Those were the bestest mud pies ever, Mrs. Jones. Now I guess we'd better wash the dishes and that's easy. We'll use the Waste King.

Isn't it wonderful, Mrs. Jones? All you have to do is push the magic buttons. Mommy says it's the Magi-Matic Cycle Selector. Big people talk funny, don't they?

This magic button is just for doing a few dishes, like tea parties and breakfast and things. This one is for Pots and Pans, like mud pie pans. And this one does a whole lot of dishes... a whole party full... washes, rinses and dries. All with these magic buttons.

Daddy's funny. He calls the washing part Super Charged Scrubbing Action. Mommy doesn't care. She says she's just glad it gets off egg yolks and the stuff that sticks on the pan when we have hamburgers. Daddy says the Floating Power Arm does that. He's funny.

Sure holds a lot of dishes. Bet we could have a party for all of Miss Colette's class and get all the dishes in in one load. Daddy says it's the special Contour Racks that hold dishes to make them so clean. He's so smart!

The Waste King is magic quiet, too. I do homework in the kitchen while it's running. When I grow up and get married, I'll take the Waste King with me—Mommy says I'm funny.

- The perennial problem of where to store a vacuum cleaner might be solved with the Singer Storage Seat, a roomy chest that doubles as a hassock. Made of steel and pressboard, it has a padded top, is covered with natural colored stain- and scuff-resistant plastic. Singer Sewing Centers.

-To tempt flagging appetites on sizzling hot days: three new seafood cocktail dips from the shores of Maine. Clams, lobsters and smoked herrings flavor creamy cheese blended to dipping consistency. Saltwater Farm, Damariscotta, Maine.

- Shopping for furniture is like a new game with Baumritter's Custom Room Plan Decorating Kit for Ethan Allen furniture. The kit (at Ethan Allen dealers) has scaled floor plan charts and scaled, colored, gummed templates of the furniture so you can picture in the store how furniture would look and fit in your room, then take chart home to family round-table.

- Dyeing fabrics is said to be less of a chore with a new Tintex dye for use in automatic washing machines. A chemical ingredient, called Catalyst T-7, fluffs and opens pores of fabric so that color is evenly distributed, eliminating previous method of lengthily soaking fabric in boiling dye solution.

- A recent newcomer to the plastics family—expanded, molded polystyrene—has been adapted to make a feather-light container for ice, food and beverages called the Magkeeper. Bubbles steamed into the mold are said to give maximum insulation, keeping heat or cold inside and preventing sweating on outside. Aeroplastics Corp., 1215 El Segundo Blvd., El Segundo, Calif.

The Most Important Swimming Pool Advance of Our Time

LIVE WATER SWIMMING POOL

Your sparkling, clear blue pool water bubbles...moves
...is aerated with liquid sunshine like a mountain stream

BEAUTY . . . The pool comes alive, inviting, irresistible. It is the bubbling, playful mountain stream—instead of the dull, flat mill pond. The Sunshine or pool light ignites each bubble, creating dancing jewels in the previously lifeless water.

HEALTH . . . Experiments prove that oxygenation destroys 85% of disease bacteria. Hyper-oxygenation of LIVE WATER POOLS greatly improves the health quality of swimming waters. (Note: Aeration is one of the essential processes employed by water departments for purification of drinking water.)

MAINTENANCE . . . LIVE WATER POOL'S activated waters hold dust particles in suspension until the filter removes them...thus decreasing the need for underwater vacuum cleaning (the major pool maintenance problem!)

PLEASURE . . . Swimming in LIVE WATERS, bubbling with liquid air and sunshine is a delightful new experience . . . there's a new exhilaration, a new freshness of smell, a new softness of feel.

We believe that within five years no other but LIVE WATER POOLS will be built IN PRESENT DAY filtered pools water moves tamely thru the filter and back to the pool.

IN LIVE WATER POOLS water enters at points 10-12 feet apart along the bottom of pool... Each entering stream passes through a new Live Water Aerator-Circulator, *Patent Pending

Each LIVE WATER AERATOR-CIRCULATOR loads its entering water stream with volumes of fresh air and sunshine. The effect coming into the pool is of liveliness... activity... air!

IN ORDERING LIVE WATER PARTS specify pool size and whether copper, galvanized, or polyethylene inlet piping is to be used. Parts Prices by pool sizes: 15' x 30', $44.80; 20' x 40', $59.20; 20' x 50', $70.

IN MIAMI ONLY If you are planning a pool in your Miami home, Vic Polk Swim Pools, parent company of the Live Water development, are exclusive LIVE WATER installers in that area. They are the South's leading builder of residential pools—at famous economy prices. Write direct to our address.

Inquiries are also invited concerning LIVE WATER facilities for new public pools.

I would appreciate any details as to the age of my antique French sofa. The seat in its original state was too low, so I had the Aubusson tapestry covering removed and made into a cushion. R. P.—Portuguese Bend, Calif.

Your sofa is of the Louis XV period, 1730-1760. At that time Aubusson tapestry materials were largely used for upholstering carved and gilded chairs like this one, which probably dates between 1750 and 1760 and is of the sort made for palace use.

The tall chest of drawers done to small scale dates about 1870-80. It is Victorian of the Eastlake substyle, made after oak replaced walnut as the favored cabinet wood. The animals posed with it show that it is too large to be a salesman's sample.

Could this be a sales miniature and how old is it? The oak chest is marked "From the Silva—Furniture Co., P. Wagner & Co. Proprs., Milwaukee, Wis." E. W.—Gary, Indiana.

Your unusual transfer printed plaque copies Enoch Wood's bust of Wesley from life c. 1780. It dates 1800-30, when Staffordshire potters made plaques of various designs.

My silver tea service decorated with raised birds, dogs, log cabins, flowers and pagodas is marked "Sam'l Kirk" in a rectangle or "SK" in a square. The finials of the pots seem to be Chinese mandarins. Who was Samuel Kirk and when did he work?

B. P.—East Lansing, Mich.

Samuel Kirk, Baltimore silversmith, began working in 1815. The family is still in business, using the same mark. Kirk silver is outstanding for its elaborate repoussé designs. From the shaping of the pieces, it was probably made between 1870 and 1890.

This 10" tall, amber-colored, fish-shaped bottle was found while digging on my farm. I was told it is a bitters bottle but would like to know more. In what period was it made? E. P.—South Haven, Minnesota.

Various fish-shaped bottles were made by American glass factories specializing in such novelties after 1875. Your bottle, made about 1900 to 1920, was the container for Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil.

My secretary came from an old house in New Jersey. It is solid mahogany with original glass and brass hardware. The upper part has adjustable shelves and there is a single shelf in the base. Can you date it and does it rate as an antique? L. G.—Jamaica Estates, N. Y.

You have a good example of a simple American Empire secretary with fold-over writing flap and cupboard, made by some cabinetmaker about 1830 to 1840. Pieces of this type are certainly rated as collectable antiques.

Can you tell me anything about this pair of porcelain candlestick figures? The mark on the bottom is an elaboration of the crossed swords of Meissen. F. W. C.—Chicago, Illinois.

These figure branch candlesticks were made by a German porcelain factory about 1850-60. They are in the Meissen manner but were made elsewhere. Mark's origin, like other Meissen counterfeits, is obscure.

Your French style mantel clock, in fashion 1875-90, was made by the Ansonia Clock Co., out of business since 1930. The two patent dates for movement and case date it completely.

RUM—COOL AND ADVENTUROUS

BY JAMES A. BEARD

All the familiar types of liquors have their easy mental associations. Scotch always reminds me of misty glens in the Highlands, Bourbon makes me think of the Kentucky Bluegrass region. Gin recalls the pubs of London. Vodka suggests the endless Russian steppes, and rum—well, here is the storybook liquor, conjuring up scenes of piracy, smuggling and the romance of the sea.

I can't taste rum without visualizing Yankee clipper ships in full sail, palm-fringed Caribbean inlets inhabited by buccaneers, and dimly lit waterfront taverns of the 18th century where our forebears studied maps of buried treasure or planned how to run the British blockade.

Rum and piracy were boon companions. A distillation of sugar cane syrup and molasses, rum was—and is—a major product of the West Indies. Two hundred years ago the coves of these semi-tropical islands were the favorite hiding places of sinister characters like Henry Morgan and Captain Kidd. Through the Caribbean came treasure-laden Spanish and French ships bound from the New World to Europe and while the pirates waited for their prey they drank rum. I'm sure the genteel ancestors of today's tiki-totumers enjoyed a spell of basking on tropical beaches, drinking their juice in a deep crock and added rum. This was allowed to stand a week, after which it was strained through a cloth, sugared to taste and drunk. Rum ranked with tea in the daily diet of the colonies and, like tea, it hastened the American Revolution. A heavy British tax placed on imported molasses enraged our tippling ancestors. They sidestepped the problem by smuggling it in, but the tax still raked.

Although New England still produces a distinctive rum, by far the greatest amount now sold in this country comes directly from the West Indies. Each rum has its own special flavor and quality. Indeed, one of the assets of rum as a drink is the wide choice of types and their versatility. They range in color from pale golden to deep brown, and in flavor from light and dry to heavy and fulled-bodied. Some go well in high-spiced, hot drinks; others are best with fruit and child! Like pirates, the Colonials drank it straight, but also in various concoctions and in punch. One of the favorites was Flip, made with rum, beer, molasses and stirred with a hot poker. Modern recipes for Flip omit the beer and call for eggs and sometimes heavy cream. Some may find the newer version more palatable but certainly the Colonial Flip carried more authority.

A rum drink favored by Colonial ladies was known by the fine name of Cherry Bounce. The housewife crushed ripe cherries, pits and all, with a rolling pin. Then she well mixed the juice, let it steep, added rum. This was allowed to stand a week, after which it was strained through a cloth, sugared to taste and drunk. Rum ranked with tea in the daily diet of the colonies and, like tea, it hastened the American Revolution. A heavy British tax placed on imported molasses enraged our tippling ancestors. They sidestepped the problem by smuggling it in, but the tax still raked.

From Haiti come the well known Barbancourt rums. The 3 Star is an excellent rum for cocktails and mixed drinks, and the Special Reserve, mellower and richer, is perfect drunk straight. Some may find the newer version more palatable but certainly the Colonial Flip carried more authority.

BOCCANEERS and rum—long known for their fine quality. You may choose light, medium or dark. Lemon Hart Demerara rums are made in British Guiana. These are the heaviest

How many ways does a Cadillac delight a lady? Let us count them. There is its great beauty, for instance, to please her eye . . . its wondrous luxury and spaciousness to enhance her comfort . . . its incredible quiet to bring her rest . . . its extraordinary handling ease to assure her relaxation . . . its renowned safety to add to her peace of mind . . . its great fame to inspire her pride . . . and its marvelous economy to satisfy her practical judgment. Have you yet to discover the magic of Cadillac for yourself? Then you should visit your Cadillac dealer soon and spend an hour or so in the driver's seat. It's motordom's most convincing sixty minutes!
of rums and come at standard and very high proof: 86 and 151. Demeraras are the popular drink in the far northern areas of Canada where fur trappers and lumbermen find them the best antidote for below-zero weather. They are ideal for cold winter nights. Don't try them in a delicate summer cocktail such as a daiquiri!

Puerto Rico makes light and medium rums that are fine in cool refreshing drinks. Try the Baca Chica, the Three Daggers and the famous Bacardi rums.

Bacardi also produces in Cuba and from here comes one of the best well-aged mellow rums: Ron Anejo of Bacardi. This fine liquor should be drunk straight. I enjoy it as an after-dinner drink sipped slowly from a brandy snifter. It has true quality.

New England rums are medium, with a rich caramely taste. They are still extremely popular among Bostonians.

It is interesting to note that rum, as a product of semi-tropical and tropical countries, seems to be the perfect drink in its home climate, and consequently in our hot North American summers. A light or medium rum is never oppressive on a hot day. Combined with fruit juice, particularly citrus juice, it is one of the most refreshing of tipples. Here is the classic rum cooler for a summer afternoon:

The daiquiri is popular as a short drink. This is the simple, classic version:

DAIQUIRI

Chill cocktail glass in refrigerator. In a shaker put, for each drink:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>

Shake well until the outside of the shaker is frosted. Strain into the chilled glass.

If you have an electric blender, here are two delightful versions of the daiquiri:

DAIQUIRI FRAPPÉ

Fill large champagne glasses with crushed ice and let them chill thoroughly. In your blender put, for each drink, 2 ounces of rum, 1 ounce of lime juice and a scant teaspoon of sugar. Blend thoroughly and pour over the crushed ice. Serve with a short straw.

FROZEN DAIQUIRI

Place champagne glasses in the refrigerator to chill. In your blender put, for each drink:

Cooling rum punches are always popular on hot days. Try these favorites:

SPECIAL NAVY PUNCH
1 bottle of medium rum
1 pint of lemon juice
1/2 cup of lime juice
1/2 cup of orange Curaçao
Sprinkled rind of 2 lemons

Blend all ingredients and pour over ice in a bowl. Add chilled soda water to taste.

RUM CASSIS PUNCH
1 bottle of medium or light rum
1 pint of dry vermouth
1/2 cup of créme de cassis

Blend thoroughly and pour over ice in a bowl. Add soda water or champagne to taste.

MODERN FISH HOUSE PUNCH
2 bottles of light rum
1 bottle of medium, full-bodied rum
1 cup of Grand Marnier
1 pint of lemon juice
1 cup of lime juice
1 cup of sugar
1/2 cup of Falernum
1 quart of strong tea

Blend the ingredients and pour into containers that can be stored in the refrigerator. Refrigerate for several hours to mellow. Pour over ice in a punch bowl and serve.

RUM FRUIT PUNCHES
Excellent rum fruit punches can be made by combining rum and fruit juice, half and half, and sweetening with Grand Marnier. Fruit juices that are exceptionally good are lemon, lime, orange and pineapple. Blend the mixture, pour over ice and serve garnished with slices of the fruit.

Finally, here are two rum drinks to give your spirits a lift early in the day. They are excellent brunch drinks.

EYE-OPENER
2 ounces of light rum
2 dashes of orgeat syrup
1/2 ounce of Grand Marnier
1 egg yolk

Shake the ingredients with ice and strain into a chilled glass.

RUM PICK-ME-UP
2 ounces of light rum
Sugar to taste

Shake with ice and strain into a chilled champagne glass. Fill with chilled champagne.

1/4 ounce of kirsch
Juice of 1/2 lime
Dash of Angostura bitters

Place the ingredients in a shaker with crushed ice and shake well. Strain into a chilled glass and add a slight dash of Benedictine on top.

Here is a surprisingly satisfying combination:

RUM PUFF

Place ice cubes in a glass and over them pour 2-3 ounces of full-bodied medium rum, an equal amount of whole milk and add a splash of soda water, or more, to taste. Stir and drink.

This is another rum-plus-fruit-flavor drink that I find very refreshing:

RUM CASSIS

Place ice cubes in a glass and over them pour 2-3 ounces of full-bodied medium rum, an equal amount of whole milk and add a splash of soda water, or more, to taste. Stir and drink.

This is another rum-plus-fruit-flavor drink that I find very refreshing:

RUM CASSIS

2 ounces of light or medium rum
1 ounce of créme de cassis
3 teaspoons of lime juice

Shake the ingredients well with ice and strain into chilled glasses.

An old favorite is called Russian Tea; it is simply iced tea with rum added. Rum with coffee is equally tasty.

ICED COFFEE VENNOISE

In a tall glass filled with ice cubes, pour coffee. Add 2-3 ounces of medium rum, sugar to taste and top with vanilla-flavored whipped cream.

COFFEE RUM FLOAT

In a tall glass place a scoop of ice cream (vanilla, coffee or chocolate). Add 2-3 ounces of medium rum, sugar to taste and top with whipped cream.

COFFEE FROSTED

In your electric blender put, for each drink, 1/4 cup of strong cold coffee, 1 tablespoon of sugar, dash of ground cloves and 2 ounces of medium rum. Add crushed ice and blend thoroughly. Pour into a chilled glass.

AFTER-DINNER RUM COFFEE

In a small chafing dish put the peel of 1 orange, the peel of 1 lemon, 6 lumps of sugar and 4 ounces of medium rum. Heat and add 4 additional ounces of heated rum. Ignite and let the mixture blaze. Add a 2-inch piece of vanilla bean and pour in 3 cups of strong coffee. Blend and serve in demi-tasse cups.

