Sometimes we use a profusion of color to achieve a certain look. But there are also times we use color with great restraint. When just two or three bright, clear colors can give us a design that’s spare and clean and entirely pleasing. Like the colors you’ll find in our “Dynamics.”

It’s just one of our ways with color. It’s one of the ways we design fabrics for your bed.

Sheets and pillowcases in 50% Dacron® polyester, 50% cotton. Also, comforters, Vellux® blankets, towels, shower curtains and accessories.

For decorating with sheets and towels, send for “All About Your Home,” Volume II. Mail $1.50 to Martex, P.O. Box 1951A, Birmingham, Ala. 35201.
There are many exclusive features that make KitchenAid trash compactors well worth the investment.

For example, only KitchenAid compactors have a small Litter Bin® door on top you can use for quick throwaways instead of opening the big drawer every time.

Only KitchenAid has an activated charcoal filter that actually removes odors instead of just masking them with perfumes. Only KitchenAid has a Tilt-Away basket that can be used with or without trash bags.

See the KitchenAid trash compactor in action at your KitchenAid dealer. Then you'll understand why we say that a KitchenAid trash compactor is really worth it.

Viva verbena

Lemon verbena is a delightful herb from the Argentine-Chilean border. Crushed, its leaves emit a refreshing fragrance of lemon with overtones of sugar. Its scent is much sweeter than true citrus. Excellent in fish dishes, and, finely minced, in fruit cakes and other pastries, lemon verbena is a great addition to other citrus flavorings on your kitchen shelf. The fresh leaves can be steeped to make a mild, relaxing tea soothing to an upset stomach. Although the volatile oils in the leaves have not been completely analyzed, they are thought to be a natural tranquilizer. The plant grows well either in partial sun or under artificial light. Pot up in a medium-rich soil containing a teaspoonful of lime per pot. Water moderately, but never let the soil dry out. For new plants use cuttings, not seeds. If your local florist does not stock lemon verbena, plants may be obtained from Logee's Greenhouses, 55 North Street, Danielson, Conn. 06239; catalogue $2.

Growing greens

Building gardens is just as important as creating structures to architect Graham MacKenzie Gordon. Wherever he sees unused urban open space between buildings, particularly unsightly piles of rubble, he starts to crusade for a "greening." To date, he has rescued and transformed six spaces, the last, a delightful clover patch in New York City. Gordon seeks funds from the land owners, charitable foundations, and local people in the neighborhood, with often additional money coming out of his own pockets. More cities need this "earth sculpture," he says, to improve the vista and help the neighborhood spirit.

Perfect setting

When you are entertaining in the Los Angeles neighborhood, the place to go for party table ideas is the Brass Tree, above. This shop, run by Mala Post and her daughter Diana (who has been designing tables since she was three) will show you how to do fabulous overscale arrangements. For example: A large bright yellow plate with royal blue grape design from Italy goes with large blue soup bowls, royal blue napkins in glass rings, and a great big bowl of blue cornflowers. Bread may be served in a clay pot, soup in glass bowls, wine in tremendous goblets. "We like the comfort of oversize things," says Mrs. Post, whose customers include Barbra Streisand, Carol Burnett, and Joanne Woodward. The Brass Tree goes beyond china and glass into cookware and clothes. "But it all has the same feeling. We never sell anything we wouldn't use ourselves; it has to be comfortable, casual, and elegant." The Brass Tree, 9044 Burton Way, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90211.

The dog has his day

As was often said, every dog will have its day—and it might be now! The Museum of American Folk Art is having another tribute to one of America's favorite pets—"The All-American Dog—Man's Best Friend in Folk Art"—through April 2. The 1976 cat exhibition and catalogue were sensational. "We expect the dog event to be even more popular," says curator Dr. Robert Bishop, 49W, 53rd St., New York, N.Y. 10019. Right: Late 19th-c. iron dog, Gilmore Collection.
"One look at the rich architectural detailing, and you know that this San Francisco mansion dates back to the 1890's. When I designed the interior, I had to consider the ornate molding. Furnishings had to be beautifully restrained in design. Then, of course, I wanted the personality of the owners to come through. So I incorporated many of their favorite mementos. Finally—everything works together. And that's always my goal."

Wise buys

If you want to use antiques or art, rather than collect them, Antiques and Art—How to Know, Buy and Use Them (Doubleday, $12) is an illustrated guide by Howard L. Katzander on buying old masters, how to read a catalogue and bid, distinguishing real from fake, thrift shopping, and other advice. Mr. Katzander is editor of the monthly periodical, International Art Market, which reports prices paid at auction, so he knows what bargains can be found. "The book is for the budget-conscious," he says, "who want to furnish their homes with good, useful things. I furnished two houses this way."

Cuisine starts

You'll never fear making hollandaise again if you sign up for the four-day, all-day, cooking experience with Chef Jean Morel in the kitchen of his inn and restaurant, L'Hostellerie Bressane, in Hillsdale, N.Y., an easy 2½-hour drive from New York City. Arrive ready to cook by 10 a.m. on Wednesday. Bring warm socks—the kitchen is cold after being closed Monday and Tuesday—and comfortable shoes; you'll stand all day. Bring a pad (stenography books work well), pencils, and pens—no novels—you won't have time to read. By lunch, 2:30 p.m., your book will be filling up fast with leeks vinaigrette, cauliflower with moringa sauce, chocolate mousse, Greek mushrooms, vegetable duxelle, and potato pancakes—brown and crisp on the outside, whipped cream inside. You'll wish you had four hands to write recipes, notes, tips, and keep up with the teacher. "Write down everything I say," Chef Morel commands, "otherwise, by the end of the week, you'll be very confused." And next day you will make by yourself things you learned the first day! Lesson one—apron tying. The halter apron is rolled at the waist 3 times; ties cross in the back, tie in front. One of a never-ending supply of white towels tucks under the tie on the left side if you are right-handed, ready for grabbing hot pots, wiping hands, cleaning knives, counters. Wooden gratings underneath keep you above spills and cushion your legs. Bring a work shirt to protect against above-the-waist spatters. Lunch with Jean Morel and his wife, Madeleine, who sees to the management of the inn, provides a relaxing hour in the sunny window of the bar. Talk, of course, centers on his food, your food, French food, etc. You will want to nap after lunch before reporting to the kitchen at 5:15 for tart duty. Don't take a walk instead. The rolling countryside is a perfect counterpart to the rhythms of a professional kitchen. By Saturday dinner-time, you will have made souffles, tarts, coquilles St. Jacques, pea soups with sorrel, langoustine mousse, plus learned how to dip your fingers in a boiling sauce without burning them, cut onions for onion soup, the secret of every perfect hollandaise, the courage to cook without recipes at home.

Hydroponics—simple gardening with soil substitute, water, and nutrients

The principle behind hydroponics is simple: It is growing plants in water without soil. The substitute for soil must be porous and can be a number of things, such as coarse sand, woodchips, straw, gravel. Water plus nutrients is the major ingredient in hydroponics. The soil substitute must be kept damp and in a sunny location. The main benefit of hydroponics, according to Sheikh Camera, is a higher yield and better quality. You can begin a nice little garden with a water trough, window box. Place gravel or marble chips at the bottom: potholes in soil substitute; drops of liquid nutrient to your water; and water still then plant. Add nutrients according to table on nutrient container. Keep adding water for aeration never allow to dry out.

When a young professional couple first saw this modern apartment they thought the living room "impossible." Worse than a box, it was an awkward lozenge shape. But the apartment location was good, near to his laboratory, so they asked architect Daniel Goldner and his partner designer Judith Carington to transform the space. "We knew ordinary furniture just wouldn't work, because it would take up too much space and we needed room for entertaining." The plan includes movable storage sections covered with carpet and seating "landscaped" into the room. Blue lacquered wood storage compartments reflect the river outside. Brown carpet and pillow seating create a strong contrast against white walls.

Your kitchen doesn't have enough work space? Simple solution: Buy an inexpensive metal cabinet from the hardware store. Spray-paint it to suit your color scheme. Mount it on four castors and place a slab of butcher block on top. This gives you a new counter that you can roll around the room wherever it's most needed.

A merica's oldest known doll house, built in 1744 and now exhibited in the Van Cortlandt Museum, Bronx, N.Y., has been faithfully interpreted and executed for kits by tapestry artist and art historian Deanna Vondrak. It's a 2-story, gambrel-roofed American Colonial house with 4 rooms and an attic. It stands 50 inches tall, is built to the same scale, is painted, has a deep drawer base that pulls through on both sides, and rolls around on wheels. That's for starters! There are also forty pieces of doll-house furniture — from Queen Anne lowboy to Chippendale settee, pewters, porcelains, even an antique quilt to embroider for the canopy bed. (See H&G Living Nov. '76.) The house comes with brass hardware, blueprints, and instructions, for $350. Assembled, it's $750 plus freight. Furniture is $200, or $1,200 with a 5-step refinishing process applied to each piece assembled. Or pieces may be ordered separately from a master list. Rare birds

Pretty bird!" Miriam Levenson's Australian rose-breasted cockatoo, Rosencrantz, calls attention to her stunning plumage. "Rosie" has a cage next to Cicero, a single yellow-headed Amazon parrot and has a third companion, a peach-colored Moluccan cockatoo named Suleiman. Miriam Levenson keeps a check on her exotic brood for respiratory troubles. Otherwise, she says these "exotics" are easy to care for. You can leave them with enough food, mostly seeds, for a weekend. Some people keep birds because they don't need to be walked. If you do take them out, says Ms. Levenson, "stroll with a chain, it will save you nervous hours of retrieving your bird from a roof."

The type styles and illustrations will vary from volume to volume matching the unique character of each of the individual works. The design on each volume’s leather cover will be different, with no two alike. Each family wants on its bookshelves.

Genuine Leather Bindings

Today it is rare to find books bound in genuine leather. The cost of such bindings and the time required to create them has made the crafting of such bindings an almost vanishing art. But each book in this collection will be bound in genuine leather! The leathers used will be only the finest, and many different types of leathers will be used - calfskin, cowhide, suede, sheepskin - to give even greater distinction to the total collection.

As with every detail of these books, luxury in binding will be the rule rather than the exception. Each volume will have the beautiful lustre, wonderful feel, and distinctively rich smell that is characteristic of only genuine leather.

Unique Cover Designs of Real Gold

To further enhance the richness and beauty of your books, each binding will be decorated with real gold. Each cover design will be deeply inlaid with this precious metal. The back cover and the spine of each book will be similarly decorated.

Gilt-edged Pages

Complementing the gold of the leather cover’s design is the gilt edging of every page. The pages of every book will be gilt-edged in real gold.

Elegant in Every Way

As final touches of elegance, each book will have beautiful endsheets of the highest quality, contain a bound-in ribbon page marker and be bound with a ‘hubb’d’ spine that is used in only the finest books.

The result of all of this careful attention to luxury and elegance is a collection of books that brings back memories of the great private libraries of the most discriminating families in days gone by.

From the photographs of my plate plus mark, what can you tell me of its origin and date?  M.S.—Spillman, N.J.

The English Staffordshire potters Copeland and Garrett made your porcelain plate between 1833 and 1847. The foxhead in the cartouche may be the family crest, and the date on the British national flag may commemorate a family occasion, perhaps an anniversary. Copeland did special orders of this sort.

Moulton spoon

From the name on the handle of my old spoon, can you tell me who made it and from where it originated?  I.P.C.—Watertown, Mass.

Joseph Moulton (1744-1816), who made your spoon, was a member of the Moulton family of Newbury and Newburyport, Mass. The Moultons practiced the craft of silversmithing for almost 200 years. The last representative was William Moulton (1851-1940).

Mission-style chair

Our old oak chair has the name “Chas. Stickley” on the back seat. Can you give me any information about it?  L.E.R.—Bay City, Tex.

Your Mission-style oak chair, dating about 1900-1915 was made by Charles Stickley, who was a brother of Gustav Stickley (1857-1942) the originator of Craftsman, or handcrafted, furniture in America. In all probability, your chair originally was fitted with a loose leather seat cushion.

Minton china

From the mark, can you tell me when and by whom my platters were made?  What does “Poonah” mean?  M.L.S.—Somerville, N.J.

The partnership, Minton & Co (M & Co) was active from about 1841-1873. The three wavy lines is the year cypher for 1865—so your platters or stands (for covered serving dishes) date from that time. “Poonah,” which is the name of your pattern, indicates that it is decorated in the Oriental taste.

Baker Furniture, commissioned by the Historic Charleston Foundation, has reproduced rare antiques found in centuries-old Charleston homes and museums.

The secretary-bookcase in mahogany solids and figured veneers is a documented reproduction of a Thomas Elfe original, c. 1770. It is distinguished by the hand carved fret on the pediment and incised carving of the ogee feet.

The 18th century English original from which this Queen Anne Butler’s Chest was copied is in a distinguished Charleston house. It is hand crafted in French Walnut and burl veneer with inlaid feathering on the fold-out top.

The “fancy” chair, reproduced from one of a set brought to Charleston from Europe in the late 18th century, is characterized by a hand painted scene on the back rail.

The complete Charleston Collection of over 40 distinctive designs may be seen in fine furniture and department stores. You are invited to write for their location and catalogue. $4.00.

I have a pair of Argand lamps. On one is a plate marked J & I Cox, New York. What can you tell me about them? Why are they called Argand lamps and how did they work? B.S.S.—Memphis, Tenn.

In 1783, Aimé Argand, a Swiss chemist, introduced a new principle in oil-burning lighting devices. He fitted a hollow cylindrical wick between two metal tubes, of which the inner extended down through and below the oil reservoir. In this manner, oxygen reached the flame from the interior as well as the exterior, making it brighter and more smoke-free. Argand's name became attached to lamps using this principle, such as your set in bronze. J & I Cox were well-known metal workers. The quality of the leaf carvings indicates a date of manufacture about the 1830s.

1733

Can you tell from the mark who made my silver candlesticks? Does 1733 mean they were made in the 18th century? J.B.F.—Brandon, Miss.

The Forbes Silver Co. of Meriden, Conn, made your plated silver candlesticks probably about the mid-1890s. The 1733 is a factory mark, not a date. The method of electroplating was first used in 1840-41, the founder being George Richard Ellington of Birmingham, England.

Amberina glass

I'm told my glass vase is called Amberina. Can you tell me what this means and something of the background of Amberina? W.C.—San Marcos, Tex.

Your pitcher, made around 1900, is Amberina, probably the most popular of art glass. Its beauty is the result of rich colorful shading, which goes from a pale straw-yellow at the base into a deep warm ruby red at the top. It was patented by the New England Glass Co. in 1883. Duplicate wares were soon turned out by other glass works. Edward D. Libbey of the New England Glass Co. kept the name Amberina when he moved the firm to Toledo, Ohio and changed the company's name to the Libbey Glass Co. He revived Amberina about 1900 and again about 1920. Today, all shaded glassware of this class are called Amberina, and it is practically impossible to identify the place of manufacture of most unmarked pieces.

Do you know who these figures represent and about how old they may be? M.E.R.—Bristol, R.I.

Your figures are representations of the Chinese Buddhist goddess Kuan Yin. She is known as the Goddess of Mercy and is seen at times with an upturned vase, representing the source of water that produces growth. She is also represented as the mother goddess holding a child or having a child near her. Your figures possess no significant age and are probably less than 100 years old.

Dr. Art Ulene, of NBC's Today show, gives his personal prescriptions for feeling fine in 1978

by Caroline Seebohm

"There are nice ways to make yourself feel better." — Dr. Art Ulene

THE SIMPLE PLEASURE OF TIME ALONE

One of Dr. Art Ulene’s most helpful exercises for growing pleasure is taking a break to be alone. “Just spend 5 or 10 minutes away from your chores,” he says. “It doesn’t matter when or what you are doing.” Here is the exercise: Take 5 or 10 minutes out of your day to do nothing. No work. No problem solving. No guilt. Just the pure pleasure of a few serene moments alone. If you worry about finding the time, here are some tricks to help you:

1. If things are too hectic at home or at work, take 5 or 10 minutes alone before you get there. If you drive, pull off to the side of the road for your reflection pause. If you use public transportation, get off one stop early.

2. Skip the usual coffee break at work or use part of your lunch hour. Spend the time alone.

3. If you’d rather do your thinking at home, reserve a few minutes for yourself at a regular time—just before dinner, just after dinner, or right after the children go to bed. You’ll find your family will respect your time alone and let you be for yourself for those valuable minutes.

4. If there simply isn’t enough time in the day, get up 5 minutes earlier. It’s worth the loss of sleep. During those minutes alone, just sit quietly and feel the moment. “Let that feeling fill you completely,” says Dr. Ulene. “Enjoy the luxury of it and see how much better you will feel afterwards—a true growing pleasure for the spirit.”

How to take a mind trip

1. Close your eyes in a comfortable chair and breathe deeply 3 or 4 times.
2. Imagine yourself in a special relaxing place. Make the picture as vivid as you can, and put yourself into it, becoming aware of colors, breezes, smells, sounds.
3. Slowly look around your relaxing scene until you spot a living creature. Don’t be surprised by what you find. It could be anything from a zebra to a whale. (Dr. Ulene found a rabbit when he first looked. Now he’s there every time the doctor is.)
4. Move in closer on the creature. Ask it to move closer to you.
5. Now that the creature is up close, get acquainted. (It may sound silly, but it works.) Ask it a question. What is its name? Believe it or not, you’ll get an answer. (Dr. Ulene’s rabbit is named Corky.)
6. Now talk with your creature. Tell it what’s on your mind. Are you worried? Tell it anything you like. Then, when you’ve finished, it’s time to say goodbye and return to the real world again. Promise your creature you will return again. You have made a friend. Then slowly open your eyes.

Seagram's Extra Dry. The Perfect Martini Gin. Perfect all ways.
A trace of gold, a splash of color, a touch of elegance. Empress by Schumann of Bavaria.

Dr. Ulene knows that this mind trick hardly makes any sense. “But I can talk to my rabbit Corky and my rabbit has immediate, clear answers to my problems,” he says. “Things that may puzzle me suddenly become clear. It’s an extraordinary technique. Basically, what you are doing is using the side of your brain that you use at night when you dream—that’s the side that works with imagery. It works much faster than the logical side and probably comes much closer to your real feelings.”

Dr. Ulene’s work brings him very close to the people of America. He gets thousands of letters a week, and he says that many of them deal with questions about drugs. “The drugs doctors prescribe to people to make them feel better are making them feel worse, and that makes them frustrated. Another very common problem is that most frequent of stress symptoms, the headache. We had about 20,000 letters after a headache series.”

Dr. Ulene’s advice to headache sufferers is to try to find their triggers rather than to approach the symptoms alone. By “triggers” he means the cause of the stress—for instance, you get a traffic ticket, your check bounces, the lawn needs mowing, and so forth. He recommends that you make a list of all the stress triggers in your life, leaving nothing out: money, work, family, friends, leisure, even your lawn. It may take several days to think of them all. He then points out that there are three ways of dealing with that list:

1. You can remove the cause of your stress from the environment.
2. You can remove yourself from the stressful environment.
3. You can meet the stress head-on, then try to cancel its harmful effects on your body by using relaxation techniques.

Simple? Dr. Ulene believes in common sense. He also believes that people want to help themselves. “There’s more hard data now to show that it really pays to take care of yourself. A California study found seven independent factors, each of which adds significantly to life span and physical status. They sound simple but they are very significant:

- eating three meals a day
- not snacking between meals
- staying close to your ideal weight
- sleeping 7 or 8 hours a night
- not smoking

You'd think Stanley had read my mind. I mean, their Simplicity collection is like a dream come true. It starts with a mix-and-match wall system that gives me all the storage I've ever wanted. And you never have to fasten it to the wall ... hidden levelers and clamps keep it straight and steady. Along with these modules go matching tables and chairs, dressers, and chests for lovely dining, living, and bedrooms. But best of all, Simplicity's real! All wood, with gorgeous elm veneers, and so reasonably priced. It's the kind of furniture I've always talked about. And Stanley heard me!
Beauty and health products new this month in the stores

One of the all-time top hair stylists, Vidal Sassoon, has brought his hair-care know-how within reach of everyone. Called "Hair Basics," it's a complete group of treatment products that help you combat the damaging effects of the blow-drying "heat wave." One of the five products is Protein Hair Treatment, a fast-working formula that contains micrnonized proteins and moisturizers that fill out hair strands and end up smoothing out the texture. Even thick, naturally curly hair gets help, because the protein barrier helps it to resist the frizzing effects of winter dampness. It comes in a 6-ounce bottle for $15 or 3 ounces for $8 at Vidal Sassoon Salon, 767 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022, or at many department stores across the country.

So you love your new boots and are taking every opportunity to walk like mad and break them in. Until those boots have softened, your feet will toughen considerably, so here's help from the 3M Company. Its nylon Buf-Puf was designed to be soft enough for your face, so the new Buf-Ped will find itself applied to more resilient parts of the body—heels, elbows, and palms. The material is nonwoven polyester, contains no chemicals, and rinses clean, $2.98 at drugstores everywhere.

If you're wondering what to use to wash your feet with the Buf-Ped, try Clinique's Body Scrubbing Cream. It's a slightly granary, water-soluble cream that helps remove surface debris from the skin all over your body—especially effective for toes, feet, and ankles. $6.50 a generous jarful. And here's a tip: If you've had a busy, run-around day with more coming up for evening and no time to relax in a tub, wash your feet. It's as simple as that. The lift lasts for hours, speeds refreshment through the whole body.

Two new protectors for skin that will be facing winter sun and all its reflections. Waterproof Solar Cream is a delicately tinted, maximum protection sunscreen for sensitive, dry skin. The formula is light enough to use on face, neck, hands, and legs if you're lucky enough to be skiing in short trousers, Solar Cream is $5 for a 1-ounce tube, by Doak Pharmaceutical and is part of the Formula 405 group of skin-care products. Another helper, PreSun, has moisturizers in it, a great improvement which in no way reduces the effectiveness of the sunscreen. PreSun is available in liquid or gel formulas, by Westwood Pharmaceuticals, from $3.75 to $5.25 at drugstore counters everywhere.

If you like the convenience of guest soaps, you'll love Neutrogena's Soap Miniatures. The more-than-a-foot-long box holds 30 half-inch slivers of its famous glycerine soap. Perfect for traveling, and since they're square, just right to stack up for a guest bathroom when you're having a large party. $8.95 for the whole box at drugstores and fine department stores.

The Brush-On Lips are new for winter gloss and lipstick in one. Goes on with a tiny brush, lasts for hours, comes in 1 colors—some frosted, some not—one of the sleekest, sexiest looks around. $2.50 each by Helena Rubinstein.

ASTROLOGICAL GUIDE TO YOUR FRAGRANCE

The sign: Capricorn (circa December 22—January 19)
Element: Earth

Capricorns love to build. They have the ability and the drive for planning and organizing, whether the project is a bridge, a business, or a beautiful house. The key phrase is "I utilize." Rooms that use the color of plants and ornamental minerals refresh and reward their senses. A fragrance such as rich and earthy Bakir by Germaine Monteil makes the atmosphere complete. For the conservative Capricorn male, the aristocratic 4711 is always correct. The discriminating modern blend of herbs and spices in Aramis 900 works as a personal background for both men and women.

- if you drink, not drinking more than 2 drinks
- walking or working in the garden every day.
- "Men who do those seven things live 11 years longer than men who do three or less. Women who do them all live seven years longer than those who do three or less. We are now telling people that if you walk you'll live two years longer than those who don't. That makes them pay attention. And they want to know why. If you don't have a good explanation they'll stop. Well, we're learning why. Walking lowers the triacylglyceride levels in your blood and that protects the arteries; and walking trains the leg muscles, reducing the work load on the heart by 10 percent. So why not walk?"

Why not indeed? And as a special tip to House & Garden readers, Dr. Ulene's message is simple, as always: "Tend your garden every day. That way you're not only doing your flowers a favor but also your life span." What better way to enter the New Year than with such a pleasurable resolution—and start feeling fine! |

What Have the Past Few Years Done to Your Looks?

Like so many women today you've changed over these past few years. With kudos from your husband and children you've gone back to school (you'd always wanted to). Or you've taken a job (you're terrific at it, too). Or you may have become involved in local politics (you can actually take the floor now without blushing).

Doing new things has given you a whole new perspective on yourself. In fact, you're simply not the same person that you were, and that's a very exciting feeling. But what about your looks? Perhaps you're having the first real conference with your mirror that you've had in years. Does it seem to be whispering, "Look at those little wrinkle lines...do you really think other people don't see them?" Or, "Tennis or golf are great for your figure but your skin is beginning to look dry and a little weatherbeaten. Don't you mind?" And guess what? You do mind...you mind quite a bit. Once you became more aware of the world out there it made you feel younger. No wonder you say to yourself, "Why shouldn't I look younger, too?"

Bravo. Why shouldn't you indeed. So before another day goes by, discover for yourself the secret shared by fortunate women from Stockholm to San Francisco and beyond...the secret of a mysterious beauty fluid that can help you look younger as it minimizes dryness.

Known in the United States as Oil of Olay beauty lotion, this incredibly light, silky and non-greasy fluid lets your skin live in its own moist climate.

Just smooth Oil of Olay on your face and throat. You'll be amazed at how quickly it penetrates, bringing a wealth of pure moisture, tropical oil and precious emollients to help your skin maintain its natural moisture balance.

Within moments your skin becomes softer and more supple. There's a luminous glow again. (Did you think it was lost forever?) Those little wrinkle lines can begin to show less...and yes, all that can help you look younger.

Think how you'll feel when others notice. Your husband, especially. He may tell you that you look marvelous, or you may read it in his eyes. Isn't that one of the small sweet moments in a marriage?

Like most Oil of Olay lovers you'll probably want to make a pleasurable little habit of the beauty fluid. At bedtime stroke it on to mist your skin into the night. Remember, it's so non-greasy, moments after it disappears into your skin all you feel is velvety softness, all you see is a dewy, radiant look.

In the morning gentle on Oil of Olay again. It's fabulous under makeup (you barely have to wait to skin on your cosmetics). And on a day you'd like to take a makeup break, go ahead. With Oil of Olay you can still look fresh and glowy.

Now that you know how Oil of Olay can care for your looks, shouldn't you welcome the beauty fluid into your life for the coming years.
Why most draperies look better in magazine pictures than they do in your home.

These pros can make any drapery look great.

At a busy photo session, there may be a fussy photographer, stylist, ironer and other folks around. Their job is to make the draperies look like a picture before they take the picture.

What do tape and paper clips have to do with lovely-looking pleats? One trick for getting picture-perfect pleats is to use two-sided tape and paper clips behind the draperies.

Of course, this method isn't too practical in your home, because pulling the draw cords ruins the effect. Besides, it looks kind of silly from the outside.

If all else fails, there's always the retoucher.

Our drapery looks great all by itself.

With Spring Crest draperies, there's no trick to having lovely, uniform pleats.

The Spring Crest design simply won't let them hang any other way.

You get all the beauty without any fuss.

And you get expert help from your independent Spring Crest dealer, a highly trained authority on Spring Crest Windoware, installation and drapery fabrics.

What's more, as members of the HOUSE & GARDEN Color Program, our dealers have the very latest color facts.

Spring Crest makes your home more beautiful inside and out. They look the same from the street as they do from inside. Beautiful.

The complete pleat. This is the famous pleat that stays uniform in all positions. A hidden design is the secret. And Spring Crest has it.

No bunching ever. Open ordinary draperies part way and notice how they bunch. (You usually can't help noticing) This doesn't happen with Spring Crest.

So, if you want draperies that hang like a picture, see your local Spring Crest dealer.

GARDENING BY LIGHTS

Sun substitute for greenery

Penny Allan’s light garden flourishes under four 40-watt fluorescents

HOW TO GET A GREEN SPLASH IN A DARK ROOM

House plants, in dark winter months, miss the sun even more than we do. The plain fact is that much of the interior illumination by which people live is not sufficient for plants to thrive. For some species this means simply a long somnolence during the winter, when growth stops; the plants merely wait for the illumination level to rise again to something more comfortable. For other species it means a sleep from which they never recover, and their indoor gardeners feel as if they’re all thumbs—brown ones at that.

For those plants, and their caretakers, there is a remedy: light gardening. But light gardening can be much more than merely supplemental illumination for better plant growth. Growing plants under artificial lights lets you put a living, verdant splash where you need it most—in rooms where there are no windows through which to gaze at the greenery beyond. Hallways, stairwells, basement playrooms and all kinds of unexpected places in your house can take on a new life with light gardening, and with energy-efficient fluorescent bulbs the electrical cost is really not that great. With a self-timer to turn the lights on in a basement playroom, for instance, you’ll end up using very little more electricity than you do now, especially considering the fact that at least once a week someone probably forgets to turn the lights off before going upstairs.

Light bulbs such as cool white, warm white, and Duro-Lite’s Vita-Lite and Natur-escent have been around for quite some time now. They induce good plant growth without the wild purple discotheque look the old-fashioned plant lights radiated.

Light gardening can be very successful when you use imagination in positioning illumination. Use a spotlight, for example, to accent a single plant. Or create corner gardens with vertical fluorescent lights, 4-foot tubes in a floor-to-ceiling formation, for instance, to transform a dark part of your house into a lush para-

Vertical light gardening permits you to grow tall plants without ending up with lush tops on bare flagpoles, which happens if you place lights in a more conventional position. The light from fluorescent bulbs is most effective when a plant is 6 to 16 inches from the tubes—an impossibility with anything but the tops of big plants under horizontal bulbs. Vertical is your solution when growing, for example, a 6-foot lemon tree you want to keep branching and full. Recent research has thrown new light on the way plants energize themselves for growth. When the undersides of plant leaves are exposed to light, the plants grow faster and produce up to 30 percent more flowers.

Credit where credit is due. AFRICAN VIOLETS, probably the most popular of the light-garden plants, are also the ones that started it all. Discovered in the 1890s, the African violet did not really become a popular house plant until the early 1940s, concurrently with the mass marketing of fluorescent lights. The two were put together almost immediately, and they’ve been inseparable ever since. The plant has been hybridized into thousands of improved varieties, the light has had its emission spectrum balanced for better plant growth; and if you start with healthy specimens, the combination is about as foolproof a one as you can find. Keep the plant tops within 10 inches of the lights. Keep the rich, humusy soil evenly moist and fertilize regularly with a high-potash supplement. That’s all the plants will need to keep blooming.

BEGONIAS have more variety to offer than most people realize, from giant angel wings to velvety rhizomatous species and the ever-blooming semperflorens. They make striking additions to any light garden. And because they are basically low-light plants, they can do quite well at the shadowy edges of your artificial sun. They do insist on high humidity, though, so mist regularly. Better, yet, grow your light plants on a pebble tray filled with water (but not high enough to touch the pots). This will raise the humidity around your greenery, keeping leaf edges from turning brown. All begonias, except for the tuberous varieties, which are tricky to grow indoors, do well under lights.

The brilliant green-leaved DWARF POMEGRANATE is a pleasant light-garden novelty, with its tiny blossoms and diminutive red fruit. Keep the tree close to the lights, and keep its soil evenly moist at all times. Misting is highly recommended to lessen the likelihood of spider mites. If you want the fruit, wait till the flowers are open then blow gently into them to aid in pollination. Don’t whistle at them too often, however: a couple of pomegranates per indoor bush is enough. Too many will sap the plant’s strength.

IVY is rarely associated with light gardens because light gardeners are usually after flowers. Nevertheless, an ivy vine provides an excellent means of covering up part of the light fixture. And growing well at the outer limits of your light garden. As it does, it will frame the garden pleasantly in greenery. Keep it away from the part of your light fixture that gets warm (Continued on page 123)

New greenhouses

How do you build them to save instead of spend energy? First, face south. That's where the sun shines longest—and even more directly in winter, when you need the heat, than in summer. If you want to attach the greenhouse to the house, and the house doesn't face south, it's often possible to twist the greenhouse a little for better exposure and an interesting architectural shape as well.

If you're building a new house, as well as a greenhouse, you might want to consider incorporating the greenhouse into it. Dr. J. Douglas Balcomb, director of Los Alamos Laboratories's solar research, lives in a house designed by Sun Mountain Design and built by solar developer Wayne Nichols, that is a greenhouse. The rooms curve around a two-story green and open airy glazed space that serves as garden and living room—and winter heat source for the house. Douglas Taff of the Vermont architectural and engineering firm, Parallax, is designing moderate-cost ($55,000 or so) houses for which the built-in greenhouse and the south windows of the house supply 50 to 60 percent of winter heat.

As you begin to imagine your glass house, think carefully before you make everything out of glass. Bill Yanda, author with Rick Fisher of The Food and Heat Producing Solar Greenhouse (John Muir Press, Santa Fe, $6.00), is now touring the country for the U.S. Department of Agriculture, conducting workshops in which he teaches people how to build their own solar greenhouses. He discovered solid greenhouse walls almost by accident. "My wife Susan and I built a pit greenhouse—dug a hole for the bottom part to take advantage of the earth's natural insulating properties—mainly to extend the northern New Mexico growing season," he says. "Then we started recording plant growth rates, germination periods, and production, and found we had something pretty remarkable." Because the greenhouse produced more heat than it needed or wanted, the Yandas decided to attach their next one to the south side of their house, and to use adobe—earth bricks, a popular New Mexican building material—and insulation to simulate the heat-holding properties of the earth. The house, then, could use that extra heat during the sharp New Mexican winter.

Which walls should be solid? The north wall, definitely. It makes a lot of sense if the north wall of the greenhouse is also the outside wall of the house—and if that wall includes windows or a door to help let the heat in or out.

The less sunlit portions of east and west walls should also be solid, and insulated. Sunrise and sunset hours are fairly short, and the sunlight is often cool, so east and west walls may lose more heat than they bring in. Most sun enters a greenhouse from the south, but even the lower foot or so of the south wall, where the plant beds might be, could be solid and tight. Mr. Yanda strongly recommends insulating with rigid polystyrene under the concrete floor, to keep heat from leaking away into the earth. If you do it yourself, a well-built, thermally efficient, simple greenhouse might cost from $2.50 to $3 a square foot, he says. If you hire others to build for you, the cost might be from Continued on page 39

In Billings, Montana, it's a real pleasure for fine artists to wind up in jail because the town's old jail house is now The Yellowstone Art Center.

The two-story brick structure dates back to 1884, but in 1961 the little red jail barely escaped the hands of the wrecking crew when art-loving citizens of Billings persuaded the county to remodel the old jail as an art center... and business and labor leaders backed the effort.

Today the Center continues to serve the community with year-round exhibits, lectures, classes, workshops and community programs. It's just one example of how old buildings are getting a new lease on life.

Before all the historic and architecturally significant buildings in your community are gone, get involved in bringing them back to life with imaginative, adaptive uses. That's what historic preservation is all about.

Think carefully about the shape of the greenhouse. A four-square imitation of the profile of a house, upright walls, pitched roof, is not always best for a rehouse, particularly in more northern latitudes. Thomas A. Lawand, director of the Brace Research Institute at Macdonald College (McGill University) in Montreal, has spent a number of years examining greenhouse geometry to try to get the longest growing season possible. He slants the south wall to meet winter sunlight at right angles (rule of thumb is your latitude plus 15 degrees). He angles the north wall of the greenhouse to catch winter sunlight and bounce it downward into the growing plants—something that is difficult if the north wall is also the house wall—then coats the wall with white or aluminum paint to help reflect the light. Ecotope Group, an environmental organization in cloudy Oregon and Washington, has built an experimental greenhouse in Pragtree Farm, a commercial organic farm, with a semi-cylindrical north wall, a section of a parabola lined with Mylar that catches and concentrates the sun's rays into an insulated concrete tank of water that holds the heat and Tilapia, a tropical food fish, as well.

Length and depth of the greenhouse also matter in making the most of solar heat. A long fairly narrow shape (somewhere between 8 and 12 feet) allows the sun to reach as close to the back wall as possible in winter, heating all the space.

Finally, consider what lets the light in—the glazing. Since the Middle Ages, glass has been the strong favorite, but now there are other options as well. Several polyesters, and acrylics, some clear, some semitransparent, have been developed that can be substituted. They allow for gentle curves in the glazed wall, they're often lower-cost than glass, and easier to install (a pair of heavy shears, gasketed nails, and silicon sealant will do it). There is some evidence that the semitransparent glazings like Lexan, Lasco-lite, or Kalwall diffuse sunlight enough that plants have less tendency to get "leggy" reaching for the sun (at the expense, however, of the view).

You can even glaze greenhouses with plastic film. Though such plastics tend to have short lives, they are very low-cost and can give you time to decide exactly what you want.

All greenhouses

Here come the most important two words of this article: double glaze. Exclamation points: double glaze! Two layers of glass are just about twice as effective at keeping heat in as one, and the dead-air insulating space between them also helps. It's the storm-window theory. Douglas Kelbaugh, a Princeton, N.J. architect, used a standard commercially available greenhouse as part of his solar-heated house. Until, working with the manufacturers, he managed to get a second layer of glass installed, the greenhouse either chilled or overheated his house. Many greenhouse manufacturers are now aware of the need, and specially designed glazing for second layers, either for new greenhouses or for existing ones, is increasingly available. The second layer does not necessarily need to be glass. One of the synthetics may work even better. It could be installed either inside (preferably), or outside the existing glazing.

To make your greenhouse energy efficient, you need to be able to control the heat, to hold it for later use if necessary rather than throwing it out the vents while the sun is high. There are several fairly simple ways to do this. 55-gallon drums full of water, lined up against the north wall, might support a plant table designed by Herbert A. Wade of Flagstaff, Ariz., draws heat from the peak of the A through a rock bin built in behind the north wall, where it can be stored until needed. In winter, extra heat can be circulated to the house which, on the coldest nights, might be asked to give a little back.

If the greenhouse forms one end of a living space, you can't count on being able to store heat very well—but you can use it immediately. As the sun shines, air, warming and rising along the face of the greenhouse, will form a nice loop through the room, to be warmed again. Unfortunately, convection works as well in summer as it does in winter. To avoid overheating, a removable break, a valance or shade, might be installed high up between room and greenhouse, to shunt overheated air out the greenhouse vents.

Once you can control and store the heat that comes in, you may need help in keeping it from leaving before you want it to—because the sun has a nasty habit of going down every night, and the heat it has shed during the day often tries to follow it. First, of course, is the double-glazing that slows a radiant rush to the night sky. But there are other stratagems and products that can help. Movable insulation, for one. Beadwall, a gimmick invented by Steve Baer of Zomeworks Corp. in Albuquerque, can turn the space between two panels of glass into a solid white foam-insulated wall at night. Tiny polystyrene beads are pumped into the space; in the morning they're vacuum-sucked out again to be stored in drums until they're wanted. The system is bulky, and has to be carefully engineered so that the beads don't develop static electric charges that make them cling to the glass, but installed right, in a greenhouse built to use it, it works.

