The heavy heat is coming.
The heavy heat and humidity that drags you down during the day. And then turns your nights into nightmares.
Get away from it all. Away to a place where the days are deliciously cool and comfortable. Where the nights are delightful for sleeping.
Get away to your own cool, little island of comfort with Rheem Central Air Conditioning.
It can be 100 in the shade outside, but Rheem will keep your house cool.
Keep the kids from getting cranky. Keep you feeling like cooking, and getting a lot more done.
Rheem cools every room evenly, steadily. And it cools with the quiet sound of quality.
Rheem gives you a lot of choices in comfort. For example, consider the Imperial model for super-capacity, super-quiet cooling. Or perhaps, the less expensive, but equally impressive Corsaire.
If the central air conditioning you already have is run down, think about a new Rheemaire replacement. It can save you up to 40% in operating costs.
Whichever model you choose, you can add Rheem Central Air Conditioning to most heating systems easily, and quite inexpensively.
See about central air conditioning soon.

Seven great ways to bring the outdoors in

The outdoors is what makes the indoors so great. And bringing the outdoors in is where glass comes in. Glass opens up your rooms. Lets the sunshine in. Keeps the weather out. Rooms become part of the total landscape.

Today’s new glass gives you all this. Plus beauty, safety, weather-beating insulation and reduced fuel bills.

Here are just a few ideas for decorating and living now with glass. Look at how great outdoors steps right in to make the indoors scene the greatest.

Why not look into glass for your new home or remodeling plans.

PPG: a Concern for the Future

1. This kitchen has a sunny disposition because the cabinets are positioned to hang in front of the sunlit glass wall. Beautiful idea, and in cold climates, PPG Twindow™ insulating glass makes it even more practical.

2. The garden bath, which uses a picture window overlooking a private court, lets you bathe in Roman splendor, but in privacy. And in an area like this, PPG Herculet™ K safety glass lets you move about in safety.

3. Mirrored wardrobe doors introduce glamour, a feeling of spaciousness, more light and beauty, practicality to the master bedroom. And to give the finest reflection to this idea, use PPG High-Fidelity mirrors. In standard 5 ft. size, a pair of mirrored wardrobe doors normally retail for less than $100.

4. Now the outlook for kitchens can be exciting as well as practical. Sliding glass windows with a wrap-around, pass-through serving counter make this kitchen and the great outdoors one big happy...
Who says attics are dull, dark and dismal places. Gable end windows in this colonial create a cheerful upstairs rumpus room.

A two-story fixed-glass window wall overlooking a private court gives this dining area light, excitement and a real outdoors flavor.

Here's leisure living in the up-dated sun porch. PPG Herculite K safety glass in glass walls and sliding glass doors makes an idea like this possible, practical and safe.

Checking out the guest room

By William Baldwin

Often, when I stay at a friend's house overnight or for the weekend, the hostess says to me, "I hope the room is comfortable." I suppose she thinks her words are a sweet benediction, but they fill me with anxiety. Because then I know she hasn't tried the guest room herself.

Trial-run weekend

The guest room should be just as comfortable as your own bedroom, and the only way you can be sure of it is to move in yourself for a trial weekend. Then you'll notice that all the drawers are full of extra blankets or last year's Christmas decorations, or that the light bulb needs replacing, or that the most recent magazine in the room is dated 1958. If the guest is to be a man, have your husband perform the trial run. I can't tell you how often I find guest-room closets full of lovely tasseled satin hangers — and not a single place to hang a pair of trousers.

If two people are to share a room, I think you should provide them with separate reading lights, individually controlled, with beams that concentrate on the books. Chances are one will want to go to sleep just when the other is getting to the good part. I think each guest should have his own bedside table, too, uncluttered by little paperweights and bunches of flowers. It's so much nicer, anyway, to wake up in the morning and see the flowers on a table across the room. And a vacant bedside table to put your own things on is much more appreciated than paperweights. A hostess can provide a thermos of ice water and a glass, and, in a drawer, tissues. If the table is small, the reading light can be hung above it on the wall. You can have a switch inserted in the cord at a point easy to reach, even in the dark, by someone lying in bed.

A lived-in look

The most unforgettable guest room I've slept in was so comfortable and full of thoughtfulness it looked as if it were occupied permanently. In a window, for instance, was a lovely writing table with a chair, so you could write letters by the morning light. On the table was pretty writing paper and very good pens — not worn-down pencils stuck carelessly in a drawer. On the end of a sofa was a wonderful afghan, and on tables potted flowers that were changed every other day. I found a few new books, current magazines, and every morning, the paper.

There are many things that too should be considered concerning your bathrooms. One bathroom trend is for a single hook near the toilet. Often it is convenient to use the same hook for a towel and a handbag. If this is done, the next morning the hostess will have to remove your pajamas to constant on and straighten your tie. Other guest bathroom considerations: Is the light strong enough for shaving or making-up? Is there instant hot water in unlimited supply? For the guest, a shelf near one of the washstands is handy. There are many small items that guests bring: shaving cream, a hairbrush, toothpaste, and more. A hamper for used towels, a wastebasket impervious to such things as cotton soaked in nail-polish remover or creams? If the bathroom is large, it’s lovelv to have a slipper chair, which is very often covered in preshrunk Turkish toweling bought by the yard. But be sure to have a duplicate slipcover made so one can always have a fresh. A soiled terry-cloth cover is just as unappealing as a dirty towel.

The medicine cabinet, too, should be as well-equipped as your own: plenty of Band-Aids, aspirin, Seltzer, extra toothbrushes and paste, bobby pins, shower caps, razor blades, tissues, hair spray, and air spray, and a fresh bar of soap.
Not only is it a great kindness to provide these for your guest, it also avoids unhappiness if he’s too polite or too shy to ask for something he’s forgotten—and your embarrassment if he makes a great performance of going down to Main Street to shop.

Housekeeping must go on throughout your guest’s stay.
If the chair cover shows the slightest sign of soil, it should be changed and laundered. Towels must be collected and a fresh supply installed. You should also check to see what has been used up, exchanging soap scraps and twisted toothpaste tubes for fresh plump ones. A no-maintenance touch: potted plants in place of a vase of flowers.

Naturally the guest must bear some of the responsibility for keeping the room attractive. I don’t like things to look out of place anywhere, and I would never want anyone picking up after me just because I was away from home. You can be considerate, too, about your hosts’ family life. For me breakfast is a cup of coffee and a slice of toast. If I can have them in my room while I write a letter or read the morning paper my day begins just right—and my host and hostess get another hour to themselves. Everyone, host and guest alike, welcomes privacy.

Want to learn what modern psychology has learned about people? Including you?

Certainly, that was quite an order. Your choice would have been to plow professional journals. Read weighty new books as quickly as they hit. Or trust the mass media—where psychology is often sensationalized, oversimplified.

PSYCHOLOGY TODAY has changed all that. It allows the educated layman to keep up with the social sciences. And keep up. With full coverage of all different approaches to understanding the human condition. The view—range from hard-core Freudianism to the newer behaviorists who think Freud was all wet.

Psychology the way you'd want it to be presented. Excitingly. Without jargon. No cliche-ridden definitions. And with contributions by many of the most famous names in the behavioral sciences—like Bruno Bettelheim, B. Clark, Rollo May, Ashley Montagu, Carl Rogers and B. F. Skinner.

AN ARCHITECT SPEAKS HIS MIND

Once creative modular elements are mass-produced, we can have more imaginative living environments, says Myron Goldfinger

BY ANNE STAGG

MYRON GOLDFINGER, thirty-seven, studied architecture at the University of Pennsylvania. He has his own practice in New York and also teaches at Pratt Institute. In 1965, he received a travel grant from the Ford Foundation and the banner award of the Architectural League of New York, both of which enabled him to go to the Mediterranean to study village architecture. His travels resulted in a book, Villages in the Sun, as well as interest in modular ways of building, which culminated in his own house, page 76.

You have said that the architecture of Mediterranean villages has influenced your work. Would you explain this more fully?

When I went to Europe for the first time after school, I traveled to all the major centers and saw all the significant renaissance architecture. But while traveling around the countryside, I kept seeing interesting modular units. I found myself becoming much more cited by this village architect than by Gothic cathedrals, or Roman temp. On later trips, I explored whole Mediterranean basin in Europe and North Africa and discovered inspiring village which have evolved from a modular system of building.

I consider these village contained communities similar in size and scale to our suburban towns or urban neighborhoods. They have develop organically due to sound economical use of materials labor, and they have grow from the repetitive use of simple forms.

For instance, in Italy, modular building blocks began isolated farmhouses but we linked up over a period of time to form a complete village. In Tunisia, barrel-vaulted living and storage houses are stacked four and five stories tall by the addition of similar units if needed.

The important fact about all vernacular architecture when this additive type of building develops is that the building never look awkward or dis proportionate as they grow. That what I've tried to achieve in my own modular system that when one adds on additional units they become a more complex statement of the original design with complete unity at each stage.

People are sometimes critical of modular building systems because they feel it does not offer individuality. What do you feel?

One of the things I've worked hardest to achieve with my system is individuality and variety, and I'm really very critical of people to have a sense of individuality. A good modular system should offer variety and distinction in each individual structure yet with the continuity of overall architectural design. Why?

If each structure is uniquely personal, you would never feel you're in the same house in four places.

In the housing we are now producing—whether in an apartment in a luxury building or in a low-cost development—we find the same uniform things: ceilings only 8 feet high, poor quality of workmanship, and particularly limited experiences for living. I feel once creative modular elements are mass-produced, we should be able to build excellent housing.

Do you feel that modular building systems can improve the present housing problems?

This is the direction for new mass building, because skilled labor is getting scarce and costs are rising. But I'm afraid the kind of building techniques suggested by Habitat could tremendously reduce the labor and cost of building.

There's also a tremendous saving in materials with this kind of building system. Materials can be ordered in bulk rather than piecemeal. There's a necessity for a much more rapid building program and you can't accomplish this with a slow, handcrafted building system.

I think the government and private industry are finally awakening to this fact. Architects should concentrate their efforts on exciting things with spaces while trying to keep their costs moderate, and develop systems for living. How do you go about designing a house for a new client? And what makes a good client?

I prefer a new client who understands the kind of work I produce and sees in the things I do for other people something he feels confident about.

I have to find out as much as I can about my client's patterns of living. First I ask a new client to make a list of the things he wants to have—the things he cannot do without, the things he would like to have but that are not entirely crucial, and the things that are purely luxuries. I then place these priorities in the context of a house.

I don't restrict or dictate what people should do in my houses, although I do attempt to guide them in the selection of furnishings. I particularly feel that in the modular spaces I create, different kinds of furniture and ways of life can exist. Most important, I want to create within an ordered framework a rich variety of forms and spaces that will serve and inspire the people who live in them.

THOUGHTS FOR THE HOSTESS

Mary Snow Hemingway

Welsh breakfasts (or any breakfasts which include imaginative breakfasts) are not the routine meals that they appear to be. But provide a second breakfast. A continental-style, a Goliath and a minimal amount of money. No need to complicate the diet too much. Allow extra time for the anticipated. A practical answer: capacious trays set up the night before, prettied up with individual posies. Let everyone eat where they choose; on their heads with the newspapers on the table in the sun, back in bed, on the sofa or porch, in a corner. With hot fries and electrical appliances you can set up a complete cooking plan and that would include beehive waffles.

