How much is a child’s comfort worth?

On hot, humid nights, cool comfort for a child is almost priceless. And for her family, too.

Yet surprisingly enough, only $900 will add Carrier central cooling to the adequate forced air heating system of an average three-bedroom home.

Does $900 sound low? It is. Carrier residential air conditioning is one of the few quality products that have come down in price in recent years. Today summer comfort is within reach of millions of home-owners.

But comfort is only part of the story. Everyone eats better. There are fewer allergy reactions. Rooms stay cleaner. Entertaining is easier. And you’ll get more for your house if someday you decide to sell.

Carrier central air conditioning systems are in more homes today than any other make. Your nearby Carrier dealer can give you the exact cost. He’s listed in the Yellow Pages of your telephone directory. Carrier Air Conditioning Company, Syracuse, New York.

The pleasures of porch living—an inviting blend of outdoor casualness and indoor comfort—are proclaimed by an enchanting Coq D'Or on the lathed roofed extension of the Stephen Trilling's house in Bel Air, Calif. The comfortable weather-resistant furniture that doubles the enjoyment of morning juice or after-dinner espresso may be whisked easily out of the way when a party convenes for dancing on the waxed terrazzo floor. The lath roof breaks up the rays of the noontday sun, casts pretty patterns of shade and pampers the tropical plants. Interior designer: Alice Henderson. An architect specifies
GAS AIR CONDITIONING
...for his own home!

HIS CHOICE:
AN ARKLA-SERVEI SUN VALLEY ALL-YEAR UNIT

As an architect, Mr. Mantel is aware of housing authorities' prediction that homes without central air conditioning will soon be obsolete. He decided to install Gas air conditioning, however, for other, immediate reasons.

Gas is dependable, economical, easy to use. The Mantels have had no bothersome hot-weather breakdowns. They haven't been bothered with repair bills because there are no moving parts in the cooling cycle. The cost to install was low, operation is economical and an Arkla Gas unit never needs recharging with refrigerant.

"We like the continually comfortable temperature in our home," the architect says. "In summer, Gas cools with filtered, de-humidified air. In winter, constantly-circulating warm air keeps rooms healthfully fresh."

Why not enjoy the advantages of year-round Gas air conditioning in your home? For more information call your Gas company, an Arkla-Servel dealer or write Arkla Air Conditioning Corp., 812 Main Street, Little Rock, Arkansas. There's an Arkla-Servel Sun Valley* All-Year® Gas air conditioner to fit every home. AMERICAN GAS ASSOCIATION

Here are four new products to consider when building, remodeling or repairing your house

Central lighting directory designed for low-voltage wiring systems controls light and appliance outlets located all over the house. Pilot lights illuminate names of rooms or areas where lights are on. A locator light with dimmer control permits reading the directory at night when the room is dark. General Electric Co., 95 Hathaway Street, Providence 7, R. I.

Roll-up door of aluminum can be used as a weather-tight protection for an outdoor cooking center. Floor-to-ceiling tracks on both sides prevent the door from swinging back and forth as it is rolled up. When pushed all the way to the top, the door is almost invisible. The aluminum is finished with baked-on porcelain in any of thirteen colors. Alumaroll Inc., 63 Meadow Rd., Rutherford, N. J.

Aluminum fire escape folds out into a full-sized ladder which will safely carry weights up to 2,000 pounds. When not in use, the fire escape folds neatly against side of house, resembles a drainpipe. It is manufactured in sizes to fit two- and three-story houses and, for security, cannot be opened up at ground level. By Win-Chek Industries, Moonachie, N. J.

Moisture-resistant paneling ½” thick by 16” wide by 8’ long is available in three cherry wood grains. An aluminized material on the back of the panel and a clear plastic coating over the front afford double protection against moisture and humidity. The panels can be installed over existing walls by spot cementing; a ¾” thick variety can be applied over open studs. By Barclay Mfg. Co., 385 Gerard Ave., New York 51, N. Y.

The Self-Cleaning Home!

Honeywell's new Electronic Air Cleaner removes airborne dust, dirt and pollen automatically

Enjoy a new way of life in a home that helps keep itself clean. Endless dusting is cut to a fraction. Your walls and ceilings will stay so clean you can go for years without redecorating. Your drapes, carpeting and furnishings will rarely need cleaning. Even your crystal and mirrors will retain their sparkle. This is how Honeywell's new Electronic Air Cleaner saves you time and money—removes work and worry from housekeeping.

Enjoy a home that stays cleaner, longer. Even with your doors and windows closed, millions of microscopic particles circulate indoors. The new Honeywell Electronic Air Cleaner traps from 70 to over 90% of all this airborne dust before it has a chance to settle. And these are the particles that produce the oily film that stains and soils your walls and furnishings. These are the particles that simple fiber filters (5 to 8% efficient) can't touch.

Removes airborne irritants too! As much as 95% of all dust, pollen and other airborne contaminants that aggravate allergies is taken out of circulation in the home. This centralized Electronic Air Cleaner also removes a high percentage of bacteria from the air indoors.

Low cost, easily installed. Whole-house Electronic Air Cleaning costs you no more than a good refrigerator. The Air Cleaner itself installs simply into the ductwork of any forced air heating or cooling system in new or existing homes. And a handsome Living Area Control Center will be your performance and control panel.

For a free booklet on the many money and labor-saving advantages of Electronic Air Cleaning, call your quality heating-cooling dealer. Or write Honeywell, Minneapolis 8, Minnesota.

ENGLISH CAMBER TABLE

I've owned this solid mahogany table for sixteen years. It came from The Chippendale Melody Farms, Lake Forest, Ill., estate of the late J. Ogden Armour. Could it have been designed by that great cabinetmaker, Thomas Chippendale? E.B.R.—Indianapolis, Ind.

It is not as ornate as the few pieces of known Chippendale workmanship, nor is it the design like any table illustrated in his book, The Gentleman & Cabinet-Maker's Director. Your gaming table dates about 1750-1770 and was probably the work of some other London craftsman of Chippendale's day.

Can you tell me when and how this little stove was used? On the front are the words, "Comet National, Excelsior Stove Mfg. Co., Quincy, Ill." J.M.P.—Dayton, Ohio.

From about 1875, American stove works made these single-oven cook stoves. The Excelsior Stove Company was incorporated in 1893 but may have been a going concern before that date. It closed in 1954.

The sketched mark is on the bottom of a plain white dish and pitcher. When and where were these made? B.G.L.—Los Angeles, Calif.

Your ironstone pieces were made by J. & G. Meakin, Hanley, Staffordshire, after 1891—the year English firms were required to add “England” to their marks.

What was this silver boat-shaped bowl used for? It is marked “Middletown Plate Co. Triple Plate.” R.L.K.—Sacramento, Calif.

Bowls like this were used as dining table centerpieces, usually to hold fruit. The manufacturer was in business at Middletown, Conn., between 1864 and 1899.

She got life with hard water

And what a life! Every year, hundreds of pounds of dissolved rock enter the average hard water home, creating curd and scum, clogging pipes and drains. Fortunately, there's a way out. A Culligan water softener takes the rock out of hard water, the hard labor out of housework. For unlimited soft water automatically, call your Culligan man. You'll be free.

Can you estimate the age and origin of my desk? It is covered with multi-colored marquetry motifs. I.G.S.—Greenwich, Conn.

This fall-front secretary is of Holland or French provenance. It was made in the early part of the nineteenth century.

What information can you give me about this pure white cameo? C.C.M.—Canajoharie, N.Y.

From the classic design and fineness of workmanship, it was probably cut in Italy. The style of the gold mounting dates the cameo between 1845 and 1860.

Can you tell me the make and year of this vase? The mark is C F in large capitals and the number 408. A.D.B.—Joliet, Ill.

The vase is Bohemian, made between 1846 and 1857 at the Christian Fischer porcelain factory in Pirkenhammer. The “408” refers to the factory design number.

My father purchased this desk secondhand in San Francisco before 1900. It is put together with square, handmade nails and has Australian lace wood inlays. What is its age and type? I.W.H.—Seattle, Wash.

You have a Victorian copy of a Davonport desk, a type that originated in England during the Regency period. The Victorian copies were in turn made in American factories between 1865-1875.

I am curious about the origin of my blue lustre glass candlesticks. Can you give me any information? J.S.G.—Houston, Texas

Your lustre candlesticks with pendent prisms are European glass of the Victorian period, dating around 1870-1890.

This rocker was left in our present home and friends think it is very old. What is your opinion of its age? W.W.—Evanston, Ill.

Rockers like yours were made by the Shakers, a religious sect, between 1880 and 1890. Shaker furniture is admired today as a model of simplicity in design.

What’s in store for your home: new products, ideas and trends

- The ubiquitous family station wagon has sparked a revival of touring, even camping, vacations. If you are going to see America first this summer, take along: a vinyl-covered foam pad that fills the entire back of a wagon (a welcome cushion for children’s naps); a copy of Family Camping Directory (Barcum Publishing Co.) which lists 5,000 camps; a 45 r.p.m. auto hi-fi with built-in shock absorbers; a liquid calorie compound for energy between stops.

- When you pick a picnic table, look for the virtues found in this one. It is long enough (72") to seat the whole family, light enough (36 pounds) to be moved anywhere, durable enough (with redwood plank top and aluminum legs) for outdoor abuse. Legs fold for compact storage. All-Lammar Products, 39th and Reed Sts., Philadelphia, Pa.

Remove the lid of the new Star Fire portable typewriter and you’ve removed the entire case. Why? Because the bottom of the typewriter also doubles as the bottom of the carrying case. This 12½ pound model comes in six vivid colors. Remington Rand Portable Typewriter Division, Sperry Rand Corp., 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N. Y.

- A new safety cap for bottles containing harmful drugs or pills promises to reduce accidental poisoning, particularly among children. Over 96 per cent of children tested were unable to remove the cap. The trick is simple to press down firmly as you unscrew cap. Brockway Glass Co., Brockway, Pa.

- Portability marches on. This compact air filtration unit, called Guardaire, plugs in anywhere, draws air through three separate filters then forces it back into the room—free of dust, odors, smoke. Waring Products Corp., 25 W. 43rd St., New York, N. Y.

A real toting grill is calculated to encourage spur-of-the-moment picnics. Three-Way Grill has a stainless steel griddle top which can be raised to form a windbreaker hood, a chrome-plated grid (13¼” x 13”). Johnson-Stuart Co., 6124 Milwaukee Ave., Chicago 46, Ill.

For further information about any product, write to the manufacturer.
The unusual elegance of a Tessera Vinyl Corlon floor makes it a handsome companion to really interesting furnishings. Boiled lobster, cooked in its native waters and eaten in the rough (let the shells fall where they may) is still the peerless way to savor the king of the rocks if you are the honest-to-goodness, down-east purist that Don and I are. Recently we invited a few sympathetic lobster fans to share our enthusiasm and I proudly produced the stainless steel spoon-picks by Genex that I found too late to use last summer. The picks make it possible to ferret out with relative daintiness every succulent bit of lobster meat. For lobster-philes like us who have to get at every morsel, they're superb.

We've finally collected enough of those little aluminum plates that frozen pie comes in to carry out an idea we've had on our minds since last summer. At our next party we're going to mount a votive candle on each plate and float them in the pool. Had a trial run last week and the lights looked very pretty flickering on the water—like a fireflies' fiesta. An occasional citronella candle will also help keep the air clear of midsummer menaces.

Latest instant trick I've picked up is to use Holland House Cocktail Mixes to make lightning marinades. For instance: scampi (prawn-size shrimp) marinated split-side down in Martini Mix with the addition of a little oregano and garlic, then broiled. Very fine. Chicken steeped in Whiskey Sour Mix, oil and garlic, broiled and basted to a golden glaze. More than succulent, I've even taken to spiking pasta sauce with the Old Fashioned Mix.

Too often an anniversary party suffers from the side effects of mutton masquerading as lamb—a little too much coy remembrance of things past. Not so the Powells' twentieth. It was a miniature wedding reception in retrospect, in the classical tradition. The party took place on a Saturday afternoon and a really good dance trio was stationed in the Powells' large living room which had been all but emptied of furniture. Everyone's "song" was played upon request, creat-ing a pleasantly nostalgic ambience for lots of good dancing between conversational side trips to the library and hall bars.

In the dining room was the buffet table, resplendent with lace and silver and crowned by a glorious wedding cake decorated with pastel sugar flowers in deference to the passing of time (instead of being a replica of the original white cake). I loved the classic menu for a change—tiny puffis filled with hot curried crab meat, rolled asparagus, watercress and cucumber sandwiches, caviar-filled figs and of course the ubiquitous main course of excellent caterer's creamed chicken plus salad. Naturally there were fancy ice molds. It was such a reminiscent feast, reminding me of my own and everyone else's coming out parties, weddings and christenings—a timeless treat.

Champagne flowed. We danced and danced and at just the right moment to bring us back to the present, the younger Powells called for attention and toasts to their parents. The Powells of both generations formed a receiving line in front of the flower-screened fireplace so that we could all wish them our best as we left.

To keep rolls, garlic bread or toast delectably hot, use this rice bun warmer. A 6" square white tile slips out from bottom, to be heated 10 minutes in oven. Replaced in the handsome solid cherry or walnut tray, it will keep bread piping. Tray is 10" by 8" by 3½". $7.50 plus 80c post.

Memory jog
To help keep the garden and the ground surrounding the house in perfect order, use the Gardener's Monthly Guide and Log. It contains a calendar, pages of hints and instructions and a section for recording notes and ideas. Spiral-bound, it has an attractive cover.

$2.25 postpaid.

The executive desk
Give him a name plate made of burnished brass mounted on a solid walnut base. Any name and title up to twenty characters can be engraved on each line. Letters are filled with black, making them easy to read. Name plate is 8½" by 2". $8.95 ppd. From Spear Engineering.

Footed for flattery
For the ultimate in comfort and good looks, wear sports shoes made of the softest deer-skin leather. Slim Italian toe gives a narrow sleekness to the foot, elastic over the vamp gives a snug fit. Available in go-with-everything chamois beige, in sizes 4 to 9, slim or medium. $7.50 ppd. Old Mexico Shop, HG6, Santa Fe, N. M.
One of the greatest comforts a lady finds in Cadillac ownership is her awareness of the car’s unique dependability. The car has been designed and engineered with unusual soundness—and more than fourteen hundred separate inspections accompany its manufacture and assembly. If you have not experienced the satisfaction that comes with driving a 1961 Cadillac—we suggest you let your Cadillac dealer arrange a demonstration soon.
My trousseau began with Wamsutta, too!

"I can remember the day I opened my hope chest...the wonderful fragrance of lavender...the silky caress of the luxurious Wamsutta sheets...how snowy-white they were except for the lavish pink monograms mother and I had embroidered so lovingly." The tradition of giving a Wamsutta trousseau hasn't changed from generation to generation nor has the unequalled quality that has distinguished Wamsutta linens for over a century. Today, SUPERCALE® sheets are gay, charming, fashionably colorful like the "Bouquet" pattern shown here, Wamsutta's newest! This magnificent hand-screened SUPERCALE sheet is priced from $7.95; matching bath towel $2.98. SUPERCALE "Blossom Tone" pastels are coordinated with "Bouquet". Look for them at the finest stores everywhere.

Sew a fine seam

Even the woman who is all thumbs can work the charming Time Sampler. When finished it makes a nice accent on any wall. Kit contains instructions for making cross-stitch, a stamped white linen panel 11" by 14", embroidery floss and a wooden frame. $2.95 postpaid. From Victoria Gifts, Department H66, Wynnewood, Pa.

Ice deposit?

If it is time to defrost refrigerator or freezer, ease the job with "Mr. D'Frost." It is the formula—which is odorless, non-toxic—which will not stain metal or enamel surfaces. Spray it on frost and ice and in very short order the freezer is free of deposits. $1.98 for 15 ounces. Ppd. Spencer Gifts, HG6, Spencer Blvd., Atlantic City, N. J.

Smart set

For the college student; roly poly glasses marked with the seal of any college or university. For the host: the same glasses come marked with name or monogram in red, black or green. $0.95 for eight, cocktail, highball or beer glasses with seal; $7.98 for eight with name or monogram. Ppd. MeFerry, Box 711, Levittown, N. J.

At your service

Use this free-form triangle of gleaming silver plate to hold candy, nuts or tiny tea cakes, 8½" across, it is fitted with ball feet. Special finish resists tarnish so that tray never needs to be polished. It would make an impressive ash tray for an executive. $3.95 postpaid. Mercury, HG6, 1265 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

Hostess aid

Make things comfortable for your guests, when serving informal refreshments, with this handy nest of tables made of knotty pine. Finished in a mellow tone of brown, the three sturdy little stands telescope neatly together. Largest is 24" by 11" by 23". $55 the set. Express collect, Leannox Shop, HG6, Hewlett, N. Y.

Brighten the corner

Identify your house with a name and address sign in color. Post-a-Wall marker is aluminum-finished in green, red or antique copper. 19" by 20", it can be marked in reflecting white letters or numbers (up to 17 on large plate, 6 on small one). $5.45 ppd. Spear, 102-W Spear Building, Colorado Springs, Colo.
The prettiest rooms start with Heritage furniture at prices you can well afford

Superb styling gives Heritage furniture the costly appearance of custom decorating. Consider the beautiful pieces shown here from new Heritage collections. These designs are timeless, immune to the caprices of fashion. Yet the advanced techniques and cost-saving skills of Heritage craftsmen keep prices at a minimum for such lifetime quality and construction. Cheaper furniture is available—and expendable. Moreover, it lacks the taste, detailing and refinements that distinguish Heritage from all others. To sacrifice quality in favor of inferior furniture is extravagant. For your best measure of sound value, properly priced, rely on the Heritage name.

Furniture from new Heritage collections. The sofa elegantly outlined in Trapazio; pair of quilted chairs. Mail fifty cents for booklet—living, dining, bedroom collections—to Heritage Furniture Co., Dept. HG-6, High Point, N.C.

U.S. NAUGAHYDE® FINEST IN VINYL UPHOLSTERY

Do you long for light, bright, beautiful colors in your home—but worry about the wear and tear a busy family would give them? This dramatic living area is as completely practical and carefree as it is luxurious and beautiful. All the furniture is upholstered with durable Naugahyde or Naugaweave®—seven different patterns and colors in all. And for a life full of comfort, the furniture is cushioned with Koylon foam. These superior upholstery fabrics are paced for today's living... a whisk or a wipe and they're fresh and clean as new. And the range of patterns, colors and textures is almost endless. You'll find furniture upholstered with Naugahyde and cushioned with Koylon at fine stores everywhere... or through your decorator.

The Lightness of Creslan... the fiber with the six senses of fashion.
Lightness is one of the six senses of fashion. It is airiness, grace, serenity... an effortless ease. In its gentle manner, it makes everyday living a lighthearted pleasure.
Now, Creslan acrylic fiber is breezing a buoyant sense of lightness through our fashions and home furnishings. Creslan makes fabrics cloud-light, soft, and comfortable... giving warmth in winter, icy coolness that keeps crisp in summer. Look for them. You'll love all six senses: lightness, color, vitality, taste, touch, and beauty. American Cyanamid Co., N.Y.