Some greenhouse do-it-yourselfers have used blankets of quarter-inch urethane foam, encased in various materials, as curtains or shades to roll over the glazed surface at night, a little like tucking your indoor garden in under a quilt. A newly developed rolling shade developed for windows also looks promising for greenhouses. Thermo-Shade, consists of airtight plastic slats, each of which encloses an insulating air space. It slides in channels placed against the sides of windows and, when closed, the manufacturer says it makes the window as opaque to heat as a wall (SECO, Box 718, Valley Forge, Pa. 19481; about $2.75 a square foot; storage valance extra).

But, says Bill Yanda, the well-thought-out greenhouse doesn't really need much help for more than those few nights a year when the mercury dips below about -8°. For most greenhouses, heat gain is a more pressing problem. That summer sun can be brutal.

As you build a greenhouse to help out Mother Nature when it's cold, so you can turn to Mother Nature for help when it's hot. Bruce Anderson, whose New Hampshire energy consulting firm, Total Environmental Action, recently completed a greenhouse-solar house as part of a demonstration program sponsored by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, built the house on the brink of a south-facing slope that overlooked open New England woods. All the evergreens had to be cut because they would have shielded the solar collectors in winter—but the deciduous trees, the maples, and the birches, were left. Cooperatively, automatically, they grow leaves to shade the greenhouse in summer, and shed them again in the fall. If you haven't a helpful nearby woods, nature can still be encouraged to help. Landscaping may give you trees big enough in a few years—but what about the new house in the bald and treeless meadow? Or the apartment terrace? Vines, trained on strings or wires, can supply the lack. Choose a variety with a minimum of twigs (they can shade, too, when you don't want it), and a maxi—

Pella wood windows offer more insulation for less money.

Only Pella windows are equipped with a hinging system that allows the sash to crank out a full 90° to the center of the frame. You get lots of elbow room to clean outside glass — even reach the farthest corners — quickly and easily from inside your home. As a matter of fact, every ventilating window Pella makes — casement, double-hung, and awning — is engineered to be the easiest window you ever washed.

Only Pella makes a disappearing screen. The Pella Rolscreen® is a screen that works like a window shade. It rolls up and out of sight to give you a crystal clear view and let in 20% more light. Then, when you need it, the screen pulls down and latches firmly into position. An interesting option to the standard inside screen on our Clad Casement.

Pella’s aluminum exterior needs no painting. Pella wood windows give you the best of both worlds: aluminum cladding in attractive colors outside — all-wood construction inside. We think that’s important. Some wood windows that offer clad protection wrap the exterior finish all the way around the sash so you see it on the inside, which can cause decorating problems. But with Pella, all you see inside is rich, warm wood.

Pella’s Slimshade®... the energy saver.

The Slimshade is a narrow-slat blind that fits between the panes of Pella’s Double Glass Insulation System. Besides providing privacy when closed, the Slimshade can lower heat loss by 62% and solar heat gain by 82% when compared to a single pane, unshaded window. A practical energy saver.

Pella offers more insulation for less money.

Pella’s Double Glass Insulation System, with its full 13/16” air space between panes, outperforms welded insulating glass — yet costs less per window. In addition, you get the natural insulating qualities of Pella’s wood construction, plus the best weatherstripping available. It all adds up to real energy savings.

Many greenhouse manufacturers (Lord & Burnham are among them) are now manufacturing sliding shades, slatted for a summer sun-and-shadow effect. The Kelbaughs use a bright red one to give color to the otherwise monotonous front of their Princeton solar house. Heat storage devices, the rock bins and water drums or tanks mentioned earlier, can be reversed in operation in the summer. Night air can be blown over them, draining the day's heat and storing nighttime coolness for the next day. Venting is important: The openings should be low on the windward side (usually the southwest) and high on the sheltered red side (usually the northeast—and large enough to ensure a good free flow of air).

Warm winter core of Balcomb house is greenhouse garden room.

If they're manually operated, it may involve you personally more in the workings of the greenhouse—but should you be away on a really blistering day, the plants inside could suffer. Several solar controls manufacturers (see list) can supply differential thermostats or other controls capable of opening and closing openings when the differences in temperature between inside and outside reach predetermined limits. Zomeworks has a device called a Skylid that uses Freon in sealed canisters to open and close vents whenever temperature differences call for it. And there are also photosensors that can do your work for you.

The urge to enjoy a greenhouse is probably another manifestation of man's ancient inner urge to help direct the natural forces of the world around him—the rain, the sun, the weather, and the cycle of growing things—toward his benefit, his comfort, and his pleasure. Our thinking about how to build them may become somewhat more sophisticated—but sometimes, says Bill Yanda, it takes a while for the man to adjust to using this new man-made environment, to learn the rhythms and the flow. "For nearly two years, one woman who was part of our first project couldn't raise a radish," he says. "But she kept trying, and you know, now she has a tropical paradise." It's something worth trying for.

EASY STEPS TO REWIre A LAMP

BY DEANNE RAFFEL

From top: Socket section in three parts. Underwriter's knot made before connecting wires.

Step 1: Set the unplugged fixture on a table. All lamps have three components, a socket, cord, and plug. Diagram the assembly as you take it apart. The socket is attached to the tube in the center of the fixture and holds the whole lamp together. The cord is secured to the socket by small screws, then goes through the tube, out of the base, and into plug.

These sliding windows save energy by keeping heat in and cold out in winter. Incorporating double glass with enclosed insulating air space, and plastic foam insulators in the frames, the windows provide a "thermal break" which separates cold outside window surfaces from warm inside window surfaces. Available in three types—two-panel with one sliding panel, three-panel with sliding side panels, three-panel with center sliding panel—the aluminum frames are said to be frost-free, the glass rid of condensation. Sash can be removed from indoors (also the optional fiberglass screen); there is an automatic lock latch. Made in a range of enamelized colors; baked-on finishes are optional. Capitol Products Corp., P. O. Box 69, Mechanicsburg, Pa. 17055.

Step 2: To replace the socket, unscrew the old socket from the pipe. Separate replacement socket, taking off outer sheath and cardboard shell. (The word press stamped on the outside of shell, but if does not come apart easily, wedge in screwdriver to unlock the little notch at the press point). Screw the new cap onto the tube and tighten the setscrew (Check diagram for fitting.)

Step 3: To rewire, feed fresh wire from the end of the tube up into the cap. Pull a few inches of cord out and make small cut at the division area of the wires. Grasp each wire and pull apart until there is a 2- to 2 1/2-inch separation. Make a cut in each piece of insulation 3/4 inch from the end. (Take care to slice insulation and not wire.) Twist in insulation until it slips off wires. Make an underwriter's knot. Loosen the termina screws, wrap the bare wires clockwise around screws, and tighten securely with a screwdriver. Reassemble socket and remaining parts of lamp.

Step 4: Add a contact-type plug to the end of the cord, following directions printed on the package.

Step 5: Insert bulb, plug in lamp, turn switch and—light!

It consists of two plastic blocks (5½ inches high by 1 inch wide by 3½ inches deep) with a 6¼-inch steel bar between them. You hook one of the steel bar's curved ends into the metal striker plate on the doorjamb and close the door. Then lift the bar while you press down the blocks to tighten them securely against the door and doorjamb. It holds the door securely, can't be opened from outside, is independent from the door lock, and needs no key or combination. $12.95 plus $2 postage and handling. Liv Ullmann gets the credit. Her bestselling book, Changing, made me want to see the magnificent Norwegian coast. If, like me, you love mountains and the sea, a cruise to Norway's North Cape densely satisfies a craving both.

Norwegian America Line's M.S. Sagafjord took passengers there early in July. It was my first cruise, I was traveling alone, and the chances were quite good that I would be among the young—be they passengers or crew. There's no question of loneliness on a cruise. The first night on board was that somehow everyone I met knew immediately that I was a newcomer—a wonderful antidote to big-city living. There's no question of loneliness on a cruise. The second surprise was how many people stayed up to 5 A.M. to see the new volcanic island Surtsey, which erupted into existence off the southwestern coast of Iceland two years ago.

COLD WEATHER IN JULY

Weather is part of the entertainment on an ocean voyage, and the chances are you haven't slept for two days (because there is no night), your every wish is attended to. A cruise provides that one commodity that grows ever more scarce—Therapeutic Time.

I flew to Reykjavik, Iceland on Icelandic Airlines to meet the Sagafjord, which had sailed from New York a week earlier. My first leg of the journey to the North Cape was the three days' sail through the Arctic Circle with a stop at Hammerfest, the most northern village on the Norwegian coast. Two things surprised me on my first night on board. The first was that somehow everyone I met knew immediately that I was a newcomer—a wonderful antidote to big-city living. There's no question of loneliness on a cruise. The second surprise was how many people stayed up to 5 A.M. to see the new volcanic island Surtsey, which erupted into existence off the southwestern coast of Iceland two years ago.

voyage. It can vary in these northern latitudes from cloudless 24-hour splendor to a constant rainy overcast. We had the latter, and somehow you don’t mind. Ours was a hardy group of Americans who’d wrap themselves in thick woolen blankets Magic Mountain style and repair to Veranda Deck to read, drink hot teas and bouillon, snooze, and meditate on the cold beauty of the North Sea. I was unprepared for the spectacular appearance of the midnight sun when it did present itself our third night out. Our luck was extraordinary. Travelers have come to the north over and over to see it, have missed it, have tried again only to be dazzled. Ours was an atypical sun, too. Its colors are usually reds, purples, and oranges, but we saw it in apricots, greens, violets.

HAMMERFEST AND THE NORTH CAPE
Our first anchor at Hammerfest: a small village with a steep, towering hill with a path you can trek up for a view of the tiny town “nestled” into the coast, and surrounded with snow-capped mountains. There are a couple of tiny cafés to go to for creature comforts of coffee, small cakes, and a fireplace to warm up by. I spent a couple of hours walking through the village streets and observed something interesting about the window shades of the houses. Many were lined on the outside with shiny, metallic-looking fabric which reflected the constant light outside, away from the rooms. Where there was no darkness, Norwegians manufactured their own.

Although the ship will take you to the North Cape (a big rock like a Gibraltar that juts into the Arctic Sea), the other way to cover the 66 miles from Hammerfest to Skarsvåg, the town at the rock’s base, is to drive or take a group tour planned in advance and booked through the small tour office in Hammerfest.

Arriving in Skarsvåg seemed to bring out the “Kilroy was here” in everyone. Long tables were set up inside the small café-souvenir shop where literally hundreds of people elbowed their way to find space to send friends postcards that would bear that famous North Cape cancellation stamp. The weather continued to be rainy, so we walked briskly around the top of the rock, peering into the incredible, fog-filled abyss where a tiny yacht bravely wended its way toward Finland. A wonderful “Windjammer” fish stew waited for us back on the ship sometime near midnight that definitely reversed the effects of the rain and cold. I entertained smug thoughts of my friends suffocating in the summer heat of New York as I kicked the snow off my boots.

FJORDS AND GLACIERS
The second part of the cruise was the sail through the fjords—a turn-on with Nature of the first order. The advantage of seeing the fjords from a ship is that you get an overview of the enormous geographical changes apparent as the ship sails further and further south. A fjord is a glacial carving that has let channels (sometimes 4,000 or 5,000 feet deep) between the mountains that drop into the sea. There is no “beach” as we think of it, though to the south, fjords are lined with rolling farms and jewel-like villages. The northerly fjords are stark and powerful and a bird-lover’s heaven: Many cliffs house rare aquatic species. Since the Sagafjord is a big ship we sailed inside fjords that felt like rivers.

To be within a stone’s throw of a glacier is an awesome experience. The most famous, and the most easily accessible, is the Brikstal glacier, an arm of the Jostedal ice fields, at Rustoyen near Olden. Olden is where the ship’s tender left us. We took the 55-minute hike from Rustoyen and realized every Heidi fantasy we’d ever had.

Walking was what I had come to Norway to do. Here we walked, picked wild flowers, waded in a green-tinted glacier stream, and scrambled over rocks here and there, stood under a waterfall. At enchanting afternoon. We also had sunshine to make the afternoon even more special. The Brikstal glows an unearthly aquamarine that can be seen for miles. The color is not a reflection of the sky but of the light hitting the minerals that are trapped in the ice.

SHORE TRIPS
The Sagafjord has an office where you can book on-shore tours of the cities and the surrounding countryside, for which you pay extra. They vary widely. From Furulfjorden, for example, our first anchorage after Hammerfest, there was offered a 9-hour overland drive across the country, over the Finnish border, and down to Tromso, where it met the ship some 70 miles to the south. Such a tour cost $59. The tour to the Brikstal, however, only cost $18 and included all the tea and cakes you could eat after the invigorating hike at the charming Brikstal restaurant. A schedule of the Shore Program is included when you make your reservation. Other people enjoy making discoveries on their own and do their homework before deciding how they want to see a particular area. And some hire a well-experienced taxi driver to show them the layout of a city.

FOOD: FISH IS A STAPLE, STEAK A TREAT
What about Norwegian food? The fresh fish is utterly fabulous and Norwegians smile when you compliment them on their luck to have so much delicious fish to choose from. When Norwegians go to a restaurant they order a steak. That’s luxury for them. Caviar for lunch every day became a habit I hated to break. On the Sagafjord, there was a fresh fish available... always—sole, haddock, herring, and lobster for hors d'oeuvre. Our captain organized an evening fishing expedition which landed our ship's galley over 700 kilos of haddock. It was prepared in a butter sauce, a touch of the salt-water brine added. Sensational! Norway's salmon is famous and so is the reindeer steak. The first taste of it was in the Grill Room at Hotel Norge in Bergen where it was seared very quickly on both sides and served with a currant and claret confection. Fresh berries are another Norwegian specialty—both strawberries and raspberries served with a small mint of whipped cream, and if you're in Osio, you get them for breakfast.

About Norwegian food prices: they are high. Two dollars for a cup of coffee is not uncommon.

TO BUY IN OSLO:

Of the ship's calls that I enjoyed the most was at Oslo. For two days I combed the city looking for things to bring home. Naturally, I found wonderful Norwegian handcrafts. The richness of the handmade crafts comes from an old-world tradition of bright color, quality, and durability. With that in mind, look for embroidered Hadelands crystal, Porsgrund earthenware, and anything handcarved in wood. A beautiful new shopping center has just been finished to the west of the National Theater on Munkeløvein. The other major area to visit is the Stortorget where there are several avenues, no cars, and dozens of small craft, gift shops and small shops for glassware, stainless and enameled flatware, Norwegian sweaters, some of the best sports gear anywhere for backpackers and sailors. Two places will appear especially—Hus Fjitchen Norway Design. The first is a non-profit organization that carries the best of the handmade Norwegian crafts. You'll find handcarved wood toys, pewter, of fine woven woolens, magnificent rugs, and wall hangings. It's at 14 1/2 Storgaten 4. Norway Design, Stortorvet 28, carries the same quality of things and also includes furniture and kitchen accessories. It's also the place for shipping your purchases home. A tiny store, called Stoffat Kirkegarten 6, run by three women who handblock cotton and silk, some of the most colorful, imaginative prints you can buy off the bolt or cut up into daring smocks, dresses, prons. Some smaller pieces are also sold into napkins and placemats. Normans also love papers—to line things, wrap things in, cover books with geometrical patterns in subtle colors for an inexpensive delight. At Bazar, Vesterbrogade 21.

TO GO:

The American Line has two ships that make the North Cape run, the Saga- and the Baja California.

The M/S Lindblad Explorer* operated by the American Line will explore the fabulous aquatic presence and wildlife of this region on its cruising expedition May 6-24, 1978. Sailing in calm seas, we will examine rare plant life on the desert coastlines, watch thousands of birds battling for nesting space. It will truly be an unforgettable cruise. Cancer hasn't stopped 1,500,000 people from living.

They did it by not letting fear kill them. They did it by going to the doctor in time. They did it with the help of the effective methods of treatment today: surgery...radiation...chemotherapy.

They did it because of the advances made through research.

More than 1,500,000 Americans are living proof cancer can be cured. The American Cancer Society needs millions to save millions more.

Please, give more today. We want to wipe out cancer in your lifetime.

The rodeo begins at 8, there's barbecue and dancing until 12:30. When the first fly-drive cruises make it also very convenient for passengers to fly to London for the Vistafjord’s North Cape cruise. Write Norwegian America Line, 29 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10006.

looks like a pine-sided country restaurant in west Texas but in fact is only 10 minutes from downtown. Saturday night rodeos, barbecue, and Western dancing go on year-round in Simonton, Tex., 40 minutes west of Houston on Westheimer. The rodeo begins at 8, there’s barbecue and dancing until 12:30, when the first fights begin.

Also not to miss if you’re in town: Pennzoil, one of the most beautiful office buildings anywhere. Philip Johnson has built two towers of brilliant dark glass 34 and 36 stories high. He preferred two towers 10 feet apart to one 70 stories high. They cover the entire site and the space between the towers becomes a town house garden roofed with slanting skylights. Look for the remarkable details indoors and out:

Escalators become works of art in pink granite with stainless steel trim.

High white ventilator smokestacks pushing through the sidewalk from the garage below become sculpture by each entrance.

Freestanding gray granite cylinders just 20 feet tall contain elevators that only go one floor down to the garage and concourse level.

Two museums and a hotel share one of the greenest sections in Houston.

The Warwick is called Houston’s best hotel. Ada Louise Huxtable calls it “Claridge’s on the Prairie.” Philip Johnson stays there because the rooms look out on so many trees.

The Fine Arts Museum is a totally Beaux-Arts creature of the twenties with a contemporary glass and steel addition by Mies van der Rohé skillfully blended onto what was the back of the original. Abundantly leafy trees camouflage the transition along the sides.

C.A.M. acronyms the brassy, brave little Contemporary Arts Museum which is catty-corner to the Fine Arts. You may not know what it is when you see it: a triangular shape with windowless walls of corrugated aluminum. In front, high as the story-high building itself, big steel beam-and-girder skeleton sculpture painted bright yellow. The door is a slit to the side of the degree angle at the left of the base.

OTHER MUST-GO’S

N.A.S.A., a 40 minute drive from the Woodlands. Looks like a college campus where the buildings are all contemporary and the trees haven’t had a chance to grow. Visit exhibits that show what astronauts ate while on the moon. Looks strange as something taken from K Tut’s tomb.

Mission Control Center is now open to visitors. See the place you saw from the fish-eye angle during the television coverage of the first manned moonshot.

See a model of a Saturn V rocket in a tower-shape 36 stories high standing in nearby parking area.

Hear all about Skylab.

Drive through the town that’s the bedroom community for NASA where most of the apartment buildings are Tudor style.

Take along Norman Mailer’s account of the moonshot Of a Fire on the Moon. Galveston. Houston’s Riviera.

See the Strand, the old main street of once-busting port with all the old commercial buildings restored.

Drive down Broadway, a street lined Newport’s Bellevue Avenue, which began to deteriorate from lack of money and lack of zoning.

Take a tour of the Bishop’s Palace at Ashton Villa, both gargoyle-y extravagantas from the period of 1850-1900.

Stay at the Islander East, a high-rise modern condominium with apartments for rent to guests who can stay at least two nights. It’s the only place right down on the beach. No phones in the room and only one pay phone to every landline. It makes it a real getaway place. The beach is very, very broad, but in Texas vehicles are allowed on the beach so make your self noticeable when sunbathing.

Contact the Galveston Historic Foundation’s Programs Office (P.O. Box 302, Galveston, Tex. 77553 tel. 713-765-7834) or visit it on the corner of 23rd and the Strand to arrange a house tour of this historic city. (For further information on the Livestock Show, call 713-748-3730.)
In Saronno, Amaretto is our bambino.

It was in our little town that Amaretto, the drink of love, was born 450 years ago. When a beautiful young woman created an extraordinary liqueur to please the man she loved.

Here we still make Amaretto di Saronno as we have for centuries. We allow the flavor to develop until it is soft and full. We take our time—can love be hurried?

Enjoy Amaretto di Saronno as it is, or on the rocks, or with coffee. Try it in any number of exciting mixed drinks. With love, anything goes.

But a word of caution. There is only one Amaretto di Saronno. Remember this. Because if it is not Amaretto di Saronno that you drink, it may not be love after all.

Or go north to Winnipeg June 13 for 10 days of exploring the Hudson Bay coast and the Churchill River that flows into it. To see all the bird and animal life en route from Winnipeg, the group takes a train north to the icy borders of the Hudson Bay. There the sun sets only for a few hours and the group sets out in search of Beluga whale and whistling swans. Round trip from Winnipeg is $840 (the group flies back to Winnipeg from Churchill).

A third tour—the Galapagos Islands (they’re hard to get to on your own). The group leaves from Miami, flies on to the island of Baltra in the Galapagos to meet a boat that becomes a hotel/expeditionary base for nine days of bird-watching, swimming, and snorkeling. $1,695 buys everything, including airfare from Miami to the islands and back. Debrett’s helps you to trace British ancestors plus visit where they lived

If you think your ancestors came from Great Britain or Europe, wouldn’t it be fun not only to know who they were, but also to see where they lived? The distinguished British genealogical research organization, Debrett’s Peerage, in cooperation with British Airways, is now offering you exactly that.

Debrett’s will find out for you who your ancestors were and where they came from. Then British Airways will fly you to your ancestral home or homes, so you can see your roots for yourself. “We have researchers all over the British Isles and Europe, plus American experts to make the links,” explains Debrett director Robert Jarman. “Only 1 percent of our applications fail to find origins.”

B: prepared, however, to find your great-great-great grandfather was a highwayman rather than an earl. Still, the present Duke of St. Albans is descended from Nell Gwynn, so you’d be in good company.

Ideally, Debrett’s would like 6 months’ notice of your intention to visit your roots, so it can do the necessary research on which to organize the tour. Initial down payment is $330.

Progress likes to give the impression of leading us into the future, but don’t you believe it. We’re the ones who lead progress—by the simple acts involved in living, working, fixing up our houses and apartments, and creating needs for better ways to do practically everything. But sometimes it’s hard to keep track. The minute we say the word, ideas streak off in all directions. For every trend there’s a countertrend, and for every expert who’s absolutely sure of something, there’s another equally sure of exactly the opposite. In the pages House & Garden reports on each month, there’s a whole world of happenings, as you’ll see in this issue and every one that follows. All of which makes for a glorious day of possibilities for us to sample, argue about, criticize, encourage—and enjoy.

DECORATING Fewer is the word. Fewer tables, fewer lamps, fewer everything. Think of decorating as an investment in quality that lasts, which justifies a larger initial cost.
Angelo Donghia, interior designer
Look for wallpapers and fabrics with the handpainted quality of watercolor washes. They resemble antique fabrics, with colors that have softened and faded with time. It’s a gentle look, very flattering to people.
Mary McFadden, designer
When you choose colors, remember nature’s subtleties. Colors that are fresh, but without any trace of sharpness. Mauves and peaches, misty greens and blues.
Murray Douglas, vice-president
Brunschwig & Fils
If you’re furniture shopping, think about the look and the feel of upholstery. What’s important is more softness, more density, a finer, fuller line.
Milo Baughman
designer for Thayer Coggin

KITCHENS As building costs rise, kitchens shrink—unless you incorporate them into living and dining rooms. This gives you efficient work space and a big congenial atmosphere—a true heart of the house.
Yann Weymouth, architect
Why not put good furniture in your kitchen? Like sofas and chairs. The emphasis doesn’t always have to be low maintenance: I think we should put romance back into the kitchen.
Bill Machado, interior designer

BATHROOMS There’s nothing like a mirror to open up a small bathroom and add luxury. Think of the bathroom as a place to relax.
Stanley Paul, Paul Associates

GARDENING Backyard gardening can save you money. We’ve shown that $100 in gardening expenditures can yield $700 in produce.
James Underwood Crockett
TV gardener (see his garden on page 94)

Why not bring flowers indoors? Now you can find miniature roses almost anywhere, and teacup-size begonias, and new varieties of African violets. Hanging foliage is giving way to flowering plants, because flowers give your rooms color and romance.
Dr. Marc Cathey, president
American Horticultural Society

TECHNOLOGY Home computers have become a reality. They can govern a system that can regulate your environment, balance your checkbook, send telephone messages, even play backgammon with you.
Samuel Bernstein, vice-president and director of marketing
Commodore Business Machines (see its microprocessor on page 62)

FOOD Good nutrition is becoming the American way of life. It’s easier to keep abreast of nutrition information and eat for health.
Dr. Michael Jacobson
Nutrition Action

Think about long-term cooking the nutritional way with menus that start fresh and are interesting enough to stretch over to the next day.
James Beard, author and chef

HEALTH People are taking more responsibility for taking care of themselves. You can check into preventive health systems, like do-it-yourself programs that let you see how your life keeps changing—and how these changes can affect your health.
Dr. Daniel G. Miller, medical director
Preventive Medicine Institute

Outdoor sports are a terrific form of exercise. And we’re starting a Walk America program. It’s been shown that if you walk, you can live an average of two years longer than if you don’t.
C. Carson Conrad, executive director
The President’s Council on Physical Fitness

Voluptuous fabrics, flattering colors, for a little splendor with a twinkle in its eye

A flair for old-style European luxury plus flourishes of taffeta and fringe can create a mood that is unmistakably romantic. "I like rooms to look like they're right out of Barry Lyndon," says the Honorable Mrs. Patricia Harmsworth, whose New York City apartment shows she means it. In every room there's a look of voluptuous comfort that comes from furniture piled with pillows; borders and ruffles; needlework; sumptuous tapestries and rugs. The fantasy in the living room, left, is created by 18th-century English antiques all covered in pastel-colored silks and velvets, ruffled curtain swags of yellow taffeta tied with bows, and round tables dressed in full skirts. The pink-patterned silk sofa and the silk-embroidered French seat near it are even wearing an extra ruffy piping, and lamps have pleated or fringed shades.

Would a house make you aware of your own presence in space?

Here, extraordinary living in a house that may change your ideas about architecture.

In the hands of an architect who believes that building should be "abrasive," space is not decorated. There is no designated corner for a chair, no wall for a sofa, no particular spot for a table. In this house by architect Peter Eisenman, space suggests a new attitude toward living. Bare floors become a stage where functions of sitting, eating, sleeping, are acted out when necessary, with portable props. Like nature, the space lives by a constant process of building and rebuilding, composition and decomposition.

Above: Four mattresses, a pile of pillows, two trays of candles, and four "Z" chairs shift easily to other roles. Mattresses serve as guest beds. Designer: Massimo Vignelli. Fabrics: Marignan.
Architecture, like poetry, is a resonance, which must sustain itself after the function, the meaning, the use, the program, the structure is understood.”

—PETER EISENMAN
The house has no recognizable front façade with an entrance door. Walls jut out from all angles, all around. A column drops down to finish inexplicably 2 feet short of the ground. Nothing lines up symmetrically. "The whole structure seems to be falling apart," in the words of architect Eisenman. It's entirely intentional, a calculated plan to dispense with predictable attitudes to gravity and the natural conformities you expect of a house. While it's certainly not traditional, nothing irritates Eisenman more than to hear this building described as modern sculpture: "It's not an abstraction of anything. These columns and walls are themselves. They have an existence. The house has a history. It wasn't something that was an image in my mind. It grew out of a relationship between the owners and the structure."

This house establishes body awareness in space. Your eye travels across solid surfaces and translucent panels in search of glass and light. To see people, you must move around columns and oddly placed partitions. You feel the narrowness of a door, you bend to avoid a beam on the stairs. "Modern architecture," says Eisenman, "has made things convenient, easy, clean, functional, standardized, and comfortable. But life can be a lot more things in addition to being comfortable and convenient. When you are in proper contact with space you become more aware of your physicality and sensuality." Eisenman arrives at the sensual result through a complicated process of topological geometry. Structure is built with such mathematical order that this flat-roofed house would be virtually the same space if turned upside down—which explains why a staircase travels across the living-room ceiling, going nowhere. It is red, the complementary color to the real staircase, which is green. These two stabs of color rest against several shades of gray, black, and white. White, like the sun, marks the center of the space, the grays darken to black as the structure travels outward toward infinity. Symbolisms and intricacies of thought don't stop with mathematics and astronomy. The test in architecture is the manipulation of light. Here, double height spaces meet translucent roof skylights. Huge expansive panes from floor to ceiling make you feel as if you are walking in the garden. Then at night, man-made sun, artificial light from spots on the roof, streams through. With such excitement how could anyone be bored? "Extraordinary" is how the owner, photographer Richard Frank, describes the house. His art historian wife Susan thinks it's "radical." "Livable" is their joint conclusion. "It doesn't force any way of life on us, it just lets us be."

WHO'S MOVING TO THE SUN AND WHY

How you can bring the best ideas back home

By Caroline Seebohm

America—the land that offers everything—proves its worth more than ever today as people begin to reject ways of life that restrict their freedom or limit their ideas, and turn to an environment that will fulfill their dreams. And for many, that seems to be a life in the sun.

But as more and more people begin to enjoy the benefits of the sun life, so its influence begins to be felt elsewhere in America. The concept of the resort community, or living where you play, which originated in Southern California and Florida, is being adopted in the North, East, Midwest, and Western states. A more natural, informal life, with the vacation look indoors as well as out, is going to be something you can bring home wherever you live.

You have probably read about the phenomenal growth in the Sunbelt states: Between 1970 and 1976 their population rose by 7,144,000 persons, 63 percent of the total national increase (See box, at right). And it's not just retired people who are moving there, as earlier reports may have indicated. "The higher birth rate of a young population provides the main impetus," reports Fortune magazine. "Even in Florida and Arizona, the two retirement meccas, [retirees] account for less than a quarter of the in-migration." In other words, people who move there stay, attracted by jobs and a more relaxed life. "Go to the Sunbelt, young man," would be today's advice.

"The most important reason is the business climate," explains architect/developer Jonathan Morse, whose firm, Morse & Harvey, is developing a major office building in Houston, Texas. "The tax rate in New York is $3.50 per square foot, as opposed to 65 cents in Houston. It costs almost as much to rent for 2 years in New York as it does to own that space in Houston. Those figures tell the whole story." (See also business statistics by Fantus, page 120.)

The second great reason for the move to the Sunbelt is, of course, that other climate, weather. Vacationers flock to the South and Southwest (see Recreation, page 120), like what they see, and return again and again—maybe finally for good. Case histories abound of families leaving the urban existence for the relaxed Sunbelt lifestyle. Americans are more and more health conscious. They are aware of polluted air, bad water, inability to exercise. They are looking for ways to improve their living standards—and the Sunbelt can provide them.

Publishing executive Harvey Schloss is probably typical of the new Sunbelt dweller. He moved with his family from New York to California four years ago. Of the change, he says, "We have more physical freedom and comfort. We can spend more time together as a family; for instance, taking the dog for a run, or doing yard work. And I love to come home from work and swim in the pool before dinner."

As the people move, so do the changes. If the South and Southwest traditionally been regarded as deserts, that is no longer true. As political and economic power shifts to booming areas, so do the arts. Last year's "Southern Rim Conference" was held in North Carolina and the highly successful show "Southwest Center for Contemporary Art" in Winston-Salem, both attended by national curators and collectors.

The North Carolina Symphony, the Santa Fe Opera, the Houston Symphony and Grand Opera are all finding it easier to improve standards and increase recognition. The American Dance Festival has just moved from Connecticut... Continued on page 78.

THE RISE

HOW TO BUY YOUR PLACE IN THE SUN

Latest financial report on resort condominiums

By Paul Gross

Even though cost of housing has gone through the roof, vacation houses and condominiums are still a bargain compared to the rest of the market. And with good reason. The demand for vacation homes has been dampened over the past three years or so. First, the recession washed away a lot of the money that might otherwise have been spent on vacation homes. Then double-digit inflation came along and gouged away most of our disposable income—which meant that many of us couldn't afford to buy a second home. Finally, the market was hit by the Tax Reform Act of 1976—which severely limited the tax deductions you could take on a vacation home if you used it for more than 13 days of the year.

The recession is over, inflation is simmering down, but the Tax Reform Act of 1976 is still with us. And chances are that new tax reform measures, being considered by Congress now, could hurt the vacation home market even more. That's why real-estate counselors suggest that you buy defensively, which means spending just a little money, or buying a vacation home that could eventually be used as a permanent home.

TIME-SHARING CONDOMINIUM

If you don't want to invest a lot of money in a vacation home, and yet want a place of your own, you might consider a resort condominium with a time-sharing arrangement. It's one of the cheapest and most convenient vacation arrangements around. It works this way: You and a number of people buy shares in the same condominium unit. What you're actually buying is the right to use the condominium for a specified time of the year—say, the first two weeks in January.

The cost is amazingly low, especially when you compare it to the cost of a resort hotel. For example, a 1/22 share of a comfortable two bedroom condominium might cost you around $5,000 plus $200 to cover your share of the furnishings. Spread over the life of the project, which could be as long as 30 years, the cost of owning an annual two-week stay at the condominium would run around $175, and expenses for two weeks during a peak month might come to another $175. That covers your share of utilities, linen service, insurance, use of recreational facilities, administrative costs, and the homeowners association fee. All told, a two-week vacation for your entire family might well cost you about $350, or $25 a day.

You can protect yourself against hassles by making sure that the title insurance covers your share of the unit and conveys a specific time period to you. That way you actually own the right to use the condo for, say, two weeks in July. But that doesn't mean you're locked into July. You can easily exchange vacation time slots with your co-owners or people who own shares in other condo units. You also want liens against all time-sharing owners so only the owner who damages the unit is forced to pay for it.

If you buy the time-share unit for your own use, you can only deduct the interest on the loan you used to buy the condo and your share of the real-estate taxes. If you rent your time period to someone else, you can also deduct your pro-rata share of expenses and depreciation. However, if these deductions amount to more than what you get in the rental income, you probably won't be able to use the excess deductions to shelter some of your regular income from taxes. According to the Internal Revenue Service, you can do that only if you have a profit motive for owning the unit. And that would be hard to prove since the deal isn't designed to be a money-maker.

RENTAL POOL CONDOMINIUM

Alternatively, you might look into a resort-area condominium unit in a rental pool which is costlier and slightly more complicated. You buy a condominium unit which is then put into a rental pool along with other units in the same development. The manager of the condominium will then try to rent out your unit during those times it's not reserved for your own use. Since it's a pooling arrangement, you and the other condominium owners share the rental income and operating costs.

A luxurious two-bedroom condominium might cost $50,000. If you put 25 percent down and financed the rest over 30 years, your annual mortgage cost (at 8.5 percent interest) will come to $3,456 a year. You'll also have to pay around $20 a day for services while you occupy your unit. Those who rent units from the pool pay around $60 a day.

Since this kind of venture is set up as a profit-making venture, you can probably use your maintenance and depreciation expenses to shelter other income.

Simplicity, harmony, and the ingenuity of South Florida common sense inspired the condominium houses in South Passage at The Moorings, Vero Beach, Fla. Architect Peter Jefferson drew on early Florida architectural concepts—cross ventilation, high ceilings, covered porches in most units—and used local, natural materials, lots of cedar and Southern pine. Inside, as in Mr. and Mrs. Harry O. Hoyt Jr.'s vacation house living room, opposite page, designer Frank J. Lincoln used cotton upholstery that can be removed for cleaning, a mop-clean glazed white tile floor, white walls, and wicker furniture. "You can turn the key and walk away without worrying," says Mr. Lincoln. The Hoyts worked with Mr. Lincoln from Connecticut, where they live most of the year. "We had known about Vero Beach and like the community," says Mrs. Hoyt. "We love the water and have friends in the area. It's difficult to choose the right place for a second home. We were looking down here for about 10 or 15 years. My advice is, take your time. Places and communities change." The Hoyts hope to live at South Passage permanently one day. "The Moorings has 7 miles of waterfront property, with boating, golf, and fishing," says its manager, Chris Blackman. Architect Jefferson decided to create a village atmosphere where the houses look different, yet relate in color and size to the environment.

Flexible living spaces, efficiency in the kitchen, colors that stand up to the sun—ideas from a court-side tennis condominium

Why not live where you play? So say residents of the Tennis Club of Palm Beach, who enjoy 17 tennis courts, pool, terrace, and snack bar all within easy reach of their condominiums. Inside, the apartments are designed for flexible living (see floor plans, above.) These two are owned by the Charles Merrills. Mr. Merrill, an artist, chose the rich color schemes. "So many interiors here are off-white," he says, "and the air-conditioning can feel chilly. So I decided to use lots of orange, green, and rose red—a mixture you often see in hot climates like Mexico or India. And paintings look better on strong-colored walls." The kitchen, opposite page, far right, is connected to the dining area by a pass-through, which works as a buffet for parties; the roller blind conceals kitchen clutter. Within the shell of tropical colors in the apartments are batiks and boxes from the South Seas, and a carved wooden panel from New Guinea, far right. The black lacquer armchairs in the living room are Chinese.

Outdoor dining decks, multiple-use rooms, and living next to nature — ideas from a wildlife island-resort community

"As soon as I saw the roof deck, I knew we must live here," says Mrs. Everett Knight, whose family bought a town house on Kiawah Island, South Carolina, for a vacation home soon after it opened. It's another world from her life in Summerville. "Our house there is very traditional; I wanted the opposite," she says. Working with Charleston designer Nancy Gales, Mrs. Knight chose a fresh clean look with lots of green, yellow, and white, opposite page, all with easy upkeep. "I wanted it to be comfortable—a no-fuss summer place." The views are spectacular, with resort facilities (swimming, tennis, golf) separated from the retirement and single-family houses. "You can take a jeep safari through the back parts of the island," says Frank Brumley, general manager of the community and an island resident. "You see alligators, deer, shore and marsh birds of all kinds." As for the way of life, well, it's outdoors most of the time, and very informal. "A lot of picnics, outdoor cooking, and casual clothes," says Mr. Brumley. "We're here to relax, after all." Charleston TV broadcaster John Rivers Jr. now commutes from his WCSC office to Kiawah, where he can unwind and entertain friends. "I cook trout, grill steaks and hamburgers," he says, "and we dig for clams or catch crabs in the creek. It's a quiet life. People come here to enjoy the island, not to have late night parties." John Rivers's house is filled with photographs he's taken of the island, plus "odd beach things I've collected that make it personal."

WHAT SUN LIVING MEANS TO YOU:

Family living—
open house

Even on a small lot you can enjoy wide-open living and entertaining, and grow your garden
in planters

Living moves outdoors when open-air spaces are designed as extensions of the house. To make the most of the California sun life on a 100-foot-square lot, architect-owner Jack MacAllister first enclosed the minimal lot in a wall of white stucco to suggest an extension of architectural space. "The wall provides protection from noise and weather and makes the entire site usable," says Mr. MacAllister, who took advantage of the now private space to bring the life of the house through open doors into a series of new outdoor rooms. Outside walls are columns and vine-covered trellises that divide the space for family relaxing, recreation, eating, and gardening. Renovating a house designed for more enclosed living into one with a wide open attitude, Mr. Mac-Allister turned all the windows into doorways between complementary indoor and outdoor spaces.
The family room, right above, opens onto the redwood hot tub, in which family and friends often gather in the evenings to relax and talk. The living room opens to an outdoor dining area paved in Mexican tiles, opposite page, in which landscape architects Luis Villa and Lois Sherr added the refreshment of a fountain.

