plain paper. "Drink this," he said, "instead of bootleg whiskey."

The package contained dozens of flat tin cans of vodka, colorfully labeled in Russian characters. It was smuggled vodka, of course, brought in by ships that touched the China coast ports. My first taste of it was very tentative. I expected it to be fiery and I half thought it might have the flavor of potatoes. It packed a wallop, yes, but it was by no means lethal, and I was delighted with its clean flavor—or lack of flavor. So I began as a pre-repeal vodka fan.

Now, of course, there are millions of other enthusiasts to help me protest the myth that vodka is a dangerously potent brew of fermented potatoes. Like gin, rye and Scotch, vodka is a grain distillation, and its alcoholic strength is not startlingly high. Most vodka is 80 proof, or milder than most gins and whiskies. Only a few distillers offer 100 proof vodka.

It was three years after the Congress of Vienna in 1815 that the firm of Smirnoff began the distillation of vodka from grains in Russia and soon became official purveyors to the royal house. A hundred years later the Smirnoff secret fled the Red revolution to France, and production went on there. After the repeal of Prohibition the firm moved to Connecticut and were the first people in the American vodka market. They have been followed by such other fine old Russian names as Romanoff, Orloff and Hiram Walker.

One sort of vodka, called Dubrowka, has a blade of sweet grass in each bottle that gives the liquor a somewhat sweetish herb flavor. But other vodkas contain no aromatics and are practically flavorless. It is one of the few spirits—Cognac and Armagnac are others—that do not ruffle your taste buds so that you miss the true flavor of the wines served at the dinner to follow. I can't argue this virtue too strongly, however, being of the opinion that a moderate amount of any spirit really doesn't kill the taste for wine.

Generations of Muscovites have drunk their vodka neat. Neat or not, it should be served well iced. A famous Russian restaurant in Paris—Dominique—serves vodka in a cooler, like Champagne or white wine. You are expected to drink it right through the meal because it "cuts" the heaviness of the rich dishes of Russian and Polish cuisine. I do not recommend this European custom to Americans who sensibly prefer wine, not spirits, during dinner.

Vodka is ideal accompaniment for caviar. It should be iced and drunk in small glasses—one full glass at a gulp after a hearty partaking of caviar. With the exception of Champagne, it is the only drink for which caviar has a strong affinity.

In the last five years the popularity of vodka has grown spectacularly. The producer who uses the phrase "It leaves you breathless" attributes the rise in consumption to an American fondness for discovery and novelty. Women like vodka because it is a relatively low calorie drink.

THE VODKA MARTINI is the current rage. It is drier than its ancestor the gin martini. To make: Combine 4 parts of vodka to 1 part of dry vermouth. Always pour the liquor over cracked ice. Stir well—one of the great faults of martini mixing is too little stirring. Strain the martini into chilled glasses and add a twist of lemon peel. It's best to serve each martini in a freshly chilled glass, even seconds and thirds. Keep several glasses in the refrigerator for constant martini drinkers and you will win their praise.

GIBSON WITH VODKA: Pour 8 parts of vodka to 1 part of French vermouth over cracked ice and stir well. Strain into well chilled glasses and add pickled onions. The original addition for a Gibson was a pickled hazelnut, but unfortunately these no longer can be bought on the market. If you want to make them for yourself it is not a hard job. Merely cover blanched filberts with white wine vinegar and a touch of taragon. Let them stand for about two weeks before using.

BLOODY MARY: Recommended last month as a morning-after drink, this stands on its own as a refreshing luncheon cocktail. Combine in a cocktail shaker 2 ounces of vodka, 3 ounces of tomato juice, ½ ounce of fresh lemon juice, a dash of Worcestershire sauce, salt, pepper and, if you like, a dash of Tabasco. Add cracked ice, shake very well and strain into a chilled glass; serve with a dusting of paprika on top.

LONG RED: This variation on the Bloody Mary is served at a well known restaurant. It is simply larger. To 3 ounces of vodka add 5 ounces of tomato juice and the appropriate seasonings. Serve in a tall highball glass with ice.

This drink served in a chilled soup cup makes a delicious first course for lunch. Use the formula for Bloody Mary: add a dusting of chopped parsley and a bit of grated lemon rind; serve as iced soup with hot cheese crackers.

SCREW DRIVER: This has become the most popular drink the West Coast has seen in years. Merely add 2 ounces of vodka to a tall glass of orange juice with ice. Ideal for Sunday brunch in that it combines the first course and cocktail.

HAWAIIAN DELIGHT: This is another simple tall drink, made of pineapple juice with the addition of vodka and ice. Enhance it with a spray of fresh mint in which to bury your nose as you drink.

VODKA DAIQUIRI: This appeals to those who love the flavor of lime. Pour the juice of 1 large or 2 small limes over ice in a shaker. Add a barspoon of finely granulated sugar and 2 large or 2 small limes over ice in a shaker. Add a barspoon of finely granulated sugar and 1 jigger (1½-2 ounces) of vodka. Shake furiously and strain into chilled cocktail glass.

VODKA GIMLETs: These are favorites with people who are loyal to the flavor of Rose's lime juice—and there are many. Combine 3 parts vodka to 1 part of Rose's lime juice and pour over ice in a shaker. Shake well, strain into a large cocktail glass and add a splash of soda.

MOSCOW MULE: Some years back a great Hollywood restaurant perfected the Moscow Mule and used it to publicize not only the restaurant but also a copper mug. So traditionally it is served in a copper mug, but it tastes just as good in pewter or glass. Pour 2 ounces of vodka over several ice cubes in a tall glass. Add a squeeze of lime and the half lime which you used to squeeze. Fill the glass with ginger beer—not ginger ale. Refreshing and bitey.

VODKA COLLINS: This, of course, resembles other collins, but I think most people make a very bad collins. To make a good one, combine in a shaker the juice of a large juicy lemon (or 1¼ lemons of the less juicy type) with a small barspoon of sugar and 3 ounces of vodka. Shake well. Pour ice and all into a tall glass. Add soda to taste, a strip of lemon peel and a long slice of cucumber peel.