Virginia Remembers 1861

Virginia is intricately bound to our national history having within its borders the birthplace of our first President, five national parks commemorating battles of the Civil War and at Arlington a resting place for many of our statesmen and soldiers from every war. This year Virginia opened a state-wide Civil War Centennial on April 23, the day in 1861 when Robert E. Lee accepted command of the armies of Virginia. For the many Americans who are Civil War buffs, this is an ideal time to visit the actual battlefields they have studied. A live history lesson can be learned from the re-enactment of the first Battle of Bull Run at Manassas National Battlefield Park on July 21 to 23. Richmond, the capital of the Confederacy, will open a Centennial Center about the middle of July. The Center will present exhibits and a unique film program to interest visitors in seeing the Civil War battlefields and shrines. As the Centennial will continue until 1961, those who cannot keep their rendezvous with history this year can come later. For further information, write to Virginia Civil War Commission, 914 Capitol Street, Richmond, 19.

SEVEN VERSATILE SALAD BOWLS

For crisply pretty buffets, indoors or out

Sleek metal coupe, enamel-coated in frosty white and bright yellow, would be a distinguished modern dressing for big cole-slaw—served at kitchen dining table or out at the patio snack bar. “Nordika” bowl (from Norway) could fill in as a wine or soda cooler. 11" in diameter, 5" tall. $10. Bloomingdale's.

Deep wood bowl for serving salad to a huge crowd has a handsome carved look, though it is really a slim lightweight made of laminated wood strips. A plastic finish over the red, gold or black color also renders this “Moku-Moku” bowl washable, gives it added strength. 18" in diameter, 10" tall. $25. Aruma.

Oval, footed bowl reminiscent of elegant Colonial pieces is a stainless steel modern import from Sweden. As a salad server or decorative accessory, it would suit a contemporary mood dining room as well as one of Early American persuasion. 12" long, 3½" wide, 4" tall. $16.55. From Seabon.

JUNE, 1961

55
ITALIAN CHESTNUT TRAY

Italian chestnut tray, with antiqued brass handles to accent its dark rugged character, is a striking fruit container—when not delighting the eye as a salad holder. Wax-finished, the tray should be damp cloth cleaned only, re-waxed occasionally. 19½” long, 9½” wide, 2½” tall. $45. Piazza Montici.

LITTLE POTTERY BUCKET

Little pottery bucket is of four-servings size (handy for small do’s); in glazed dark brick red (artful next to greenery of salad or an outdoor scene). From France, bucket would be at home in provincial settings especially, in others, too. Picault design is 8¾” diameter, 3½” tall. $7.50. Bloomingdale’s.

OCTAGONALLY SHAPED BOWL

Octagonally shaped bowl of white-glazed ceramic decorated with hand-painted pink and green motifs was inspired by the charming porcelain chinoiserie of the eighteenth century. Bowl would be as good for serving hot potato salad as for cold greens. 11” long, 7½” wide, 3½” tall. $27.50. Bonwit Teller.

CLEAR CRYSTAL

Clear crystal offers a sparkling solution to summer’s oft heard how-can-I-serve-a-salad-differently question. The bowl’s clean-cut contemporary shape would enhance any table (and after dinner, an open shelf); the crystal mixes adroitly with wood, china or steel implements. 9¾” diam., 5” tall. $7.50. Seabon.

XPEIAZETAI

The walls of Demetrios’ house in the slums of Athens are cracked. Icy winds blow right on his face while he sleeps. His blanket is threadbare. He eats one mea a day—bread dipped in oil.

Demetrios’ mother has tuberculosis and is hospitalized. His father, a rag man, earns $13 a month.

Demetrios does not pray for a blanket or more food. He prays to grow up quickly so that he can help his parents.

HOW TO JUDGE A RESTAURANT WINE LIST

Not too long ago, well-run households contained an ample wine cellar stocked with a variety of fine wines. Few of us in the mid-twentieth century, however, can know such luxury. Houses are too small to provide the storage; taxes and cost-of-living essentials are too high to allow the expense. Of course we keep a few bottles of wine on hand, but we have nothing to match the great variety in grandfather's dark, cool cellar.

For us, a good restaurant wine list—one that gives us the chance to pick and choose from a variety of the world's wines—is an outstanding joy. We may indulge in a rare "great" from France or Germany, or taste a little known "great" from France or Germany, or taste a little known vintage to look for on a good wine list. There are literally hundreds of such wines to look for.

In major restaurants, the well selected wine list includes the following types:

- Bordeaux reds
- Burgundy reds
- German wines
- Alsatan (perhaps)
- Champagne (French)
- Champagne (domestic)

A more extensive list would add:

- Rhone reds
- Rhone whites
- California reds
- California whites
- Loire Valley whites
- Italian reds
- Italian whites

Looking for regional wines

You can also find interesting wine lists in small restaurants serving regional foods—Italian, Swiss, Spanish. These, of course, feature the wines of the region. And in the West, many leading restaurants have excellent lists of California's premium wines that give the wine lover a chance to grow more thoroughly acquainted with our own national product. Though such a variety offers the wine lover a magnificent choice, a small wine list is not necessarily an indication of poor quality. There is a growing number of restaurants with good, if limited, wine lists showing taste and judgment. Often such lists are found in owner-operated restaurants and carry the special favorites of the proprietor. I know of a restaurant in New York City's Greenwich Village with a list of only ten wines—five imported and five from California. Two of the reds are among the pleasantest wines I have ever drunk.

And in the West, many leading restaurants have excellent lists of California's premium wines that give the wine lover a chance to grow more thoroughly acquainted with our own national product.

One in the space of an article could tell you what specific wines to look for on a good wine list. There are literally hundreds of wines from Bordeaux alone, and whole books have been written explaining French or German wines. It is also difficult to identify good or outstanding vintages, since vintage quality varies from region to region and sometimes from vineyard to vineyard.

What, then, are the guides to selecting a wine from a restaurant wine list? Price, of course, is an indication of quality. The "greats" of France and Germany are always much more expensive than a simple regional wine. Wines of exceptional vintage are costlier than those of less good years. But this does not mean that an inexpensive wine may not be a good buy and a pleasant experience. Many interesting wines sell at a modest price primarily because they are not widely known.

HOW TO TAKE IT EASY
WITH ELEGANCE

Summertime is the proverbial time to shed the formalities of full-dress living. But no longer is it necessary to shed the comforts and grace as well. In this summer of 1961, you can take it easy in the full shirt-and-shorts sense of the term without having to forego the smoothness and the beauty that are the prime ingredients of elegance.

Seventeen months ago—January, 1960 to be exact—H&G recommended the delights of taking it easy in a rocking chair as demonstrated (you may remember) by the enraptured young woman below. We are happy to observe that the President of the United States and several hundred thousands of its citizens are now following her example. This month we are recommending a number of other places to take it easy: on the porch—the back porch will do (see page 60 and ff); in a one-room house by the sea or in the woods (page 80); under a sunshade (page 91); or in the room where you are sitting now, were its windows divested of winter hangings and newly shaded (see page 101). And we aim to prove that wherever you decide to spend this summer, you can take things easier than you ever have before without having to rough it to be free from cares.
It is high time to reclaim

The Pleasures of Porch Living

Whether your porch is open or enclosed, or make-believe, its airy shelter can be the delight of your summer.

Since the backyard barbecue and the terrace at the rear of the house have come to be synonymous with outdoor living, they have tended to push into the background that peculiarly American institution: the porch. Yet many people remember, with novelist James Agee, the serenity of “that time of evening when . . . the locusts were started, and the fireflies were out, and a few frogs were flopping in the dewy grass . . . when people sit on their porches, rocking gently and talking gently and watching the street . . .”

In those days, of course, a porch was more likely than not to be on the front of the house. Today a porch may be anywhere, and architects are including porches in the design of contemporary houses even if the plans also call for an open terrace. Meanwhile, many an old house still boasts a sun porch or veranda that can be redeemed from its useless role as a mere stretch of floor to be crossed en route to a door. If your porch is at the front of the house, you can give it with blinds, shades or living greenery. If you have no porch at all, you can create a reasonable facsimile in the form of a canvas pavilion or leafy-roofed arbor. For any porch—whether open or enclosed—offers advantages which complement, rather than compete with, the uses of a totally exposed modern terrace.

A porch, for instance, may be screened to keep out flying intruders, and if it is screened, it may also be lighted with impunity after dark. A porch may be shaded from the sun—variously, from hour to hour. A porch, in fact, gives you an extra room for leisurely living and entertaining during the months when your house is apt to be most thickly populated with guests, relatives and children out of school—a room you can furnish and decorate as comfortably and attractively as if it were indoors. For the pleasures of porch living are essentially the pleasures of indoor living outdoors.
A NEWLY ENCLOSED PORCH, once wide open to the elements, is walled on three sides with panels containing glass above and screens below that allow garden scents to drift in yet keep out summer squalls. Original slate floor was sanded smooth, finished with wax. White-painted frames blend together old and new, rattan and wrought-iron furniture. Slatted blinds, sprayed white, unfurl to cut down heat from afternoon sun. Designed by David Barrett.

Indoor decorating can transform a porch into an extra room

A GENEROUS OPEN PORCH at the back of Mrs. William G. Grainger’s house in Far Hills, N. J. is turned into a summer living-dining room with a canopy of weather-resistant duck that gives a semi-enclosed feeling without impeding the flow of air. At one end of the porch a rug of rush squares defines a conversation area furnished with a sofa and chairs of old-fashioned wicker sprayed dark blue, upholstered with a contemporary flower-splashed print. Same print upholsters contemporary high-backed wrought-iron chairs at dining end where floor is left bare. Modern hunt table works equally well for big party buffets or small seated luncheons. Unexpected delight for outdoors: paintings on glass hanging on wall of house. Designed by John Fitzgibbon of Yale R. Burge.
You can create a porch if you have none

TALL SCREENED PANELS
fitted into the wood framework that extends the lines of a contemporary house suggest a simple way of turning an open deck into a porch. At each end, one of the panels slides open for easy access to the surrounding grounds. Since the screened enclosure is only partially roofed, all of the furniture is weather-resistant. Architect: Richard Dorman.

CRISP CANVAS CURTAINS
of bright yellow trimmed with red line both sides of an airy porchlike pavilion built out from designer Arthur Elrod’s house in Palm Springs, Calif. The pavilion is simply constructed of slender columns, an egg-crate ceiling and a grille wall. When the sun is at its hottest, the curtains can be drawn just enough to supply shade.

A FESTOON OF VINES—grape and honeysuckle—climbing over an old arbor make a natural porch for Mr. and Mrs. John H. Heminway’s house in Watch Hill, R. I. The furniture of this elegant outdoor dining room is of necessity weatherproof. But the table sparkles with the same fine china, crystal and silver that is used indoors.
To make your porch inviting from dawn to dusk, H & G has herd a gay multitude of furniture and accessories. Some provide comforts, others a eyeful of color or whimsey. All are easily toed to and from the porch. For left: 1. Bamboo Japanese wind bells painted red, orange and green to lull drowses with soft musical tapping. 2. Osize hurricane lamp that can be electrified or fitted with a plump candle, to cast a glow over the evening hours. 3. Shiny yellow basket for tall branches. From below right:

4. Giant sunburst of red and yellow Venetian glass mosaic—a vivid accent for a white-walled sun porch. 5. Balloon shaped hurricane lamp that might light the way up porch steps for an evening party. 6. Below: 23 Folding tables (set of four), lacquered in black, to distribute for buffet meals. 24 To enliven a corner: enormous artificial sunflower in an urn-shaped straw basket. 25 Oval tray of plastic-coated abaca with six matching tumblers lined in assorted, gay colors. 26 Yellow and white ceramic stool that might double as a prettily practical chairside table for a porch smoker or reader. 27 Clay planter set on a glazed, drip-catchng base.

It takes more imagination than money to Make a small porch bloom

Making the most of your space is as bright an economy as making the most of your dollars. But this second shining example in H&G’s BRIGHT-ON-A-BUDGET series does not stop with the space-stretching thrift of turning a tiny porch into a second living room. It also testifies to the dollars-and-cents value of color—strong color that holds up in the sun while it shines, simulates the sun while it hides—and of imagination that makes a little look like a lot.

The window shades, unexpectedly, are the key to the combination of H&G colors. The strong Tangerine of one pair (you could buy four white shades and paint two), endorsed by the frames of two chairs and the upholstery of the cushioned chair and ottoman, is softened as it should be by the Marigold of the ceiling, the vinyl floor tile and the rug (in which Marigold is spiced with Absinthe Green).

The window shades are also the key to the disposition of pattern, used sparingly and subtly here because the room is so small. The same pert little bunch of berries appears in three guises; in the wallpaper stripe pasted across the shades and around the window frames (for more about decorating plain cloth shades, see page 146); in the fabric that covers the chair cushions; in said fabric’s border that covers the sofa pillows.

Finally, the window shades are the key to no small savings of both dollars and breezes that accrue from omitting yards of fabric at the windows.

The astute design and canny arrangement of the furniture is what makes the most of the space. Placing the small-scaled cushioned chair and its ottoman along one window wall and the multi-purpose coffee table along the other leaves the center of the porch free for traffic. The broad flat arms of both chair and ottoman conserve space that might have been allocated to chairside tables. And the spindled chairs and hour-glass table pull a double play: their see-through quality creates the illusion of free space, while placing them around the periphery of the arrangement saves space in fact. The happy job of transporting the pleasures of indoor living to the porch is completed by the terra-cotta table lamp—the important small investment, in this instance, that makes all the budget maneuvering pay bright dividends.

Gather inspiration from a flower show for your own Summer centerpieces

When H&G visited London's famous Chelsea Show last year—the spring flower show of the Royal Horticultural Society—we carried home a crop of ideas for summer decorations that you can easily put together with your own house plants or the harvest of your own garden. You can pick up more such ideas yourself when you visit flower shows this summer, if you keep in mind the exciting potentials in the exhibits for enlivening your rooms and table settings. Admittedly, the most ambitious bouquet could scarcely match the faux brilliance of the herbaceous borders produced by professional seedsmen, but many of the designs and devices used in their displays take easily to domestication. For instance: the spectacular 6-foot pillar of African violets, left. Reduced to 2-foot manageability, the same scheme of laddered wire loops, angled to show off the plants but not the pots, makes a window garden, opposite page. Starting here are six pages of arrangements adapted at random from the Chelsea Show displays—along with pointers on making them yourself.

1. PARSLEY DOME studded with waxy white cauliflower in a crown-shaped black wire basket. Cover Oasis foundation with short sprigs, top with tight bunches.
2. WREATH OF LETTUCE heads like great green roses planted in an ice-filled crystal rivière. Open tight heads gently in warm water, then chill.
3. TRI-COLOR TOWER of white and blue African violets and pink begonias in a vertical garden. For waterfall of green, hang ivy in laddered loops.
4. PINK AND GREEN PANACHES of rhubarb or rhubarb chard, sheared and bound in velvet. Make bundles thick enough for stability, cut ends even, chill thoroughly.

Shopping information, page 131
1 SCRUBBED AND SHINING NOSEGAYS parade a variety of vegetable colors across a luncheon table. Pack miniature metal urns with Oasis to hold toothpick-spiked mushrooms, cherry tomatoes, endive. Radishes and tiny carrots need no support if their stems are tied together in tight bunches.

2 A PRECISE PYRAMID of low-born turnips turns up on a formal table in a Wedgwood bowl that blends with their coloring. To make a foundation, cut Oasis in graduated blocks and pile in center of bowl, allowing space at rim for first row. Fasten blocks together and secure turnips with toothpicks. An ice-water bath will brighten the look of turnips and all root vegetables.

3 MOCK PINEAPPLE made of celery and Bibb lettuce dresses a dinner table with a leafy Impersonation of the symbol of hospitality. Best foundation for this tour de force: an inexpensive spike candleholder of brass or iron. Trim bunch of celery and tie in two or three places with string or covered wire. Impale on candlespike. Tack heads of Bibb lettuce to celery with toothpicks to form body of pineapple.

4 GREEN PAGODAS of peas and beans on woven wicker cones garnish a luncheon table. Choose pods of similar length, string on heavy thread with large needle. Tie peas in separate parallel tiers: Spiral one continuous string of beans from top to bottom, tying at each end.

When you are looking about for the makings of summery centerpieces, don’t overlook the beauty of color, texture and form offered by fresh-from-the-garden vegetables. Prize-specimen arrangements such as those at Chelsea, left, are not hard to copy, but they should also inspire you to exercise your own talents. We got the idea for the mock pineapple, opposite page, from a simple juxtaposition of shapes we noticed quite by accident. Such brainstormst are easier to recall if you make a quick sketch or snapshot.

And when the time comes to recreate them, you’ll find they need neither great skill nor complicated equipment. Wicker cones are to be found in most basket shops. Oasis, the underpinning for many arrangements, can be bought from any florist. These spongy green blocks, soaked until they no longer float, will absorb enough water to keep flowers and greens for several days. And Oasis is so easily cut that it makes an ideal foundation even when its water-absorbing properties are not needed. For pointers on growing decorative vegetables, see page 142.
Familiar plants and greens, freshly arrayed, can be dramatic decoration

A BOUQUET OF BROMELIADS, right, unexpectedly revealed at Chelsea the affinity for formal arrangement in these ornamental relatives of the pineapple. Their baroque rosettes might garnish with equal style a terrace in summer or a sunny hall, below, in winter. Smaller varieties in suitably smaller containers can come to the table. Rooted in not-too-wet sand, bromeliads will take to this decorative treatment indefinitely if their centers are kept filled with water.

SCREEN OF SANSEVIERIA at Chelsea, left, made a stylish background for a delicate-leaved sedum with a long name (Sedum sieboldii var. foliis medio-variegatis). At home you can give these and other common house plants more exciting roles to play in decoration by planting them in strictly circumscribed clumps like those in the window garden, below, that set off their colors and textures, dramatize their forms. Sedums demand some sun to thrive; sansevieria adjusts to any light.
INSTANT TOPIARY is a synthetic art in which the making of table-sized copies, above, of a patiently trained ornamental specimen from Chelsea, far right, can be measured in minutes instead of in years. Run a dowel through three thoroughly water-soaked blocks of Oasis and pare them into an even cone. Spiral the cone with a 2-inch strip of chicken wire attached to itself at base and to dowel at top. Cut away Oasis between bands of wire. Cover form with short sprigs of box (or you could use yew or huckleberry), trim evenly. Mock topiary will keep a month or so if sprayed daily with water, may be garlanded with flowers for variety. On the table: Ottavia embroidered linen cloth, Vernoware “True Blue” plates, Imperial milk glass, Christofle “Marly” silver plate.
Oliver Smith’s extravagant stage sets that brought the land of Camelot so vividly to life on the Broadway stage last winter are packed with summer motifs for anyone who has the eye as well as the ear to enjoy the show. Freely and frankly cribbed from the Camelot settings are the party decorations in this four-page sketchbook, designed for H&G by John Welsh. You can make these fantasies yourself out of commonplace materials from dime stores and hardware stores. Even if your stage is a postage stamp backyard or porch, you can devise one touch of medieval make-believe—a canopy of colored sheeting, a table centerpiece modeled after the mythical village, or King Arthur-sized goblets fashioned of paper cups. In a larger area—a terrace or garden—you might double or triple the effect with canopied tables like those above. To round out the occasion (or reinforce the point), play music from the show, outdoors—either recordings of the original cast or orchestrations. Children, too, will be enchanted with the Camelot theme. Give them lances to tilt with and shields to decorate themselves and leave the rest to their fertile imaginations.
Goblets worthy of mead (a less-cloying, latter-day equivalent: cider, spiked with light, dry rum) can be made from paper cups. Use twin Lily-Tulip cups and invert one to form the base. Join the cups with masking tape. To gild the goblets, use one of the aerosol sprays that come in gold or silver or any number of conspicuous colors. Insert plain drinking cup in top. If you are serving a choice of beverages, you might distinguish them by the colors of the goblets—a boon to the bartender.