Family living—open house

A functional kitchen with openings onto a garden court, two separate dining rooms, and a hallway to the living room provides space for the constant ebb and flow of family and friends, and a handsome hub for family activities. It enables all six MacAllisters to join forces for their favorite occupations of cooking and eating. "Anything you have to do three times a day should be a pleasure," says Jack MacAllister, and to facilitate the preparations, he designed a large 15-by-27-foot kitchen with many work surfaces and heavy-duty professional equipment that includes a Sub-Zero refrigerator/freezer, restaurant stove, trash compactor, and garbage disposal. But the atmosphere has all the warmth of a family kitchen with off-white laminate surfaces, mineral-oiled maple butcher blocks, skylights, and terra-cotta floors that reflect light to create a warm glow. Storage is mostly open "to encourage us to throw away things we don't use and to buy good-looking equipment."

Decorating—let yourself go

Open it up with high ceilings and lots of glass: That was the simple formula Cynthia Lindsay used to transform what was literally a three-sided shack into a sensational California beach house. She and designer Robert Patten rescued old beams from a deserted mine and ran them lengthwise and crosswise on the ceiling—and vertically along walls to create special niches for books and artwork. Since space was limited and rooms likely to be very small, they converted the whole ground floor into one living-sitting-kitchen area and paved it all with concrete floor tiles—"easy-to-maintain in spite of all the wet, sandy creatures that come through here," says Ms. Lindsay. Even the decorating avoids clutter: Collectibles are not mere conversation pieces. In the kitchen, top left, Ms. Lindsay removed every other spoke in an antique English plate rack and put it to good use storing wine; a Sicilian donkey cart axle was turned into a chandelier; an old doughboard became a serving tray. In the sitting room, top right, the glass-topped pedestal table is a display case for sea creatures and coral.

Why not save energy and insulate with a garden? James Underwood Crockett, Boston's TV gardener, does just that. Inspired by soaring fuel costs, Crockett applied his Yankee ingenuity to a pile of rocks and created an alpine garden against the foundation of his drafty old greenhouse. The garden soaks up sun all day and then holds warmth through the night—like a blanket—reducing heat loss from the bare foundation. It's a principle that works for house foundations, too. Mr. Crockett piled soil and stone so the base of his garden is slightly wider than the top; setting the rocks horizontally and slanting each one gently toward the back to let rain trickle into tiny pockets of soil where the plants grow. Plants were set in as the wall was built, and each is truly a gardener's delight. There are heaths, heathers, plumbago, and tiny alpines—alyssum, anemone, edelweiss, campanula, dianthus, saxifraga, sempervivum, and more. A few dwarf evergreens dot the top of the bed—juniper, spruce, Hinoki cypress, and a miniature rhododendron. Because every drop of water is critical to the small soil pockets, Mr. Crockett added bits of long-fibered sphagnum moss to hold extra moisture. Pebbles sprinkled on top of the soil prevent weeds and ensure cool roots. With occasional trimming, plants stay small and easy to care for. To make your own rockery, see page 156.

One sensational color to unite it with the living room; mirrored panels to make it disappear

First came the color—the deepest of peony pinks—and all the other design decisions followed. It went on all the walls—living room, bedroom, and kitchen, even inside cabinets and cupboards, uniting the apartment in one continuous sweep of color.

In fashion consultant Pamela Kane's small windowless kitchen, she and designer Ronald Crosetti kept original equipment and cabinets but lowered the ceiling, painted it peony, and added mirror back splashes for sparkle. When there's no time to clean up before dinner, the kitchen simply vanishes behind folding mirrored doors that reflect the living room and the view of San Francisco from the terrace. Just outside the kitchen is the round dining table covered in a French country print over white moiré. "I prefer sit-down dinners for six," Pamela says, "but more often than not friends drop in and dinner is transformed into a buffet for ten."

The invisible kitchen

When you have a love affair with one strong color, play it cool with expanses of mirror, lots of white

Although the deep peony pink blooms all over Ms. Kane's apartment, the way she used it creates a whole garden of variety. In the living room, for instance, an entire wall of mirror cools down the color, expanses of white give it a lift, and two different patterns—stripes and flowers—broaden its personality. In the bedroom, the peony, used as a foil for white furniture and fabrics, takes on a surprising new mood—quieter and more serene. "To use the same strong color in every room, you really have to love it," says Ms. Kane. "This one is a color I'll never get tired of." There's more to the color story than just affection, however. When you start off with a smallish space, one-stroke color is a smart way to make it seem twice its size, push back the walls, avoid stops and contrasts, keep the eye moving. All that mirror does expansive things to space, too: The wall behind the sofa doubles the room's width and gives a graceful proportion to the swagged-back curtains, and the kitchen's mirrored doors give the illusion of a second terrace view that, on a clear day, goes on forever. Within this spatial sleight of hand, Ms. Kane fills her life with flowers, collections, and the people she loves to entertain.

Statistics developed at the Research Triangle Institute in North Carolina show there is a "brain drain to the South"; new laboratories and facilities worth $100 million are currently being built in the North Carolina area.

Not that a new arrival to the Sunbelt will feel immediately at home. The New York Times reporter Grace Lichtenstein, who admitted she'd never been out of Brooklyn for more than 3 weeks at a time, recently went to the Southwest for the Times and wrote a book about her experiences, Desperado (Dial). In it she wrote, "Culture shock rocked me like the reverberations of a small earthquake. Minute things, like getting hash browns with each order of breakfast eggs. Mustard instead of ketchup on a cheeseburger..." Out dancing in a New Mexico inn, she noted, "You need good elbows and pointy boots at the Golden Inn; New Mexicans dance with pounding, foot-stomping abandon that makes New York discos look like tea dances."

This abandon is reflected in other interesting statistics about life in the Sunbelt. The divorce rate in Texas and California is more than double the divorce rate in New York and Pennsylvania; the divorce rate in Florida, Oklahoma, and Wyoming is nearly triple the divorce rate in New Jersey and Massachusetts.

It is a freewheeling life, without traditions, without ties, and it appeals to the new thriving business communities and also to the people who have always followed the sun—the great American playmakers, who have discovered that certain parts of the Sunbelt offer not only a perfect climate and miles of glorious beaches, but also some of the best sporting facilities in the world. They offer, in short, an invitation to join a year-round playground for children and adults. More and more people are finding it hard to turn down.

SPINACH WITH ROQUEFORT BUTTER
Blanch leaf spinach in boiling water and pat dry. Sauté quickly in browned butter and serve immediately with a pat of butter and Roquefort blended. Paula Wolfert, author of Mediterranean Cooking (Quadrangle).

TONIC FOR HERBS
All herbs have to rest once in a while. When they appear tired, place them in the refrigerator. After they have been in there long enough (thinking it is winter), they will begin to sprout. Take them out and move to a sunny window. From Peter Dunlop of Horticulture House in New York.

CREAMY VEGETABLE DRESSING FOR SALADS

GREEN CABBAGE WITH GINGER AND WATER CHESTNUTS
Shred cabbage finely and sauté 4-5 minutes in butter in a large pan. At last minute stir in a few small slices fresh ginger and sliced water chestnuts. Try the same idea with broccoli. Peel the stems, and slice finely.

Keep well-scrubbed ginger, unpeeled, in a jar of white wine in the refrigerator. It will keep moist indefinitely this way and doesn't need peeling when you use it. From Bonnie Fleuridas, an artist living in Scottsdale, Ariz.

FENNEL, ORANGE, AND WATERCRESS SALAD
Fennel adds a subtle fragrance and crispness to wintry salads that might need some spice. Trim bulbs and stalks removing any stringy bits. Reserve feathery tops for sprinkling over dishes as you would parsley. Sliver fennel into neat, short strips and combine with oranges and watercress. Dress with orange and lemon juices and oil. Or toss fennel matchsticks with blanched green beans, sliced oil-cured black olives, and a light mustard-chive vinaigrette. From food writer Elizabeth Colchie, who is writing a cookbook.

SAUTÉED SPINACH WITH PINE NUTS AND CURRANTS
Melt 4 tablespoons clarified butter in a large skillet. Soak ¼ cup currants in madeira to cover for ½ hour and drain. When butter is hot and sizzling, add 4 tablespoons pine nuts, currants, and 1 pound fresh spinach. Stir fry with tongs or chopsticks so all surfaces get heat and butter. Remove from heat just as spinach begins to wilt. Do not let it wilt completely; dish should look like half-wilted spinach salad. Season with salt and pepper and serve immediately to 4. From Michele Urvater, who runs a cooking school in New York City.

SALSA VERDE TO SERVE AS A DIP
for crudites or to accompany hot steamed vegetables or sausages: Combine 2 hard-boiled eggs, 1 large bunch parsley, 5 anchovy fillets, 1 small onion, 2 pieces red pimento, and put through a grinder. Mix 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, 1 small bunch garlic, 1 cup olive oil, fresh black pepper to taste, ½ cup red wine vinegar, and ½ tablespoons medium-size capers together in a bowl. Combine with ground ingredients and taste. It must have a distinctive vinaigrette taste. If it doesn't, add more vinegar. From Alfredo Viazzi's Trattoria Da Alfredo in New York's Greenwich Village.

Delicious greens in simple party food from the Florida keys

“The best dishes for desultory hot days are simple ones: fresh foods that need little cooking—crisp vegetables, salads, and fruit,” says designer Angelo Donghia, who entertains frequently under the sun at his renovated Victorian house in Key West. “We eat outdoors: people either perch by the pool or sit in the shade of a cluster of palms.” Parties are always at ease: A typical lunch might be the shrimp boiled in beer, right, to be dipped with chopsticks into a tangy watercress dip or a frittata rich with leeks, zucchini, and mushrooms (good either hot and puffy or cold the next day). A roomy kitchen is a passageway to the garden and sunporch and the hub of the house. “Everything is conveniently within arm’s length with equipment and provisions stashed on open shelves.” Setting the table is half the fun for Mr. Donghia, “I believe in decorating tables with leaves, vines, flowers,” and he puts his own sheet designs (for Utica Fine Arts by J. P. Stevens) to work as drip-dry placemats and napkins.

2 pounds large shrimp, washed but left in their shells
Green sauce dip (recipe below)

METHOD
□ Put beer in a large pot with the spices and bring to a boil. Drop cold shrimp in and cook for 6 minutes or until shrimp are very pink. Drain and cool.
□ Arrange on plates or around seashells and serve with green sauce dip. Serves 4.

Watercress dip
□ Put 1 cup homemade or bottled mayonnaise in blender with 1 bunch watercress; blend until smooth. Season with salt, pepper, juice of ½ lemon. Makes about 1 ½ cups sauce.

Frittata

INGREDIENTS
3 large leeks with green tops
1 large green pepper
1 medium size zucchini
½ pound mushrooms, sliced
5 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons olive oil
Salt, pepper
12 eggs
¼ cup milk
¼ teaspoon baking powder
Fresh or dried basil
¼ cup mozzarella cheese, diced
Parsley, chopped

METHOD
□ Coarsely chop the vegetables and add to a medium-sized, oven-going skillet with 4 tablespoons of the butter and 2 tablespoons of the oil. Sauté gently until vegetables seem well cooked and soft, but not brown. Add remaining butter and oil to the vegetables, salt and pepper to taste, and remove from heat. Reserve.
□ Break the eggs into a bowl, add the milk, baking powder, a dash of salt and pepper, and basil to taste. Beat with a wire whisk until fluffy. Place vegetable mixture back on medium heat. When it begins to cook again, pour on egg mixture. Add mozzarella so that the cheese sinks below the surface. Cook until eggs set lightly, about 3–4 minutes. Place in a preheated 375° oven for about 15 minutes. Watch carefully. Mixture will be cooked, brown, and fluffy. Garnish with parsley and serve. Serves 4–6.

Velvety wines for dessert

The current emphasis on dry wines and the neglect of dessert wines is unfortunate, for it can deprive people of getting to know some of the most pleasurable wines on earth. A dessert wine—most often a Sauternes, Rhine, sweet sherry, champagne, port, or madeira—can be expensive, but need not be. With a bit of looking around, a perfectly adequate one can be found for $3. Whenever my wife makes a special effort with her menu, I pour a wine with dessert and it almost never fails to please even guests who insist they like only dry wines. A well-selected dessert wine is an easy way of making a meal special, of turning a dinner into a banquet, and that is why people who are unfamiliar with the practice should try it.

One of the best dessert wines, really one of the world’s greatest sweet white wines, is Sauternes (note the final “s”). True Sauternes comes only from the village of that name and four surrounding communes in southwestern France, about 30 miles south of Bordeaux. Wine experts use words like powerful, velvety, golden, perfumed, unctuous, and elegant to describe Sauternes, and all of them are justified.

Sauternes gets its special character from a mold, botrytis cinerea, which coats the grapes, producing what the French call pourriture noble, which sounds nicer than its English translation: noble rot. The mold’s attack causes the grapes to shrivel and lose their water, thus increasing the concentration of sugar in their juice. Unlike other wine areas where the harvest is done all at once, in the Sauternes region overripe grapes are snipped from their bunches one at a time. The pickers must return many times before the harvest is complete, which runs up the cost of producing the wine.

Unquestionably the greatest Sauternes is Château d’Yquem, which has been famous for centuries. In fact Thomas Jefferson fell under its spell when he was Minister to France and later had it sent to Monticello. Unfortunately, a bottle of d’Yquem is as expensive as it is good, prices of $30 to $100 being common. So it is less a wine to go with dessert than one to be savored by itself the night you win the lottery. Luckily, however, most of the Sauternes vineyards maintain a high standard and there are bottles for every purse.

Two châteaux, Climens and Coutet, are not far behind d’Yquem in quality and can be found for $8 to $10. After them come a number of bargains. Châteaux Suduiraut, Doisy-Daëne, Rayne-Vigneau, Guiraud, Sigalas-Rabaud, and Lafaurie-Peyraguey sell in the $5.50 to $7.50 range and are worth every penny of it. Because Sauternes is currently unfashionable in France and in this country, it sells for less than a red Bordeaux of equal quality. That is nice for those who appreciate it.

Sauternes is about as high in alcohol, 14 percent to 16 percent, as an unfortified wine can be. So you don’t have to pour much of it. Two ounces of well-chilled Sauternes is a proper serving, but it should not be offered in mean little glasses. A full-size wineglass helps bring out its splendid bouquet. It goes very well with pastry, petit fours, macaroons, and dessert soufflés, or it can be served by itself at the end of the meal instead of dessert. Like most sweet wines, Sauternes goes poorly with acid fruits, such as apples, berries, cherries, pineapples, plums, and tarts made from these fruits.

Competing strongly with Sauternes as the world’s best sweet wines are the German Rieslings made from late-picked grapes that also have benefited from the noble rot. Many Americans are put off by Germany’s bewildering array of wine areas, townships, and vineyards. However, to select a dessert wine only four words need be understood: Spätlesse, Auslese, Beerenauslese, and Trockenbeerenauslese.

Spätlesse on a label means that the grapes were picked later than the run-of-the-vineyard grapes. The wine will be a bit sweeter and fuller than that made from the earlier pickups. Spätlesse bottlings cover a vast price range, from $2.99 on up, depending on quality. In general, however, they are more of a dinner than a dessert wine. Auslese is another matter, a true dessert wine. The word means “selection,” and only the ripest bunches of grapes were picked. Auslese wines can cost whatever the buyer is willing to pay: a modest price for a lesser vineyard, more for a well-known one.

The next step up is Beerenauslese, “berry selection,” which means that individual grapes were cut from bunches, as is done in Sauternes. Beerenauslese is only made in good years; it is quite sweet with an excellent bouquet and flavor. Expect to pay $20 to $40. At the absolute summit is Trockenbeerenauslese, made from individually picked grapes that are left on the vines until they are dry and shriveled. The wine, made in tiny quantities in great years, is extraordinarily fine and will set you back from Continued on page 114

S50 to $100. True lovers of such wines say they are too great to drink with food. They serve them—reverently—after dinner.

You can argue lengthily but fruitlessly about the relative quality of Trockenbeerenauslese and top-level Sauternes. What can be agreed on is that the German wines are lower in alcohol. After that it's a matter of preference. The question isn't whether Tristan and Isolde or Carmen is the better opera; it's which one do you prefer.

In recent years California growers have started to produce late-harvested Rieslings in the German manner. Wente Brothers Riesling Spätlese, at $8, is considered a very successful version. A moderately priced wine from Christian Brothers, Château LaSalle ($2.50) also is an interesting domestic sweet wine and a good buy.

Clearly one of the best buys and the easiest to serve among dessert wines is sweet sherry. It needs neither chilling nor decanting; it is widely available, and good bottles can be bought for as little as $3.50. There are good domestic sherries such as Almadén's Golden Cream Sherry, which is made in the traditional solera system and, at $2.30, is excellent value. Among other California wine-makers, Paul Masson, Louis M. Martini, and Beringer produce cream sherries that should be tried, for around $3 a bottle.

Sherries from the area around Jerez de la Frontera in southwestern Spain set the standard for sherry worldwide. In Jerez, grape brandy is added to the wine to bring the alcohol level to up to 17 to 20 percent. Then the wine is carefully aged and blended with older wines to smooth, sweeten, and color the sherry. The Consejo Regulador, which controls the Jerez area, has done a good job of keeping quality up, making Spanish sherry a reliable purchase. Sherry ranges from bone-dry fino (a most civilized sherry a reliable purchase. Sherry ranges from bone-dry fino (a most civilized sherry) with dessert, but there is a good argument for extra-dry, which is sweeter. Extra-dry also has the advantage of being about a dollar less per bottle. Another advantage is that this is a good time to buy champagne. The relative weakness of the franc and efforts by French champagne makers to expand their markets here cause imported champagne to be available for less than the top California brands. Champagne also is simple to select. The great houses in Epernay and Rheims have been in business a long time and consistently produce a good product. A rule of thumb is: If you've heard of the champagne house and the price is right, buy the wine. Also, some lesser-known producers sell good champagne for less than the big houses. Pommery & Greno, Lanson, Deutz, and Laurent Perrier are excellent buys when found on sale at around $8. American champagne making has made strides recently and since domestic champagne tends to be sweet, it is ideal for dessert use. A good inexpensive California champagne is Almadén's Le Domaine, which I saw for $3.29 recently. Hanns Kornell makes one of the best domestic Champagnes in the higher-priced class. Among other conscientious California champagne makers are Beaulieu, Christian Brothers, Korbel, Paul Masson, Mirassou, and Schramsberg, the latter producing one of this country's best regarded champagnes, at about $9 the bottle.

Most of the Sauternes vineyards maintain a high standard and there are bottles for every purse

Two tips on serving champagne: The less expensive the wine, the colder it ought to be, since overchilling helps disguise the flavor of a poor sparkling wine. Champagne should not be served in the flat, saucer-shaped glasses called coupes. It loses its bubbles too fast in such glasses, which are better reserved for ices or berries. Champagne looks better and keeps its bubbles longer in a regular tulip-shaped wineglass or the tall, narrow glass known as a flute.

Unlike champagne, there is no debate about whether port is a dessert wine. The only discussion is if a fine port should be served with the dessert or by itself after coffee. Port properly is a strong, sweet wine coming from vineyards around Oporto in northern Portugal. During fermentation, the wine is put in casks containing brandy. This halts the fermentation before all the natural sugar has been turned into alcohol and helps give port its distinctive taste. The very best port is clearly labeled Vintage Port and is an unblended wine of a very good year. It is expensive and needs 10 to 15 years in bottle to mature. It also throws a very heavy sediment, called crust, and must be decanted carefully. This makes Vintage Port more a wine for connoisseurs than for casual service at meals.

Most port shipped here is ruby port, a young, sweet, fruity, and quite pleasant wine. It is a good choice for dessert. A shade better is tawny port, an older wine that has spent some years in barrel and has turned a golden brown color. Tawny port is widely available around $5 and ruby port for less. The Port Wine Institute permits only the highest quality third of the area's production to be called port, so a customer can expect fair value for his money in any category of port.

It is a shame that Americans don't drink more madeira, since it is a fine wine and was the favorite wine of our Colonial forebears. It is an aged and blend fortified wine made on the beautiful island of Madeira, a Portuguese possession in the Atlantic. 360 miles off the coast of Morocco, American sailing vessels used to put in at Madeira for food and fresh water and invariably took on a few casks of madeira for the wealthier dinner tables of Colonial Boston, Philadelphia, and Charleston. Madeira makers now mature it in barrels in heated rooms to simulate the effect of a voyage in clipper ships centuries ago. France buys more madeira today than any other country and mostly uses it in cooking. The wine ranges from dry, rainwater, to the sweet and darkly golden malmsey. Dry madeira is sometimes labeled Sercial, for the grape used, and is not ideal with dessert. Wines labeled Bual are sweet and golden, start at $3.70 a bottle, and should be looked for.

A wine that is neither sweet nor associated with dessert but should not be overlooked is Gewürztraminer, made from the spicy traminer grape in Alsace. This wine has a unique fruity spiciness that is not to everyone's taste, but those who try it often dote on it. Gewürztraminer (Hugel is a reliable shipper, whose 1975 sells for $4) is an unexpected pleasure with cream-filled cakes such as angel food and sponge cake. Good Gewürztraminer also is made in California.

Finally, a tip for those times when you don't want to buy a dessert wine but do have American chablis in the house. This idea comes from my wife Carol Cutler's first cookbook, Haute Cuisine for Your Heart's Delight (Clarkson N. Potter). Carol says all you need are six good bottles of inexpensive dry white wine. Plunge the peaches into boiling water for 30 seconds and lift out with a skimmer. As soon as they can handle the peaches, slip off the skins. Promptly put the peaches in a wide-mouthed glass pitcher and pour the chilled wine over the peaches to prevent discoloration. If one pitcher isn't large enough to hold all the peaches and wine, use two. Put in the refrigerator for at least 2 hours. The peach flavor will perfume the wine in that time. Pour the now-improved wine during the meal and serve the wine-soaked peaches for dessert. Serves 6.

Wash in cold water. Place them in an oval enamelware dish with a little water so they are about all the same length.

BRASS SCALIIONS

Scallions are sometimes the only vegetable in the market that look fresh and appealing. This is a very simple way to use them. Wash and trim 1 bunch scallions for each serving—cut off, roots, and trim just the damaged parts of green tops so they are about the same length. Wash in cold water. Place them in an oval enamelware dish with a little water (about 1/4 cup per bunch), salt lightly, and add 1-2 teaspoons olive oil per bunch. Scallions should only be a few deep to cook evenly. Bring to a boil, cover, and cook over high heat 4-5 minutes. Give a twist or two of the peppermill. Check for salt, and serve with the cooking liquid. They are equally good cold. From Karen Hess, author with her husband, John Hess of The Taste of America (Viking).

JULIENNED CUCUMBERS IN CREAM

For 4 people, take 3 8-inch cucumbers, peel them thinly, and cut in 2-inch lengths. Upend the sections and cut into 1/8-inch strips—the results really look like matchsticks. Soak cucumber matchsticks in brine water in the refrigerator 12 hours. This will make them very crisp. Shortly before serving, drain and dry the cucumbers on towels. Bring 1/2 cup heavy cream to a boil and reduce for 5 minutes. Add cucumbers and cook only as long as it takes for the cream to come back to sauce consistency. Taste for salt, add freshly ground black pepper and lemon juice to taste (about 1/2 lemon). Serve in little individual casseroles, particularly with fish, but also with veal and chicken. From Frères Troïgos in France.

SNOW PEAS, SCALLIONS, AND SWISS CHARD

Stir fry snow peas with sticks of scallion and Swiss chard stems. When just crisp, cover with chard greens and let them wilt. Serve immediately. From José Wilson, author with Arthur Leaman of The Complete Food Catalogue (Holt, Rinehart & Winston).

VEGETABLES ON THE SHELF

Stock up with cans of artichoke bottoms. Drain and fill with a variety of stuffings. Cottage or cream cheese blended with finely minced scallions, a tablespoon or two of light soy sauce and a little grated fresh ginger. Or fill with finely chopped chicken liver topped with a garnish of grated red radish. Drain tiny brine shrimp and toss with lemon-peppered homemade mayonnaise and crumbled hard-boiled eggs. From Doris Tobias, author with Mary Merris of The Golden Lemon, which is soon to be published by Atheneum.

TURNIPS GLACÉE

Choose your turnips and cut into oliveshapes. Blanch until crisp-tender, drain, and sauté with butter in a skillet without browning. Serve with lemon slices and chopped parsley.

POTATO-TURNIP PURÉE IN TURPIN CUPS

Peel and boil young turnips until tender. Cut in half, scoop out center pulp to form cups. Set pulp aside. Fry cups in butter with a rosemary sprig. Purée pulp and mix with equal parts potato purée. Season with salt and an extra amount of freshly ground black pepper. Return purée to cups. Squeeze fresh lemon juice over and add a touch of grated onion. Dot with butter and heat through in oven about 10-12 minutes. From writer, Mollie E. C. Webster.

STEAMED BEETS AND TOPS

Cut greens from 2 bunches small beets. Trim, wash, and peel with a vegetable peeler. Cut into slices. Cut the stems from the leaves and wash the leaves in several changes of water. Shake dry. Put the cut beets into a saucepan. Add 1/2 cup sugar. Add 2 tablespoons butter and a little salt and pepper. Top with the leaves. Add another tablespoon sugar and a little salt and pepper. Cook, covered, over medium heat for 5-10 minutes, tossing occasionally. This dish is ready when the beets are tender and the pan juices have cooked down to a few tablespoonsfuls. Serves 4. How to turn a spot of tea into cocoa.

Do you have a set of linen or cotton place mats or a tablecloth you'd like to change into a rich color like cocoa brown? It's very easy to do. But first, if the fabric has stains—like tea, for instance—remove them before dyeing to make sure the color takes evenly. Follow these simple RIT tips and you'll be on your way to a beautifully even dye job:

Do's
1. Wash item thoroughly.
2. Soak spots in powdered oxygen bleach overnight. If the stain is oily, use a heavy-duty liquid detergent or grease remover.
3. For really stubborn stains, use RIT Color Remover.

Don'ts
1. Don't expect dyeing to cover stains unless you've almost completely removed them. (Dark dyes will help to cover light stains that may remain.)
2. Don't try to dye a fabric that a hot iron has scorched or that liquid bleach has spotted.

With RIT Dye.

live the resort life is through the condominium system. You can buy a condominium and live there year-round which presupposes you work in the area or are retired. You can buy it as a second home, using it during the summer months and/or weekends, and renting it out or not as you see fit when it's empty. You can rent it on a time-sharing basis or all year-round, about 80 percent live there all year-round, about 80 percent live there part time and rent their units to others when they are away, and the remaining 10 percent are part-time residents but do not rent their units. Like many other developments, Marco Island also has single-family housing and sells land for private building (subject to the developer's architectural review board), so the community is very varied. You can learn the "mix" of a community you are interested in joining from the rules of the Condominium Association, which set out all the restrictions that would effect ownership, such as number of people to a unit, age, and so forth.

The usual buying procedure is that a developer builds the condominium in the form of apartments, cottages, and villas, or all three, and you choose according to your needs. The majority are sold unfurnished, except, perhaps, for carpeting and appliances. Having chosen your condominium, you can generally either furnish it yourself or get help from local decorators—often a sensible idea, since they know the area and availability of materials. "It can be most inconvenient buying furniture or equipment off the islands," says design expert Tom Riley of Palmas Del Mar in Puerto Rico. "Deliveries are much simpler and time-saving right here, and you can get the authentic island look."

Some condominiums offer a fairly specific color-coordinated base for you to start with. For instance, on Fripp Island, South Carolina, the units are all color-coordinated by designer Jim Torcum, of Plantation Interiors, Hilton Head. "That includes kitchen counters, bathroom fixtures, and carpets," he explains. "I work with the architect, using 3 basic colors: a natural mushroom color, like sand; a green tone, like the palmetto trees; and a blue, like the ocean. So much glass is used here, that one wants to blend as much as possible with nature."

Some years ago, one heard a lot about condominiums designed exclusively for retired people. This means restrictions on children, pets, and so forth. Today, the accent is more on mixed communities, involving retired people, families, vacationers, and locally employed people. Some condominiums are designed almost exclusively for the rental market. Palms Del Mar, which includes kitchen counters, bathroom fixtures, and carpets; slipcover everything; and pick colors that will enhance through fading, that will work well under exposure to extreme light. Buyers will usually visit the area for a week or so sometime before they move in and choose from the designer's suggestions, often on show in a local warehouse. "If you want a view, you get it," says Mr. Torcum. You are also offered "home shopping" in some areas—order-by-mail brochures providing packages for kitchens, bedrooms, and bathrooms, right down to salt shaker and toothbrushes, so you can furnish your resort dwelling without having to make the trip.

If the condominium is being furnished purely for rental, then of course, different principles would apply. "We choose Scotchgard fabric, Parson's tables, simple furniture and fabrics that cannot easily get abused or destroyed," Mr. Torcum says. In Palmas Del Mar, which is designed almost exclusively for the rental market, Mr. Riley tends to choose "a lot of neutral colors and bamboo. No heavy, overstuffed furniture. It's really patio living—the indoor-outdoor life."

The indoor-outdoor life seems to be the common denominator of most resort communities. More and more are being designed specifically around recreation. Sitting on your terrace and watching a championship match, or coming home from work and stepping outside to a magnificent golf course; or simply walking to the end of your dock and taking a twilight sail—just imagine how your life rhythms would change! "Everything is slower-paced here," says Frederick Krantz, ex-city dweller, now captain at the Breakers Hotel, Palm Beach. "People come here to escape the rat race, not to join it. Dressing is informal. In the summer, we insist only on jackets for men in the restaurant, no ties. Home entertainment is casual; lots of brunches, with salads and maybe a broiled snapshot, with white wine. You will also find lots of inexpensive cafeterias around for retired people living on fixed incomes. And it's very easy to find domestic help. For the big city dweller, it must sound like paradise.
WHERE NEXT FOR THE SUNBELT?

The Sunbelt land, not surprisingly, is changing under this astonishing invasion of new inhabitants. As industry moves in, so offices must be built and housing for employees, and facilities for resort lovers. In the past 10 years, for instance, some 1,150 golf courses have been built in the South alone. But more significantly, the devouring of land for development throughout the Sunbelt has been so rapid and all-encompassing that already environmentalists are attempting to call a halt.

In a far-reaching report called "Promised Lands," published by Inform, a New York public interest nonprofit research group, many developers of land to be used for new communities are called to account both in consumer and in environmental areas. The importance of this problem hardly needs stressing: Already many Sunbelt dwellers are becoming aware of the threat to the once-unpolluted land they so eagerly sought.

There is air pollution in Phoenix and Houston. There is a drought in California. There is not enough water in Arizona to feed the proposed new developments there; yet the Central Arizona Project, a scheme to take water from the Colorado River 200 miles east to a dam near Phoenix, will take more money, more energy, and ruin more land than can apparently be justified in terms of irrigation. "What happened in Southern California in the 40s and 50s is happening elsewhere in the South and Southwest," says Inform's legal expert and project director, Patricia Simko. "I'm afraid we've messed it up pretty badly," admits Ken Jenne, county commissioner in the Fort Lauderdale area. Unrestricted growth in the Sunbelt is finally coming under attack as planners and environmentalists warn against "Northern mistakes in a Southern setting."

The Sunbelt states are slowly beginning to initiate minimum standards and review boards, particularly in California and Florida, to counteract this potentially dangerous growth. The Federal Government is also attempting to stop the uncontrolled use of American land. For instance, the Federal Flood Control Act restricts building on land that may cause flash flooding by means of "flood plains" (where there is no water run-off). There are also moves afoot to help the consumer. In a precedent-setting decision last year, the Florida Supreme Court ruled that a Condominium Association acting in a class action on behalf of its members, may challenge recreation and maintenance leases made by developers which turn out to be contrary to the "best interests" of the unit owners. A California Supreme Court decision has supported this form of class action. So consumers and the land are beginning to receive the protection up until now denied them.

There is no doubt, however, that people will continue to migrate to the sun until the land is all used up or fully protected. What happens then?

An intriguing alternative suggests itself. Perhaps the advantages of the sunny life can be exported. Already signs of the Sunbelt's influence can be seen in urban areas and other parts of the country. Resort communities are rising up everywhere from Maine to the Pacific, in ski areas such as the Sugarbush Valley, Vermont, Waterville Valley, New Hampshire, and Aspen, Colorado; vacation places such as Brainerd, Minnesota, Lake Huron, Michigan, Ocean Shores, Washington, Hartstene Island, Puget Sound, and Indian Fort Ranch, Oregon, and even suburban developments such as Muirhead Village, Columbus, Ohio, and Rolling Hills, Staten Island, New York.

The indoor life is also showing signs of Sunbelt influence—the dramatic rise of interest in house plants, for instance, and indoor gardens; the trend to natural fibers, wood, fresher colors, the "stripped down" look. "People who are faced with old, dark apartments, lofts, commercial buildings, and crowded urban outlooks are remaking these spaces in a new way," says New York architect Michael Rubin. "Stripping down windows, taking out overstuffed furniture, streamlining shapes, removing walls."

Designer Michael Taylor, who works on both coasts, agrees that this is a genuine trend. "People in other parts of America want to feel more that they are on vacation—they want to bring home the feeling of the sun. So they are choosing simple looks, with cotton and duck. There is a less decorated feel to rooms in these parts of the country today; shutters, panels, and blinds instead of curtains; scrubbed, bleached floors instead of wall-to-wall carpeting; lots of slipcovers and plants."

If the Sunbelt finds itself one of these days so overwhelmed by seekers of the resort life that it can no longer contain them, then rest assured that you can bring the look, feel, and pace of that environment back home, so that everyone in America has the chance to share in the riches that the glorious sun life has to offer.

WHAT'S SO GREAT ABOUT THE SUNBELT?

1. HEALTH

Of the top 10 cities ranked in terms of good air quality, 6 are in the Sunbelt: San Antonio, Tex. (1); Corpus Christi, Tex. (2); Sacramento, Calif. (3); New Orleans, La. (4); Dallas, Tex. (5); Miami, Fla. (6); Houston, Tex. (8); (Rankings evaluated by the Council on Municipal Performance, New York.)

2. BUSINESS

Of the top 10 states ranked in terms of favorable business climate, 7 are in the Sunbelt: Texas (1); Alabama (2); Virginia (3); S. Carolina (4); N. Carolina (5); Florida (6); Arkansas (7); (Rankings evaluated by Fantus, the industrial-location consultant, Chicago.)

3. RECREATION

Of the top 8 regions ranked in terms of the number of people who took a vacation there, the Sunbelt states come first and fifth: South Region (1)—including Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee; Frontier West Region (5)—including Arizona, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Texas. (Rankings evaluated by the U.S. Travel Data Center, Washington.)

GUIDELINES FOR PROSPECTIVE BUYERS

As long as land encroachment in the Sunbelt continues, ecology-conscious residents or potential residents must be on their toes. According to Patricia Simko, in the older states, such as Maine and Vermont, which are steeped in constitutional tradition, you can be effective at the local level; but in the newer states, effective pressure only really works at the state level. So if you are concerned, it is best to write to your water commissioners and representatives at the state level if you can—and letters do make a difference.

Inform suggests the following guidelines for buyers of second homes, condominiums, or retirement lots in proposed new communities:

1. Check the development before you buy; is it built on a critical area such as a slope, a flood plain, or a wildlife area?
2. Is the land being torn down all around it so that the vegetation will vanish?
3. Is there central sewage, rather than individual septic tanks that you must be responsible for?
4. Has the developer taken care about erosion of land once the development is built?
5. Are there at least 100 feet between your lot and a waterway?

A fuller list of guidelines is contained in Inform's 3-volume document on land development, Promised Lands. Each volume costs $20 and is available from Inform, 25 Broad Street, New York, N.Y. 10004.

Needlepoint Designs from Amish Quilts

Now you can produce your own beautiful adaptations of a unique American folk art in needlecraft—using the patterns of traditional Amish quilts of eastern Pennsylvania, Indiana, Ohio and Kansas.

Authors Laura S. Gilberg and Barbara B. Buchholz—a noted needlecraft expert and an associate editor of House & Garden Guides, found that the vivid color combinations and bold geometric patterns of fine Amish quilts translate beautifully into stunning and unusual stitchery. The result is a richly historical how-to book offering 27 authentic designs—all from one-of-a-kind quilts in private collections.

Stitches, specified colors and yarns not only duplicate the pattern but also the texture of the actual quilt. Included are overall outlines for each example, a beginner-tested stitching graph, stitchery lessons, and complete instructions for making a variety of special projects including wall hangings, pillows, rugs.

So a vertical light garden is not only distinctly different, but probably produces healthier plants as well.

Light gardening is really no different from growing plants on the windowsill except that the plants need more regular water and fertilization for best growth and bloom. Fast growth and light make them thirsty. Also make sure the humidity around the plants is high. With light shining 12 to 14 hours a day, the plants' photosynthesis factory is working overtime. That means they'll need the extra fertilizer and humidity to stay in balance. By the way, in a light garden one tube is not enough. The minimum is two parallel fluorescent lights, better yet four.

Marigolds are as durable indoors as they are outdoors. But remember they are annuals; no matter how painful it is, you'll have to dispose of them once they have blossomed. Start new seeds every 6 months and you'll keep the bower blooming. Grow marigolds with the flower heads no more than a foot and a half from the light bulbs, and never let the soil dry out. You'll have an indoor flower bed all year-round.

GREENHOUSE GARDENING

Tips on building a rock garden: six good books for new greenhouse gardeners; plus an expert's opinion on indoor plants

BY JAMES FANNING

Crockett's rockery

Earth—just plain dirt—is a first-rate insulating material. That is why James Underwood Crockett (page 94) has mounded up the bare cement foundation of his greenhouse with it. Never one to let weeds grow where more attractive plants could be persuaded to do their bit, though, Mr. Crockett has made his mounded-up greenhouse foundation into a rock garden. The prime ingredient is, of course, rocks. But not any old rocks will do for a rock garden. First off, they should be fairly big—pebbles just won't do. They also should be flat on at least two sides, otherwise they won't stack up properly. Whether the rock garden is freestanding, with two or more sides exposed, it should be narrower at the top than at the bottom. This makes for stability and also collects rainfall, rather than shedding it as a vertical wall would. The soil should be a fairly porous mix, with high proportions of sand and humus, packed in between and behind the rocks as they are piled up. If fair-sized plants are used in starting the rock garden, it is a good idea to place them as the rocks are placed, so that the roots may be spread out and buried in the crevices for firm anchorage. Mr. Crockett makes sure the soil does not wash out from between his rocks by threading it with strands of sphagnum moss. This eventually decays, of course, but by that time the soil will have become well stabilized. Perhaps the ultimate test of a rock garden is ease of maintenance. The stones should be big enough and firmly enough placed so that you can step on them when weeding or cultivating, and the crevices should be narrow enough to discourage any plants that are not supposed to grow there.