But dishes that keep: childhood truffled, hard-cooked whites bathed in a rich brown powder, and simmered in sour cream. Breakfast Set off with crescent rolls, baked in crescent roll dough; scrapple with hominy grits; ham or ham and pumpkin, limits to which can be bound, sliced, baked, and served in the morning. Breakfast Set off with cinnamon scones, dusted with cinnamon and served with honey; tiny lamb chops to be eaten with the fingers.

Breakfast sandwiches are a very tidy way of offering a generous collation with a minimum of bother: ham between halves of baking powder biscuits; oatmeal bread, sweet butter and marmalade; chicken liver-filled brioches; Dutch-style, bland cheese on buttered dark bread; bacon and cream cheese. Offer a wide choice.

Cooked to go: Self-service waffles are fun. Have a variety of butters—sourdough, rice, cornmeal, bacon, buckwheat, oatmeal, orange, blueberry—ready in dripless pitchers or tureens with ladles. Add an assortment of syrups, toppings, and flavored butters such as maple sugar beaten into sweet butter or cinnamon, lemon, or ginger butters.

A fancy of fruits in combinations or treated to a surprising turn can spark a whole breakfast. For instance: ruby wonder (cherries cum raspberries cum strawberries cum currants when in season): honeydew dusted with sugar and powdered ginger; cantaloupe with pineapple chunks and mint; pitted prunes and dried apricots simmered in undiluted, frozen orange juice, then chilled; pears and greengage plums sprinkled with coriander seed; dried figs soaked in sherry overnight, then mixed with fresh apple quarters; honey-glazed baked apples with yogurt.

Juice can be just that or something special: orange juice blended with strawberries: fresh pineapple juice made in the blender; grapefruit, lemon, and orange slightly sweetened with brown sugar. Unbelievable but unbelievably good: very cold tomato-vegetable juice half-and-half with stone cold beer.

DEAS OR STREET-SIDE PLANTING

BY JAMES FANNING

How to turn a no man’s land into a beauty spot

The strip of ground between your front yard and the paved street is actually a sort of no man’s land, and all too often it’s just what it looks like. Likely this strip is public property and part of the right of way for the street. It comes within the domain of the local highway department but, since highway work crews are equipped mainly to deal with the pavement, maintenance for this part of their area usually gets short shrift. At the same time, every homeowner automatically assumes squatter’s rights on this strip. First the revetment unavoidably crosses it. Then there is the name sign and, if you’re in an RFD area, a mailbox. All are private property but located on public property. So, since you have already reached the public domain, why not finish the job and consider the whole strip worth the time and effort it takes to make it a real asset for the neighborhood? Here is a place where you can start a beautification drive on your own.

Flying in the face of tradition is often the best way to get really spectacular results, so why not reverse the usual practice of planting a flower border inside your property line? After all, the family does not spend very much time looking out toward the street. People passing by, however, invariably look in toward the house and are in the best position to appreciate a flower bed placed outside the line. Confronted by a display of delphiniums, chrysanthemums, or what have you, the passerby will hardly be able to resist the invitation to slow down, admire the flowers, and decide that this must be a neighborhood worth living in.

Of course there may be special conditions in this strip between your property and the road. One of the most irksome of these is an erosion-prone slope. Letting mud wash down onto sidewalk or street every time it rains does no good whatever to either the adjoining property or the neighborhood as a whole. Planting erosion-halting plants is the best solution here, so long as the plants are carefully selected to do what they’re supposed to do and are carefully nursed along until they become established. Crown vetch has proved its value as an erosion preventer. In addition to its soil-holding qualities, it has a handsome feathery appearance and pretty pink flowers for a good part of the summer. Its one drawback is that it needs a lot of sunlight. On a shady slope Japanese honeysuckle is almost the only plant that will do the job. Of course this plant rates as a serious pest if it gets out of control, so before planting it make sure that it can be kept within the bounds of its area.

Behind the no man’s land strip where your property actually begins is the best place for a really eye-stopping display. This property line is usually marked by a fence, wall, or hedge, and one of the musts for a well-kept neighborhood is keeping this boundary marker in tip-top condition. Climbing roses on the fence or wisteria dripping over the top of a stone wall are lovely in season but don’t forget there’s a lot of the year when they’re not in season. So the fence or wall has to be attractive in itself; well-built, well-maintained, and always ready to bear a fast but critical inspection.

Hedges seem doomed to bear the burden of screening whenever that may be necessary along the street-side line. This is usually just a matter of economy, since a hedge high enough to provide screening is a great deal less expensive than a wall or fence of the same height. Hedges have the possibility of failure, though. They may develop gaps in embarrassing places or a generally ragged look that is a far remove from the attractive front you are trying to present. The solution, again, is maintenance. Careful pruning, feeding, and replacement when necessary are as important for a hedge as pruning or staining is to a fence.

Attractive street-side planting in front of one home pretty much forces the neighbors on either side to spruce up their frontages, too. They may grumble about it, but personal pride and the spirit of friendly competition will prevail in bringing about a general upgrading of the neighborhood. This spirit of competition can be turned into one of neighborhood cooperation. If one of a group of neighbors decides that the whole street as well as his own property would benefit if it were shaded by a row of trees, he can persuade two or three neighbors that they would like to have it that way, too. This starts the ball rolling, a committee is organized, and the tree planting is done—next time planting time comes around.

Of course A could simply have planted a tree or two of his own and left it to neighbors B and C to follow suit, but the effect would have been ragged and uneven, and when you’re lining a street with trees the effect is lost unless there is continuity. The civic government has to be considered, too, since the land where the trees are planted is actually public property. Here again a committee carries a great deal more weight than a single family acting on its own. Not that civic authorities are opposed to street tree planting. They are usually all too provided they do not have to pay for the trees out of always insufficient budgets, and provided the normal operations of highway and parks department crews are not inter-

SOME NOTES ON GOOD LOOKS & GOOD HEALTH

BY REBECCA WARFIELD

THE YOU NOBODY SEES

You can't see some people for their attitudes. And frequently these are the very people who are just an excuse or so away from being Great Looking. Funny how they'd rather ride behind some stubborn position than come out front and take their rightful place in the sun. They hang on heedlessly as though these Attitudes were Sacred Truth, when often they are grave misconceptions or even Black Lies and certainly self-fulfilling prophecies. Here—in case any of them are listening—is a look through some of the blind stands that keep slamming the door on their best possibilities, and the answers they might wait around to hear....

THE SMALLER THAN LIFE ATTITUDE

1. I'm tall, so it takes a lot of food to fill me up.
2. My bones weigh too much.
3. Skip one meal and I get a raging headache.
4. My doctor doesn't approve of diets.
5. My husband doesn't approve of diets.

1. Many models are 6 feet tall and wear size six and many basketball players are 8 feet tall and skinny as rails—plenty of fuel for them in a few calories. 2. The kinetic lady who invented Weight Watchers knocked that fallacy dead some time ago by saying loud and clear that it's not pounds of bones that tip the scales, it's pounds of flesh. 3. Your system cries out against a change of pace but that doesn't mean it always will. In the Doctor's Quick Weight Loss and most Macrobiotic diets, dieters are warned to expect one big headache—not a bad price for one new figure. (No headaches from such tasty meal substitutes as Carnation Instant Slender which has, incidentally, yielded to the coffee-flavor freaks and added coffee to the menu in certain fan cities only—Baltimore, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Boston, and New York.) 4 and 5. Black Lies.

chemical tour de force that looks like soap, feels like soap, but isn’t soap. It’s a collection of good things that are non-drying and leave a protective guard on your skin. 2. A soft skin, fed by moisture, is just as necessary esthetically as flowered bed linen, but you don’t have to make the choice—many night creams disappear before they hit the pillows. Not the rich ones? Even the lavishly gifted ones. For instance, Helena Rubinstein’s Skin Life Cream, packed with natural herbs, races to where it’s going—down deep—and sinks without a trace. 3. The direst misconception—since skin can’t breathe and if you’ll think a moment you’ll realize why—it hasn’t any lungs. But its life needs are definite—oil, water, and considerate protection from wind, sun, and air pollution. And a fine foundation is one of the finest possible protections—possible, particularly when it’s underlined with moisturizer. A trick that has been taken up widely among the Knowing the last five years. One of Society’s Pets—Clinique’s brilliantly designed, Dramatically Different Moisturizing Lotion.

THE HOLIER THAN MAKE-UP ATTITUDE

1. No one wears rouge.
2. Eyelashes? Too much trouble and too much time.

1. No one doesn’t wear rouge. A savvy young editor, Stephanie Gersten, wears three shades at once. Another one, Susan Harvey, pours rouge around her eyes, all over her nose, on her chin tip to make her glow.
2. Not half as much time as a really thorough mascara-ing. So Right On with Andrea’s zippy, cinchy Wash and Wear Lashes. Divine with a tan, they actually give eyes to certain faces.

THE ALLERGIC TO EXERCISE ATTITUDE

1. Dieting’s really the whole answer.
2. I walk a lot instead.
3. I’ve never seen any spectacular results from exercise.

1. Misconception. Dieting doesn’t know where you need to lose, exercise does.
2. Walking is only an exercise if you walk at a smart clip, and cover at least 2 miles.
3. Maybe you haven’t been spectacularly oriented. This spring a New York editor who was already on the slim side sped to Elizabeth Arden’s super spa Maine Chance in Arizona, squeezed in four exercise classes a day, and returned with a waistline a spectacular 4 inches smaller. Seriously.

THE SUN’S A DOCTOR SYNDROME

Make no mistake about it, the sun shines down disaster on all of us. The best thing in life is protection, protection, protection. It can shine down skin cancer on some, first degree burns on others, and wrinkles and dryness fall everywhere from the sun-filled air. You can fight all this with any of the vast variety of defensive measures, but most particularly one with a deep well of moisture in it. Moisture drenches Vanda’s new Vandatone in its stylish canary container... moisture is outstanding in Coppertone’s Rolls Roycey Royal Blend that holds seven different kinds of mois...

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

ANTIIQUES

BY LOUISE ADE ROGER

DAVENPORT DESK

My mother bought this desk about forty years ago at an auction in British Columbia. She said it is called a "Captain's Desk" because, compact and solid, it suited a captain's cabin on a rolling ship. I would appreciate anything you can tell me about the history of these desks and where mine comes from.

D.L.—Portland, Ore.

Your small writing table with a sloping top desk above a case of drawers is called a "Davenport." Presumably the name derives from one Captain Davenport who ordered a desk of this type from an English cabinetmaking firm in the late eighteenth century. Judging from your snapshot, your "Davenport" is also of English manufacture, probably dating from around 1870-1880.

CONTROVERSIAL STATUE

I am enclosing a photograph of my bronze statue which is approximately 2 feet high. On its base over other marks is the name "Houdon." Can you give me any information about the statue?

J.C. — Memphis, Tenn.

Your statue is a commercial copy, probably late nineteenth century, of "Diana" by the French sculptor Jean-Antoine Houdon (1741-1828). It is interesting to note that the original was refused by the jury for the exhibition at the Salon of 1781 because they alleged that a statue of Diana must be draped. However a bronze reproduction of the statue is now in the Louvre in Paris.

NEO-GOTHIC CHAIRS

Can you please tell us the style, age, and possibly the origin of this pair of chairs?

L.B.—Escondido, Calif.

Your chairs in the Gothic Revival or Neo-Gothic style most likely date from about the second quarter of the nineteenth century. The backs are a fantastic Gothic creation and are the work of an accomplished carver. Certain features, such as the intricacy of the carving, suggest European origin.
Let's clear up the confusion about one of our most copied carpets...Bengali. There's only one genuine Bengali.

Bengali isn't merely a design. It's a quality.