Enchanted table under the spell of Morgan Le Fey requires an umbrella table, a sheaf of colorful, silky, dime-store scarves, a skirt of sheeting, a tunic of felt. To avoid marring the umbrella with pins, attach scarves with tape from corners so that they flutter in the breeze. Wind the pole and top it off with crepe-paper streamers. Colored bed sheet folded lengthwise makes the skirt. Baste it to a felt top; cut hole for pole; have waterproofed by dry cleaner.

Camelot Castle centerpiece is walled with shirt cardboards cut to represent battlements, hinged together with transparent tape and color-sprayed. Well in advance of the party, start saving bottles so you will have a varied array for towers. Top with paper pennants on toothpicks inserted in corks. For sparkle and color, string Christmas tree lights behind the walls.
Tasseled magic for tablecloths and canopies is easy to master: Use shirt cardboard as a spindle and wind white butcher’s cord around it lengthwise about thirty times. Slip off the cord, grasp it in the middle and tie with string. About an inch below knot, encircle the whole once more with string; clip loops. Dunk tassels in water and toss into a laundry dryer to fluff up. You may dye tassels, but plain white will stand out against colored cloth. Felt is good for making shaped table covers or canopies since it can be cut in any direction, need not be hemmed.

Festive columns are trees girded with wire hoops, garnished with pennants, ribbons or flower sprays. To cushion tree trunks from wire, use small squares of Styrofoam and into these insert plant stakes or balloon sticks topped with cardboard pennants—or twigs sprayed and decorated with real or make-believe flowers. Or ring the trees with ribbon streamers. If your party site is not naturally endowed, you might let clothes poles masquerade as trees.

Canopied buffet is based on a glass-topped garden table disguised with a shaped tunic. Framework for the canopy can be made of two-by-two’s with pliable laths to form bows. Frame may be sunk into ground or bound to the table legs for support. Shape false top for the table from plywood with a keyhole saw. The artful disguise: colored sheets (that retire to the bedroom afterward) accented by felt. Shield overhead depicts food to be served, or may be inscribed with menu.
Bar of justice—where well-deserved refreshments are dispensed—takes shape from an ordinary picnic table or from a pair of sawhorses spanned by planks. The frame for the backdrop is made of two-by-twos with crosspieces at top and bottom and canopy supports nailed on at an angle. For the backdrop, use a colored sheet and a shield hung on wires to designate the bar. Canopy might be colored paper. Table cover can be protected by a sheet of clear vinyl available in 69-inch width in dime stores. Alternate canopy for the bar is a simple shaped awning.

Chain-mail lights to hang from the branches of trees at twilight parties start with automobile chains reclaimed and sprayed with color. From each tree suspend votive candles by winding thin wire around the cups and making loops to thread through the chain. If the candles are hard to come by, old-fashioned glasses half-filled with melted paraffin and candle stubs would make excellent stand-ins.

Make-believe lances, not as lethal as they look, are merely the garden variety of dahlia props inserted through kitchen funnels, sprayed over-all with color. Select tapered sticks to fit the funnels. For peace of mind when young children are tilting, you can secure child’s boxing gloves to lance tips to soften blows.

Coat-of-arms shields can be made ahead of time, or as a game, improvised at the party. Cut the shields out of grocery cartons, using a razor blade, and spray-paint. Silhouettes of the family, a pet animal or hobby may be pasted on or painted with Magic-Markers. Rope or folded handkerchief can serve as a handle.
HOW TO BE CAREFREE WITHOUT ROUGHING IT

Starting here:
two year-round vacation houses in two different settings which demonstrate that well-planned comfort indoors is one of the secrets of carefree living outdoors.

Architect Arvin Shaw’s beach house perches atop a dune at Sagaponack, Long Island, overlooking the Atlantic Ocean. Mr. Shaw calls his house a cabana, for it consists of only one large room plus a sheltered terrace. Yet, simple as it is, the house is superbly designed to meet the threefold challenge of seaside living: how to enjoy the maximum view plus privacy plus solid protection against the elements. To begin with, the house has not one but two views. The terrace looks out to the ocean, while a fence beside it screens out a neighboring house. The glass-walled living room, opposite page, is angled to face the grassy dunes which themselves provide privacy. Overhead garage doors protect the big window wall, serving as sunshades during the summer, swinging down over the glass to seal the house tightly in winter. The front of the house facing the road is a windowless stretch of white clapboard that completes Mr. Shaw’s privacy and also forms a bulwark against Long Island’s frequent winter storms. But what makes the cabana such a delight the year round is the array of creature comforts within: a powerful fireplace for chilly weather, simple but well-chosen furniture, and, not least, a kitchen that is as trim as a ship’s galley and far more elegant.

In the woods:
A forty-five-minute drive from the heart of New York City brings you to Upper Nyack, N. Y., where woods and rolling hills climb high above the broad blue Hudson River. There Gustav Wally, a Swedish businessman who spends part of the year in New York, decided to build his weekend retreat. In this thickly wooded setting, privacy was no problem, for there were no near neighbors, and the surrounding hills are reserved as natural parklands. The challenge in this case was to preserve the natural beauty of the site, and to take full advantage of it. Landscape designer James Rose coaxed the wild woods into a comfortable setting for the house and for people. Yet he was so careful to preserve the trees that he even left a graceful elm to emerge from the middle of the sundeck. Behind the house, he built a round swimming pool which fits into the landscape so easily that deer often mistake it for a water hole. To disturb the ground as little as possible, architect Henry Hebbeln raised the house on low piles. Burnished woods and rugged stonework link it with the outdoors, and one whole wall of sliding glass panels, opposite page, unites the indoor and outdoor living areas. At one end, the glass wall opens to a broad deck overlooking the river; the other end looks out on a sunny lawn. From the other side of the house there is a spectacular view of High Tor. The one-room interior, like that of architect Shaw’s house, is dominated by a huge fireplace. But Mr. Wally’s furnishings were purposely chosen to create a rich contrast with the greenery outside—a contrast that makes the outdoors all the more pleasurable.

By the sea:

BRIGHT REDS AND LOTS OF WHITE

The one big room of the Shaw house has two straight walls that form a right angle plus a long curved wall that continues beyond the room proper into a stem-like gallery (see plan, page 87).

- The long, sleek soapstone fireplace, left, assures comfort and cheer indoors no matter how the surf may roar outside, while the painting on the chimney breast makes it plain that this is no mere shelter for campers-out. Yet the canvas chairs and wicker tables are simple to keep shipshape.

- In the stem-like gallery at the right of the fireplace, left, is the galley, a long teak cabinet with complete cooking facilities. Opposite the fireplace a linoleum-topped table for dining or games is teamed with upholstered chairs that make room as inviting in late fall as in summer.

- The wall behind the galley curves around to meet the window wall, opposite page. Twin plastic-covered sofa beds placed end-to-end make this area a wonderful place for enjoying the view by day and for sleeping by night.

In the woods:

STAINED-GLASS COLORS, NATURAL MATERIALS

The one-room interior of the Wally house is approximately square with a big alcove (see page 87).

- The long south wall, left, is made up of floor-to-ceiling sliding windows. On this side of the room is the main living area and beyond that, the sleeping alcove with a multi-cushioned sofa bed placed against the wall of richly grained mahogany plywood. Simple straw mats cover the floor of the alcove which may be closed off by a sliding door.

- Diagonally across from the sleeping alcove is the dining area, below left, where you can look across the treetops to High Tor. A pair of antique chairs softens the angularity of the dining table and corner window seat.

- The big fieldstone fireplace, opposite page, dominates the dining end of the room. Built into a nook beside the chimney is a sofa that doubles as a guest bed and above it, two swing-down bunks.
By the sea: INDOOR AND OUTDOOR LIVING AREAS ARE SUBTLY SEPARATED

Even though the Shaw cabana is essentially a one-room house, the outlook never becomes monotonous because the outdoor terrace and the indoor room are angled in different directions and separated by the chimney wall. As you walk through the front door into the gallery, the terrace with its sweeping view of the ocean is outside the window wall at your right while the big room ahead of you curves around to face the grassy dunes. Its oak floor, bleached and serrated to a weathered finish, is sealed with a penetrating lacquer and never needs waxing—a notable contribution to trouble-free living. (This photograph, taken later than the one on the previous page, includes the graceful teak shelf that hangs from the curved wall.) The galley on your left is equally convenient for serving either indoors or outdoors. After dark, the terrace makes a spectacular setting for dinner—waves breaking on the shore below are illuminated by a floodlight on the roof.

The terrace is a year-round sun trap sheltered by a partial roof overhead, by an extension of the house wall on the left and by the fireplace wall of the big room on the right. The deck at the left of the terrace, screened by a fence, leads to an outside door into the shower adjoining the bath-dressing room—so bathers never track sand through the house. On beach side, the exterior of the house is of weathered cypress boarding.

In the woods: VARIED INDOOR AREAS ARE CLOSELY RELATED TO OUTDOORS

The one room of the Wally house varies so much from one area to another that it seems like several different rooms, all but one of which is oriented to the outdoors. From the conversation center that faces the window wall you take in the whole panorama of the Hudson to the south (see page 83). From the bunks beside the chimney you look straight into the trees. But on the other side of the chimney is a snug sheltered corner with rugged stone walls and a sunken stone hearth. The wall behind the upholstered seat projects just enough to suggest a division between the inward-looking hearthside and the outward-looking dining corner with its broad windows to the north. This area is separated from the kitchen only by an island bar-counter handsomely sheathed on the front and ends with abstract compositions in ceramic tile. On the right are sliding mahogany doors (to closets) that make inside wall of sleeping alcove.

The broad open deck at the southwest corner of the house seems to be merely an outdoor extension of the fireplace end of the big room. And the easy flow of space between the two is emphasized by the broad intervening ledge (which surrounds the house) of the same walnut-stained burnished fir as the floor indoors. Emerging from the deck and shading it: the tree that landscape architect Rose couldn't bear to cut down. Continued
Solid white clapboard walls and a gangway-like ramp make the Shaw house look from the road like a land-bound yacht. But this is what gives the house its privacy as well as protection from winter storms. It was raised on piles in order to assure a clear view over the dunes to the ocean. So the living area remains high and dry when storm tides wash below. Under house is a carport and heater room. Since Mr. Shaw weekends here all year, he leaves forced-air heating system operating even while he is away so that house will always be warm.

In a grassy clearing at the end of a winding path through the trees the Wally house rises as a romantic climax to the brief journey from the detached carport. Broad steps, matching the width of the great rugged chimney, make a fitting transition between outdoors and the pleasures of shelter. On the left is the dining deck, screened by trees, and on the right, the living deck. The chimney is in the tradition of the old Dutch farmhouses of the region and the fireplace is a wonderful comfort during rainy spells in the summer and fall. But during the cold months the house is well heated by a forced warm air system.
Directly opposite the front door at the top of the ramp is the door to the terrace on the other side of the entrance gallery. At the right is a three-part bath and dressing area. From the 8-foot-wide gallery, the living area with its long curved wall opens out with an exciting sweep toward the dunes beyond its windows.

The front door leads into the dining area but every other area of the house also has direct access to outdoors. Food to be served on deck adjoining dining area is brought out through door near the kitchen—next to which is a bathroom for guests. From the other bathroom off the bedroom alcove there are sliding glass doors convenient to the pool at the back of the house. The alcove itself, as well as the main living area, opens directly to outdoors through the sliding panels of the window wall. In addition to the one-room house there is also on the property a separate building containing guest room, bath, sauna (Finnish steam bath) "carport."

ALL THE FACILITIES FOR YEAR-ROUND COMFORT

The long teak galley in Mr. Shaw's cabana is designed for take-it-easy upkeep but well qualified to turn out gourmet meals. Its equipment: refrigerator, dishwasher, oven, warming oven (all with stainless steel doors), sink, range-top.

Surface cooking units are set individually into the sleek black soapstone countertop which also doubles easily as a buffet.

Above counter is long line-up of cabinets including special swing-out compartments for small appliances. Doors are flush with wall, and so are all but invisible when closed.

In the woods:

AMENITIES THAT MAKE FOR TAKE-IT-EASY ELEGANCE

Behind the island counter: shelves for china and glass and a stainless steel counter containing the range-top and sink, with cabinets beneath.

Lavatory counter topped with mosaic tile stretches length of one section of bath off sleeping alcove. Sliding door shuts off toilet and shower beyond. Opposite counter: sliding glass door to the outside.

Island work counter of Wally kitchen contains oven, refrigerator and freezer. Counter and shelves along wall behind the island may be closed off with folding doors of dark-stained wood.

HOUSE & GARDEN, JUNE, 1961
Another mirror on inside of door of built-in storage compartment turns that unit into a complete dresser. Behind it is toilet compartment with blue tile floor.

Among the elegancies of this take-it-easy house is a bath-dressing room with generous storage that eliminates need of storage furniture in living area. Twin basins plus separated shower and toilet allow for double occupancy. Window over marble lavatory counter admits plenty of daylight while privacy is assured by fence outside. Door of medicine cabinet at right of counter is flush with wall but swings back, above, to reveal mirror on inside. Thus shaver's face is lighted by window but mirror bars glare.

Extra guest bunks in living area have decorative cane panels on the bottom, hung by chains when lowered. Curtain draws across nook for privacy.

The sleeping alcove, normally wide open to the main living area and sharing its long window wall, can be as private as a separate bedroom when grasscloth-covered doors are pulled across opening. Spindle-end daybed and upholstered chairs have living-room character.
20 ways to hold back the sun

You can enjoy delightful patterns of light and shade and still keep the sun’s hottest rays off your terrace, out of your rooms.

The most important thing to remember in trying to beat the heat is to hold back the sun before it reaches your walls and windows (glass, particularly, transmits heat readily). Once heat rays penetrate indoors, you will have a much harder job cooling the house than if you had kept the sun out to begin with. Therefore, to be really efficient, any device intended to deflect the rays of the sun must be installed outside the house. But before you decide on the design of the device, consider which direction the sun is coming from—and when.

In summer you will have two types of solar heat to contend with: the high noonday sun that shines on the south side of the house and the low afternoon sun (the hottest of the day) that hits the western side. To stop southern sun you will need horizontal projections or overhangs above your windows. For western sun you will need some type of a vertical sun shield.

These sun controls can be pretty as well as practical: overhangs of three-dimensional egg-crate construction, trellises garlanded with leafy vines, airy grilles, snowy white canvas curtains can all enhance the design of your house and make you feel cooler just to look at them. If you want to tackle the job of making your own sun screen, lattice is an easy-to-work-with, lightweight material. You can buy the separate strips in any length, work them into a variety of patterns to form a fence or simple trellis and add a spanking coat of paint that can be refreshed each summer. (Remember that white is an excellent choice since it turns back the rays of the sun instead of absorbing them.) Trees and shrubbery will make a natural screen against the low, western sun. Deciduous trees have the advantage of losing their leaves in winter and letting in the sun when you want it. Whatever type of sun control you decide upon, bear in mind that it will look best if it follows the architectural style of your house.

The proportions of screens and overhangs should always be in scale with the size of the house, and their materials should complement the exterior.

An overhead lattice throws a pretty, crisscross pattern of shade on the luncheon table on Robert Steinwedell's roof garden in San Francisco, Calif. Since center of area is open to the sky, there is always some sun and some shade. Supporting beams of lattice rest on storage cabinets at corners. Architects: Porter & Steinwedell.
A trellis planted with climbing vines prettily shades the front rooms of Mr. and Mrs. John Penson's house in Dallas, Tex., and also screens rooms from view of passers-by on the street. In winter, when vines lose leaves, welcome sun streams in. Architects: O'Neil Ford & Associates.

High noonday sun can be screened from the south side of the house by horizontal sunshades
An extension of the roof on the south side of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Alter's contemporary redwood house in Los Altos, Calif., keeps bedroom and bathroom section cool by shutting out the hot midday sun. Wooden fins, painted white, control low afternoon sun and glare from west, also create a private courtyard for each room. Trees add extra shade. Architects: John L. Field & Walter H. Costa.

A latticed projection outside the living room of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Farfel's house in Houston, Tex., serves two purposes. Lattice breaks up hot Texas sun into dappled light and shade outside glass walls (long stretch of glass would make rooms unbearably hot without this protection). Together with brick wall, lattice creates a fresh, leafy courtyard (vines will eventually grow overhead) that cuts down glare reflected from paving and gives privacy. Architects: Bolton & Barnstone.

An egg-crate overhang jutting out above a window in Mr. and Mrs. Percy Selden's house in Houston, Tex., makes an airy-looking protection from strong overhead sun. Depth of egg-crate throws window into complete shade while nearby trees and shrubbery cast leafy shadows. Architect: Herman Lloyd.
Sliding panels of pierced wood filter strong western sun and cast long, lacy shadows across a dining lanai in Mr. and Mrs. Mike Lyman's house in Palm Springs, Calif. Once an open porch, the enclosed lanai makes a cool, restful spot for summertime meals away from the glare and heat of the adjoining pool patio. Designer: Arthur Elrod. Architects: Williams & Williams.

Low afternoon sun can be filtered from the west side of the house by vertical screens or curtains.
Tall canvas curtains, above, can be pulled across in afternoon when sun penetrates below roof of Ralph C. Whitsett Jr.'s pool-side pavilion in Hollywood, Calif. White of curtains bounces back rays of sun, looks airy and cool. At end of pool: a scalloped canopy to shade a circle of chairs. Designer: Charles Beatcher.

A wall of adjustable louvers, below, on Mrs. Zelda Kaplan's porch in Miami, Fla., works on the same principle as a Venetian blind but is more efficient since louvers are outside house proper. Slats can be regulated to deflect sun at different heights in sky, also to bring in breezes and light. Architect: William E. Kittle.

Removable panels of multi-colored slats clip onto outside edge of a wood roof to shield a terrace from glare of low, late afternoon sun. Trees and bushes contribute leafy shade. Designer: Gwen Carde.
A skylight of bamboo strips above a small, planted courtyard throws richly contrasting light and dark patterns (reminiscent of the old Italian chiaroscuro painting technique) across Mr. and Mrs. Albert Quon's dining room in Beverly Hills, Calif. A solid wall on opposite side of courtyard protects glass-walled room from sun, gives diners privacy from drive. Architects: Ladd & Kelsey.

Sunshine through the day can be harnessed to cast moving patterns of light and shade.
An elongated overhang of painted slats works two ways at once in designer Arthur Elrod's house in Palm Springs, Calif. Overhead lattice creates a shade-striped strip of lawn for a group of chairs. Combination of lattice and tall bushes keeps sun and glare from penetrating windows just below overhang.