VODKA FIZZ: This is best made in a double old fashioned glass. Pour 2 ounces of vodka and 3 ounces of pineapple juice over 2 ice cubes. Add the juice of a lime and blend well with a spoon. If you have a sweet tooth, add 1 barspoon of powdered sugar. Fill the glass with soda and decorate with mint.
A crisp green salad, flavored with herbs and shining with oil is a time-honored accompaniment to a good meal.

Soups

PETITE MARMITE
Serves 4
Add one 3 lb. disjointed chicken to recipe for Pot au Feu and serve in individual casserole or marmite topped with thin crisp toast and a sprinkling of grated Parmesan cheese. Place under broiler for 3 minutes to brown.

CREME D'ASPERGE
Serves 4

2 bunches asparagus
1 clove garlic, minced
4 shallots, chopped
Salt and cayenne pepper
3 T butter
¼ c flour
1 egg yolk
1 T cream
1 T chopped parsley

Slice all but 10 asparagus tips and add with shallots, garlic and seasonings to melted butter. Slowly cook until very tender. Remove from flame and stir in flour until smooth. Add water slowly and cook until just before boiling. Simmer 10 minutes, stirring. Put through fine strainer or puree in blender and return to pan. Mix 1 T cream with egg yolk and add to rest of cream and then to soup.

Sauces

BROWN SAUCE
Yield: 4 cups
½ c beef, veal or pork fat
½ c chopped onion
¼ c chopped carrot
¼ c chopped carrot
½ c water
1 egg yolk
1 T cream
½ c cream
1 T chopped parsley

Melt fat and add carrot and onion cooking until tender. Add flour and cook slowly until vegetables brown, stirring frequently. Add stock and remaining ingredients. Cook slowly until reduced to 4 cups. Strain and use as base for sauces, in stews and wherever rich sauce is desired.

HOLLANDAISE SAUCE
Serves 4 to 6
3 egg yolks
3 T cold water
1 T lemon juice
¾ t salt
¾ t cayenne pepper
½ lb. butter

Place egg yolks and water in top of double boiler over hot, not boiling water. Beat well with wooden spoon but keep over hot water. Add butter bit by bit stirring constantly. When thickened add lemon juice and beat well. Serve at once.

SAUCE VERTE
Serves 4
3 egg yolks
1 T tarragon vinegar
Salt and pepper
1½ c salad oil
½ c strained cooked broccoli
2 T cream
Cayenne

Cook reserved asparagus tips in salted water and add. Reheat and serve with chopped parsley.
FRENCH COOKING

Beat egg yolks, vinegar, salt and pepper together well. Add oil very slowly, beating constantly and add broccoli, cream and cayenne. Serve with fish.

Eggs

OEUFFS COCOTTES FERMIÈRE
Serves 4

4 eggs
4 T paté or liver paste
Salt and pepper
1 T chopped shallot, sautéed
4 T cream
4 T sautéed mushrooms

Butter 4 ovenproof egg cups. Place 1 T liver paste or paté in cups. Top with an egg, season, and add shallot and cream to each. Top with mushrooms. Bake in moderate oven for 5-7 minutes.

OEUFFS RAVIGOTANTS À LA MORNAY
Serves 4

4 whole tomatoes
4 eggs
1 T olive oil
Salt and pepper
1 c Bechamel sauce*
1/4 c grated cheese
2 T chopped green olives

Cut slice from top of tomatoes, hollow out, invert and drain. Sauté in oil for 3 minutes. Season and place in oiled ovenproof dish, Break egg into each tomato and bake in moderate oven until eggs are done, 5 to 7 minutes. Heat Bechamel and add grated cheese. Serve sauce over tomatoes and eggs and garnish with chopped olives.

*Recipe given in Sauce section.

SAUTEÉD FROG’S LEGS
Serves 4

8 frog’s legs (hind ones)
2 T lemon juice
Flour
2 cloves garlic, crushed
5 T butter
2 T chopped chives
Salt and pepper
2 T white wine
1 T chopped parsley

Wash frog’s legs, dry, sprinkle with lemon juice, and dust lightly with flour. Heat butter and add garlic. Add chopped chives and frog’s legs. Shake pan while browning to prevent burning. When golden, season and pour on wine. Serve with chopped parsley.

in wine and stock 4 to 5 hours. Sauté mushrooms separately. Sauté onions in 2 T butter and sugar, salt and pepper. Serve beef sliced, garnished with mushrooms and onions and freshly chopped parsley. Strain sauce meat has cooked in and serve with meat.

PAPIETTES DE YEUV
Serves 4

2 lbs. veal from leg
1/2 c bread crumbs
2 T chopped parsley
2 truffles
3 oz. sherry
1 T butter
1 egg, beaten
1/2 c paprika
1/4 c freshly ground pepper
1 t salt
4 thin slices ham
5 T butter

Have veal cut in thin slices from leg. Slice truffles thin and heat in butter and 1 oz. sherry. Add crumbs, parsley, 2 oz. sherry, egg and seasonings. Spread on veal slices and top with slices of ham. Roll and tie ends. Brown in butter and baste with stock. Simmer until tender, approximately 20-30 minutes. Remove strings and serve over steamed rice.

bacon until brown. Add crumb and egg yolks. Stuff artichokes and wrap with bacon. Place in buttered casserole, cover with stock and wine and bake 30 minutes in moderate oven. Combine butter and flour and add liquid from pan in which artichokes baked. Stir smooth. Remove bacon from artichokes and serve topped with sauce.

DUCHESS POTATOES

Serves 4

4 large potatoes
Salt and pepper
2 T butter
1 egg
1 t baking powder
Hot fat

Boil potatoes in water until tender but not mushy. Drain and dry. Press through sieve or use potato masher. Add egg and butter, salt and pepper. Add baking powder. Force through pastry tube to make decorative mounds on border and brown under broiler, or drop a heaping tablespoon of mixture at a time into deep hot fat. Drain on absorbent paper and serve at once.