Burying a greenhouse up to the eaves is the next step beyond James Underwood Crockett's banked-up foundation. In this case, the glass roof is all that appears above ground. If some means of covering the glass on cold nights is provided, there is no need for any heat in addition to that collected from the sun during the day. All of this is explained in a book that has become a classic of its kind: Winter Flowers in Greenhouse and Sun-Heated Pit, by Kathryn S. Taylor, reissued and updated by Edith W. Gregg (Scribner's, $4.95 paperback). And then there is the greenhouse with special arrangements for collecting and storing sun heat. There are several ways of doing this (see page 36). The Food and Heat Producing Solar Greenhouse, by Rick Fisher and Bill Yanda (Bookpeople, 2940 Seventh St., Berkeley, Calif. 94710, $6 paperback) gives special attention to the year-round production of food at home, this may very well point the way to an ecology-conscious and energy-conserving future.

During the winter, the knowledgeable gardener studies the lists and catalogs of mail-order plant suppliers, and whenever a desirable, hard-to-come-by plant appears, he hastens to place an order for spring delivery. This makes sense for several reasons. Many mail-order nurseries specialize in plants of a particular species and may be expected to have not only top-quality examples but also the widest possible variety of whatever their specialty may be. Mail-order firms, too, can stock many more items—whether plants or general garden supplies—than even the biggest nursery or garden shop has counter space for. Deliveries are prompt, and live plants usually arrive in top-notch condition. Armchair shopping presents no payment problems, either—you can send your personal check or, in most cases, charge your order with a nationally accepted credit card. There’s no urge to make hasty decisions when shopping by mail. Go over the lists and check one against another—an almost impossible task when you’re shopping on the spot. Keep in mind, however, that first-rate material is in great demand, so order as early as possible.

from taxes. Note, however, that you can't use the unit for more than 13 days each year. Moreover, you could lose this privilege if you can't show a profit for two out of every five years.

Since you will, in effect, be an absentee owner, you have to take some special precautions when looking at vacation condominium units. Some points to check out before you buy:
● Management is absolutely critical to successful vacation developments. The staff should have extensive condominium or resort hotel experience. The management contract can tell you a lot if you take the time to read it. For example, if it provides for a day between occupants to give the unit a thorough cleanup, as well as a period during the year for extensive maintenance, you can tell you're dealing with professionals. They should also establish reserves for furniture and appliance replacement.
● Look for developments that are designed for year-round use so that costs can be spread over many owners and renters.
● The condominium development as well as the surrounding area should be graced with the kinds of vacation amenities that will attract other owners.

If you buy a vacation home or condo-ing unit that doesn't enjoy some of those management extras, you'll have to accept the responsibility of renting it out yourself. Your best bet is to scout the area for a good real-estate broker or rental agent to handle this chore for you.
When you talk to agents and brokers, make sure that they are also willing to stop by your place every so often to make sure that everything is in order.

VACATION HOUSE
SWAPPING
Of course, one drawback to owning a vacation home is that it ties you to one place. After all, if you own a vacation getaway in the mountains, you almost feel compelled to use it—even if a vacation by the sea seems like a nice change of pace and place. Well, now house swapping is easy to arrange. A host of vacation home exchange clubs have sprung up to help you exchange houses with others.

The Vacation Exchange Club (350 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10013) has an annual list of thousands of people who are interested in swapping houses.
The listing, which covers 48 states and some 38 countries, also includes a brief description of the eligible homes. Cost:
$12 a year for those who want to list their homes. If you just want to rent your home, it costs $9 a year.

The Holiday Home Exchange Bureau (Grants, N. Mex. 87020) lists homes in the U.S. and abroad in an annual directory that's updated with monthly supplements. Cost: $15 a year.

Vacation swap clubs provide only names and addresses. It's up to you to arrange the actual exchange. And since the clubs do not vouch for the condition of the houses that are listed, you'd be wise to swap photos—so that you'll know what you're getting.

11 CHECKPOINTS ON HOW TO BUY A CONDOMINIUM
A condominium offers you all the advantages of owning a house. You can get a mortgage on it, deduct interest payments, use it as collateral, sell it at a profit, and leave it to your heirs. However that's where the similarities end. A condominium is also fraught with a lot of hidden costs (for management and maintenance) that may not be under your control. If you don't shop carefully, you may be locked into a contract that costs you more and more every year.

What to watch out for:
● Developers who want an advance payment for the "maintenance fund," even though the project is still under construction. Shy away from the condominium. There's no maintenance on a building that hasn't been completed yet.
● If the developer wants a deposit of up to one-third of your unit's cost, make sure the money goes into an escrow account rather than into construction costs —otherwise you may not get your deposit back if the developer goes bank-r upt.
● Condominium salesmen are fond of stressing the low cost of maintaining the building's common areas, such as hall-ways, lobbies, grounds, and elevators.
Don't believe the figures they quote.
Often when the tenants move in and the developer moves out, assessments double. Demand a full breakdown of the maintenance budget so that you can ask a real-estate pro if it's reasonable.
● Have a structural engineer check out the condominium, just as you'd have him check out a new house you plan to buy.
Otherwise you might be surprised by big bills to replace shoddy air conditioners, pipes, or electrical systems. Some good developers offer warranties—which vary in length—on structure and equipment.
● The condominium should have sufficient capital reserves to prevent a sudden, extraordinary assessment should a major problem arise.
● When the developer has a long-term management contract with the condo-munity—to ensure continuing, professional service—make certain the condo-munity association has the right to cancel the contract after a reasonable period of time. You should also be able to cancel any contracts the developer, in his management role, has signed with outside firms—in case the contracts are sweetheart arrangements. An owners' association that wants to run the building itself could cut the management fee to 2 or 3 percent.
● Have your lawyer check the condo-munity contract. Some developers, particularly in Florida, retain ownership of the land the condominium occupies, as well as its recreational facilities. They lease them to the owners for 99 years, often with a cost-of-living escalator clause. After a few years, the extra rental payments can be enormous. Don't buy if there's a rent escalator and no option-to purchase after 10 years or less. What's worse, if your deal includes a lease and you don't pay your rent, you can lose your condominium. There may be a lien on your unit, and nonpayment triggers it.
Do examine all the lease arrangements carefully. When the developer owns the land, you shouldn't have to pay as much for the condo as you would for a unit that also owns part of the land on which it was built.

● Find out if the recreational facilities are owned by the condominiums or by the developer. If they're owned by the developer, you will probably have to ante up a membership fee to use those facilities. And do be very wary of low-membership fees if the condominium development is fairly new. Many developers have a well-deserved reputation for sucking in buyers by charging very modest fees for recreational facilities—and then boosting the fees dramatically once the units are sold.

● Check out the developer's track rec-cord on past condominium developments.
Don't be afraid of asking him for the names of tenants in some of his other developments. And do make certain to ask for financial references.

● Generally, you would be better off avoiding condominiums that haven't been built yet. For one thing, construction and interest costs are rising, which means that new condo units will be much more expensive than those that have been built. And also, there are fewer potential problems or surprises if the building has already been up.

● Get everything in writing, take nothing on a handshake.

When it comes to replacing dishwashers, most people choose KitchenAid.

People who have had experience with dishwashers don’t just think KitchenAid is best. They buy it.

Whatever their reasons, more people over the years have replaced their old dishwashers with KitchenAid than with any other brand. And that’s something to think about when you’re thinking about buying a dishwasher.

The beauty secret that keeps Royal Velvet towels young.

Our secret is invisible. It's locked in the weave.

You can't see our secret. But it's what makes Fieldcrest towels resist shrinking, puckering and tearing while they keep their shape through use, through laundering, through all the punishment a towel is asked to take.

Fieldcrest towels start out in life and stay just as absorbent as any towels you've ever owned. That's because only cotton touches the skin. Soft, thirsty 100% cotton. That's no secret. But—we know that cotton alone isn't enough to keep a towel young. So in the part that doesn't touch the skin, we lock in the polyester reinforcement it takes to help keep a towel young and bouncy and beautiful. And we do it with every towel we make.

You see, we don't think any towel should start showing signs of middle age just when it's in the prime of life. And that's our secret. Isn't it beautiful?

The loop is 100% cotton. The base (arrow) holds the secret that keeps our towels young.

"Regulateurs" was the name given to long case clocks in 18th century Austria. With their longpendulums, they were extremely accurate. A standard of accuracy for other clocks. Our Vienna Regulator is an authentic interpretation of a popular Austrian clock of the 1800's. Note its fired porcelain enamel and brass dial. The solid oak case has glass side panels and a carved pediment.

Striking examples of our wall and mantel clocks. They strike on the hour . . . play the beautiful chimes of Westminster every 15 minutes. Their high quality West German key-wind movements were made in the Black Forest, where clocks have been made since the 1600's. You'll find these and many other striking wall, mantel and grandfather clocks at your Howard Miller dealer. Start a family tradition with a Howard Miller clock.

In the early 17th century, Thomas Tompion was the most celebrated of English clock makers. This elegant timepiece was inspired by his work and we have named it after him. The rare Carpathian Elm burl facing on the door is skillfully accented with gold decoration. The mirrored back and glass inserts show off the excellent West German movement. Tompion would be proud.
These classic Gorham Sterling Originals are the latest thing in dining.

Many people don't know they were introduced over 60 years ago.

Many things have changed in the last 60 years. But one thing hasn't. An investment in a true work of art will always endure... like Gorham Sterling Originals. These are some of Gorham's oldest and most famous designs. They are true works of art in sterling whose timeless beauty has made them even more popular today than when they were first introduced.

But timeless beauty is only one of the distinct qualities that will safeguard your investment in Gorham Sterling. Incomparable craftsmanship is another. Each Original is made of solid sterling silver, a precious metal that's becoming scarcer. Gorham uses this treasured silver to create a total design concept for each of its Originals. A concept with perfect balance between ornamentation, shape, and function. Each curve, line, or flower of every Gorham Original is executed with the same painstaking attention to detail on the back as it is on the front.

The Gorham Hallmark has represented the pride of the silversmith's art since 1831. It says your Sterling is the ultimate in beauty, craftsmanship, and value. Isn't it time you owned a Gorham Original?
By midwinter some plants may be looking a bit overgrown and need a trim. When you cut them back, make the most of the trimmings by propagation. One easy method can be used for most cuttings. Be sure three or four nodes are on the cut stem and discard excess bottom leaves. Take a watertight pan, similar to those used for the cat, the dark room, or one purchased at a plant store—fill it with 2 inches of perlite or vermiculite or a mix of both: dip the cutting in Rootone, a hormone powder, which helps protect the cutting base from disease and gives the cutting an edge on growing; then place the cutting in the rooting material and keep damp in a relatively warm, well-lit area.

If you are fond of African violets and begonias, they can be rooted in soil from a healthy leaf. Begonia leaf veins should be cut slightly on the underside and securely placed right side up in moist soil. Some plants such as strawberry begonias and spider plants develop runners, which are miniatures of the parent plant and can be easily planted in a smaller pot while they are still connected to the parent. After roots develop, they are snipped off the parent. Some succulents and cacti are easily propagated. A part of the parent plant may fall off automatically and develop on its own. Mother of thousands, a succulent, is a good example. Some cuttings such as ivy grow roots when placed in water, later to be transferred to soil. Party on the wing

No matter where you live, chef Robert Wemischner of Beverly Hills, Calif., with a string of French, three-star restaurant apprenticeships behind him, will cater your party. One Saturday morning recently, he and partner Marge Levine, below, fixed an entire buffet dinner for 30 and placed it on a midday airliner to Newark, N.J. There it was picked up by the host and driven home to be refrigerated overnight. Sunday, dinner was heated and glowingly served. The menu: a spinach and cheese, wafer-thin strudel, salmon pâté with creamy dill sauce, chicken Normandy, lemon tarts, chocolate truffles, French macaroons. $20 per person, plus $60 plane handling. Le Grand Buffet, 9527 Santa Monica Boulevard, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90210.

Better build it yourself

Architect and designer Peter Stamberg’s book Instant Furniture (Van Nostrand Reinhold) has sold 20,000 copies since it came out a year ago. Proof in deed of the do-it-yourself pull. Nine of the designs in that book are now available in kits which include wood pre-cut into the proper lengths, instructions, glue, and nails. “It’s furniture for the real world,” says Stamberg. “People want quality, intriguing design at a price that won’t hurt their budget.” What’s special about these wood pieces is they’re by top designers: Enzo Mari, Carlo Scarpa, and Takahama who collaborate with Stamberg and Dino Gavina in their studio in Bologna, Italy. Bloomingdale’s will have some of these designs. Kits start at $45 for a chair; $150, dining table; étagère, $160. And a long, narrow “Hosonaga” table fits behind a sofa. Polyurethane coating keeps pieces clean.
At about $14, it's not everybody's bag.

Opera lovers will be delighted to know that not only can they take opera to their hearts, they can wear it on their backs and help the Met, too. Charles Caine, Staff Costume Designer for the Metropolitan Opera in New York, has designed vests for men and women plus a sumptuous woman's evening bag made in a gorgeous collage of fabrics from the costumes worn in five productions. The vests look like stained-glass on black velvet; even the evening bag is made of black velvet.

For men, the vests come in silk and all have an official label sewn inside with the names of the productions the vests were worn in five. The vests are made in a handsome collection of stain glass colors from the 60s, my favorite. In coffeehouses in the 60s, my favorite drink, after consuming enough cappuccino to bring the philosophical discussion to a heady peak, was a tall, cool glass of tamarind juice. A refreshing drink made from a syrupy extract mixed with water. The coffeehouses have for the most part been replaced by fast-food franchises. But the tamarind remains—in the form of a splendid indoor tree, tamarindus indica. The long flat beans, which the tamarind tree produces, and from which the syrup is made, are often available at health-food stores. If you find some, clean the flesh from the seeds—it's a bit dry, but quite flavorful when eaten out of hand. Soak the seeds in tepid water overnight, then plant them in a pot filled with rich soil, such as that used for African violet plants. Three or four seeds to a pot, just in case. The first leaves to break the soil will be a pair of bean halves, totally unlike the foliage the plant will bear in future. Following these seed leaves will be numerous long airy leaves filled out by rows of oval leaflets. Stretching and opening early in the morning, they will fold down into a sleeplike pose at night. The tamarind plant likes its place warm, sunny, and moist. Never let the soil dry out, or you'll have spider mites around. Pinch back the trunk to keep it bushy or let the tree take its natural vertical course. It's striking.

Why not have more "green pavilions" in city spaces, say two French architects, Jean-Max Albert and Arnaud Fougeras-Lagardeolle. They have constructed this three-part wooden trellis—a rectangle inside a pyramid shape with a cube on top—green with honeysuckle, ground ivy, and convolvulus. A place for quiet moments of escape, it captures smells from the countryside. Above all, the designers suggest, it has psychological value—stimulating curiosity, reminding people in concrete surroundings about roots.

Spring into Portugal

When I think Portugal, I think P's: peace, pink, peppers (swinging in cages in Lisbon windows), and above all, pousadas, government-owned hostleries that make a visit to this tiny country so extra special. Planning your Portuguese visit around the 23 pousadas scattered around the country is a good way to see Portugal, and spring is the time to choose. Most pousadas are located in some of Portugal's most scenic and historic towns; many are converted castles or convents. Rent a car in Lisbon, then skim over the serenely green and luscious countryside, dotted with white or pastel houses, villages that look like stage sets. Picnic as you go on local sausage, cheese, bread, and the pleasing indigenous red wines (such as Periquita). Wild red poppies are flares of color, and throughout the Algarve (Portugal's southern "garden" area), flowering almond, lemon, and orange trees festoon the landscape. Note: Pousadas are tiny, from 6 to 28 rooms, so reservations in advance are a must. In busy summer season, stays are limited to five days. Pousada de Reinha Santa Isabel, beautifully furnished (with antiques), 15th-century palace tucked into hillside castle walls above Estremoz, costs about $15 per double per night. Pousada do Castelo, in the walled town of Obidos, is a

"When I designed this apartment on New York's Central Park South, I made it seem like a place in the country. Nothing trendy. Just an easy, comfortable atmosphere. Good, clean-lined oak. A wall of books. It's just the kind of straightforward environment my client, Norman Cousins, thrives in. And that's my design philosophy — to make a person at home."

CENTURY Furniture of Distinction.
One of the newest and most elegant places to shop for antiques is the town house in New York that once belonged to dress designer Marcel Rochas. The 4-story 1930 house is now almost a miniature museum filled with treasures from Europe, brought to America by Didier Aaron, a well-known antique dealer and interior designer in Paris. He hopes to encourage more Americans to invest in carefully chosen furniture. A walk through his gallery is a lesson in history: "This screen is one of four painted in silk in China toward the end of the 18th century." A French 17th-century black ebony cabinet, inlaid with tortoise shell, $12,000. To help you choose, M. Aaron's son Hervé, is at your elbow. "I'm at home in all centuries." Getting an earful
One of the casualties of our super-paced lives is precious time to read. Well, some are more disciplined than others and seem to find time no matter what. But, for the rest . . . here's help.

There are now 90 book titles on cassettes that you can plug into your car tape deck, have by your bedside, or anywhere else you have a cassette recorder. Some of the books are classics, some of them are on the Best Seller list right now. Some stories may run as many as ten cassettes or as few as five, each running about an hour to an hour-and-a-half. What's available? Leon Uris's Sanctuary, George Plimpton's Paper Lion, and James Thurber's The Years with Ross are some of the new ones. What a way to turn a traffic jam to your advantage. New lines on trunks
Old trunks are news, and restoring one may be easier than you think. Some tips from experienced restorer Dean Cherrington of Scotch Plains, N.J., whose trunks are shown here: When leather or canvas coverings are badly torn, take them off. Underneath you will find a wood that can be sanded, stained, and finished to an attractive, warm surface. If the covering is metal, polish and paint to suit your taste. If handles are missing, they can be purchased from luggage suppliers or made to order by a leather shop. Or you can buy leather at a handcraft store or shoe mender, and cut your own. When hinges need replacement, buy iron or brass hardware and attach with wood screws—serviceable and appropriately rugged for trunks. Don't try to hide every blemish or mousehole—they give the trunk character. However, faded, keep original prints on interior lids. They add value to the restored trunk.

Puppy love
One in four Americans owns a cat or a dog, the figures are rising, and the ASPCA. Americans love their pets and care for them. If you're thinking of getting a new pet, here are some helpful hints on how to handle a puppy from veterinarian Norman H. Johnson, author of The Complete Puppy & Dog Book, (Anthem, $14.95):
1. Most important, be patient, passionate, loving, and firm. When you first bring the puppy home, place something warm and such as a hot-water bottle under his bed to simulate mother. A clock might also help.
2. Avoid unnecessary excitement for him. His new system is very delicate.
3. Avoid handling the puppy too much, and if you do, make sure to do it firmly under his paws, the chest, the other hind-quarters, and lift him evenly.
4. Not until the pup is 2 months old will a soft piece of his skull come together. Avoid any rough treatment, not only because of this, but his bones, tendons, and muscles are all very delicate.
5. Be sure the pup is weaned properly and by 6 weeks.
6. Do not try to housebreak him before weaning.
7. Never bathe a puppy until he is 6 months old.
8. Keep him away from drafts.
9. Do not take the puppy out in cold weather.
10. Do not give him any bones until all of his teeth have developed.
L&M Long Lights. Extra length without extra "tar." And the taste of 100% virgin tobacco.

Our L&M Long Lights yield only 8mg. "tar", less than all leading longs. Yet you get a big taste advantage. Because L&M Long Lights are the only longs made with 100% virgin all-leaf tobacco. Then we go one step further, we "filet" the tobacco by removing the main stems. Leaving us with only the most flavorful part of the leaf. Then to deliver full "filet" flavor from the first puff to last, we top off our 100% virgin tobacco "filets" with our unique Flavor Tube Filter. So enjoy the "extras" in L&M Long Lights...extra length and extra taste.

REALLY REAL TASTE. ONLY 8 MG. "TAR."

Since 1930, more than 4,000 important American landmarks have been needlessly destroyed... to say nothing of individual homes, entire sections of our cities. And, more are disappearing every year. Eastlake-style stand

I would appreciate anything you could tell me about the background and style of my old hall tree. D.R.—Omaha, Nebr.

Your hall stand is in the Eastlake style, which enjoyed wide popularity in our country in the 1880s. Its rectangular or straight-line construction is in the classical tradition and is typical of the style.

Washington plate

My plate has “Wright Tyndale and Van Roden” on it. Can you identify it and tell me who did the painting of Washington? P.W.C.—Fort Worth, Tex.

Your blue and white transfer-printed portrait plate was copied from a painting of George Washington by the famous American artist Gilbert Stuart (1755-1828), who was one of the greatest portrait painters of his time. The original painting is in the Boston Athenaeum. The plate was made at an English Staffordshire pottery in the early 20th century for Wright Tyndale and Van Roden, a fashionable Philadelphia retail store.

What can you tell me about my old teapot? I am enclosing a photograph and have copied the markings that are on it. D.B.M.—Rancho Santa Fe, Calif.

The well-known and still-existing English Victorian makers of silver, plated-silver, and Britannia wares, James Dixon & Sons, made your octagonal, inverted pear-shaped, Britannia teapot about the mid-19th century. Silver teapots, octagonal in plan, enjoyed wide popularity both in England and America in the early 18th century, as the faceted form was notably suitable to the material. An advertisement for a lottery in The American Weekly Mercury, March 23, 1727, mentions as part of the highest prize, an “Eight Square Tea-Pot."

Pillivuyt pottery

From the mark which I’ve sketched, can you identify the maker of my pitcher and tell me something about its background? J.L.N.—Oklahoma City, Okla.

Pillivuyt is the name of a French family of 19th- and 20th-century potters and manufacturers. Pillivuyt & Cie. was started at Foécy about 1800, and later was at Meun-sur-Yèvre and Paris. According to your mark, Pillivuyt was awarded a gold medal (medaille d’or) at the Paris Exposition of 1867.

Heritage furniture:
craftsmanship in the grand tradition.
Hand-crafted quality for enduring pleasure.

In our agitated age of instant-this and imitation-that, we at Heritage proudly acclaim a greater goal. The creation of fine furniture in the grand tradition of master craftsmen.

Thus we hand select veneers for tables and cabinets, so their grains flow in patterned harmony. We sand them again and again as prelude to a painstaking finishing process that involves up to 35 steps.

Our upholstered furniture is similarly lavished with care. Skilled woodworkers shape and frame each sofa and chair, using only seasoned hardwoods. We hand-tie all springs, apply choice filling materials. Then tailor them in a stunning array of over 800 sumptuous fabrics and leathers.

Today, such patient, costly hand craftsmanship is all too rare. But at Heritage we know that to create furniture of enduring beauty, value and pleasure—there is still no other way.

PORCELAIN PLATE COLLECTION

HANSEL AND GRETEL
A single, limited edition of twelve exquisite collector's plates, crafted of Bavarian porcelain and depicting the best-loved tales of the Brothers Grimm.

Each porcelain plate will bear an original work of art, created exclusively for this collection and hand-decorated with pure 24 karat gold.

INDERELLA...LITTLE RED RIDING HOOD...SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS...RUPPELSTILTSKIN...HANSEL AND GRETEL...

...life's most cherished memories are stored in these tales recorded for posterity over two hundred years ago, in the legendary forests of Bavaria, by the Brothers Grimm. Enchanting stories that enthralled us in childhood continue to enrich our lives as we share them today with our own children and grandchildren.

An unprecedented official tribute

The Brothers Grimm Society of Kasenstadt, Germany, is pleased to announce an unprecedented official tribute to the literary legacy of the Brothers Grimm: a limited edition of twelve exquisite collector's plates, each handcrafted in the beauty of Bavarian porcelain.

Twelve original works of art

The Grimm's Fairy Tales Porcelain Plate Collection will bear twelve gloriously beautiful, original works of art—portraying scenes from the twelve most beloved tales of the Brothers Grimm. The twelve paintings that will adorn the plates have been executed by the eminent contemporary European artist Carol Lawson, whose ebullient, lyrical style and sense of color are virtually unmatched in her field.

Each of these original paintings has been executed by Miss Lawson exclusively and expressly for this collection. None has ever been seen before, and none will ever be seen again in any form and decorated in pure 24 karat gold.

By authorization of The Brothers Grimm Society, these exquisite porcelain plates will be made available to collectors by Franklin Porcelain, a division of the world-renowned Franklin Mint.

A strictly limited edition

The Grimm's Fairy Tales Porcelain Plate Collection will be issued in strictly limited edition—with a firm limit of one set per subscriber. And the total number of sets that comprise the issue will forever equal the exact number of subscriptions entered by the closing date of February 28, 1978.

To ensure the absolute integrity of the edition, the Society has authorized the entry of subscriptions only by direct application to Franklin Porcelain. The plates will not be made available through even the most exclusive shops or dealers. Indeed, any dealer who later wishes to obtain the plates may hope to do so only by purchasing them from an original collector—at a privately negotiated price.

As the only official collection of its kind ever issued, The Grimm's Fairy Tales Porcelain Plate Collection is likely to be eagerly sought by discerning collectors the world over. It is hoped, however, that subscribers will regard these plates not only as collector's items, but as a source of rich and enduring pleasure. The incomparable pleasure to be derived from owning and displaying exquisitely beautiful art...crafted by hand and issued in limited edition...created in magnificent Bavarian porcelain...and commemorating literary treasures whose magic will live forever in the hearts of young and old alike.

An attractive subscription plan has been arranged whereby collectors may acquire and pay for their sets at the convenient rate of one plate a month. Moreover, the issue price of $42 per plate will include a Certificate of Authenticity and special display stands for all twelve plates in this outstanding collection.

Bremen Town Musicians
French clock

From the mark and photograph, can you identify the maker of my clock and give me some idea of how old it is? I would also like any information you may have about the style of the clock.

J.M.W.—Milwaukee, Wis.

The French clockmakers Roblin & Sons, active at Paris about 1860-1890, made your bronze doré mantel clock with a 15-day movement about 1870. The French, XIV and Louis XV styles were especially popular at that time.

Durand glass vase

Is my blue and gold iridescent glass vase an example of Victor Durand Art Glass? It isn't signed, but I understand some is not signed. K.R.—East Hampton, N.Y.

Yes, your vase was made at the Durand Glass Works located at Vineland, N.J. In the mid-1920s, which is perhaps about the time your vase was made, the plant became nationally known as one of the best in art glass manufacture.

Japanese ceramic mark

I know from the mark that my dishes are Noritake. Can you tell me more about this company?

Noritake is probably the most important industrial ceramic manufactory in Japan at present. It was established at Nagoya in 1904, and for the most part produces porcelain tableware for the export market. Your dishes probably date between 1921-1940.

Savonarola chair

I know my chair is a Savonarola, but that's all I know about it. Can you give me some idea what this means?

R.B.—Santa Monica, Calif.

The Savonarola is a distinctive variety of 16th-century Italian Renaissance folding wood chair of X form, comprising about 7 serpentine X-shaped staves on each side. The lower staves are secured with runner feet and the upper by straight arms to which is joined the arched back rail. The slatted narrow seat is placed slightly above the intersection of the staves, and a loose cushion is generally placed on it. Your Savonarola is a copy of European, perhaps Italian, manufacture, and is probably less than 100 years old.
We wouldn't swear the fortune teller in that Paris cafe knew a lifeline from a clothesline, but she did have unquestionable taste. She had ordered an 'extraordinaire' Smirnoff Bloody Mary. There was a lull in the conversation, and then she spoke. Smirnoff leaves you breathless.
Q. Will my teeth last my lifetime?
With proper dental care and supervision starting in childhood, they should certainly last a lifetime, with very few exceptions. The whole purpose of introducing dental care to a young child is to prevent dental disease or at least take care of it as early as possible, so the things that may later lead to tooth loss may be nipped in the bud.

Q. Why do people lose their teeth?
The two main reasons are dental caries, or tooth decay, and loss of bone surrounding the roots of the teeth, that bone being their basic retaining structure. Damage to the gums often results in bone loss, which means loosening and eventual loss of teeth. These things occur very gradually. With regular brushing and flossing, limited intake of sugar and other carbohydrate residue in the course of your daily routine, your teeth should not fall into that state of disrepair which results in their loss.

Q. Why is brushing so important?
Brushing maintains the circulation of blood in the gums. Tooth-brushing is really a misnomer. It should be done only at the gum line. If your toothbrush has six pairs of tufts in two rows, ideally the brush should be applied with one row of tufts on the gums and the other on the tooth—and then rotated, not scrubbed. Scrubbing, like the proverbial drop of water on the rock, eventually erodes the teeth, wears away the enamel, and contributes to gum recession. (Thus the expression, being "long in the tooth," which means the aging appearance caused by gum recession.)

Brushing first of all removes food particles wedged in the crevices, and with the same motion stimulates circulation of blood in the gums—which is what keeps gums healthy. If that circulation is not maintained, the gums will become puffy, reddened, and the enamel will become thinner and more susceptible to erosion. The reason to brush at night is because while you're asleep you don't have the salivary flow you have in the daytime—and saliva is a very important cleansing and protecting agent, by virtue of its acid buffering ability. (Another tip: To increase your saliva flow, use your jaw muscles wherever possible, for instance, talking or chewing. Eating firm, chewable foods rather than sticky, mushy ones, is healthful for the teeth.)

ing edge, or brush this area lightly. It's the gums that the brushing serves.

Of course brushing alone will not keep teeth healthy. The underlying jawbone support must be stimulated also, and exercise is the only way this can happen—exercise by chewing. (See Dr. Nizel's comment on page 26). People who eat a lot of raw food, which needs chewing, Eskimos and Mongolians, for instance, have very developed jaws. If there is no stimulus, you will experience loss of bone, and therefore loss of teeth.

Q. What is the controversy over fluoride about?

Adding 1 part per million of fluoride to public water supplies in regions where no fluoride already exists has been proved sufficient to reduce susceptibility to dental decay by about 55 percent. However, many people object to any additives being put in the water, and therefore oppose fluoride.

The American Dental Association and dentists everywhere believe that fluoride is the best weapon against tooth decay, particularly in children who have bad eating habits at home, such as consuming quantities of sugar. By this relatively inexpensive fluoridation program, the almost rampant decay that occurred in such children has been controlled, and half of their former decay susceptibility has been eliminated. Indeed some of us would like to see the proportion of fluoride increased, but because of fears of side effects, in no way scientifically proven, or even more than theoretical, public officials have decided against it. Based upon present-day knowledge, the worst consequences of increasing the fluoride content might be some slight irregularity in the smooth disposition of enamel during the early stages of tooth development. And there is no evidence of organic change in individuals who live in fluoride areas.

Q. Can nervous tension affect the teeth?

Very much. I have satisfied myself that the tension of a woman having problems in her marriage, of a child having difficulties in school, or of a man with business worries eventually begins to show in the teeth. I believe there is some change in the acid balance of the saliva, which in turn causes increased fermentation and susceptibility to decay.

Q. Do fillings mean eventual loss of teeth?

Not normally. A filling is not only to stop a hole in the tooth caused by decay, but also to restore the anatomy of that tooth as nature designed it. Nature was very careful in the smooth disposition of those small white objects is as important as washing the face and hands and brushing the hair. Thus the first and probably most important step in tooth care will have commenced.

Almost every skin-conditioning and treatment program is based on separate sets of products for dry and oily skin. Cosmetic chemist Lyn Beck has developed one that serves both skin types. She is reintroducing rice oil as the key ingredient in a cleanser, moisturizer, eye balm, night cream, and a whole group of subtly colored makeup based on recipes from the Orient. The name of the group is called Tao (pronounced Dow). It seems that rice kernel oil contains the same five amino-fat acids as skin and the effect is to balance out what is lacking in each individual case. The treatments are thorough and quick to use, requiring a minimum of water, and the makeup continue the effectiveness of the treatments. Cleanser and moisturizer start at $8.50, the night cream is $18.50. The group is at Bloomingdale's or write Ly Beck for a price list at 44 East 64th Street, New York, N.Y. 10021.

If you go to a salon that uses Redken products, your stylist will be happy to share some of his advantages with you. After all, he wants you to keep up the good work at home. So let him recommend a personalized hair-care program. And that starts with the shampoo you use.

Redken literally revolutionized hair care with the first acid-balanced, protein-conditioning shampoos. And there's one exactly right for your hair.

If you have normal, fine or limp hair, your stylist will recommend Amino Pon® Concentrate Shampoo. It's the shampoo for hair that needs body. Amino Pon contains Redken’s unique protein, CPP Catipeptide™. CPP Catipeptide is unique because it has a greater capacity to bond with hair fibers than ordinary proteins. In fact, up to 20 times more CPP Catipeptide can be absorbed by the hair. And that protein is just what fine, damaged or chemically treated hair needs.

If you have dull, dry hair, your stylist will recommend Essture®. It's a moisturizing shampoo that helps protect your hair from over-exposure to blow-drying. It's formulated with humectants and emollients to help restore and maintain the hair's essential moisture balance. And to keep hair manageable and shiny.

If you have oily hair that's hard to keep clean, your stylist will recommend Jellasheen®. It's a deep cleansing concentrate scientifically compounded with milk amino acids. Its lively lather helps keep hair clean yet it's gentle on haircoloring.

If you don't already know a salon that uses and sells Redken, check your Yellow Pages Telephone Directory. Then take a little of the salon home with you. Use the shampoo your stylist uses. Because nobody knows your hair and what's right for it like he does.

Your scalp replaces its cells in much the same way as your skin: a constant process of gentle sloughing off of the old and the slow growth of the new. Sometimes the process that speeds up this sloughing becomes obvious and annoying. Redken Laboratories has created Solve Anti-Dandruff Shampoo which contains zinc pyrithione in an acid-anced formula. Many people find dandruff shampoos harsh. This one is designed not to strip the hair's other necessary oils that keep its sheen and luster. $3.50 for a 4-ounce bottle at hair salons and barbershops throughout the country.

L'Oréal's "Extra Body Perm for Normal Hair," "For Color Treated Hair," or "Hard Wave Hair" are all loaded with proteins and conditioners, free of scalp-drying alcohol. $2.95 each at drugstores.

THE NEW PORCH ROOM

Tips and tactics for converting open-air space into indoor space

BY JIM MORGAN

The “sunporch” is an energy-efficient house addition whose time may well have come again. A room with totally glass walls, the sunporch works well, it is important to remember, only when its main elevation faces the quadrant from southeast to southwest. The best ones also have a concrete floor, which soaks up the sun’s rays during midday, releasing that energy slowly over the next few hours to help keep the room warm after the sun has gone.

While it’s intriguing to think that an enclosed, live-in porch (like the ones shown on pages 90 to 95) might supply its own heating needs through the use of solar energy techniques, be prepared to budget for additional heating when you do your conversion. Only if you live in the southernmost parts of the United States is supplemental heating likely to be unnecessary.

Turning an attached covered porch into a year-round living space may be easier than you imagined. Naturally, before you start any new construction, it is wise to be certain that the floor and floor components are sound and tight. As in every building, solid and water-resistant underpinnings for the porch are crucial to the long-term stability of the added space. Since most porches have a wood base, the first thing is to check underneath for rot and termites. Rot can easily be spotted in floor joists that crumble to the touch or into which a penknife sinks readily. Termites are betrayed by clay tubes, half-an-inch or less in diameter, which climb up the foundation wall to the nearest wood. From then on, termites travel inside. If either condition is found, the boards affected must be replaced. Use new lumber treated to resist decay. It’s a good practice to install a simple sheet-metal termite shield at the same time.

If you live in a climate where temperatures drop to freezing every winter, it may also be wise to install a continuous masonry foundation wall around the porch’s perimeter. A few small screened open windows will be sufficient to control dampness. Since most wooden porches are built with a 2- or 3-inch slope away from the house to drain rainwater, you may wish to jack up the outer edge when the foundation is laid. That will avoid an awkward tilt when the dining table replaces the porch swing.

5 PRACTICAL THINGS TO REMEMBER WHEN YOU’RE MAKING OVER A PORCH

1. Keep the glass behind the present decorative columns and porch railings. You gain relatively little floor space by removing them and integrating the new roof supports into the glass wall. These wooden elements were originally added to give scale and interest to the house as an architectural composition, and you may regret their absence when they are gone. Besides, they help to convey the porchlike feeling that you no doubt want to retain.

2. Be sure to provide some solid areas of wall to back up large pieces of furniture, shelving, or pictures you may wish to display. It is important that the porch have a sense of enclosure, especially in bad weather. A room that is too open can seem uncomfortable even though the interior air temperature is physiologically sufficient.

3. Even though you make the transition between the interior floor and the new one free of interruption, do not remove the doors that formerly kept out the rain and cold. You may need to close off the porch during very frigid weather, and the old doors will come in handy for that.

4. Provide some kind of protection against short-term extremes of temperature and light—too much heat from the sun or glare from new-fallen snow. On the inside, curtains or blinds are useful and can add acoustical softness to a space which may have too many hard surfaces anyway. On the exterior, awnings, sliding barn panels, and “sunbreakers,” as they are known to architects—adjustable horizontal boards that tilt in unison—are ways to add architectural distinction to your house.

5. Finally, be sure that every crack is either weatherstripped (if it is a door or operable window) or caulked with a good quality elastomeric silicone sealant. An amazing amount of heat can be lost that way and drafts are annoying. Check once or twice a year to be sure that no new cracks have opened or that caulking has fallen out.

Glassed-in porch for year-round living

Good groundwork

The masonry foundation should begin about 3 feet below the ground level and should have an inch of polyurethane foam sheet insulation or equivalent on the inside of the new wall from the footer up to the underside of the floor.

If you decide instead to retain the original masonry or wood posts supporting the porch, be sure to place a minimum of 3 inches of fiberglass or mineral wool insulation in the joists supporting the floor boards.

Where the porch has a concrete slab on grade and you want a warm, dry, and resilient floor, put an inch of foam insulation between sleepers (horizontal wood strips nailed 16 inches on center to the slab). Then nail a subfloor of plywood or composition board to the sleepers and it is ready to receive carpet or resilient tile.

Because of the ¼-inch-wide cracks generally left between boards to encourage air circulation, most wood-floor porches will also require a layer of underlayment material. When this material is being applied, it is a good idea to shim it up at the doors into the house, so that the new floor will be level with the interior. You may even wish to remove the old door sills so that the transition will be completely smooth.

Heating and cooling

In most houses, it is not a problem to add another room to the existing heating and cooling system. If you have a circulating air system, bring the new duct into the space under the porch floor. Place a series of supply grilles so that a layer of air will be spread across the glass surface you plan to install. Even though the underfloor space will be insulated, it is worthwhile to wrap the heating ducts themselves with insulation.

Lights

Who could make light of themselves better?
For houses with hot-water systems, a run of copper piping can easily be placed between the sleepers if the porch has a concrete floor (see page 90), or on top of the open wooden floor with a new floor laid above. In the latter case, foil-faced insulation batts should be provided immediately below to reflect the radiant heat upward into the new room. Hot-water baseboard units are also a good solution.

In some cases it will be necessary to use an auxiliary heating system in the enclosed porch, especially if it will not be used constantly. Choose the heating method based on fuel cost and future availability. When electricity is inexpensive, as in parts of the Northwest or in areas served by TVA, for example, thermostatically controlled baseboard units or floor-mounted grilles with resistance elements are excellent. For a large porch, a gas-fired, fan-driven unit may be necessary. It is also possible that a properly vented, wood-burning stove could be a good solution.