A roof of outside laths, right, makes a shady, pattern-casting covering for a wall linking the garage and house of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Isaacs in Seattle, Wash. One side of covered walk is used for potting since changing mixture of sun and shade is ideal for plants. Architects: Bassetti & Morse.

A trellis of alternating slatted squares, below, stretched across architect Harwood Smith's pool in Dallas, Tex., creates a moving, crisscross composition of light and shade on the mirror surface of water. Practical purposes of trellis: It cools part of pool, also helps tie together garden and house.
Two indispensable perennials

touch off the color explosion in the June flower border

Iris

In June's kaleidoscope, no flower contributes so much as the garden iris. If you turn your attention seriously to this brilliant and ornate perennial, it appears to change even while you look at it. And so it should; for change is the life of the springtime border. (Leave for other seasons the easy progressions and slow climaxes of more sedate species.) Let the iris raise its explosive spikes in ever new sequences and combinations of color, fostering its own reckless obsolescence—and damn the budget. As a matter of fact, the budget need suffer no undue strain, provided you wait out most of the newest introductions each season, shopping for mainstay varieties among the established favorites after prices have started to go down. Season your collection with a few of the leaders—such as Eleanor's Pride, opposite page, which has been climbing on the Popularity Poll (up ten places last year) and down in price (though its Award of Merit in 1958 holds it at better than $5). Balance one like this with a Helen McGregor which is an inexpensive but superb light blue, or Truly Yours, one of the best and least costly yellows.

and Poppies

Shorter on variety than iris but leagues longer on dazzle, oriental poppies have the remarkable virtue of calling attention to other flowers around them while also ballyhooing themselves—a virtue that is too seldom appreciated. Poppy hybridizers have lagged behind iris innovators in introducing new varieties perhaps because the color genes of the poppy resist genetic onslaughts more stubbornly than do the iris genes. But there is news for gardeners who think that all poppies are flame-colored. In the years since the Perry innovations, clean orange, honest pink, respectable red and a number of combinations have entered the lists. In recent years blossoms have acquired a new effect of delicacy, belied only by their manifestly greater substance and dinner-plate dimensions. Prices of the newer varieties tend to start and remain high for several seasons. But as with the new tall iris that the poppies partner so well, many beautiful and dependable clones are available for little. Of the three at the bottom of the opposite page, Pinnacle, left, lists at about $5; Glowing Ember, center, costs $1; Valencia, huge and crinkled, $5.

alive, alive-o

Before either iris or poppies can give life to your June garden they must first have abundant life themselves. But because both plants are so hard to kill, perhaps neither is given the treatment that would bring out its best. Iris rhizomes, for example, will at least double the number of flowering stalks each year—which is all to the good. But in three seasons the clumps will either require division and a fresh start or become weedy and unproductive. Poppies (oriental poppies, that is) need but infrequent division and they are enormously long-lived. But they are also enormously hungry during their active growing seasons, fall and spring. They require not only a deeply dug location but regular fertilizer supplements if they are to produce more than half-hearted color blots. (For details of cultivation, see page 144.) As for color itself—faint hearts will pump no fresh excitement into either your iris border or your poppy plantings. Play subtly with color combinations if you must, but never fear to mix madly if the spirit so moves. Only this word of caution: Beware the fussiness of some of the two-toned iris and shun the out-and-out fire-house hues of the old-line poppies.
How to decorate with window shades

The once lowly window shade, as HG forecast last January, is rapidly becoming a major wonder. The range of choice that used to start and stop at solvable white has exploded in all directions. Today you can choose from a variety of textures, colors and patterns—shades with new durable finishes, shades designed for new flexible methods of installation. You will find translucent shades that admit considerable light but no glare, opaque shades that make a room pleasantly shadowy, or room-darkener shades with which you can simulate midnight at high noon. (A new invisible coating can turn even bright white shades into room darkeners.) There are varied methods of operation to choose from, too: the classic roller type, the folding Roman shade and the bottom-up variety that lets the sun pour in overhead at the same time that it protects your privacy. Many of the new shades are handsome enough to hang on their own merits, thus eliminating the need and cost of countless yards of curtain fabric. And like curtains, shades can establish your decorative theme, supplement it or accent it, or hold the limelight. They also have talents for camouflaging dinky or ungainly windows and visually remodeling a room. On the next four pages you will see multiple proof of window shade accomplishments.

One word of caution: Before you order shades be sure you measure each window carefully and separately—even look-alikes can differ enough to impair the result.

Translucent shades strewn with sepia trompe l'oeil motifs turn the windows of a bed sitting room into glowing pictures. Like shoji panels, the white backgrounds transmit diffused light even on dreary days, and the sepia collage—applied with a new photostatic process—is right on key with the brown and white wallpaper. Framing the pictures: filmy floor-length muslin curtains with embroidered borders. Shades by M. Sylvor. Interior by The Unicorn.

One wide shade, banded to match the curtains that flank it, screens two small windows in Stanford Squire's living room. Curtains of off-white linen and a standard plain off-white shade were bordered with a green and white scroll braid, and all were hung from the ceiling to give the window wall greater importance and the whole room the illusion of additional height. Shade by Joanna Western.

Dashing awning stripes, scalloped and fringed like a marquee, give a fresh-air look to the Carter Hermans’ breakfast room in Beverly Hills, Calif., and make a fitting frame for view of terrace. Designer: Gladys Belzer.

A beguiling hand-painted shade at the recessed window of a bed-sitting room repeats the feathery fern pattern of the linen curtains and upholstery, gives the window an all-of-a-piece look. Designed by Alexandra Gignoux.

Elegant Roman shades of gold linen striped with woven black tape camouflage illuminated windows in the Lewis Hands’ office-at-home in Great Neck, N.Y. Matching cornices hide hardware. Together with gold and black leopard-pattern wool rug shades create warm but workmanlike background. Designer: Melanie Kahane.

Butterflies light whimsically on the bottom-up shades in a small child’s room, taking their cue from valance and spread of a new canopy crib. Smaller motifs cut from fabric are pasted on standard shades; big fellows are painted. Virtue of bottom-up shades: you can open windows from top. Child Craft Furniture.
Summery flower print on a glazed cotton brightens the curtainless windows of a living room. Fabric (you supply it) is bonded onto a special opaque shade, installed here with a reverse roller at inside edge of window frame. Shades by Norton-Blumenthal.

Handsome flaxen weave embedded in vinyl makes a two-window shade and also covers the window-seat cushion and furniture panels in a contemporary garden apartment. Width of shade stretches width of room while natural color and texture seem made-to-order accompaniment for the Danish chairs and rug.

Lively candy stripes on sailcloth plasticized to resist steam preserve the privacy of designer Arthur Elrod's bathroom in Palm Springs, Calif. When the ceiling-to-floor shades are fully drawn the tall windows create the crisp and gay effect of a paneled papered wall.

Whimsical trompe l'oeil motifs painted on cabinet door and drawer fronts are echoed pianissimo on translucent shade over a dressing table. Shade, on which motifs are painted with a light hand, provides privacy, admits good light for making up. Interior by David Barrett.
With simple materials you can embellish plain cloth shades and use them to create cool enchantment for summer.

Sea-shell appliqués cut from an Everglaze chintz by Cyrus Clark are pasted to standard pastel shades to give a bedroom a breezy air for summer. Pulls are made with real scallop shells, two per shade, held together by epoxy glue with the shade cord between them.

Delicate flowery tracery, duplicating design on filmy Dacron by Georgia Co., embellishes plain white shades that turn a dining bay into a summery bower. Design is applied to shade by tracing fabric pattern on transfer paper with pencil, then outlining it on shade with textile ink. The pull is ready-made cord and tassel.

More about window shades, page 146
An array of ribbons—varied in width, color and texture, some fagoted, some plain-edged—transforms plain white shades into cool summer stand-ins for more formal winter curtains. Curtain valances conceal hardware for shades, give them a distinguished topping. Pulls, in keeping with simple elegance of room and furniture, are imported wood tassels with antique gold finish.

Fruit, flower and vegetable motifs cut from an Everglaze chintz by Cyrus Clark are reassembled to form a gay composition on a plain white shade for a kitchen window framed with more of the same motifs applied directly to wall. Wood pull is painted H&G's Geranium to match one of chintz colors and kitchen cabinets. Fabric cut-outs—like the shells, opposite page, and ribbons, above—are applied to shade with Bond Cement 6793. All shades are by Breneman-Hartshorn.

The happy world of in out

1 Hospitality is freely extended
Man is a gregarious animal and sets great store by the exchange of hospitality among family and friends. Since man is also an eating animal, any extension of hospitality is likely to start in the dining room. Once the walls are breached the only practical limit to hospitality is the neighbor's boundary—sometimes near where a true alfresco mural is in order, sometimes far, where space alone is the limit.

2 Gardening takes a personal approach
It is not always necessary to go to the garden; it is often more rewarding to bring the garden to you. Once the general objectives of a neighborly landscape have been satisfied, plants and fences may serve best in purely personal ways, one of the best of which is to provide an extension of the private world of your bedroom. There is no better way to thwart the tax assessor and add another room (six months of the year you have a fair-weather suite) at the cost of a length of fence, a basin of plain water, sky to sit under, a handful of good plants.

3 Privacy comes out of hiding
Positive concealment is but one means, often the least desirable one, of achieving effective privacy. In these days of shrinking building lots and high land values, you are no longer likely to have enough space to do the trick. On the other hand, solid barriers not only make bad neighbors, they usually wipe the neighbors out entirely. If you are lucky, a change in grade may mark the basic difference between privacy and non-privacy. In every instance, softening your immediate horizon with strategically placed trees and shrubs will be your best answer.

4 Every room has an open view
A terrace cornered by a house brings architecture into the open in its most concentrated form. The difference between inside and outside here is merely a ceiling and two out of four walls. But what a difference their absence makes. Here are all the comforts of home in immediate proximity—and all the special comforts of the open summertime world as well. This open dining terrace serves the further purpose of marking the full transition from in to out.

Mere rooflessness is not enough. It takes planning to make outdoor living worthwhile. It takes a special kind of planning, based first on the kind of indoor living to which the outdoors must relate, then on an understanding of the differences between what you can best do outside your house and what you can best do within it. It would be manifestly silly (a waste of money, too) to plan your grounds so that they offered simply a fair-weather duplicate of indoor space. It would be equally silly to cram your yard full of barbecues, games courts, plashing fountains, terraces, gazebos, flower gardens, windbreaks, sunpockets and bosky dells as counter-irritants to life within four walls. Somewhere between the extremes lies our happy world of in-and-out. It is a world of shifting, moving light, a world of distances (however close the horizon sometimes seems), a world where sound and scent and wind have a natural place. It is, admittedly, a fair-weather world. But here, according to the excellence and variety of your planning, you can play and rest and read and eat and entertain and work with as much single-mindedness or virtuosity as you could achieve in any house. The amount of use and the degree of satisfaction you will get from your outdoor living depends on how well it reflects your needs and tastes as well as on the physical relationship of outdoor areas to indoor ones. You are not likely to go outside to do something you don't particularly want to do. Neither will you often take the trouble to do in the open what could more conveniently be done indoors. The examples of good outdoor planning on these and the two following pages were selected for a combination of important values—relevance to common indoor functions; convenience of design, location, development; adaptability to a variety of uses; loving commitment to the beauty of plants, earth, sky.
Good in/out planning brings to indoor convenience
the fair-weather delights of all outdoors

5 Play space is planned for the players
How you play, where you play and what you play depends on who's doing the playing, and one man's cutting garden may well be the next generation's sandbox. In any half-play half-work realm that requires good arrangement of space and equipment—with an eye for neatness and practicality rather than mere decorative appeal—a whole family's list of specialized activities can be accommodated. This work-play area adjoins polite garden and service wing, bringing adults and children into tolerable proximity.

6 The natural site becomes space to live in
Not every rocky hillside in Connecticut yields willingly to the landscape architect's touch. Here is one that did not. But the old rule still held good—if you can't lick 'em, join 'em. The result suggests that many another uneven, untamed or simply difficult building site would turn out better if it were not fought over and plowed under and whipped into submission. You can't play croquet on this rocky outcrop, but you can lay down a soft cushion and discover a new kind of relaxation just outside the window.

7 Showmanship begins where space runs out
While lack of space may present a landscape problem, it may also force an especially skillful solution. Here all the uses of landscape architecture are called into play—and the plant world as well. Between the livable area of this spacious terrace and the boundary wall a subtly contrived balance of plants and water creates a diversion that is as valuable in achieving privacy as two acres of land and a row of trees would be. As you sit in your comfortable chair, your glance is led, gently but deviously, across the yard, losing itself and the lot line in a series of pleasant vistas.

8 The children's world swings in its own orbit
Whether for atavistic reasons or sheer animal exuberance, youngsters take to the trees at every opportunity. To get away from the world of grown-ups is part of a child's birthright, and so are tree houses, however fearful or wonderful their architecture. Here is an adult's version of a child's tree house. But the children know that stairs are made to be circumvented and that after all the tree's the thing. Of course tree houses should be safe to climb on and play in. Parents may properly supervise or check structural methods—not only for the children's sake but for the welfare of the tree, which is also, don't forget, a living organism.

9 Paving materials vary according to purpose
Pool-side concrete is fine for bare, wet feet—a trial for thinly shod dancing feet. Raised boards drain well (for wet feet), offer smooth resilience (for dancing feet). So you build a redwood platform to relieve everything-proof cement. Important aside: over tree roots, spaced boards on pebbles admit vital air and water.

Make way for the Laundry

Here is a guide to help you find the best place for your laundry equipment if your house has no special room for it

In many houses today you are likely to find laundry equipment placed—either by design or by sheer necessity—in the kitchen or in the basement. Yet these are far from ideal locations, since soiled clothes should really be kept out of the area where food is prepared, and the basement is a long way from the linen closet. Almost anywhere else in the house would be preferable. But the very best place to put the laundry is the place where it will be most convenient for you. To decide that point, consider the size of your family, the climate you live in and, above all, your own working habits.

If your family is large, you may like to do some laundry every day instead of letting a huge load accumulate. And since you will probably want to tend to other chores while your wash is whirling away, the laundry should be near the kitchen—possibly in the family room, breakfast room or adjoining hall—concealed behind folding doors. If you have a really large kitchen, you can, of course, divide it with a storage wall to form a separate laundry area.

On the other hand, if you do laundry only once a week (more likely, in a small family), you will want a generous work area where you can spread out and sort the different loads—an area quite apart from any other room. In a warm climate, this area might be in a breezeway; elsewhere it could be on a heated, enclosed porch. In a two-story house, you can avoid carrying clothes up and down stairs by locating your laundry on the second floor near bedrooms and linen closet. (Today, the upstairs laundry is no problem since the new equipment is relatively quiet and vibration-free and need not be bolted to the floor.)

The amount of space you need for a laundry is, again, a matter of your work habits. If you want all your equipment, including ironing board and sewing machine, laid out in production-line fashion, you will need a fairly long space. But if you like to split operations, doing your washing at one time, your ironing at another in a different part of the house, space will be less of a problem. According to the experts, all the work space you need in front of a washer and dryer is an area 5½ feet long by 3½ feet deep. You will need less space over-all if you use a combination washer-dryer or build in your appliances one over the other. But in any case you will need storage space for accessories and supplies.

On page 112 is an array of the equipment that goes to make a truly up-to-date laundry. On the opposite page are three houses built in different parts of the country, which had no space earmarked for a laundry. Suppose you were to move into one of them: Where would you put your equipment? Study the plans, then read the solutions suggested by H&G. They might well apply to your own house.
In a two-story house, the laundry could go upstairs

Since this house has plenty of space in its family room (even a sink), the laundry equipment might have gone there, but we prefer the second floor near the point where most laundry originates. The closet outside the upstairs bathroom (see second-floor plan, left) would make an ideal location for a combination washer-dryer. The three bedrooms are only a few steps away, so clothing and linens could easily be collected, whisked into the machine, then restored to their appropriate storage places—instead of having to be hauled downstairs, then back up again.

In a mild climate you could put the equipment in a court or breezeway

This California house is small (only 1,860 square feet) but has generous space outdoors. Since the climate would pose no problem, we would advise turning part of the garden outside the kitchen into a laundry roomy enough for a full array of equipment. To the high garden wall, a roof and other walls could be added, using prefabricated glass panels to make construction easy, create an airy atmosphere.

In a one-story house, the family room might be the best location

In this very small house (1,492 square feet) designed for a young family, the most logical place for laundry equipment is the family room. It affords plenty of space for a full line-up of equipment, including ironing board and sewing machine. It is near enough to the kitchen so that cooking and washing can be tended to simultaneously, and children playing in the family room supervised at the same time.
The equipment that goes into an up-to-date laundry

- Today a really up-to-date laundry calls for a variety of basic equipment. Some items, like the washer, dryer and sink, will be stationary. Others will need storage space in which they can be packed away when not in use. Whether you plan to put everything in one room, or to divide your equipment into two centers, you will need enough space, in one place or another, for the whole line-up. Your ironing board—either built-in or free-standing—will need storage space, and very close to that you will want enough room to set up the board without crowding yourself into a corner. (Needless to say, it should be adjustable, so you can work at comfortable levels, standing or sitting.) A fold-away cart to hold clothes at an easy height for loading machines is another indispensable part of today's laundry equipment. Wherever your laundry is, you will need a sink so that very soiled spots like collars and cuffs can get the special attention they call for before you pop the clothes into the washer. An especially good type is a cabinet sink that stores a series of light, plastic tote trays which make it easy to sort out the belongings of each member of the family. (If you have dozens of little socks and shirts to keep track of, a set of labeled trays, bearing each child's name, can be a great boon.) For clothing that you wash by hand—especially drip-dry fabrics—you should consider a drying cabinet, fitted with a heater and fans, which will dry clothes so quickly that wrinkles don't have a chance to set. Such a cabinet would also be useful for hanging up freshly ironed things.

- Most important of all, of course, are your washer and dryer. Among the variety of washers on the market today is a front-loading type with a door that doubles as a scale and an indicator to tell you exactly how much water and detergent each load will require. You can get a dryer to match or a combination washer-dryer with the same load-weighing feature. (For the dimensions and performance features of the most widely distributed washers and dryers, see page 123.) If you have a sewing center handy to your laundry area, you can complete the chain of clothes-care operations in one efficient routine, ironing and mending one load while others are in the washer and dryer. Some kitchen cabinet manufacturers make a special sewing machine cabinet which is designed to line up with their countertop storage cabinets. Inside the door is a shelf for your machine that swings out and up to operating height but keeps the machine tucked out of sight when not in use.

- For sewing and ironing, choose a chair that is well designed from the standpoint of posture. Like so much of the new equipment, such a chair will be an investment in health as well as in comfort.
If you were traveling near Naples, you might be lucky enough to find an Italian dressing made the old way, pungent with wild marjoram and an authentic herb vinegar. Here in America you can get it at any grocers. Wish-Bone—the real Italian dressing. You can tell by the flavor line floating in every bottle. It's where the authentic spices and herbs get together in just the right amount, between the pure golden oil and the vintage vinegar. The original Italian recipe is many years old. The dressing today is every bit as good as the original. And we intend to keep it that way for people who like lots of sass in their salads.

Next time at your grocers get the real Italian dressing... Wish-Bone.
I often suspect that the short shrift given to vegetables in this country is the result of a vicious circle. People are not supposed to like vegetables very much so they are carelessly prepared, and because they are carelessly prepared people do not like them very much.