IN ALASKA

BY LOUISE SHATTUCK

Editor's Note: Probably the liveliest fireworks in the United States this July 4 will be set off in the towns and cities of Alaska which is officially celebrating on that day the addition of the 49th star to the American flag. Planes, ships and the Alcan Highway will be bringing some 25,000 visitors to the new state of gold mines, totem poles and Eskimos to witness the festivities this month and the brilliance of the autumn coloring and northern lights at the end of next month and in early September. What many may not realize is that Alaska is also a rich source of handcrafted accessories. So H&G asked Mrs. Shattuck (whose husband's grandmother was the first "first lady" of the Territory) for a rundown on what to look for.

When I made my first trip to Alaska 20 years ago, there was only one way to go—by boat. Now, passenger boats operate only in the summer and only between southeast Alaska and Vancouver, Canada.

This seems a shame. The ride up the thousand-mile Inside Passage to Alaska is one of the pleasantest in the world. You are never out of sight of the scenic shore, which is scarred by many fjords and glaciers. A maze of islands protects you from ocean buffettings. It is like cruising a river deep into the mountains—the farther north you go, the more constricted are the channels and the nearer and more precipitous are the mountains.

The largest cruise ship to Alaska is the Canadian National Railway's Prince George. The Princess Louise, of the Canadian Pacific Railway fleet, makes a few more stops in Alaska, but both make a round trip in eight days. (One or the other of these ships leaves every week or so up to September 10 but it's well to make reservations anywhere from four weeks to a year in advance.)

Cruising up the Inside Passage, you become aware of how large and lonesome this part of the world is. Everywhere, evergreen forests crowd down to the rocky shores, broken only by the exclamation points of lively waterfalls and by streams swollen with melted snows.

Your only port of call in Canada for either the George or the Louise is Prince Rupert. It is a vigorous little city. Here, if you

How to make certain the beauty will last

(a tip from a top home manufacturer)

National Homes models, like the "Jamestown" utilize Masonite products such as Lap Siding, Tempered Preadwood® with battens and (foreground) Panelgroove®.

The home manufacturer's houses are his ads. They must keep the look of quality... hold paint well... stay free of cracks and dents.

How? Take a tip from James Price, board chairman of famous National Homes: "For many years, Masonite exterior products have contributed to the widely recognized quality of National Homes. By their beauty, durability, and ease of maintenance, these products have helped us to give home buyers more value for their money, and have thus played a part in the continuing growth and acceptance of National Homes."

Be sure you get full value for your money. Learn all the good things about Masonite® hardboards—at your lumber dealer's, or write Masonite Corporation, Dept. HG-7, Box 777, Chicago 90, Ill. In Canada: Masonite Corporation, Gatineau, Quebec.

didn't have time to shop in Vancouver, you'll find a fine selection of English china and woolens. Native crafts are Indian made. I once bought in Prince Rupert a small, inexpensive totem pole which I use for a paper weight. It is hand carved from argillite, a black slate that is found only along this coast.

Two other cruise ships, operated by Arctic Alaska Tours, go straight from Vancouver to Ketchikan, the first port in Alaska. This town of 10,000 is typical of southeast Alaska. Small trollers and seiners crowd its harbor and crooked streets climb the hillside. Many of its buildings perch on pilings. A fresh coat of paint doesn't hide the fact that some are old and sagging, held in place by the newer buildings between which they are squeezed.

Near Ketchikan, a forest of totem poles stands where they were erected many years ago by the Indians who were the only inhabitants then. Eskimos now lived that far south. Their villages are over a thousand miles farther north on the Arctic coast, but their crafts are sold through the state. You'll find as fine a selection of exquisitely carved ivory in Ketchikan as in Kotzebue, which is above the Arctic Circle. A cooperative distributes Indian and Eskimo work to gift shops so prices don't vary much from town to town.

Native handcrafts

Everything you'll find in gift shops is meticulously hand made and ancient designs and techniques are still used. Eskimo materials include ivory and jade. Some carvings are in bas-relief but most are etched in black on the creamy white ivory of walrus tusks. You can buy salt and pepper shakers, butter knives, pickle forks, cocktail picks, bar sets, salad servers and chess sets. I saw one elegant five-piece barbecue set with each handle made from an entire ivory tusk. Four steak knives or a two-piece carving set cost from $25 up—but for less than a dollar, you can buy a walrus tooth on a key chain.

Jade as well as ivory is combined with gold nuggets in delicate jewelry which costs from a few dollars to a hundred or more. I saw some unusual, though rather flashy, belts made entirely of ivory and baleen (whalebone).

Indian grass-and-root baskets are hard to find though some shops have a few antiques half a century old. The larger ones are nice for holding magazines and newspapers or for waste baskets. Finely woven Attu baskets from the Aleutian Islands and baskets of baleen decorated with ivory are collectibles but they aren't cheap. A four-inch baleen basket with cover will cost about $50.

Tortuous channel

In my opinion, the loveliest part of the trip is Wrangell Narrows, between Wrangell and Petersburg, where your ship twists and turns through a channel so slim that it seems you can reach out and touch the shore. You may glimpse a curious bear on the fringe of the forest or see a deer swimming between islands.

None of the ships stop at the neat fishing village of Petersburg and only the Princess Louisa calls at Wrangell. You'll see a lot of southeast Alaska on an eight-day cruise, but you'll miss a great deal if you don't leave shipboard and spend several days ashore. One of the most leisurely side trips you can make is by river boat from Wrangell up the Stikine River to Telegraph Creek in Canada. The Stikine valley is pinched between towering coastal mountains and a hundred glaciers cling to the mountainsides.

Juneau, the next port of call, is Alaska's capital. It huddles on the edge of Gastineau Channel in the shadow of brooding mountains. Alaska gold was first discovered here, and the rusting buildings of the idle Alaska-Juneau mine sprawl across the face of a mountain that stands with its toes in the water.

Mendenhall Glacier, one of the few in the world that is accessible by car, is near Juneau. This river of ice is one of many that flow down alpine valleys from the ice cap, a mile-thick field of ice stretching from mountain peak to mountain peak. A 40-minute flight over this weird frozen world costs only $10.

This is only one of many fascinating side trips. Small cruisers explore fjords and bays and seaplanes fly to towns not visited by boats. Tracy Arm, a crooked finger of a fjord, slices into the mountains for 30 miles, ending only when it comes face to face with two crumbling glaciers which clutter the fjord with icebergs. You'll often see seals sunbathing on them and in the more open waters, porpoises and whales play.

Ford's Terror is a luminous jewel of a bay dropped into a setting of frowning peaks. Its curving entrance is so shallow and so narrow that the tide boils through like a rampaging river.

Glacier Bay (which is regularly visited by Arctic Alaska Tour ships) is sandwiched between the lofty Fairweather Range and St. Elias Ranges. Here, 20 mammoth glaciers and many smaller ones grind their way down to the inlets of the 50-mile-long bay.

Sitka is a short flight from Juneau. When San Francisco was no more than a village and the outposts of Sitka was the capital of Russian Alaska and was called the "Paris of the Pacific." Many reminders of the Russian days remain. The most prominent is St. Michael's Cathedral, built at the end of Sitka's main street in 1844. Now, the street follows the curve of the lovely island-studded bay far beyond the church, leaving it isolated in the middle of the street. Its jeweled ikons of gold and silver, its magnificently embroidered altar cloths and its Bible with covers of gold are literally priceless. It is said that J. P. Morgan once offered to buy them but his offer was refused.

Unique objets d'art

My memory of Sitka is heightened by the perfection of the coffee-wood bowl, inlaid with walrus and mastodon ivory, which I bought from George Federoff, who has won many awards for his bowls and candelabrum of modern design. The Museum of Contemporary Crafts in New York has just bought one of his pieces for its permanent collection.

Federoff prefers to sell to appreciative art lovers in his home. His one-of-a-kind products and the personal contact between craftsman and customer are typical of Alaska's white artists. Often you can buy directly from the creator and always you can be assured of the individuality of the craftsman's work.

Toni Keithahn's silk-screened table linens, which she makes in her basement workroom, are decorated with authentic Indian designs. Her husband, curator of the State Museum in Juneau, helps her with her research. (Don't miss the museum. It is crowded with history and rare artifacts you'll see nowhere else.)

Several housewives who turn to their potter's wheels and looms in their spare time have also adapted Indian and Eskimo motifs. My favorite ash tray is a lustrous black ceramic replica of an ancient Indian potlatch bowl and I prize a hand-turned dish from Sitka to town.

Paintings galore

Living among such scenic surroundings seems to inspire Alaskans to re-create on canvas views from their kitchen windows. Some of their paintings are subtle, some bold. You can buy them in gift shops for prices ranging from a few dollars for a housewife's watercolor to $20,000 for an oil painting by the late Sydney Laurence, Alaska's foremost painter.

Two tiny shops in Juneau sell handmadec leather goods of moose, caribou, seal, reindeer and salmon skins. The Weavers catch salmon and seal from their own boat, do their own tanning, make their products by hand and sell them directly to you. Their boots and belts of leopard seal are distinctive and their gloves and bags of white caribou hide are soft yet durable, and wash beautifully with soap and water.

As your ship approaches the glacier under the funnel of Lynn Canal, you bypass Haines, the only town in southeast Alaska that is connected by highway to the rest of the world. You can visit Haines by plane or ferryboat from Juneau. It was in the Haines Craft Shop that I found an interesting bowl of a local birch appropriately called "aurora wood" because the interplay of its light and dark grains is reminiscent of the aurora borealis.

Skagway, once the gateway to the Klondike, is a ghost of the gold rush. At the head of Lynn Canal, it is turning-around point for cruise ships. If you wish to see more of Alaska, you may cross the White Pass by train, then fly to Fairbanks in the interior. Or you can reach Homer, Seward, Valdez and Cordova, Kodiak Island, the Valley of 10,000 Smokes and Matanuska Valley are all within easy access of Anchorage and each has its own beauty and appeal. Anchorage is a stop for airlines flying the great circle route to the Orient and over the pole to Europe, and if you've elected not to return by boat, direct air service from Anchorage to Seattle and the midwest can speed you home.

The Alaska Railroad bums and bumps its way from Fairbanks to Anchorage and Seward on the Gulf of Alaska coast. It stops at the comfortable Mt. McKinley National Park Hotel which, sadly enough, is not in sight of the mountain. There is, however, a bus that follows 90 miles of road through velvety green valleys and around the sides of many-hued mountains to Wonder Lake, where the magnificence of Mt. McKinley is doubled by its reflection in the quiet waters.

This hotel is one of the few places in Alaska where you are served sourdough hotcakes. It is a mystery to me why more restaurants don't feature these tangy, delicate cakes as they are one of the few distinctive foods of Alaska. In the coastal towns, fresh seafood—salmon, halibut, crab and shrimp—are served, though not very imaginatively. You can, however, take home hand-picked and hand-packed jams and jellies—of moss berries, high-and-low bush cranberries—and pickles made from kelp.

Anchorage is Alaska's metropolis and one of the few towns that wasn't built around gold. You might like to visit a small factory there that makes furniture of cottonwood or the sports shop that sells gun and hat racks made of birch. There is also a whale shop where you can buy whale skin, walrus and caribou antlers.

Two new hotels are being built in Anchorage this summer. One, which will connect two exiting hotels, will have 600 rooms when completed.

The fairest sterling in the land
Classic Rose by Reed & Barton
Stretch out on the warm sand. Float on your back on a still, still pond. Loll in a hammock. Take a nap. H&G believes summer is the time to take it easy—and the aforesaid are surely good ways of doing it. But who can afford to drift with the stream for more than a day at a time? The routines of living go on even if it is summer. The trick is to keep moving—to maintain the order, the beauties, the comforts that are fundamental to a feeling of ease—but to move at your own easy pace. Here are a few signals to keep you on the beam:

Pare down your housekeeping to the essentials that bring immediate pleasure—visual, thermal or gustatory. Make arrangements to give yourself a holiday from whatever it is you dislike most. (If that, by chance, should be lugging the ironing board out of its lair, you may make some happy discoveries on page 84.)

Fix a small feast for the eyes. Make each one a summer still life—a few flowers in a basket, a few vegetables in a pot—and place them where they will serve as refreshing surprises. (You'll find some pointers on page 71.)

Make pleasant provisions for summer's greatest delight—the bath. Start by adding some piece of prettiness to the bathroom you have now. Go on to planning a still more pleasant one for next summer and the seasons between. (Take a look at pages 58-69.)

Go back to nature—in moderation. Pack the family into the station wagon and take off for a week of fun in the wilds. Keep things simple but don't try to prove you're the greatest Boy Scouts of them all. Ease the rigors of roughing it with common sense aids (see pages 50-53) that will help to keep your brood in good temper, on the right route, reasonably well sheltered, healthy and safe.

Taking it easy is an art that requires a modicum of talent and considerable cultivation. To see a delightful house that was specially, thoughtfully planned to encourage it, turn the page.
An imaginative house endowed with gaiety and delight
There is a new spirit and sparkle in the design of this little house.

Fresh as a breeze from the sea nearby, it is full of surprises—

circular rooms, a parasol roof, a welcoming loggia

Can a house be lighthearted? Certainly this one is. Indoors and out it is as gay and exuberant as the weekend living for which it was planned. The living room, round as a carousel, has a parasol-shaped roof. The dining room walls slide wide open on two sides. The circular kitchen wraps around a cozy hearth. These are enchanting features. They are a constant joy to Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Knox, who own the house, and fun for their guests, too.

Part of the pleasure of the house is due, naturally, to its seaside setting. It overlooks Sagaponack Pond near Bridgehampton, New York, and commands panoramic views of lush green meadows and blue waters stretching away to the ocean. (The Knoxes can go to the beach by boat from the foot of their land.) But there is equal pleasure in the fresh form of the house itself. The round living room pavilion rising airily to its fanciful roof is a continual delight and surprise, especially at night when the glass walls are lighted and crowned by the gleaming dome. And the curious wedge shape of the house gives the living and dining rooms the widest possible views seaward, yet you can also look back into a quiet, enclosed courtyard for a change of scene. In its freedom of form, in its circular rooms and sculptured roof, the little house illustrates the new trend away from the austerity of rigid, box-like shelters.

Planned for vacations and weekends in the spring and summer and fall, the house is no architectural folie. The 1,800 square feet of space includes only four rooms and they were expertly planned for easy maintenance. The Knoxes saw to that because they do the maintaining themselves. The round kitchen is as efficient and step-saving as a ship’s galley. The dining room, also spare and uncluttered as a cabin on shipboard, has hard-wearing fir floors like the outside decks that flank it. Entertaining is easy because the dining room can be merged with the adjoining outdoor areas and the pass-through to the kitchen helps everyone to help himself. For overnight or weekend guests there is a compact but separate one room house with its own cabinet-kitchen, bathroom and outdoor terrace. You can see it directly below, to the right of the main house—it faces the waters of Sagaponack Pond.
Entertaining is a joy when people can move in and out so easily

On a sunny summer weekend the house unfolds. The 8'-wide sliding glass walls of the dining room are pushed back and it merges with the south deck (facing page), the shore beyond it, the white pebbled courtyard. (The sliding screens can keep out insects.) For large or small parties this is perfect. At lunch Mrs. Knox places the food at the kitchen pass-through back of the dining table and guests pick up plates and sit on cushions on the deck, steps or loggia. The deck rail itself is a long bench. At night, dinners are usually buffet and small tables are placed in the enclosed courtyard or on the deck. With the house lighted up the effect is entrancing. Conversation or dancing in the round living room often follows dinner. When the Knoxes are alone on a chilly spring or fall weekend they can eat snugly beside the Franklin stove in the kitchen and their bedroom doubles as a sitting room. An ingenious sliding door can divide the dressing alcove from the bedroom, providing individual privacy, and there is also a second bathroom. The cypress board walls and roof of this wing are fully insulated and central heating was recently added.

Wedge-shaped plan divides almost equally into two areas. The living room (24' across) and dining room are glass walled to make the most of seashore views. Bedroom, dressing room, baths, kitchen are more solidly enclosed for privacy and rainy day seclusion. The front courtyard, screened by a sapling fence and the loggia, makes an intimate patio for living and dining rooms.

At night the house gains new magic. Brilliantly lighted, the living room roof assumes fanciful shapes and the round skylight glows like a jewel.

Entrance to house is through the loggia, in the background, which borders the courtyard and leads to the front door.

 OWNERS: Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Knox
ARCHITECT: Alexander Knox of LaFarge, Knox & Murphy
LOCATION: Bridgehampton, New York SIZE: 1,800 square feet
The round living room is a pavilion of light with a full-circle view of the landscape.