It's the way this magnificent design is created...hand-woven in India, by our master weavers whose skill goes back for two and three generations.

It's the yarns and dyes that go into its creation...luxurious, long-staple woolen yarns...and the finest true-color chrome dyes a carpet can know.

Just copying our design doesn't make a Bengali.

That's surface stuff.

And Bengali goes far beyond the surface to bring ancient Ming design to life. It gives Ming meaning.

See Bengali at a fine store near you. You'll know it's genuine by the label and by the gold-and-black medallion it bears.

A gardener speaks his mind

Keeping the earth in good health

By William B. Harris

Keeping the fertility of a garden at optimum year after year is not merely a question of regular fertilization, for the fertilizers gardeners use are not in forms that a respectable root would think of absorbing. If soil bacteria, which change inorganic chemicals into usable organic compounds, are not present in sufficient numbers, the fertilizer just sits in the soil; the plants grow in a lackluster fashion, their resistance to disease and rampaging insects noticeably reduced. Of course you can't count bacteria, but you can, as all gardeners know, do something about humus, the stuff these hundreds of trillions (now there's a number) of bacteria feed upon. You add humus to build up the bacteria population, which works best in a slightly acid soil. (If you think you need a soil test, send a small sample—a sliver off the side of a hole dug with a trowel to the subsoil—to your state agricultural college.) It's obvious that almost all gardeners, even those who have just started to read about gardening,

Am I too far out for you? Then what are you waiting for? If you are a gardener, you know that soil without humus is subsoil (mineral soil), and that humus, which is decomposing vegetable matter, is what makes topsoil of mineral soil. A couple of years ago I started wondering if gardeners added humus to their borders every year—or every other year, or five years, or ever. So in talking to gardeners informally I've made a habit of asking and can report that very few do so with any regularity.

Their reasons seem good enough. They can't get pure humus except in little bags priced close to gold. Compost is a chore to make under today's labor conditions. Since very few people keep a cow around for milk these days, and good farmers now recognize that manure is worth more to them than dollars (an idea that is positively un-American), well-rotted cow manure is difficult to obtain and the dried form is expensive. Fortunately, I know enough "bad" farmers to keep erratically supplied and I suggest that my fellow gardeners seek them out. With the comeback of the equestrian horse, however, there is considerable horse manure around, which often may be had for the carting. It's a bit more difficult to age because if piled by itself it heats and burns. So sandwich it thinly between layers of earth.

Pure humus, the black stuff in little bags, is dug out of bags (it's decomposed peatmoss) and there is a surplussupply produced in most sections of the country. Most all nurserymen use it—ask yours his source, and be sure it's good. Call or write. If he won't trade with a nurseryman who will, or book in the yellow pages of the telephone book. If powdered, that pure humus can be bought reasonably close to New York City. It costs only $0.90 a yard delivered.

Guess where they were five minutes ago?

Or maybe you'd rather not.

Flies, mosquitoes and roaches are probably the most feared and despised of all insects. And properly so because they are notorious carriers of filth and disease. They really get around. A fly, for example, can visit your garbage pail, the sugar bowl, and the baby's crib all in a matter of seconds. The point is, you can't afford to tolerate these menaces in or around your house. They must be recognized as a serious health hazard.

Over the years, ORTHO® has devoted considerable amounts of time and research to finding the best ways of destroying these pests. Today there's a method and an ORTHO product made specially to do the job around your home. Ask your ORTHO Dealer.

within 24 hours. As the suppliers wouldn’t deliver less than 10 or 12 yards, get a couple of friends to join in the purchase. It’s great stuff and clean to use, although the house won’t think so if you track it in.

Compost, which only comes homemade, is equal in my opinion to old cow manure as a humus source. I also feel that the building of a compost pile is only as hard as the individuais who make it. As you know, compost is made by layering vegetable matter with earth and sprinkling a bit of nitrogen on each layer. Leaves, weeds, tops of plants not infected with fungus, small twigs, garbage that isn’t greasy, sawdust, or what have you on that grows in the sun. If built 1 or 5 feet high, a heap is hard work. There is a lady in a nearby town with a very large garden who builds her compost heaps a neat 3 ft. high, cover them over 2 inches high—and does most of the work herself, although she occasionally cons a weekend guest into doing the job, particularly if he yearns for exercise. She dusts every other layer with a cup of lime and uses a cup of pure nitrogen on the others. The tops of the heaps are nicely dashed to catch the rain, and in dry spells she puts a sprinkler on them. About 75 percent of this compost is ready to use in a year. Her method of screening the compost is ingenious: On a 3-ft.-foot frame made of 2-by-4s, she nails i-j-inch hardware cloth. Now those of us who know anything about Screening anything prop the screen at an angle and throw the rough material off the screen, then throw the part that didn’t go through at the screen again. But not this gal. She blocks up the screen horizontally about a foot from the ground, forks in the raw compost and rakes it back and forth with a hoe. Then she scoops out the unrotted compost with a Hal shovel and puts it on a new heap. When I run into such a highly efficient performance as this, I’m amazed at how much I have yet to learn about the use of the simple tools.

The easiest way to add humus to an established garden is to put an inch of it on the surface. It need not be worked into soil immediately; cultivation, moving or changing plants, or planting them does this satisfactorily in the course of time. Another trick is to dig holes with a trowel to the subsoil between the plants after putting on the humus. Scatter this soil on the surface, then fill the holes with humus. Nearby roots strike into these wells quickly and they also retain a fine amount of moisture.

You will be amazed at the way plants react to this treatment, with or without the wells. They will be noticeably healthier, stand up better—and require much less fertilizer. Try to measure square yards of lawn a light top dressing of humus or compost—work it in so that none is seen on the surface. It will turn the lawn a darker green almost at once, and the patch will grow a bit faster than the grass around it.

The addition of humus to the soil is an important point in the so-called “organic gardening,” that has been heavily promoted and publicized recently in the U.S. This is some-

Bone meal is still being sold as bulb food, but I've suspected for a long time that the stuff, which the slightest breeze usually carries toward me as a foul-smelling white cloud, was not a plant food. It is not expensive when bought in bulk, but it isn't cheap either. Bulbs that I planted with it did no better immediately, or over the years, than those planted without it. This was the basis of my suspicion. Now the scientific fellows say that bone meal, as it is produced today, is worthless as a plant food, although in twenty-five years soil bacteria will break it down to useful form. That seems too long to keep any kind of bacteria at work.

The Dutch have used bone meal for so long that I suppose they are getting those promised twenty-five-year results. About three years ago, however, they added a new feeding wrinkle that they say has produced remarkable results—the addition of sewage sludge to the bulb fields. I have had excellent results with sewage sludge. In preparing a new bed for tulips, for example, we use the Dutch dosage—6 ounces per square yard thoroughly mixed to the full depth of the topsoil. For planting an individual bulb (a daffodil or a tulip) a heaping tablespoon is mixed in the soil at the bottom of the hole. In planting a hill of the things (several in one hole) the same amount is used per bulb. (Crocus, scilla, and the "little" bulbs get a slightly smaller dosage.) In subsequent years sludge is used as a top dressing. I have not noticed in two years of using sewage sludge that the first year's bloom is improved, but second-year results are markedly better—tulip blossoms do not deteriorate in size, as they usually do, and daffodils respond with more large flowers. It seems to make sense to heed these conservative Dutch growers when they tout a new method. In case you want to follow along, you can buy dried sewage sludge by the bag or the box. Any brand of sludge will do— I know of only one brand that is sold nationally.

There is no difference between a gardener and a horticulturist, not from the dictionary meanings of the words, anyway. Gardener comes from the Old High German word, garto, noun enclosed cultivated area or garden, so a gardener tends a garden. Horticulturist is based on two Latin words, hortus, garden, and cultura, to cultivate; so a horticulturist cultivates a garden, too. In America the word gardener has been downgraded to mean menial work in a garden. This is not true in England where gardener is the title of a highly respected worker and a head gardener there is a real professional. Here and in Europe the word horticulture has been taken up by societies, maybe because it seems broader. It is also used by universities, who naturally are partial to Latin. Horticulturist denotes a high degree of professionalism, as does one in a Connecticut town. He is a slight man who moved from Germany with his parents many years ago. He could be kept on the 30-acre estate where he has worked all his working life and still be so lovely that visiting them is a pleasure. He tips his hat to me and calls me mister. I don't wear a hat, but I always call him mister.

NOTES OF A HAPPY

BY MARY ELIZABETH FALTER

I toured the housewares departments the other day trying to find a present for a kitchen shower. Actually there was so much to choose from it took me some time to zero in on a set of kitchen tools—a new line developed by Ekco called "Granny Gourmet." Granny inspired the Early American look to the nicely turned and finished wooden handles, but the gleaming steel working parts are all business. There's a three-tined fork, a dandy slotted spoon, a masher, turners—the works! I was particularly taken with a large stirring spoon that's also a measuring spoon. One-teaspoon to two-tablespoon measurements are clearly marked by rings on the bowl and there is a pouring lip in the side. Every tool was so modestly priced I bought them all.

I'm crazy about the 16-inch plastic cubes we bought to use as little tables on the sun porch. They're cheerful and airy and go beautifully with the plants and our melange of wicker. There's only one little problem: They are hard to clean. Every smudge and smear shows on the slick transparent plastic, and they attract dust like crazy. Early attempts to clean them with the usual materials just made everything smeary, and I was feeling very cross and frustrated when someone told me about Remar, a special cleaning agent for plastic. Used sparingly, it cleans, protects, and provides an anti-static finish that really repels dust. The little tables stay bright much longer now, and I don't wince every time they're touched.

Lee and I went shopping the other day for a child's table and chair set for young Jennifer. We were hoping to find something plain and sturdy with a finish that could take rain if the furniture was used outside. But everything was full of swirls and decals and other cute touches. All that bright varnish and heavy paint wouldn't have filled the bill at all. Then, at the very last store, we found just what we wanted—the new Coltline children's chairs and tables made of heavy molded plastic by the Republic Molding Corporation. Seemingly indestructible, they stack for convenience, you have a choice of fire-engine red or sunny yellow, and everything is washable.

My vote for the most used but most disorderly spot in the house is the cupboard under the sink where all the washing and scouring and polishing preparations live and all the tools that go with them. I gave ours a good cleaning the other day and threw out a lot of obsolete items like the rusty old wire rack on the back of the door that held the scrubbing brush, scouring pads, and dishcloth. After I had emptied the cupboard, I lined it with Rubbermaid shelf-cushion and installed a Rubbermaid clean-up caddy on the door in place of the old rack. I'm particularly pleased with the caddy because it hangs over a little screw-in fixture and lifts right out so you can take it with you when you clean.

"Two years ago we and other summer residents noticed substantial snags and oil slicks on the lake and dead perch along the shores. The local fishing and game club sent out a circulating letter to all the summer people and inspired everyone to take an interest. The main problem was caused by careless campers at one end of the lake. A lot of people who go camping these days don't seem to realize that nature does not provide them with the conveniences they have at home.

They expect a camp ground to be a sort of free motel and bring a tent and a 12-foot boat on top. It's not only the equipment they pull in, but the whole idea of how to enjoy (Continued on page 104)

Paolo Soleri, the Italian-born visionary architect, has created what he calls arcology—architecture in balance with ecology. Plans and models of his arcologies, some of them cities for millions of people, free of cars and green with parks, have been shown in exhibitions around the country. Soleri's ideas are complex—until you see what he has built around his own house in Paradise Valley. Here is architecture molded with respect for nature, with a sensitivity toward earth, sky, flowers, trees. Right: A roof sculptured in concrete leaves a cluster of eucalyptus grow through. Left: A wind tunnel draws breezes onto sunlit patio.