In my kitchen, vegetables are, first of all, never overcooked and always thoroughly drained. Spinach appears "en branche," dark green, glossy with butter and sprinkled with wine vinegar—or chopped, creamed, seasoned with nutmeg and topped with golden brown pine nuts. Green beans and asparagus are allowed to retain a touch of crispness and are usually dressed simply with browned butter. Acorn and butternut squash receive a touch of ginger and brown sugar. Braised carrots boast a tantalizing whisper of Madeira or cognac. Just before serving I mix cooked and buttered tiny peas with cooked and buttered macaroni shells (the green peas nestling in the white shells are both decorative and good to eat). Here are other combinations of mine which you might like to try: thinly sliced water chestnuts with hot cooked green beans; cooked beets—sliced, diced, grated or julienne—in sour cream; boiled onions or braised celery with slivered almonds browned in butter; beet greens, cooked in water that clings to them after washing, seasoned with onion, lemon juice, salt and pepper and topped with crumbled bacon.

Experiment with unfamiliar vegetables, new uses for old favorites. Accompany wild duck or venison with boiled and buttered Jerusalem artichokes. Crisp thinly sliced fnococcio or kohlrabi in salted ice water and serve as an hors d'oeuvre. Top squares of green pepper with Cheddar cheese for cocktails. Cut watercress into the dough for a meat pie crust.

During the summer months when vegetables are at their peak in quality and quantity they deserve their just due. The recipes that follow are designed to spur you to try new ways of preparing them.

HORS D'OEUVRE

Celeriac Rémoulade

For some reason, celeriac or root celery is seldom served in private homes although it is to be found on the menu in most good restaurants.

1 pound celeriac
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 teaspoons vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon dry mustard
Dash of white pepper
Rémoulade Sauce

Pare celeriac and cut into matchlike strips. Marinate overnight in olive oil, vinegar, salt, dry mustard and a dash of white pepper. Drain and mix with Rémoulade Sauce. For Rémoulade Sauce, mix into 1 cup good mayonnaise ½ teaspoon dry mustard, 1 tablespoon drained capers, 1 teaspoon chopped chives, pinches of dried tarragon and chervil or several fresh leaves of each, chopped, and a touch of garlic or shallot. Serve on a bed of lettuce. Serves 4.

Stuffed Peppers Felesia

This Mexican dish may triple as an hors d'oeuvre, a luncheon entrée or a salad accompanying cold meat or fowl. Proportions are difficult to specify since the size of both peppers and avocados varies. One small avocado will usually suffice for one medium-sized pepper.

Choose the long, thin variety of peppers, red or green. Hold them over a low flame, turning them until they blister. Put them in a paper bag in a moderate oven to steam for 10 minutes. Take them from the oven and, when cool enough to handle, skin them, cut off one end and remove the pulp through the opening. Chill the peppers until ready to use.

Mash the avocados and season them to taste with minced onion. Stuff the peppers, whole, with the avocado mixture, cover them with sour cream and garnish with slices of Spanish onion which have been marinated in a true French dressing (3 parts olive oil, 1 part vinegar, salt and pepper) for 2 hours. Serves 4.

Eggplant Purée à la Turque

Serve this cold purée surrounded by rounds of black bread with which to scoop it up and eat it. If this procedure seems too messy, it may be eaten with a fork.

2 small eggplants
1 medium onion, minced
2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon black pepper

Olive oil
1 tablespoon chopped parsley

Juice of ½ lemon

Remove the stems from the eggplants and grill them whole under moderate flame. When the skins begin to split, remove the eggplants and peel them. Put them through a food mill or mash them in a bowl. Add the minced onion, salt, black pepper and beat until smooth. Add olive oil, about 2½ tablespoons, until the mixture is the consistency of mayonnaise. Sprinkle with chopped parsley and lemon juice. Serves 4.
SOUPS

Cold Garden Vegetable Soup
Special dishes should hold this colorful and flavorful soup. Friends of mine serve it in pottery bowls of the shape and color of small melon halves. It may be the main dish for luncheon or supper, accompanied by crackers and cheese and followed by a salad.

1/2 cup olive oil
6 tablespoons packaged poultry stuffing
2 cups tomato juice
1 bouillon cube dissolved in 1/2 cup hot water
4 stalks celery, finely chopped
1 onion, grated
1/2 cucumber, chopped
3 tomatoes, coarsely chopped
Juice of 1 lemon
1/2 teaspoon A-1 Sauce
Salt, pepper to taste
Chopped chives for garnish

Combine olive oil, poultry stuffing, tomato juice, dissolved bouillon cube, celery, onion and cucumber. Chill.

Before serving, add tomatoes, lemon juice and A-1 Sauce. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Sprinkle with chopped chives and drop 2 ice cubes into each bowl. (My melon-bowl friends also add a dollop of curry-flavored mayonnaise.) Serves 4.

Corn Soup à la Crème
Sometimes summer nights are chilly. Have this soup while the steaks are being grilled.

5 ears sweet corn
2 medium onions, chopped
1 green pepper, seeded and chopped
3 tablespoons butter
Salt, pepper to taste
2 cups milk
2 egg yolks
1 cup cream

Garnish: slivered almonds lightly browned in butter

Slit the corn kernels and scrape with a sharp knife. Sauté the onions and pepper in the butter. Season with salt and pepper. Add the corn and milk. Simmer for 10 minutes and add the corn. Simmer 15 minutes and add the soup. Simmer for 5 minutes and remove the soup. Add the soup to the chicken broth. Simmer 5 minutes and remove the soup. Add to the soup the arrowroot or cornstarch mixture. Add to a cold supper.

Iced Broccoli Soup
A lovely brew, cool and green, to precede a light entrée on a sultry evening.

1 pound broccoli
1 quart chicken broth
1 small onion, chopped
2 stalks celery with leaves, chopped
4-5 sprigs parsley, cut fine
1 large carrot, diced
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon cayenne pepper
2 tablespoons arrowroot or cornstarch
1 cup light cream
1 tablespoon chopped chives

Wash broccoli, cut off the buds and dice the stalks. Put stalks into a pot with the chicken broth, onion, celery, parsley, carrot, salt and cayenne pepper. Simmer 15 minutes and add the broccoli. Simmer 5 minutes and remove the soup. Add the soup to the chicken broth. Simmer 5 minutes and remove the soup. Add to the soup the arrowroot or cornstarch mixture. Add to a cold supper.

Iced Cucumber and Mint Soup
The mint gives this soup that element of surprise which I think should be present, at some point, in any party dinner.

4 cucumbers
1 bunch green onions
3 cups water
6 tablespoons arrowroot or rice flour
3 tablespoons chopped mint
1/2 cup yoghurt or sour cream

Slice the unpeeled cucumbers and the onions (both white and green parts). Simmer together in salted water. When the vegetables are tender, mix the arrowroot or rice flour with a little cold water and add. Stir until thick. Strain the vegetables. Place the soup in a cold pan and stand the pan in a bowl containing cracked ice. Add the chopped mint and the yoghurt or sour cream and stir until blended. Garnish with mint leaves before serving. Serves 6.

Jellied Watercress Soup Smetane

Another cold, green soup—attractive to look at, refreshing to taste.

1 bunch watercress
4 cups clear chicken broth (the kind that will jell)
2 tablespoon lemon juice
1/2 cup cream mixed with pickled grated horseradish

Remove the tough stems from watercress and put it in an electric blender with 1 cup chicken broth. When blended, combine with 3 more cups chicken broth and the lemon juice. Chill until jellied, break up with a fork and serve in consomme cups garnished with a dollop of sour cream mixed with pickled grated horseradish to taste. Serves 4.

There are many, many recipes for gazpacho. I have it on good authority that this is the true version as made at the Hotel Ritz in Madrid.

1 clove garlic
1/4 teaspoon olive oil
1 small cucumber, seeded and chopped
4 tomatoes, quartered
1 small green pepper, seeded and chopped
Salt, cumin seed, cayenne pepper
Dash of Worcestershire sauce
1 roll or slice bread soaked in 2 cups water
1 teaspoon wine vinegar
1 pint light cream

Garnish: peeled, seeded, chopped tomatoes and cucumbers; seeded and chopped green peppers

Put the garlic, olive oil, cucumber, tomatoes and green pepper through the finest blade of the meat grinder. Then put the mixture through twice more or mash with a mortar and pestle until a paste is formed. Add a pinch of salt, a pinch of cumin, a dash of cayenne pepper and a dash of Worcestershire sauce. Add the soaked bread. Beat with a rotary beater until smooth. Add water vinegar and light cream. Chill. Serve very cold in small pottery bowls. Garnish with small amounts of peeled, seeded and chopped tomatoes, cucumbers and green peppers, which may be served in separate bowls. Serves 4.

Clear Mushroom Soup
If you agree that there should be one hot dish at every meal, try this light, refreshing soup before a cold supper.

2 pounds mushrooms
2 quarts water
1/2 teaspoon salt
Pepper
1 teaspoon beef extract (B.V.)

Dry vermouth

Wash the mushrooms and chop fine, stems, skins and all. Simmer in water for 3 hours, covered. Strain, pressing the pulp dry. Discard the pulp. Reheat the broth, adding salt, pepper and beef extract. Just before serving, add dry vermouth. Serves 3.

Irishman's Vegetable Soup

Another cold, green soup—attractive to look at, refreshing to taste.

1 bunch green onions
4 cups water
6 tablespoons arrowroot or rice flour
3 tablespoons chopped mint
1/2 cup yoghurt or sour cream

Slice the unpeeled cucumbers and the onions (both white and green parts). Simmer together in salted water. When the vegetables are tender, mix the arrowroot or rice flour with a little cold water and add. Stir until thick. Strain the vegetables. Place the soup in a cold pan and stand the pan in a bowl containing cracked ice. Add the chopped mint and the yoghurt or sour cream and stir until blended. Garnish with mint leaves before serving. Serves 6.

Iranian Cucumber Soup

The Iranians are very fond of yoghurt, which they call mast, and use it in almost everything. This is a hearty and unusual soup.

3 cups yoghurt
1/2 cup grated cucumber
1/2 cup seedless raisins
3/4 cup cold water
1 tablespoon minced fresh dill
3 tablespoons minced chives
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon white pepper
2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped (optional)

Beat yoghurt in an electric mixer or with a rotary beater. Add grated cucumber and raisins. Blend and add cold water. Add dill, chives, salt and white pepper. Blend well and chill. If the soup is to be the mainstay of the meal, add the chopped, hard-cooked eggs. Serves 4-6.

Jellied Watercress Soup Smetane

Another cold, green soup—attractive to look at, refreshing to taste.

1 bunch watercress
4 cups clear chicken broth (the kind that will jell)
2 tablespoon lemon juice
1/2 cup cream mixed with pickled grated horseradish

Remove the tough stems from watercress and put it in an electric blender with 1 cup chicken broth. When blended, combine with 3 more cups chicken broth and the lemon juice. Chill until jellied, break up with a fork and serve in consomme cups garnished with a dollop of sour cream mixed with pickled grated horseradish to taste. Serves 4.
SALADS

Green Bean and Tomato Salad
A slightly unusual combination but a fresh and pretty salad.

- 2 pounds green beans
- 2 pounds ripe tomatoes
- Salt, pepper
- 5 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 tablespoon wine vinegar
- 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce

Cook the beans by the cold water method (see recipe for Yugoslavian Green Beans under Entrée Accompaniments), leaving them whole if they are young and slim. Otherwise, cut them as you wish. Chill.

Scald the tomatoes, peel them and cut them in eighths, removing seeds and pulp. Sprinkle with salt and pat dry with paper towels.

Put the oil, vinegar and Worcestershire sauce in a salad bowl. Mix well and add salt and pepper to taste. Add the beans and tomatoes and mix again. Refrigerate for 1 hour. Serves 6.

Irma Salad

In France, where this salad comes from, it would be served as an hors d’oeuvre, but it is excellent as a luncheon or supper dish accompanying cold meats or fowl.

Combine equal parts of sliced, unpeeled cucumbers, cooked asparagus tips, cooked green beans cut in diamond shapes, and small, raw cauliflower flowerets. Mix with mayonnaise to which a little whipped cream and pinches of chervil and tarragon have been added. (Fresh herbs, of course, would be even better.) Heap into a mound and cover with shredded lettuce mixed with watercress leaves. Decorate with slices of radish and nasturtium blossoms.

Beet Aspic

A change from tomato aspic, this goes well with cold roast fowl.

- 2 packages lemon Jello
- 2 cups boiling water
- 2 cups cold water
- 1 cup wine vinegar
- Salt
- 2 cups chopped, cooked beets
- 1 tablespoon pickled grated horseradish
- 1 teaspoon grated onion
- Mayonnaise

Dissolve Jello in boiling water and add sugar. Stir until dissolved. Add cold water, vinegar and salt to taste. Chill until a soft jelly. Add beets, horseradish and onion. Pour into a mold which has been rinsed with cold water. Chill. Serve with mayonnaise. Serves 4.

Red Cabbage Salad

This salad is quite definitely out of the ordinary. Serve it with cold corned beef or a cold pork and ham loaf.

- 1 medium head red cabbage
- 1/2 cup tarragon vinegar
- Salt, pepper
- 6 hard-cooked egg yolks
- 1 pint heavy cream
- Lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons chopped leek, chervil and fennel
- 3 small cucumbers, minced
- Radishes, sliced

Remove the outer leaves from the cabbage. Wash it thoroughly, cut it julienne and Blanch it briefly in salted water. Drain, chill and marinate in the vinegar, salt and pepper for 1 hour, turning frequently. Drain off marinade. Put the egg yolks through a food mill and mix them with the cream, adding lemon juice, salt and pepper to taste. Add the leek, herbs and the cabbage. Mix well. Pile on a platter and decorate the salad with minced cucumbers and sliced radishes. Mix again. Refrigerate for 1 hour. Serves 6.

Special Coleslaw

Even if you have never cared for coleslaw, try this. Until friends served it to me, years ago, on a plate containing a lovely, pink slab of hot roast beef, I had never liked coleslaw in any form. This is different.

- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1 tablespoon flour
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard
- Dashes of pepper
- 2 beaten eggs
- 1/2 pint light cream
- 2 tablespoons vinegar

Finely chopped cabbage

Cream butter with flour, sugar, salt, dry mustard and a dash of pepper. Add beaten eggs. Mix well. Add light cream. Heat vinegar, add to first mixture and cook, over a medium flame, until thick. Cool and add to finely chopped cabbage, allowing 1/2 cup sauce to 2 cups cabbage.

Eggplant Salad

This is a Spanish salad and is equally appetizing as a first course or a luncheon entrée.

- 2 medium eggplants
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon minced onion
- 1 cup diced celery
- 1/2 cup chopped walnuts
- 1/4 cup French dressing
- Romaine or Bibb lettuce

Garnish: quartered hard-cooked eggs, olives, mayonnaise

Mushroom Salad

Rossini, who gave his name to a certain preparation of a certain salad, is supposed to have been fond of this salad. While it is a salad, it is often served as a first course. Whenever you serve it, square, chops or a steak should be involved in the menu.

- 1 pound mushrooms
- 1 bunch Pascal celery
- 2 tablespoons minced chives
- 3 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 tablespoon tarragon vinegar
- Salt, pepper
- Bibb or romaine leaves
- Garnish: pinionito strips and quartered hard-cooked eggs

Rinse the raw mushrooms and dry them. Slice the stems and cut the caps into cubes or pie-shaped wedges. Cube the inner stalks of the bunch of Pascal celery. Combine mushrooms and celery with minced chives and marinate the mixture in a dressing made of the olive oil, tarragon vinegar, salt and pepper. Chill for 30 minutes. When ready to serve, lift salad out of the dressing and pile it on Bibb or romaine lettuce leaves. Dust with freshly ground black pepper. Pinionito strips and quartered hard-cooked eggs may be added as garnish. Serves 4-6.

Buffet Vegetable Platter

Some people like one vegetable and some another; some eat potatoes and some don't. This vegetable arrangement is perfect for a buffet because the guests may pick and choose.

- 3 large potatoes, peeled, cooked and quartered
- 4 medium carrots, cooked and cut into strips
- 1 pound whole green beans, cooked
- 3 medium zucchini, unpeeled, cooked and sliced
- 1 package frozen artichoke hearts, cooked
- 1/2 cup olive oil
- 1/2 cup tarragon vinegar
- Salt, pepper to taste
- 1 tablespoon drained capers

Chopped parsley
Garnish: lettuce or watercress

The vegetables should be cooked until tender but still crisp and cooled in separate containers. Pour over them, in these containers, a dressing made of the oil, vinegar, salt and pepper. Allow them to stand for 1 hour in the refrigerator. When ready to serve, arrange them on a platter in alternate mounds and sprinkle them with drained capers and chopped parsley. Garnish the platter with lettuce or watercress and put at the center, a tomato cut into petals. Serves 3.

Techniques demonstrated by Dione Lucas

1. Skin tomatoes if recipe calls for it. Quarter them. Cut out seeds and pulp with sharp knife.
2. To shred the quarters, turn over and slice in even strips. Keep knife point on board as you cut.
3. To section whole tomato for salads, slice evenly from bottom to top, then slice slices lengthwise.
ENTRÉES

Ratatouille
A venerable, provincial casserole from the Alpes-Maritimes.
1 large onion, sliced
3 green peppers, seeded and sliced
2 tiny tomatoes, peeled
1/2 cup olive oil
2 tomatoes, chopped
4 small zucchini, sliced with skins on
4 small eggplants, sliced 1/2" thick with skins on
Salt, pepper to taste
1 garlic clove
Chopped parsley
Brown onion, peppers and new potatoes in olive oil in heavy casserole on top of stove. Add toma­toes, zucchini, eggplant. Season with salt and pepper and brown. Reduce heat, cook uncovered until mixture is quite thick. Just before serving, put garlic clove in a garlic press and add juice to taste. Sprinkle with chopped parsley. Serve from casserole, hot or cold. Serves 4-6.

Mushrooms with Ripe Olives in Chafing Dish
This is a versatile dish. It may be served on toast for lunch or a late snack, with or with­out a poached egg, or it may accompany chops or a steak.
1 pound mushrooms
1 clove garlic, bruised
1/4 cup olive oil
1 cup pitted, sliced ripe olives
1/2 cup tomato purée (or undiluted condensed tomato soup)
2 tablespoons dry sherry
1 tablespoon beef extract (B.O.)
Juice of 1/2 lemon
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
Wash, dry and slice mushrooms and cook with garlic in 1/4 cup olive oil in the blazer pan of the chafing dish for 4 minutes. Remove garlic and add olives, tomato purée or soup, dry sherry and beef extract. When heated through, add the lemon juice and chopped parsley. Serves 4.