Porch roofs, perhaps even more than underpinnings, need careful inspection—for leaks, cumulative water damage, roofing gaps, and other problems. Such difficulties are often easy to ignore when a porch is open to the weather. But they can cause expensive damage to furnishings when the space has been enclosed.

Adequate insulation, of course, is especially important in the roof. Six-inch batts of insulation stapled between the rafters will probably be the easiest way to do the job. But if a new weather surface—shingles or roll roofing—seems necessary, perhaps you can have it done just as inexpensively over a 2-inch layer of polyurethane foam laid on top of the roof deck. A porch with a ceiling is naturally a good candidate for insulation blown into place. In any case, the soundness and good repair of the roof is not to be taken for granted.

While you are considering the roof space, it is a good time to think about the wiring for special lighting in the new room. Hi-hats, wall-washers, cove lighting, not to mention dimmers, three-way switches, and adjustable track systems, all offer options to transform the old porch. Or, alternatively, you may wish to install old-fashioned ceiling fans or hanging light fixtures. But don’t wait until construction is complete and it’s too late to choose the fixtures you want.

The porch ceiling itself, as the example on page 94 emphasizes, can be a strong, even playful, design element. In this case, dark green paint matching the canvas blinds contrasts with white-painted rafters. But it is not difficult to alter the appearance of the ceiling by using mirrored tiles, billowy fabric (page 92), or beams every 4 to 6 feet, which replace the original ceiling. They can even accommodate lighting which reflects off a new surface above, attached directly to the sloping rafters.

If the porch is to retain its original relationship to the outdoors, then the walls must be easily opened on warm days and in any weather; it must be possible to look out through large windows at the nearby landscape. Access to sun, rain, snow, and shadows is what makes the enclosed porch so appealing.

It is best, of course, if the porch faces south, or at least away from prevailing winter winds. But if that is not the case, well-engineered and relatively inexpensive sliding glass walls can be installed to minimize drafts. Wood frames are somewhat more comfortable to the touch than metal, but up-to-date versions of steel and aluminum window walls now have thermal barriers to alleviate the problem.

Double-glazing is a necessity if the winter temperatures in your area reach freezing. It not only reduces heat loss but avoids the continual condensation on the glass, which obscures the view. It is often true that storm windows that can be removed in the spring are cheaper than factory-made double-glazing. But a price is paid for the inconvenience of storing and maintaining them. As an alternative to storm windows, consider transparent acrylic plastic glazing. It is shatterproof and lighter than glass, making the trip to the storage rack in the basement safer and easier. It does scratch, however, and near a beach can be marred by wind-blown sand. All openings, of course, will require insect screening in most locales.

Your nearby lumberyard or home improvement center has names of contractors who will be happy to give you an estimate on how much it will cost to make the most of your porch. Ask the contractors for the names of people for whom they have already done such conversions and go and see them. Find out how well the job went. Also ask what they would change if they could do it over—you may learn from their experience lessons you’d rather not have to learn for yourself.

PICKING YOUR PICKUP

en years ago, farmers were the only people who drove pickup trucks. And it's a good reason. Pickups were slow, awkward to drive, uncomfortable to sit in, and almost unbearably noisy. But today, pickups have changed, and as a result, they account for 2½ million of the 9 million passenger vehicles on the road. Power accessories, bucket seats, carpet, and softly sprung suspensions have turned the pickup into another kind of station wagon. Virtually anything you can order on a family car can be ordered on a pickup, from power door locks, cruise control, and tinted glass to AM/FM radio and 8-track cassette player. Easily the most popular pickup accessory, of course, is the fiberglass or aluminum cover or "cap" for the rear. This turns the cargo section into a passenger carrying compartment. Many families with children buy a pickup with a cover, in preference to a normal station wagon. Then they equip the rear space with comfortable pillows, rugs, and camping gear. With the cover off, a quick, easy change involving four bolts, the truck is open to the sky and ready for heavy-duty hauling. It's very convenient for carrying all sorts of awkward and oversize merchandise that simply couldn't fit into any other vehicle—bicycles, trail bikes, furniture, trees and other items from the plant nursery, timber, and so on. Moreover, you don't have to worry about wear and tear on the cargo compartment. Unlike the leather-lined rear of a station wagon, or the carpeted trunk of the average sedan, the pickup truck cargo compartment is sturdy painted steel. So it's ideal for consignments of gravel, fertilizer, sharp-edge concrete blocks that might cause damage to a more fragile vehicle. Best of all, once you have hauled your load, you can dispose of any mess in a few seconds with a garden hose.

American pickups by Chevrolet, Dodge, Ford, and GMC come in a variety of body styles, with room for three people on a bench seat, or two on an optional bucket seats. There is the traditional "stepsie" pickup with a narrow cargo area, flanking fenders, and small running boards. The "fleetside" is more common, with a smoothly styled body that looks like a station wagon with the roof lopped off. In addition, there are four-door, six-passenger "crew cab" pickups, "king cabs" with extra luggage space inside, "long bed" versions and a variety of specialized conversions that turn the pickup into a miniature motor home. Although they are about the size of an intermediate passenger car, they can be economical in ways you might not expect. Trucks are exempt from some Federal emissions standards and safety laws, which means you can run most of them on inexpensive regular gas. They also weigh less than comparable Japanese-made vehicles sold in this country, distributed by domestic manufacturers: The Chevrolet LUV—light utility vehicle—made by Isuzu and Ford's Courier built by Mazda. These foreign-made trucks are well-built, come with bucket-seat interiors and economical 5-speed transmissions as options. None of them have the great variety of extras that are available from the domestic manufacturers. However, many of the same accessory suppliers make items for these imported vehicles.

Pickup trucks do have some drawbacks. Because very little weight rests on the rear wheels, they can be difficult to control on slippery roads. However, four-wheel drive can improve this situation. They can be noisy, unless you invest in additional sound-deadening material. But most owners are willing to trade these inconveniences for the pickup’s sturdiness and load-carrying ability. The best role for a pickup is probably as a second car. Because it’s practical and fun to drive, the truck often turns out to be the one the whole family fights over while their more dignified sedan stays in the garage. All things considered, the pickup can be one of the most intelligent buys a family can make. It holds its resale value better than most cars and it’s probably the most practical, versatile vehicle around.

PICKUP TRUCKS—WHAT ARE THE OPTIONS?

- If you want more power than the standard 6-cylinder engine, order an optional V-8.
- A 4-speed or 4-speed overdrive transmission will save you gas, but automatics are preferred when traction is poor, because of their smoother shifting.
- With a 4-cylinder engine on the smaller Japanese-made trucks, get the 5-speed overdrive transmission.
- Heavy-duty electrical equipment and extra capacity cooling systems save mechanical wear and tear, are good bargains.
- You’ll want a convenient “cap” to cover the rear, available from the manufacturers or in greater variety from accessory companies.
- Order a heavy-duty handling package (stiffer springs, shock absorbers, anti-rollbar, wider tires) for safer cornering, easier steering.
- Radial tires give better gas mileage, handling, and wear.
- Bucket seats and carpeting are definitely worth the added expense.

So are cruise control, AM/FM radio, built-in CB, cargo tie-downs and dual outside mirrors, plus sliding rear window.
- Special paint jobs—popular with pickup truck owners—cost anywhere from $200 for a simple set of pin stripes to over $2,000 for a complete custom creation. Design your own paint scheme and have it executed by a local artist.
- Sturdy rollbar for the cargo section gives you extra protection in an accident, provides a convenient place to fasten cargo tie-down straps.
- For heavy-duty use, get attractive and durable spoke wheels, painted with special Imron paint. Use “off-road” tires for rough going.
- A lift-out translucent “sunroof” over the driver’s seat gives the feeling of a convertible with none of the drawbacks.
- Lockable storage boxes that bolt into the pickup rear are useful if you don’t plan on buying a cover for the cargo section.

its leaves almost instantly when subjected to them. Outside of that, given rich moist soil and some sun, it will grow into a delightfully airy tree. Three or four to a pot will give a much more lush effect than will a single specimen.

The ARAUCARIA HETEROPHYLLA, or Norfolk Island pine, is often touted as the living indoor Christmas tree. And in fact it does look like one of our temperature-zoned evergreens, although it's somehow more organized and neat in appearance. But it doesn't take well to a lot of handling. Hanging a lot of decorations and removing them will not help the branches stay on. And dropping branches are this tree's major drawback. This effect can be avoided, however, by making sure that the plant's rich soil is kept constantly moist, though not soggy. More important yet is atmospheric moisture. Native to the South Pacific island bearing the same name, the plants are used to being surrounded by fog—hard to come by in most homes. But by growing the Norfolk Island pine in a setting with numerous other plants, you usually increase the humidity sufficiently for them all to thrive. As partners with the moisture-loving banana plant, they do particularly well, and the contrast in greens is most striking.

For something less feathery in appearance, more bold in accent, try PITTSPORUM. Here's a tough, densely branching shrub which will dominate any corner if you start with a large plant. Pittosporum is a slow grower—in low light. On the other hand, it will take just about any light conditions from full sun to the shade of a 60-watt light bulb. Given full sun and loamy soil allowed to dry out a bit between waterings, the plant will develop white flower clusters on the branch tips in spring that fill your room with something like the sweet fragrance of orange blossoms.

The BRASSIA ACTINOPHYLLA, long known as Schefflera or Australian umbrella tree, likes a warm spot with some sun and loamy soil left on the dry side between waterings. Glossy palmate leaves, suggestive of small umbrellas, form a large loose canopy above the sturdy trunk of mature specimens. Make sure you check for mealybugs on this one before you buy it; they are a common pest.

CORDYLINE TERMINIFOLUS is for the indoor gardener who just can't stop watering the plants. There's no way it can be overwatered. In fact, it will thrive with its roots standing in water. Both C. alternifolius and its well-known cousin C. PAPYRUS, the original Egyptian paper plant, will do well in bright light to full sun as long as the humidity is high and the soil is sandy but well fertilized. Cyperus is particularly suited to atriums and other such places where a small indoor pool area may be available.

As an old standard, easy-to-care-for specimen plant, DIEFFENBACHIA is hard to beat. It's often seen in office lobbies and other public places. If you have a full-sized 5-foot specimen in the living room, it immediately takes on more dramatic scope, its stark thin curved leaves going particularly well with modern furniture. Dieffenbachia grows well under somewhat restricted light conditions, and it should always be grown with the soil kept on the dry side. When you do water, water well, but let some time pass before you do so again.

Finally, one cardinal rule to follow with indoor forestation, namely, buy your plant as big as you want it to be. Indoor trees all grow very slowly. But slow as they are, they are splendid, easy-to-care-for additions to anyone's plant collection.

Comforting answers
Where can I send my down comforter to be recovered? — M.M.S., Concord, N.C.
Here are two places that specialize in remaking old down comforters and in custom-making new ones. At Alden Comfort Mills (Dept. D., Box 6070, Dallas, Tex. 75222), old down is fluffed, and cotton and acetate satin coverings are downproof. If you supply the fabric, a downproof interlining is added. It offers a free catalogue with swatches. At the J. Schachter Corp. (Dept. G, 115 Allen St., New York, N.Y. 10002), old down is sterilized, fluffed, and then covered with a downproof interlining. Stock coverings are polyester, polyester and cotton, and acetate satin. You may supply your own fabric. Its catalogue with swatches is $1 ppd.

Cooking in copper
You show a sugar-cooking pot of unlined copper in your November, 1977 issue. Is it safe to cook in unlined copper? I have a big copper stockpot, and the tin lining has worn off. —A.N., Sioux City, Iowa Unlined copper is the traditional ware for just a few special tasks—cooking sugar, making caramel, and whisking (but not cooking) egg whites. An unlined copper pot is a superb heat conductor and cools quickly when removed from the heat, so sugary foods come out smoother, are less likely to burn. The metal helps “inflate” egg whites during whisking (letting the egg whites reach room temperature beforehand helps, too). Copper tarnish (verdigris)—experts tell us—is ultimately poisonous, so it’s important to polish an unlined copper pot before each use.

For safety’s sake, copper pots used for other purposes (such as cooking stock) must be lined with tin. According to The Cook’s Catalogue (Harper & Row, $15.95), which has an extensive section on cookware metals, tin is “completely nontoxic. . . . [Its] surface tarnish is a protective coating and should not be removed.” As tin melts at about 450°F, take care your tin-lined pot does not burn dry. Two places that retin copper pots and also put on a new handle or take out dents:
A. William Campana & Sons, 162 Clara St., San Francisco, Calif. 94104 (all copper pots except tea kettles).
International Retinning & Repairing Co., c/o Rosner, 2405 Whitney Ave., Hamden, Conn. 06518.

Send either company your pot via insured mail, and it will send you an estimate.

Table guard
After the expense of refinishing my dining table because of scorch marks, I’d love to have a protective table pad made. Where can I go?—E.A., Scarsdale, N.Y.

Chances are a good furniture or department store near you sells custom-made table pads. One manufacturer—Ohio Table Pad Company—makes folding pads in virtually any size and four protective densities. The top side is covered in vinyl leatherette, which comes in white (best if you’re going to use a light-colored tablecloth over the pad) and in as many as six wood-coordinating shades. Felt underside comes in green, tan, or brown. The Ohio Table Pad Company has thousands of master patterns of major furniture makers’ most popular tables. About 250 shop-at-home-service department stores have salespeople who’ll come to your home to measure your tabletop. Others can demonstrate in the store how to make your own pattern with the template paper they provide. For dealer nearest you, write Mr. David L. Alkire, Vice President—Sales Manager, Ohio Table Pad Co., P.O. Box 2843, Toledo, Ohio 43606.

Would it be possible to paint a decorative design on an existing bathroom sink? —E.L., Lake Jackson, Tex.

Since any overglaze painting tends to flake with cleaning, it’s not very practical. You might consider installing a new hand-painted sink, which the manufacturer has automatically fired at high temperature so that the decoration, like that of most tabletop china, is much more resistant to abrasion than any overglaze painting one might add. Two manufacturers that sell by mail are:

Cut your heating costs up to 24%!
Have your builder install STYROFOAM® brand insulation from roofline to frostline.

STYROFOAM brand insulation is easy for your builder to install and adds little to the cost of your new home.

On frame walls, it replaces ordinary sheathing. Tests show it can cut heat loss by 14%.

The tests, conducted by Ohio State University under a grant from Dow Chemical U.S.A., compared energy costs of homes identical except for insulation systems. (Write for test procedures and results.)

Outside the foundation, sheets of STYROFOAM brand insulation are applied down to or below the frostline. Applied in this way, real life energy calculations indicate that STYROFOAM brand insulation will cut heat loss an additional 10%.

STYROFOAM brand insulation improves insulation performance three ways:

Cuts conduction heat loss
STYROFOAM brand insulation insulates the entire wall, not just the space between studs—significantly cutting conduction heat loss.

Reduces air infiltration
Because of its snug-fitting tongue and groove design, STYROFOAM brand insulation can greatly reduce air infiltration. Summer and winter.

Helps batts work better
STYROFOAM brand insulation can minimize "convective looping." By keeping the wall cavity warmer, it actually makes batt insulation more effective.

So have the builder of your new home install STYROFOAM brand insulating sheathing in place of ordinary sheathing. Depending on where you build, it can pay for itself in as little as one to three years—and keep on paying dividends for the life of your home.

For more information on how STYROFOAM brand insulation can cut your energy costs, mail our coupon today.

Some homes will perform better than these test homes. Others not as well. Your energy savings will depend on many factors, such as climate, fuel type, workmanship, house design and living habits of the occupants.

Can living together be a good substitute for marriage?

Why are young people drawn toward cults?

ARE LIQUID PROTEIN DIETS DANGEROUS?

Q As a doctor, would you recommend the new liquid protein diets?

A There are two varieties of liquid protein. One is made of powdered casein or milk protein and soy bean protein with various flavorings, mostly vanilla and sugar. The other variety consists of dehydrated meat by-products, whey, a by-product of cheese-making, plus flavorings and sugar, sometimes with an added dash of vitamins and a pinch of minerals. In each case, you put one or two tablespoonsful of the powder into a glass of skimmed milk and drink it in place of two or three meals a day. Dr. Jules Hirsch, professor and senior physician at Rockefeller University and a world known obesity specialist, condemns both products as dangerous for anyone, without strict medical control. They are not high quality products and do not include all the amino acids the body requires. In some cases, they have led to acidosis and ketosis. They usually cause constipation by virtue of low bulk. Anyone with a diabetic tendency, liver or kidney weakness, or metabolic disorder would run into serious trouble using these products.

An easy and magic way to lose weight has been sought for a long time. Lord Byron drank vinegar and water to "melt off excess weight." To give up meals and the new liquid protein diets?

Q Why are some young people drawn toward new cults?

A The majority of the young people who have abandoned their families in favor of a religious cult or group have had parents who exerted little or no authority or discipline and allowed them unlimited freedom in an aimless atmosphere. It is the nature of children and adolescents to need and search for form, direction, formulas, and regulations for living. Education means to lead out or direct, and if this is not present at home, the young will seek it elsewhere. In most of the new religious cults we hear about today, members have to follow rigid rules of early rising, for example, little sleep, hard work, long hours of study, and a Spartan, selfless way of life, including solicitation of funds. There are exceptions, but generally, the family which is closely knit, with much love and affection and discipline, rarely loses a child to these groups. In such families, all are expected to work together for common goals, but children are allowed to question and raise objections to rules. And by example, the parents set the mood of joy in mutual achievement.

Recently Dr. Roy Grinker, psychiatrist at the Michael Reese Medical Center in Chicago described the problems of children from overprivileged backgrounds. They may suffer from parental deprivation, lack of work ethic, values, and goals and are bored, empty, depressed, and impulsive. When they find that money is not the universal solution, their lack of initiative makes them targets for other idiosyncratic lifestyles. In such groups, members are not allowed to own anything and through a brainwashed state find it hard to leave or break away from the regime.

It’s possible to “shock” a young person out of the situation by helping him or her let out anger or anxiety. Then, along with warm support of parents and friends, good rest, proper nutrition, and medical care if necessary, recovery occurs. Many young people do leave without help, through disillusionment, and these disenchanted former members can also be helpful in deprogramming others.
Hon, the mortgage payment's due. Did you deposit your check today?

Mom, I need new ballet slippers.

They need me.

When we got married, we said my income was for extras. We didn't want to be dependent on it when we had children. Well, we have a daughter now—and it's a good thing I went back to work when she went to school.

With the cost of day-to-day living, we couldn't possibly afford our house, let alone put money aside for her education on only one income. If anything happened to me, my family would have to make a lot of difficult adjustments—especially Jenny. That's why I have my own piece of the Rock—Prudential insurance—to help make sure they can live as comfortably as we do now. They need me.

The more they need you, the more you need Prudential.

NEW STYLE ROMANTIC BOUQUETS

Some tips on how to make them from Richard Hare—decorator, antique dealer, and inventive flower arranger

BY LIZA WICK

"If there are any rules for arranging flowers, I don't know about them. The flower that doesn't fit in with the color scheme or shape—the 'throwaway'—always seems to make the arrangement." Richard Hare's free-form bouquet on page 86 proves the point. A saucy black-eyed Susan (rudbeckia) spices up the pastel pinks and blues, is a perfect contrast to the fragile lilies, and the single bright dahlia is a surprise among the fluffy hydrangeas, spiky purple buddleia and pale pink "Garden Party" roses.

"The striped dent de chien grass here is lovely as a green, gives grace and delicacy to the bouquet, and helps control the height. I sometimes choose geranium leaves, though—I like the texture, and they add to the general scent of the bouquet as well. Differences in shapes and forms are as important as color."

Mr. Hare always has in mind just where the arrangement will go in the house but creates it on his specially equipped section of the front porch—a long worktable, a big sink, and shelves to the ceiling for his collection of containers. Considering whether it's to be full all around or just in front, he builds the bouquet from the bottom up, small flowers first, then works outward—"I push and poke, resorting to as few tricks as possible, proceeding according to what pleases my eye." That special touch comes from instinct, but instinct bolstered by much practice and learning

Richard Hare's tips for flower care

- Try to gather flowers as early in the morning as possible.
- Always cut stems on the diagonal.
- Transfer each variety to its own bucket of cool water before arranging.
- Strip leaves and thorns below the water line to increase "drinking" surfaces.
- Beat woody stems of hydrangeas so they'll soak in more water, and add a touch of sugar.
- "Frogs" or a bit of chicken wire lend support to flowers in large arrangements.

Enjoy all your meats juicy
From Jenn-Air, the range

It whisks away smoke and odors right
from the range top.

The range that breathes. It's the simplest way to explain how the extraordinary Jenn-Air range works. There's no hood. A powerful ventilation system, built into the range, breathes in air right at the range top to whisk away smoke and odors, breathes out air to keep your kitchen cleaner, sweeter.

Most important, the self-ventilating Jenn-Air Grill-Range gives you more to taste with five Cooktop Convertible units that let you grill, spit-roast, griddle, deep-fry, and shish kebab all on top of the range.

Hearty char-flavors, sizzling from the grill.
The thick sirloins and heavy chops of this world are at their finest encased in a crunchy brown crust with a smoky, char-flavor that is the absolutely perfect seasoning for the lush meat and hot runny juices inside.

The grill seasons a host of other meats, too—spicy sausages splitting with juice, pink-and-black charred shrimp in the shell, succulent barbecued chicken, thick, smoke-flavored hamburgers, all cooked in a stream of power-driven air by the Jenn-Air Grill-Range, the range that breathes.

Smoky-sweet flavors with whole meals on a skewer.
It is said that shish-kebabbing got its start back when men who wore swords skewered meats and held them over their picket fires.

You load skewers with tender bites of beef or lamb or sausage, plump shrimp, fat mushrooms, even chunks of fresh, luscious fruit. As the skewers turn, slather these foods with herb butters, pepper sauces, fruit juices, honey and oil, or any of 100 other seasonings. You'll get drips, and smoke will puff up, but it will be whisked direct to outdoors by Jenn-Air's rangetop ventilation.

And as the smoke currents bathe the kebab morsels, you get something more to taste—a delightful smoky-sweet flavor no spice or seasoning can duplicate.

Griddle-crisped flavors, cooked short-order quick.
Crusty brown ham slices, rolled omelets, toasted sandwiches are just the most common ways you'll...
and bursting with flavor that breathes.

Crusty brown flavor from the convection oven.

The Jenn-Air convected Power Oven is actually two ovens in one. First it’s a conventional electric oven and broiler. But then, just by flicking a switch, it becomes a professional-type convection oven that lets you roast meats in a stream of power-driven air — quicker, at lower temperatures! As in open-spit roasting, there’s no steam to give meat a “boiled” taste. A rich, caramel brown crust quickly forms on the surface to trap juices within. Beef roasts cook hot and pink all the way through. Turkeys stay juicier because they cook in less time. Chickens, hams, roasts of pork cook richly browned and plump to bursting with flavor.

The Power Oven cooks cleaner too, because smoke and steam are exhausted direct to outdoors. And it has two oven-cleaning modes. It cleans itself continuously during use. If deposits accumulate during heavy use, you just switch over to “accelerated cleaning” and the job is done in a fraction of the time.

In the oven or on the rangetop, Jenn-Air’s power-driven air brings you more ways to cook, more foods to taste, more flavors to enjoy. For the Jenn-Air dealer nearest you, see the Yellow Pages, call toll free 800-428-1825, or write Jenn-Air Corporation, 3035 Shadeland Ave., Indianapolis, Indiana 46226. Also available in Canada.

ARE YOU GETTING HIGH QUALITY SOUND?

Is a warranty worth anything? Do video games injure the TV set? Plus what does solid state mean?

EDITOR'S NOTE: David Lachenbruch is Editorial Director of Television Digest with Consumer Electronics and a well-known writer in the electronics field. He is a columnist for a daily Japanese newspaper, a rare honor for a Western writer in a country that leads in electronic manufacturing and know-how. In this article, he answers readers' most asked questions and invites continuing correspondence on the subject of electronics.

Q What is a Dolby?

A “Dolby” is a fairly recent addition to the hi-fi vocabulary. It is shorthand for the “Dolby System of Noise Reduction,” which has helped transform the cassette recorder into a true high-fidelity instrument. Invented by audio engineer Ray Dolby, the noise-reduction system is now built into some 500 different models of high-quality cassette instruments. It reduces the noise—most particularly the high-pitched hiss—which is normally characteristic of cassette tapes, without affecting the actual sound of the recording. To obtain this noise reduction, a cassette must be “Dolbyized” during recording—in other words, both recorded and played back through the Dolby circuits. If you have a cassette recorder with a built-in Dolby system, you’ll want to make and play back all your recordings with the noise-reduction circuit switched on. Non-Dolby recordings should be played back with the Dolby switch in the “off” position. Some high-quality prerecorded cassettes are “Dolbyized” and give excellent results when played back through a Dolby-system cassette deck.

A more recent development is the application of the Dolby system to FM radio. About 170 FM stations now broadcast “Dolbyized” music, which can be received on any FM radio. For increased clarity of the music, an FM receiver with a Dolby circuit is necessary. More than 65 models of FM tuners, receivers, or add-on components now include Dolby FM decoders.

Q What are my rights under a TV set warranty?

A Your basic right under the new warranty law is to enjoy a product which does what it’s supposed to do and is free from manufacturing defects. Almost all television set warranties include three different types of coverage—for the picture tube, the other parts, and the cost of installing them. The most common color TV warranty terms provide for: (1) A replacement picture tube (new or rebuilt) if yours fails within two years. (2) All other parts to be covered for one year. (3) Free labor for 90 days. This means for example, that if you have trouble after the 90-day period, but less than a year after you bought the set, the replacement parts are free, but you must pay for the service technician’s labor to install them. The warranty also spells out whether the service is performed in your home or whether you must bring the set to the repair shop. Generally, the owner is required to bring portables to the shop, with larger sets entitled to in-home service. But warranty terms do vary on this point. Some manufacturers supply labor coverage for a full year; others may warrant certain components, such as transistors or printed circuit boards, for up to five years. In addition, some dealers add their own warranty coverage as a supplement to that provided by the manufacturer—for example, the dealer may extend the labor coverage to a full year from the 90 days specified by the manufacturer. Of course, this must be in writing for it to have any value.

If you feel that warranty service on your set was unsatisfactory and you can’t get the servicing company to make good, report it to the dealer from whom you bought the set or write to the manufacturer giving details. Address the letter to “Director of Consumer Affairs.”

If you get no satisfaction this way, write a letter—enclosing a copy of the complaint which you've sent to the manufacturer—to Ms. Sally Browne, Director of Consumer Affairs, Consumer Electronics Group, Electronic Industries Association, 2001 I Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006. This is the TV manufacturers' trade association and Ms. Browne will make certain the complaint goes to the right person.

Q Are electronic video games harmful to TV sets?

A Using a video game for reasonable intervals at home should not harm a TV set. There have been several cases of damage to picture tubes in sets used by stores to demonstrate games. They have been turned on for extended periods of time—such as all day, every day for months. In these cases, the pattern of the game (the tennis court, for example) remains on the screen as a sort of ghost during regular TV viewing.

At home, turn off the game (and the set) when it's not in use. If the game gets a lot of use, turn the set's brightness and contrast down just a little bit to avoid any possibility of "phosphor fatigue."

Q What does "solid-state" really mean?

A Technically, solid-state electronics is the science built around the movement of electrons through a solid. For all practical purposes, the phrase solid-state reflects the revolution in electronics, which started 30 years ago with the invention of the transistor by three scientists at Bell Telephone Laboratories.

You don't have to be very old to remember when radios, television sets, and phonographs used glowing vacuum tubes. These tubes, which moved electrons through a vacuum, required large amounts of power, wore out quickly, and caused other parts to fail because they generated so much heat. In addition, they were large and cumbersome.

In solid-state devices, the electrons move in a similar way through tiny chips of man-made crystal material. These devices may be transistors or integrated circuits which actually perform the duties of hundreds, or even thousands, of separate components on a single chip. These devices use only a tiny fraction of the power required by tubes, create very little heat, and theoretically can last almost forever if operated properly.

Solid-state devices made possible the modern computer, portable radios, television sets, and other electronic equipment at lower cost. They've been responsible for cutting the amount of power needed to operate a color TV set to about the same as that used to light a 100-watt bulb.

Q Is there anything that can be done about poor quality TV sound?

A Even though television has FM sound and, at best, is capable of high quality, most network programs have about the same dynamic range as AM radio broadcasts because of the type of intercity relay systems used to carry the audio portion of the network TV broadcast. But the Federal Communications Commission is conducting an inquiry into the possibility of authorizing a high-quality stereophonic sound track for television broadcasting. And the Public Broadcasting System and the American Telephone & Telegraph Company have been experimenting with new methods of networking television audio for higher fidelity.

Meanwhile, if you have one of the few television sets with a connection on the back for an external amplifier or loudspeaker, it's certainly worth experimenting and hooking it into your hi-fi system, following the instructions in the TV set's owner's manual—but don't be disappointed if it doesn't help much. The audio characteristics of the TV set may be a bad match for the hi-fi or speaker. When you shop for your next television set, try listening to the sound quality. Most people buy expensive sets without ever listening to the sound until they get home. A few television set manufacturers are beginning to introduce special models with redesigned and improved audio systems to capitalize on the increasing consumer awareness of sound. A tone control on a TV set is definitely a desirable feature, because it gives you some latitude in adjusting for the most pleasing or comprehensible audio quality.

Q We'd like to buy a good component hi-fi system, but we haven't space for large loudspeakers. Do the smaller ones reproduce sound well?

A The new mini-speakers—about 6 1/2 inches high—represent a new approach to maximum sound in minimum space. Some use built-in electronic circuits to achieve balanced sound; others employ unique multi-speaker arrangements. Reproduction of bass has always been a problem in small speakers, for good bass response demands moving large quantities of air. The new minis use special speaker cones which allow greater in-and-out movement, compensating for their small size in terms of air movements. Many are pressed from ground-up rubber, giving them a surprisingly full bass performance.

Seamless flooring: elegant, wall-to-wall beauty; a durable no-wax, seamless surface that's easier to keep clean. And seamless installations are easier to do yourself. Only Congoleum offers this, in widths that range from 6 to 15 feet. High quality, high fashion, seamless flooring—in a spectacular variety of no-wax colors and patterns.

From the company who's been setting flooring trends for over 90 years. Look at Congoleum first: for colorful, seamless beauty. A no-wax floor stays fresher looking longer, usually with just sponge mopping. In time a reduction in gloss will occur in areas of heavier use. We recommend Congoleum Vinyl Dressing to provide a higher shine, if preferred. (Complete maintenance and warranty information available through your local Congoleum retailer, in the Yellow Pages under "Floor Materials", or by writing Congoleum Consumer Affairs, 195 Belgrove Drive, Kearny, N.J. 07032.)

Only Congoleum® gives you seamless flooring in rooms as wide as 15 feet. Seamless flooring that looks prettier, cleaner, newer longer.
dripping faucet is literally throwing money as well as water down the drain. The course of a year gallons of water needlessly wasted. Replacing a washer is an easy job that can be done in just a few minutes.

Step 1: Turn off the water at the nearest shut-off valve. Open the faucet so that residual water sitting in the line will fill out. If the water keeps running, the shut-off valve is faulty so you will need to close the main valve that controls the flow of water into the house.

Step 2: Take the faucet apart. Diagram the assembly as you go so that each piece is returned in the correct sequence. If the handle has a small snap-on button in the center, pry it off. If the handle is secured to the spindle by a small set screw, try loosening with a hexagonal Allen wrench. The handle also may need a little persuasion to be separated from the spindle, but do not use force—a little tapping from beneath will assist.

Step 3: With an adjustable wrench or a monkey wrench (not with a pipe or Stillson wrench), unscrew the stem cap or cap nut. If the nut is chrome-plated cover it with tape or leather to prevent it from being scratched by the jaws of the wrench. Set the handle back on the spindle and use it to back off and lift out the stem. The interior assembly is the same whether the valve is part of the spigot or simply one handle of a mixing faucet that controls the hot and cold water but leads into a common spout.

Step 4: Wipe out the inside of the faucet with a paper towel. Examine the seat. If it is chipped, nicked, or roughened, it should be replaced or refaced with an inexpensive reseating tool, until smooth. (Directions for using the tool are on the package card). A slot, square, or hexagonal shape will indicate if the seat is replaceable.

Step 5: Remove the screw from the end of the stem and peel off the old washer. Replace. (If necessary, take the stem to the hardware store when purchasing washer to get the correct size.) If the screw threads are stripped, replace the fastener, but remember that the new screw must be made of brass.

Step 6: Reassemble the unit. Do not turn down the handle so that the washer sits tight against the seat to shut off the water. Open the supply valve and let water flow—then close the tap. The handle position will probably need adjusting to the proper shut-off point.

ree hot water

Hot water for household use is heated by the sun instead of electricity, gas, or oil in this new solar system. It includes plate solar collectors, a solar heater tank with controls, valves, andumps. In operation it channels cold water to the roof-mounted solar collectors where the sun heats it. The heated water then circulates to the solar storage tank, to be used as needed. In supplementing the conventional hot-water heater, it is claimed the system could supply much as 70 percent of kitchen, bathroom, laundry hot water for a family of four. The solar hot-water system is designed to be installed by plumbers in one and a half days' time. Average price in the Pittsburgh area $2,500 to $3,000. PG Industries Inc., One Gateway Center, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15222.
Cozy conservation

This prefab porcelain finish metal fireplace both provides and conserves heat. A high-volume fan circulates air through its heating chamber, where it is warmed, then expels it into the room through side louvers. (The fan has automatic or manual control.) Glass doors, which come with the free-standing fireplace, conserve household heat and restrict its escape up the chimney while radiating fireplace heat. An optional “Energy Mizer” feature provides an intake vent under the fireplace, which draws in outside air for greater heating efficiency. The “provider” fireplace with black hood is approximately $715, with red or olive hood, $759. “Energy Mizer” kit, under $17. The prices are higher in the West. Preway, Wisconsin Rapids, Wis. 54494.

Flexible lighting

New movable lampholders for Halo Lighting ceiling tracks have been designed especially for the home. Left to right, the Sphere in chrome or white, the Cylinder, the Step Cylinder, and the Pinchback in chrome, white, matte black, and wood-grain black finish. Cylinder Sphere, Pinchback also come in miniature sizes. A new locking adapter, inserted in the mounted track, makes it easy to install the lampholders. Twist the adapter a quarter turn to lock the holder in place; pull the adapter sleeve and twist a quarter turn to remove it. They can be swiveled in a circle or pivoted up or down so light can be focused wherever needed. Vienti Series, Halo Lighting Div., McGraw Edison Co., 400 Busse Rd., Elk Grove Village, Ill. 60007.

Old-style-new material

In the style of old clay tiles—Spanish, Mexican, Mission—these new ones are lightweight aluminum in burnt red and tile red. S-shaped, they combine in one metal piece traditional round cap tiles and flat pan tiles. They interlock on 10 1/2-inch centers and are secured in place with four 3-penny nails driven through a nailing flange. To conceal anchoring nails, they overlap, need no support strips, and 80 will cover 100 square feet. Less than 1/2 pound per square foot in weight, they are protected from color change by a baked-on acrylic finish. Architectural Engineering Products Co., 3650 California St., San Diego, Calif. 92101.

Weatherwise door

Combining traditional design with new construction expertise, this entrance door is galvanized steel. Early American Colonial in its well-detailed, six-panel design, it has energy-saving advantages for houses. It is insulated with two layers of polyurethane foam over an interior honeycomb core. Synthetic rubber weatherstrip, a self-sealing door sweep make it weathertight against water and cold air. The steel door won’t warp, crack, or sag. In a variety of traditional styles, it has a baked-on prime paint finish. Perma-Door by Steelcraft, an American-Standard Co., 9017 Blue Ash Road, Cincinnati, Ohio 45242.

WINTER JAPAN
THE SURPRISE AND DELIGHT OF A WEEK IN FOUR JAPANESE CITIES

BY DENISE OTIS

A n invitation to visit Japan in early January, irresistible because I've always wanted to go, even though the trip would have to be short—could only be away a week from the office—and the weather perhaps cold. Too short it was, too cold it was not. Like New York in November but less rain. Still a raincoat was useful and a light winter coat, with enough layers of sweaters and shirts for easy day-to-day adjustments. Only essential addition to typical city wardrobe: two pairs of wool socks for shoes-off temple visiting. As far as things to do and see, three times as much as there was time for. The high points, day by day:

Monday. Eight in the morning and the first real look at Tokyo—last night's arrival was a rainbow blur of neon. From 33 stories up in the tower of the New Otani, it could be any modern city—skyscrapers, skyline, thousands of cars whizzing along looping superhighways—except for the great splashes of green park. The artfully curved and layered pine trees in the nearest are unmistakably Japanese. Down on the street for an early morning walk. Blocks of new and not very distinguished hotels and office buildings. Rather disappointing, but then a slight curve in the street, brilliant red torii gate, red and white banners lighting up the gray sky, a tile-roofed shrine beyond. And in the shrine garden hundreds of foxes—giant granite foxes with superior expressions, holding scrolls in their mouths, rows of inquisitive little stone foxes with red cotton bibs tied around their necks, foxes with

Now. Only 1 mg ‘tar.’

cubs, foxes in little houses with flowers in front of them, and one with a hand-knitted purple cap. Except for one old man sweeping, who bowed poliely but clearly no English, it was deserted, too early in the morning. It was not on any of my maps, no one seemed to know anything about it, and it was enchanting. Succeeded later only in learning that foxes are messengers of the gods in the Shinto religion. And that Tokyo is a city for walking. There's always a surprise—a glimpse of a garden, a little traditional house tucked among the office buildings, a tiny opening barely wide enough to be an alley that turns into a lively colorful market street, a row of concrete tubs planted with giant nosegays of pink and white and green ornamental kale. Next expedition of the day by subway. Subway clean and pleasant, but might not have atttempted it without a resident as guide.
Once done, not hard to repeat, and a very useful technique to master since Tokyo covers an enormous area. Be sure you have your own subway map with stations marked in English. Station maps mark stations with the price from where you are, but names are written in Jap-ane. Compare maps, put money in machine and get ticket. Don't worry if you make a mistake—you just pay the difference at the other end— but be sure to keep the ticket. On platforms, station names are written in English so you know where you are. Harder to describe than to do, but if it sounds too complicated, taxis are reasonable by New York standards. Object of the expedition, the district called Asakusa, which brings up the very disconcerting Japanese habit of dropping the letter “u” sometimes. Thus Asakusa is pronounced Asak'sa. Write out names if you ask for directions and aren't understood. Asakusa temple, however, is unmistakable. Monumental gate like a fortress wall with fierce guardian statues. Beyond it, arches of pink plastic flowers over a street flanked with stalls selling everything from mechanical toys to crackers and kimonoos. Another gate, hung with a giant's straw sandals—then the temple courtyard. On each side of temple steps a roof-high stack of sake —New Year’s offering—in handsome rope-tied wooden scaffolding. Interior alive with buying and selling of fortunes on little white slips of paper.
Unless completely satisfactory, they will be tied to trees in the courtyard in hope of improvement. Every twig and branch you can tie to is covered. Spreading out from the temple, a fascinating warren of temple buildings. Few buildings over 2 stories.
Some old and charming with little gardens, others new and nondescript but enlivened with New Year’s decorations, all variations on a theme of pine, bamboo, and complicated knotting of straw rope.
Incredible array of cooking knives in one shop, of wooden combs in another, and hardware stores that deserve more than a passing glance. Lunch at neighborhood restaurant, Kamameshi Haru.
Perfect for a chilly day, kamameshi is a hearty mix of rice steamed in an aromatic broth with bits of shrimp, chicken, and vegetables, appropriately and attractively served in a wooden-lidded brown earthware casserole set in a wooden box. Afternoon choice of sumo wrestling or a department store. Choose department store. Good thing it's after lunch, since the subway entrance to Takash-imaya is through the food department, acres of appetizing food, appetizingly packaged. Still-life platters of sliced vegetables and meat or fish, gift-wrapped in cellophane but not for giving—ready to lacquer, and porcelain. On to shopping—a day’s worth in a morning made possible by a friend with a car. Bingo-ya, at 69 Wakamatsu-cho, in Shinjuku, which is supposed to have the most extensive range of regional folkcrafts is, alas, closed. There's no one closing day in Japan. Department stores and most shops have a specific regular one but smaller shops sometimes vary theirs. Should have had hotel call ahead. On to Oriental Bazaar, on Jingu-mae-dori. Truly bazaar: separate concessions selling, among other things, antiques, traditional clothing, woodblock prints, toys. Quality uneven, some things at souvenir level, some very good. Fair prices and salespeople accustomed to tourists. Beniya, on Aoyama-dori, in Shibuya, near the station, has wonderful baskets and bamboo, beautiful papers and things made of paper. Minimal English spoken, which is no bar to buying. But without a Japanese-speaking companion I wouldn’t have had the extra pleasure of knowing that my chosen fan was made by a craftsman who is a Living National Treasure. At The Gallery, 11-6, 1-chome Akasaka, and Blue and White, 2-9 Azabu Juban, Minato-ku, language is no problem, owners are American. The Gallery has Japanese and Chinese antiques; Blue and White has a variety of clothes, accessories and things for the house, contemporary designs made up in traditional Japanese materials, especially blue and white cotton. Coveted the big, padded, cotton-covered metal tea chests, but had to settle for a pair of spiky bamboo salad servers.