Everyone knows that we time beauty one has if he wants to find joy and happiness.
This is a truism so mechanically repeated that no one bothers even to believe in it or act by it.
And this is because there is no pelling explanation. There is the feeling that beauty is a mor-nal, something to consider when there is a lack of some more serious or weighty thing to do. But it is clear now that we not change our ways if we desire to survive.
The way to great abishing new values is through education. Take the child and try to develop the sensitivity that exists potentially. The first teach-ges naturally, are the parents and the father. My hope is that by acting in a certain way, my children will get something out of it.

Instead of saying that things should be done in a certain way, do it through behavior—enjoying nature, music, growing things, doing things by hand.

Today we are relying more and more on technology. There is an enormous amount of room for gadgetry, to free the individual and the group, to let them choose the activities that are more human—painting, sculpting, gardening, writing poetry. When ex-prience comes naturally, involving your whole person, it is more potant, it hits you harder, chances are that it will be much richer, much more influential, and much more deep-seated because it involves not just the brain, but the body with all the sensitivity the body has.

Free in form, framed by oleanders, Paolo Soleri's swimming pool is a marvelous integration of man's sophistication and nature's simplicity. A dozen tall timbers support the great concrete shade. A NEW NATURE-WATCHING HOUSE

ECOLOGY FOR YOUR OWN BACKYARD
A program for amateur ecologists worked out by experts

BY MARY ROCHE
Since ecology is the relationship between man and his natural environment, it's clear that every time we breathe, we alter the ecology somehow. This happens whether we are shut up in our own kitchens or crossing the Mojave Desert via superhighway. But the bonds between us and nature are apt to seem most real, most significant, when we are tending the soil, urging a seedling to grow, stocking a birdhouse with food, manicuring a lawn or a tree. It's not hard to see that what we do in our gardens will have an effect on the earth, the air, the waters around us. What should we be doing? What can we do in our own backyard to help protect the environment?

No one has yet indicted home gardeners as primary polluters, so there's no reason to start out with a guilty conscience. But there are a number of practices that might well be followed in the interests of a better garden and a better environment. Some of them may not accomplish much more in the total scheme of things than putting you on the side of the angels. But that's always a nice place to be.

Here is a program compiled with the help of several scientific experts, followed by notes concerning some popular misconceptions, points every amateur ecologist ought to be clear about.

1. Plant a tree. Someone has figured out that it takes the oxygen produced by ten average-sized trees to balance in a day's time the average amount of carbon dioxide given off by one automobile. Whither or not this can be proved mathematically, scientists assure us that trees are an excellent aid to anti-pollution efforts. If they shade your house as well, they will help keep it cool, which will help cut down the electric power consumed for air conditioning, which will help decrease the pollution caused by power plants burning fossil fuels. So plant at least one tree down on your summer garden schedule. If you buy it balled-and-burlapped from a nursery, you can plant it right now, or any time before the ground is frost-hardened.

2. Compost your leaves, grass clippings, and other garden trash. Don't burn them, nor send them to the town dump. In many communities, burning yard waste is against the law. You can keep it from becoming an eyesore by enclosing it in a yard or cage built of discarded fencing, perhaps, or slats of redwood.

3. Grow with your fertilizers. "Most amateur gardeners tend to use too much," says Professor David R. Boulding, agronomist at the New York state college at Ithaca. "That's particularly risky with fertilizers containing nitrogen. The excess amount of nitrogen will be taken up by the plants to throw away all that rich potential carbon and fertility. If you've ever built a compost heap, any amateur gardening book will tell you how. But don't let it be an eyesore by putting it in a hole. Compost needs the aeration it gets above ground. You can keep it from becoming an eyesore by enclosing it in a yard or cage built of discarded fencing, perhaps, or slats of redwood."
Open your door to nature

“A flower in a pot truly brings a garden indoors—you see the cycle of life, the wonder of nature.”

There is no time of year when Enid Haupt does not have a garden to work in and enjoy. Her outdoor garden is green. Her flowers, indoors and outdoors, are all portable. In her glass enclosed garden room bursting with color, left, in any room of her house, you see meticulously groomed flowers in portable earthen containers placed precisely where they can grow and look their best. When Mrs. Haupt opened this once dark house to sunshine, and planned the garden, she was editor-in-chief of a magazine. Whatever might have become too time-consuming (flower borders and cutting gardens she had once loved) had to be forsworn. Seasonal cut flowers might have been an answer, but she has come to feel that “flowers indoors lose most everything without the earthiness of pot and foliage.” Her solution can give heart to anyone with a love of the outdoors and a lack of outdoor time. She brought sunshine and water indoors—a skylight and hidden spigot for the garden room, even a drain for easy clean-up just where the center ficus tree “stands lordly” in its deep gray pot. A “tiny border garden” of potted alyssum rings its feet, and a bank of geraniums, some tiered on upturned pots, adds color. For entertaining, Mrs. Haupt had semicircular plywood tables made to fit around the ficus and cut her tablecloths from extra yardage of the upholstery print with pinking shears. She chose a small-scale pattern to act as background for the flowers, but outside Mrs. Haupt likes plain gray furniture for “a panoramic view without distraction.” For her containers, she likes natural terra cotta or gray—“I don’t go in for showy cachepots. I’m terribly definite about things, and nothing must detract from the flowers.” Her begonias, geraniums, even the fuchsia trees under the eaves, were lovingly propagated from greenhouse specimens bought as many as twenty years ago. She gives her indoor plants outdoor holidays every few days because “good air circulation will keep them blooming more beautifully.”
“With pots of flowers and succulents, I can change the garden overnight.”
A serene green garden, a stretch of lawn and trees—surrounding Mrs. Haupt's parquet de Versailles race, opposite page, top. The huge old apple trees were rescued from an abandoned orchard and thrive contained in brick and stone. Pots and changeable pots of sun-loving echeverias, opposite page, stay outdoors in summer, bask indoors in a sunny place during winter months. Above, a border of hardy Japanese holly (Ilex cortenata 'Heller') and thyme thrive in the dappled shade of apple trees. All this once a bleak and treeless expanse with a 6-foot multicolor terrace. Parquet terrace of bluestone and brick by Innocenti-Webel; tree moving and planting by Rosedaie Nurse...
"Each area where you place a plant in a pot should please the plant and please the eye"

Mrs. Haupt decorates, even nearly remolds, with plants. The pink begonias, above, fill spots in the stair railing where she unscrewed metal curlicues she chose not to live with. In the library, left, where she keeps garden and art books, real blossoms mingle with embroidered and painted ones; painting by Jane Pickens Langley. The orchid in her living room, above, is a cymbidium, one of her greenhouse specialties. Here and for the begonia under the Jacques Vilton painting in the hall she broke her rule about terra cotta, used green pots to bring them more into harmony with the painter's colors. A simple back terrace with an espaliered taxus, bottom left, is a facade for “sunning and soaking” indoor plants. Outside her garden room, right, she hangs baskets of fuchsia, fuchsia, fuchsia, and fuchsia on the head of the table and in the solarium and other parts of the house, where they will also enhance the view. "Flowers need love and attention, just like children and grandchildren." Mrs. Haupt has also opened the door to colors for children and adults in a New York hospital in her greenhouse, potting shed, and solarium and delicately dubbed "the garden of Enid."
Starting with morning-glories and ending with a house that seeks the sun and the sky, here are twelve pages devoted to summer living—to turning the outdoors into rooms, rooms into gardens, gardens into works of art; to pools that offer more than swimming; to the kind of entertaining that cools the hottest day, makes any evening enchanting.

A POOLSIDE TERRACE AND A TENT
ADD TWO EXTRA ENTERTAINING
ROOMS TO A VERY SMALL HOUSE

The space and spirit of a tiny dirt-floor barn was transformed because its owners, who spend as much time as possible at the pool, didn't try to fit all the rooms they wanted under one roof. Instead, the main party rooms—a poolside terrace or fair-weather living and dining room, and an Egyptian tent for after-dinner coffee and conversation—were placed outside so Mr. and Mrs. John Gates, Jr., could entertain the friends that "drop in all the time without much fuss." Walled in white lattice but open to the sky, the poolside terrace, right, is the center of activity, day and night. In nice weather, cocktails and dinner may be served by the pool. The twin pavilions designed by Borghini-Baker not only screen the terrace from neighboring houses, they also store garden equipment and, in winter, the summer furniture. The original 23-foot-square barn is now an inviting entrance hall with the Gates's loft bedroom and bath above. Much of the furniture is "odds and ends from our other houses or interesting things we picked up traveling." Beside the fireplace, which Mrs. Gates stripped and then marbelized, is the couple's collection of Canton china. Pitched on the lawn right next to the pool, the exotic, hand appliqued tent, bought in Cairo, is also a favorite place for a quiet afternoon nap. Fur rugs thrown over mattresses cover floor. Pierced brass lamps are from India; the brazier from Beirut. The living room, a new addition, opens wide onto the lawn and pool area forming one continuous flow of space—perfect for large parties. Nine-foot-high French doors that Mrs. Gates salvaged from an old house are spaced around the room, bringing the outdoors right inside. The walls throughout are plain 2-by-4 white painted wood planks that have weathered so cooperatively they look as if they've always been there. The floor, put in by Mrs. Gates, two friends, and a handyman, is "new and used brick" brushed all over with gray mortar to give it the patina of age. Everything—curtains, upholstery fabric, vinyl sofa—requires minimum care. Opposite, insert, new façade of refurbished barn.

LIVING IN A ROOFTOP ROOM
People who live in apartments often have no choice but to move when they want more room. But Mr. and Mrs. Dale Keller, whose apartment was on the top floor of a Hong Kong apartment house, had a different solution. They obtained the rights to the roof above them, built a glass-walled room and garden, and joined them to their living room by a circular stairway punched through the ceiling. The room, which opens onto the garden terrace, is planned for year-round entertaining, has a fireplace at one end, a mini kitchen-bar, and a dining space. Here, the Kellers serve cocktails, give outdoor lunches, or bring guests for after-dinner coffee. The big tiled terrace, left, looking to a mountain on one side and to the harbor on the other, surrounds two sides of the room, is used for warm-weather parties, makes a wonderful playyard for the Kellers' two sons. Summer daisies bloom everywhere and the garden, mostly in pots, changes with the season, can be easily rearranged or moved inside. Behind the pool, with its bronze sculpture, is a small brick building, used for storage. The family room is enclosed on two sides by sliding glass doors, which, open, give the feeling of being outdoors, bring a breathtaking view in. Groups of leather sling chairs are arranged for conversation. Facing the harbor view, table and chairs for dining or cards. The ceiling, a series of arches with wooden beams, makes an interesting pattern, gives the feeling of great height. A spiral staircase leads downstairs. Opposite page, above, pottery lions with harbor beyond; below, open panel in roof overhang lets the bamboo, planted in a bronze urn, grow through.
Inspired by anything from the rhythm of moving water to earth symbols of tribal art, these brilliant excursions into color and pattern are the work of Alan Can, a young artist who studied the ancient art of wax-resist dyeing in India. His designs, developed in collaboration with Parish-Hadley Inc., are not at all traditional, but completely his own, all one-of-a-kind, all produced on silk, linen, or cotton. Frame paintings, they make superb wall hangings; unframed, lovely pillow covers. Put together like a mosaic, they can give distinction to almost anything—a screen, a chair "space cot" (lower left hand corner), a wall. Wherever they are used, they bring a room an exotically beautiful splash of color. All available at Parish-Hadley...
1 As sculptured as the Italian urns they grow in, pure white azalea trees sit at measured intervals along the entrance drive to the Alfred Bloomingdale's house in California. Interrupted by no other color, the green and white sweep of cypress trees, an azalea hedge, and a border of sweet alyssum is deliciously cool by day, wonderfully romantic in moonlight. A bronze guardian, an Italian bust broods on an old marble plinth. 2 Flowers that never fade: “Carnations and Butterflies,” a pure cotton chintz tailored into a tablecloth, and “Field Flowers” dinnerware. Fabric at Kent-Bragaline,* porcelain by Ernestine. 3 Decoration and dessert, watermelon that looks as though it had been cut with pinking shears. Main course: chicken curry served in coconut shells, a treat for twenty guests about to lunch on the greenery-fringed loggia of Mr. Pedro Corcuera’s summer house in Acapulco.