Spinach Pudding
A pleasant green luncheon or supper entrée. This may be served with Canadian bacon or thin slices of sautéed or grilled ham. Desserts which are to follow any of these custardy entrees should be light and non-creamy.
2 tablespoons grated onion
2 tablespoons butter
2 cups cooked spinach, just wilted in water which clings to it after washing
4 slices white bread, cubed
9 egg yolks
Salt, nutmeg, pepper
Bread crumbs
2 cups light cream
Grated Parmesan cheese
Cook onion in 1 tablespoon butter until golden. Mix with wilted spinach. Add cubed bread and put the mixture through the finest blade of the meat grinder. Beat 5 egg yolks and add 1 tablespoon melted butter to them. Season with salt, a dash of nutmeg and combine with spinach mixture. Butter the top part of a double boiler and spread it with bread crumbs. Fill with the spinach and cook over hot water for 1 hour. Unmold and serve with the following sauce: Beat 4 egg yolks and stir in 2 cups light cream. Cook gently over hot water until fairly thick and very smooth. Season with salt, pepper and grated Parmesan cheese. Serves 6.

Note: Better plan to make a fruit soufflé, mac­aroni or meringues with all those left-over egg whites. Or freeze them for future use.

Corn Custards with Fried Tomatoes
Corn and tomatoes have a definite affinity. In taste, color and consistency, they complement each other. Begin this luncheon or supper with something light such as Jellied Watercress Soup.
1 cup scraped corn
4 eggs, beaten
2 teaspoon minced onion
1/2 teaspoon salt
Dash of cayenne pepper or Tabasco
1 1/2 cups milk
5 medium tomatoes
2 tablespoons butter
Pinch of chervil, salt, pepper
Combine scraped corn, beaten eggs, minced onion, salt and cayenne pepper or Tabasco. Scald milk and add it gradually. Pour into buttered custard cups and place cups in a shallow pan of hot water in a pre-heated 325° oven. Bake for 30 minutes or until custard is set.

While the custards are baking, slice off the tops and bottoms of the tomatoes. Then cut each tomato into two thick slices. Fry in the butter. Season with salt, pepper and chervil. When tomatoes are dark brown on both sides remove them to a heated platter and add 1 tablespoon hot water to the liquid in the pan. Simmer and stir until reduced to a glaze. Pour over the tomatoes.

Unmold the custards or serve them in their cups, flanked by the tomatoes. Serves 6.

Tomato Soufflés
These individual soufflés are excellent for light summer luncheons.
4 large, firm tomatoes
2 cloves
1 teaspoon grated onion
Pinch of basil
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon flour
1/2 cup hot milk or cream
2 eggs, separated
Salt, pepper
1/2 teaspoon cognac
Cut a 1" slice from the tops of the tomatoes and scoop out the pulp. Save the pulp and set the tomato shells to drain, saving any further juice also. Simmer the pulp and juice with the cloves, grated onion and basil until reduced to slightly more than 1 cup. Put through a strainer, mashing so that you get everything but the seeds.

Melt the butter and stir in the flour. When smooth, add the hot milk or cream. Cook and stir until thick and smooth.

Beat the 2 egg yolks until light in color. Pour a little of the hot cream sauce into the egg yolks, then a little more, and then the lot, stirring briskly between additions. Add the tomato purée, season to taste with salt and pepper and add the cognac. Cook.

Thirty-five minutes before serving, beat the 2 egg whites until stiff but not dry. Stir 1/4 of whites into the sauce and then pour the sauce over the rest of the whites, folding in lightly. Cut the thickest slice from the bottom of each tomato so that it may stand upright in the pan. Fill tomatoes 1/3 full, place them in a shallow pan and bake in a pre-heated 375° oven for 25 to 30 minutes. Serves 4.

Vegetable Sukiyaki
This vegetarian version of the famous Japanese dish may be prepared in an electric skillet or a chafing dish as well as in a real sukiyaki pan. Serve it with brown rice.
1/2 pound fresh mushrooms
2 cups bamboo shoots
2 bunches green onions
2 small beets
2 stalks celery
2 pounds green beans
2 squares bean curd
1 1/4 cup salad oil
1/2 cup soy sauce
1/2 teaspoon monosodium glutamate
2 tablespoons honey
1/4 cup mushroom liquor
Wash and dry the mushrooms. Remove stems. Simmer stems in 1/2 cup water, covered, for 3 minutes. (Start timing after water comes to a boil.) Strain, reserving the liquid.
Slice mushrooms, bamboo shoots and onions thinly. Cut other vegetables diagonally and cut the bean curd into 1/2" cubes. Arrange separately on a platter.

Heat the oil in the pan and brown the onions slightly. Push them to one side of the pan and add the soy sauce, monosodium glutamate, honey and mushroom liquor. Simmer 3 minutes. Add the vegetables and bean curd, keeping each pile separate. Simmer for 15 minutes. Serves 8.

Celery Casserole
Start a Sunday night supper with hors d'oeuvre or a consomme, serve a green salad with the casserole and finish with a fruit dessert.
4 cups celery, cut in large dice
1/4 cup chopped onion
1 green pepper, seeded and chopped
1 tablespoon butter
1 small package Philadelphia cream cheese
2 small packages blue cheese
1 cup heavy cream
Cook celery in water until tender but still crisp. Sauté chopped onion and pepper in butter. Stir in cream cheese, blue cheese and heavy cream. Add celery and mix well. Put the mixture in a baking dish and heat through in a moderate (350°) oven. Serves 4.

Mushrooms sous Cloche
If you do not possess glass bell covers, this lovely luncheon entrée may be made in indi­vidual covered pottery casseroles.
24 large mushrooms
4 tablespoons butter
4 toast rounds, soaked in Madeira
Salt, pepper to taste
Heavy cream (about 1 pint)
Allow 6 large mushrooms per person. Put 1 tablespoon butter in each shirred egg dish or casserole. Over the butter put a round slice of toast which has been soaked in Madeira. On the toast, pile the mushroom caps which have been washed and dried (you may also flame them if you like). Bank them high in the center. Season with salt and pepper and pour round the toast 5 tablespoons heavy cream. Cover each dish with a glass bell or casserole lid and cook in a pre-heated 350° oven for 30 minutes. After 15 minutes, add sufficient extra cream so that there will be about 2 tablespoons left when the dish is ready. (Add the cream quickly, lifting the cover for as short a time as possible to avoid loss of steam.) Serve covered. Serves 4.

HOUSE & GARDEN, JUNE, 1961
Spinach and Mushrooms Gratînée

Spinach cooked in this Gallic manner is just as good by itself as it is with veal or lamb.

2 pounds spinach
7 tablespoons butter
1 pound mushrooms
Salt, pepper to taste
1 cup grated Swiss cheese

Wash spinach and Blanch it in a small amount of boiling, salted water. Drain it well, cool it and chop it fine. Sauté it lightly, just enough to rid it of moisture, in 2 tablespoons butter.

Wash and dry mushrooms, slice caps and stems and sauté them, seasoned with salt and pepper, in 2 tablespoons butter. Mix the spinach, mushrooms, ½ cup grated Swiss cheese and 2 tablespoons butter. Put in a lightly buttered baking dish. Cover with ½ cup grated Swiss cheese, dot with butter and put under the broiler to brown. Serves 4.

How to make Mushrooms sous Cloche

1. For fluted mushrooms, select firm white caps. Wash, dry, remove stem, hold firm in left hand.

2. Hold small very sharp knife on slant and cut from top to bottom of cap with flick of wrist.

3. Keep knife steady between thumb, forefinger, cut quickly and evenly, rotate cap with other hand.

4. Flute entire cap, then remove any loose pieces of peel which are still attached to lower edge.

5. Pile fluted caps in pyramid on toast in shirred egg dish and pour heavy cream around the sides.

6. Cover with glass bell and cook for 30 minutes. If bell is airtight, no steam will cloud surface.

Asparagus Loaf

A pale green summer entrée to be followed, perhaps, by a tomato salad and fruit in kirsh.

1 cup coarse cracker crumbs
4 tablespoons butter
½ teaspoon grated onion
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon white pepper
2 eggs
2 cups hot milk
4 cups asparagus, scraped and cut into 1" lengths
1 cup light cream sauce
Chopped chives, Parmesan cheese

Sauté cracker crumbs in butter with grated onion, chopped parsley, salt and white pepper for 5 minutes. Beat eggs lightly and stir into them the hot milk. Combine with asparagus and crumbs. Bake in a buttered loaf pan approximately 1½ " × 2½ " × 2" over with 350° oven for 30 minutes or until set. Serve with cream sauce seasoned with chives and cheese to taste. Serves 6.

Casserole of Vegetables and Pasta

Hot French or Italian bread, a good vin ordinaire and a salad should accompany this hearty dish.

1 pound small pasta (elbow macaroni, shells or whatever shape you like)
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 cup minced parsley
1 clove garlic, sliced
3 medium onions, sliced
Pinch of oregano, salt, pepper
3 medium tomatoes, cut in eighths
3 medium zucchini, sliced ¼ " thick with skins on
1 cup clear chicken or beef broth
Butter, grated Parmesan cheese

Cook pasta according to package directions, but slightly underdone. Drain and keep hot.

Heat butter and oil in a large iron or earthenware casserole. In this, sauté the parsley, garlic, onions with a pinch of oregano. When the onions are golden, add the tomatoes, zucchini and chicken or beef broth. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Cover and cook until zucchini is tender.

Combine with the pasta which has been lightly buttered. Cover with grated Parmesan cheese, dot with butter and brown under the broiler. Serves 6.

Eggplant Ankara in Moussaka Skin

This recipe is anything but authentic. It is part Turkish, part Arabic, part Brazilian and part imagination, and it is good. It may be served with rice cooked in chicken stock.

1 medium eggplant
1 small onion, minced
1 tablespoon butter
½ cup chopped parsley
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon flour
½ cup clear chicken broth
2 sprigs fresh dill, chopped
½ cup sour cream

Cook eggplant in salted water for 10 minutes. Cut in half lengthwise and remove pulp, leaving enough for fairly sturdy shells. Keep the shells warm.

In a saucepan, brown onion in butter. Add the eggplant pulp, coarsely chopped parsley, salt and flour. Stir over a low flame and add chicken broth. Cook until eggplant is tender. Add dill and simmer 5 minutes. Add sour cream and fill the shells with the mixture. Place in baking dish and heat in a moderate 350° oven for a few minutes. Serves 4.

ENTRÉE ACCOMPANIMENTS

Yugoslavian Green Beans

Use to complement broiled meat or birds.

1½ pounds green beans
½ pound butter
2 tablespoons bread crumbs
½ bunch parsley, minced
1 clove garlic, mashed
Black pepper
1 cup sour cream

Cook green beans by the cold water method: put beans in cold, salted water to cover, bring to a boil and simmer, uncovered, until just tender. Drain well. Melt butter in a pan and as soon as it becomes golden, add bread crumbs and let them brown evenly. Mix parsley with garlic, season with black pepper and mix with the bread crumbs. Remove the pan from the fire and combine the parsley mixture with the green beans. Put in a casserole, pour sour cream over all and bake for 15 minutes in a 350° oven. Serves 6.

Mousse of Zucchini

There are many different ways of preparing zucchini; it may be stuffed, cooked Provencal fashion, steamed and served with butter and cheese, fried and so forth. This recipe is one of my favorites. It is good with sauced fish and also with beef, lamb or veal.

4 medium zucchini
1 medium onion, minced
1 tablespoon butter

Bread crumbs, butter for browning

Scrub the zucchini but do not peel them. Cut in ½ " slices and cook in a small amount of boiling, salted water until tender. Drain thoroughly and mash with a fork.

Brown the onion in the butter. Add the zucchini and cook, stirring, until well blended. Put the mixture into a shallow casserole, sprinkle with bread crumbs, dot with butter and brown under the broiler. Serves 4.
Stuffed Green Peppers Roquefort

As an entrée this could well be accompanied by a corn soufflé or pudding. It is also good as an accompaniment for steak.

4 green peppers
1 cup bread crumbs
1 cup Roquefort cheese
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1/4 cup milk
Salt to taste

Cucumber Jelly

2 tablespoons unflavored gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
1/2 cup clear chicken broth
1 slice onion
1 stalk celery
1 sprig parsley
Salt
2 cucumbers

Soften the gelatin in the cold water. Bring the chicken broth to a boil with the onion, celery and parsley. Add the gelatin, 1/2 teaspoon salt, strain and cool. Cut 4 thin slices from the unpared cucumbers and put one in the bottom of each of 4 individual molds. Pare and chop fine the rest of the cucumbers. Add to the jelly and pour into the molds. Serve with fish. Serves 4.

Cucumbers Poulette

It seems a pity that the cucumber is allowed so few guises. One seldom encounters it fixed in any way other than sliced in a salad, pressed, or sauced with sour cream. Try Cucumbers Poulette with grilled or sautéed fish.

4 medium, crisp cucumbers, peeled
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon flour
1 cup hot clear chicken broth
2 egg yolks
Juice of 1/2 lemon
Salt, white pepper
3 teaspoon minced parsley
Small lump of sweet butter

Cut the cucumbers into cubes or 1/2" slices and remove seeds. Cook in a small amount of boiling, salted water until barely tender. Put in a strainer, over hot water, to drain thoroughly and keep warm. Meanwhile melt the butter and stir in the flour. When the roux is smooth, add the chicken broth and cook, stirring over low heat until thick and smooth. Remove from the fire and add the egg yolks, one at a time, stirring after each. Return to the fire and stir over a low flame or over hot water until thick. Remove from the fire again and add the lemon juice. Season to taste with salt and white pepper.

Add minced parsley and sweet butter. Pour over the cucumbers. Serves 4.

Note: Other sauces which may be used with steamed cucumbers are Cream Sauce, Bechamel, or Cheese.

Polish Beets

Serve with liver, roast pork or pork chops.

1 large bunch beets, cooked
2 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons butter
Salt, pepper
1 teaspoon vinegar
1/2 cup sour cream

Grate cooked beets. Put them in a saucepan with sugar and butter. Season with salt and pepper. When the butter has melted, stir in flour. Add vinegar and blend. Add sour cream and heat thoroughly but do not boil. Serves 4.

Scalloped Summer Squash with Parmesan

This is not "scalloped" squash as in "scalloped" potatoes. Rather, it designates the type of squash—the white or pale chartreuse squash which comes in sizes from a dime to a butter plate. Fixed this way, it belongs with liver, broiled veal kidneys or steak.

1 1/2 pounds young scalloped squash (about the size of a half-dollar)
2 ounces butter
1/2 cup Parmesan cheese, freshly grated

Wash the squash and soak in cold, salted water for 15 minutes. Slice off the stem end. Cook in a vegetable steamer or in just enough water to keep them from burning. Drain well; keep hot. While the squash is cooking, melt the butter. Do not let it brown. Put the squash in a warm vegetable dish, cover with the cheese and pour the butter over the cheese. Serves 4.

Purée of Green Beans

This is a specialty of a small restaurant in Paris known as Flamberge. An innovation typical of the thrifty French, it is a way of using green beans when they are a little too mature to be served whole or sliced. Serve the purée with grilled lamb or broiled chicken.

2 pounds green beans
Butter, cream
Onion juice, salt, pepper, rosemary

Cut off the tips of the beans and boil in plenty of salted water until tender. Drain and plunge them into cold water, which helps to keep older beans green. Drain again, thoroughly, and put through a food mill. Heat gently in a dry pan; there is still moisture in the beans and this must evaporate. Add butter and cream according to your taste and calorie-consciousness. Season with a dash of onion juice, salt, if necessary, pepper and a pinch of rosemary. Serves 4.

Cauliflower with Purée of Peas and Croutons

While approving heartily of serving more than one vegetable at a meal, I have never liked the idea of the vegetable platter with the Hollandaise cauliflower in the middle. This combination of two vegetables is the invention of Harriet Healy, who runs "Au Bon Gout" in Palm Beach. It is unusual, pretty, and very good to eat with roast beef, roast chicken or turkey—in fact, with practically anything.

1 medium cauliflower
5 tablespoons butter
3 slices white bread, cubed
Salt, pepper, nutmeg
1 slice lemon
2 pounds fresh peas
1/2 teaspoon sugar
1/4 cup light cream
Milk

Cut off the cauliflower stem. Soak in cold water for 1/2 hour.
Melt 4 tablespoons butter in a frying pan and turn off the heat. Add the bread cubes and stir with a fork until each cube is completely saturated with butter. Turn the heat on again low, and cook the bread cubes, turning with a fork, until all are evenly brown. Drain on absorbent paper.

Place the stem end of the cauliflower several times and put in enough cold water to cover. Add 1 teaspoon salt and the lemon slice. Bring to a boil, lower heat and simmer until tender. Meanwhile cook the peas in very little water. As they cook, add 1 scant teaspoon salt and 1/2 teaspoon sugar. When the peas are tender, drain them thoroughly and put them in an electric blender with 1 tablespoon melted butter and the light cream. When blended, add enough milk to make a thick sauce. Season with black pepper, more salt if necessary, and a pinch of nutmeg. Heat through.

Drain the cauliflower—need I say thoroughly? Mask with the purée and cover with croutons. Serves 4-5.

Peppers Sauté

These peppers are a good barbecue accompaniment. They go well with all kinds of grilled meats such as steaks, hamburgers, frankfurters and ham slices.

1 clove garlic, sliced
1 medium onion, chopped
4 tablespoons olive oil
4 large green peppers, seeded and cut in large squares
1/2 teaspoon salt
3 large tomatoes, seeded and cut into squares
2 leaves fresh sweet basil (or 1/2 teaspoon dried)

Sauté garlic and onion in oil for 5 minutes. Add peppers with 1/2 teaspoon salt and sauté gently for 10 minutes. Add tomatoes to the peppers with sweet basil. Cover and simmer until peppers are tender. Serves 4.

How to peel and seed cucumbers for Cucumbers Poulette

1. Remove skin with potato peeler.
2. Slice lengthwise, then in sections.
3. Round off edges of each section.
4. Cut out seeds, making crescent.

their wines with care. Shippers whose wines you can depend on include: Schoonmaker, Lichine, Dreyfus-Ashley, Wildman, Wile, and S. S. Pierce.

Ask, if you need advice

If the shipper's name is unknown to you, ask the sommelier or captain for an opinion. In any first-class restaurant, he will give you honest, sound advice.

Choosing from the wine list is one thing; knowing the condition of the wine in the cellar is another. If you are confronted with what is obviously a great wine list—one that includes a fine selection of "greats" and a liberal sprinkling of good regionals—you are safe in assuming that the wine has been well cared for. Restaurateurs who go to the trouble to build an outstanding library of wines are certainly going to protect their investment by proper storage.

Indeed, restaurants with fine wine cellars—such as "21" and Four Seasons in New York and Brennan's in New Orleans—take exceptional pains to see that their wines are right and their customers satisfied. They hold constant classes for their captains and management personnel, not only to taste and evaluate new wines coming in but also to check on the condition of the older wines. I have conducted some of these classes myself and find that these men have sensitive palates and a true feeling for wines. Their advice is thoroughly dependable.

If you order a wine in a good restaurant and you find that it is "over the hill," don't hesitate to send it back and ask for a replacement. Even in a first-class restaurant, a fine old wine can "turn" through no fault of the management. I know of a customer who ordered an old chateau-bottled Bordeaux, and three bottles had to be opened before he got one that was right. If, however, this happens to a wine of fairly recent vintage, it would seem to indicate poor care.

How much to pay?