Space and light create interior beauty and here they are very well combined. The circular room has a natural grace and, ringed by glass panels, an airy spaciousness. It is high—18' to the skylight "bubble" at the peak. 11' to the top of the steel columns supporting the roof (which is made of 12 plywood sections shaped like pie wedges). The fixed glass panels do two things. They open up engaging views of field, pond and court. And they let in the light that flows and ebbs through the room as the sun arches across the sky. Five panels include bookcases—the narrow glass sections around them open for ventilation. The circular fireplace (concrete base, cylindrical metal body, marble top) has chrome screen that revolves. All woodwork is white, rug on mitered fir floor is mustard, sofa and chaises are red-orange and persimmon. Danish chairs are black leather, coffee table is white marble. White pedestal tables, so well suited to room, have white plastic tops.

Vertical section of living room reveals plywood "pleated roof." Steel columns support roof; steel cable encircles them to hold parts together.

Dome at peak of roof is plastic

Vertical section of fireplace explains lack of chimney. Smoke is pulled down to duct under floor, then to flue in kitchen.

Continued
The central kitchen
is the pivot of the plan, convenient to every room.

Round shape of the kitchen is clearly defined, left, by its solid enclosure of vertical cypress boards which contrast with the glass walls of the round living room. The pass-through, directly next to the range, insures hot food at dinner and becomes a service bar for food or drinks at parties. When closed, its doors match the board wall. Triangular dining room is like a breezeway when sliding glass sash is opened (see plan on page 44). Route to front door is at left, to bedroom, right.

Kitchen work counter, opposite page, is as efficient as a soda fountain. Wall refrigerator, sink, burners, oven are just a few steps apart. The kitchen itself, white, with birch cabinets, gray vinyl floor, is not many feet away from the bedroom, dining and living rooms or the outdoor areas. Next to the cheerful Franklin stove, the alcove where the Knoxes breakfast looks seaward through adjoining window. Kitchen has an ample pantry, a lavatory nearby.
Now is the time to get out and go

When summer comes, Americans go—for a picnic in the countryside, a long weekend at the seashore, two weeks of camping in the mountains or a month in Europe. And why shouldn't we go? We are the possessors of 80 million drivers' licenses, almost 300,000 active pilots' licenses and over a half million passports. We not only have the sanction to go but the means, too—in overwhelming supply. We own nearly 60 million passenger cars, 7.5 million pleasure boats, one million house trailers and—not to be sneezed at for the world's "goingest" people—26 million bikes! The all-purpose station wagon alone has touched off an amazing resurgence of family camping (see below). While roughing it was the rule 30 years ago, today's campers can pamper themselves with an awesome assortment of creature comforts. They needn't remain land-locked, either, since boat designers now offer boats that can be carried with you (some being so compactly folded up and packed that they all but fit in your glove compartment). Or you can forget camping altogether and live on an inexpensive houseboat propelled by an outboard motor (see opposite page, top). For those who want to get there quickly, private planes are no longer just for "the other fellow."

They are easy to fly, and they accommodate a whole family (see opposite page, bottom).

These scurrying campers, like millions of families, have worked out their special answer to the twin problems of too much civilization and too little freedom. Essential in their scheme, of course, is a station wagon which carries the five of them, their luggage, cookery and tool chests. It also pulls their trailer, a simple metal box on wheels while on the road, but a roomy shelter which sleeps five when expanded at the campsite. The lightweight tarpaulin is quickly staked out and becomes an airy living room. This camping setup is but one of countless variations inspired by the back-to-nature boom. You can take your choice of paper camping kits (two tents, four sleeping bags, a sun-shielding para-wing and a closure that fits over a station wagon's tail end), cartop tents, tents in a suitcase, umbrella tents, tents draped to your car. Catering to luxury-minded campers, manufacturers are offering portable, battery-powered refrigerators, complete kitchens in a single kit, trailer "chuck wagons." Where can a family find a wooded glade in which to spread out its camping gear? Today there are 6,000 camp grounds in national and state parks and forests. More are being developed yearly and by 1966, when the National Parks Service celebrates its golden jubilee, there should be plenty of elbow room for everyone with a camping yen.
keels The newest thing afloat is the modern houseboat, which is smartly designed for families who love the comforts of home while living on the water. A houseboat may lack the grace of a sailboat and the speed of a cabin cruiser, but it accommodates the average family nicely (plus a guest or two) and now it's navigable. Of the many lightweight houseboats now being built, nearly all are designed to be propelled by an ordinary outboard motor. The steel houseboat shown above, made by the McCulloch Corporation of St. Paul, is slightly over 25' long, 8' wide and costs $3,750—no more expensive than a car and it means summer fun for the whole family. Standard equipment includes a sink with pump, a stove, an icebox, a sofa bed, a marine toilet, a medicine chest, lights in living area, galley and toilet, and a fresh water tank. Other houseboats have hulls of fiber glass or aluminum and range between $2,500 and $8,000.

wings Loading its four-place single-engine Piper (which holds as much as a station wagon), this family makes ready for a vacation flight to the Bahamas. The trip from Westchester Airport (New York) takes only six hours and the total cost amounts to $90, compared to approximately $600 for first-class round-trip commercial fares. Of course, the cost of a four-place plane runs between $11,000 and $25,000, but many men are buying them for a combination of business and pleasure. Learning to fly is no longer an epic feat, since today's small planes are virtually fool-proof, come equipped with automatic pilot controls, radio installations. Airports near all population centers now cater to plane owners by offering expert maintenance and parking facilities.
Before you succumb to the song of the open road, be prepared for its booby traps. Topping the list is the ubiquitous mosquito, with poison ivy a runner up. To savor nature's brighter side, pack a first aid kit equipped with insect repellent and calamine lotion.

To take on wheels

Here is a potpourri of gear that will make your motoring and camping-out safe and fun:

1. Aluminum soil anchor for tying down tents and tarpaulins, works like a wood screw. 15" long. $2 each. Made by Van Dyke Industries.
2. Quart vacuum bottle and food container in white or tan plastic case, 12" high. Doubles as arm rest when secured to seat by metal bracket. $12.95. Hammacher Schlemmer.
4. Arm rest container for cigarettes, lighter, maps, ivory, maroon, or green canvas-like plastic. $9.95. Abercrombie & Fitch.
You don't have to be an expert in celestial navigation to embark on a boating trip, but up-to-date charts and a ship's radio for weather reports are a must.

To take on keels

To take on wings

These are some of the lightweight and compact amenities you can acquire for food preparation and amusement aloft: 19. Dual thermal carrier with two inner packs for storing hot and cold food simultaneously. Zipper compartment on outside for small utensils. Plastic cover. Fiberglas insulation. $12.95. Abercrombie & Fitch. 20. Transistor radio and 3-speed phonograph, turntable operated by flashlight batteries. Vinyl case. Weight about 6 lbs. $79.95. Tri Phi Inc. 21. Fold up cooker fueled by heat tablets. Measures 4" x 6" to fit in pocket. $1.25. Abercrombie & Fitch. 22. Aluminum cooler chest with capacity of 4 cubic feet. Holds ice for 72 hours or more. 22" long. 16 lbs. $27.50. Hamilton Skotch.

Store list, shopping information for hats, page 101.

With space constricted as it is on most planes, air jaunts involve a lot of sitting, so wear comfortable clothes. Conditions aloft usually prohibit cooking. Pre-cook meals, store them in thermal containers.

-and don't forget your hat!
The simplest path, and occasionally the best, is a cleared way among plants (example 1). Such a path may be the servant of good design or contributor to it. In this case it is a little of both, even though the design is primarily dictated by the trees. Next step up in the path hierarchy is plain turf that also serves as an interval between planted areas. Where traffic is heavy or where special emphasis is to be placed upon the direction or extent of the route, the turf may be embellished. Flagstones (2) in varying patterns make excellent reinforcements not only for the turf path between planted spaces but to mark the way across larger expanses of grass. In this case the flags become both paving and the path itself.

From such simple indications of direction it is an easy step to the formalized walks on the opposite page. The uses of brick for both paths and steps are almost unlimited. On the level and along gentle slopes, (Continued on page 56)
3. Straight-line bricks point a route

4. Patterned bricks create variety in texture

5. Bricks can keep a path in bounds

6. Stones project above mortar bed

7. Even the narrowest garden path need not be straight. Here wooden rounds set in stone chips lead pleasantly along a house wall.
(Continued) bricks may be laid in sand, in turf or in a masonry bed. On edge or on end they serve as attractive curbs and dividers between path and garden. Around trees they protect bark and roots from damage, reduce upkeep. In sand or gravel, wood rounds (7, preceding page), though often much more dramatic, are much less durable. Flat stones set in concrete, preferably with raked out joints to shed water and strengthen pattern (6, preceding page) are probably the most durable of all. Whether you build a path for a few seasons or a generation is determined not only by what effect you seek and what you want to spend but by your confidence in your own judgment. When in doubt, live with a movable path for a season or two, letting use determine how long it should last.

Steps punctuate paths where grades change, though ramps will do in special cases. (Wherever heavy machinery is to be moved about the garden, ramps or “sneak” paths at grade should always be provided.) But there is nothing like a few steps to catch the eye, accommodate the feet, encourage circulation and offer a focal point for effective plant groupings. It is a simply observed fact that in all but two of the varying examples on these pages plants play an important part in the whole effect. While fine design and solid construction are as admirable in a garden as in your front hall, the charity of well chosen plants can cover a multitude of structural sins outdoors. There are only a few rules for making garden steps that cannot be broken one way or another. Among them these two are paramount: never permit a step to wobble even slightly; never place in immediate sequence steps that are appreciably different in height of riser or width of tread. Failure to observe these rules can cause bad accidents. For every kind of stair on these pages a dozen variants are possible, but certain generalizations may be helpful. Wood steps of open construction are likely to last longer without rotting than wood in contact with the ground (10), but may give way at the joints. Turf steps (11) require more fussy upkeep than any others. Poured concrete steps (13) may be built wherever cement, sand and gravel may be obtained (the brick insets are grace notes), but ledge stone or formal masonry (8, 9, 16) are practical only where materials and qualified labor are available. Bricks are obtainable everywhere, of course, but the ability to lay them well comes only with a nice blend of patience and aptitude or with long practice. After the physical requirements of pedestrian locomotion are satisfied, the design and placement of steps are wholly aesthetic matters. Appropriateness in spirit to the prevailing mood of the whole garden is, of course, essential. Scale and proportion are always important. Careful workmanship and materials that look honest account for the rest. How you balance these intangibles will do a great deal to determine whether the ups and downs in your path are traps for the unwary or high points on the five dollar tour of your garden.
11. Turf steps are retained by stones

12. Wood nosing refines brickwork

13. Brick nosing refines cast concrete

14. Good joinery refines plain planks

15. Imaginative use of garden elements—like these planters in stair treads—can make a small drama of going up or down.

Bathrooms are for people

The purpose of a bathroom, when you stop to think about it, is not merely to enclose three rigid fixtures but to accommodate living, moving people. Since architects have been taking this into account bathrooms have changed considerably. Elbow room was the first addition. Then came color, counter space, carpeting and a score of refinements in equipment until some baths achieved a level of lavishness that would have made the Romans seem under-privileged. The bathroom luxurious has been duly documented in H&G. But luxury is not always synonymous with solid gold. It may be a luxury to watch green leaves dancing in the breeze outdoors while you dream in your bath—or to rest your eyes indoors on big bright splatters of your favorite colors. It may be a luxury to see all of your face in the mirror clearly whether the moment is 7:00 A.M. or 7:00 P.M. or to be able to pluck a fresh dry towel from a cabinet at your elbow while you are still dripping. You would hardly call comparable delights and conveniences luxuries in any other room in the house. So why in a bathroom? Why not make bathing and dressing as pleasant a part of your living as eating, sleeping or reading a book?

Starting on the page after next are 25 bathrooms (in whole or in part) that show it can be done. In a few of them you will note such tangible riches as fine marbles and rare paintings. But luxury is also achieved by dint of enlightened planning, practical equipment and a few simple delights for the eyes. The important fact is that all of these bathrooms were designed not just for the fixtures but for people.

Four luxuries that will brighten your routine of bathing and dressing

1. A flood of light—day and night
When your bathroom is at the top of the house as this one is, you can open it up to the heavens and literally bathe in light. As you can see by the plan, you walk around the far end of one lavatory into a glass-roofed, glass-walled bay. Three marble steps lead to a sunken tub where you could lie and dream with only the birds and stars to watch you. At the other end of the marble-floorered bay is an enclosed shower. At night the carpeted inner dressing area is flooded with light from the troughs above the two facing lavatories and mirrored cabinets. Both day and night lighting are stepped up by reflection in the full-length three-way mirror at the near end of the room. (Next to it is the toilet compartment.) As regal as this bathroom may seem, its lighting devices—skylights, light troughs, mirrors—might well be adapted to a far more modest bath. More ideas on bathroom lighting on next page.

2. Privacy with a garden view
The richest materials known to man can scarcely do more to make you feel sumptuous in your bath than a refreshing eyeful of plants and flowers. The trick of having a garden to look at and privacy too is to build an opaque outdoor screen like the plastic-paneled fence that walls the tiny terrace outside this bath. Since the screen totally blocks any view into the room, the only job left for the glass wall and sliding door of the bathroom itself is to keep out the breezes. At the same time the capsule garden view effectively decorates an abundantly equipped but severely simple bath. The gray ceramic tile of the custom-made tub (almost as wide as it is long) also paves the glass-enclosed shower in the corner. The light wood and porcelain knobs of the plastic-topped lavatory cabinet match built-in storage in dressing room next door. More "garden" baths, p. 64.

3. Color to bathe in
If you love color, it's fun to use it wholesale—though not always wise. But in the bathroom you have a limited number of elements and spend relatively less time so you can afford to indulge your color fancies to the hilt. You can splurge on color in towels, or surround yourself with color in fixtures, ceramic tile or even paintings. Adorning this long narrow bath-dressing room is an array of Matisse lithographs—a very special delight, perhaps, for the few. But the blue fixtures and soft blue ceramic tiles are standard equipment available at very little more than their equivalents in white. Since color takes up no room, it is good decorating strategy when your space is limited. (For ideas on decorating bathrooms with wall coverings and accessories, see pages 66-67.) Another space saver in this bathroom: the golden metal towel rack topping the tile-covered divider between the tub and the toilet.

4. Storage at your elbow
Think of the convenience (luxury?) of being able to bathe, dress, shave and/or make up without having to tramp from one room to another. But when you count up everything you would need to do it, you know that more bathroom space would have to be devoted to storage than to fixtures. Here is a bath which, as you can see by the plan, has two whole walls of storage. Shirts and underclothes are kept in transparent plastic trays on open shelves in longest wall. Large compartment under basin is a soiled-clothes hamper. Other notable points: The odd shape of this bath is due to the fact that it is a sector of a completely circular house. Fixtures are separated by a T-shaped wall which contains all plumbing—an economical arrangement with a bonus of privacy. Tub enclosure gleams with Italian mosaic tile. Mirror above lavatory slides back to disclose metal-lined cabinet with drain, for drying lingerie. Lavatory faucet turns left for hot water, right for cold. More bathroom storage ideas, page 65. Continued
You want plenty of lighting to see yourself clearly

A high window brings plenty of daylight to the mirror above, without sacrificing any privacy. At night, a string of fluorescent lamps behind the open-top cornice along the top of the mirror casts light downward on the mirror and upward on the wall above, which acts as a reflector. The same principle is applied in a second hand of fluorescents behind the cornice at the bottom of the window—it lights up the wall below which reflects the light into the room.

Chrome-shielded fluorescent lamps above and below the mirror over the two lavatories at right do away with the shadows that plague shavers and often account for too heavy make-up. The two sections of the mirror itself slide back to disclose medicine and cosmetic shelves. This bathroom gleams with surfaces of snowy white—white plaster walls, the white plastic countertop, white tiled shower enclosure.

Luminous panels from the floor to the ceiling and overhead cast an even glow of light over the whole bath-dressing room above and the mirror as well. Frosted glass panels shield fluorescent tubes. Light panels flanking lavatory mirror also light tub and toilet compartments behind. The lavatory countertop is black marble; the floor, terrazzo.
It takes day and night
lighting to do a good job

The skylight is an excellent device for bringing daylight into an inside bathroom. (Locating the bathrooms in the center of the plan may eliminate a garden view for the bath but it frees the outer areas of the house for more rooms with more views.) In addition to the skylight in the tub-and-shower room at the left, there is a second skylight in the bathroom proper beyond. The entire walls and floor of the shower room are ceramic tile; there is a three-way light-heat-sun lamp in the ceiling.