Planned for entertaining, the living room, far right, is like a contemporary carved-out barn. An almost 15-foot-high ceiling, half glass, and tall sliding glass doors surround guests with sky—shifting clouds by day, the moon and stars at night. For large parties the doors are pushed back so guests can wander out onto the deck. Everything in the house brings nature in or invites you out—the treetop living room, little gardens, private sun decks. To the most of the beauty of the site, Don Page created a cedar and glass soars through a thicket of pine and plum. The living-room deck circles a forest of freedom.

LIVING IN A HOUSE OPEN TO THE SKIES
Deep in rolling woods in Waccabuc, N.Y., Myron and June Goldfinger's house sits astride a rocky crest challenging the surrounding treetops with its soaring boldness. Covered with stained cedar siding, the house is a forthright composition of tall, uncluttered verticals, sweeping roofs, and jutting decks assembled totally from of three modular units repeated in various combinations throughout the house. The idea for the house came swiftly. "Designing a house for my family, I had absolute for the first time to do exactly what I wanted," recalls architect Goldfinger (for an interview with him, 16). "I'd been interested in modular design time, and I sketched out the basic concept in minutes." Indeed, one of the pleasures of the straightforward clarity of its components way they are assembled.

Mr. Goldfinger came up with is a house standardized, easily built modular parts, an expensive labor. Yet unlike many has an entirely unconfined, unrepetitive space. To achieve this, he designed a volume of interior space, a deck—all of which share, basic dimensions and thus fit in this house, for example, d up four levels to make a for looking the woods. The roof mount, interesting angles.

Materials for the unit prefabricated. "Linked

THREE BASIC ELEMENTS MULTIPLIED ADD UP TO A HOUSE

Five pitched roof sections, twelve units of interior space, and six decks are the total number of modular forms in the house. Interior unit, 15 feet square by 8 feet tall, sets standard of measurement. Roof section is 15 feet square at base, 8 feet tall at one end; placed on top of interior unit, it creates double-height volume inside. 15-foot wide deck fits onto any side of interior unit, sloping side walls continue same angle as roof.
With the results looking complex, various forms are combined in a simple way. On first floor, 1, 16-foot-square interior units make the house and enclose entrance hall room (which opens onto a display area for couple's collection of antique curios. Second floor has only three units in L that embraces a serving area, and dining room. Room, two decks are either forming a bridge to upper level of work studio Goldfinger. Third floor, 3, has two units—master bedroom onto a deck) in one, and closets in the other. For 4—solarium—is only plus a roof module and a deck. are linked by a spiral stairway, modules are placed on top of units wherever one is left by next level. Enlarging house simple—more modules can be added. The Goldfingers envision a guest wing off living room, rooms off master bedroom.

FOUR LEVELS FOR LIVING EVERY ROOM SPILLS INTO THE NEXT
"The whole house is a living room," says Mr. Goldfinger. "We don't believe in a bedroom used only at night or a dining room only for meals. Every room is part of the total space." This joyful merging of space occurs because of giant cutouts in walls between levels so upper spaces become balconies overlooking other levels. In master bedroom, right, you can see every level from the tip down to the ground. On first floor, 1. living room, below left, center, and opposite page, is overlooked by dining room. White walls and Mexican terra-cotta tiled floors, continued throughout house, make a beautiful backdrop for plants, antique curios. Also on first level is Mr. Goldfinger's studio, below right, reached by spiral staircase from balcony. On second level, 2. kitchen is created within two modules. One, above, has preparation, cooking areas; the other, above right, is divided by 5-by-9-foot counter with serving area on one side, laundry on other. Third level, top right, is master bedroom suite, 3. above and right. Fourposter bed was built by Mr. Goldfinger out of rough-sawn boards, painted yellow, and four foam mattresses piled up. At present, couple's two baby girls sleep in alcoves off master bedroom. Eventually, this bedroom will become theirs, parents will move up to solarium, 4. on fourth floor.
Valentino, the designer whose initial is as much of a high sign to the fashion hip as the peace sign is to the "people," packs the same excitement and sybaritic richness into his weekend house in Capri as he does into collection after collection of very feminine, perfectionist clothes. Always attracted to this steep flower- and vine-covered island that plunges down to water bluer than any postcard, he's pulled the feeling of garden and flower colors right inside. The bougainvillea colors of the patio tenting, above, below and on cover, play to the serenity of the all-white patio but make more shade for an outdoor room. The dining room, right, shows Valentino's feel for sensuous, room-lifting yellow that shoots sunshine all over what might have been a dark room. The crystal-topped, steel-framed dining table seats twelve, reflects more vinyl sunshine, does a little gleaming on its own.
Valentino's second-floor sitting room, right and above, a voluptuous rip-off of Chinese porcelain he bought in Rome at auction, a wow of a room everybody comes to see. It's the evening dress of the house, shows his preference for big, sculptural spaces, vivid color, flower patterns, and rich textures whether in straw, silk, or shining, bold plastic. The look's achieved in this room with the lavish use of four blue-and-white, flower-patterned fabrics. One is flat on the wall, another makes pleated panels, still another borders the ceiling, and a peach blossom design covers yards of over-scaled sofa packed with pillows. The sofas are buttressed by plastic tables giving the impression that sofa and table are built in. The opulence of down-filled upholstery is balanced by the size, sleek, and shine of plastic tables and metal trim. The vaulted ceiling is bright white, the floor done wall to wall in blue with two natural-colored straw rugs under each coffee table. A sixteenth-century Venetian canvas framed in fabric makes a curious reflection-in-the-past of the view of the island hillside seen through the large walled arch directly opposite it. White wicker elephants, fat plant bearers, are a favorite. Beside the pool, an imitation of an Arabian tent, filled with wicker divans, U.S., yellow cushions, continued Sitting on its hilltop, this was once a boxy old stone farmhouse whose new look is entirely the work of a new owner with a talent for brushing practicality with glamour. "I wanted more space and an eighteenth-century quality, and by making three additions—a downstairs bedroom and bath, a loggia-garden room, and an old silo turned into a tower—I got them both, plus the look of a house in the French countryside."

- Left: Stretched across the entire rear of the house, the new garden room is screened and latticed for a maximum of light and air, a minimum of bugs, and a wonderful complexity of patterns. Topping the lattice is a Plexiglas roof so that the room not only has three views of the surrounding trees, but also a stargazer’s vista of the sky. Since the sun at high noon really beats down, central panels of the roof are shaded with strips of bamboo matting. Sofa, a bit of treillage itself, was made by the owner with wood left over from the lattice. Above: Old front door became French windows opening on a tiny stone terrace-pot garden. Windows on both sides were masked with iron grilles curved in graceful bows. Below: Connecting passage between tower and house has a vaulted roof inventively "wallpapered" with bamboo matting—interesting in texture, most decorative.
On the ground floor, a row of cramped little rooms were opened to one another, making it seem much larger than it is. Living and dining rooms flow in an unbroken L that turns into a U from the back porch, with rustic brick parquet floors, roof rafters and joists that contrast and amplify sunlight. Colors are mostly a green or a flowered linen, historian's choice. The furniture is almost French and eighteenth-century or older—most of it the result of years of travel and antique hunting in Europe.

ROOMS FLOW INTO ONE ANOTHER AND OUT TO THE GARDEN

Top left: The windows were quite small (the old custom of keeping the light in) to bring light from the garden room—a huge arch door was cut into one wall of the dining room. The old oak floors were sanded, and waxed into second youth, and the dining space was furnished with pieces that could have come (did, perhaps) from a French farm house. Top right: The 150-year-old silo, moved from a nearby farm, crowned a hexagonal mansard roof, changed the entire character of the house.
picturesque as a French mill, it overlooks the new, hedge-enclosed swimming pool. Opposite page, bottom left: Close-up of the twentysix-house passageway protected by a sunshade of bamboo—an outdoor extension of the matting that girdles the vaulted ceiling inside. Statue is one of a quartet representing four of the provinces of France. Opposite page, bottom right: Facing the living-room space, a Louis XIII sofa, a collector’s joy covered in flowered linen, and a seventeenth-century rattan chair in sober brown suede. A pair of armoires, painted white, frame the hall door. In one corner, what looks like a box covered in brown velvet is a hoax. Its doors open to reveal the television. Above: Hung on an enormous beam, a row of baskets and copper pots effects a very subtle change of mood—and a certain sense of definition—between the living and dining area. Doing double duty as a wine-cellar-sideboard, a wine rack made of terra-cotta drainage pipes is held in a rectangular block by iron bands and topped with a slab of wood. On the table, old French crocks and some splendid vegetables.
Country French patterns in the freshest possible fabrics were chosen wherever fabric was needed for upholstery, bedcovers, walls, or curtains. Except for occasional still-life arrangements of objects and ornaments the house is singularly free of clutter. There are no curtains downstairs, nor is there any need for any. The only neighbors are the quietest, least curious ones in the world—trees.

Above: Almost perfectly round, the tower room is flooded with light through two sets of gently arched doors that were found in the little town of Versailles. Four Louis XIII chairs covered in a pale violet plaid linen form a little circle of their own, leaving just enough room for a tiny sofa and some bibelot-covered tables. Overhead, an Austrian hunting-lodge chandelier made of antlers; on one wall, a portrait of the Duchesse d’Etampes by Mignard, court painter to Louis XIV; underfoot, Mexican octagonal terra-cotta tiles that go right out through the hall to the living room. Something no silo ever had, left, was built for the new fireplace, and the precious glass doors are protected from gusty weather by solid wood, shutter-like panels with pretty serpentine crossbars.
Regency chair, properly equipped with a table and a lamp, or in the tub—an old American curiosity piece. Lined in copper and pewter, it is framed in a niche with oak woodwork and a carved cornice supported by antique pilasters—a handsome and unexpected treatment. Wall and curtain fabric is white linen patterned with sepia flowers and leaves. • Below right: The second section of the bath combines the shower, toilet, and a wash basin set into a marble-topped commode. Above it is an old pewter mirror, and above it, a cherub's head carved in wood by Karl Mann. Because the Dutch door opens to the garden room—a quick route to the swimming pool—the bath is often used as a guest-swimmer's dressing room.
The glowing heart of Richard Olney’s Provençal kitchen is a great stone fireplace he built himself. In it he roasts a baby leg of lamb on a spit, right, for a summer luncheon served on the vine-hung terrace, above left, of his house, set in a tangle of aromatic herbs and flowers on a hill in the south of France.
How to cook for a man

He tells everyone what a great cook you are. And you love to hear him say it. But coming up with something new and different seven nights a week isn’t exactly easy. That’s where Birds Eye can help. With recipes like Hamlet. Cook 1 package of Birds Eye One of 18 Birds Eye Combination Vegetables, 1 pound ready to eat ham slice, about 1 inch thick. After 7 minutes, turn the ham and spread the top with a teaspoon of prepared mustard. Then whisk it back under the broiler for another 5 minutes. Now top with the cooked carrots. And call him to dinner. Wasn’t that easy?
fireplace recipes. In marinades, a tasteless cooking oil is preferable to an indifferent olive oil and melted butter may replace it for basting.