It is not too long since the music lover—whether his taste was for the light, the heavy or the in-between—was the only one to benefit from the record and to value what it provided. Thanks to the tape-recording process and what it can contrive, there are compelling reasons why even the tone-deaf (I shudder to think that such a category may exist) can find pleasure and reward in the long player and its mate the disk.

Where vocalists—using the term in its broadest sense—are concerned, few have exceeded Sir Winston Churchill in the power to engross and animate by the sheer power of speech. In the latest of the "I Can Hear It Now" series (Columbia 5066) Fred W. Friendly and Ed Murrow have given us a profound exercise in the persuasive power of superb prose. Innumerable archives have been called upon to provide a dramatic review of Churchill's insight into the roots of all recent (and much current) evil, ranging from his pre-war speeches when Hitler was regarded as a "pushy" but hardly dangerous fellow, to the rallying cries of wartime, and warnings of the "peace."

A model of interlocution

The vocal bile and verbal inflection of all the famous Churchillisms—"some chicken, some neck," that jackal, Mussolini," "an iron curtain has descended" are here preserved in all their immediacy. Also there is a sample of the famous occasion when Churchill stood before a joint session of the United States Congress and remarked that he might have gotten there "on his own" had his father been American and his mother British, rather than "the other way around." Murrow's terse narration is a model of what such interlocution should be, the assembling of the bits into a continuously absorbing whole.

Another context of voices is provided by Heritage LP-H0059 in which is presented a twenty-year review of the famous "Town Meeting of the Air" broadcasts from Town Hall in New York. Besides absorbing again the broad drawl of Wendell Willkie, the cantankerous voice of Harold Ickes and the top-sergeant snarl of Hugh Johnson, on to the measured irony of Fiorello LaGuardia and the hard-core sense of Robert A. Taft, the hour-long disk recalls many of the rapid we have run in our time: "Intervention," "Lend-Lease," "Fourth Term," the "U.N.," the "Welfare State," "Korea," etc., etc. What is most useful is that it re-creates in the words of, say, Senators Nixon, Knowland, and Sparkman, the atmosphere in which General MacArthur's recall from Korea was discussed when it was happening, or the fight for "Equal Rights" led by Walter White, or even the baleful influence of the comics with John Mason Brown pitching and cartoonist Al Capp catching. John A. Daly conducts this tour of the past in his urbane way, and with a warm sense of what it means to live in a land where opinion is aired, not grounded.

The humanitarians

The same Heritage firm has produced a number of other "documentaries" of more specialized but still interesting sorts: a collection of humanitarian sentiments from Gandhi, Einstein, Nehru, etc. entitled "Conquest by Love" (G 0056); a choice collection of addresses, especially interesting in this Presidential year, called "If I am Elected" (A 1291); and for those who have forgotten how one of the great men of our time sounded "Shaw Speaks" (A 0074). Others who have contributed to the considerable total of similar interest are Decca (9628) with "FDR Speaks," RCA Victor with "Mr. President" (LM 1753) and "Campaign Speeches of Adlai Stevenson" (LM 1769), not to mention the first three issues of the "I Can Hear It Now" series (Columbia ML 4095, 4261, and 4340), which pass in fascinating review the sound of the world as it was between 1920 and Pearl Harbor.

Some of the sports sounds in the latter were so welcomed that Columbia authorized the creation of an entire LP titled "Greatest Moments in Sports" (ML 5000). Necessarily fragmentary because a microphone was not always conveniently available to record a competitor's words as the drama occurred, they nevertheless bring back, through reminiscence of Carl Hubbell, Dizzy Dean, Gene Tunney, Jack Dempsey or Knute Rockne, the emotions and elations.

of their great feats. Of prizeworthy value is the on-the-spot quote, as it happened, of Joe Louis saying, early in the war, that he was confident of American victory because “We is on God’s side.” Red Smith and Marty Glickman, two men of eminent qualification, are the editorial brains of this worthy endeavor.

The lighter sides

From the historical to the hysterical may seem a transition too great to be made between paragraphs, but it is even more easily made by changing disks on the record player. It may be cheating a little to import Victor Borge, Anna Russell or Gerald Moore at this point, since all utilize music to some degree in their performances, but let us say that on the whole it is painlessly administered. Of course everybody knows Borge, so that record numbers alone will suffice (Columbia CL 554, CL 6013, CL 646), and almost everybody knows Anna Russell (“Sings? on Columbia ML 4594, “Guide to Concert Audiences” on ML 4928. and “Square Talk on Popular Music” on ML .S0361. For those unacquainted with the latter, she is the song satirist who has been described by one ebullient reviewer as “the funniest woman in the world.” This merely confirms what we have known right along—namely, that Beatrice Lillie is out of this world—but let us not quibble about mere exaggeration where enthusiasm is concerned. Russell is a very funny person, and her depiction of concert types, burlesques of trends in current music, and deflation of pretension in general comes through the loudspeaker very effectively.

On a quieter, more sophisticated level of drollery is the performance of Gerald Moore, the Torontonian who has made his home in London for thirty years. He has also made a reputation for himself as the pianist most in demand as accompanist when the premier singers, violinists, cellists etc. of the world visit London to perform in public and to record. A witty man as well as a wise one, Moore first put his thoughts forward in a series of books, of which “The Unashamed Accompanist” (Columbia 35222, “Mid-Re9oncy” Cocktail Table. The valuable observations in his book prompted an enterprising impresario to try Moore out as a platform personality on his own at an Edinburgh Festival of a few years back. The venture propered so well that his orbit widened, bringing him to New York in the fall of 1954, and for a swing through the country earlier this winter.