Luminous cabinets on both sides of the mirror over the lavatory below are really outside windows of frosted glass crossed by clear glass shelves and sliding glass doors. Daylight streams through the cabinets, lights up the pretty bottles of perfume and lotions. More daylight comes through high windows above. Narrow luminous panels flanking mirror light up at night. Lavatory counter, dado, tub platform and casing are pink-veined marble, while the basin and the tub itself are standard fixtures in pink porcelain. Mirror covers wall behind tub.

Clerestory window above the small lavatory compartment at the left admits daylight through frosted glass louvers on one side, a fixed panel on the other. The mirror below it tilts out to trap more light and give a better reflection. Frosted glass panel at left of counter screens toilet compartment without cutting off light. Countertop and floor are tile.
To look out on a garden
refreshes your spirit

An outside wall guards the tiny terrace beyond the bathroom above. The terrace is just about wide enough for one chair, but even a few feet of outdoor space with a strip of planting is enough to bring the fresh air feeling into a bathroom. Here you could lie in the sunken tile tub and gaze out and up at the sky. But if you preferred to be completely enclosed you could simply draw the shower curtains, one of which doubles as a window curtain. Materials in this bath include: paper-backed silk on the walls; cast concrete stone for the floor, honey-colored wood grain plastic for storage and counters.

A screen of thick foliage beyond the brief lawn outside the bathroom at the left assures privacy even on warm days when the sliding glass doors are wide open. If you would prefer a part-time garden view you might adopt this expedient of using translucent glass that is not transparent. Here inside curtains draw for absolute protection. Other points:
ceiling heat lamp for quick warmth on chilly mornings; chrome compartment in wall beyond far basin—its door swings around and on the back are toothbrush holders.
To have copious storage makes grooming a joy.

Shelves with tambour doors are set into the wall between the two mirrors above; and they make a pleasantly inconspicuous device for over-the-counter storage (below left). Below counter is a wealth of additional storage ranging from hamper compartments beneath each basin to small drawers for cosmetics in between. Cabinets are light wood with porcelain knobs; the counter itself is marble, like casing built around the standard tub.

Chrome-front compartments which you can buy ready made as one unit are set into the mirrored wall above the lavatory at the right. Two have drop-front doors that double as cosmetic shelves (above right); center section has swing-out doors. A mirrored-door medicine cabinet is set into the same mirrored wall. Marble-topped storage-lavatory with its traditional air is one of a pair in this white-walled, marble-floor bathroom.

Tilt-out bins below the lavatory counter at the far left make exceptionally convenient laundry hampers. Next to them is a deep drawer for tall bottles, sturdily hung on steel runners like those in heavy duty filing cabinets. Mirrors above counter are really doors that slide back to reveal more storage. Countertop is plastic; walls of room are colored structural glass.

A door-back cabinet like the one on the linen closet door at the left is an astute device for storing surplus medical supplies. Cabinet has a door of its own with a hook to keep it closed when outer door moves back and forth. Deep drawer below linen closet is a laundry hamper.

How to transform the bath you have
with wall coverings
and appointments

On the page opposite are six ways you can effect consistent pattern in an old-fashioned, unreconstructed bathroom.

1. “Bamboo” in vinyl panels gives a tropic look to a man’s bath. Appropriately exotic accompaniment: a jalousied window, a serpentine towel rack of bent rattan, and a wicker basket. Mosaic-patterned tile flooring provides lively color underfoot.

2. Morning glories on wallpaper make a flowery bower of a small, dark bathroom. The wallpaper covers upper walls, ceiling, and a cornice which drops to meet sliding shower doors on tub. Wood and caning enclosure disguises basin’s plumbing.

3. “Marble” in facsimile gives new dignity to a dowdy bathroom—it’s really white marbleized water-resistant paper. To carry out the look of elegance: a brass lantern from Japan; veined vinyl floor tile; a shower curtain of water-repellent Celanese taffeta with a classic “Corinthian” motif hung behind a crenated cornice. Window is covered with a plastic-backed wooden grille. Bathroom designed by Manashaw & Daggett.

4. A bookshelf mural, printed on wallpaper, gives a small bath an appearance of greater depth. Lavatory plumbing here has been boxed in with a simple cabinet, providing storage space at the same time. Bathroom designed by Lubliner and Himmel.

5. Louis XVI gold stripes on wallpaper create a tent effect in a square bath without a window. Paste the paper on the ceiling so that the pattern of narrow stripes converges at the center to simulate the mitered corners of a canopy. The wood tassel hanging overhead is a capricious touch. To frame the tub, hang a double curtain and loop back at sides. Add gaily colored towels. This imaginative room designed by Manashaw & Daggett.

6. Washable paper flocked with clinging vines in H&G’s Green Olive matches curtain fabric gathered at a dormer window and provides a lush summery look all year round. This leafy motif is repeated inside the tidy oval basin. Counter of black marble veined with gold stands on reeded crystal legs. Medicine chest sets flush in wall; crystal globe shields light. Fixtures, wallpaper, accessories at Sherle Wagner.

H&G designs 3 bathrooms with wonderful new conveniences

A master bath-dressing room with sewing and laundry facilities

We are convinced that most bathrooms can give far more service than do they. To prove it we designed this one—for a couple—which includes not only storage for clothing, but also the laundry and the sewing facilities needed to keep it shipshape. Count the assets: 1. Drying cabinet for lingerie. 2. Lavatories of new design (with both faucets on right side), set in marble counter; back to back mirrors framed by light bulbs. 3.
Towel rack that warms towels electrically. 4. Washer-dryer handy to dressing area and clothes closets. 5. Portable sewing machine for clothing repairs. 6. Drip-dry closet for wash-and-wear laundry. 7. Fold-up ironing board. 8. Convenient storage for towels. 9. Spacious closets for clothes that fill almost one wall. 10. Toilet enclosed in a compartment.
Wall drying cabinet. Dry-O-Mat Co. All plumbing fixtures. Briggs Manufacturing

An L-shaped bath
with its own enclosed patio

Open to the sky in summer, glass roofed in winter, our plant-filled patio would add zest to bathing, be ideal for sun-tanning. You could adapt the plan to fit any ground-floor, outside bath. Its conveniences: 1. Fold-up scales recessed in wall; towel ladder above; walls of walnut plywood.
2. Tub enclosed by sliding plastic panels; tub wall of mosaic tile.
3. Shower head with safety temperature control. 4. Wall hung toilet screened by compartment. 5. Twin oval lavatories in plastic counter, each with single hot-cold faucet; cabinet with laundry hamper; high windows (above mirrors) that open for ventilation. 6. Towel cabinet.
7. Clothing storage. 8. Long. 8. Medicine chest in wall. 9. Patio access-sible through sliding glass doors; ceramic tile floors in bath and patio.

A two-in-one bath for two children

Our children's bathroom would give a family with young girls and boys almost the equivalent of two separate baths. Divider doors slide out of the wall at each end of a central tub, and two toilets are enclosed in separate compartments. Other features: 1. Basins installed in tile countertops. 2. Tub alcove walls, also ceramic tile. Adjustable shower fixture that lowers to child's height. 3. Tub with a new cradle-like contour and wide sitting ledge, for bathing a child. 4. Ceiling heat lamps to warm up the room. 5. Individual towel storage for each half. 6. In compartments: wall hung toilets that make floor cleaning easier. 7. Two ladder racks for towels. 8. Floor of ceramic tile in a mosaic pattern.
Adjustable shower fixture, Milwaukee Faucets, inc. Ceiling heating fixture, Emer-sion-Pryne. All plumbing fixtures, American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corp.
Garden-fresh decorations for summer wherever you are

Let's give summer's motto—Dolce far niente—a gentle reappraisal. Isn't it just as sweet to do a little something? Something almost effortless, that will lift your house out of its doldrums? Summer is the season when it seems to look a little deserted. If you are summering at a beach house or in the mountains you are probably miles away from the vases, flower bowls and other props you rely on for decorating in winter. If you are at home you probably crave a refreshing change of scenery. Here and on the following pages is a sheaf of summer still lifes—simple decorations for table, terrace or any corner of your house that needs perking up. The secret of their effortlessness: you concoct them out of things close at hand, to side-step harassing shopping excursions. In the country you can pick fruits, flowers and vegetables in your garden. If city-bound you can pluck your flowers off a flower cart, or savor the pleasure of browsing forcomely specimens at your corner fruit and vegetable stand. Wherever you are, a careful look around the house should uncover amusing containers for your treasures: think in terms of mixing bowls and fry pans, or berry boxes and tin cans brightened with a coat of paint.

Take your pick of fruits and flowers

1. Straw compotes upended and stacked make comely containers for summer fruits. You can wire them together after filling them with the prettiest peaches, grapes and other fruits you can find. A whole string of them wired together could be suspended from a low ceiling. 2. Small-step ladder painted to blend with your terrace furniture makes a roomy platform for potted plants. Try a pyramid of red geraniums and ivy on a ladder painted moss green or terracotta. 3. Tiny brass hurricane lamp, nestled in a bowl of daisies, lights a tray for terrace dining. For a seated dinner party, you could put a lamp at each place, surround it with flowers to complement your table linens.

Opposite: Straw corbeille filled with daisies, delphinium, cornflowers and lemons makes a tart and cooling summer centerpiece, equally feasible and refreshing in the city or the country. Basket is lined with aluminum foil to make it moisture-proof, filled with Oasis (water-retaining plastic foam which you can get at your florist's) to hold flower stems. Lemons rest on a foot-high tôle lemon tree. You can concoct a tablecloth to make the most of the pattern on your plates from yard goods you buy at your local store. Here: a blue upholstery print serves as a background to Stangl's "Fairlawn" blue, yellow and white earthenware. The sterling silver pattern is "Marlborough," made by Reed & Barton.

1. BRASS DISH filled with sprouting onions in a state of artful disarray would be a refreshing note in any corner of your house. Purple onions will give you a wonderful effect, too—supply just the right accent of subtle color for a cool summer room.

2. COPPER FRY PAN contains a rosette of vegetables, demonstrates the elegant effect you can get with down-to-earth materials. For this arrangement, ring a plump white cauliflower with artichokes and broccoli. You can take it from there, and concoct your own designs.

3. BERRY BOXES holding potted herbs give you a handsome and convenient still life for a kitchen window. Paint the boxes brilliant colors like tangerine and pink. Line them with Saran wrap to make them watertight, pack peat moss tightly around the pots and keep it moist.

4. BLACK WIRE EGG BASKET with rosy-skinned tomatoes makes a gay splash of color, can be carried easily from room to room. You can pick up egg baskets in antique stores, or substitute a wire salad basket painted black.

A personal hobby can set the theme for a weekend house

In this unique California house, built around African trophies, countries and centuries are deftly mixed

Inveterate travelers and collectors know how soon a house can become overburdened with the tangible evidence of their many trips. Here is what one woman did when she found herself in this quandary. Mrs. Albert E. Schlesinger balked at the idea of filling her San Francisco house with the extensive assortment of big game bagged by her husband on his African safaris (it would, she felt, completely spoil the character of the house), but she hit on a happy alternative. She furnished her simple weekend house in nearby Atherton with a surprising and successful melange of the Africana and antiques. The result was so satisfying that what was intended as an occasional retreat is now a second home to the Schlesingers who use it during the summer and on spring and fall weekends, entertain extensively there and have their grandchildren come to stay. To a lesser degree, you can follow her example. If those irresistible pieces picked up on impulse turned out to be sadly at war with the decoration of your house, they can be the basis for an original, personal scheme in your own summer vacation hideaway—be it a house at the shore or a cabin in the woods.

Mrs. Schlesinger, a woman of decided ideas and a perfectionist about her decorating, gave as much time and thought to her country house as to her house in the city. She worked closely with interior designer Michael Taylor, spent weeks tracking down iron workers who could fashion the kind of terrace tables she wanted, and hunting in local antique shops for good though dilapidated pieces she could repair and paint (Continued on page 76)
White canvas curtains with black trim screen entrance porch; tied-back folds are released as storm protection. Pink and white oleander bushes line driveway to the house.

Red-and-pink striped upholstery and panels frame Masai shield, spears, 18th-century chairs, stained black, serve for dining.

Terrace table is set with black-and-white Spode, black glass, black lead tobacco boxes, hurricane lamp (an old egg container). Wood and wrought-iron dining chairs are French park benches, cut down.

Airy second-floor terrace is shielded by canvas awning. Tall pine and eucalyptus trees encircle house, feathery bamboo flourishes on lower terrace.

(Cont’d) herself. For the living room she chose the same strong, clear-cut color scheme that she had used in the city, but employed less formal materials and effects. The red-and-pink striped Mexican cotton in the living room (page 75, upper left) is a country translation of the red velvet curtains and upholstery of the city. Black accessories and black-and-white Spode on the terrace table (page 75, lower right) are close cousins of her famous collection of black Wedgwood in town. As a background for her husband’s trophies and the zebra and leopard pelts she decided to have walls of brick and oak (stained bois de rose, a soft putty shade) and hardwood floors. Antique Venetian gondola chairs, an 18th century “wake” table and a Queen Anne secretary are jostled by African spears, shields and drums. Yet the overall effect is never jarring, for Mrs. Schlesinger operates on the principle that if each thing is beautiful in itself, its period is irrelevant.

The bulk of Mr. Schlesinger’s Africana was allotted a room to itself and its arrangement was thought out with care. John Humphrey, curator of collections at the San Francisco Museum of Art, supervised the hanging and placement of the heads. The elephant tusks, a special pride, were given a prominent and decorative place “framing” the thatched bar in the trophy room. Other accessories around the house were collected during trips to New York, Rome and Paris, but the black sake tubs used as terrace planters are a San Francisco specialty.

The same sure instinct for perfection and harmony of detail is evidenced outdoors. The terrace aerie, perched one story above ground to gain a magnificent tree-top view, boasts specially designed marble-topped tables, curlicued wrought-iron and wood chairs that were once French park benches, a mosaic table made by Louise Ackerman for the San Francisco Museum of Art. Poolside and patio are furnished with black-and-white outdoor furniture, a black wire mesh bridge table and sundial table designed by Mrs. Schlesinger.

Much of the charming aspect of the small, engaging house lies in the trim, crisp color scheme. It is painted bois de rose with black trim. Spanking white canvas awnings give protection against sun and matching curtains can be let down during storms. By the walls, along the driveway and around the pool and patio, landscape architect Philip Grimes has set a profusion of cool white flowers and plants: oleander, agapanthus, fuchsias, jasmine and petunias which complement the tall tangle of eucalyptus and pine trees, and make a perfect antidote to the hubbub of a city life.

Elephant tusks proudly displayed by Mr. Schlesinger and white hunter Ken Jesperson are an exceptional 152 pounds in weight, 6½ long, and make a striking room decoration (below).

Big game and Africana are shown to advantage in the trophy room. On fireplace wall, left to right, a water buck, topee, roan antelope, lesser kudu, eland, oryx. Opposite view toward thatched-hut bar (below) shows crisp decoration: split-bamboo curtains, white crash upholstery, black cement floor, wicker furniture.

Safari trophies are used in master bedroom too. The floor, scraped, sanded, painted white and rubbed off, is bare except for leopard skins. White quilted cotton covers bleached oak beds copied from early Majorcan style. Corkscrew posts echo spiraling horns of the impala which hangs above a William and Mary commode.
REVOLVING CLOSET orbits on ball bearings around a center post that plugs into floor and ceiling or wall. With its single shelf and coat rack for six to eight garments, this partly open cylinder measures just two feet in diameter—blessedly compact for a space-shy entrance hall.

To close the closet, just turn the open side to the wall so that its handsome face of matched walnut veneers comes into full view. Simplified mounting hardware makes it almost portable. Made by Lehigh Furniture Corporation.
The fortuitous return of

THE ARMOIRE

A wonderful storage idea
from the past solves
our modern storage problems

One of the oldest concepts in furniture is the armoire which reaches back to the days when noblemen stashed their armor and an occasional skeleton in stalwart closets for safekeeping. Our storage needs may be more diversified, our weapons more subtle, and our possessions more numerous and complex, but the armoire is as useful now as it was to our venerable ancestors. After years of obscurity it has reappeared not only in reproductions of traditional styles but in modern guises as well. What distinguishes today’s version from other modes of contemporary storage—modular cabinets, for instance—is its apparent simplicity. All the adjustable shelves, rods, many-sized drawers and racks are concealed behind a calm façade of doors, so that the armoire becomes impressive furniture in its own right.

What’s more, its current return to favor is well timed to meet the diminishing storage space of our new homes. There just aren’t enough convenient places to put all the things which we are happily engaged in accumulating—crinolines and candelabra, galoshes and top hats, bar tools and football helmets, exotic collections and everyday clothing. The armoire is equal to all these challenges. What you put in it is your own choice. One man’s hi-fi cabinet with the modest addition of a few closet accessories can become another man’s wardrobe, or perhaps a bit of both.