Herbs

Thyme, oregano, and savory recur from one recipe to another because I feel they are finer than any of the other herbs for this kind of cooking. Fresh or recently dried sage leaves are good with pork and may be used sparingly with veal. Rosemary is a strong herb that should certainly be used with care, but the smoke of smoldering rosemary will subtly flavor any fish or meat during the last moments of grilling.

Wines

The white wines should all be served chilled, but should not remain for long periods in the refrigerator. If they are to be refrigerator-chilled, put them in 2 hours before serving, but preferably chill for about 15 minutes in an ice bucket. The red wines to be served cool may be served from an ice bucket containing cool water and only a few fragments of ice to maintain a constant temperature.

SUMMER LUNCHEON

"Canaille" Salad
Grilled Eggplant and Zucchini (Aubergines et Courgettes Grillées)
Cheese
Fresh Fruits

Grilled Eggplant and Zucchini

Eggplant
Small, firm zucchini
Olive oil
Salt, freshly ground pepper

The best eggplant for grilling are the small, elongated variety, about 8 inches long, but the larger round ones may also be used. They should be firm and resilient to the touch, and the skin should be glossy and tight.

Cut round eggplant crosswise in \( \frac{3}{4} \)-inch thick slices. Score slices lightly in a crisscross pattern on both sides. Cut elongated eggplant and zucchini in half lengthwise and score the flesh deeply with a sharply pointed paring knife in crisscross pattern, taking care not to pierce the skin.

Sprinkle with olive oil, rubbing all surfaces so that the skins, too, are lightly coated with oil (eggplant absorbs a surprising quantity of oil). Leave for 10 minutes or so, adding more oil if the cut surfaces appear dry. Season with salt and freshly ground pepper just before grilling. Use a preheated heavy grill and grill the scored sides first, turning after 3-5 minutes, depending on the intensity of the coals (the surface should be well colored, but not charred). Brush the grilled surfaces with more marinating oil once or twice while finishing the cooking on the skin side. The zucchini should take from 6-10 minutes, and the eggplant may take as much as 15. Test by piercing the flesh with the point of a small knife. The eggplant should be almost puree soft at all points, the zucchini should be soft, but slightly firmer than the eggplant.

Grilled Loin Lamb Chops with Herbs

The flesh of good quality lamb should be a clear rose-tan color and the fat should be white, dry, and abundant.

1 loin lamb chop (about 2 inches thick) per person
Garlic
Salt, freshly ground pepper

Remove all the fat from the chops except for the bit joining the apron to the fillet, and carefully remove the layers of membranous tissue and fat from between the layers of flesh in the apron. Rub a clove of garlic repeatedly against the rough part of the bone to purée it and rub it over the surface of the meat. Sprinkle the mixed herbs and olive oil very lightly all over chops and rub in the hands to be certain that all parts are equally coated. Roll up the apron against the "filet mignon" and skewer it in place with a small sharpened stick of rosemary or a toothpick.

Season with salt and pepper just before cooking. Put the chops on a preheated grill over a bed of coals of moderate intensity and good depth, and cook them about \( \frac{1}{2} \) hour. Turn every 3 or 4 minutes. If they seem to be browning too rapidly, spread the coals out more or remove the chops to the edge of the grill for a while. Like all grilled and roasted red meats, the chops will improve if, after being removed from the direct heat, they are left, covered, to rest in a warm place for 5-10 minutes before serving. The flesh should be pink.

Potatoes Baked in Ashes

Choose medium-small potatoes of a firm-fleshed variety. Clear away a well-heated area of the hearth, place the potatoes there, cover them well with a protective layer of hot ashes and heap red...

Grilled Sea Bass

2 fresh young sea bass
Lettuce, flowers, and branches of wild fennel (or fennel seeds)
2 tablespoons pastis, vermouth, Pastis 51, Ricard, etc.
Olive oil
Salt, freshly ground pepper

Remove all scales from fish, clean it, and tear out the gills, but do not remove the head. Rinse it and sponge dry with paper towels. Score diagonally, almost to the bone, 3 or 4 times on each side and put to marinate in an oblong dish. If fresh fennel is available, sprinkle inside and out with a handful of the finely chopped leaves, forcing some gently into the scored slits, or sprinkle with slightly crushed fennel seeds. Sprinkle over the pastis and enough olive oil to coat all surfaces, rubbing well all over, inside and out. Marinate for at least 1 hour, turning the fish 2 or 3 times. Cover it well in the refrigerator for several hours.

Use a special, double-faced heavy wire fish grill, oval and rounded, to grill a large fish. Salt and pepper the fish, inside and out. If you have fennel branches and flowers, stuff the fish with a handful and line one side of the grill with a few branches placed lengthwise. Lay it on a bed of branches in the grill and place 3 or 4 branches on top before closing the grill. Cook over brisk coals, turning the grill over after 7-9 minutes, and baste the grilled surface lightly. Turn the grill 2-3 times, basting each time. Cook about 25 minutes—do not overcook. 5 minutes too much will make it dry and flavorless. Accompany with plain olive oil, melted butter, herb butter, or anchovy butter. Serve 1 as a first course, 2 or 3 as main one.

SKNEWED VARIETY

Meats

Skewers of meats and vegetables are attractive, simple, and economical. The metal skewer may be replaced by a branch of sharpened rosemary with a tuft of leaves left at the unsharpened end, which enhances both the presentation and the flavor. In addition to the meats used here, sweetbreads, first soaked, blanched, pared, and put to set under weight, liver, or tender cuts of meat like lamb may be used. Do not cut the meats into pieces that are too small and easily over-grilled.

Bread crumbs mixed with pounded garlic may be sprinkled over the skewered meats before grilling.

1 cup Kidney
1 lamb's heart
8 ounces small, fresh mushrooms
4 shallots (or 1 small onion)
1 clove garlic
1 large red pepper, cut into 1-1/2-inch squares
1 onion, small, fresh mushrooms, shallots, garlic, bay leaves, red pepper, parsley, fines herbes, salt, freshly ground pepper

Peel off the surface membrane from the kidney, split it in half lengthwise, pare away the strip of fat found inside the kidney, and cut each half crosswise into about 5 pieces. Trim the fat and connective material from the hearts, split each in half, and cut each half into 3 or 4 equal-sized pieces. Combine the meats, mushrooms, shallots, garlic, bay leaves, red pepper, parsley, fines herbes, salt, and pepper to taste in a mixing bowl, and mix ingredients carefully by hand. Marinate the meats about 2 hours, mixing 2 or 3 times.

Discard the crushed garlic and pierce the meats and vegetables alternately on 1 skewer, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and grill over fairly intense heat for about 15 minutes, turning every 3 or 4 minutes and brushing the just-grilled surface with marinating liquid, adding more olive oil, if necessary, after each turn. 1 tablespoon finely chopped garlic
1 large clove garlic
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
1/2 cup chopped pecans
Salt, freshly ground pepper

Remove the skin from the breasts and trim them neatly, making certain that no fragments of bone remain. Each is composed of 2 muscles known as the fillet and the filet-mignon. They are connected only by a fragile membrane except at 1 edge. Open them out so that the opened breast is vaguely heart-shaped, and flatten with the side of a large knife. LAMB, SPIT-ROASTED

Ask your butcher to bone the leg of lamb down to the hip joint, remove the pelvic bone, and saw off the leg bone just above the hock and below the shank, permitting a handle to be screwed firmly in place for carving. Nearly all fat should be removed.

Assuming that it should be ready for serving at a halfway point through the service of the spring stew, it should begin roasting just after the vegetables have been put to cook, the fire having been prepared ahead of time so that it is solidly flaming. A 4-pound leg will require about 1 hour’s roasting time and a quarter of an hour’s relaxation.

1 leg of lamb

heaping teaspoon mixed herbs (equal parts thyme, savory, and oregano, plus a bit of crumbled rosemary)

Salt, freshly ground pepper

1 cup dry white wine (more if needed for basting)

Prepare the lamb to marinate about 2 hours ahead of time: Mix the herbs, salt, and pepper to taste. Pierce the flesh toward the bone deeply and repeatedly with a small sharply pointed knife, and force a healthy pinch of the herb mixture as deeply as possible into the slits. Rub all over with olive oil, pour over the white wine, and turn leg around and over, patting the surface with the marinade. Marinate 2 hours turning several times.

Spit leg of lamb, begin roasting in front of a hot fire, putting a dripping pan beneath. Begin basting it after ½ hour, first only with the fat drippings; if they are too sparse, dribble a bit of olive oil over the roast as it turns, then, as the roast begins to take on a bit of color, after about 40 minutes pour the marinade into the dripping pan, wash it around a bit to heat it up, and begin basting the leg with it. The juices will thicken and caramelize, adhering to the roast as the basting continues. If the basting liquid disappears too rapidly, add some more white wine to the dripping pan. Toward the end of the roasting period, the movement of the spit may be arrested for a few minutes with the thickest section of the leg facing the flames while the basting continues.

Roast leg of lamb is more flavorful when the flesh remains pink inside, but those who prefer it more well done should add about 15 minutes to the roasting time. Allow to rest 15 minutes before carving. Serves 6 to 8.

Fresh new flavors for cooling summer drinks

BY JANE ELLIS

One of the most deliciously satisfying moments on a sultry summer day is that first sip of an icy-cold long drink. Just about everyone has enjoyed the old reliables—the redoubtable Collins family, the what-have-you-and-tonic, the juleps. Here are some new twists for favorite coolers and some less familiar drinks, many from noted restaurants and epicures, all wonderfully refreshing.

Cook-book author Alex Hawkes makes a foamy Brazilian Fruit Batida. In a blender, whirl fresh ripe fruit (papaya, mango, pineapple, or any other tropical fruit) with milk and cracked ice. Perk it up, if you wish, with a dash of rum or a sprinkling of allspice, nutmeg, or cinnamon.

On hot days, at La Grenouille in Manhattan, Charles Masson offers a lovely Champagne Apéritif. Pour 1 teaspoon raspberry purée into a tulip glass, fill with champagne, and top with a dash of cherry brandy. And at Le Pavillon, Stu Levin recommends another champagne drink, the Mimosa. Combine champagne (he prefers a California Korbel Brut) with fresh orange juice.

A Beaujolais Cassis from Sam Aaron, wine authority: Add 1 teaspoon cassis to a glass of cool Beaujolais.

Two quick and cooling drinks—Port and Tonic: Combine 1 part port and 2 parts quinine water. Campari Soda: Put 1 part Campari and 3 parts water in a siphon bottle. Add cardamom and whisk over ice into a tall glass.

Diane Lucas, owner-chef of the Country Tavern in Southbury, Conn., has two favorite Wine Coolers. Pour 3 ounces red Dubonnet and ½ ounce kirschwasser over ice. Or mix 3 ounces chablis and 2 ounces cranberry juice over ice in a tall glass and top with club soda. Some James Beard Specials: Add raspberry syrup and a dash of vodka to lemonade. Spark a vodka lemonade with mint and limes. Add raspberry syrup to iced tea, garnish with lemon and mint.