What about prices of wines in restaurants? What is a fair range? I consider a just charge any amount from $4.50 to $15 per bottle. Of course, the price of wines will vary from restaurant to restaurant, just as the price of food varies. It is governed by overhead, the cost of maintaining the wine cellar and labor costs. In outstanding restaurants you may find wines listed at $25 or even as high as $40 or $50 per bottle. Such wines are so priced because they are great rarities; they are worth the price, just as a fine painting or art object is worth a great sum. And on the same list you will undoubtedly find charming country wines for as little as $5.

Look for good buys

I mentioned above that many interesting good buys are found among the lesser known wines. Here are some to watch for:

THE DELIGHTS OF CARRY-ABOUT MUSIC

You can have music wherever you wander—at home or on your vacation—with portable music makers.

When warm weather spurs you to transport your indoor pleasures out to your porch, terrace or cottage, you will no doubt want to include music equipment, TV or radio in your list of summer essentials. Today you can find portable stereo, TV, tape recorders, clock-and-radio combinations, shortwave and standard radios. Their sound is closer to the brilliance of their full-size counterparts (for example, a stereo phonograph with three separate speaker systems) and their size is more compact than ever before. Many operate on long-life batteries; others can be connected to extension cords and carried outdoors.

ALL-IN-ONE STEREO phonograph can be easily carried around to play your records in any room or on a terrace. Set has three speaker systems: one in the unit itself, two in detachable cases that can be placed up to 20' apart. Black and gold colored finish. 23¾" wide. $179.95. Motorola.

TOTE-AROUND TV in a sleek green and white polystyrene case makes it possible to enjoy your favorite programs out on a terrace. Antenna telescopes out of sight when set is not in use. 19¾" wide. $159.95. General Electric.

FOUR-SPEED RECORD PLAYER is sure to appeal to teenagers since easy-to-carry, red and white set can be kept playing wherever the crowd gathers. $59.95. Voice of Music.

Check lists for WASHING MACHINES

A quick run-down on the newest washers—and the questions to ask when you buy a washer or a dryer

Shopping for a washing machine might seem to pose the paradoxical problem of choosing the best among peers. But if you compare the special features which vary from one model to another, you'll be better able to determine which one best meets your own needs. For instance, all washers have the same basic wash cycles, but some include a special soak cycle (for woolens) or a cold-water cycle (for special fabrics) as well. Settings may be entirely automatic, or you may have the option of programming your own cycles. Many washers have automatically timed dispensers for bleach as well as for detergent; some even offer dispensers for water conditioners and fabric softeners. Some machines make a special point of saving water, while others stress different features—a variety of rinse actions, for instance. Almost every make has a different kind of washing action, and a different lint-filtering method—two points to study closely when you shop. Machines vary in size and in capacity (from 9 to 12 pounds), and many are designed to be built in flush with the wall. You will also find that many companies offer models with suds-return devices.

WHAT TO ASK WHEN YOU BUY A WASHING MACHINE:
1. Does it work equally well for light loads and heavy loads?
2. Can amount of water be regulated for different-sized loads?
3. Is the control panel easy to read and to follow?
4. Does the machine have automatic dispensers for bleach, detergent, water conditioner, fabric softener?
5. Is the filtering system effective and easy to clean?
6. Does it have a suds return?

WHAT TO ASK WHEN YOU BUY A DRYER:
1. Is there a dryer to match my washer?
2. Is the control panel easy to follow?
3. Does the machine have a low level of noise and vibration?
4. Does it need to be vented to the outdoors?
5. Does it have a safety thermostat to cut off too-high heat?
6. Does it have an automatic sprinkler—an end-of-cycle signal?

Biggest capacity washer is C.E.'s Filter-Flo, which holds 12 pounds. It has five wash cycles plus a cold-water wash. A water saver regulates water intake for small, medium and large loads, and a month's supply of bleach can be stored in the automatic dispenser. Machine fits flush against wall.

Push-button control sets any one of twelve cycles into operation on Sears' Lady Kenmore washer, which adjusts water level automatically, cleans its own filter, adds bleach and fabric conditioner. There is even a special operation for deep soil. Chime signals end of cycle.

Bladeless three-ring agitator of Frigidaire's Custom Imperial pumps suds through clothes, tosses them somersault-fashion, removes lint automatically. Controls include six fabric settings, a dial for three degrees of soil, an automatic soak cycle. But hand control is possible, too. Console top folds over illuminated control panel to protect it.

High-powered agitator in Philco washer forces water through clothes 600 times a minute. Bladeless design of agitator keeps clothes moving freely. Machine has five fabric cycles and special soak cycle. Patented Ball Point Balance design (instead of standard transmission) adjusts machine's speed to correct off-balance loads and keep clothes evenly distributed.

Color-keyed push buttons and dial settings make it easy to set Westinghouse controls. Front-loading door weighs load and indicator tells how much water and detergent are needed. As a result, machine uses less detergent and less water than other automatics. The automatic lint ejector never needs cleaning.

A single control, one of ten different push buttons, sets the Maytag to work. Buttons are marked for different load sizes as well as different fabrics. Lint-filter-agitator has a pumping action that circulates water through filter to deposit lint, and swells away wash water down through drain. Detergent is dispensed by agitator; there is also a built-in bleach dispenser.

Four-part dispenser in Norge's control panel releases detergent, water conditioner, fabric softener and bleach automatically. Controls—eight push buttons and a dial—are color-keyed for easy setting. Lint is collected in filter on top of agitator (instead of by water recirculating through outer tub). As a result, wash water stays hot.

You and your architect

How to plan for
BUILT-IN VACATIONS

The sixth in a special H&G series designed to give you a better understanding of what an architect can do for you

EDITOR'S NOTE: Two architects whose work has been significant in the specialized but fast-growing field of vacation and weekend houses have contributed their views to this article. They are: Rufus Nims, Miami, Florida, who is presently completing the designs for a ninety-house resort project; and Fletcher Ashley, Lexington, Massachusetts, who has designed an outstanding weekend house for his own family.

Is an architect really necessary for a house that will be used only on a part-time basis?

He isn’t if you just want a roof over your head. It is a simple matter to build an ordinary fisherman’s shelter or mountain cottage. But such a house seldom takes full advantage of a worthy site, and even less often provides the special environment for living that you are seeking. In some ways, an architect is more necessary in designing a vacation house than a year-round house. The successful second house should satisfy a family’s longing for a stimulating contrast with the familiar, often more constrained pattern of everyday living. If you are primarily interested in a change of pace (as most families are) an imaginative architect can help you achieve it. Fletcher Ashley advises families to take an open-minded attitude toward vacation house planning. “As a rule people like to be adventurous during a vacation,” he says, “so that it is a logical time to experiment with new forms and new ideas of space arrangement.”

How important is design in a vacation house?

Good design is always rewarding, but it can be especially so during those times of the year when you set out to refresh the senses and spirit. “Vacation house sites are usually chosen because of their fine relationship to water, trees, vistas,” points out Rufus Nims, “It’s always a shame to put a house in such an environment without the help of a sympathetic designer.”

Other architects have noted that families with conservative tastes in their everyday affairs often gain extraordinary satisfaction from spending their holidays in houses that embody dramatic, even fanciful design qualities.

How can you tell whether a site with a breath-taking view would be practical to build on?

In the first place, you should call upon your architect to help you choose your site, just as you would in choosing a site for a year-round house. Then, once you have bought your land, it is good to become thoroughly acquainted with it before you go into the serious planning stage. Mr. Ashley camped with his family in a tent for a number of weekends before he designed his own vacation house. “We came to know the property much better,” he says, “and we arrived at helpful conclusions as to the location of the house by observing the effects of the sun and rain, and the views that were desirable.”

Which is the better investment—a beach house or an inland vacation house?

The choice is highly personal (and usually prejudiced: the beach family wouldn’t trade places with the pro-mountain family and vice versa). Building on a saltwater site presents many problems: severe exposure to salt air and strong winds, infiltration of water during the off-season, shifting of foundations—these are all unique liabilities in beach houses. Mountain or lakeside houses, on the other hand, need exceptionally good sites, far enough from neighboring houses to provide a comforting sense of solitude—and such sites are growing increasingly rare. The sites that remain may be steep, irregular and rocky, thus adding to construction problems and costs.

If you want a house you can use for weekends all year, a mountain or lakeside house, of course, offers greater opportunities. More and more families are building such houses near swimming and boating facilities for the summer and near ski slopes for the winter.

How should interior space be allocated in a vacation house?

The dividing line between indoor and outdoor spaces should be almost imperceptible, especially in pleasant weather, since your entire property is literally your living area. Mr. Nims recommends the following space allocation formula: one part house, two parts roof, with additional screened-in areas which are not covered by the roof. Although the climate and the insect problem vary throughout the country, the theory behind Mr. Nims’ approach acknowledges the importance of extending the living environment beyond the arbitrary limits of the exterior walls.

Since a vacation is usually a time for a more gregarious pattern of living, most well-designed vacation houses are planned to give more space to the general living area. Many architects feel that open planning is ideally suited for this type of house. The kitchen can be an integral part of the living and dining areas, both indoors and...

HOW TO OWN A POOL AND LIKE IT

Two seasoned pool owners reveal their stratagems for insuring a summertime of fun with a swimming pool—and no headaches

BY BOOTH HEMINGWAY and STUART H. BROWN

IT is a good eight years now since each of us acquired a swimming pool—eight enlightening, vigorous, rigorous, not wholly uninteresting years. We have learned a lot—a dash of hydrochemistry here, a bit about plumbing and pumping-priming there. We have had sound grounding in the principles of the mailed-fist-in-velvet-glove school of diplomacy. We have become amateur insurance experts and fine-feathered yard birds. True, our problems have lessened a bit as more and more of our neighbors have built their own pools, thereby diluting our spectacular attractions. But problems cling to pools, as any pool owner knows. So our innate generosity of spirit prompts us to share our trials, errors and solutions with any who are taking the pool plunge for the first time—in the pious hope that some may profit from our experience.

Where to put it

Position may not be everything, but in the case of a pool it can certainly contribute difficulties, social and/or physical. We speak from varying viewpoints. One of us has a pool set in a wooded area very near the house. The other has his pool far away from the house in a field high on a hill. If you are dreaming of a blue, shimmering pool right outside your living room windows, close your eyes firmly and fill in the picture with lots and lots of children, damp towels, squashed tubes of suntan oil and semi-inflated plastic toys. You are likely to be nearer the truth.

You can also see that the greater the proximity of the pool to your main living quarters, the greater the chance for violation of family privacy, annoying noise and the let’s-make-your-house-our-club attitude. On the other hand, out-of-sight does not lead to out-of-mind when children cannot be easily observed and you have to make a long trek to reach the pool.

Another dilemma: As picturesque as a Sylvan pond in the forest may be, trees offer a leaf and root hazard to the well-being of a pool. Yet a grassy approach can turn a pool into a floating lawn every time the grass is mowed. As in choosing a wife, it is only sensible to consider also how appealing a pool is likely to be in had weather as well as in good. In the colder climes, for instance, you will have to live with the many unglamorous winter months when your pool will hardly look its best. It may be a big hole in the ground filled with salt hay, or an ice floe studded with logs. Even a neat, plastic-covered plunge is not exactly a joy to behold. (We do, however, recommend these patent-covers to prevent both people and junk—flora and fauna generally—from accidentally wintering in the pool.)

Probably no location for a pool is perfect on all counts. Naturally it will be dictated to a large extent by the shape and size of your land. But if space and money are no problem and small children are not on hand every day, it is certainly more restful to have your pool and entertainment area removed from the immediate environs of the house. And a good several feet around the pool should be neither greenward nor woods, but good hard pavement.

The placement of your pool, however, will not of itself solve the two major problems of pool owning—those that involve your social life and those pertaining to safety. Coping with them demands stern discipline—of yourself as well as of your family, neighbors, friends and anyone you ever talked to on a transoceanic jet. Eight years ago while we were going through the mud-sweat-and-tears construction period, we were each solaced by the vision of early morning dips and evening home-comings to a cool family collected around the pool with a buffet table laid out nearby for the lord and master’s delectation. But not even our first poolside gatherings came anywhere near those rosy fantasies. We seemed to be witnessing the population explosion right in our own backyards. Our respective families looked as if they had quadrupled. Had we taken a lien on a state park? Not at all. We had merely been discovered by the pool sharks. We were in business!

From proud pool-owners to perpetual hosts and handymen was a short step—no more than the change from city clothes to trunks. Naive of us, maybe, but the results of our impulsive invitations to “come over next summer and swim in our new pool” were both unexpected and unsettling.

Our book of etiquette

After the first few weeks, it was obvious that rules had to be made, laid down and obeyed—even if our popularity ratings became subnormal as a result. So rules we made, in unabashed collusion. Since our viewpoints in this respect coincided precisely, we present the fruits of our efforts here as a single social code for pool owners.

First and foremost: No one—and no, not anyone—in the family is allowed to issue blanket invitations to his or her own circle. Just short of forty lashes we finally managed to coerce our children to this view. Their friends and ours are welcome to share the pool, but on our terms and at our times.

No friends are to arrive without an invitation or without at least telephoning beforehand.

No ringers, either—even if they are trailing legitimate invitees. We want to know when the Poddatches telephone exactly how many they are planning to bring, so that we won’t end up with a splashmob that looks like Coney Island in August.

No young children may come without adults except for a specific, organized, chapteroned party. And accompanying adults are urged to keep watch and sensible eye on their responsibilities. A gaggle of gabbling mothers, backs to the pool, is no safeguard.

No bottle pool is tolerated—bottle pool being our lingo for those who come to swim and sink into our bar while protesting that they can only dunk and run. (Sanity, solvency and relations with our wine merchant took a beating.)

We designated one day a week as the time when neighborhood teen-agers might swim at definite hours. This has saved us from constant requests seven days a week and made us feel less brutal to the young “less fortunate” than ours.

for Sunday afternoon swimmers who arrive two hours early with their weekend guests while we are still enjoying an alfresco lunch en famille. We gently usher them to an island of tables and chairs strategically placed on the far side of the pool where they can amused each other until we get ready to merge sides.

All dressing (undressing to be more exact) must be done in our small bath house or at the swimmers' homes. (To avoid any possible excuse for a dripping parade through your house, it is a good idea to have a telephone extension near the pool as well as a direct outdoor route between the pool and the parking area.) We do, however, provide a limited number of extra suits, mainly for children, and we stock extra towels and a few inexpensive bathing conveniences. Life-preservers, the buckle-on kapok-filled kind, are held in readiness, too, for the very young.

Preserving life and limb

Safety rules, of course, are more important than all the others put together.

In many localities, now, the law requires all pools to be fenced, usually to a minimum height of 5 feet. But fenced or unfenced, no pool-side is the place for running or horseplay. We allow no under-water endurance contests, either, or inexpert versions of water polo.

Diving boards must have non-skid surfaces (coco matting takes an awful beating from chlorine and rots quickly, but graf-impregnated paints are excellent). And divers must be enjoined to look before they leap, either on top of someone else or onto a pool edge.

Our pools also have wide, shallow steps—for the benefit of the littlest swimmers who can thus be introduced to the water with far greater safety than a ladder affords.

All bottles must be kept a safe distance away from the pool and drinking glasses are banned in favor of plastic or metal cups.

When you first acquire a pool, we earnestly recommend—for your own mental health—a good long chat with your insurance agent. You should be prepared to cope with any pitfall such as plunges into empty pools or shallow ends and all manner of winter as well as summer lawsuits. Microsoft pools, alas, do not just happen. They are the result of a constant and careful contest with the elements. Unless you want to make your wife a pool widow and to spend a great many of your leisure hours nursing your pool's pristine purity, its care and feeding—from pH content to filtering and vacuuming—is best left to a weekly or bi-monthly professional service. Of course, if your pool is close to the house, your wife can always add it to her housekeeping chores (you hope). Or you can make pool care the price of swimming for teen-agers. Even so, every pool owner, in case of emergency, should have some idea of what makes things work. A brief course in hydraulics from the pool builders may well be appreciated in a future crisis.

Preserving the pool

A sudden high rise in temperature will turn your pool poison green overnight. You need more chlorine. The walls feel slippery. You need algaecide. With or without professional help, you will have to be able to do some of these jobs yourself unless you have a full-time pool nurse.

You should see to it that the trap, the dirt-catcher in front of the filter, is always clean. A pool is no place for a shut trap.

You should firmly insist that no hobby pins or hair pins be worn in the water. When shed, they leave rust marks.

You can hope against hope that some spring cleaning hours on a fair-weather day the last of which is allowed to dry. If you have a 6- to 8-inch drain pipe, you may easily wash out all the debris when the grate is out. Of course, when your 6-inch torrent of water is released, it may cause a lot of comment as it passes through or by neighboring properties. Do not forget this possibility.

If your pool is located on or near sloping ground, it may have natural drainage which is certainly more desirable than to be faced with the annual expense and labor of first pumping out the water and then scooping out all the debris. It may be true that pool lighting dramatizes an evening scene, but lights also attract all the insects. Life for miles around a pool, once on the water, these little visitors seldom leave, and this adds to your filter and vacuuming problems as well as providing a slapping good time for all those present. Often

H&G's GARDENER'S

HOSTAS LEAD THE RARE COMPANY OF ALL-PURPOSE, ALL-SEASON PLANTS

One species or another will bloom from June till October; many are fragrant; all have fine foliage and thrive in shade. Some even have a fault or two.

You saw them in your grandmother's garden and you'll find them in your grandchild's. They have been called by various names over the generations—funkia, day-lily, plantain-lily, niobe. Now they are officially known, and most simply referred to, by the name of hosta (for Nicolaus Host, who somehow got into the act a century and a half ago). There are eight or ten species, varieties and variations of hostas that are commonly available and should be more commonly grown than they are. The particular name you find in a catalogue is quite likely to be wrong, but the catalogue descriptions will list the essential differences. Of the most important species, Hosta glauca flowers earliest—in late May or, more often, early June. The species (or perhaps it is a group of hybrids) H. fortunei is the most useful of the midseason class, but because of its foliage, which shows many divergences of form and many combinations of green and white and green and green, rather than because of its flowers. H. luncholia is the workhorse of the herd—the one that grows best under especially difficult conditions of shade, soil type and moisture but has the least prepossessing lavender flowers. Its leaves are intermediate in size and it begins to flower in July, continuing into fall. Hosta plantaginea has the finest flowers of any species—pure white and sweetly fragrant. For quality of fragrance, it is surely one of the half-dozen most valuable plants in the entire garden. One named hybrid, Honey-bells, shares most of the virtues of the species and adds foliage excellence and more numerous florets on its own account. H. minor, flowering in August, has the smallest leaves, makes the closest approach to real grace. Hosta undulata has wavy leaves, (Continued on page 141)

Most fragrant hosta is plantaginea species, which blooms in late summer with great clusters of white trumpets. Foliage needs light shade, is likely to burn in full sun.

Two-tone green distinguishes newly opened leaves of H. fortunei viridis-marginata. Later in summer, dark green margins fade, inner areas deepen, difference finally disappears.
The June gardener's preoccupation with flowers is twofold: with the quality of the mid-spring border and with the continuing blossom parade all summer.

Hostas are primarily gardeners' plants—not collectors' items. Their real beauty lies in their proper use. Under a fruit tree's shade, following springtime bulbs and softened by the foamy flowers of astilbe, Hosta glauca spreads its blue-green seersucker leaves. One of the earliest to flower, this bold and dramatic hosta has clusters of white, scentless trumpets.