CHINA AND LINEN CACHE for the well stocked dining room is hidden in this antiqued cherry armoire. The interior contains four adjustable shelves for large serving pieces plus six drawers for everyday and heirloom linens, making this reproduction of an 18th century French piece a nucleus for a modern dining area. Hardware is pewter finished; frieze is hand carved. Armoire designed by Yale Burge for Grosfeld House.
VALET CHESTS of walnut, with rosewood inlay tracing a geometric motif, make a good pair for a master bedroom. Inside refinements: mirror on underside of hinged top, electrical outlet, drawers that include partitioned accessory file, shelves and shoe rack. From the Mondrian collection by Kroehler.

MASCULINE WARDROBE serves as a control center for a boy's belongings. Full length vertical compartment on left, four open-front drawers, and an adjustable shelf accommodate his clothing and sports gear. Rugged finish of wax and whitewash has been applied to this oak cabinet. By A. Brandt Company.

JUNIOR WARDROBES scaled to Lilliputian proportions form a niche for a child's bed. Five-foot-high wardrobe comes in unpainted maple with sliding doors of grasscloth imbedded in plastic. You can paint it and trim with decals or colorful tape. For smaller fry add a second child-high clothes pole. By Stokes.
OLD MING CABINET was the inspiration for a tapered mahogany and rattan armoire used as a hi-fi center in the San Francisco apartment of James Harris. This version of the cabinet is fitted with handmade brass hardware and four shelves. You can also order other fittings, woods. Cabinet by McGuire.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Figuring there's no place like home to try out home laundry techniques, H&G arranged with Westinghouse Electric Corporation to deliver to Mrs. Oshin, young suburban mother of three energetic males, a pair of its newest laundry machines. They were the L120 automatic washer (sketched above) and the D120 dryer, both 1959 models with push-button program control. Mrs. Oshin used the equipment for six weeks for her regular family laundry and, in addition, put through the works a number of the wash-and-use home furnishings at the right and on page 86. The results: some happy discoveries, a few headaches. Here is her frank account of her six weeks of spinning and sudsing.

The children's excitement seemed to be twirling and tumbling along with the cycles as we watched the first loads in the '59 washer and dryer. A panda rug was in the washer and the boys' new shirts (sizes 10, 6, 4) were part of the kaleidoscopic pattern in the window of the dryer so the children had something at stake.

Davy (size 6) was particularly intrigued by the suds flinging against the glass, a display our previous top-loading washer did not offer. “Boy, this machine is really automatic! It even washes its own window!” The boys went out to tell the neighbors and to play cave in the huge chrysalis-like crates shed by the machines on arrival.

When I was a child I used to marvel not at pandas and sleek-looking machines but at our laundry woman who came each week, her worn, gnarled hands making everything clean and smooth again. She was considered old-fashioned: she used a scrubbing board instead of a wringer washing machine, flat irons instead of our electric one.

But now I realize that in going without a dryer these last few years and ignoring the improvements in the newest fabrics and washers, I have been as old-fashioned for our time as flat irons and scrubbing board were for hers.

My former washer, a deluxe model and less than four years old, is not exactly outmoded, but it certainly can't keep up easily with the new young things being turned out these days by the textile mills. And without an automatic dryer, neither can I. In trying out the latest laundry equipment, I found the advanced features make all the difference between really enjoying the new fabrics or shunning them.

The new machines, together with the better behaved fabrics, have persuaded me to give up virtually all handwashing, eliminated a great deal of ironing and opened up the whole field (Continued on page 86)

of automatic wash-and-use. They have even tempted me back to drip-dry. (I, who had considered founding Drip Dry Anonymous, had thought that impossible.) With the new machines, I can launder more items at home, do more at one time, buy what I please and what pleases me, confident that the equipment can handle it with aplomb.

The secret, of course, is in the cycles.

The biggest factor seems to be that the engineers who design the machines now have it worked out so that the machines know what to do for which fabrics and when to stop.

In addition to the usual programs for color-fast cottons and for synthetics, and the variations thereof, the newest washer also has special plans for drip-dry and for automatic wash-and-wear, for blankets, and for tinting. These are by no means mere gadgetry, because today the fabrics in clothing and homefurnishings are so diverse.

The washer, at the turn of a dial, selects the proper water temperatures for wash and rinses, chooses wash or soak periods and whatever else is needed for the particular load you put into it. In so doing, it frees you from the modicum of effort and thought it takes to make those decisions, decisions, decisions. Best of all, at the end of the drip-dry cycle, after most of the water is out, the washer stops itself before that punishing final spin. Thus, drip-dry items emerge from their cycle wet but not family-size versions of the Victoria Falls.

The special program for blankets includes automatically timed soaking periods instead of damaging prolonged washing action. Once the detergent is mixed and the blanket put into its bath, you have nothing more to do.

As a result of these and other new feats of the '59 washer, I no longer have to hover over it like a humming-bird. No more of that moronic waiting around to turn a blanket, time a spin period, add a rinse compound—all the while fearful lest a blanket be washed too long or a synthetic spun out and the wrinkles spun in if I should have to abandon my post to answer the door bell or remove a splinter.

The '59 dryer has several programs, too. These select the proper drying heat and time for the various types of loads. For the most frequently used (Continued on page 98)
Guide to the newest WASHERS AND DRYERS

All of them handle wash-and-use fabrics with special care

Some new machines offer pre-calculated washing "programs", others let you set your own. Here are the choices you will find on the control panels, all of which are somewhat like the Frigidaire above and the Westinghouse, page 84.

Frigidaire At the top of the page is the control panel of Frigidaire's newest washer ("Custom Imperial Fabric-Master") which offers five different programs for different types of fabrics and two load sizes. To set the machine you turn the fabric selector to the one you want; spin the dial at the right of the panel to heavy, normal, or light soil; then turn the rinse selector to its automatic position. You can alter the program by substituting a cold water rinse, skipping or repeating any operation. Matching dryer, above, offers choice of five fully automatic cycles or you can set the timer to suit yourself.

Kelvinator The Kelvinator washer ("Style Mark") gives you full freedom to select each washing step individually. You have a choice of three wash temperatures, two rinse temperatures, and normal or delicate-fabric speed. In addition, there is a separate and fully automatic program for wash-wear. The matching Kelvinator dryer gives you three choices: normal drying heat, a wash-and-wear cycle, or tumbling without heat. The wash-and-wear cycle is automatically timed—for all other drying you set the timer yourself up to 140 minutes.

Maytag Programming the Maytag washer ("All-Fabric") leaves a number of the decisions up to you. You push buttons to take your choice of three wash temperatures, three laundry sizes, two wash-action speeds, and a suds saver or suds drain. With the "Halo of Heat" dryer you have a choice of three cycles including one for wash-and-wear.

Hotpoint The completely programmed Hotpoint washer ("Automatic Clothes Minder") gives you a choice of six push-button cycles including one for light soil which doubles as a pre-wash soak for heavily soiled clothes. The dryer gives you a fully automatic cycle that shuts off when clothes are dry, and a dry-and-wear cycle with a wrinkle-shedding tumble. Or you can set timer yourself according to dampness of clothes or for no-heat fluffing.

Norge This company's automatic washer ("Dispensomat") has five fabric-type settings and a sixth general-fabric setting for a mixed, family wash. To set the machine, you turn the fabric-selector dial to the proper place, then push the buttons indicated on rotating cylinder in dashboard window. The Dispensomat also has automatic dispensers for detergents. Norge dryer has seven drying-time settings for different types of fabrics, four heat choices.

General Electric The GE automatic washer ("Filter-Flo") has a color-keyed system for laundering five types of fabric loads. Wash and rinse temperatures and spin speeds are automatically adjusted but you can substitute a cold water wash if you wish. GE dryer has automatic programs for delicate, regular, and heavy fabrics, and machine turns itself off when clothes are dry.

Whirlpool You have 10 completely automatic programs to choose from on the most advanced Whirlpool washer ("Imperial Mark XII"). All you do is push the one button for the program you want. The Whirlpool washer-dryer combination with built-in water heater gives you options on various wash, rinse, and drying cycles, and suggested recipes for laundering each type of fabric.

Philco This company's washer-dryer combination ("Dustomatic") has a dashboard with three knobs that offer multiple selections for wash-water temperature, soak and rinse temperatures, and drying cycles (including "super-fast", wash and wear, and no-heat air fluffing). A fourth knob is a water-saving control. An extra Philco feature is the "Power Soak" for heavily soiled clothing. It consists of three to six minutes of additional soaking action in concentrated soap suds before the machine is filled with water to regular washing capacity.
Notes for the hostess

By Diana Bryan

Those all-of-one-period rooms are fine in museums as history but they seem to me a bit tedious when it comes to actual living. I feel the same way about what I call "period parties"—everybody of the same era, the same locale and type. A little diplomatic mixing can be lots more stimulating. Don and I don't fancy ourselves as a category or filing-card couple. We like to meet our elders and the enthusiastic young now and then. Keeps us from endlessly trading mutual parental problems and domestic gambits with our contemporaries or with like-minded neighbors.

The hotter the weather, the more hospitable I seem to become. But I hate to be confined to domestic duties or bogged down by extra work over the dog days. The Japanese have come up with a bewitching solution to part of my problem—almost translucent wooden plates which delight my lazy soul and please my taste. Sliced from pale Hokkaido pine, they are pressed into squares and decorated with more gently pressed designs. Unbelievably, they are meant to be thrown away after they have been admired and used. There are matching coasters and the whole set is so inexpensive and so good looking, I almost wish they were for keeps. Found them at Dorothy Sullivan's over in Pound Ridge, New York.

For most of us, outdoor cooking means charcoal and some kind of pot barbecue recipe turned out dramatically by the host. And to most of us, a fondue means a bubbling cheese mixture. But Barbara Pike disproved both these beliefs last Saturday night by having an alfresco cookout at which she served fondue, and not a crumb of cheese in sight. By tactful borrowing she had managed to equip each of four card tables with an electric frying pan, each table being strategically placed within cord's reach of an electric outlet on the porch. There were twelve of us, three to a table, because she allowed for the fact that all the fondue paraphernalia wouldn't permit more without crowding.

The pans were wreathed with garden greens and Queen Anne's lace to soften their mechanical look. Tables were covered with green denim. The napkins were small, white huck hand towels, most sensible for this kind of a party and pretty too.

Barbara's version of fondue was an adaptation of a Bourgignonne dish for which diners are served bits of beef to cook, themselves, on long forks. Instead of raw steak cubes, Barbara had piled uncooked, little bay scallops in the indentations of her old oyster plates. In front of each plate were baking sea-shells filled with three kinds of butter: grated-lemon, fresh herb, and shallot. The salad, in individual, cabbage-leaf, crescent plates, was an enticing mixture of whole baby string beans and cherry tomatoes all steeped in a vinaigrette dressing. Oyster crackers and salt toast took the place of hot bread. It seems the idea came to her when an old friend and recent guest gave her a set of slim boxwood-and-ebony French fondue forks as a house present. Although the Swiss fondue pots with their alcohol lamps may look more chic than electric skillets, the thermostatically controlled skillets keep the butter and oil mixture at just the right temperature, without smoking or smelting. We had great fun sautéing our own tidbits on our special forks and dunking them in our choice of butters.

Milly's idea of having a serpentine top made for her dining room table ought to be patented. It's brilliant. She's able to get almost half again as many people around the table as she could around a conventional oval or rectangular top. The ins and outs are so much more accommodating for a small space. Most attractive too—gracefully Provencal in effect.

Unlike some husbands I know, Don quite likes Sunday lunch parties on occasion. But in summer we both hate to miss a moment of our week-end mixed doubles, so when the Hastings combined tennis cam lunch on a recent Sabbath, we were delighted. Besides, their excellent cork court turf and imaginative food are among our neighborhood's top attractions.

Though we took a sad tumble in the last set (8-6), it was cheering to wander, English-novel-style, over to the courtside refreshment table and draw the best lime-sipped iced tea from a samovar instead of from the usual picnic jug. Trust Helen, she had filled the stove part with ice instead of coal and vodka—cold, cold tea, undiluted! So much more honest a use for this romantic teamaker than turning it into a lamp.

After we simmered down, we were served a superlative "re-past"—not strictly lunch, but a magnificent array of hors d'oeuvre varies, from aubergine salad to tomme de Savoie cheese, and all beautifully arranged in dishes of Gustavberg's brown-striped "Spisa" faience. Decided then and there, with Helen's permission, to pick up a set of these varying-size rectangular dishes for my own smorgasbord and Mexican tacos dinners. Ovenproof, they should be wonderful for year 'round food. Also loved her little, smooth, wooden picks and spreaders, like spades and diamonds. She said she found them at La Cuisiniere on her last visit to New York.

It all seemed most elaborate, but Helen assured me it couldn't have been easier with all of the fresh things done and marinated in the icebox the day before, right in their serving dishes. Most of the other delicacies came ready-to-serve from the local delicatessen or the supermarket's fancy food counter, so the whole spread was really more a matter of organization than haute cuisine.

Whimsey is alright in its place, but it's to be handled with care. Recently, though, I saw an amusing, practical and altogether pleasing bit of plastic nonsense—bandanas imbedded in clear plastic and molded into serving trays and bowls or folded into basket shapes. Struck me as just right for barbecues, picnics on the lawn, or light-hearted branches. Would look marvelous with doilies or cloths of ticking. I can imagine a dozen ways to use them and also realize their sterling worth for teen-age record dances where all sorts of pretzels, crackers, chips and nuts are the de rigueur menu.

In summer I get a redecorating urge. Along with taking up the rugs and changing slipcovers, I like to change the mood of my table settings, banishing some of winter's formalities. "Royal Carnation" pottery does the trick perfectly. The pale-gray-blue ground splashed with orange, deep blue and green appeals to a Mediterranean streak in me. The baroque shapes are a welcome diversion after a season with my more austere china. Nasturtiums are a perfect floral complement for this Italian ware.

Outdoor Cook Book

BY JAMES A. BEARD

Dining alfresco is as much a part of American tradition as the corn husking bee or the barn raising. Almost a hundred years ago Appleton's Journal, a popular publication of the day, stated "The eagerness with which we enter upon picnics, the keenness with which we relish them, are proof of the supremacy of the outdoors." Today's fresh air feasts have all the camaraderie of those early days but a higher degree of cultivation. Now you can serve the most elegant menus by cooking part of the meal ahead and keeping it in the refrigerator or freezer, thereby shortening your outdoor duties and lengthening your leisure. But successful outdoor meals are no makeshift matter. If you are likely to have half-a-dozen electric appliances operating at once, permanent terrace outlets are a must—the drifting extension cord is not only unsightly, it is a downright menace. Take cognizance of prevailing breezes and set the table to windward of the grill so the food will not be blanketed in odoriferous smoke. Bring out your biggest lap-covering damask napkins—your guests will bless you for it. Serve wine in crystal glasses and see that it is at the right temperature. A big china or silver punch bowl makes a wonderful cooler for wine and beer.

As you take the wine out of the cooler replace it with bottles of kirsch or framboise to be served icy-cold with fruit desserts. Then sit back and enjoy the timeless pleasures of a meal at home with nature.

OUTDOOR BREAKFAST PARTY

(Serves 6-8)

Mixed Grill à l'Anglaise

The mixed grill in the English fashion can be as varied as you like. For each person allow:

- 1 sweetbread, blanched, dipped into melted butter and chilled
- 2 parboiled pork sausages or 1 patty of chopped seasoned pork mixed with chopped pistachio nuts
- 2 thin slices (or 1 thick) Canadian or Irish bacon
- 2 mushroom caps, brushed with butter
- 1 tomato
- 1 small loin lamb chop about ½” thick
- 1 slice calves' liver

Grill the sweetbreads, sausages and bacon first and keep warm on a hot platter or plate. If you are cooking a thick slice of Canadian or Irish bacon, it will take 12 to 14 minutes. If the slices are thin you will have to gauge for yourself, according to the degree of doneness you prefer.

Cook the sweetbreads approximately 15 minutes when blanching, then dip them in melted butter and grill until they are delicately browned on both sides. Brush them with tarragon-flavored butter several times during the process.

Arrange the mushroom caps and tomatoes on the outside of the grill, for they need very little cooking.

Grill the lamb chop over medium heat until pink at the center, about 8 to 12 minutes. If your guests like rare or underdone liver, broil it in rather thick steaks and slice it diagonally. A steak 2” thick will take about 18 minutes over medium heat to be done rare.