Dash to Tokyo station and train to Kamakura, a ¾-hour trip. Trains run split second. If it's 4:02 and the station isn't Kamakura, you're on the wrong train. We are. Discover we should have changed trains two stations back. A blow, visualize afternoon vanishing in a station. Not a bit. Two minutes later a train back to the change point, 5 minutes the right train. Total time lost about 20 minutes. Farmhouses brought from the north of Japan and restored are the shop—The House of Antiques—and home of Yoshihiro Takashita. To visit, you have appointment (telephone [0467] 43-1441). He will pick you up at the station. More than worth the trip. The farmhouses are splendid, with massive hand-hewn beams and beautifully proportioned rooms. Very hard to leave and so is Mr. Takashita's marvelous collection of antique porcelain.

Wednesday. Carp-carving ceremony, Manaita-biraki, at Buddhist temple in Taito-ku district. Annual thank-offering and ancient court ritual. Magnificent costumes, virtuoso carving display. High point—a 7-inch chunk of fish, cut and stretched, to a flourish of trumpets, into an almost transparent 5-foot garland. Based on this experience, it's worth making time to see any traditional celebration you hear is happening.

Afternoon on Kappabashi, also in Taito-ku, a street lined with restaurant-supply shops and temptation. Cooking pots and serving bowls, trays and teacups, hibachis and handsome graphic noren, the traditional restaurant doorway curtains. Rows of shops that make plastic foods for restaurants to display in their windows. Unbelievably realistic, some are little masterpieces of Pop Art. They do do making a restaurant easy—you can see what you'll be eating and all you have to do is point to get it.

For dinner, shabu-shabu. One-dish meal in three courses. Big pot of boiling stock in the middle of the table. Plate of paper-thin beef slices at each place. (When you learn that beef is $16 a pound at the butcher's, you know why beef is cut thin in most Japanese dishes.) With chopsticks, swish the beef in the stock—it cooks in seconds—and dip it in a savory sesame-seed sauce. An assortment of cut vegetables from one of those still-life platters follows the beef into the pot, then squares of bean curd and noodles to be picked out, sauced, and eaten. Particularly like the edible chrysanthemum greens and am told firmly not to go cutting in the flower garden—it's a special variety. Will use watercress when I make it.

Thursday. Early morning flight to Osaka, clear day and clear view of Mt. Fuji, impressive no matter how many pictures you've seen. Also clear view of how much of Japan is mountains. Where there is space to put a city, it tends to be a big one. Osaka is big, modern, indus-
IAL. And prosperous, as one visit to the first floor and basement "shopping courts" of the Royal Hotel will tell you. Most every luxury product in the Western world — cars, clothes, furniture, accessories for the house and person—is here for sale. Even a French bakery that could be first-class in France—never mind a better croissant. The Royal is really a miniature city, planned as much for itsسكان as for travelers, with a health club, dental clinic, printing shop, and art and craft school in addition to the shops and about twenty different restaurants and bars. Seems to be a trend in Japanese luxury-hotel building. The New Otani is on a similar model.*

Afternoon: Taken to Takarazuka Revue, all-female — as opposed to all-male Noh and Kabuki — theatre and school in an entertainment park about 40 minutes from town. Improbable plots, highly colored and beautifully costumed performers, the opulent silliness — and harm — of a thirties musical. Then a soak at underground Osaka, Umeda shopping mall, the largest of several labyrinths of shops, restaurants, and movie theatres. Starlight to see streams and fountains, even trees in tubs several levels below the street. Cocktail reception at the hotel. Beautiful food, as always beautifully presented. Superb raw oysters and crab legs bedded on rice in big silver-nosed pale-wood boxes.

Friday. Breakfast, looking out on a green and manicured Japanese garden with highly decorative ducks standing and swimming in the foreground — a Japanese screen come to life. Right mood for a day in Kyoto. From the train, first countryside: flat beige fields with rows of decorative haystacks, clusters of wooden plaster houses with bright blue tile roofs. House under construction, a roof on stilts. Snowing lightly in Kyoto. First time in second week in January that the temperature has fallen below 40 degrees, mostly it's been in the 50s, although cloudy. Sanjusangendo Temple — all black and gray and white in the snow; latey tiled roofs, silvery or browny black timber, tracery pines. Inside an immensely long narrow space with a thousand dull-gold Kwannon figures flanking an 11-foot one. Kiyomizu Monastery built out from the side of a hill overlooking the city on a fragile-looking timber lattice. Soft, undulating dark bark roofs, beautiful details in wood and metal. Then down a lively street lined with pottery shops, to taxi out of town for lunch at Higashiyama Villa in the hills. Shabu-shabu again, this time with tiny mushrooms. Japanese seating, i.e. kneeling, and I should have had a lot more kneeling practice before I left home. Fortunately most restaurants have a choice of tatami or tables and chairs, as did this, but rooms for a large group, and we were, mostly seem to be tatami.

THE CHEROKEE CALLED THEM "THE GREAT BLUE HILLS OF GOD." THE NAME HAS CHANGED. THE MOUNTAINS HAVEN'T.

They go by many names today. The Appalachians, the Blue Ridge, the Great Smokies.

But stand on a peak at sunrise, with the mist in your face and the smell of evergreen in your nostrils, and you can still see them the way the Cherokee first saw them.

The ridges stretch away like a great frozen sea, swelling in blue waves, frothed with clouds.

Time, a half-billion years of it, has gentled down the slopes and cushioned them over with trees.

And civilization, when it came at all, came quietly.

Pioneer footpaths have given way, in places, to paved roads. Log cabins sit almost side by side with inns, lodges and newer homes.

But even today you can walk just a few hundred yards off the main highway, almost anywhere, and never see the smallest sign that another human being has ever been there.

You get a sense of the connectedness of things. A feeling that time was going on long before you arrived, and will be going on long after you leave.

A few days here, in the silence of the lush mile-high forests, can take the worries of the world off your shoulders. And put them back where they belong.
North Carolina is like that. From the mountains to the fertile midlands, all the way to the sea that brought the British colonists to the New World, because a lot of things have changed, but in some ways nothing has.

And, once you've been here, you might never be quite the same yourself.

Note here on footwear. Since you must remove shoes before entering temples, palaces, or tatami rooms, heavy socks and clogs turn out to be a more manageable winter choice than boots.

Visit to flower arranging and tea ceremony classes. A glimpse of how seriously such traditional disciplines are taken by otherwise up-to-the-minute Japanese.

Then craft school with impressive display of local handwork. Subsequent visit to well-known Kyoto Handicraft Center bit of a let-down. Again a bazaar, uneven but well organized for shopping and shipping.

Dinner in a pretty riverside restaurant, Tempura Osawa. Tempura in unaccustomed variety—shrimp, of course, but also quail eggs, gingko nuts, cel, and a variety of vegetables—cooked in front of you.

Saturday. To Nara—city of temples. First Horiyu-ji, just outside, oldest Buddhist monastery in Japan, some buildings dating from the founding in 607 are the oldest wooden architecture in Japan, perhaps the world. Interiors glow with gold and frescoes. Outsides are sober, in colors of wood and sand and stone with subtle detailing and noble proportions.

Throughout, a sense of peace and contemplation. In Nara, gaiety and celebration. Adults day—the festival for all who become 20 this year. Kasuga Shrine—like all Shinto shrines lacquered brilliant vermilion—thronged with girls in gaily colored kimonos and young men in Western dress, laughing, chatting, taking pictures of each other, buying fortunes and candy. Park filled with ancient stone lanterns and greedy, aggressive deer begging for biscuits. Quieter crowds at Todaiji Temple, perhaps overawed by ferocious 26-foot figures guarding the gate and an even larger Buddha within. Surrounding paths lined with stalls selling souvenirs and vendors offering apparatus looking hot baked yams and roasted corn.

Fireworks to end the day: spectacular annual burning of Wakakusayama hill. Town, trees, and temples silhouetted with what looks like a simmering swimming pool in the corner. Etiquette is soap and rinse first. Prudence is rinse a lot with basins of water from the pool until a little accustomed to heat. Still a shock. So is leaving the bathroom if you don't festivals of opera, concerts, and youth-and-music.

Unlike the Metropolitan Opera in New York, where you might go one night out of a hundred, in Vienna the opera is daily sustenance. The Viennese pay millions in taxes to subsidize it. Viennese shopkeepers display photographs of their favorite singers in the windows. Sacher Torte makers argue the virtues of Léhar over Johann Strauss. Local cafes are named after Mozart and Beethoven. The annual Opera Ball is the apotheosis of Viennese social life.

It's not surprising, therefore, that the Vienna Opera House is a building to be reckoned with. Domed, richly decorated, it rises in the center of the city like an imperial monument to Austria's former greatness. Designed by two Viennese architects, Eduard van der Nüll and August von Sicardsburg, and opened in 1869, it was bombed during World War II, but not, fortunately, the spectacular Baroque staircase of white marble and gold, and frescoed foyer by Moritz von Schwind. Also preserved were the tea salon, an elegant room off the central box where archudical types slipped out for a smoke during boring arias, and the Schwind room, one of the vast frescoed salons where operagoers promenade during intermissions.

The other two opera houses are equally atmospheric—the Volkoper, which puts on operettas, and the Theater an der Wien, where Beethoven's Fidelio was first performed and where the great composer lived upstairs.

The Vienna State Opera, however, is very formal. The first time I went I wore a skimpy summer dress that looked like a petticoat compared to the sumptuous clothes of the rest of the audience. The Opera House provides very operatic snacks before and during intermissions—open sandwiches with caviar, smoked salmon and crabmeat, and champagne or local wine, coffee. After we had listened to one of the finest opera orchestras in the world, the Vienna Philharmonic, under the baton of Vienna's most beloved conductor, Karl Böhm, performing Ariadne auf Naxos in the gold and white horseshoe of the historic opera house, we came out feeling as though we were on wings.

Vienna opera performances begin at the early hour of 6 or 7 p.m., so you have dinner afterwards. With our evening organized, we spent the days sightseeing. At the top of our list was Schönbrunn Palace, the home of the Hapsburgs, with a few fascinating rococo gems in addition to the mostly 19th-century Baroque rooms. (Vienna's greatest days were when the Hapsburg Empire was at its height, and the city's architecture shows the fin de siècle flowering.) Another morning was devoted to the Upper and Lower Belvedere, the former residence of Prince Eugen of Savoy, with French gardens and an art gallery containing the finest Klimt collection anywhere. Finally, we plunged into the Hofburg, the city's vast imperial palace, a mixture of architectural styles, which also houses the Spanish Riding School.

The Spanish Riding School will thrill anyone. Out of another age, the Lippizaner horses prance into the Baroque indoor hall, their breathtaking movements comparable to the grace and power of Baryshnikov. They perform twice a week (once on Sundays), and you can get the program and tickets ahead of time. (If seats are sold out, standing room is perfectly good for viewing; in fact we all stood up at times to see better.)

Vienna's Kunsthistorisches is a very special museum containing some of the finest Rembrandts, Brueghels, and Velasquez paintings anywhere, plus a stunning collection of gold, silver, jewelry, and porcelain belonging to the Hapsburgs (with more in the Hofburg Treasury). The Albertina has the largest collection of prints and drawings in the world, and I will never forget some of the Goya, Dürer, and Rembrandt drawings I saw there. (Also, the Albertina is blessedly small.) For music-lovers, a less well-known but fascinating museum is the Alte Musikinstrumente, in the Hofburg, an extraordinary collection of musical instruments such as a wood carved music box with 10 tiny gold trumpeters, Kaiser Leopold's mother-of-pearl inlaid clavichord, and Beethoven's own Erard piano.

We also took a bus tour to the Vienna Woods (Vienna Sightseeing Bus Tours go to most places), being particularly interested in Mayerling, the tragic spot where Crown Prince Rudolph and the Barones Vetsera committed suicide in 1889. Unfortunately, the bus passed it without letting us off, so we decided that next time it might be more fun to rent a car. There is another popular bus trip to Grinzing, the wine-growing village outside Vienna, producing the "Heurige"—newest vintage wines, which you drink in taverns to the sound of—guess what?—Viennese waltzes.
"I got it in traffic. The FTD Birthday Party Bouquet."

It's so easy to send this unusual bouquet with fun favors, horns. Just call or visit your FTD Florist (most accept major credit cards). He'll deliver birthday parties, by wire, to just about any town you can name in the U.S. and Canada. Those FTD Florists Really Get Around . . . for you.
FOR LUNCH
We were tempted to go daily to Demel's, the world-famous pastry shop that serves hot and cold first courses you choose yourself from an enormous buffet (fennel and celery quiche, sweetbread-egg- and-chicken pie were sample delicacies we loved), leaving enough room for the dessert, also laid out for you to drool over—pear mousse, walnut cake with 3 layers of walnut butter cream, and tortes galore. There are also lots of small wine bars, such as Olenloch, filled with elegant Viennese lunchers and no tourists—except us (always a good sign), where we had delicious soup and strudel, and Brezelgöwlb, an attractive and comfortable little weinstube. We stuck to local white wine with our meals, which was fine. You can order a quarter carafe, a perfect large-glass size. Another pleasant lunch was at the Palais Schwarzenberg, where you can eat outside under blue umbrellas, off rose and white tablecloths, facing fountain and statue-studded park.

FOR DINNER
The best deluxe restaurant we went to was the well-known Drei Husaren, a cozy post-opera place where we had Lady Curzon soup (light curry cream), calves brains with eggplant, and light-as-a-feather dessert pancakes. We also liked the Wegenstein-Weisser Schwan, an outdoor tavern-style restaurant where the specialty is suckling pig served with red cabbage and dumplings, and the restaurant at our hotel, the Palais Schwarzenberg, where we had delicious medallions of venison (a popular meat in Vienna) and fresh fish. The most famous Viennese hotel of all, the Sacher, lived up to its reputation for sachertorte.

HOW TO GET THERE
TWA flies nonstop to Vienna on Thursdays, Sundays, and Tuesdays.

WHERE TO STAY
The Palais Schwarzenberg, a hotel that's one wing of the Palace, home of the Schwarzenberg family, although about a 10-minute walk from the Opera House, is beautifully situated in a park adjacent to the Belvedere Gardens. A room overlooking the park affords a wonderful view, especially at night when the statues and fountains are lit up. Other famous Viennese hotels are the Imperial, and the Sacher, both a stone's throw from the Opera House.

Dear Sirs:

Geographically, Lubec is the most eastern point in the United States, and probably for this reason I had great difficulty in finding any Neutrogena Hand Cream. The day I finally made my purchase, two of my fingers were so cracked and bleeding I had them bandaged. Four days later they had healed and only a rough, dry area remained.

I realize that one type of cream does not always work the same with all types of skin, but for me, Neutrogena has been nothing short of a miracle. In the last twenty years...nothing even came close to relieving the cracked, bleeding painful skin condition.

Maine winters can be very cold, and this winter is no exception. We have had weeks of bitter winds with zero and below temperatures. I am outside a great deal as we do a lot of snowmobiling, and so far, my skin remains actually soft and free from painful cracking of the skin around my fingers.

...my unending thanks for a product that really produces, for me anyway.

Sincerely,

Suzanne McCurdy

Originally developed for Arctic fishermen, Neutrogena Hand Cream is a heavy-duty formula which literally shields your hands, helps them heal. Medical tests show it helped clear up acute skin conditions within 14 days. Your satisfaction guaranteed, or money back from Neutrogena. $3.

Tradition the new connection

9 young designers and architects speak out

What does tradition mean

"History and continuity — which is what good design is all about. This doesn’t mean that you borrow motifs or superficial embellishments. Good design develops from the core. It is a logical outgrowth, an important step from what was taken before." Peter Stamberg, furniture designer.

"Solutions to structural problems, worked out over the centuries. For example, scale of furniture, positioning of doorknobs. Modern design often lacks detail which can be inspired by tradition." Arthur Smith, interior designer.

"Enrichment. If everything were modern and slick we would be deprived of other age’s sense of form, other people’s energy and thinking." Russell Childs, architect.

"Comfort and reassurance in a rapidly changing world. There is wonderful energy to be found in American tradition. We have to learn to recycle tradition with wit and a sensibility that was in the original style." James Wines, architect.

"Symbolism that puts deeper meaning into our surroundings. Tradition helps us to better understand the whole of life’s picture and lends the warm satisfaction of feeling the circle of life." Alexandra Stoddard, interior designer.

"Craftsmanship and all the methods that have been developed to make things. We must respect what’s gone before, though we may seek to improve techniques. Tradition is the sum total of man’s experiences. We cannot disregard human memories, attachments." Ronald and Victoria Borus, interior designers.

"Emotional content — in old brick, archways, various materials, shapes, and ways of assembling things. Today people realize that extreme asceticism and forms adopted by modernism can be alienating. We must be brave enough to abandon that logic and deal instead with intuition and feeling." Craig Hodgetts, architect.

Why use tradition today

"Cherished old things help to supply the human touch. Frequently we will design a functional, contemporary space and then finish it off with one very special piece of 18th-century furniture, a collection of Early American baskets, or surround a modern table with Colonial ladderback chairs." Lucretia Robertson and Donna Lang, interior designers.

"It has been tested and it works. As a man aware of the dollar, I appreciate knowing that a traditional item will retain its value and possibly increase in worth." George Anderson, interior designer.

"It gives us table dining. You cannot carve chicken on your lap or on a tray." Mario LoCicero, interior designer.

"At a time in architecture when there is a tendency to newness for its own sake, the framework of tradition is more necessary than ever to provide the contrast." Stephen Potters, architect.

"For an element of surprise. It keeps things from looking static in a room. Interesting juxtaposition is marvelous." Carole Mitchell, interior designer.

"To replace the contact with the human sensitive parts of life. I have finished a project in which I did a real 18th-century Georgian facade on a house. The space is organized in traditional ways that reflect the lives of the people living in the house." Gerald Allen, architect.

How to update tradition

"Find ways of using traditional symbols in a creative way. Use an antique piece of furniture like sculpture as an object to walk around and to control the space." Yann Weymouth, architect.

"Eliminate all patterns on period furniture and replace with unexpected fabrics. For example, Ultrasuede or artist’s canvas on a Queen Anne chair. Treat the mantel as an objet d’art. Don’t put anything on it. Then on the floor nearby, place a large chemical beaker with wood in it." John Saladino, interior designer.

"Bleach floors very light, or paint them for a more contemporary look." Robert Perkins, interior designer.

"Shoot for larger scale, use brilliant color. Never remove moldings, make them white, gray, or marbelize them. Keep floors bare, with painted or straw rugs." Mark Hampton, interior designer.

"Mix in painted chairs and tables in fresh lacquer colors, with traditional wooden pieces. Concentrate on uplights or downlights. Use larger, more dramatic accessories — two large terra-cotta urns sitting on a chest top, instead of tiny object collections." Harry Schule and Ned Marshall, interior designers.

"Use recolored, old chintz. Paint ceilings, sky blue or yellow. Paint woodwork in contrast to walls. Be daring and do it!" Mario Buatta, interior designer.

A screen porch transformed into a living room with glass and color

How to turn a summer porch into a year-round room the whole family will enjoy: Fill openings with tinted double-glazed safety glass and build a ceiling-high bay window to enclose former screened-in areas. Lay heating pipes on the old concrete floor, cover with wide brown-stained boards. And warm up the whole room with earthy color. Designed by John Carey for Mr. and Mrs. George Kroh. To learn how to enclose a porch, see page 36.
It's a new-found room where you can live, eat, play, and enjoy the outdoor life indoors.

Easy fabric walls create a romantic tented room

A porch is a porch is . . . a tent? Why not? It can be charming and practical. Here, durable, water-repellent cotton duck, hung on simple aluminum poles set on brackets, becomes side walls and ceiling of an otherwise unenclosed porch. A ceiling light hidden under the center swag (slung low enough so it won’t burn) bathes the whole area in a warm glow. For contrast, cotton chintz is used for pillow appliqués, chair pads, kick pleats for a tablecloth. At one end of the porch, opposite page, top, an old Victorian cot. Durrie rug from Jack Soskin. Designed by Linda Carbutt, Prudence Spencer, and Kate Wharton of Now & Then for The Boston Junior League Showhouse.
The new living porch

Simple materials cleverly used in a living-dining room

What is now a refreshing year-round porch used to be a large screened-in area with a gray-painted floor and an uninteresting white plywood ceiling. After screens were replaced with fixed glass panels, all it took was some inexpensive green canvas to make roll-up shades (they work on white pulley cords) and a tablecloth; green paint to fill the spaces between the ceiling beams and extend the look of the shades; a simple sisal rug; and lots of plants. Light-hearted Chinese lanterns are filled with bunches of tiny Christmas lights. Coffee table is fabric-covered plywood. Oriental porcelain pieces, all Imari reproductions. Designed by Ron Cacciola for The Junior League of Greater Bridgeport Showcase.
Flexible furniture turns a porch into a family room for living, dining, games.

It's 60 feet long and only 11 feet wide—but this porch, now glassed in, works for living, dining, even Ping-Pong. That's because it's divided into three separate areas set off by four two-panel upholstered screens. In the center, a dining area with an umbrella table that further defines the space—and makes diners smile. On the easy-to-maintain plastic laminate table, a natural setting of terra-cotta strawberry jars filled with succulents, thick straw trivets for placemats, and Chinese straw clutch pocketbooks to keep napkins and flatware from blowing away.

A living area with a hammock, wicker sofa and chair, sisal rug is at one end of porch; at other, gaming area with full-size Ping-Pong table. Designed by Robert K. Lewis for Designer Showcase for the benefit of North Shore Science.
Traditional? Yes, but with a soft and sunny touch, a pretty amalgam of comfort and color in a house that would be at home anywhere.

Above: The living room, full of French chintz as tumbled with tulips as a garden in Holland, with scarlet lacquered tables perched like exotic birds. Bookshelves line the window alcoves.

Right: Clapboard, stone, wood shakes, gabled windows create an exterior with a hint of Cape Cod, a porch that's a suggestion of a neighborly Southwestern ranch house.
Fresh decorating, lively color in a brand new house with an affection for the past River Meadow Farm stretches for 25 acres in California's Napa Valley. It is the home of writer Pat Montandon and her businessman husband, Alfred Wilsey. "Because the Napa Valley is wine country," she says, "we almost built a French house, then thought no—we wanted something purely American—a mixture of traditional styles put together without incongruity." A tall order, but the architect and interior designer managed it, and the result is a house that could be put down almost anywhere in America and still have rapport with its setting. The building materials are all indigenous to California. "When an old wharf was torn down in San Francisco, we were able to buy enough of its timbers for beams, rafters, and mantels." There's a lot of paving, inside and out, of Palo Verde stone (a beautiful slate), and the driveway is made of cobbledstones. "They came originally from our valley, were shipped around the Horn as ballast, used for street paving, eventually torn up, and now they've come home." Interior design: Michael Taylor. Architects: Charles Porter & Robert Steinwedell. Landscape architect: Lee Noel.

Country modern
"When I'm asked if I collect anything," says Pat Montandon, "I say, yes—people. The entire spectrum. When I'm alone, I work. Hard. But you come to a stopping point, and then we entertain." There are three areas in the house for dining: the dining room, a sheltered terrace, and an open one by the pool. The table settings always reflect the Montandon love for bright happy colors—"I couldn't bear to live in a mouse-colored house—I love yellow and soft greens and pink." In the bedroom, left, pink is splashed with white, with a canopied bed and a sofa decked out in a checked linen—hot peony pink on a background color hardly stronger than a maiden's blush. "The vibes have to be right for me and my guests, and I find that people are more outgiving when they're surrounded by flower colors rather than tones that give the impression nothing grows. Any house, traditional or not, has to have life pumped into it, and that's how I do it."

Left: In the master bedroom, an update of traditional favorites, the rug is patterned in flowers and shells, a motif blown up from the original design. "It was too delicate. Now it's bold enough to stand up to the check. The white chair was designed by Syrie Maugham. Original, and a rarity."

Here's a garden to delight the collector in all of us—full of old-fashioned herbs, roses, and even an assortment of American folk art, all surrounded by an old, salvaged, gray picket fence. Best of all, it gives Mr. and Mrs. Serge Gagarin a pretty view from the back windows of their 1735 Connecticut house. Set around a brick terrace are four neat beds, each edged with alpine strawberries and flecked with nasturtiums, marigolds, and zinnias. Two of the beds hold culinary classics—basil, sage, tarragon, sweet woodruff, and alliums; another has medicinal plants—rue, wormwood, and lady’s-mantle. The fourth is for amusing plants that catch Mrs. Gagarin’s eye—this year’s find was a thistle, “pretty in May, but by fall it was so prickly and mean you couldn’t talk to it.” Alongside the brick terrace is a pebbled rose garden, the Gagarins’ favorite spot for sitting with guests.

There are, in this world, certain human beings who seem born to be followed by everybody else. They have éclat, uniqueness, an ability to look at a piece of Swiss cheese and think "wallpaper pattern" while the rest of us are thinking "sandwich." They are individualists, and lest one conclude that individualists are hard to find, I would like to say that an 8-year-old I drive to school every morning already qualifies. Of course, at the age of 8 originality tends to breed contempt and to date nobody is following her anywhere, but many an individualist has started out that way.

For reasons best known to her Creator, Lindsey is simply not like every other child in her class. She is a dreamer, a hope-holder, a cockeyed optimist who doggedly hangs on to Santa Claus in the face of the evidence. She thinks that today is wonderful even though yesterday was a documented disaster. When asked what her favorite thing to do is, she replied "car accidents." Why, "Because I love to skid."

For all her exuberance and unreasoned faith, Lindsey does not operate blithely above the opinions of her peers. Peers are her toughest problem, and she regularly marches up to those early bloomers with thicker braids, starchier ways, and brighter prospects and asks them outright, "Do you like me?" It is a heartbreaking honest approach to life, the out-of-sync maiden researching playground goddesses for ways to self-improve.

We do not begin our search for individuality hoping to find it. Quite the contrary. Children can be transparently eager to join the Party of Otherness, where their oddness can be absorbed by a larger group and they can experience the security of being exactly like everybody else.

There are many times when adults would love to be somebody else, too—to trade places with another person who could do what we can't, be what we aren't. Yet while I marvel at Katharine Hepburn's ability to step on the gas and speed through life's sticky intersection without apologizing to every pedestrian along the way, she might marvel at my ability to preside over a birthday party at McDonald's. Our talents are unequally distributed, and while I might be tongue-tied on her stage, she might have the same paralysis of spirit on mine.

To be somebody else is not a true option, and while the pull toward "otherness" is as natural as moon drag, we possess indissoluble borders, and there is no one living who has not endured the sharp arrow of separateness at one time or another. We are our only tenant. What we do with this realization depends upon how at ease we are with the tenant inside Who is this person?

We begin by not knowing. We are form, encumbered by excess clay, that wants to be released. Mind, heart, intuition, muscle—our natural powers are more potential than actual and the dream that flickers in the midst of this form ill-defined. Yet the dream persists, looking for a home.

I grew up in a family that, God help us, envied excellence. This is not to say that we all became excellent. But excellence hung in the air, like the keen scent of a joss stick burning in a hidden room and while there were no blueprints handed out, it was strongly implied that there was more to life than plotting the expansion of one's cashmere sweater collection, Chinese brush painting, meditation, competitive tennis, the recorder—they were some of the forms that excellence assumed, but when one of my aunts remarked that "I think you are going to lead a great life," I didn't know whether she meant microbiology or a career in the movies.

I am a dancer," wrote Martha Graham. "I believe that we learn by practice. Whether it means to learn to dance, to practice dancing, or to learn to live, to practice living, the principles are the same. In each it is the performance of a dedicated set of acts, physical or intellectual, from which comes a sense of achievement, a satisfaction of spirit. One becomes in some area an athlete of God." There is no major field of accomplishment that lacks athletes. Margaret Mead, Lillian Hellman, Leonard Bernstein—these are individualists who stand like sentinels against the sky, sharp, stylish nonconformists who are one of a kind. Yet beneath the nonconformity runs a thing quite opposite. What separates the individual from the rest of lies in the exquisite harmony that exists between the inner self and its outer expression. One conforms to the other in disciplined loyalty, and the result is grace. Loyalty is a virtue that doesn’t always serve us well. As a writer, I have been informed that the world was full of grace, wit, wisdom, and general superiority, and I knew I should have at least one of these virtues in my stable before riding out into the world. It was some years before I realized that my horse was me.

Loyalty to oneself is a far more difficult task. That self changes. We expand, contract, discover, become confused. Circumstances have a way of changing up, which tends to refuse our powers at the same moment we should be forcefully wielding them. To retain what we hold, we have to be rehearsed for getting back to your roots:

Where to find it, How to collect it, Expert tips to help you judge quality, by Paula Rice Jackson

The collectible today is American Folk Art. Just exactly what that is is open to interpretation. Scholars, curators, and collectors recently met for a symposium at the Brandywine River Museum in Chadds Ford, Pennsylvania at which this question was widely discussed. Like the Constitution of the United States, it is subject to broad and narrow definitions. Robert Bishop, Director of the Museum of American Folk Art in New York, offers his definition: "We think of it as pieces made by American craftsmen who were untutored in the scholastic traditions of art. They worked in the 17th, 18th, and 19th centuries with methods inherited from Europe but with an artistic vision very much their own. American Folk Art's impact comes from its freshness, vitality, and very often, its humor." American Folk Art was also functional; a painting of a house or farm or a person also served as a document. Craftsmen made things that were to be used and lived with. They relied on their inventiveness with the materials they had at hand and combined it with a shrewd sense of the tightfistedness of their customers. Values not unlike those we are living with today—which may be one explanation of folk art's wide popularity. There may be as many as forty different collectibles that fall under the heading of American Folk Art: carved wood decoys from Maine, cigar-store Indians from Virginia, New England scrimshaw, weathervanes, baskets, Amish quilts, saltglaze pottery, redware, painted furniture, the portrait and the Fraktur painting of the Pennsylvania Germans—a rich field for the dedicated treasure hunter. Mrs. Lucy Danziger, who is a trustee of the Museum of American Folk Art and director of its Docent program, puts it best: "You can make a collection out of absolutely anything as long as it has a strong appeal to you. I've been interested for quite some time and I'm still learning about all the different things people collect. I met a woman recently who collected 'whimsies.' Whimsies? I'd never even heard of them! They're small toys made by sailors, whalers, and whittlers that are carved from a single block of wood. Some are phenomenally intricate!"

Some far-sighted people began collecting folk art seriously about forty years ago. The Abby Aldrich Rockefeller Folk Art Museum in Williamsburg, Virginia and the Shelburne Museum in Shelburne, Vermont (see pages 110-115) house wonderful examples of what concerned collectors found and preserved. Today there is still a homogenous blend of things to find all over America—we took our belongings with us as we moved farther and farther west.

How do you begin a collection? The first step is getting exposure. Find out how to begin a collection. You may be as many as forty different collectibles that fall under the heading of American Folk Art: carved wood decoys from Maine, cigar-store Indians from Virginia, New England scrimshaw, weathervanes, baskets, Amish quilts, saltglaze pottery, redware, painted furniture, the portrait and the Fraktur painting of the Pennsylvania Germans—a rich field for the dedicated treasure hunter. Mrs. Lucy Danziger, who is a trustee of the Museum of American Folk Art and director of its Docent program, puts it best: "You can make a collection out of absolutely anything as long as it has a strong appeal to you. a new slant

An ingenious apartment where memorabilia and folk art enrich—and are enriched by—sensational new setting.

The layout could hardly look more modern—walls on the diagonal, large-scale, simple furniture, recessed lighting. But another century is at home here in a fascinating collection of English and American memorabilia. Interior designer Ann Hartman removed all the interior walls of this old city apartment to make space and light and display the collection.

Above and opposite: The living room, formerly two rooms, now runs the length of the apartment and has two working fireplaces and windows stripped to their natural wood. Behind the modular sofa, free-standing walls conceal a bar and the dining room beyond, where a stained glass hides view.

New diagonal partitions set off living areas, keep space flowing

The apartment originally had lots of small, dark, boxy rooms. The task was to make it as open as possible. The owners, both writers, wanted space that looked like a loft, yet was private. Designer Ann Hartman’s ingenious solution was to start fresh by replacing all the walls except the outer shell with new white-painted partitions on the diagonal. At once the space became larger, lighter, and more open (see floor plans, right). “A diagonal line is longer; you get the whole length of the place,” she explains. She also built cantilevered storage under all the windows to hide radiators, conceal speakers, and make the new open space look more unified. All the rooms seem to flow into each other, yet a sense of privacy is achieved. The bedroom and study are intentionally remote from “public” areas, and partitions are positioned so that the study, above, for instance, may be cluttered with books and papers that cannot be seen from the living area. The white sculptural shapes and walls make a strong background for the 19th- and 20th-century English and American advertising and trade signs scattered throughout the apartment. “I think one of the reasons it works is because of the play between the two scales,” says Ann Hartman. “The small, intricate designs of the traditional pieces contrast with the large areas of white, light space.”

If Colonial decorating and endearing old crafts have a fresh appeal for today, the Shelburne Museum in Shelburne, Vermont deserves part of the credit for making folk art come alive. The museum is a group of historic old buildings filled with collections of Colonial pewter, glass, toys, quilts, paintings, and furniture. It was established in 1947 by a passionate collector, Electra Havemeyer Webb, and her husband, J. Watson Webb, who wanted to save old houses of Vermont. Now more than 135,000 visitors come each year between May and October to be charmed by the "collection of collections."

The museum began as a way of housing the Webb family's collection of antique carriages, but from 1947 to 1955 it blossomed as more buildings were found and transported (some stone by stone) to the site, and other collections were donated to fill them. The museum's folk-art collections are housed in the Stage Coach Inn, which was brought from Charlotte, Vt., and, like the other restored buildings, given a new life at Shelburne. Its original proportions and room layout were discovered during the move, and craftsmen were able to reassemble it, ballroom and all.

Tobacco stores, tea shops, and newsstands bought sculptures for $25 to $125 as store-front characters.
4. The kitchen of Stencil House is unusual for its single color, which covers the whole room—floor, walls, and staircase.
5. The parlor chamber of Dutton House (1782): A "stumpwork" embroidery hangs over the bed. In stumpwork, bits of wood were used to stuff raised embroidered figures. This subject is Biblical Judith.
6. American pewter in the Harvest Room of Dutton House. Amber and brown glazed Rockinghamware urn and deep baking dishes on pine table under the window.
Most popular motif is the eagle—symbol of sovereignty.

2. The kitchen of Vermont House (1790). Two cats on the wall are made from six tiles each of Delft; by the window, a Hadley chest, the kind carved by fathers or brothers for their daughter's or sister's dowries. It is covered with carvings that symbolize medical herbal folklore.

3. A gathering of eagles, the most popular motif in Colonial American decorative art—in a hallway of the Stage Coach Inn.

4. Dining room of Vermont House. Antique French wallpapers were used to give this room the feeling of a sea-captain's house. The table is set with antique Waterford crystal and Whieldon china.

6. A low-hanging ball outside the Stage Coach Inn was the driver's signal to stop for passengers, or, as here, to "highball through."

7. Hale little militiaman is late 18th-century painted wood. He's 26 inches high, carved in one piece, by an unknown artist.

8. The dining-room chamber, which takes its name from the room directly below it. There are no "period" rooms in Dutton House. Selections imitate the natural accumulation of living.

9. "Before the cock crows twice shall ye deny me three times," was a quote of great importance to the Colonial Christians who carved these roosters.

COMB PAINTING
FOLK ART YOU CAN
With acrylic colors and a piece of cardboard you can do a free-spirited revival of an Early American craft

Comb painting makes waves—and you can, too—on zigzag buckets, criss-cross boxes, herringbone trays. All you need is a cardboard comb, some bright colored paints, and a fanciful sense of fun.

American colonists began comb painting nearly 200 years ago to imitate—but in an offhand way—the more elaborate finishes of European furniture. Disguising their simple wooden tables and chests with painted designs, they created some of the first examples of Early American folk art. Today, artist Luis Molina updates the techniques and designs of these spirited pioneers with bright Matisse-like colors and modern tools. The result is a craft, as easy as finger painting, that creates exciting decoration.

To create a combed effect on any smooth surface, undercoat with enamel, let dry overnight, then cover with a contrasting coat of acrylic paint, section by section. Working quickly, wiggle a cardboard comb through the wet overcoat. The enamelled undercoat will show through to create a design. Complete instructions and a list of materials begin on page 152.

The big focus is the angled tub wedged into a bank of corner cabinets, which frees extra wall space for cabinets and closets, and forms a ledge for crystal and flowers. The bath is space-efficient and meticulously crafted to seem much larger than its 10-by-13-foot space. To right, door to sun terrace.