Moore not only has the tricks of the trade at his fingertips, enabling him to differentiate, pointedly, between the true and the false in the accompanist's art; he also has a lively sense of words to convey his thoughts, and a polished platform manner to keep an audience interested. Proper enjoyment requires the musical interest to follow Moore's discourse on the part an expert accompaniment plays in the full performance of Schubert songs or the creations of Debussy and Ravel; but his wide-ranging stock of anecdotes and allusions are suitable for mixed company—meaning, in this instance, music lovers and non-mu-ic lovers.

As for the enjoyment of the spoken word itself, the catalogues are now so full of a number of things that one almost expects a disk titled "Walt Whitman—Leaves of Grass" on the Poetry label (300) to offer readings by the Good Gray Poet himself. However, if science cannot contrive that miracle for a man who died in 1892, it has been foreclosed in preserving the utterances of the man most closely linked with Whitman to Lincoln ("O Captain, My Captain!") and to the land ("I hear America singing")
Carl Sandburg on Decca 5135
are excerpts from "The People,
Yes" and on Decca 7541 a colcollection of other gems. Even more extensive is the SR Original 1 on which Sandburg reads his "A Lincoln Preface." This sums up more of the grandeur and the simplicity of that man than almost anything ever written about him. For those of other tastes, the shelves are laden with provocative matter by writers from Aiken, Conrad to Williams, Tennessee. That, however, is another story.

THE LAST DAYS OF THE TV SCOFFER

Snobs of the Kafka and casselette caste need another good thing to ignore

By ANDY ROONEY

Things are getting tough all over for the Super-Cerebral set. First they had to give up Not Going to the Movies as a sure-fire conversational gambit at their little casselette gatherings. Now it is becoming increasingly difficult to interrupt the consumption of noonie vraiarine with a diatribe on Not Watching Television. But in the last stronghold of diehard Non-Watchers the subject, though moribund, is still forlornly alive, and a briefing on the tactics of Watching versus Not-Watching Television will benefit the unwatchy Watcher who chances upon their company.

At their parties people stand around in small clusters mentioning shows they didn't see, didn't bother to watch or started to watch and turned off. If someone mentions a specific show, the classic conversation goes this way.

First Speaker: "Did you see that thing they did on Channel Four last night?"

Second Speaker: "I started to watch it but I turned it off."

Third Speaker: "I never turn on that thing they did on Channel Four."

First Speaker: "Did you see that movie in eight years?" The son who used to say, "I haven't watched it but I turned it off."

First Speaker: "Did you see that movie about the people who are shot to death?"

Second Speaker: "The movies are getting tough all over."

Fourth Speaker: "We don't own a television set. I wouldn't watch it if I had one in my house."

The fourth man speaks with the same intense pride as the person who used to say, "I haven't seen a movie in eight years." The second and third speakers used to go to the movies only to see Maedchen in Uniform, The Bicycle Thief, Nanook of the North and reruns of early Chaplin pictures.

Non-Watchers can be recognized by any Watcher. If you are a Watcher and detect any of these signs, don't mention television unless you're prepared to defend yourself. The average Non-Watcher took up gin-and-tonic about four years ago and has already given it up in favor of vodka and tonic. In the winter he drinks martinis on the rocks, please, very dry. He eats late. The best play he ever saw closed after 17 performances on Broadway but he goes to The Theatre regularly. He'll usually ask what happened to Henry Morgan, whom he loved, and if he has traveled recently it was to Italy or Spain.

According to the evidence Non-Watchers themselves submit, they spend their evenings listening to hi-fi and reading good books. If book publishers have not indicated any sharp upturn in sales which can attribute to Non-Watchers' purchases, it is probably because these people read Sartre, Kafka, The Kenyon Review and are re-reading Melville. No one actually buys these. One has them.

Offhand, you might think that because Non-Watchers don't talk about television programs, Nothing of the kind. They read the television critic John Crosby and agree with everything he has to say. There are very few casual Non-Watchers. Not watching television is something you don't get into by chance. Every day of his life the non-Watcher is aggressively not watching television.

"If you're a fighter who doesn't like to go out of his way to avoid trouble, you might want to join forces with a small but militant group of networkers called Television Defenders. There are a few tricks all Defenders should know."

First, in any gathering where it looks as though the topic of conversation might turn to television, get on some mutual ground with the people you have spotted as Non-Watchers. Start talking about The Theatre, for instance. Pick a Broadway play and say, "I thought the book was weak but Pinza carried it beautifully. He doesn't even have to sing." They may or may not agree but at least you've tricked them into thinking you're one of them.

"If they agree that Pinza was superb, say quietly but firmly, 'I've loved everything he's done on television, too, haven't you?"

You haven't whipped them but you've got them off balance.

condescending attitude towards your viewing, be careful. He might ask, for example, whether George Gobel is on every night or not. Don’t let him look you in the eye and get away with that. They are a sneaky lot. Look him right back in the eye and tell him, “Every night but Sunday,” or, “Every other night.” He knows as well as you that Gobel is on once a week.

A variation of this same attack by the Non-Watcher might go this way. “I’ve heard a lot about some new comedian. Ah, what’s his name? George Gobel! Is he good?” Your answer is, “I watched Gobel the other night and I never laughed so hard in my life.”

You’ve just made a lifelong enemy; he knows you both know the man’s name is Gobel.

An incident that occurred at a Chicago cocktail party a short time ago shows the militant Watcher at the top of his form. The hostess at the party was being congratulated on her taste in furniture.

“I hope you notice,” she said, “we don’t have a television set.”

The Watcher had noticed that the cheese was spread awfully thin on the crackers, but he honestly hadn’t noticed the absence of TV. He was from Connecticut and he was pretty used to sets concealed in old Dutch sinks. It didn’t occur to him that there was or was not one in the room, but he did recognize his hostess immediately as a bewildering Non-Watcher.

“I wish we didn’t have one,” he said, rising to the challenge magnificently. “I waste more damn time. The other night I got trapped into wasting a whole hour and a half watching Gian Carlo-Menotti’s new opera The Saint of Bleecker Street.”