To serve: Arrange 1 of each of the cooked foods wheel-fashion on a plate, using the tomato as the center and leaving room for a helping of the delicately-browned galette potatoes. You could serve a béarnaise sauce with this combination.
OPEN HOUSE SUNDAY PARTY

(for 6-8)

MARINATED BEEF SLICES ON SKEWERS
CHICKEN CUBES, BROILED AND DIPPED IN SESAME SEEDS

EGGPLANT FINGERS WITH BACON
SHRIMP LACED WITH BACON
WHITE BEAN SALAD WITH FISH GARNITURES
MARINATED VEGETABLES WITH A BOWL OF GREENS, TOASTED WALNUTS AND CROUTONS
BREADS
CHEESES
ORANGE COCONUT CAKE

White Bean Salad with Fish Garnitures

1 1/2 pounds pea beans or 6-8 cans cannellini (Italian white beans)
1 cup olive oil
1/2 cup wine vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon dry mustard
Fresh-ground pepper
2 garlic cloves, chopped
2 tablespoons chopped fresh basil (or 1/2 teaspoons dried)
1/2 cup chopped parsley
Canned tuna fish, sardines, salmon, smoked eel

This dish may be made with boiled pea beans, boiled cannellini or canned cannellini, drained and washed.

Marinated Beef Slices on Skewers

Have the butcher cut thin thin slices of sirloin or filet on the slicing machine. Lute them on small metal skewers or on bamboo skewers which have been soaked in water for 30 minutes. Have the marinade in a bowl or flat dish with the skewers of meat resting in it so that guests may remove and broil them for themselves.

For the marinade, combine 1/2 cup olive oil, 1/2 cup brown, the juice of 2 Persian limes, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon crushed black pepper, a dash of Tabasco and a teaspoon of rosemary.

Chicken Cubes

Cut cubes of boned chicken breast and impale them on skewers. Soak them in a mixture of 1 cup soy sauce (the Chinese or Japanese type), 1/2 cup olive oil, 1 teaspoon salt and 1 teaspoon tarragon.

Grill the chicken cubes and when they are cooked through, press into sesame seeds and return to the grill to toast the seeds. If you wish, dip again into marinade before eating.

Eggplant Fingers with Bacon

Slice thin fingers of unpeeled eggplant. Slip one end of a piece of bacon over a skewer, add the eggplant finger and fasten with the other end of the bacon slice. Brush eggplant with melted butter and grill slices until eggplant is soft and bacon crisp.

Shrimp Laced with Bacon

Slip the end of a rasher of bacon on a skewer. Follow with a raw, shellled shrimp, then pierce the bacon again, then impale another shrimp, alternating bacon and shrimps until the skewer is full. Grill lightly until bacon is crisp and the shrimp cooked through. While cooking, season with a grind of pepper, a dash of Tabasco.

MARINATED VEGETABLES

2 packages frozen artichoke hearts, thawed
1/2 cup oil
1 finely chopped clove garlic
6 eggs
2 tablespoons water
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
Gartrned Parmesan or Romano cheese

Heat the oil in a large iron or heavy aluminum skillet. Cook the garlic for 3 or 4 minutes. Add the thawed artichoke hearts, toss them in the oil and heat thoroughly (they are cooked before freezing, so they merely need heating). When they are heated through and tender, beat the eggs slightly with the water, the salt and pepper, and pour this mixture over the artichoke hearts. Cook for a few minutes on top of the stove until the eggs begin to set. Sprinkle lavishly with grated cheese and place under the broiler, about 3" from the flame, or in a 450° oven for a few moments, just to brown the cheese and set the eggs on top.

Roll-around bar has a capacious ice chest, trays to hold bottles.

Snickerdoodle

1 cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 cup milk
1 egg
1/2 cup melted butter
Additional granulated sugar

Sift together the flour, baking powder, salt, sugar and cinnamon. Mix with milk and egg. Blend well and stir in melted butter. Spread thinly in 9" x 12" baking pan, sprinkle with granulated sugar, and bake in a hot 400° oven about 25 minutes.

Breadsticks

1 package active dry yeast
1 package sugar
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons oil
1 cup milk

Mix the yeast, sugar and salt. Add milk and oil. Mix well. Let rise in a warm place until doubled. Roll into a rectangle and cut into small pieces. Place on a greased baking sheet and let rise again. Bake at 375° F until golden.

Blender Bearnaise Sauce

3 egg yolks
1 teaspoon dried tarragon
1 tablespoon finely chopped shallot
1 teaspoon salt
Dash of Tabasco
1 teaspoon wine vinegar
1/4 pound sweet butter

Put in the container of the blender the egg yolks, tarragon, shallott, salt, Tabasco and vinegar. Flick the blender switch on and off. Heat the butter until it bubbles and almost boils. Turn the blender switch to high speed and pour the hot butter into the egg mixture until it is well blended to a thick sauce.

Galette Potatoes

6 tablespoons chopped beef suet
6-8 large baking potatoes, peeled and sliced diagonally
Butter
Salt, pepper

Try out the suet in a large skillet. Put one wide slice of potato in the center of the pan and overlap the slices in the shape of a rosette. Repeat process in layers, dotting each layer lightly with butter and sprinkling with salt and pepper. Cook over a rather brisk flame for 3 to 4 minutes. Reduce the flame and cook until the potatoes are tender and a brown crust has formed on the bottom. Invert the pan on a large platter or baking sheet. Add additional butter to the pan and put the potatoes back, browned side on top, to brown on the other side. To serve, invert the pan on a large heated platter.

Frittata of Artichoke Hearts

2 packages frozen artichoke hearts, thawed
1/2 cup oil
1 finely chopped clove garlic
6 eggs
2 tablespoons water
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
Grated Parmesan or Romano cheese

Make a French dressing with the oil, vinegar, salt, dry mustard and a little fresh-ground black pepper and add to it one or two finely chopped cloves of garlic, the basil and the parsley. Combine beans and dressing and let the salad stand overnight in the refrigerator. Serve it with dishes of various cooked fish (tuna in vegetable or olive oil, bonedless and skinless sardines, good canned salmon or cold salmon, thinly sliced smoked eel) to be added to taste and let your guests make up their own combinations.

Marinated Vegetables

Canned tuna fish, sardines, salmon, smoked eel

This dish may be made with boiled pea beans, boiled cannellini or canned cannellini, drained and washed.

Make a French dressing with the oil, vinegar, salt, dry mustard and a little fresh-ground black pepper and add to it one or two finely chopped cloves of garlic, the basil and the parsley. Orange Coconut Tower Cake

Grated rind of 1 orange
1 cup fresh orange juice, strained
3 cups sifted cake flour
3 teaspoons double-acting baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
6 eggs
1 cup butter
2 cups sugar
Orange Filling
Orange Icing
Add the orange rind to the juice. Combine the flour, baking powder and salt; sift twice. Separate the eggs. Thoroughly cream the butter with the sugar. Beat the egg yolks in an electric mixer or by hand. Add to butter-sugar mixture. Add the flour mixture and the orange juice to the creamed butter, alternately. Beat the egg whites until stiff and fold into the cake batter with a wooden spoon. Divide the batter into five 8" x 8" tins, oiled and lined with waxed paper. Bake at 350° for 30 minutes. Cool on racks, remove waxed paper, put layers together with Orange Filling.

Orange Filling: Combine in the top of a double boiler 1/4 cup sugar, 3 tablespoons cornstarch, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1 cup strained orange juice, the grated rind of 1/2 orange and 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Cook over hot water until thick, about 10 minutes. Add a small amount of this hot mixture to 1 slightly beaten egg, then stir it into the balance of the hot mixture and cook 3 minutes longer. Remove from heat, stir in 1 tablespoon butter. Spread this filling between the cake layers. Frost with the following Orange Icing:

Cream 1/4 cup butter in a bowl placed in hot water. Work in 1 pound sifted confectioners' sugar alternately with 5 tablespoons strained orange juice, until the mixture is smooth and creamy. Stir in a 1/4-cup can of southern style coconut, chopped in 1/4" pieces. Spread this frosting generously on the top and sides of the cake.

CHILLED WHITE ALCOHOLS: FRAMBOISE, MANZANILLA, MONTILLA

CHILLED WHITE ALCOHOLS: FRAMBOISE, MANZANILLA, MONTILLA

COFFEE

No attempt is made in this dinner to cook outdoors. It is a meal for summer entertaining which can be prepared well in advance and served in the garden with a minimum of effort. The soup, tart, and most of the coq au vin can be prepared at your leisure. Add the brioche crust and cook the zucchini and new potatoes just before the guests are ready to sit down to dinner.

Potage Espagnole

- 8-10 ripe tomatoes, peeled, seeded and chopped
- 3 cucumbers, seeded and finely chopped
- 6 green onions, finely chopped
- 3 cups rich chicken broth, chilled
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1/2 teaspoons dry mustard
- 2 tablespoons fresh chopped basil (or 1/2 teaspoons dried)
- Garlic croutons
- Chopped parsley
- Chopped green pepper
- Finely chopped hard-cooked egg

Potage Espagnole is another version of gazpacho. Combine the chopped tomatoes, cucumbers, green onions and chilled chicken broth. Season with salt, mustard, fresh basil or dried basil. Chill for 10 to 12 hours in the refrigerator. Serve with small garlic-scented croutons which have been browned in olive oil, and with chopped parsley, chopped green pepper and finely chopped hard-cooked egg.

Coq au Vin en Brioche

- 2 3-pound chickens, cut in quarters, flourcd
- 2 medium onions, thinly sliced
- 8 tablespoons butter
- 4 tablespoons oil
- 2 teaspoons sugar
- 1/4 pound salt pork, cut in small dice
- 18 mushrooms
- 18 small white onions
- Salt, a few pepperorns
- 1 bay leaf
- 4 sprigs of thyme
- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
- Red wine (Burgundy or California Pinot Noir)
- Brioche dough

Brown the sliced onions in 6 tablespoons butter and 3 tablespoons oil over a medium flame in a large heavy skillet. Sprinkle lightly with sugar and toss so that the onions are more or less brown and caramelize (they must cook down quite well without burning). Push onions to one side of the skillet and brown the lightly floured pieces of chicken. As each piece is browned, transfer it to a large, flatflied casserole. Meanwhile, brown the salt pork and mushrooms in another pan and cook the small white onions in the remaining butter and oil in yet another pan until very brown. Add all the cooked ingredients to the casserole with the chicken pieces. Season to taste with salt and add the peppercorns, bay leaf, thyme and parsley. Rinse the skillet in which the chicken was browned with 1/2 cup red wine. Pour this liquid into the casserole and add enough additional wine to just cover the chicken and vegetables. Cover the casserole and bake at 350° for 20 minutes. Remove. Take off lid and cover the top with sufficient brioche dough, rolled out 1/4" thick, to fit the top and leave a little overhang. (It is a good idea to put a cup in the center of the casserole to hold up the dough.) Brush the crust with melted butter and bake at 400° until the crust is nice and browned and cooked through about 20 minutes.

Brioche Dough

- 1/2 cup milk
- 1/2 cup butter
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 cup warm (not hot) water
- 1 package or cake active dry or compressed yeast
- 1 egg yolk
- 3 whole eggs
- 3/4 cups sifted enriched flour

Scald the milk and cool to lukewarm. Thoroughly cream the butter and gradually add, creaming together, the sugar and salt. Measure the 1/4 cup warm water into a bowl (use lukewarm water for compressed yeast) and sprinkle or crumble in the yeast. Stir until dissolved. Stir in the lukewarm milk and the creamed mixture. Add the egg yolk and the eggs, beaten, the flour, and heat for 10 minutes. Cover. Let rise in a warm, draft-free place about 2 hours until more than doubled in bulk. Stir down and beat thoroughly. Cover tightly with waxed paper or aluminum foil and chill in the refrigerator overnight. Stir down and turn out the dough on a floured board. Roll out about 1/4" thick and brush with beaten egg white.

New Potatoes

Take about 4 pounds new potatoes. Remove a small hand from the center of each, leaving the rest of the skin intact. Cook in boiling salted water until just piercable and toss with 1/4 pound butter and 4 tablespoons finely chopped parsley.

Zucchini Florentine

Slices 8 small-sized zucchini very thin and roll in flour. Deep fry at 350° in oil or vegetable fat, putting in only small amounts at a time. Fry until lightly browned and crispy and drain on absorbent paper. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and serve.

Apple Tart

1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
1/4 pound softened sweet butter
1 hard-cooked egg yolk, steved
1 raw egg yolk
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons lemon rind, grated
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
6 peeled, cored green apples
1/2 cup water
1 cup sugar
Apple slices
Butter
1/2 pints apricot preserve
2 tablespoons cognac

Put the flour on a pastry board and make a well in the center. Put in this the softened butter, raw and sieved egg yolks, salt, 1 teaspoon lemon rind and 2 tablespoons granulated sugar. Work ingredients in the center with one hand until they form a paste. Then with the heel of your hand work in the rest of the flour gently until the board is clean. Wrap dough in waxed paper. Chill for 45 minutes before rolling out. Roll between sheets of waxed paper. Roll out dough and line a flan ring or pie tin with the pastry and chill or freeze until ready to use (freezing is excellent for keeping a fine crust crisp). Cook the 6 peeled green apples with the water and 1 cup sugar until they are very soft, then simmer until they make a thick purée. Pour apple purée into chilled pastry shell. On the top arrange slices of green apples in overlapping pattern and sprinkle lightly with sugar. Dot with butter and sprinkle with remaining lemon rind. Bake in a preheated 450° oven for 10 minutes, then reduce heat and cook until the apple slices are tender. Remove from the oven and cool slightly. Melt the apricot preserve and heat until it boils. Stir in the cognac and simmer for several minutes. Strain the mixture through a fine sieve. Spoon or brush this apricot glaze on the apple tart and cool. The tart may be served with whipped cream, if desired.
This is a completely home-prepared picnic, of garlic pounded in a mortar with 1 teaspoon inicumber fingers. Prepare your favorite mayonnaise recipe and blend 2 cups of it with 3 cloves of garlic, celery, onion and pickle. Add the pimiento and green pepper. Cook the salad oil, vinegar, sugar and lemon juice until it reaches the boiling point. Stir in the cornstarch mixture and chill for several hours before serving.

Corn Relish

- 2 cans whole kernel corn
- 1 finely chopped clove garlic
- ½ cup chopped celery
- ¼ cup chopped onion
- ¼ cup chopped pimiento
- ¼ cup chopped green pepper
- ½ cup salad oil
- ½ cup wine vinegar
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- Juice of 1 lemon
- 1 teaspoon cornstarch
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard
- Salt

Combine the corn, garlic, celery, onion and pickle. Add the pimiento and green pepper. Cook the salad oil, vinegar, sugar and lemon juice until it reaches the boiling point. Stir in the cornstarch, which has been mixed with a little bit of water and the dry mustard. Salt to taste. Combine with the corn mixture and chill for several hours before serving.

Potato and Olive Salad

- 2 pounds new potatoes
- Salt, pepper
- ½ cup dry white wine
- ½ cup olive oil
- ½ cup wine vinegar
- ½ cup finely chopped green onion
- ½ cup coarsely chopped ripe olives
- ½ cup chopped toasted almonds
- Ripe olives, chopped parsley, capers (garnish)

Boil new potatoes in their jackets until just pierceable. Cool with cold water and while the potatoes are still hot but cool enough to handle peel them and slice thinly. Put in a bowl, sprinkle lightly with salt and add the white wine. Let stand for 20 minutes and then add the oil and vinegar. Chill overnight. Before packing for the picnic, add the chopped onion, olives and almonds. Correct the seasoning and toss with additional oil and vinegar to taste. Garnish with ripe olives, chopped parsley and capers.

Stuffed Melon in Ice

Choose a large ripe Persian melon, Cassaba or Cranshaw. Remove a section from the top of the melon, remove the seeds and pour in ½ cup cognac or kirsch. Fill the melon with halved apricots, cherries, peaches, strawberries, any mixture of seasonal fruits. Sprinkle with sugar to taste and add additional cognac or kirsch to taste. Cover the melon with the removed piece and pack in ice until needed.

Crudités Provençale

For munchables, take foil-wrapped packages of crisp celery, tiny raw artichoke hearts, carrot strips, new cabbage wedges, green onions, radishes, strips of tiny turnips, cherry tomatoes and cucumber fingers. Prepare your favorite mayonnaise recipe and blend 2 cups of it with 3 cloves of garlic pounded in a mortar with 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper. Add 1 tablespoon cognac and 1 teaspoon tomato juice. Finally, fold in ½ cup chopped ripe olives.

Serve with imported Italian breadsticks—Grissini—which are available in most Italian bakeries and delicatessens and many specialty food stores.