DAVID MASSEY
Here's a new way to live with nature—in an ecology-minded house that uses modern technology to tune itself in. Situated to be warmed by the sun in winter, it has two solar heating systems built right into its south side, above. In summer it's shaded by natural foliage, equipped with air intake and output vents to capture cool breezes and keep the air moving. And the house has a brain to report on itself and its surroundings: The computer, right, can tell the occupants how the house is functioning—the temperature inside and out, light intensity, wind stress, even sounds. This information, recorded in electrical signals, will be used to perfect all the house's energy-saving systems, and converted into entertainment—electronic music. The mastermind behind the remarkable house is Mike Jantzen, who calls himself a conceptual artist. He and his wife Ellen built it and designed most of the furniture.

Above: On the south side of the house, sunlight pours through center bubbles to warm the house directly. Collector panels to the sides and under the windows absorb more heat. House is constructed of wooden arches and steel siding from Republic Steel.

A remarkable place to live, where the oldest ideas look Star-Wars new, and advanced technology is at peace with the land.

Meet the computer that monitors the environment—and makes music.
Get aboard the energy cycle: the ride way to pump water, chop wood, grind grain, and recharge batteries.

In this house, as in nature, nothing is ever lost or wasted. Gardens provide home-grown food, and water and waste are recycled to keep the gardens growing. Water is carefully conserved by high-pressure nozzles and by a special biological toilet. The shower, a garden hose equipped with a turn-off valve, uses 2 1/2 gallons of water per shower instead of the usual 50. Nature warms the house in the cold Illinois winters and cools it in summer. Heat coming through the living room's bubble windows is absorbed by the brick floor in the center of the living room, opposite page, which returns it to the room. Such direct heating is called a "passive" system. To the sides of the bubble window, built in solar collectors (the stripes on the south side of the house) form the "active" solar system. Heat from the sun is pumped through air ducts with a low-voltage electric blower into rocks under the wood floor, where it is stored. The solar collectors are made from the same steel siding used to cover all the curved surfaces of the house—but painted black and enclosed in fiberglass (the only extra cost of collectors). Water, too, is heated by the sun, through solar panels below the center bubbles, and stored in a tank in a closet off the living area. For periods when the sun doesn't shine, there is an efficient back-up system: a double-combustion wood-burning stove, opposite page. Most fireplaces lose 70 to 90 percent of their heat up the chimney, but this stove is airtight. On a zero-degree day, it should only have to be filled once to heat the house. A wood cart Mike designed to fit under the kitchen counter is used to bring logs in from the wood storage built into the north side of the house, opposite page, top. The air is kept moving by modern versions of the attic ventilator: rooftop turbine vents that pull out warm air, draw cooler air in through vents near the ground, below left. Herbs planted in strategically placed beds, left, contribute their fragrances to freshen the air and repel insects. Human energy doesn't go to waste either: The Jantzens put their exercise sessions on the energy cycle to work doing household chores.

Idea from the astronauts: a space-blanket bed tent for extra warmth

Throughout the house, ingenious storage in pockets, under tables, in and on the walls

Following another of nature's good examples, Mike designed his house to grow. His and Ellen's studios (one on each end of the house) can be pulled away from the central core, and more wood arches added to expand the living space. Moreover, Mike says, "each section can be closed off to conserve heat and provide privacy." The bedroom, on an open bridge above the central living space, can be closed off with insulated panels and Mylar flaps—the same material used by astronauts for space blankets. All curved walls and ceilings are foam insulated and sprayed with a brand-new, fire retardant wall material. In the kitchen, bottom left, a host of energy savers—a high-pressure nozzle on the kitchen sink, gravity-fed by a water tank on the second level; a roomy Amana refrigerator that runs on as much electricity as a 75-watt bulb, and a kitchen stove that runs half on gas, half on wood. Ellen uses the warmth from the stove's pilot light to dry herbs and spices from the gardens. Formica-topped plywood dining table has flip-up leaves that reveal storage for dishes. And when it's time to wash up, the table can be wheeled to the sink. Everything built of low cost, easy to maintain materials like birch plywood from Champion Building Products.
How a family that cooks and gardens together shapes a personal lifestyle from a love of simple things.

A canary sings exuberantly after a large lunch; cats snooze by the fire; seedlings sprout in window-seat greenhouses and the scent of wood smoke fills the air. This is the live-in country kitchen of Caroline and Terence Conran. She writes cookbooks, the best-selling The House Book, and more recently The Kitchen Book (Crown). And with his new store called Conran's, they're bringing their ideas to America.

She cooks while he talks, or the roles may be reversed—both are food experts. He started as an apprentice chef in Paris: "I cook a lot, but not ahead." She has written several cookbooks and translated the British edition of Michel Guérard's Cuisine Minceur. Children, theirs plus friends', run in and out. There's plenty to attract them outdoors—22 hens, 8 geese, 2 horses, 3 ducks, 2 rabbits. And 3 huge greenhouses in 2 acres of vegetable gardens provide a ton of tomatoes, eggplants, peppers, melons, berries, asparagus, herbs.

Before the Conrans bought the 1772 house it had been a school, and before that a grand country mansion. What was once a 50-foot billiard room is now their kitchen, with a white-tiled, teak-countered cooking island between dining and cooking areas; its huge aluminum hood provides ventilation, hanging space for pots, and light. Joy of being yourself

A fresh eye, a clearing of the mind, an openness to the new, can yield to self-acceptance, and we are finally at home enough with our tenant to give it room to operate. And while practice makes for perfection, to momentarily grasp the reality of being oneself makes for joy. When we experience the alignment of dream and reality, when the parts add up to the whole, the sorrow of separateness gives way to the triumph of self-possession. Joy is the overflow. The tenant within dances.

"There is a vitality, a life-force, an energy, a quickening that is translated through you into action," wrote Martha Graham. "And because there is only one of you in all of time, that expression is unique. And if you block it, it will never exist. The world will not have it."

One of the fringe benefits of a clear eye is discovering just how many people have not blocked that expression. There is an entire group of individualists who work out of my local gas station. The manager of the neighborhood market positively roars with uniqueness. And, just the other day, while standing in line at the post office, I watched with silent amazement as the man in front of me picked up an envelope, licked the upper-right-hand corner, and then carefully placed a dry stamp on the wet paper. Who would have thought of it? Not me. But when a chance scrap of individuality blows across the pavement, I cannot help but dance on its behalf.

what you like specifically by seeing everything you possibly can. It costs nothing to look in the dealers' galleries and very little to go to the museums and the lectures many museums offer. "The way to develop your eye," says dealer George Schoellkopf, "is to compare and compare and compare. Look at everything so that your tastes become selective and your natural affinity for certain things surfaces. Besides, it's fun."

Cyril I. Nelson, an editor at E. P. Dutton of many books on the American decorative arts, suggests that you put your trust in dealers. "Dealers are phenomenal sources of information. You needn't feel embarrassed about asking up a dealer's time with your questions about the history of a piece that interests you. You'll find that generally people are delighted to talk to you about the things that interest them. Use a dealer like a reference book and use his expertise. It may, in the end, benefit you both."

Mr. Schoellkopf offers an interesting word about making your first purchase in an area that feels new and strange and therefore risky to you. "Buy your first piece as if it were to be the standard for all the pieces to follow. You'll learn so much by acquiring an authentic painting, carving, quilt, or whatever you've decided on. This first piece will help you establish a more confident and critical basis from which to judge and select your later pieces. Your tastes may change but the quality of what you've assembled won't and that's encouraging."

Auctions, country fairs, antique shops, galleries, even department stores have American Folk Art for you to look at, learn from, and buy. Alas, Grandmother's attic may not. This most original source has been fairly well scouted by the professionals. If you think, however, that you just may have something, take it to a responsible dealer who can then advise you about its authenticity, its history, its value, and how you might be able to build a collection around it. Quilt dealer Phyllis Haders of Phyllis Haders, Inc., is sent quilts from all over the world by owners who hope their family heirlooms are really heirlooms. She judges a quilt for color, proportion, design, the execution of the needlework, the overall condition, and the abstractness of its design. These considerations

The elegant difference
Fruit makes one of the most perfect finales to a meal. Light, naturally sweet, and essentially refreshing, it is easy to assemble, quick to cook. Here are some great ways with fruit: step-by-step to a perfect compote, storing and freezing tips, speedy cooking in a microwave oven, plus make-in-a-jiffy desserts.

Step-by-step to a fruit compote

Peeled citrus fruits first, over a bowl to catch the juice. With a good, sharp paring knife hold orange or grapefruit in left-hand—if you're right-handed, and in the right if left-handed. Hold knife in the other hand and remove skin and white pith, rotating the fruit in your palm, so that you have a continuous strip of peel. Trim off any remaining white pith and slice between membranes to release whole segments. Squeeze citrus between membranes into bowl to get every drop of juice. Drop segments into juice.

- Peel, core, and slice APPLES AND PEARS and drop into citrus juice—the acid will prevent fruit from oxidizing and turning brown. The easiest way to core an apple is with a metal corer. Peel, and cut into sections. If you don’t have a corer, peel apples, quarter, and then remove center core with a sharp knife. Cut quarters in half again lengthwise.
- If APPLES are very thin skinned, don’t peel—a little bit of roughage is good.
- GRAPES should be seeded to add to a compote unless, of course, you use seedless grapes. To seed, cut in half and pick out seeds. Do not peel grapes.
- BANANAS AND SOFT FRUITS like strawberries and raspberries should be stirred into the compote at the last minute.
- STRAWBERRIES should be added at the last minute, first washed and hulled with fingers, knife, or special tweezers.
- Don’t wash RASPBERRIES before adding to a compote; pick over to make sure they’re clean.
- GIVE A COMPOTE VARIETY. Combine peaches and fresh strawberries; pears with grapes.
- If you have GOOD CITRUS, the juice will be enough to sweeten the compote. If not, add a simple syrup.
- SIMPLE SYRUP: Bring 1 cup water and ½ cup sugar, dissolved in the water, to a boil and allow to cool. Add 2-3 tablespoons lemon juice for a welcome tartness.

Dried apricots

There is no need to add sugar when cooking dried apricots. They should be a little bit tangy and mouth-puckering. Cover with boiling water and leave overnight. Next morning, simmer about 10-12 minutes or until tender in the water they’ve been soaked in. Purée in a food mill or food processor.

If you must add sugar to sweeten, stir it in after apricots are cooked. Otherwise they stick to the pan when cooking.

- APRICOT CREAM: Add ½ cup apricot puree to 1 cup heavy cream and chill well in the freezer. Beat until mixture forms stiff peaks and hold in refrigerator 1 hour until ready to serve. Serves 6.

Freezing fruits

Raspberries, blackberries, blueberries, and red currants freeze well. But at the peak of the season and spread out on a cookie sheet in 1 layer. Freeze until solid. Remove to plastic freezer bags, seal tightly, and return to freezer.

- PEACHES: Peeled and sliced, freeze well in a simple syrup and packed in plastic containers.
- STRAWBERRIES, MANGOS, AND PAPAYAS are best frozen as a puree. Purée in a food mill with no sugar and use for ices and sorbets, toppings, and fruit sauces.

Citrus kit

- Grater, sauce, squeezer, Snacker recipe booklet, let $2.
- Send check or money order to Sunkist Lemon-Aid kits, P.O. Box 98, Loma Linda, Calif. 92356. Allow 4-6 weeks.

Sorbets

Make sure the fruit mixture is heavy enough to support the egg white when you fold it in. Any of the small ice-cream makers work well for sorbets. If you don’t have a machine, ices can be frozen in ice trays. Freeze until they’re the consistency of soft snow, then fold in egg white. Return to freezer. Break down with a fork before serving.

Storing fruits

- APPLES AND PEARS should be wrapped closely in plastic, sealed tight, and stored in the refrigerator.
- ALL FRUIT should be served at room temperature.
- LEMONS will give up their juices more easily if first rolled on the countertop or warmed slightly in hot water.

Microwave fruits

Prunous fruits, such as plums, damsons, greengages, all cook well in a microwave oven in a covered dish with a spoonful of water and a sprinkling of sugar.

Oranges with cracked caramel, apricot purée with chocolate lattice, and other light, delectable fruit desserts pretty enough to serve at parties

Fruits in winter provide just the right kind of light, naturally sweet dessert that's needed at this time of year. Give them a brand new look and they're exciting enough for a party menu, too. Maurice Moore-Betty, a great cook and fruit fan, came up with new exciting ways to present fruit, from an artistic arrangement of fresh papaya, kiwi, blueberries, and peaches to be accompanied by a sabayon sauce to a many-shaded citrus sun with a bonus of cracked caramel. He gives a new flavor to lemon curd tart—orange—and a chocolate lattice for a purée of dried apricots.

Orange curd tart

INGREDIENTS
- 1½ cups all-purpose flour
- 4 tablespoons sugar
- Pinch salt
- 1¼ sticks sweet butter
- 1 small egg, lightly beaten
- 1 small egg yolk
- 1 egg beaten with 1 tablespoon water for glaze

METHOD FOR FILLING

- Melt butter with sugar in top half of a double boiler over hot water. Add eggs, yolk, and orange juice and cook, stirring until thickened. Cool.
- Spoon into tart shell, and garnish with grapefruit or orange segments making a pinwheel in the center and adding a row around the border of the tart. Serves 6–8.

Apricot purée with chocolate lattice

INGREDIENTS
- 2 packages large dried apricots
- Sugar to taste
- 4 ounces semi-sweet chocolate
- 1 tablespoon vegetable shortening

METHOD

- In a metal bowl, cover apricots with boiling water and leave overnight. Turn into a heavy pan with the soaking water and cook over low heat until quite soft. Most of the water will have been absorbed. Purée in a food processor and add sugar to taste. Spoon into a 1-quart soufflé dish and chill.

Blackberry sorbet

INGREDIENTS
- 2 pints fresh blackberries or 2 packages frozen (if using frozen, you may have to add more lemon juice and adjust sugar to taste)
- ¾ cup sugar
- ¾ cup water
- ½ teaspoon lemon juice
- 1 egg white
- Whole berries for garnish

METHOD

- Rub blackberries through a wire sieve to remove seeds. You should have about ¾ cup purée.
- Boil sugar and water in a heavy pan 10 minutes. Cool, then mix with blackberry purée and lemon juice. Taste for sweetness. If it is too sweet, the mixture will not freeze successfully, and if not sweet enough, crystals will form. It should be comfortable on the tongue. Add more sugar if necessary. Peel fruit and separate into sections. (See directions, page 133.) Arrange segments on large serving plate. Combine sugar and ¼ cup cold water in heavy saucepan; cook, stirring, over low heat until sugar is dissolved. Raise heat; cook till golden amber color, being careful not to let it get too dark. Spread the caramel on lightly oiled, rimless cookie sheet; let cool until hard. Bend the sheet to break the caramel into pieces. You can break it into small pieces with the back of a spoon or with your hands. Pile the caramel in the center of the fruit. Serve a few pieces with each portion. Serves 10–20.

The all-star vegetable buffet —has led to more than the usual cross-country traveling, but she comes home ready to set another buffet.

The main ingredient for any party, she believes, is the guest—putting together a collection of people who stimulate each other. “Always bring in new friends to make the mix more interesting,” she says, but to help with introductions, follow a few formalities. “Place cards show you’ve thought about each guest beforehand, and for large parties, large written name tags help with introductions.” For small parties, all the men might be seated at one table and the women at another. “They love it,” says Mrs. Mazzanti who, however, never seats husbands and wives at the same table. “Planning the party is sometimes a solo flight. Sometimes my children help; they enjoy interesting groups of people, and they know where everything is in the kitchen, and, for very special parties, a chef and staff from The Golden Door come in, too, but each recipe is rehearsed beforehand,” says Mrs. Mazzanti of her strategy. “Over the years I’ve collected party equipment as one does shopping lists, recipes, and lists of serving plates, and a folder with details of parties—who was there, what was served.

Scotch on the rocks with a dash of Drambuie rum laced with cranberry juice, and other after-dinner drinks

New ways with digestifs

- Add an ice cube or two to your liqueur in the Big Glass.
- Serve cordials and liqueurs on the rocks in Old-fashioned glasses with a twist of lemon or orange zest.
- Add a half-ounce of vodka to cordials and liqueurs served on the rocks. It intensifies the flavor and gives backbone to the cordial as it becomes diluted by the ice.
- Lengthen brandy sipping by serving it on the rocks. Lengthen it still further by adding a splash or two of club soda or ginger ale.
- Offer oloroso or cream sherries—on the rocks—with a platter of wafer-thin ginger cookies.

Think big when serving. Pour the usual 1-2 ounces of cordials and liqueurs into Big Glasses—tulip or balloon wine-glasses are perfect—so that their perfume and aroma can collect and be appreciated, as in the case of a fine wine.

By Doris Tobias

Apéritifs anticipate the meal and prepare for the evening's mood. Wine with dinner complements and enhances the taste of the food and accelerates the mood. And after dinner, a properly selected drink can comfort the digestive processes and help heighten good feelings and stimulating conversation. The digestif can make a great evening of a good dinner.

There are marvelously relaxing drinks to add pleasure and serenity to the after-dinner camaraderie. Digestifs can be as elegant as a fine cognac, as traditional as a liqueur or cordial, or as comforting as a smoothly aged whiskey-based drink—Scotch, Bourbon, or rye.

Rum, with its pleasing pungency, continues to grow in popularity—especially the smoother lighter rums that many prefer. Rums do not require as much aging as brandy, but a fine liqueur rum, some of which are aged 15 to 30 years, is comparable in flavor and smoothness to fine old brandies.

Cognac, of course, is the classic after-dinner drink. The liquid gold of cognac, with its fresh-grape sweetness and elegant finish, is considered by many experts the most sophisticated of liqueurs. Whether you enjoy a _grande champagne_ cognac—the finest aged cognac—or one of the less prestigious and less expensive cognacs, it should be savored in a traditionally shaped snifter glass—the one that bellies out on a short stem, then narrows at the rim. An ounce or more of cognac poured into this large glass, warmed by the heat of the cupped hand, and gently swirled, permits the sensuous vapors to be caught and savored before and while drinking.

Armagnac, France's other prestigious grape brandy, comes from Gascony—and the Gascons have a long reputation for relishing fine food. Armagnac is reputed to be the oldest of the French brandies, going back to the 15th century (cognac's production started in the 17th century). The white wine used in distilling Armagnac gives a somewhat tart flavor, but the pot-still method of distilling, and the local wood barrels, impart a pungent aroma and a stronger flavor than cognac. When young, Armagnac is somewhat coarse and strong, but with age it develops more elegance and complexity and is noted for its velvety smoothness. Armagnac, like cognac, is hailed by brandy devotees, who find that its high-flavored, full-bodied qualities mitigate the effects of an ample meal as a potent after-dinner digestif.

Fruit brandies are favored digestifs both for their flavor and smooth quality. These drinks are made in America and Europe—especially France, Switzerland, Italy, Holland, and Germany. A wide variety of edible fruits is used, since anything containing sugar can be induced to ferment and turn into alcohol. Among the favorites are pears, cherries, black currants, blackberries, strawberreis, raspberries, and plums.

Although serious brandy sippers shudder at talk of mixing brandies with liqueurs or mixers—or drinking them on the rocks—there's no reason for those who enjoy the taste titillations of these combinations to forgo that pleasure for the sake of tradition. Each generation can and does establish its own traditions, as in the story of the sign posted on the central lawn of a newly constructed college campus: "The tradition is that freshmen are not permitted to walk on this lawn; only upperclassmen can use it as a short cut. This tradition goes into effect Monday!"

But with cordials and liqueurs, a whole new wave of enjoying their pleasures has evolved. The diversity of cordial and liqueur taste preferences has contributed to "neo-elixirs"—cordials mixed with vodka, on the rocks or "straight up" (without ice), or cordials mixed with vodka and fruit juices, or club sodas and other mixers. Serving liqueurs on the rocks cuts down on the sweetness that some find too cloying and adding vodka intensifies their basic flavors and helps them stand up to the dilution of ice cubes.

12 NEW RECIPES

Pour a jigger (1 1/2 ounces) of Scotch into an on-the-rocks glass. Add ice cubes and 1/2 ounce Drambuie, the Scotch liqueur. Finish off with a curl of lemon zest.

For Irish and Canadian loyalists the same deliciously effective combination is made by adding to Irish whiskey 1/2 ounce Irish Mist liqueur, and to Canadian whiskey 1/2 ounce Titty's (or other) Canadian liqueur. Finish off with a curl of orange zest.

Sip a Serene Sour. Mix together in a cocktail shaker one jigger Scotch, rye, or Bourbon. Add the juice of 1/2 lemon, 3/4 teaspoon superfine sugar, and the white of an egg. Add ice cubes, shake vigorously, and strain into a prechilled Delmonico glass. Garnish with a thin slice of kiwi fruit.

2-3 tablespoons superfine sugar
1/4 cup framboise or kirsch (preferably framboise)
1 1/2 cups heavy cream
Salt
Whole raspberries

METHOD

Fit dough down sides so that finished pie shell will be 2 inches deep. Weight pastry and bake in a 425° oven until nicely browned, about 10 minutes. Remove weight and finish baking—about another 5 minutes. Cool on the dish, then invert directly onto a serving dish.
- Make 2 long rolls of the remaining dough and braid them. Invert soufflé dish on a buttered baking sheet and shape braid around base on sheet to form a wreath. Bake until nicely browned in the 425° oven.

Sunday. Last day, first Japanese breakfast. Hot soup, cold rolled omelette, very sour pickles, rice tea. Interesting. Don’t think I’d make it a habit. But given Western breakfast, could happily stay converted to Japanese cooking. Train to Kyoto. Nijo Castle, a huge complex of gardens, ornate gates, and gilded palaces. Interiors at once simple and sumptuous. Tatami floors, no furniture, but every wall a magnificent series of painted sliding screens, tigers or pine trees or cherry blossoms, some on gold leaf. Coffered, gilded, and painted ceilings. Outdoors, a landscape garden of trees and rare, fantastically shaped rocks set around a pond. Grove of feathery pines along the moat. Small abstract garden of rocks in the palace corridors, planned to his shelves, but his bouquets are a contemporary interpretation from paintings, nature (“I absorbed a lot from my grandmother’s garden”). “If I make a mistake, I start completely over. How to uncover or create your own timbered ceiling: Step by step to professional results

When Patricia Marshall Tate, a Boston portrait painter and decorator remodeled her Beacon Hill, 19th-century town house, a windowless room between the garden and studio presented a challenge. "I knew there must have been a fireplace in this space at one time," she said. "I decided to uncover it." Once the brick mantel came to light, she turned to the ceiling. She felt old beams should be exposed.

Contractors' estimates for tearing down the ceiling ranged between $800 and $1,500. She turned to an independent sculptor-carpenter, Roy Cato, for help. "It's a minor job for a major improvement," he said. Here's the step-by-step story of the process that any other enthusiastic do-it-yourselfer can follow.

• After punching a few holes in the plasterboard ceiling with a crowbar, Cato pried off small slabs of plaster with the curved end of the bar (picture 1). Within 1/2 hour, old ceiling was removed.

1. Old plaster removed with crowbar

• Next he pried loose the thin wood strips that crisscrossed the beams that supported the plasterboard (2). Like most ceilings, this one had services tucked out of sight. One electric cable was safely stapled out of sight. An electrician rerouted others before Cato continued.

2. Wood supporting strips taken down

• Preparing for insulation between the beams followed, Cato nailed lengths of strapping (1-by-3-inch pine strips) on to the sides of the beams, about 6 inches down (3).

3. New strapping applied to beams

• To cover the insulation, Cato used rock lathe, a plasterboard paneling that cuts as easily as cardboard and comes in 48-by-16-inch pieces. Since space between beams may vary, Cato took measurements every 4 feet. He marked either end of the panel and using a straightedge cut the rock lathe with a razor knife (4). Sheets were nailed up to the strapping with flat-headed rock lathe nails.

4. Insulation stuffed between timbers

PUTTING IN NEW BEAMS

Even if your ceiling is a taut sheet of modern plaster, you can add character with beams. Depending on the size of the room, timbers can be bolted to the ceiling, or simply supported at the walls by intersection beams. Consult a builder about installation. Wrecking yards and salvage companies may have really old beams waiting to be recycled. Alternatively, you can buy newly cut pine timbers, which are reasonable, or indulge in Philippine mahogany, which is expensive. Don't forget, beams don't have to look Early American. The Florentines handpaint them, the Swiss candystripe them. In Venice, they are gold-leafed. Bold painted beams can create an architectural element in a modern room. For a sleek look, plaster is troweled on carefully between beams. Then a "skim" coat, premixed with lime, is applied, for a super-smooth finish.

For the all-wood adobe beamed ceiling, wood between the beams (either floor of the room above or planking in the roof) is simply refinished without plastering between timbers. This type of ceiling requires fewer materials and costs less, but shouldn't be done in a space where quiet is required. With no insulation to muffle noise, every sound can be heard from the room above.
How to save gas when the heat's on.

Of all the major energies, natural gas is the most efficient. That comes right from the U.S. Council on Environmental Quality. If you use gas to heat your home, you can save even more energy by using it in the most efficient way. Just follow these conservation tips.

Turn the thermostat down.
This is the simplest and most effective step you can take. If every one of us with gas heat turns down the thermostat, the energy savings will really mount up.

Change the filter.
If you have a hot air system, check the filter and change it whenever it's clogged. This helps your gas heating system work at top efficiency. Also have the system checked each year, preferably ahead of the heating season.

Insulate the attic.
Adequate insulation in your attic floor will keep you from losing heat through the roof. It can give you gas savings of up to 30%, depending on where you live. If you haven't done this ahead of the heating season, do it now. (It will also keep your house cooler in summer.)

Make things weatherproof.
Use weatherstripping and caulking wherever it's needed. Use storm doors and storm windows on your home—they're gas-savers, too. All these gas-saving tips will help you use our country's most efficient fuel even more efficiently.

Conserve gas. American Gas Association

5. Measuring up for rock lathe

6. Rock lathe nailed between beams
- Plastering followed in stages, done a bay at a time (5). Cato kept the plaster about 1/2-inch thick, so it dried evenly. A "rough trowel" finish gave the look of an authentic Colonial beamed ceiling.

7. Rough trowel plaster completes job
- Sanding the beams took another day's work.
- Then beams were stained and given a coat of linseed oil.
- Finally, a coat of white paint went on to the plasterwork.

HOW TO DO YOUR OWN
COMB PAINTING
It's easy to create modern folk art following the techniques of artist-designer Luis Molina, who painted the charming examples on pages 116-117. You'll need scissors, sturdy cardboard, primer/sealer (Mr. Molina recommends Zinsser B-I-N for wood, Rustoleum primer for metal), fine sandpaper, flat or semigloss polyurethane varnish, 3M's Scotch Paper Tape, hair drier, semigloss enamel paint, and acrylic paint. Choose a light-colored enamel base coat, which will show through when the darker acrylic overcoat is combed away.

Cut teeth along one side of a sturdy piece of cardboard about 4 inches square. Vary the width and spacing of the teeth for different effects, according to the size of the object. The bigger the teeth, the bolder the design. A simple design is best.
Brush or spray your piece with primer/sealer. When dry (about 1/2 hour), lightly smooth away any imperfections with fine sandpaper. Apply an even coat of enamel. When dry (overnight), section off a small area of your object with paper tape. (Paper tape has a very light adhesive that will not harm your painted designs when it is removed.) Apply a topcoat of acrylic paint within the sectioned-off area and, working quickly before the paint can dry, sweep, stroke, wiggle, and scratch your comb through the wet topcoat. Let one section dry before beginning another (a hair drier will speed drying time). Protect finished piece with polyurethane.
Experiment with different combs and hand motions for different effects. Or, instead of combs, you can use corncobs, feathers, sponges, putty rolls, cheesecloth, burlap, crumpled paper, and napkins, as the Colonists did.
A tremulous zigzag made the wavy tray on page 116, a scratch-and-lift motion made the crisscross pattern on the round brown and beige box holding oranges and the pink and terra-cotta oblong covered box. The purple and lavender mirror frame was painted in pie-shaped wedges. The brown and red footstool was combed in one direction with a small-toothed comb, in the other direction with a wide-toothed comb, for a varied crisscross effect. The woodgrained sap bucket involves a slightly more difficult technique, outlined in House & Garden, April 1977, page 104, "How to paint your own woodgrain."

Needlepoint Designs from Amish Quilts

Now you can produce your own beautiful adaptations of a unique American folk art in needlecraft—using the patterns of traditional Amish quilts of eastern Pennsylvania, Indiana, Ohio and Kansas.

Authors Laura S. Gilberg and Barbara B. Buchholz—a noted needlecraft expert and an associate editor of House & Garden Guides, found that the vivid color combinations and bold geometric patterns of fine Amish quilts translate beautifully into stunning and unusual stitchery. The result is a richly historical how-to book offering 27 authentic designs—all from one-of-a-kind quilts in private collections.

Stitches, specified colors and yarns not only duplicate the pattern but also the texture of the actual quilt. Included are overall outlines for each example, a beginner-tested stitching graph, stitchery lessons, and complete instructions for making a variety of special projects including wall hangings, pillows, rugs.

A fascinating chapter on the Amish people by quilt connoisseur Jonathan Holstein, a forward by Joel Kopp, owner of America Hurrah Antiques, and 16 pages of full color photos—many taken in Amish country—make this warmly evocative 144 page book one you'll leaf through even when you're not making your own heirlooms in needlepoint. GARDENER'S NOTES

GREAT GROWING IDEAS
Keeping track with a garden journal, flowerpots made out of bricks and a super book for winter’s end reading

BY JAMES FANNING

In Nancy Cook's journal, the entry on tomatoes has a picture of the fruit, a drawing of a staked-up plant, and copious notes on the growing of tomatoes

Designing gardener

Every gardener keeps—or should keep—a journal. As a record of what goes on this year, it will be invaluable in helping decide when to do what next year. One avid gardener, whose journal might serve as a model for others, was Nancy Cook, who worked with Eleanor Roosevelt at the Val-Kill crafts shop in Hyde Park, N.Y. She designed the furniture and pewterware made at Val-Kill; pieces that have, in the 30-odd years since the shop ceased operations, attained the status of heirlooms. Her design sense extended to the outdoors, and the Val-Kill property became a trial ground for her developing interest in gardening and garden design. Like so many of us, she learned from her mistakes. Her most amusing blunder was to plant barberry bushes near the Roosevelt swimming pool. King George VI called her attention to the mistake by backing into one of the prickly shrubs while wearing a bathing suit. The king's language on that occasion, Miss Cook reported, was not the king's English!

In later years, at the house she shared with Marion Dickerman in New Canaan, Conn., gardening became Nancy Cook's prime interest. She designed landscaping for the house, and, once the planting was done, devoted herself to keeping it in topnotch condition. Her toolshed was a model of its kind, with the very latest of hand- and motor-powered equipment, much of which has become obsolete, but her journals remain as models of their kind. In them, each kind of plant in the garden has a page—in some cases several pages—of its own. Each entry begins with a picture of the plant, with its botanical name and a brief over-all description. The rest of the space is devoted to notes about care of the plant—the kind of soil in which it grows best; when it flowers or how much fruit it produces; what problems may be encountered and how they should be dealt with. So Nancy Cook's gardening knowledge grew year by year, until she became an expert, acknowledged as such by neighbors, friends, and visiting professionals. We don't all have her flair, of course, but we can all profit by her example, particularly when it comes to keeping notes about the goings-on in our gardens from year to year. It is good to know that Nancy Cook's own journals will be preserved in the library of the New Canaan Garden Center, not far from the house where she spent so many years of devoted attention to her garden.

A gift from financier Bernard Baruch, this Chinese chestnut continues to flourish in Nancy Cook's garden, bearing heavy crops of nuts year after year.

Superbook

The word encyclopedic is barely adequate to describe The Green Thumb Garden Handbook, by Doc and Katy Abraham (Prentice-Hall, $11.95). The distillation of years of answering questions about gardening, the Green Thumb Handbook was written specifically to help everyday indoor and outdoor gardeners solve their problems. The Abrahams, in case you didn’t know, have written a syndicated gardening column for so many years that their total correspondence now numbers into the millions of letters. All of this has given them an unparalleled expertise in garden problems of all kinds, and their book is specifically designed to help the same kind of people who write to them for help. It’s all here, neatly organized with plant lists, pest lists, methods of treatment for various ills, and sound, down-to-earth general information, all illustrated with clear line drawings.

Bricks to grow in

You’d think somebody would have thought of it long ago, but it seems to have been left for a group of clever people in Maine to come up with the idea of growing plants in bricks. Called, naturally enough, Brickpots, the new planters are made like ordinary bricks except that they are square rather than rectangular, and that each has a round planting hole in the center. Glazed on bottom and sides, Brickpots do not need to be set in saucers, like ordinary pots, yet the unglazed top performs the same breathing function as the porous sides of regular clay pots. In fact, the thick walls actually act as a moisture reservoir. Then, too, the square shape makes the brick pots far more stable than the usual round shape, and also makes for snug grouping.

Brickpots are priced at about $7 for the largest (5 inches) size, $5 for a 4-incher, and $3 each for the starter size. Each also comes with a cork mat for the protection of polished surfaces. Brickpots are made by Watershed, Inc., Newcastle, Me., and are sold by Bloomingdale’s and other stores throughout the country.

Sun Domes.

Add a Fabrico Sun Dome and you enjoy an outdoor pool when it’s warm and a covered pool when it’s cool. You’ll swim when it’s below 60 degrees because under the Sun Dome, solar energy keeps the water a good 20 to 30 degrees warmer.

Garden Domes.

Long after the growing season has passed, your vegetables and flowers will continue to flourish in the warmth and sunshine gathered under the clear polyvinyl Fabrico Garden Dome. You’ll keep sowing a good three months longer and will reap your finest results because gardening is at its best under the protected Fabrico Garden Dome. Write or phone for information and a free brochure.

They’re not miracles. They’re the Sun and Garden Domes.

His collection of seed catalogues is a gardener’s most helpful library. Appetite-whetting pictures aside, they provide all the information you really need. A well-prepared catalogue, for instance, will tell how long you may expect to wait between planting and harvest time for any given vegetable or how tall annual or perennial flowers will grow, so you can decide whether to put them at the front or rear of a flower border. Cooking instructions for everything from asparagus to zucchini are often included, too, and some catalogues even go into nutritional values of the various vegetables. All this information is naturally expensive to compile, print, and distribute, so more and more seed and nursery stock houses are being forced to charge a slight fee for their catalogues. Some of the old reliables are still free, but even these may now have a charge for postage and handling. They're still a bargain considering all the knowledge and expertise that goes into them. When ordering plants, you may find, too, that modern packaging techniques have caused the price to increase, but, again, it is well worth it. With plastic wraps to halt evaporation and specially shaped containers to prevent crushing, you will receive your plants in topnotch condition.

Other disposers can't compare to KitchenAid.

KitchenAid disposers have a cast iron drain chamber to fight corrosion. Other disposers don't.
KitchenAid has a push-button Wham Jam Breaker to break up stubborn jams. Other disposers don't.
KitchenAid has a powerful motor. Stronger start-up power than any other, to handle tough stuff like steak bones and corn husks. Which some disposers can't.

In fact, when you make a point-by-point comparison, it turns out there really isn't much comparison. And, perhaps, that's why so many people choose a new KitchenAid stainless steel disposer when it comes time to replace their worn out disposers.

A St. Laurent and a Cuisinart say something special when you eat. It's a fine line between living down to dinner and dining. The feeling of a sterling fork is one of authority. Its weight, its balance—supreme assurance in the hand. This is an important occasion. More—this is an interesting one. The visual experience of a table set with sterling is subtle, elegant. And maybe, just maybe, the avocado tastes a little plumper, a little slidier.

Sterling silver. A quiet touch of elegance. It's surprising you don't already have it. But no one will be surprised when you do.
The Baker Collector's Edition is a selection of reproductions which exemplify the enduring qualities of outstanding early design: proportion, detail, finish and material. Each is meticulously reproduced in the 18th century tradition of skilled hand-craftsmanship.

For example, the swan neck pediment of our Georgian mahogany secretary is intricately pierced in the manner of the original. On each of the five drawer fronts of the William and Mary chest, inlays and bandings surround rare French walnut veneers. Both the knee and foot of the Chippendale cabriole chair leg are deeply carved.

Many more examples are available in fine stores everywhere. You are invited to see the entire Baker collection in any of the showrooms listed below through your furniture retailer, interior designer or architect.

The value of Gorham Sterling is apparent the moment you see it.

But years from now you'll really know its true worth.

Every Gorham Original is a true work of art in solid sterling silver, a treasured metal that's becoming scarcer. So the Gorham Original you choose now will probably grow more valuable over the years.

But its value to you can also be measured by other qualities...by timelessness and craftsmanship. Every Gorham Original is a timeless design whose beauty will endure both time and change. This timeless quality is why some of Gorham's oldest designs are even more popular today than when they were first introduced.

This timeless beauty is combined with Gorham's incomparable craftsmanship to give each Original a total design concept you'll find in no other sterling. A concept with perfect balance between ornamentation, shape, and function. A total design that gives every Gorham Original a classic beauty and elegance.

The Gorham Hallmark has represented the pride of the silversmith's art since 1831. It says your Sterling is the ultimate in beauty, craftsmanship, and value. And it tells the world you would not settle for anything less than perfection.

Isn't it time you owned a Gorham Original?

Mustard and cress sandwiches on very thin bread are as much a part of English life as hamburgers with ketchup are American. You won't find them on a menu this side of the ocean, so grow your own. Both cress and mustard — in this case the fresh green plant — are easy and quick to grow.

Fill a flat clay saucer or shallow pot with good soil. A container 6 inches or so in diameter sown with the seeds and placed on a sunny window sill will provide a platterful of sandwiches in a week. Since mustard sprouts faster than cress, your planting will be a two-step affair. Scatter cress seeds liberally on half of the soil and cover them with a thin layer of soil. In four days the cress will be up. Now plant the mustard which will sprout in two days. Two or three days later you're ready to harvest. Sheer off the greenery and enjoy. Order mustard and cress seeds from Burpee's.

When Mrs. Joan Axelrod returned to live in Los Angeles a few years ago, she brought with her two housesful of furnishings she had collected in London. Some months ago, she had opened a shop in West Hollywood in an old, romantic house that's surrounded by fretwork and greenery where everyone drops by for a glass of wine or a cup of coffee, to chat and to browse through her one-of-a-kind pieces. Each room of "The Mews" is filled with presents for that room's function: crystal, old silver, place mats, flowers, candlesticks, chairs, even an antique table in the dining room; warm, intimate things for the bedroom; cooking gear and kitchen art in the kitchen. Friends have contributed their share, too. One has done some ingenious suitcase bags for packing everything from your shower cap to stockings, makeup, and jewelry. The bags are made of pretty Welsh cottons and cost from $7.50 to $25 each. Another friend does small, delicate handpainted cotton pillows. Mrs. Axelrod particularly likes some handpainted lampshades done in a "Pointillist" brushstroke that depict whatever you'd like — your house, your pet, anything. A 10-inch shade costs from $35.