He could not have scored more cleanly. Carlo-Menotti is a Non-Watchers’ darling, and the play had been more effectively presented on television than it had been in its short run on Broadway. The hostess was put in the position of having to agree with him that watching Carlo-Menotti was a waste of time, or of disagreeing and finding herself defending television. She excused herself to introduce a new couple coming in the door.

Non-Watchers have suffered heart-breaking setbacks in the past two years. Broadway plays have been done on television; ophthalmologists have made statements to the effect that TV is not bad for children’s eyes; Fred Allen has appeared regularly on the kind of quiz show that was too good for radio; it has been announced that the coming TV season will see Sir Laurence Olivier in a three-hour version of Richard III. (Which, for all most Watchers know, is longer than Shakespeare wrote it.)

There are even indications that television is not stifling our creative talents or taking away our appetite for first-hand experience. Just as many people are climbing tall mountains; just as many kids are running away from home; authors are writing more books, poets are writing more poetry and inventors are inventing more inventions. There is no evidence that people are running in a rut. By absorbing some of the leisure and entertainment in an easily digested form, Watchers are simply filling in the big cracks everyone has in his productive, creative, reflective day. Television viewers are reading more newspapers and more magazines more thoroughly than ever before because they are interested in more things. Television has opened up thousands of broad avenues of interest to them.

The industry doesn’t have time to claim this for itself but it is even probable that television has already begun to improve our republican governmental structure. It is becoming increasingly difficult for an office-seeker to win an election unless his opinions and philosophy accurately reflect the majority of the people he wants to represent. If a Non-Watcher read everything of a political nature that he could get his hands on, it would be hard for him to match the information a Watcher is exposed to on television.

Naturally there are hundreds of television programs no intelligent person would want to hasten to defend, but regardless of the merit of any one show or any series of shows there are few people whose waking moments are filled so fully of the culturally pure that they can’t find time for six or eight hours of television a week. A little intolerance can be a fine thing: it might be well if more Watchers were a little less patient with their friends who raise eyebrows when the subject of television comes up. Perhaps then they’d find something new to disdain.

Contrast or complement the fixtures with colorful towels, curtains, floor coverings—your bathrooms provide an unbounded opportunity for expressing home personality and home beauty.

But you'll want to make sure each bathroom fixture has beauty for years to come. So tell your architect, builder or plumber you prefer AllianceWare—porcelain-on-steel. With AllianceWare, you not only have bathroom fixtures of beauty in design and color, but you'll also appreciate the safety, the roominess and convenience features built into AllianceWare bathtubs.

Every AllianceWare tub has a "grab rail" construction—exclusive with AllianceWare—along the outer rim, to make entering or leaving the bath easier and safer. A broad, flat bottom provides a firm footing when showering. A wide seating rim is another feature for bathing convenience. The AllianceWare patented method of installation prevents the tub from settling or pulling away from the wall. A built-in wall-guard keeps water from seeping in between wall and tub. And the smooth, porcelain-on-steel surface is stainproof—easy to clean and keep clean.

Whether planning a new home or remodeling your present home, you'll find AllianceWare meets all your ideas of color, beauty and convenience at much less cost than you dreamed possible.

An Idea for an Extra Bath or a Bath in very Limited Space

AllianceWare designers have recognized the need of modern families for an extra bath in limited space, yet which will contain all the basic advantages of a full-size bathroom.

Where this problem exists, the AllianceWare Junior Bathtub shown in the small bathroom illustrated above provides the ideal answer. This bathroom provides all the advantages of a full-size bathroom except that the AllianceWare tub is only 42 inches long instead of the usual 60 inches. The entire bathroom can be installed in a space 5 feet 6 inches wide by 6 feet 9 inches long and still provide every bathroom facility. Where space is your problem, your answer is AllianceWare. If interested, we'll gladly send a plan for this bathroom.
office that he had not realized before?

"I have learned that the future of architecture depends on close coordination between the architect, the landscape architect, the contractor, the interior decorator—and also the banker who finances the construction. Every project should be the joint effort of everyone concerned with building the house. In my own office I have a decorating and landscaping department, and I have mechanical and structural engineers and real estate advisers working with me on a consultative basis. The architect's responsibilities are no longer confined to drawing up a blue print of the house plan—as a matter of fact, it never should have been only that."

In other words, an architect ought to be a kind of chief of staff in charge of planning and building the house?

"That's right. Otherwise you have a client calling on an architect who presents him with a plan. Then the contractor steps in. The idea has not been explained to him; he hasn't been consulted. Possibly he will object to some feature of the house. And he may be right. Or the other people involved may have reason to object.

The terrain may be wrong for the average American looking for a house, or he can aspire to any kind of individuality of design. Aren't most houses mass produced and consequently standardized?

"Yes—and I think the standardization leads to decay. The solution is to mass produce certain units of the house—kitchens, bathrooms, garages, utility areas—as economically as possible. Then other units such as living rooms and bedrooms can be set aside and designed according to the tastes, the needs and the inclinations of the owner. There is no reason why such a house should cost much more than the take-it-or-leave-it houses going up today. I have designed homes for as little as $16,000. I have finished one recently that cost about $10 a square foot."

What are Ladd's plans for the future?

"I want to go on doing what I'm doing. I like my work so much I don't have much time for diversions. Music? Yes, of course. And I read as much as I can. My other interests? Oh, I dart around. I have become interested in the Dead Sea Scrolls. It's one reason why I'm looking forward to going to the Near East this winter. But I don't seem to have much time for other things. There is so much work to do."

It's getting late. The sun is beginning to sink into the bank of yellowish smog floating above Los Angeles. You hear the swelling murmur of the late afternoon traffic on the Pasadena Freeway. Here on Hilltop the air is growing cool.