Hosta glauca's variegated form creates its own special effect of contrasting sun and shadow to brighten the recesses of woods.

White-green combinations are special attributes of many hosta species. H. fortunae offers a wide range of choices.

Seersucker leaves of H. glauca often reach more than a foot in length. Young clump division shows real grace among beech, clerodendron leaves.

Piebald pattern of H. glauca’s variegated form creates its own special effect of contrasting sun and shadow to brighten the recesses of woods.

HOSTAS: ALL-PURPOSE, ALL-SEASON PLANTS

with most of the color variations of other species, and H. ventricosa bears, in early summer, the darkest violet flowers of all. Over, around and through the names of these species, the plantsmen have woven the most incredible tangle of varietal and sub-varietal names that ever bedeviled an innocent plant. Disregard them—just as you pay careful attention to the descriptions of the plants themselves when you order them. There are a few hosta specialists and a number of good nurseries that offer reasonable selections. And anyway, you can’t go far wrong no matter what you do with hostas.

While hostas grow well, even bloom acceptably, in considerable shade, they require a soil amply supplied with humus to develop into the big clump plantings that will endure for a quarter-century without deterioration. The photographs on this page and on pages 138 and 139 show, for the most part, the form that well-established clumps assume after four or five years. But the newly divided plant, especially of a big-leaved species such as H. glauca, has a strangely airy and random charm that the big plants usually lack when long established.

All the hostas add interest to a woodland garden, especially during the summer when so many woodland plants hold their tents and steal away. Hostas lend themselves to formalized edgings along walkways and borders, too. But their value in such situations may be attributable to the plants’ innate versatility rather than to any special appropriateness. They look best in informal settings, where the textural contrast of their large leaves and their great air of vitality can be fully enjoyed.

Wavy-leaved hosta, in variegated white and green version, goes by the book-name of H. undulata undulata, blooms in early summer. You can plant hostas any time you can buy them—which is almost twelve months out of twelve. And you can transplant them anytime you can divide them. The roots become massively intertwined with age, and the multiple crowns, although undamaged by careful division, stubbornly resist half-hearted attempts to separate them. You may need to use a pair of spading forks, back to back, to pry the clumps apart—a procedure that is almost always followed in dividing established day-lilies (hemerocallis), whose root development is similar. As with all herbaceous perennials developing multiple crowns, set hostas’ divisions at the same depth they stood originally. Growth is always circumferential, and the centers never die out, no matter how old or big they become.

Smallest leaves belong to H. undulata, which forms tidy clumps not over eight inches high and a foot across in five or six years. As with all herbaceous perennials developing multiple crowns, set hostas’ divisions at the same depth they stood originally. Growth is always circumferential, and the centers never die out, no matter how old or big they become. Enrich plant locations with leafmold, compost or humus when you plant. Provide a shady spot, especially for H. plantaginea, whose leaves burn badly in the sun. Water the transplants well the first season. Then, sit back and enjoy the result.

Most dependable species, here shown in white-margined form, will thrive on north side of a building, flower in impoverished soil.

Enrich plant locations with leafmold, compost or humus when you plant. Provide a shady spot, especially for H. plantaginea, whose leaves burn badly in the sun. Water the transplants well the first season. Then, sit back and enjoy the result.

Provide a shady spot, especially for H. plantaginea, whose leaves burn badly in the sun. Water the transplants well the first season. Then, sit back and enjoy the result.

Smallest leaves belong to H. undulata, which forms tidy clumps not over eight inches high and a foot across in five or six years. As with all herbaceous perennials developing multiple crowns, set hostas’ divisions at the same depth they stood originally. Growth is always circumferential, and the centers never die out, no matter how old or big they become. Enrich plant locations with leafmold, compost or humus when you plant. NOTES FOR THE JUNE GARDENER

Gardening this month is a five-ring circus in the main tent with a dozen side shows going on at the same time.

First weekend

Palette to eat by. Vegetable gardeners are a hardy and persistent breed. While their total number may be diminishing, their dedication is not. Some of the faithful grow vegetables in their home gardens because they can achieve a table quality that no purchased product, fresh or frozen, can match. Other gardeners grow vegetables because some vegetables are as decorative as they are succulent. One side of the ornamental food coin is illustrated on pages 70-75 of this issue. Here we merely suggest the other side. Of the prettiest food crops, most can be grown in a handkerchief-size backyard. Three rhubarb clumps (Chimpanzee’s Red is a good variety) will fill a family’s mouth—and its eye—for a generation or more. A few heads of cabbage (savoy types, red or green, for crinkly leaves) will not supply much nourishment, but the flavor is good and the pictorial effect spectacular. Lettuce, for best flavor, need never develop a “head.” But for a good combination of pictorial and appetizing quality, try loose-heading Bronze Beauty, Oakleaf, the delightful mounds of Mignonette, or Matchless. Turnips are a cool weather crop, should be started either very early or very late. (Don’t grow too many; they aren’t that useful.) Young carrots, successive plantings grown in short rows, are even sweeter eaten than seen. Radishes are merely instant turnips, Cherry tomatoes make up in sweetness and decorative value what they lack in tang and substance—and anyone can grow a few bush plants to maturity. Witloof (Belgian endive) takes a lot of growing. First you must grow the plants all year after early sowing. Then you must dig the roots, remove the tops, store the roots in deep boxes of sand, and force the blanched second leaves to meet a dining table schedule. Better pay the price and buy the market product (buy celery, too). Secret of most of the truly flavorful vegetables: repeated sowings of small amounts of seed for a succession of succulent harvests. Tend your garden lovingly, whether you eat it or are content just to look at it.

Timely tome. Robert W. Schery’s Lawn Book (Macmillan, $5.95) is clear and clearly authoritative. It is a bit newer and technically a little more inclusive than Dr. R. Milton Carleton’s book on the same subject that was published a year ago. Either book will serve you well. The Schery price tag is sizable. But then, so is your investment over the years in a really satisfactory lawn.

Second weekend

Chrysanthemum spotting. Chief drawback of autumn’s best flower: the plants take a long time to reach a size that amounts to anything in the border. That is one reason why doubt, why many gardeners grow their chrysanthemums in rows, like vegetables, until midsummer, only then transplanting the budding clumps into their final display positions. This is fine on all counts except that the plants’ welfare (the longer the clumps can grow undisturbed in the plant-plant welfare (the longer the clumps can grow undisturbed in their permanent positions, the better the flowering effect will be). So here is our current suggestion: Move your most ornamental chrysanthemums to a tool shed—or wherever your product flowers are located.

Reading delight. Elizabeth Lawrence, landscape architect, gardener, naturalist (she would deny this) and literary craftman, has produced one of those additions to the collections of good garden books that are so hard to come by in this day of do-it-yourself placebos. It is called Gardens in Winter (Harper, $4.50) and actually deals with gardens at almost every time of year except dead flat summer. As it would, in the nature of things horticultural, the book deals substantially with bulbs—about which Miss Lawrence is immensely knowledgeable and for which she has an abiding affection. But almost every other kind of plant is dealt with, too. In a very true sense, her plants speak to her. And she in turn speaks of them to the rest of us. This is not a guidebook—although without similar guidance or comparable experience you will never become a really accomplished gardener. It is a reading book. Precise, rambling, involved (you could almost call Miss Lawrence’s style integramental) and altogether joyous, the book shares with you in almost equal portions the author’s plants, her numbering gardening friends and her own warm spirit.

Third weekend

Words on watering. Pot gardening (call it container gardening for greater accuracy) is on the increase—almost in direct proportion to the popularity of patio and terrace living. As the containers multiply, so do the problems of nurturing the plants they contain. One of the most troublesome aspects of the summer care of container plants is the control of soil moisture. Small porous clay pots may dry out in a few midday hours. Hanging basket plants have the evaporative effects of both sun and wind to contend with. Yet pots in the shade may dry out too slowly to fit a normal watering schedule. And plants in big porch boxes or "planters" may suffer from insufficient drainage and never dry out at all. Bear in mind that no plant is injured by becoming dry, and that most plants are benefited. But once dry, they must immediately be watered again, lest the onset of wilting change quickly to the beginning of dying. So check soil moisture daily in container gardens—but water only when the plants require more water. Whenever the normal buffering action of the great mass of open garden soil is lacking, special watering care may be in order.

Hammock notes. There is a sagging shelf of new garden books to monopolize the gardener's hammock time this spring. One that falls into the class of basic guidebooks is Edwin Steffek's Gardening the Easy Way (Holt, Rinehart & Winston. $3.95). While this book offers no definitive answers in any one field of gardening, it gets the beginner pleasantly started in many fields. The title is a teaser: There are no easy ways—just good ones and bad, pleasant and not so pleasant, successful and unsuccessful. The successful ways arc, of course, the easiest. Jean Hersey's Carefree Gardening (Van Nostrand, $4.95) sounds as if every reader should have one. The author is making a relaxed and pleasant case for informal gardening largely by letting nature take its course (after a well-directed start) on five country acres of field manual to the author's habitat of the subject of Dr. Edgar T. Wherry's new Fern Guide (Doubladay, $3.95), a companion field manual to the author's Wild Flower Guide of a few years ago. Both belong in your knapsack library.

Fourth weekend

Space problems. Trouble in water space is nothing new for gardeners. Laps in the flower borders tend to show up almost with the first flowers of spring. By the end of June, great open spaces are sure to appear unless you take steps to fill them promptly on arrival. The fading of bulb foliage—hyacinths, daffodils, tulips—leaves not empty places in the garden but messy places. Yet for the sake of next spring's flowers, the leaves must remain, uncut, until they have finished contributing to the formation of new bulbs below ground. The perennial question is how to conceal the yellowing bulb leaves and offset the loss of early flowers. Here are four good answers—perennials that leaf out late but handsomely each year, that flower nicely and that last for years. Aquilegia, to follow the alphabet, is the friendly columbine, with or without spurs, in plain colors or crazy-quilt combinations. Try the new McKana's Giant strain. Astilbe, an old-fashioned fern-leaved perennial that sends up foamy spires of white in early summer (and later) is a wonderful ground monopolizer without being really greedy. Di- centra is simply the familiar bleeding-heart—use the continuously flowering D. eximia varieties that bloom all summer in sun or shade. Hosta, the plantain-lily, is the space filler to end space fillers (see story that begins on page 138.)

Sunday note. One last, quick, welcome suggestion for gardeners whose happy task it is to provide flowers for the church altar: Arranging Flowers for the Sanctuary (Harper, $3.50) by Frances Pat- tison-Knight and Margaret Mc- Reynolds St. Claire. This is a splendid book that gives you the rare kind of hoped-for help promised by the title.

The easy, sure way to have lovelier flowers, a finer lawn, real comfort out of doors!

Spraying can do wonders! It can help you enjoy beautiful and healthy flowers, shrubs and trees—a lovely weed-free lawn—unblemished fruit and vegetables—outdoor living without annoying pests. But for best control of pests, disease and weeds, you must use the right equipment, the right methods. With a Hudson Sprayer you can do the job right because you—

Put pesticide right where needed. Nozzle adjusts to spray under leaves (where so many pests hide) as well as on top of leaves. The sprayer goes wherever you can go—without dragging a hose.

Apply just the right dose. You can apply pesticides just as recom- mended—exactly what's needed, no more, no less, without waste.

Control pressure and spray pattern—apply a gentle fog, or a coarse penetrating spray or stream—close-up or long range!

Save two ways! Precision spraying uses less pesticide. And Hudson products are built to last, to serve long at low cost.

See these and many more at your Hudson dealer!
There is little similarity in the way garden iris and oriental poppies grow. They are alike only in their contribution to the hardy mid-spring border and their tolerance of each other’s seasonal flamboyance. Iris rhizomes are bought and planted from mid-summer to early fall. They grow best in a light, somewhat sandy loam of indifferent fertility. Each rhizome produces one good leaf fan per year and one tall flower stalk. After flowering, two new rhizomes are usually formed at the sides of the old one. New leaf fans will precede a flower stalk the following year; old rhizomes will never flower again, becoming unproductive space-wasters. So iris clumps (they quickly form clumps) should be divided every three or four years at most.

Oriental poppies, on the other hand, form a huge, virtually ageless, fleshy root—shaped something like a dinosaur’s molar. From this white storage reservoir, which may be planted spring or fall, rise tufts of fuzzy five-cut leaves each fall. These remain green all winter (as do iris fans, for that matter) and in May throw up tall hairy flower stalks with massive oval buds as big as golf balls. After flowering, the stalks and the foliage die completely away and by the end of July no trace of the poppy remains above ground. Then in August the new leaf clump emerges and the cycle begins again. Each year the leaf mound swells and broadens; each May the flower stalks become more numerous (you may get up to twenty per clump). If you have a good variety to begin with, then each year the reoccurring bloom will seem more beautiful. Dividing a poppy is a matter of making new plants from pieces of the old root. Two-inch lengths, set an inch or so deep and at an oblique angle in moist sand or a vermiculite-perlite mixture in a sheltered frame, will make new plants identical with the old. Make your cuttings in summer and place so that the “top” end is slightly above the lower. The list of new iris varieties embraces from a dozen outstanding introductions to fifty acceptable ones each year. The color range is enormous, with pinks continuing to attract attention and blues always in demand. To hail the poppy pickings are lean—very lean. From this garden, delphiniums also appear at right.

OUT, so that the cook on duty can prepare meals and still participate directly in family activities. If space is at a premium, sleeping quarters can be minimized and bunk beds incorporated.

Is it necessary to sacrifice personal privacy in a modest vacation house?

Space limitations usually necessitate giving over a disproportionate amount of space to the living areas, at the expense of some privacy in the sleeping areas, But your house should not be so commonly planned that it does not permit some separation of adults and children. Remember, there will be rainy days in the summertimes, and you should be able to retreat to a small bed-sitting room on bleak afternoons when the children have been driven indoors by the elements.

How much equipment should a vacation house have?

This is purely a question of personal values—and means. To many, a vacation house represents an opportunity to get away from it all, to eliminate the complexities of daily routine and reduce living to its essentials. Others are equally determined to incorporate most of the everyday comforts and conveniences in a vacation house. If you insist on central heating and a full complement of appliances, then you must reckon with a budget that will make your second house almost as costly as a conventional one.

Both for practical and esthetic reasons, Mr. Ashley believes a fireplace is a sound vacation house investment. A good cracking fire not only enhances your sense of pleasure but also enables you to occupy the house many additional weeks in the spring and fall.

Shouldn’t a vacation house be easier to build than a year-round house?

Not always. The ideal site for a vacation house is often very remote from the first-class services and conveniences you take for granted in everyday living. Skilled workmen may be hard to find in undeveloped mountain and seaside regions. Delivery of materials and equipment is less predictable, and it may be more difficult to bring the essential utilities—gas, electricity and water—to an isolated site.

How much less should a vacation house cost than a year-round house?

The cost per square foot can be greatly reduced—by as much as 50 per cent—if you are willing to do without heating, insulation, elaborately detailed interiors and expensive equipment.

Since vacation houses aren't used full-time, can the construction costs be reduced by using cheaper materials?

Simple materials, yes; cheaper materials, no. As architects Ashley and Nims both point out, a vacation house becomes a self-defeating project if it requires constant maintenance, replacements and repairs. The main virtue of a second house is the opportunity it provides for enjoying a second, more relaxed and carefree way of living. Whether you build at the seaside or in the mountains, choose good materials—metals that won't rust or corrode, woods that are least likely to warp or rot, wall finishes that won't peel, chip or scale.

What can be done to minimize maintenance?

Reduced to its essentials, as Mr. Nims sees it, a vacation house should be a retreat where the family can relax and enjoy three important vacation-time pleasures—eating, sleeping and playing. Whether or not your vacation values can be so succinctly stated, there are many ways you can reduce your maintenance, indoors and outdoors.

INDOORS

1. Choose structural materials that can also serve as finish materials. In most cases they will look better when left in their natural state, and upkeep will be reduced. Mr. Nims suggests that some interior walls might be left unfinished and the studs used to support floor-to-ceiling wall shelves.

2. Plan king-size indoor storage, since vacation houses have a way of attracting awesome accumulations of family impediments and recreational gear. In a vacation house, far more than in a year-round house, the guiding philosophy for daily housekeeping is, "out of sight, out of mind."

3. Eliminate moldings and other dust-catching frills that add nothing to the house itself or to your informal vacation mood.

4. Incorporate built-in furniture and equipment. They may increase your initial cost somewhat, but built-ins will reduce your daily housekeeping chores and discourage clutter.

OUTDOORS

1. Unless you are a family of passionate gardeners, landscape your site with plant materials that thrive without constant attention. Even the dedicated gardener ranks pushing a lawn mower as his least favorite pastime, so keep grassy areas down to manageable size.

2. Give special thought to outdoor storage. You may need as much of it as you have in your year-round house, since your living doubts will be oriented to outdoor recreation, dining and entertaining—all of which will intensify your vacation house storage needs.

HOW TO OWN A POOL

one floodlight high in a tree will provide all the light you need at much less expense.

Our experience has taught us that it pays to buy the best equipment possible, from pipes to brushes. Follow pool-care instructions to the letter, and be sure that one person (in the family or not) is regularly responsible for each aspect of the job, with no chance for claiming, "It wasn't my turn."

Never let anyone not in the family or not in the household turn the valves—even if the little boys do want to play space ship. You may find yourself hitting bottom, literally, as you discover that water is running out even while you are putting it in.

We do not mean to dampen the enthusiasm of potential or new pool owners. We are merely reporting the unfiltered truth. Had we known about some of these problems beforehand, we might have avoided them.

We love our pools. Our children love our pools. Our friends love our pools. Our pools have added a great deal of enjoyment to our lives. But a few rules and regulations have made all the difference between suffering with problems and swimming with pleasure.
You can make something special of a plain shade with fabric appliqués or a few strokes of paint.
In an Early American bedroom, shades with painted motifs are coupled with café curtains to give flexible light control, flexible devices for privacy. The shade motifs are simplified versions of the hawthorn flowers that decorate the painted blanket chest; the pulls are brass harness medallions. The curtains with tiny all-over pattern make good partners for the plain white shades with their large single motifs.

A decorative pull is the finishing touch that raises a shade with style

A window shade pull may seem a small matter, but it is almost always in the spotlight. This fact gives you a chance to silhouette a pretty shape against the light or to use a sparkling, light-reflecting bit of whimsy that will sway in the breeze like a small mobile. Any small object can function as a shade pull as long as it is not fragile and has some means of attachment to an appropriate cord. Here is a quartet of happy possibilities.

1. Brass butterfly perched on edge of window shade owes its poise to a little screw in back which is inserted through wood slat in shade hem. Butterfly is 2½" wide, would be a particularly attractive complement to a tailored shade such as the one it clings to here: a plain white shade by Illinois Shade Cloth Co. banded with a 3" strip of Imperial fabric wallcovering.

2. Self-satisfied feline of white-painted wood, 2½" tall, has leather tail that links it to shade, perhaps for a child's room.

3. The largest (5" tall) of a set of Japanese wooden kokeshi dolls could be attached to a kitchen shade perhaps, by means of woven cords in its hat plus epoxy glue. (Make a child a gift of four smaller dolls in set.)

4. Crystal pendant would be a sparkling addition to a translucent shade or any decorative shade of comparable finesse. Wire in top makes it easy to attach.