Aboard the S.S. France, bartender Raymonde Cordier makes Bicyclettes. Pour 1 teaspoon crème de cassis in a highball glass with ice; add 2 ounces French dry vermouth, and fill with champagne.

To make the improbably named Harvey Wallbanger: Stir ¼ cup orange juice and 1 ounce vodka with ice. Then splash in 1 ounce Galliano.

From Ruth and Skitch Henderson's Bird and Bottle restaurant in Garrison, N.Y., the Spiked Apple:

3 to 4 cloves
1 tea cinnamon sticks
Peel zest of 2 lemon
1 quart apple cider or juice
2 ounces vodka

Put cloves, 1 broken cinnamon stick, and lemon zest in a cheesecloth bag. Put in a saucepan with cider or juice and bring to a boil. Cool, then pour into a large, ice-filled pitcher and stir in vodka. Serve in chilled glasses over ice. Garnish with remaining cinnamon sticks.

In Hawaii, at the Sheraton Maui you can sample a Maui Sunrise: Pour tequila over ice and add pineapple juice to taste. Without stirring, float 1 or 2 teaspoons grenadine on top.

The Adonis restaurant in Manhattan concocts the enticingly named Peter’s Love Potion. Pour 1 1/2 ounces blackberry brandy into a chilled, ice-filled champagne glass. Add fresh orange juice to taste. Stir and garnish with an orange slice.

Taking its name from the restaurant that serves it the Four Seasons Cooler: Mix 1 ounce vodka, 1 ounce green crème de menthe, 1 ounce grapefruit juice, and 1 teaspoon sugar syrup in a very tall glass. Add ice and club soda to fill and stir. Garnish with a spiral of orange peel and a sprig of mint.

From Rockefeller Center’s Promenade Café, the Gin Daisy: Put 2 ounces fresh lemon juice, 1 ounce superfine sugar, 1 1/2 ounces gin, and 1 ounce raspberry syrup in a shaker and shake well. Pour into a 10-ounce glass over crushed ice. Fill with club soda, stir, and garnish with a slice of lime.

A Fruit Wine Cup, served at New York’s famous “21”:
1 cup each diced apple, pear, peach, blueberries, and raspberries
A few strawberries
2 long strips cucumber rind
1 1/2 ounces cognac
1 ounce orange liqueur
1 bottle white wine
Combine in a large pitcher or glass bowl and chill at least 1/2 hour before serving.

As sipped alfresco at New York’s Tavern-on-the-Green, the Wild Strawberry Cooler: Combine 4 ounces strawberry vermouth and 2 dashes orange flower water in a shaker and shake well. Pour into a 10-ounce glass over crushed ice. Fill with club soda, stir, and garnish with a cucumber strip and a half strawberry.

From San Francisco, the Sheraton-Palace’s Amber Glow: Mix 1 ounce gin, 1 ounce Bacardi gold label rum, 1 ounce lime juice, and a dash of grenadine. Serve in a tall highball glass filled with crushed ice. Add a dash of club soda and stir. Garnish with a cucumber strip and a half strawberry.

From Daly’s Dandelion, a Spiked Iced Tea: Mix 1 quart cooled tea, 3 ounces dark or light rum, and 2 oranges or lemons (slice 1 thinly, squeeze in the juice of the other) in a large ice-filled pitcher. Stir in 2 tablespoons honey or sugar (which may be omitted if you use oranges), and garnish with fruit slices. Serve in tall, ice-filled glasses with a sprig of mint and a slice of fruit. Serves 1 to 6.

A summery Variation of Scotch and Soda: Pour 1 1/2 ounces Scotch over crushed ice in a tall glass and fill with bitter lemon or bitter orange. Stir and garnish with an orange slice. Some refreshing Ways to serve Club Soda or Sparkling Mineral Water: On ice with a stripe of lemon peel; poured over a bunch of mint leaves; or mixed with pureed fresh fruit (berries, peaches, plums, pineapple) in a tall glass filled with ice.

From Braniff Airlines a rich Iced Cappuccino: Melt 4 ounces sweetened chocolate in 1 1/2 cups strong hot coffee. Beat with a whisk and simmer for 5 minutes. Put 1 1/2 ounces brandy in tall glasses with ice and fill with coffee mixture.

Besides handrubs, you can also use a nearby water supply when it will become a pollutant—a potentially dangerous chemicals. A very modest amount of nitrogen is all you need, especially on your hands. Therefore, the package labels carefully, and don't try to improve on the manufacturer's recommendations. Many treatments also contain phosphates, which normally react strongly and quickly with the soil. (For more about compost and fertilizing the soil, see A Gardener Speaks His Mind, by William E. Harvey, page 10.)

Use quickly degradeable pesticides. This is perhaps the most, and most controversial point in the backyard. But no responsible scientists suggest that you move out and let the bugs and the weeds take over. The vital thing is to choose your pesticides wisely and use them with care. (Pesticides include herbicides, fungicides, weed killers, and many other chemicals you might use to kill vegetation under a fence or driveway.)

Here are some dos and don'ts provided by Richard E. Pendleton, research technician in the Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., 14850, and ask lor Cornell Miscellaneous Bulletin 74, A Guide to Safe Pest Control Around the House. (The 1971 revised edition is on the press right now.) The Audubon Society strongly urges that you steer clear of dual use of pesticides such as weed killers combined with insecticides, or fertilizers containing either insecticides or weed killers. If you want to be strictly "organic" in your yard and weed killing, stick to the pyrethrins, rotenone, and nicotine, all of which are extracted from plants.

the land that is wrong. I'm not saying motor boats should go, but engines will have to be modified so they're clean. The soil they spew out now never dissolves and it kills all the plant life just beneath the surface. Camping grounds are going to have to put in proper sewage treatment plants—so we stopped ours from putting in a second-rate plant. Too often we measure personal happiness in material things, but our environment has reached a saturation point, which should signal the need for new priorities.

"We think our children are unaware of things because we as adults block off so much," reflected Hene Goldman, wife of the writer William Goldman, who has two daughters aged nine and five. "I found my older girl Jenny walking down the street one day with her hands over her ears—her big aversion is noise. I got talking with friends, and we decided the best thing was to move out of the city. Then we realized this was impractical because our husbands have to work here. We were in a quandary about what we as individuals could do—all the problems seemed so monumental. We came to the conclusion that our power as housewives was at the supermarket. That was the best place to start. So we organized ourselves into study groups on things that worried us—like detergents and pesticides. We found some scientists to check on our findings, and we brought out a newsletter designed primarily for housewives. Supermarket managers were very responsive; they said we had positive suggestions. Someone was so struck by what we were doing that he donated an office, and now our group is called CAN. Consumer Action Now, and we're researching all kinds of things that affect our environment. We're all volunteers. Most of us are housewives and mothers. My children help, too. They've started collecting all the aluminum cans in our building and taking them down to the recycling center."

picketed the restaurant with some sympatheit friends. Evenually I went to my local congressman, Ed Koch, who got the Building Department report that showed the restaurant had the wrong equipment and was violating the law. After the picketing, I found out about Operation Better Block, a New York City run project financed by Bristol-Myers Company. Other people in the block were interested and we applied for a $400 grant to clean up the block, not only to quiet it down, but also to improve lots of things—curb dog, plant trees, dispose of garbage, the works. I didn't know anything about environmental problems or recycling, but seeing the exhibition

"Can Man Survive" at the American Museum of Natural History in New York made me realize things had to be done. I researched at SITI, the Scientists' Institute for Public Information, and came across information about recycling—how it could be done, separating paper, glass, metal. Then I started walking around and found an open lot near the block, which belonged to the Department of Highways.

The city gave us permission to use it, and I started to collect recyclable materials. Environmental Action Coalition, the people who helped to start Earth Day, helped a lot. They run a truck that collects the sorted material and sell it back to the manufacturers. We got help from our center on Saturdays in the winter.

It was freezing cold but people came with their bottles and cans, and other people helped sort it out and prepare it for collection.

I'm not an organization joine, but I've always loved nature and the outdoors. All this has changed my life style quite a bit.

I have learned as a consumer how to be a conserver and I'm the president of PEP, People's En-environmental Program Inc., the name we've given our nonprofit volunteer organization. This is 1971. No one wants to be a fanatic, but we must learn to live with less garbage, cut down on disposables, reuse where we can.

Small things help, like using a fabric shopping bag instead of the throw-away paper bag from the supermarket, and taking wire hangers back to the cleaners."

"How did I get into ecology? I'm a fisherman. I just want ed a fish in peace, but you can't do that any more," said writer Robette Boyle, a gregarious country-liver who keeps a 5-foot-long fish tank of bass in his living room.

"The Hudson River, for instance, is in rotten condition, killing the fish. If all the laws were enforced, we could clean it up in about a year and a half. We have very good laws, made in 1888 and 1889. A lot of people didn't know the existence of these laws until a group of us fishermen got together and uncovered them. Under the 1899 Federal Refuse Act there's a $2,500 fine and one year in prison for any person who polutes a waterway, and the person who reports the polluter gets half the fine," explained County. He added that he was collecting

$76,500 in rewards, and we're going to use it against more offenders. So far we've found the legal process very effective. We haven't lost a case yet, and the laws we brought to effect have been used in California, Oregon, and Alabama since then. People who work along the river are telling us about violations. The odd thing is, if these wastes were reused, many of the companies would be very rich.

We have got to stop this sort of slopism, have more of a conscience, and learn to do what nature does—recycle."

"We can no longer afford to act as though we lived at the open end of a natural horn of plenty," says Betty Ann Ottinger, wife of the former Congressman, a psychiatric social worker, and mother of four from fourteen to six. She sat down and wrote her first book. What can/ woman weigh 153 pounds and have a 34 inch waist. Today 41 inch waist and I can bend without any trouble ... every day I save a few more pounds."

"It's the individual effort that is going to benefit us all in the long run," said writer Rob-nete Boyle.

THIS WOMAN IS REDUCING HER WAIST, TUMMY, HIPS AND THIGHS

with the Fabulous New SAUNA BELT™

TRIM-JEANS

The Amazing Space Age Slenderizer that is so sensationally effective it is...

GUARANTEED TO REDUCE YOUR WAIST, TUMMY, HIPS AND THIGHS A TOTAL OF FROM 6 TO 9 INCHES IN JUST 3 DAYS OR YOUR MONEY REFUNDED

CYNTHIA BATEMAN: "I lost 13 excess inches and got a brand new figure in just 3 days—that's what trim-jeans did for me. I used the trim-jeans for just a few minutes each day for 3 days and lost 2½" from my waist, 2½" from my tummy, over 2" from my hips and almost 3" from each thigh—which had always been my most stubborn area. There were no diets to follow and trim-jeans made it fun, easy and incredibly fast. I'm absolutely thrilled with the way my figure looks now."

This super product is producing super new slenderizing for a host of women. Here are just a few:

Miss Penny Dix: "I used the trim-jeans just 3 times and took a total of 1½ inches off my hips and thighs and middle—7 inches the very first day. No dieting and my figure has never looked better."

Mrs. Mary Lou Wilhelm: "Following the trim-jeans program, I reduced my waist 2⅛ inches, my abdomen by 2 inches, my hips by 2 inches and my thighs by 2½ inches each—I ate normally—it took just 3 days—and the inches have stayed off."

Miss Carol Arrighi: "I used your marvelous trim-jeans a few minutes a day for 3 days in a row and reduced my waist from 26 to 24, my tummy from 31 to 29, my hips from 36 to 34 and my thighs from 23 to 21. My new measurements are just perfect for my height."