You walk back past the quiet gardens, the breath-taking vistas, the slabs of masonry and the glass walls. Ladd suggests that you stay for dinner and you would like to be able to accept, but you can't. So you shake hands and get into your car. Driving away you look around and wave goodbye and he waves back. You remember him standing there, a young man alone on a hill top with big ideas and plenty of time ahead of him.
THE KEY TO PLANNING

In building a new bathroom or modernizing an old one you will find more materials, equipment, color schemes and distinctive accessories on the market today than were ever available before. They offer better performance along with better looks—longer life and less care. But before you pick colors and countertop decorations give some thought to the essentials of a good bathroom. Better bathrooms begin with better planning; for storage, lighting, ventilation, warmth, durability, quiet, easy cleaning, sound plumbing and fixtures. These are the ingredients that determine whether a bathroom is as convenient as it is beautiful. Here are plans and picture of bathrooms that meet the requirements.

Man’s bathroom includes the luxury of a cot for a nap and storage for portable massage table in closet at right of tub. Floor is vinyl in spatterdash beige pattern; walls and countertop are ceramic tile in gunmetal color. Long cabinet with washbasin has plentiful storage. Architect, George Hickey III.
A BETTER BATHROOM

Children's bath has twin lavatory basins to speed up early morning dawdlers. Shower and toilet occupy adjacent compartments in the simple floor plan. In the mirror, which is large enough for several children to use at the same time, can be seen individual towel bars at heights small children can reach.

Architect, Eliot Noyes.

Good storage is the outstanding feature of this bath-dressing room. The picture shows only half of the long storage wall (see plan right) which is divided into compartments and drawers sized for clothing. There are bookshelves, day bed between shower and toilet compartments, for relaxation after bath.

Architect, Burton A. Schutt.

mya. Nineteen hundred miles from Honolulu and nearly 1,300 from Fiji, it has elbow room, if not much else. A mariner's handbook declares: "The most conspicuous objects...are the wreck of the President Taylor, located near the western side of the island near its main entrance: a lone palm tree on the northwest point, and a large kou bush on the southwest point."

There you have the scenic attractions of this island, so important that neither Britain nor the United States is willing to admit the other owns it. Hence, the eight square miles of coral bordering a blue lagoon (twenty feet is the highest elevation) now form an official condominium, with officers of both governments on an atoll which never supported a native before aircraft made it important.

Luxury of Yore Canton was an overnight stop on the original South Pacific flights of Pan-American World Airways. Scheduled flying boats put down on the lagoon in 1939, and passengers put up at a hotel which even boasted a French chef. Luxury lasted until the war, when the hotel became a Navy club and the President Taylor, a round-the-worldliner, landed 1,200 soldiers sooner than planned—by going aground on the coral reef.

The ship never did get off and the soldiers sometimes thought they wouldn't, either. But expected attacks on the island never developed. The airfield the soldiers built served importantly while war lasted in the South Pacific, then found traffic dwindling as battles moved west.

Faster and bigger planes have lessened Canton's post-war importance, too. Planes of three airlines (Pan-American, Qantai—have lessened Canton's post-war importance. But on any of the three, the traveler not in too tearing a hurry might wish for a little non-serious engine trouble to hold him over—it's about the only time anybody gets to see more than the airstrip and a restaurant; and a few hours can be fun. (Airlines don't sell tickets to any of the three without special arrangements: not enough accommodations, water or food to supply too many casual visitors.)

Strictly for the Birds There are no better reefs for exploring than these. Australia's Great Barrier reef is hundreds of miles long, but far out to sea and often impossible to land on. By contrast coral at these atolls is close to shore and just as vivid in color and thronged with fish and mollusks. Personally, I'm a non-working swimmer, content to float in soup-warm water or to mooch around a reef with a diving mask not trying to spear anything, just to pick up a few bright cowries or to marvel why bêche de mer should ever be a delicacy, or even considered food.

Why should anybody care for coral bluffs without even a decent tree on them? Well, there are the birds: terns, boobies, frigates, albatross, nesting in the brush, crying in the star-lit night and bobbing endlessly on the beaches. Birds have interfered with aircraft take-offs on some islands; millions of terns lay their eggs and rear their young (in the lagoon. As early as 1914 scene of horror and death.

The fish are interesting, whether you're hooking a big one or tuna, watching stupid parrot fish or being nosed by a wreck, or diving down to spear a perch or huge grouper, or just spying on the tiny, bright blue, bright red or striped and spotted minnows which flutter around every cranny in the coral.

And if you can't find some interest, or human parallel, when watching two hermit crabs battle fiercely for a larger shell each of them needs because he's outgrowing his present stolen home—if you can't get something out of this, you need the rest on an atoll, you really need it.

What sort of future has Sang Gi, crippled by a bit of shrapnel? What are his chances, beggaring the streets of Seoul, with his homemade crutches? He has no home, no parents, no schooling. He has a good and intelligent face, but—?

Is his future any business of mine? Should I be concerned with cripples and the needs and suffering of others? When I have enough to eat should I be worried because others don't, including little children? Should I care, when I was lucky enough to be born in America instead of India, where the majority of people do not get enough to eat and some are actually starving? What is the reason I was not born in Korea, like Sang Gi? There are still 35,000 homeless children in Korea. Why don't I live in a hut made of rubble, old tin cans and half rotten scraps of wood in Southern Italy, Hong Kong or in a crowded Austrian refugee camp? Why don't I happen to be a man with a job in California, working steady every day for long hours, who sleeps in the streets every night because my job does not pay me enough to share even a single room with a dozen other persons—a room without a stitch of furniture or protection from flies, swarming with bed bugs and without any sanitary arrangements whatever?

I am a Christian. Does that make me my brother's keeper? When my stomach is full must I be concerned about others, whose stomachs are empty? Must I? Am I compelled to think about these others? Or is it just, God helping me, that I want to think about them and because I have a heart, desire to think about these others? Or is it just, God compelling me, perhaps a few Japanese soldiers since the turn of the century, and these lads who meet the planes are merely policemen, interested in whether you're carrying opium, but willing to be photographed if you're not.

Like Agana on Guam, Nandi is in true tropical forest country. Rain forests are nearby; mountains rise steeply around; and if the wild parrots don't screech loudly enough to be heard, it's only because they've been given up trying to compete with the juke boxes in the airline lobbies.