Boned Capon Charcutière

Have the butcher bone a large capon; or, if you are able, do it yourself. Purchase 2 or 3, according to the size of the capon, of the large Italian sausages called cotechino, available in most Italian butchers and delicatessens. Drop them into boiling water and cook for 15 minutes. Cool lightly and remove the skin. Stuff them into the boned capon, filling in any ridges with ground veal and pork blended together. Sew up the capon and brush it well with butter. Either spit and roast it over charcoal or roast at 325° in the oven, allowing about 20 minutes per pound, boned weight. Baste frequently with butter.

Cover the melon with the removed piece and pack in ice until needed.

Fagioli a Caviale

This is a most unusual and interesting Italian appetizer. Soak the beans overnight. Drain. Add sage, leeks, salt, bay leaf and enough water to come 1½" to 2" above the beans. Let the water come to a boil and cook gently until the beans are tender but not mushy. Drain and store while very hot in a vacuum container. At the picnic, serve the hot beans with iced caviar (black is best but red can be used), oil, lemon juice and pepper. The hot beans and caviar are a fabulous combination and when served with a chilled white Italian wine such as Verdicchio, make a most exciting first course.

Tomatoes Provençale

- 1 large bunch parsley, chopped fine
- 3 cloves garlic, chopped
- Olive oil
- 2 tablespoons chopped fresh basil
- (or 1 teaspoon dried)
- 6-8 very ripe tomatoes
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- Ripe olives, sliced

Blend the chopped parsley, garlic and basil with enough olive oil to make a paste. Peel and remove the tops from the tomatoes. Turn them upside down and squeeze them gently so that the seeds will come out—but don’t force them. Season them and let them drain upside down for ½ hour. Stuff with the oil and herb mixture, topped with sliced ripe olives, and cover with the tomato tops. Wrap each one separately in foil or freezer wrap paper and chill until ready to pack the picnic basket.
English Lamb Chops
Have the butcher cut loin lamb chops through the saddle so that each person has a double chop about 1 inch thick. With a sharp knife, make a small pocket in each chop and stuff with 1 teaspoon butter blended with rosemary to taste—about 1 teaspoon dried rosemary to each 2 tablespoons butter. Tie the chops with a string or have the butcher tie them for you. Grill over medium coals, allowing 12 minutes for rare chops or 16 minutes for medium. One chop to a person should be ample unless appetites are Gargantuan. Serve plenty of home-made bread and sweet butter with the chops.

California Walnut Torte
2 cups brown sugar
1 cup butter
2 cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon each nutmeg and cloves
2 cups walnuts, finely chopped
1 1/2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
4 eggs, beaten slightly
Cream sugar and butter together. Sift together flour, baking powder, and spices and combine with butter-sugar mixture alternately with the cream and sugar. Add, potatoes, walnuts, chocolate, and eggs. Beat well and pour into two 9" buttered spring-form pans. Bake at 350° for about 40 minutes, or until done. When cool, top with Fudge Frosting.

Fudge Frosting
Combine and heat to boiling point 2 1/2 cups butter and 1 1/2 cup milk. Stir in one 6-ounce package semi-sweetened chocolate morsels. Cool slightly and beat in 2Vi morsels. Cool slightly and beat in 2 Vi cups confectioners' sugar. Beat until frosting is thick enough to spread. Spread on cooled cake.

OUTDOOR DINNER OR SUPPER
(for 6-8)

ESCABECHE OF SOLE
SPITTED SQUAW WITH HERBED BUTTER
SKEWERED VEGETABLES
PARSLEY CHEESE BREAD
FRESH PEACH ICE
COGNAC-ED PEACHES

Escabeche of Sole
2 pounds fish fillets or steaks
6 tablespoons lemon or lime juice
Flour
Butter
1 clove garlic
1/2 cup orange juice
1/2 cup olive oil
1/2 cup minced green onions
Dash of Tabasco or cayenne
Salt
Ripe olives
Quartered limes or lemons
Remove any skin and bone, if you are using fish steaks. Dip the fish in 3 tablespoons of lemon or lime juice, rub with flour and saute in butter until golden brown. Arrange symmetrically in a dish about 2" deep.

Make a sauce by crushing the garlic and adding the remaining lemon or lime juice, the orange juice, olive oil, minced onions, Tabasco or cayenne, and salt to taste. Pour over fish and let stand in the refrigerator 24 hours or more. Serve as a first course garnished with ripe olives and quartered limes or lemons.

You may add fresh coriander (sometimes called Chinese parsley) to the sauce. Also try ground cumin seed or toasted coriander seeds. You may also add a few chopped, peeled hot green chilis for a hotter sauce.

Skeawered Vegetables
Many combinations of vegetables may be skewered and cooked over coals. Here are a few good choices:
- Mushroom caps, bacon and small parboiled white onions.
- Thick slices of green tomato, onion and green pepper, brushed with garlic-flavored olive oil.
- Green tomato slices dipped in oil flavored with ground ginger.
- Zucchini chunks.
- Thick cucumber slices.
- Pepper strips.
- Mushrooms.
- Eggplant cubes marinated in lime juice, olive oil, chopped parsley, chives and oregano.
- Bacon-wrapped, cooked sweet potato chunks.

Partially cooked pearl onions brushed with parsely butter.

To cook, brush with oil or butter and grill over coals until done.

Parsley Cheese Bread
Split a French loaf lengthwise and butter both sides. Sprinkle with freshly-grated Parmesan cheese. Mix 1/2 cup chopped parsley with 1 teaspoon salt and enough olive oil to bind, spread it on the bread and sprinkle again with grated cheese. Put the two halves together and heat in a 375° oven or wrap in foil and heat on the grill, turning frequently.

Fresh Peach Ice With Cognac-Ed Peaches
5 pounds (approximately) ripe peaches
1/2 pints heavy sugar and water syrup
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1/2 cup cognac
6-8 ripe peaches, sliced and sugared

Mash the 5 pounds of ripe peaches and force them through a fine sieve or a food mill. You will need 4 cups of this puree. Combine it with the sugar and water syrup, lemon juice and cognac and freeze in an old-fashioned freezer or in your freezing unit. If you freeze the latter way, freeze the mixture to a mush, remove it and beat it up for 2 or 3 minutes and return to the freezer. Serve this ice with the sliced sugared peaches which have been flavored with additional cognac. If you prefer a richer dish, add whipped cream.

FRESH FRUITS CHEESE

This, to me, is an ideal summer entertaining idea for poolside or patio—casual and amusing and well worth the trouble of getting things together. Various types of imported and domestic ravioli (hors d'oeuvre serving dishes) may be bought. They are also available in sets. For charcuterie, I use a board and sometimes a tree effect with sausages hanging—ready to be sliced. Bowls of sauces and dips, rolls in a basket or breads on a board and a bowl of fresh sweet butter are necessary as well.

For accompaniment, have plenty of light white or rose wine in coolers and let guests take their choice of white Muscadet, Pinot Blanc or Traminier from California, a Tavel or a California Grenache Rosé. Beer is always popular—also Cokes for the younger group.

Have plenty of plates! A luncheon of this type is much better if you proceed from the fish through the vegetables to the charcuterie, separately.

Anchovies Nicoise
You will find large tins of anchovies in many of the food shops. Use six to eight of the small tins of fillets or one of the large ones.

Arrange a layer of anchovies in a ravier, or serving dish, cover with a layer of chopped shallots, a layer of chopped pimiento and another layer of anchovies. Top this with a layer of chopped ripe olives, a layer of shredded green pepper and a layer of thinly sliced onion. Top with another layer of anchovies and cover lavishly with chopped parsley. Pour over all 1/2 cup olive oil and 1/2 cup each white wine and wine vinegar and a sprinkling of oregano. Marinade for two hours.

Tuna with Onions
Use the imported tuna fish or a brand of domestic tuna which has firm, white flesh. Arrange contents of 2 or 3 cans in a ravier with the olive oil from the can or additional olive oil. Cover with finely chopped scallions, chopped parsley and extra oil if needed. Serve with lemon wedges.

Seviche
1 1/4 pounds thin fillets of lemon sole (or other delicate white fish) cut in julienne strips

Fresh lime juice
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon finely ground black pepper
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 teaspoon tarragon
3 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
1/2 cup finely cut, peeled, canned green chilis
1 teaspoon mustard seed
1/4 cup olive oil
Arrange strips of fish in a deep dish and cover with fresh lime juice. Let stand in the refrigerator for several hours. (This "cooks" the raw fish.) Remove. Drain fish. Add to the fish the salt, pepper, garlic, tarragon, parsley, chilis, mustard seed, oil and enough lime juice to make a perfect blend for your palate. Toss lightly and chill until ready to serve. To serve, arrange in a ravier and garnish with parsley.

Sardines

Arrange a platter of sardines—the boneless and skinless kind are best—in their tins surrounded by a garnish of eggs deviled according to your favorite recipe.

Carpe Alsacione

4-pound carp
1/2 cup chopped parsley
2 tablespoons chopped fresh chervil
(or 1 tablespoon dried)
1 tablespoon chopped garlic
1 teaspoon dried thyme
1 bay leaf
Salt, pepper
2 medium onions, chopped fine
3 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon flour
1 cup water
2 cups dry white Alsation wine
1 teaspoon tarragon
1 teaspoon basil
2 cloves
1/2 cup salt and sugar
1 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
Chopped parsley

Peel the onions (this is easier if you pour boiling water over them and let stand for a minute). Put onions in a large skillet with all other ingredients except the raisins, sugar and parsley. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer until onions are just tender. Add raisins and sugar. Cook for 3 or 4 minutes more. Chill thoroughly and sprinkle chopped parsley on top.

Cucumber Salad

3 medium-size cucumbers
1/2 cup water
3 tablespoons finely chopped onion
1 tablespoon white vinegar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1/2 teaspoon mustard seed
Chopped parsley

Have the fish store clean the carp and cut it into 1" slices. Arrange slices on a deep platter or shallow dish and cover the slices with a mixture of the parsley, chervil, garlic, thyme, crumbled bay leaf and salt and pepper to taste (about 1 teaspoon of each). Chill the fish in the refrigerator for several hours.

To cook, brown the chopped onions delicately in the oil and when they are just golden, add the flour and blend thoroughly. When the mixture is well and has cooked for 3-4 minutes, add the water and wine. When the liquid comes to a boil, reduce the heat, add the fish slices and let stand for several hours in the refrigerator. To serve, garnish with chopped dill.

Mushroom Salad

1/2 pound small mushrooms
1/2 cup olive oil
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
3 tablespoons finely chopped onion
1 teaspoon oregano
3/4 tablespoons wine vinegar
1/2 teaspoon ginger
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon

Remove stems from mushrooms and wash and drain the caps. Marinate caps in the oil, salt, pepper, onion, oregano and wine vinegar. Toss with the ginger and cinnamon and let stand for several hours. Serve in a ravier.

Cole Slaw

Cut the cabbage in thin shreds, sprinkle lavishly with salt and allow to stand, covered, in the refrigerator for several hours. Wash and drain. Make a dressing of 4 parts olive oil to 1 part wine vinegar, with curry seed, mustard seed, bay leaf, freshly ground pepper and shredded onion. Bring this to a boil, cool slightly, pour over the cabbage and chill thoroughly. When it is cold, correct the seasoning and chill again before serving.

Jambon Persillé

4-5 pounds well seasoned cooked ham
2 envelopes gelatin
3/4 cup water
3 cups consommé
1/2 cup white wine
1/2 cup tarragon vinegar
1 teaspoon tarragon
1/2 cup chopped parsley

Have crisp, dry shortbread or wholemeal biscuits for the ones who must have a nibbly sweet and perhaps a bottle of kirsch at hand for those who like it and a choice of other suitable cheeses with bread and butter trays nearby.

Cheese

Have cream cheese with fruit or quince paste for those who like it and a choice of other suitable cheeses with bread and butter trays nearby.

Desserts

Serve fresh, seasonal fruits with cream, sour and heavy, and perhaps a bottle of kirsch at hand for those who like to pour it on their fruit.

Have crisp, dry shortbread or wholemeal biscuits for the ones who must have a nibbly sweet at the end of the meal—and, naturally, coffee.

H&G’s GOURMET’S GUIDE to the finest in Foods, Beverages and Table Delicacies

QUICK GOURMET RECIPE OF THE MONTH
Charcoal Broiled Round Steak, Chateaubriand

- 3 lbs. round steak, 2” thick
- 4 oz. butter
- Seasoned meat tenderizer
- 3 T. lemon juice
- ½ cup beef broth
- ½ t. fresh ground pepper
- 1 cup dry white wine
- ½ cup minced parsley, chives

Sprinkle both sides of steak evenly with seasoned meat tenderizer, as you would salt (do not use additional salt). Pierce all surfaces at 1” intervals with a fork. Cover loosely and refrigerate overnight. Cook over charcoal with grill about 6” from fire; allow 10 to 12 minutes per side for rare, 12 to 15 for medium (tenderizer reduces cooking time by one-fourth). Combine other ingredients, except parsley and chives, in a skillet or saucepan and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer until butter is melted. Add herbs. Carve steak across the grain in thick diagonal slices. Serve with the sauce. Serves 6.

IT’LL TASTE BETTER WITH ESCOFFIER® SAUCE!

Unquestionably the world’s finest sauce—the most expensive—and worth it! Created by the world-renowned chef, A. Escoffier. Sharp and zesty Sauce Diablo—particularly fine with fish... excellent with meat. Smoothly balanced Sauce Robert—a must for steaks, chops, poultry. Rich and luscious Sauce Melba—delightful on ice cream.

programs — those for regular fabrics and fine fabrics — the dryer calls a halt at the right time (no guessing how long it will take for a load to be properly dried). The machine turns itself off, then rings a bell to react, like one of Pavlov’s dogs, to the sound of it, since I’ve learned that removing and smoothing and hanging most fabrics while they are still warm helps combat wrinkling.

As damp-dry, automatic wash-and-wear and other programs, there is a time-setting device that permits the same human judgment as the regular cycles of previous models.

Both machines do their share in turning out automatic-wash-and-use fabrics — and most of them are immediately usable by my standards. I just can’t get enough clothing and furnishings in this category at present. (Even our youngest boy has been overheard singing in the laundry room, “This is the way we wash and wear, wash and wear, wash and wear...”)

These new men’s shirts and pill-resistant Acrylic Orlon sweaters, both designed to be machine washed and dried, come out remarkably well. The Acrylic-filled comforter (14, page 85) seems as fluffy as ever after washing. The new easy-care sheets (15, page 85) are just that. I find they truly need no ironing. Neither does the fabric on those wire-framed cafe shutters (13, page 85).

To illustrate further the finesse of the new washer and fabrics, take drip-dry — something I had not been able to take at all in the past.

Previously it seemed to me that drip-dry led not to the easy carefree life but to harassment, handwashing and moisture, moisture everywhere. That frantic swoosh from basin to tub, making puddles all the way. Streams of water running down your arm while you applied that smoothing touch. Drip drip drip all night through for heavy items. Then, of all things, ironing was frequently required anyway.

Before the art of over-the-back-fence talk should fade away with the old clothesline, I decided to sample my neighbors’ opinions and confirmed that my attitude toward drip-dry was not unique. Housewives found it hard to hang up wet slip-covered furniture with a cotton or linen slip cover is washed and dry enough to fit in a slip cover made of fabric such as the brightly colored Groscheen (10, page 85), for example, only the skirt might need ironing. Tufted cotton bedspreads (5, page 84) go right back to bed to hang softly into proper folds at the corners. Home from the beach, towels (3, page 84) can be rinsed and dried with less end-of-the-day tax on mother.

After a spell in the dryer: old towels lose their harshness; good old corduroy can be worn with new zest. A bone of children’s play-clothes, becomes a miracle fabric; denims are smoother.

The “blanket program” treats its load gently. An automatic electric blanket gets a warm, fluffy, though a Acrilan (2, page 84) is even more simple to handle than an ordinary wool blanket. Wool blankets, during their turn in the dryer, may build up static electricity. That is the time when it is nice to have a man around the house who, being interested in automatic machinery (certainly not mere laundry), doesn’t mind a few cracks.

Some home furnishings of man-made fabrics still require hanging, when they are put in the dryer. Included among those I tried were a Fiberglas shower curtain (6, page 85), Dacron nimon curtains (19, page 86) and a tablecloth of Dacron and cotton lace (21, page 86). The shower curtain was easy and light to handle because Fiberglas does not absorb water. The openwork pattern of the tablecloth did not hold enough water to make dropping difficult but still it is a task best done outdoors. I was impressed by the fact there were no particular stain removal problems, even after the cloth had undergone the ravagings of three children eating strawberry shortcake. And ironing was not really necessary although a little gives a nicer touch.