TRIM-JEANS—THE SPACE AGE SLENDERIZER WITH RESULTS THAT ARE OUT OF THIS WORLD. The trim-jeans are a marvel of ease, comfort and efficiency. Once you have slipped them on, you are ready for the most astounding experience in rapid slenderizing you have ever known. Only trim-jeans has the unique features of design, including the exclusive super sauna-lock that permits the constant snug fit and solid support in all 4 areas—waist, tummy, hips and thighs—without which truly sensational results are not possible. We recommend that the trim-jeans be used a few minutes each day for 3 days in a row when you first receive them and then several times a week until you have achieved your maximum potential inch loss. After that, for maintenance you can use the trim-jeans about twice a month or as often as you feel the need.

THE MOST REVOLUTIONARY GUARANTEE IN SLENDERIZING HISTORY. So many users of the trim-jeans obtain 'instant reducing'—are inches slimmer, inches trimmer in from just 1 to 3 sessions with this super slenderizer—are actually losing as much as a total of 7 or more inches from their waists, tummies, hips and thighs in just 1 session and up to 13 or more inches from 3 sessions. This principle produces really fantastic results. There may be variations of speed and/or degree of results due to individual differences in metabolism and body response. Not everyone may lose 7 inches in just 1 session and 13 inches in 3 days but remember this: No matter what your body type, if you do not lose a total of from 6 to 9 inches from your waist, tummy, hips and thighs in just 3 days, you may return the trim-jeans and the entire purchase price will be immediately refunded.

THE AMAZING TRIM-JEANS TAKE OFF INCHES WHERE THEY NEED TO COME OFF. Your trim-jeans are designed to give you just the reducing effect you need wherever you need it... and the price of the trim-jeans is just $13.95 and each pair carries a FULL MONEY BACK GUARANTEE. Here is the slenderizer supreme—trim-jeans—which we sincerely believe to be the easiest, fastest, most convenient, most sensationally effective waist, tummy, hip and thigh reducer ever discovered—with the most revolutionary guarantee in slenderizing history. So if you want trimmer, slimmer, sleeker measurements and you want them now, send for your trim-jeans today.

Here is how it works:

Mrs. Cynthia Batemans has slipped into her trim-jeans
and is inflating them with the handy little pump provided. She is now ready to perform er 'Magic Torso' movements, an exercise program designed specially for trim-jeans.

After a few pleasant moments—about 10 minutes or so—doing her 'Magic Torso' movements, Cynthia is now relaxing for an additional 20 minutes
while keeping her trim-jeans on. That is all there is to it.

Cynthia checks her 'after' measurements. Remarkable!
Cynthia lost 2½" from waist, 2½" from tummy, over 2 from hips, almost 3 from each thigh for a total measurement loss of 13" in just 3 brief sessions.

Lose 10 pounds in 10 days!

AND WATCH UNWANTED INCHES DISAPPEAR FROM HIPS, THIGHS & WAISTLINE!

"I lost 10 pounds in 10 days with the Body Shapers 3-Way Plan. I started losing a pound a day right away. After 10 days, I had lost 7½ inches from my hips, waist and thighs."
—Carol Louise Cardini

"I started losing right away. After 10 days, I had lost 9 pounds. And the Body Shaper Plan helped firm me up while I trimmed 5 inches from my hips, thighs, and waist."
—Lynne Perry

Lose unwanted weight and inches safely, easily!

Here's a laboratory-tested, weight loss and figure-trimming method you can trust. Tests conducted by the Performance Physiology Laboratory of a major West Coast University proved that it is possible for some persons to lose as much as 10 pounds in 10 days following the Body Shaper 3-Way Plan. The average weight loss of all persons tested was one-half pound per day, every day during the ten day test. Now you can enjoy this amazing discovery—guaranteed to work for you, or your money back.

"The secret to losing weight is not a dramatic change in your eating habits...." Contrary to what you may believe, you need not starve yourself to lose weight. According to the world's leading Medical Associations and Governmental Agencies as well as The Body Shaper Plan, what you need is to eat smaller, moderated amounts. With the complete Body Shaper Plan you can eat the foods your family eats, never "starve" or exhaust yourself by over-exercise, and yet still accelerate weight loss and direct inches removal!

HOW THE BODY SHAPER PLAN WORKS ITS WONDERS.

There are three simple requirements to The Body Shaper Plan. The Body Shaper is a modern, carefully designed and engineered product. The Body Shaper Plan helps to tone and trim your hips, thighs, and waist to the measurement you desire. The combination of the Body Shapers food plan and body movement program work together to accelerate weight loss and inches removal. The Body Shapers themselves are not designed to affect weight loss; they do their part by creating a Sauna-like warmth and gentle massaging action to soothe and relax the hip, thigh, and waistline area. It's not magic. It's not trickery. The Body Shaper Plan will help you to lose weight quickly, easily and more surely than ever before—it's actually guaranteed.

THE "SECRET" IS THE COMBINATION. The Body Shaper Plan is a combination which is designed to work, if honored together. The Body Shaper "combination" is made up of three items: your Body Shaper, the copyrighted Body Shaper Food Plan (which details for you in plain, down-to-earth language all the real facts about diet and weight loss) and the Body Shaper Movement Program—"exercises", which do not over-tax you in any way. As is true of all successful weight loss programs, The Body Shaper Plan should be undertaken with the knowledge and guidance of your family doctor. The Body Shaper Plan will help you tone and shape your body... it will help you reduce your weight—al qucker and faster than you may believe possible. The actual number of pounds that you will lose depends upon your body structure, present weight, metabolism, and other factors.

ABSOLUTE SATISFACTION OR YOUR MONEY REFUNDED!

It's guaranteed you have nothing to lose but weight and inches. Fill-out the coupon below and enclose your check or money order for just $12.95. Use your Body Shaper Three-Way Plan for 10 days, if you're not satisfied, your money will be promptly refunded.

RHOEDODENDRONS AND AZALEAS are sometimes slow to begin growing after they are planted. This is particularly true for nursery-grown plants that have been pruned, balled, and burlapped. It seems that the roots tend to stay inside their original soil ball rather than extend out into the soil of their new home. This habit can be cured by removing the burlap or whatever wrapping there may be around the ball when the plant is set in its hole. The outer layer of soil in the ball should then be carefully washed or raked away so that the ends of the roots are exposed. Then the new soil is puddled in around the ball with plenty of water. This will give the roots an immediate, intimate contact with the earth they are to grow in. Make sure the job is done quickly, though, so that the roots don't dry out before they are reburied and can get off to a flying start in their new home.

IT IS GOOD TO KNOW that Winterthur, the great Du Pont garden in Wilmington, Del., is now open to any plant-minded visitor who just happens by during the summer months. Advance notice is no longer necessary for visiting the garden, but the house with its priceless collection of antiques is still on the reserve list.

HANDBULBS OF BRIGHT SILK are the petals flaunted by cannas in midsummer. Soft pink, bright yellow, white, and scarlet are a few of the colors to be found in the new named varieties, all in broad-petaled, long-lasting profusion. King Midas, RIGHT, is yellow with red speckles. These new cannas are quite different from the old-fashioned, narrow-petaled canna that always seemed to hide their flowers amid a jungle of leaves. They're just as easy to grow, however, needing only a fairly rich soil, plenty of water and sunshine during the flowering season. Plants are sold at nurseries everywhere and may be set out even while they are in bloom. In fall, after the tops are frosthitten, the roots should be dug and stored in a cool but not freezing cellar until the next spring.

PLANT CUCUMBERS FOR A SUCCESSION OF BLOOM. THIS MAY SEEM UNNECESSARY SINCE THE PLANTS HAVE A NATURALLY LONG PRODUCTIVE SEASON. FACT OF THE MATTER IS, THOUGH, THAT AS CUCUMBER PLANTS AGE THEY PRODUCE FEWER MALE FLOWERS. HENCE LATE-SEASON FRUIT IS LIKELY TO BE WARPED AND MIS-SHAPEN FROM INADEQUATE POLLENIZATION. VIGOROUS YOUNG VINES AMONG THE OLDER ONES WILL SUPPLY THE POLLEN NECESSARY FOR CUCUMBERS AS FULL AND ROUND AS WE LIKE TO SEE THEM.

MAKING THE BEST USE OF POWER EQUIPMENT does not necessarily mean investing a lot of money. Everywhere nowadays there are equipment rental shops with everything from grass seeders to snowplows. Rates are better than reasonable and you have a real chance to see how a particular piece of equipment meets your needs. Most of the people who operate rental services also have dealer franchises, so you have the option of buying whatever you decide you would really like to own.

PLANT HUNTING AS A LIFE WORK is the strenuous but rewarding lot of every gardener’s friends, right up there with the praying mantis, an even more voracious bug-eating bug. It is the ladybug larva, below (magnified 4 times), that does most of the eating. It looks very different from the polished orange and black adults, so don’t mistake it for some kind of pest. The word praying, applied to mantis, describes the way the insects hold their front claws while waiting to clutch a passing grub or beetle. A full-grown mantis is the size of a cigarette and has the same shape throughout its life, from the time it is a baby no bigger than a mosquito. If ladybugs are not as numerous as you’d like to see them in your garden, Lakeland Nurseries Sales, Hanover, Pa., 17331, sells them at the rate of $2.98 the half pint, plus 35 cents for postage. Mantis egg clusters—available only during the cold months—may be ordered from Mincemoyer Nursery, County Line Rd., Jackson, N. J., 08527, at three for $2. A half pint of ladybugs consists of about 1500 individuals and a mantis egg cluster will hatch 300 or more.

LADYBUGS HAVE THE UNLADY-LIKE HABIT of eating other bugs and consider aphids particularly toothsome. STREET-SIDE PLANTING

But ease of identification is not the only thing to think about. You can’t hide your mailbox in a clump of shrubbery, for instance, since visibility is one of its prime functions. But you can let it hover above a bed of flowers. Daylilies seem a pretty obvious choice for this kind of semiplantable planting. There are few other plants tough enough to resist spraying asphalt and frolicking dogs and also vigorous enough to discourage most roadside weeds. Since daylilies need sun, if your RFD box is on the shady side of the street, it would be worth the extra effort it takes every year to set out plants of geraniums, which spread mounds of color all summer long, sun or no. A little extra carpentry will add a planter container to the support, so that geraniums or petunias will add their own color note in summer and be replaced by evergreen in winter.

The lot you are planning to build on, one of those cases, is important to the neighborhood, too. Indeed it may be more important than a lot with a house even simply because it is conspicuously empty. So don’t just leave it to grow up unkempt and collect rubbish. Even if you do more than scatter a few handfuls of flower seeds and cut the brush once a year you’ll be giving notice of your good intentions and making a contribution to the upgrading of the neighborhood. You can also get off to a flying start on landscaping the house to be built by planting the street-side strip with an eye to its permanent effect. Planned around the approach to your future house, this planting will have a chance to become established and serve as backbone for the other landscaping that must wait until the house itself is finished.

Undoubtedly the most important single step in neighborhood beautification is policing. For generations, parks superintendents have applied a simple psychological principle in keeping their domains tidy—any normal person hesitates before tossing a bit of litter on an immaculate strip of lawn or a well-raked path. But one beer can lying in the grass will attract others faster than you can turn around. So be sure to pick up and dispose of that single can or that one lone candy wrapper before the littering public expands it to a heap. You’ll be doing the neighborhood and yourself a favor, and even, let us hope, helping to improve the manners of litterers.