Oddly, Labuan, off North Borneo, exists for the same reason as Sandspit and Annette, on the Inside Passage to Alaska. As at Ketchikan and Prince Rupert, the mainland of North Borneo resists large airplanes. There are small fields, hugging the coast beside the 14,000-foot mountains; but the man who wants to see Dyaks, flying foxes and cobras on Borneo must transfer at Labuan from heavier ships. And if he tires of the mountain-and-sea view from the clean but hot airport hotel, he can waste time easily, walking down roads through brilliant hedges and beside the tropical jungle. There's also the astonishing sight of a beautiful military cemetery, containing the graves of some thousands of Australians killed in the battle for recovery of Borneo at the end of World War II—a battle which most Americans, absorbed by developments in the Philippines and Okinawa, didn't even know was occurring.

In commuting around the Pacific for a dozen years, I've become familiar with the gustatory delights of Hongkong, the courtesy of Tokyo, Bangkok's temples.

need professional help from an architect or builder for this. Plumbing, wiring, ventilation and installation will take a large slice of your kitchen budget; bear this in mind when you shop around for new cabinets and equipment. Compare the prices and performances of the different brands as well as their looks and ask your dealer if he can arrange for you to trade in old equipment. When you buy cabinets, make a basic, minimum list of everything you must keep in the kitchen with notes of any special storage you need. This will help you to determine the amount and type of cabinets to buy. You can choose from cabinets of two kinds, woods and metal, and have them finished in color if you wish.

ART PLUS HISTORY

By ALICE WINCHESTER

L ove of antiques is more than a fancy for something old in the midst of much that is new, for any object that deserves the name antique has other important attributes besides age. It must have something of artistry about it. We touch of the true craftsman and the evidence of his creative skill. It is, moreover, an expression of the taste and customs of its times ("in the style of the period," as the saying goes), and so forms a tangible link with an earlier day. Antiques are age plus art plus history.

It is because of this triple character, I think, that more and more people are discovering the endless fascination of antiques. They are not only fun to look for and to find; they are satisfying to live with. A home furnished with antiques may have more novelty than one in the most modern style. It has distinction, and it gives a sense of stability and permanence that is welcome in these fast-moving days. And it need never be dull. There is a style to appeal to every taste; simple or elaborate, straight-lined or curvaceous, small-scaled or massive and within each style there is variety, since every piece is as individual as the craftsman who made it painstakingly.

We have the antiques of all the world and of all times to choose from. One will prefer English, another Georgian, another French provincial, another Italian or Swedish or Chinese. But to all Americans our antiques make a special appeal, for they are a part of our own background. From American antiques we can learn a great deal about the people, ordinary as well as eminent, who shaped this nation; these are the things our forebears lived with. We find that each region shows its own character in its antiques. In colonial New England, Philadelphia, Virginia, and the Carolinas, all settled mainly by the English, the styles of Georgian England were transplanted, but with minor changes that made them different from those of the mother country and each other. New York, with its Dutch heritage, followed Dutch styles but in its own idiom. In rural Pennsylvania and other areas settled chiefly by Germans, these colonists developed a distinctive expression in their craftsmanship. And always the new styles appeared here later than they had been introduced abroad, while the old styles lingered, especially in country regions.

Age is relative, of course. Most American antiques are not very old in years, as compared with those of the rest of the world, but they are old in terms of the history of this country. In parts of the Midwest settled after the Revolution, for example, the earliest locally made furniture is priced; a modification of Hepplewhite and Sheraton, it was made up to the 1830's following styles popular in the East a generation before. In the deep South, pieces in the early Victorian "French style" of a hundred years ago, which furnished many antebellum homes, are now cherished as antiques. The Southwest has its Spanish Mission antiques, the Northwest its Chippendale chairs.

Scandinavian, the Mississippi Valley its French, the West Coast its Oriental. At the same time, the antiques of each region belong to the whole country and may be enjoyed anywhere, along with selections from all the lands from which America was settled.

This popular interest in American antiques seems to have begun about the time of the nation’s hundredth birthday in 1876. That year, at the world’s fair in Philadelphia, the first public exhibition of an American “period room” was shown. Called “The New England Log House,” it was intended to represent a typical home of 1776. This exhibit started a craze for collecting American antiques (thought at the time to be a short-lived fad!).

In 1924 the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York opened its now-famous American Wing, the first of the great museum installations where American antiques are arranged in architectural settings of the same periods to show how our people lived. Three years later Colonial Williamsburg in Virginia began to recreate an entire colonial city—public buildings, dwellings, shops, gardens, and all. Since then American period rooms have been installed in many of our major museums; the Henry Francis du Pont Winterthur Museum in Delaware consists entirely of such rooms, over a hundred in number. Whole villages have been restored, from Deerfield, Massachusetts, to Tombstone, Arizona, and historic houses open to the public (Mount Vernon was the first, in 1850) are scattered throughout the states.

All this has had tremendous influence in making Americans aware of antiques as a tangible part of our historical background. One of their many fascinations is that there is always more to learn about them. There is much more to it than being able to spot a Chippendale chair or a lacy Sand­wich Depository. There is the fun of discriminating between the fine and the inferior, of recognizing the rare, and of learning to tell true from false. And there are the countless historical bypaths down which antiques may lead, into the very lives of the people who made them and owned them when they were new.

Next in series: an article on Early American antiques.

overdo it with taffeta draperies, jabots and fringe.”