I must confess I washed half of the dainty pair of curtains in the washing machine and it looked just as pretty as the other half which I washed by hand as directed. Whether its wear would be affected in time I cannot say. Either way the job is easy enough. I touched up both curtains very slightly with a cool iron on the premise that when you go to the trouble of taking down and putting up curtains you might as well make them look their very best.

Washing an Acrilan pillow (8, page 85), only an occasional chore, requires a deep tub, a slight sense of humor (the pillow has a tendency to float) and a nice day for drying outdoors.

With all the capabilities of the latest equipment and fabrics, more definitive sorting makes sense. And along with the increase in the separate loads, a water-saving feature becomes more important. With several different types of load and, in all probability, lighter ones, proportioning the amount of wash and rinse water to the size of each is most helpful. When hot water is not wasted, the children can have their baths, supper dishes can be washed, and a heavy load of clothing can be washed through the washer at day’s end — a time I find good for doing, say, three sets of muddy play clothes.

When you can wash a few things easily and often, the laundry seems to go by very full. One strange thing discovered in ours recently was Davy, head down, feet out. "So that's what the bottom of our hamper looks like!" he said as I was pulling him out.

Of course, if you prefer, you can save up the family wash to make a large load of each type, and do fewer loads in a week's time. But even if you were to empty all the drawers and the linen closet, you'd know everything could be washed, dried and ready for use again in a matter of hours.

In any case, with the new machines you need fewer duplicates, less storage space.

Unfortunately, in our house complicated machines have never seemed to work smoothly at the very start. It takes about a week for a machine to adjust to its environment, like a baby who thrives in the hospital but balks at the formula in his own home. If you anticipate this, it makes for less upset. And by the end of the first week you're apt to have learned such lyrical words as solenoids and fusitrons.

Two out of three service calls—and my ensuing embarrassment—could have been eliminated if the instruction booklet had advised 1) to be sure there are no kinks in the hose and 2) that no water is supposed to come into the machine during the third "soak rinse" of the blanket program.

Without any question, an instruction booklet is something to be scrutinized with the same dedicated attention you'd give a legal document. Since several different models of a machine are likely to be covered in the same booklet— in some cases on the same page—you can't give it a quick look and be at all sure you're reading the right paragraph for the right machine. And you have to use your own common sense (not yet outmoded) to bridge the gaps between what the equipment manufacturer tells you and what you need to know.

For instance, the dryer booklet stipulated that the blanket cycle was specifically designed for wool and Ordon blankets. There were special instructions for handling Dyenel, too, but no word of Acrilan. On the other hand the washing instructions on the Acrilan comforter prescribed low heat for drying. Well—there was no clue in the dryer booklet as to whether the blanket program was set for low heat or high, so I took no chances. I passed up the blanket program and settled on the "low heat" program.

But I simply had to guess how long it would take and set the timer accordingly since this is one of the semi-automatic programs that does not time itself. For all I knew, the tumbling action of the blanket program might have been somewhat different from that of the low-heat, but I could find no clue to that either. I suppose you can't ask for everything.

Since so much depends on matching the right washing program with the right fabric, it would be nice if we could have complete information from the fabric manufacturers, too. Happily the trend seems to be heading that way.

A boy's jacket we bought recently had enough informative tags dangling from button and zipper to resemble a mobile. And for further enlightenment a permanent label with full washing instructions was stitched inside.

Too often, though, the tags on fabric items merely say "wash and wear" or "easy care" or "little or no ironing"—any one of which could mean almost anything. (What comes in between the washing and the wearing? Drip-dry? Machine dry? At what heat?) But given the right fabric information, the newest machines and complete instructions, it's perfectly true that you can get spectacular washing results and also a really good measure of that leisure time we've been promised for so long.

A separate one room house for guests gives them complete privacy

Built at the water's edge, the house has cypress board walls finished with bleaching oil. There's a deck around two sides and wide glass doors slide open to it. View is northeast over Sagaponack pond.

Single room serves well as a bedroom, sitting room, dressing area. Kitchenette is behind a sliding door. Location of bathroom creates an alcove for storage and dressing. Wall heater in bathroom can warm the whole house on cool days.

Kitchenette gives guests a place to get their own breakfast, have midnight snacks. White porcelain unit includes sink, 4 electric burners, oven, broiler, refrigerator. There is an electric fan in the ceiling, and shelves stocked with food flank sink. Ceiling high sliding door at left also hides water heater.

Twin beds of white iron with cane headboards have yellow covers, pillows in pink, yellow, orange. Walls and ceiling are pale gray, rug is straw tatami. White plastic-top breakfast table is also a desk.
Behind the sapling fence the two houses are well secluded.

A double gate, of smooth cypress panels, opens to the fir-floored loggia. The front fence, of split cedar saplings, also encloses one bay of the loggia and shields courtyard when gate is open. Sliding glass entrance door is at the far end of the loggia.

The bedroom is also a sitting room.

Master bedroom has wood burning, heat circulating fireplace. Wide windows slide open. There are draft-free, air distributing units in wall below. Orange rug, olive chair contrast with gray walls. Dressing area includes a sofa bed where Mr. Knox can nap, as well as a capacious closet and drawers. This space can be completely closed off from the bedroom by ceiling high sliding door, right.

H&G’s GARDENER’S

PUT GARDEN TRAFFIC ON A FIRM FOOTING

For paths paved with anything more durable than good intentions, a proper foundation is worth whatever trouble it takes to build it. There are enough things to fuss over in a garden without wasting time keeping walks and steps traffic-worthy. The point is to build all walkways right in the first place, with surfaces that are at peace with their environment and suitable for the use they will get. Turf, of course, needs only soil prepared for grass roots. Everything else—from the simplest flagstone path to solid masonry stairs—requires a real foundation (see diagrams) to give trouble-free, long-term service.

LEDGE STONE STEPS (this includes any big stones or cast concrete slabs) should be built on a bed of sand, gravel or stone rubble and sand to provide underdrainage and minimize shifting of the great weight of the steps that would follow prolonged rains or winter frosts. Start sand with bottom step; fill as you go.

BRICKS OR DRESSED STONE set in mortar will, of course, require a substantial concrete foundation for satisfactory results. Even if you do not object to the cracks that will surely follow settlement of any but concrete base, water freezing beneath the steps in winter can wreck the structure. Pour base in wood forms.

ALL-AMERICA ACCOLADE FOR 1960 ROSES

Few contests, of any sort, are judged more rigorously under more exacting conditions than are the new roses that each year receive the award of the All-America Rose Selections committee. In more than a score of gardens, in all parts of the country, and during two full growing seasons the candidates are subjected to daily scrutiny by professional plantsmen and rose hybridizers. At the right 1960’s winners: Sarabande is a scarlet floribunda, semi-single. Garden Party is a cream and pink hybrid tea, a cross between Peace and Charlotte Armstrong, all-time greats in gardens and as parents. Fire King is a vermillion floribunda.
For July: a balanced ration of the basics (fundamentals to keep in mind when building walks and paths) and the beautiful (prize winning roses to embellish your garden next year)

FLAGS AND WOOD ROUNDS may be set in turf where winters are frost free and sub-soil is firm. Where winters are severe, provide a sand cushion and “crown” your paving as suggested in the drawing. Wood rounds (even redwood, which is relatively rot resistant) will last longer, split less if laid in sand. Flagstones will settle less, require only infrequent resetting even in cold-winter areas, if there is a sand bed beneath.

OPEN-JOINT BRICKS, in your choice of an almost infinite variety of patterns, should always be set on a carefully spread and well firmed base of dry sand. If turf is to be allowed (or encouraged) to grow in the joints, loam may be worked in between the bricks after laying on sand bed. Otherwise more sand is swept over final crowned surface until cracks have been filled (hosing down will help). Set brick curbs as shown.

SOLID MASONRY WALKS should have a solid concrete base poured on a bed of sand or gravel (the sub-base is optional in frost-free areas, the better part of wisdom everywhere) — only to protect a comparatively substantial investment in paving materials. Brick or stone edging should be set in an extension of the main bed, troweled in such a way that turf will grow close if desired. Lay stone according to same rules.

NOTES FOR THE

July marks the point of no return in the garden season;

now all you have to do is maintain the pace until autumn

First weekend

The gourmet's garden. "Knee high by the 4th of July" may be a good rule for corn, but it is a poor one for asparagus—H&G's current nominee for Gourmet Crop No. 1. This week should see the last cutting made for the table and, at the same time, the final removal of all the spindly or maverick spears that you passed by in the course of the harvest season (to leave these to "furn out" during the summer would tend to reduce the number of buds that will be formed for next year).

Once this is accomplished, weed the crowns and apply fertilizer between and alongside the rows where the feeding roots spread. Scuffle the fertilizer into the top inch of ground, giving the coup de grace to last weed sprouts in the process; then let all ensuing growth run to the characteristic feathery summer tops. A couple of passerby more with the scuffle hoe should take care of weed growth until the asparagus tops are big enough to assume the responsibility. . . . Fourth of July is also likely to mark the high point of the fresh green pea season (if asparagus is not the number one home crop, then the green pea surely is). Around Boston, you planted your peas before the end of March in order to be sure of a crop before summer heat blasted the vines. (Elsewhere, the local oracles were consulted for the ritual of pea culture.) Once the flavor is but a memory, you have a lot of fresh space in which to raise summer rows of beets, fingerling carrots, snap beans and Chinese cabbage.

Table varieties: Since superior flavor is your only reward for growing your own rather than buying frozen produce at the supermarket, review the varieties you select not in the light of novelty but of proven worth. For vegetables still plantable, Tendergreen or Stringless Greenpod snap beans are hard to beat for a summer crop. Winterkeeper (New Century) is a homely but wondrous beet grown for a short season and eaten from thinnings to fall bikini size, green tops and all. Nantes still produces finest young carrots (drenched with the "high-priced spread," melted). To forego all vegetables but the ubiquitous tomato in your garden is to turn your back on excellence.

Second weekend

Houseplantsmanship. For whatever reasons, most houseplants seem to benefit from a summer spent outdoors—not in the supermarket, review the varieties you select not in the light of novelty but of proven worth. For vegetables still plantable, Tendergreen or Stringless Greenpod snap beans are hard to beat for a summer crop. Winterkeeper (New Century) is a homely but wondrous beet grown for a short season and eaten from thinnings to fall bikini size, green tops and all. Nantes still produces finest young carrots (drenched with the "high-priced spread," melted). To forego all vegetables but the ubiquitous tomato in your garden is to turn your back on excellence.

Hot weather hints. Key to success as the garden slides down the sunny slope of summer may be the ability of the gardener to keep the slide from being too brisk. Two techniques are especially important: ability to move many as begonias, Ivy polargonisums, hanging lantana, fuchsias and the like, which are at decorative best in summer. As for the general run of vacationing house plants, build a simple corral of eight-inch boards and set the pots closely, to conserve moisture, on a two-inch bed of cinders or gravel. The gravel is important not so much to provide drainage (which it does) or to discourage insects (which it may also do) but to perform the twofold function of inhibiting the growth of roots out through the bottom of the pots and, even more vital, preventing tree roots from robbing the pots of their moisture during dry times.

Too often pot plants plunged in the ground beneath shade trees have been suddenly and fatally dehydrated by thirsting tree roots in late summer droughts.

Slug fest: If you have pets, you may be reluctant to sprinkle slug bait (metaphosphate formulations) in accessible locations. Our corral scheme, with close-set pots, makes it possible to place the bait where slugs will find it easily—but pets only with difficulty if at all.

Water reminder: Dew seldom materializes beneath shade trees, and rain often has trouble getting through. So be just as zealous to check the moisture of your sum­mering pots as you would if they were in a winter window.

kinds of plants during hot, dry times; ability to apply the right amount of water in the right way at the right time. First, as to hot weather transplanting: the secret is pre-soaking the whole root mass of the plant to be moved and pre-soaking the ground below and around the hole to which the root mass is to be moved. (The "pre" in these instances means 24 hours ahead of transplanting.) In this way transplanted roots will receive minimum shock due to water loss, both before and after being moved. Consequently loss of moisture at top of plant will also be less; wilting and possible death of tissues will be reduced. Almost as important as pre-watering: timing the move. Late afternoon or early evening are the best transplanting times; morning to noon the worst. During the day, plants absorb heat, which tends to increase the risk of wilting; after dark, plants, like everything else that has been in the sun all day, radiate heat into the night sky. This tends to retain and restore turgidity—to reduce or counteract wilting.

Usable water: The degree to which supplementary watering in summer is worthwhile depends upon whether the water applied to a plant can be used by it either to prevent wilting or to promote growth. Sometimes (a common if startling phenomenon when first observed) a vigorously growing plant will wilt more noticeably during a hot day than a weak plant. The reason, of course, is that the foliage is losing water faster than the roots can take it from the soil. To add water around the roots may simply compound the difficulty, driving air out and almost literally drowning the plant. Remedy, where even temporary wilting may result in loss of buds or new shoots: spraying or "soaking" the foliage from which internal moisture is being lost. Setting the hose, equipped with a mist nozzle, among such foliage (plantings of broadleaf evergreens making their next year's flower shoots, for example) is often salvation therapy.

Fourth weekend

Speaking of hedges. Whether you groom your hedges to assume formal patterns or simply cherish them as useful barriers against something (observation by neighbors, invasion by pets or children), they will usually require at least some extra care to retain hedge status. Since a hedge is, by definition, made up of living plants, it grows both above ground and below and makes disproportionate demands on your soil. The denser and more restrained the hedge is above ground, the more rampantly its roots may forage below. (As with icebergs, it's not always what shows on the surface that matters.) Where ornamental plants and flower beds grow close to hedge plants, hedge roots are almost invariably a problem. Contributory solution: set an artificial barrier between hedge and neighboring plants. Extra deep (six or eight inches) metal edging, which may be readily bought in rolls or strips, run in slit trenches cut with an old axe or heavy spade, will discourage surface feeding roots acceptably—and at a cost of from six to ten cents a running foot. More careful spacing of plants will help (when small sizes are started, initial planting is almost always too close, resulting in excessive root competition later). Eighteen inches at least should separate any hedge plants, however small. If quick effects require closer setting, it will pay to thin the plants later. . . . Most evergreen plants, being slower growing than deciduous species, have more restrained roots, may pay for the extra cost in reduced maintenance, let alone decreased inroads on plant neighbors. . . . Informal hedges, while they take more space, require less upkeep. . . . Staggered hedges (basically double rows with plants set zigzag) may need almost double the width of planting space but will require less than the total number of plants that single-file hedges need to give comparable protection.

RETURN OF THE ARMOIRE

Here is an armoire you can assemble yourself

SPORTS AND HOBBY WARDROBE is one of many different storage arrangements you can construct with a new series of interchangeable components designed by Børge Mogensen and Gerthe Meyer. Parts include drawers, bins, shelves, dividers, oak frames, teak doors, painted hardboard backs and sides. You can make built-in closets or free-standing armoires like this one, which is 81" high with top section, 75" wide, 24" deep.

NARROWER SECTION, 40" wide, could be added to cabinet above or used alone. Attach a hinged door and add eight shelves, closely spaced, and a top bin with lift-up face to make a linen closet.

PLUG-IN MOLDINGS support adjustable hardboard shelves and drawers. Moldings have metal pegs which you insert without tools into regularly spaced holes in cabinet walls.

FLIP-TOP DRAWER for cosmetics is one of several special-purpose components you can include in an assembly of your own design. Lid has mirror on underside, turns pulled-out drawer into vanity table.

It's NEW...it's the American-Standard bathroom that's so beautiful, so colorful, so easy to clean

Center of attraction in this beautiful bathroom is the new bathtub with the exciting contour shape that makes bathing more relaxing, more pleasant than ever. The bathing area is luxuriously wide where width is needed for maximum bathing comfort. As practical as it is beautiful, this striking contour design brings the back of the tub close for easy-reach cleaning...and to form handy, wide ledges. These serve as a comfortable seat when bathing a child or as roomy shelves for toiletries.

See how easy it is to clean around and under this new off-the-floor, wall-hung toilet. The seat and cover snap off for thorough, easy cleaning.

Equally eye-catching and convenient is the new American-Standard cabinet lavatory with stunning, one-piece china top and loads of storage space. Another fixture that is both beautiful and practical is the new off-the-floor toilet. All of these handsome fixtures come in white and the six most popular colors.

$4.98 a week plus installation puts these three new fixtures in your bathroom. See your American-Standard retailer listed in the Yellow Pages under "plumbing" or "plumbing fixtures."