Mr. Levi: “I dislike the petti­coat feeling as much as you do, but I believe a bedroom can be frivolous without going to the extreme. I don’t mind fin de siècle. Decorating is neither feminine nor masculine; it is just a matter of good taste. Froufrou is out of style today anyway. Louis XVI furniture is an ideal choice. It has straight lines; yet it is dainty and not severe. There should be one big piece of furniture in the room such as a Six­foot or nine-foot chest. I much prefer elaborate de­ tails in the furniture rather than in the fabrics and suggest using plain fabric without any design unless it is a tone-on-tone damask or bro­cade. Taffeta would be my choice of materials for a master bedroom because it is crisp and light. In accessories, I like cut crystal and a few pieces of very fine china. The glitter of crystal keeps the room light in tone. Bristol Blue is a perfect color for a master bed­room. Women usually like pink and blue, and since I do not ap­prove of pink in a master bedroom, blue is a perfect solution. Blue is a good background color; it re­flects most of the natural daylight and does not disturb objects the way some colors do.”

Mr. Pahlmann: “You are right about one thing, the color blue. It can be used in many different ways. I like pale icy blue walls plus accent colors. If the room faces north, however, I would have a warm neutral pinkish gray on the walls and use a blue rug instead. I find that a certain shade of turquoise blue is flattering to a man as well as to a woman, and the object of all decoration is to put people in a good light. The only thing I can think of that doesn’t belong in the master bed­room is a man’s hobby.”

Mr. Levi: “I agree. A man’s pipe collection is the last thing I’d like to see in a boudoir.”

Two new volumes of letters bring us

George Santayana's sparkling wisdom and Henry James' fascinating personality

Since he is not doing it for money or the public, there is no good reason for a writer to put more of himself into his letters than an ordinary man would. But, fortunately, most of them do, and to this sacrificial quirk we are indebted for many fascinating books, including two new volumes, The Letters of George Santayana ( Scribners, $7.50) and The Selected Letters of Henry James (Farrar, Straus and Cudahy, $4).

The Santayana collection, edited by Daniel Cory, spans the sixty-six years between 1886 and 1952 and contains the masterful reflections of a rich and graceful mind as this century has known. The James letters, edited by Leon Edel, are only a drop in his torrential correspondence (some 7,000 of his letters are extant), but half of them had never been published, and they still illuminate his strange and controversial personality.

In their different ways, Santayana and James set the pattern for America's expatriate intelligentsia. They revolted against American materialism and sought refuge in Europe. It was understandable in Santayana: he was a Spaniard who never felt at home in the provincial formality of Boston's Louneis Square or in the Harvard classrooms where he brilliantly taught philosophy. But in James, whose roots were in America, it was gross and short-sighted snobbery. (As Somerset Maugham has pointed out, James turned his back on Western civilization's most exciting development in order to record the chatter around English tea tables.)

Though the editor of the James collection prefers to think otherwise, it reveals James, despite his literary stature, as a pretentious and empty man, even a windbag. In his youth he habitually cluttered up letters to his family with French words and phrases; when his famous brother William chided him for it, Henry ruefully admitted the affection he had not desired. He was content with a mere hello or goodbye or thank you: an invitation to supper with an old friend evoked regret that "of destiny at once cruel and unkind" and reference to the friend's "atelier and salon."

His effusiveness must have embarrassed his correspondents. Joseph Conrad sent him a copy of The Mirror of the Sea, James wrote, "I love you now, and the charm of this process of appropriation has been with me, with your admirable book for its subject, of the very greatest."

The progress of his infatuation with words can be followed through the letters from 1860 to 1915. In the earliest ones he filled pages with acute observations of what he saw abroad; in his maturity he filled pages with words. The only discernible spark of honest emotion in the collection is his petulant rage when an audience booed him at the opening of his play Guy Domville in 1895. There is no suggestion in the letters that playwriting was outside his talent; James blamed his "british gally" and on a vulgar press that "stained" his art.

James divided people into the "elite" and the "crowd." His helplessness in the presence of the latter was demonstrated in the Guy Domville episode but more poignantly shown in 1915 in a letter he wrote to a former servant who was in the British Army in France. All James could think to say to him was that he should cultivate the French people because James always had found them "wonderfully clever and intelligent."

Though James' literary stock has never been higher than it is today, he would have been horrified at what has happened to his literature. He admitted a certain "rank" genius in Tolstoy and Dostoievsky, but he called them "fluid pudding" and denied that their art was superior to Robert Louis Stevenson's. What would he have said of today's novelists?

It would be difficult to imagine a mind more different from James' than Santayana's. He was immersed in the learning of the ages but acutely alive to every happening around him. He was a poet and a philosopher but an urbane man of the world at the same time. Though he dwelt among the intellectual Olympians, he could turn out a novel, The Last Puritan, that became an American best-seller. And throughout his life he regarded the universe with a wise and witty skepticism that would have infuriated the pedants of his profession, had not his charm been so great, his knowledge so formidable.

Any taste will find something pleasing or stimulating in The Letters of George Santayana. There is correspondence with notables—Van Wyck Brooks, William James, Robert Bridges—to name a few; there is philosophy, his own and penetrating examination of others; there is talk of books and writers; and all the way through there is the beautiful writing that set Santayana apart from his fellow philosophers.

To one weary of fads and fancies, the cult of the bizarre and obscure, Santayana's serene detachment is fresh as a summer evening breeze. He could see through the fog into the emptiness beyond. "I have been reading a new book of Freud's," he wrote in 1923, "and other things by his disciples. They are settling down to a steadier pace and reducing their paradoxes to very much what everybody has always known." He wondered why the modern school of philosophy found it necessary to invent a new "pseudo-technical" vocabulary when a "little precision in the use of old words" would have saved the trouble.

He was tolerantly amused at the "pornographic part" of William Faulkner's Sanctuary, finding the special Faulkner touches life-like, "at least to the uninhibited," but not worth the bother of a second reading to untangle the thread of the story. "I am not a psychological dog," he wrote, "and require my dog biscuit to be clearly set down for me in a proper plate with decent ceremony."

Santayana's opinions of America softened in the late years after he had lived through World War II in Italy and weighed the value of American freedom against the implications of Russian method. But the precious can take little consolation from Santayana's attitude toward the arts in America "It is veneer, rouge, aestheticism, art museums, new theatres, etc." he wrote to Van Wyck Brooks, "that make America impotent. The good things are football, kindness and jazz bands."