Children aren't the only ones who adore treehouses. Grown-ups love them too, but with some variations. When an extra sleeping space was needed for a cabin in the woods, architect Burt Roberts and designer James Smith "went through the roof." Using only acrylic panels and wood for construction materials, they opened a small section through a bedroom roof and made a sleeping loft just large enough to accommodate a queen-sized mattress, which the owners covered with rich Oriental rugs and tasseled pillows. The designers used acrylic panels for walls and even for a see-through section of the floor. Access is by a ladder; a closet and dressing room fill in the space underneath. The experience of the loft now makes it the family's favorite place to be. For more detailed plans of the sketch above, as well as a selection of photographs of the angled structure, write James Walton Smith, Dillard Rd., Highlands, N.C. 28741.

Robert Wilson is an artist who plunged into the education system, teaching hyperactive and difficult children. He is a therapist who helps the chronically ill, and a theatrical innovator who has written and directed some 20 plays and dance pieces, most recently notable of which was Einstein On the Beach, which he collaborated on with Philip Glass. For each of his plays, he has designed furniture, and some of the best examples are now on exhibition, traveling internationally in a show organized by Marian Goodman of Multiples/Goodman Gallery, New York. The pieces are presented as sculpture in limited editions of six. Chairs and tables are made of chicken wire, plumbing pipes, brushed aluminum, and other industrial materials. He uses lead — “one of the most sensuous materials” — in a severe form for a pair of thrones. The next play, Death, Destruction and Diminishment, premieres next June. Furniture for this? “Louis XVI, either clay or . . . gilded.”

Kittenish ways

If you are thinking of introducing a second pet into your household, remember the easiest situation is either to add a puppy to an older dog or a kitten to a full grown cat. Animals of the same species make friends quite quickly. Introducing a puppy to a cat should not be a problem. The cat will accept the newcomer because of its size. If you want to add a kitten when you already own a dog, there are special rules to follow. According to Mr. Howard Finkelstein, an experienced dog trainer and kennel owner, you should:

1. Keep the new kitten (it should be at least six weeks old) in a cage for the first few days, in a place where it can be seen by the dog all the time. Let the dog observe you feeding it.
2. When the dog is used to the kitten, take it out of the cage and have the two animals together in the same room, keeping the dog on a leash. Do this for several hours for two or three days, to let them get acquainted.
3. Don’t reward your dog with tidbits of food for his cooperation. He needs praise and affection. If you hand him food, he will want to protect it and have more time to think of the newcomer as a threat.
4. When you sense the dog has overcome his aggressive instincts, let the two animals out together for limited periods, under your supervision. In four or five days, they should be friends.

Very often, adds Mr. Finkelstein, they will like to eat side by side. “And they tend to gravitate toward each other to sleep.”

THE HALF-INCH REASON WHY OUR FILTER GIVES YOU MORE TASTE.

The L&M Lights Flavor Tube Filter™ delivers the taste of 100% virgin tobacco.

Unfortunately, most filters filter more than just “tar.” They also filter away taste. So when we designed L&M lights and decided to use 100% virgin tobacco “filets” for flavor, we had to create a whole new filter to deliver its taste. A filter that would allow taste to reach you. The Flavor Tube Filter. Inserted in our fiber filter, this ½ inch tube channels a stream of undiluted, full-flavored smoke through most of the filter length. The fiber filter surrounding the Flavor Tube keeps “tar” at a low 8 mg. Our Flavor Tube Filter. It’s the reason why we can give you better taste.

Leakey's Lectures

Richard Leakey, son of the famous-archeologists Louis and Mary Leakey, discoverer of the oldest known skull of early man, and coauthor of the stunning book Origins (Dutton), is on an American speaking tour. He's talking about the latest discoveries emerging from his excavations in northern Kenya, and our chances for survival as a species. One of his most provocative claims is that "if you weigh the evidence, it seems that survival of humankind was predominantly a factor of social cooperation, rather than aggression." Mr. Leakey believes that our cooperative past can save our future. "We teach children in Peking, New York, and Capetown that the world is round. Why, then, can we not teach them that people are one?" Mr. Leakey's tour will take him to the following cities: Feb. 27, Los Angeles; Feb. 28, San Francisco; Mar. 1, Denver; Mar. 3, New York at Avery Fisher Hall; Mar. 4, at The New School; Mar. 7, Dayton; Mar. 9-10, Washington, D.C.; Mar. 11, Atlanta; Mar. 12, Winter Park.

New life for Lohr Park

All over the country, great old estates with fine, large mansions too difficult to maintain today are coming on the market. Some are turned into schools, clinics, or other institutions; others are converted for residential use as apartments. One of the most intelligent redevelopments is in Evanston, Ill. It makes the most of a fine, 19th-century, antebellum-style mansion, once the residence of Major Lenox Lohr, president of NBC in the 30s. When his heirs recently decided to sell the estate, they insisted on sympathetic recycling of the property. Chicago Associates architects John Naughton and developer Ed Noonan met this request by turning the old house into two livable houses, a coach house into two apartments, and adding four new houses to the grounds. The new houses are carefully positioned to preserve the tree-filled gardens, and while modern in character, relate to the old mansion through use of horizontal siding. They are clustered around paved courtyards, and columns with trellises that define the edge of the open space and link the buildings together. The redevelopment gives owners the privacy of house ownership with the advantages of shared ownership in a condominium. Each maintains his house individually, but the grounds and courtyards are owned jointly. It's an idea that might inspire others to preserve more of the architectural white elephants that are a part of America's heritage.

Health

Life-saving heat

Twenty-five years ago, few people survived after suffering 30 percent or more total body surface burns. Today space-age discoveries and techniques insure the survival of 50 percent of young adults with 75 percent burns. Much of the technology at the New York Hospital's Burn Center, the only one of its kind in the East, is invisible to the eye. "The filters, systems that remove bacteria in the air, and electrical apparatus are all behind the walls," explains Nancy Farrell, the hospital's administrator, who saw the $1 million project through. One innovative breakthrough is the Apollo heat shield which can be raised and lowered over each bed. The curved plastic "blanket" radiates up to 90 degrees warmth over the patient's skin which cannot be covered with blankets and who expends 4,000 calories a day as his body struggles to rebuild and fight infection.

Other burn centers across the country are at Harborview in Seattle, Brooke Army Medical Center in San Antonio, and Parkland Medical Center in Dallas. Some patients' therapies can last up to nine months before complete recovery. Dr. William Currey Farrell with Apollo.
"When I designed this apartment on New York's Central Park South, I made it seem like a place in the country. Nothing trendy, just an easy, comfortable atmosphere. Good, clean-lined oak. A wall of books. It's just the kind of straightforward environment my client, Norman Cousins, thrives in. And that's my design philosophy — to make a person at home."

Your vase was made at Rookwood in the decorator William Purcell McDon-

The decorative silver process used on your vase is called silver deposit and was this technique, silver was deposited

Imari-style platter

I am trying to find out the history of my platter and something about the pattern. Can you help? M.V.L.—Silver Spring, Md.

Your octagonal platter, colorfully decorated in the Japanese Imari style with naturalistic plant patterns in underglaze blue and polychrome enamels, was made by the English Staffordshire manufacturer Thomas Minton when he was in partnership with Hollins (1845-1868). The primus blossom in the center cartouche is an enduring Japanese motif and together with the pine and bamboo is known as The Three Friends.

Tin-glazed dish

A dish similar to mine was described as tin-glazed earthware. Delft, early 18th c. What is tin-glazing?—G.G.—Princeton, N.J.

Tin-glaze, one of the 5 principal types of glaze, is used on majolica and faience. It is a lead-glaze made opaque by the addition of oxide (ashes) of tin. This, when fired, produces a dense, white glaze, which conceals any color in the underlying clay and provides a perfect background for painted decoration. The use of tin-glaze was known in the ancient Near East; ultimately it spread to the kingdom of Spain and then to the rest of Europe.

American knife

I have two of these knives, which are quite old. Can you tell me who made them and where?

L.H.—New York, N.Y.

The American silversmith Frederick Marquand (1799-1882), who worked in Savannah, Ga., 1820-1826, made your silver knife in 1824. He favored an English-type hallmark and used a date letter C through G for the years 1821-1825. But his quality mark, the lion passant, faced right instead of facing left, as it does in the genuine English hallmark. So his purpose was not to deceive.

Boston jug

From the markings on the bottom of my cream jug can you tell me who made it and where and something about its form?

E.G.—Locust Valley, N.Y.

The incised dolphin enclosed in a shield is the trademark of the Boston silversmiths Kennard & Jenks (K & J) working 1875-1880; the Boston firm Shreve, Crump and Low were the retailers. The style of your cream jug—undulating rim with much-everted spout, triple-scrolled handle, pear-shaped body supported on 3 legs with shells at the body juncture—was introduced about 1750 and has always enjoyed wide popularity.

Trick pony bank

On this bank, the pony deposits the coin, which he holds in his mouth, by nodding his head into a trough. Do you have any idea who the maker might be?

A.G.—New York, N.Y.

This mechanical bank was designed by Peter Adams Jr. and Charles G. Shepard, and its original maker was the Shepard Mfg. Co. John D. Meyer in his "Handbook of Old Mechanical Penny Banks" writes: "A very good likeness of a pony and an attractive bank for children." In 1892, the Trick Pony bank became the property of J. & E. Stevens of Cromwell, Conn., when it purchased the Shepard line of coin banks.

ARE YOU TUNED INTO HIGHWAY HI-FI?

How to beat TV interference, ground electronic equipment properly, buy a calculator

Q Is it possible to have true high-fidelity sound in my car?

A Just about as high as you want. In fact, highway hi-fi is probably the fastest-growing aspect of the audio market today. Just as the lo-fi phonograph gave way to the home hi-fi, the tinny car radio is yielding to mobile stereo components. About 100 companies, including some of the top names in quality stereo, now make components or complete systems for auto audio. Program sources for these mobile sound centers are usually stereo FM-AM radio tuners and cassette or 8-track cartridge tape decks.

Car stereo is available in simple all-in-one units or separate components—and the latter include such sophisticated devices as equalizers to compensate for the imbalance in frequency response caused by the shape of the car's interior. Loudspeaker systems and enclosures are designed for the best sound in auto applications, and for installation in door panels or rear decks. Car stereo systems may be purchased for as little as $100 or as much as $5,000. Yes, more than the price of some cars. Stereophonic sound is ideally suited for a confined location, and the results provided by such systems can be incredibly good. Auto sound systems are sold by many conventional stereo dealers as well as specialist companies.

The growing popularity of highway hi-fi has been attributed to growing consumer awareness of good sound in the home, and resulting unwillingness to accept second-rate audio in the car.

Q Should all home electronic equipment, such as radios, stereo and TV sets, be grounded for safety? If so, what is the best way to accomplish this?

A The only grounding required for modern electrical gadgets is that which is specifically recommended in the instruction book. Many modern devices are designed to be operated without grounding, and any attempt to ground them may actually cause danger of shock or blown fuses.

Most products which require ground-for short durations, since modifications of appliances to eliminate interference can be quite expensive.

A ghostly picture from another channel superimposed on the picture you’re watching is an indication of co-channel interference. You’re picking up two different stations which happen to live on the same channel in different cities. If this problem occurs only once in a while, forget about trying to fix it—it’s probably caused by a freak atmospheric condition. If you get it all the time on a certain channel, it usually means your home is so located that it receives two programs on the same channel. You may have to install a highly directional antenna, and possibly a rotator, to eliminate one of the pictures.

A herringbone pattern, usually on Channel 6, may be a sign of interference from a nearby FM station—the FM band is between Channel 6 and Channel 7. A similar pattern may indicate inaccurate fine tuning—so retune the set carefully. If the pattern persists, you should install a low-cost “FM band rejection filter” on the back of your set between the antenna terminals and the lead-in wire. The filters are usually available from dealers who sell or service TV sets.

Radio transmitter interference from CB, amateur, police, or other transmitters, usually shows up as a crosshatch or diagonal pattern on the screen. In many cases, this can be eliminated by installing a “high-pass filter” on your TV. Your best bet is to report the problem to the dealer from whom you bought the set. Some TV set manufacturers make these filters available free and supply simple instructions for their installation. Changing from unshielded to shielded antenna lead-in wire may also help. If neither of these measures works, it’s a problem for a service technician. Even he may throw up his hands in despair in certain stubborn cases in which the radio transmitter—not your TV—is at fault. Your next step should be a letter or phone call to the nearest Field Operations Bureau of the Federal Communications Commission, explaining the problem in detail. You can find the address in the “United States Government” listings in the white pages of large-city phone books.

Q I sometimes hear CBers talking to their “good buddies” when I’m trying to listen to my stereo. How can this annoying interference be stopped?

A This usually requires internal modification to the stereo equipment, but there are a couple of things you can try before calling the service technician. First, replace any unshielded wire between your equipment and the speakers with shielded wire (available at most hi-fi stores). If there is a terminal on the back of your set marked “ground,”

No matter what we work on, no matter how much or how little it costs, excellence is the only thing we create. Above, a perfect example of this dedication.

Homeowners and tenants update on how to make sure your property and possessions are efficiently covered

ARE YOU INSURED AGAINST INFLATION?

BY PAUL GROSS

Most people don't have the insurance they need. It may have been enough 4 or 5 years ago, but probably not today. Inflation has made your house, condominium, and your personal possessions worth considerably more than they were when you took out your policies (unless you asked for a built-in inflation escalation clause). Furthermore, for some insurance, reasonable premiums may be impossible to get through a regular insurance company. For example, people living in some cities may find the terms prohibitive for their possessions. Here's where the government comes to the rescue. The Department of Housing and Urban Development offers insurance which covers up to $10,000 of the possessions in your house or apartment if you can't afford the insurance available, because the companies have boosted the premiums to cover increased risk. It is available in the District of Columbia and 20 states: Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Missouri, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Tennessee, and Virginia. The government's only requirement is that you have a deadbolt lock on your door and locks on your windows.

How competitive the government's premiums for this insurance are depends on where you live. Unlike private insurers, the government charges the same rate for an entire metropolitan area. Hence the closer you are to the center of a city, the more favorable the government's premiums will seem. That's because private insurers have different rates, based on risk—the closer you are to the center of the city, the higher your rates would be. Of course, the further away you are from the core of the city, the more favorable a private insurer's rates will be.

Some states, such as Michigan and California, which are not covered under federal insurance, have their own versions of theft insurance. And some states, such as Indiana, have a complaint program for individuals who are having trouble buying the insurance they need. The state's insurance commissioner will help people find a policy.

Since theft insurance only offers you some of the protection you need as a tenant, you will have to buy another policy to cover you against other possible losses. Here again, the government has come to the rescue. If you can't get a suitable fire insurance policy from a private insurance company, find out if your state has a FAIR Plan. The FAIR Plan, which stands for Fair Access to Insurance, is available in 27 states and covers you against fire and mischievous vandalism.

As a homeowner, if you haven't updated your insurance coverage, you should be aware of the fact that you will have to make up the difference. That's because all homeowners insurance policies have an 80 percent clause which penalizes you for not increasing your coverage to keep up with inflation. The 80 percent clause, which relates to the structure, not furnishings or other possessions, stipulates that you will be reimbursed for the full replacement value of any losses to your house only if you are insured for 80 percent or more of your house's current replacement value. That's a big if. If you're insured for less than 80 percent of your house's current replacement value, you'll be reimbursed for either the actual cash value of the loss (replacement cost minus depreciation) or an amount based on a formula spelled out in your policy. Either way, you'll get less, probably far less, than you would have if you had been insured for 80 percent or more of your house's current replacement value.

Some insurance companies will give you a 2 percent discount on premiums if you install fire protection devices

For example, let's assume that you bought a house for $40,000 ten years ago. Assume further that the house was recently appraised at $80,000. (Please note that I'm being very conservative. Many houses have more than doubled in value over the past ten years.) Finally, let's assume that you now have $40,000 worth of insurance coverage on your house. That's well below the $64,000 of coverage you need to meet the 80 percent clause—80 percent of $80,000 equals $64,000. As a result, you will get only 5/8ths (40/64ths) of any loss, unless the actual cash value of the loss is greater than that. If you had a fire that destroyed property with a replacement value of $15,000, you'd get only $9,375. That's far less than the $15,000 you would have gotten if you had maintained an 80 percent ratio by insuring your home for $64,000 or more. Note, however, that some insurance companies will not apply the 80 percent clause to losses of less than $1,000. They will give you the full replacement value.

FOUR STEPS TO TAKE TO PROTECT YOURSELF

To protect yourself and make sure you know the full value of your possessions, follow these four rules:

1. When you buy furniture, appliances, antiques, art, or collectibles such as stamps, get a receipt and file it away in a steel box. In fact, you might also consider making a photocopy of the receipt and keeping it at your office, with your accountant or lawyer, or at your bank. This would protect you if the damage to your possessions was so great it destroyed the steel box in which you filed your receipts.

2. Inventory all your possessions—room by room. This doesn't take much time, and is well worth the effort. After all, if you had a fire in your house or apartment, would you be able to remember what you had? Probably not. More likely than not, you would be much too upset.

3. Have your more valuable possessions, such as art, antiques, and jewelry, appraised from time to time. The appraisal report will give you a long way to proving the value of any loss you might suffer. What's more, those appraisal reports will also help establish the value of a property for gift and estate tax purposes.

4. Take a photograph of every room in your house or apartment. As a matter of fact, take two or three shots of each room from different angles. These photographs will help you prove the condition of your property and back up any claim that you make to an insurance company.
There are a couple of ways of protecting yourself against the 80 percent clause. One of the simplest is to periodically have your home appraised and your insurance coverage increased. The appraisal, which should not cost very much, will come in very handy when you file a loss claim. Alternatively, you can simply buy an inflation guard endorsement—it will automatically raise the amount of your coverage by a set percentage every three months. If you live in an area where housing costs are soaring, you might want an inflation guard endorsement that boosted your coverage by 3 percent every quarter year. If inflation hasn’t really rocketed your area, you might get away with an endorsement that boosted your coverage by just 1 percent a quarter.

While increasing the amount of homeowners insurance you have will boost the amount you’ll have to pay, there are some ways of easing the bite. Your best bet is to sit down with your insurance agent and ask him or her to coordinate the coverage of your various insurance policies for you. Chances are that you have some duplicate coverage under your automobile, homeowners, and personal liability umbrella policy—if you have one. For example, your automobile insurance may duplicate some of the coverage you have in your homeowners policy. Eliminating that redundancy can save you money. Alternatively, your insurance broker might suggest installing smoke detectors or taking some other measures to lower your premium costs.

Some insurance companies will give you a 2 percent discount on premiums if you install fire protection devices. If you live in an area that’s often hit by brush or forest fires, the insurance company might give you a discount on premiums, if you clear the area near your house. Your broker can tell you which companies are offering what kinds of discounts.

If you live in an area that’s prone to flooding, you should look into the possibility of buying federal flood insurance. There are two phases to this insurance program. In phase one, you can get up to $35,000 of coverage for your house and as much as $10,000 of coverage for its contents. Under phase two, you can get as much as $180,000 for your house, and up to $60,000 of protection for its contents.

The rub is that you can only buy federal flood insurance if your community participates in the program. You can either ask your community’s officials if the community participates, or you can call 800-424-8872—a toll-free number that will put you in touch with HUD’s information service. If your community does not participate in this program, and you feel that floods are a real risk, you can organize your community to press for participation.

There’s another way to cut down on insurance premiums: by trading down to a less comprehensive type of policy. There are three basic types: HO-1, which gives you basic coverage; HO-2, which gives you broad coverage; and HO-5 which gives you comprehensive coverage (see chart). Each is more sweeping and costly than the preceding one. For example, $64,000 of coverage under an HO-1 or basic policy would cost $391 as against $384 for broad coverage and $489 for comprehensive coverage. Premiums based on $64,000 coverage for a frame house in a Midwestern city. The deductible is $150.

Finally, you can reduce the amount of premiums you have to pay by raising the deductible on your homeowners insurance. The savings can be dramatic. For example, you could save as much as 50 percent by hiking the deductible to $500 from 50. While that means you’d be liable for the first $500 of damages, it’s not as bad as it would seem at first glance. For one thing, any loss after the first $100 of loss that’s not covered by insurance can be deducted from your taxes—which means Uncle Sam will share the loss with you. For another, filing a number of small claims is seldom a wise idea. Many companies will raise your premiums if you file a lot of small claims.

Some final points: Getting adequate insurance coverage is only half the job. You should also be able to prove the value of any losses that you might suffer. Most insurance specialists recommend that you have your house appraised at least every other year. They also suggest that you list and photograph the contents of your house as well as the shrubbery and landscaping. Those photos could be invaluable in proving the value of a loss.

It goes without saying that you should also file the receipts for any expensive furnishings, jewels, and other personal possessions.

Should the worst happen and you do have to file a claim, you might consider getting the help of a public insurance adjuster, especially if your records are not as complete as they should be. A public adjuster, who gets his money by taking a percentage of the final settlement (usually between 10 and 12 percent), can boost the settlement you get by as much as 25 percent. Simply put, he knows how to go about filing a good insurance claim. He can put together a much more complete list than you probably could. He knows the value of things—and can prove them fairly easily. And finally, he can help you decipher the terms of your insurance contract and even negotiate a settlement with the company.

YOUR HEALTHY

An update on what science is doing to help you keep yours at the peak of shine

Just now there’s news about permanent waving, henna, and lotions that protect your hair, and especially about trichology, a new field of study involving hair and scalp conditions.

ABOUT TRICHOLOGY: Though trichology is well-known in America, it is a very new area of exploration in England. David Salinger, director of The International Association of Trichologists says: “More and more cosmetologists realize that in order to really help their clients, they must not only know about the hair and scalp, they must know how the body relates to the hair and scalp.” A group of courses has been devised over a period of two and a half years at the University of Southern California, with a grant from the Redken Foundation. Trichologists study chemistry, physiology, biochemistry, nutrition, and anatomy, and are granted certificates of completion that have the approval of the California Board of Education, from El Camino College, where the courses are given. Trichologists get to the root of hair problems by considering factors such as heredity and endocrine functions as well as environmental effects on hair (whether you’ve been out in the sun too long, etc.) According to Mr. Salinger, the basic requirement for good, healthy hair is your good health. “Hair is 97 percent protein. The intake of proteins, vitamins, and minerals is essential to the growth and strength of the hair bulb. If a trichologist discovers that a client’s hair problems result from a physical disorder, then the client is referred to an internist or to a dermatologist. The ideal would be to have a trained trichologist in every hair salon, so that a client could be more aware of the chemical/nutritional state of his hair.” For more information about trichology, or to contact a certified practitioner, write The International Association of Trichologists, 18645 Sherman Way, Suite 208, Reseda, Calif. 91335. The association also sponsors seminars and symposiums on the subject of scalp and hair problems that are open to the public and that feature medical and professional speakers.

A service called “Trichoanalysis” is offered through the Redken salons throughout the country. Their study intends to track down the causes of hair problems and to recommend cosmetic treatment. The client fills out a detailed questionnaire providing data on age, sex, recent illnesses, current medications, diet, and weight. The client’s stylist adds more information, such as a description of the distribution and texture of the hair and a summary of the services the client usually receives. The questionnaire and sixteen strands of hair from four areas of the scalp are taken and sent to Redken’s California laboratories where a photomicrographer studies the samples and the case history. The samples are then scrutinized under a polarized microscope and tested for endurance to stress. “Healthy hair has its natural elasticity,” says David Cannel Ph.D. and director of Redken’s product development. “By using healthy hair as a ‘norm’ we can determine the force required to break a hair strand. The drier it is, the more force it takes to break a hair strand, because by then it will have become quite coarse. Healthy hair has moisture. We are also able to determine the compactness of a strand, its evenness and its irregularities by looking at it through (Continued on next page)

ABOUT BLOW-DRYING

You can now buy lotions specially designed to protect your hair from the ravages of blow-drying. “Ultra Rich Conditioner” by L’Oreal and “Power Pal” by Clairol are two to try. The Nardis recommend that you use a wide-nozzle dryer that’s lightweight and that you use your fingers to fluff hair until it’s about 75 percent dry. Your fingers, unlike a brush, will tell you if the dryer is too hot. Leave about 25 percent of the moisture in your hair—it won’t affect the styling and it will prevent your hair from having a baked look.

Use your fingers to fluff your hair when you blow-dry. They’ll tell you if the dryer is too hot, drying it out

ABOUT HENNA

It’s a natural vegetable product, which was used in ancient Egypt and is news today because of our passion for all things natural. Henna only coats the hair shaft and since it comes in a multitude of shades, you can highlight with it or subtly tint your hair depending on the length of time you leave it on. There is also natural henna which won’t change your hair color but will impart body and shine. “Another benefit of henna,” says Kenneth Battelle of New York’s famed “Kenneth” salon, “is its ability to help control an oily scalp—not always, but often. I don’t recommend henna, however, for naturally frizzy hair because it already has enough body.” Leslie Blanchard, longtime color consultant to Clairol and whose career with styling, cutting, and coloring spans twenty years, warns that henna ought not to be used in conjunction with other coloring chemicals. He considers henna to be the most effective for brunette hair shades.

is prepped as usual for a permanent (with lotion and endpapers) and then wrapped barber-pole style on chopsticks which angle out from the head like antennae. The resulting corkscrew curls brush out into soft waves rather than a cramped, kinky effect,” explains Vincent Nardi. “We also like to dry newly permed hair under heat lamps, not merely for a casual look but to prevent overdrying which, incidentally, is a great danger of blow-drying at home.”

ABOUT YOUR HAIR TYPE: DRY. “Dry hair will go with sometimes curly, coarse hair, sometimes with a flaking scalp,” says Kenneth. “When we talk about dry or oily hair, we are really talking about the underlying scalp condition. Winter especially seems to bring out the dry skin/oily scalp appearance for many people and I think the new instant hair conditioners can be a great help. They can help to repair the acid mantle of the scalp that is washed away during shampooing. Or try 2 or 3 tablespoons of castor oil, massaged through the scalp and then wrapped in a wrung-out, hot towel, or sit under a dryer for 10 or 15 minutes. Castor oil is one of the few oils the scalp can absorb. Shampoo at least twice after the treatment and rinse over and over again. A home humidifier can also greatly help dry skin and scalp conditions during the winter months.” Kenneth's own "Kenneth Conditioner" is available by mail through his salon.

ABOUT YOUR HAIR TYPE: OILY. Trichologist David Salinger suggests you look for shampoos specially designed for oily scalp conditions. He recommends formulas containing 2 percent salicylic acid and 2 percent sulphur. If your oily scalp includes obvious flaking, he suggests a formula with a coal tar base. These are ingredients required to be on the labels of shampoo products.

The end result of all this product and styling innovation is greater versatility than ever. Kenneth offers a final word of caution: “Hair can be a wonderful decoration. But it ought to work within the framework of who you are.” Real innovation, in other words, need not mean total change. The whole idea, as he suggests, “is to make you look better.”

EXCELLENCE

We have achieved excellence by creating a modern self-cleaning cooking system incorporating five (5) basic cooking methods: microwave, conventional, microwave and conventional simultaneously, broiling and microwave broiling. The whole system is neatly designed into one contemporary kitchen appliance to save your space and time.

The Thermador CMT-20 MicroThermal Cooking System

This is not just an oven. It's a self-contained full size cooking system. A Micro-Thermal oven above and conventional oven below that are both self-cleaning.

Three microwave power levels for flexibility depending on the type of job the upper oven is doing. Defrosting is made easy.

Micro-Thermal upper oven can be operated with microwave and conventional cooking modes simultaneously even while the lower conventional oven is in operation, adding up to three simultaneous cooking methods.

All control and temperature dials, including digital clock are located on one easy-to-read lighted control panel.

Ceramic insert to hold small dishes in the center rack of the roomy porcelain Micro-Thermal oven.

The CMT-20 patented built-in exhaust system ventilates the ovens automatically during the cleaning process. May also be operated independently during conventional cooking.

The newest fragrance treat for your bath comes this time from Spain. Calandre Bath and Shower Gel, Perfumed Body Milk, and Talc. Vitamin A has been added to the gel, soluble proteins to the body lotion, and the scent itself is green, woody, very crisp, and made by Paco Rabanne. Calandre Bath and Shower Gel, 6½ ounces, $10; Perfumed Body Milk, 6½ ounces, $12 Talc, 4½ ounces, $7.50. At Saks Fifth Avenue, I. Magnin, and Marshall Field Care and treatment of black (Afro American) hair that has been chemically treated—colored, uncurled, or restyled—with a hot-comb press will be this much simpler with the introduction of four new products called Dark & Lovely by Carson. The first is Dark & Lovely Protein Shampoo, which adds luster and highlights. There is Protein Conditioner and Protein Hair Dress/Conditioner to control frizziness, the second for scalp conditioning. The fourth is Protein Setting Lotion, which helps treated hair achieve bounce and softness. Price range from $1.98 to $2.25 for the Dress Conditioner. A 12-page booklet has also been put together by Carson explaining the assets and problems of black hair and how to care for it. Dark & Lovely will be in drugstores and supermarkets everywhere by mid-March.

Four new two-tone shades have been added to Aziza's collection of eye color for spring. One of the prettiest is "Ivory Gold," a not-that-much-larger-than-a-lipstick cheek color that offers you control you can't get with a powder. There are 18 shades for white and black skin plus a highlighter, called Silverfrost Gold, that's just right for a subtle evening look. The way to use color is as individual as the person wearing it, of course, but makeup artists agree that a rosy temple that leads down to the top of the cheekbone, with a slightly darker color just under the cheek, is very soft and flattering for almost everyone. At $2.75 each, you can afford to experiment for contouring and light-reflecting effects. The Blushers are by Helena Rubinstein and will be available in department stores and drugstores everywhere.

For those who wear pressed-powder shadow: Revenescence Eye Shadow Base, a soft, creamy-colored fluid that slips over the eyelid and helps your powder stay fresh, the color stay true. It also doubles as a highlighter, so dab a bit on the cheekbones, brow bones, and bare shoulders. One-half ounce comes in a tiny tube for $5. By Charles of the Ritz, you'll find it at Lord & Taylor and B Altman.

Astrological guide to your fragrance

The sign: Pisces
(circa February 19—March 20)
Element: Water

Pisceans are idealistic, diplomatic, and adaptable. When their energy is directed toward their imaginations, great work is produced, especially in music and drama. At home Pisces establishes an intimate, comforting atmosphere and like to decorate with things that have sentimental significance. The key phrase is "I believe." Romantic Fidji by Guy Laroche expresses Pisces's romantic flair and Ba à Versailles by Jean Desprez shows the tender side. The intuitive Pisces might select Canoe by Dana.

A new group in Maine teaches you how to take hammer in hand and build your own house

It's an old dream, maybe part of the genetic heritage of the species out of memories of a prehistoric past—or it may only be the unconscious effects of playing with blocks at an impressionable age—but somewhere fairly close to the surface in a lot of modern men and women lies an urge that says "build a house." Usually we are fairly successful at sublimating it. We may tour a few model houses and do a little daydreaming before we hire a contractor. But for some people that is not enough. These are the people to whom hammer-in-hand is part of the feeling of "home," who feel that something made with their own hands is far more their own. "Like love, the origins of the notion are often a mystery," writes John N. Cole, editor of the well-known rural newspaper The Maine Times, in his book on how to build your own house, written by Charles Wing, From the Ground Up (Atlantic-Little, Brown, $7.95). "They are...millions who find themselves tugged by the notion, excited by the idea, and, finally, captured by the compulsion to build their own homes."

The compulsion is growing. The few years have seen the establishment of several centers to promote owner-building, and the publication of a number of books. One of the most prestigious—where the origin of Mr. Cole's and Wing's book—is the 3-year-old Shelter Institute, in Bath, Maine, where potential owner-builders who seem to have thumbs can go to a rather intense kind of school, and emerge 15 weeks later with enough theoretical and practical knowledge not only to build their own house but to design them as well. Add the vanced design course, and each will have a 40-page sheaf of working blueprints. Graduates have built more than 30 houses across the country—maybe in order because the Institute may not know them all. Fifty are in the Bath, Maine area, near the school.

"I just wanted to see if I could do it," says Norman Duggan, a retired navy officer whose new house looks rather like the prow of a ship jutting through a forest, above one of the twisty lake estuaries that reach inland along Maine's southern seacoast. He designed it himself in the workshop, garage, storage on the floor, living quarters (the quarterdeck) upstairs, and chose the materials—mostly wood. He engineered the roof stresses and chose the materials—mostly wood. He engineered all the building, except for the foundation, and completed the major part of the job himself. The result is a house that is both practical and beautiful, that fits into its environment, and that has been built by a man who loves it. He is proud of it, and he is happy with it."

How to build an energy-efficient house

- A high standard of insulation (6 inches in walls, 8 inches in ceilings.
- Windows concentrated on the south wall, with few windows on east, west, or north.
- Covers—insulated curtains or rigid foam shutters—to put on windows at night.
- Double panes or storm windows—or both—on all windows. Double glazing will also help a house stay cool in summer if the sun does not strike the window directly, because it slows down heat radiation.
- Fixed windows wherever possible. Windows that open and close are pathways for drafts all around their edges, unless they are well caulked.
- Interior space designed to help the natural circulation of heat.
- Use of topology and vegetation to protect the house. A hill to the north of the house, or a stand of pines, will break winter winds; broadleafed trees to the south, or vines on trellises over the windows, will keep the sun off the house in the summer.
- Double doors for all exterior entrances—and vestibules, too, if possible.
- The shortest possible routes for water pipes, to prevent heat loss for hot water—and those routes should be enclosed.

These are just for inspiration, says Patsy Hennin, and do not begin to exhaust the possibilities for energy-efficient building.

We don't accept advertising from anyone.

We buy what we test at the same stores you do. And we never accept "free samples" from manufacturers.

Five facts our readers learned that you could have used:

1. Pepperidge Farm Whole Wheat Bread was rated lower nutritionally than Wonder Enriched White Bread.
2. Pizza Hut's 10" Supreme pie gave us the most nutritional buy out of eight fast-food meals we tested... Arthur Treacher's Fish & Chips the least.
3. Bounty may be a "quicker picker upper" than lower-priced paper towels. But you may be able to handle most of your cleanup jobs with the cheapest towel you can find.
4. That much-squeezed-on-TV bathroom tissue that touts its softness whittled 150 sheets off each roll. (Once again, it's the customer who gets squeezed.)
5. Two banks can advertise the same interest rate for your savings account. But one pays only $44.93 for the same period for which the other pays $75.30. It's how they calculate your interest that counts. (And some of the biggest banks in the country are the stingiest when it comes to paying you interest.)

A lot of companies may not like what we have to say.

But remember, those same companies spend millions of dollars a year on ads and TV commercials for their products and services... so they can give you the facts that serve their interests.

Shouldn't you spend just $11 a year on Consumer Reports—so you can get the facts that serve your interests?

The bologna sandwich earned our lowest vote of confidence.

Consumer Reports explored this in detail in its article "How Good is the Bologna in that Sandwich?"

Here's how bologna stacked up against the other three sandwich foods... (1) Highest in cost-per-ounce of protein (2) Highest in fats and calories. The samples, bought in food stores, were either rancid or showed beginning signs of rancidity. Very Poor for taste. The samples, detected by a perfume-like scent. So the sweet smell of your bologna may be trying to tell you something.

What's more, bologna contains a potentially harmful additive called sodium nitrite.

Consumer Reports gives you the facts behind the "baloney." Today's supermarket is no place to be on your own.

Without help, it's hard to know about subtle product differences that can heat your family of nutrients and maybe even cost you more in the bargain.

That's why Consumer Reports rates 35 brands and varieties of bologna tested by Consumer Reports for quality, nine were rated Poor or Very Poor for taste. The samples, bought in food stores, were either rancid or showed beginning signs of rancidity. The start of rancidity can often be detected by a perfume-like scent. So the sweet smell of your bologna may be trying to tell you something.

Many graduates provide most of their winter heat with wood stoves burning less than 6 cords of wood a winter—less than some fireplaces eat up in a couple of months. So they respect its need to rise, and guide them to work for you at very low wages. So Shelter graduates keep interior walls on his first floor, and a Ben Franklin. One graduate has two—a wood furnace as it cools, back to where it can pick up its path (the cycle is called convection) into a unit. We found a rhythm to the physical work, and we all began to help one another. I don’t remember a single cross word. I remember feeling very good about myself as I was working.”

The process of building your own house can be fraught with adventure. Institute courses begin at the beginning—wherever that is for the individual student (effective ways of banging in a nail, perhaps). More experienced students help beginners, the staff helps everybody. There have been near disasters for novice builders. The worst was a wall, built on the ground, that fell as it was being maneuvered into place. Somebody had accidentally untied the safety rope. “In the end, it was a good experience,” says Patsy Hennin. “It showed how quickly you can recoup.” A call to the Institute brought instant help, and before the day was completely over—by 9 that night—things were untangled, straightened out, and the wall was in place. Minor disasters are commonplace, but Pat Hennin has a standard reaction to panic calls: “No problem.” Sometimes accidents even turn into esthetic focal points, with an ingenious solution.

Afterward, graduates tend to assume they can deal with anything. If the car breaks down, or an appliance is out of order, the repair service is just a last resort. The course and the experience have changed lives. Pamela Kenyon, a Holyoke graduate who’d never imagined herself capable of changing more than a light bulb, helped her lawyer husband David build their house, and now can’t stop. She has become an Institute staff member and is attending drafting school.

“We’re trying to build better houses,” say the Hennins. And their work is beginning to have an effect beyond the hundred or so houses their graduates have built. Because some of their ideas are uncommon, they have had to work with banks and building-code officials to persuade them that standards in Shelter houses often exceed those set by state and federal governments, in spite of their unorthodoxy. As a result, some state regulations are changing, and some Maine building practices are being re-examined.

The houses Shelter graduates build also tend to cost substantially less. The first people to take the course were applying for mortgage loans in the $30,000 range. Now, say the Hennins, students are asking for $10,000 bank loans. The houses tend to be smaller, because smaller houses make more energy and environmental sense—and because smaller Shelters are more pleasant to live in. The Hennins’ own house—the twelfth that Pat has built herself—is an experiment in building to demonstrate just how inexpensive a house can be built. When it is completely finished, the 1,200-square-foot dwelling will have cost about $5,000. The wood stove that heats it burned only about a cord and a half of wood last winter, and the electric bill, including an electric stove, comes to about $10 a month.

But even if you don’t build your own house in the end, says Patsy Hennin, the course can save you as much as half the building costs, mainly because you will know every step of the process, the range of materials, and will have the knowledge and skills to act as your own contractor.

Institute work has been so well received that the school has overflowed its original home. A 5-story brick building, constructed in 1861, has just been acquired and renovation began last summer. "The orientation is perfect for using solar collectors," says Pat Hennin, "and we're talking about putting a greenhouse on the 5th floor." Also last summer, for the first time, two courses were in session simultaneously. The classes start July 11.

"When Doug wanted to build the house himself I thought he was crazy," says Ann Cowie, who was talked into attending and now lives in a house that she, her husband, and their four children built. "I dug in my heels the whole way. But now I can't imagine what other people do with their weekends. Whatever it is, it must be an awful waste of time." Would she do it again? "I'd build another if we ever sell this—but I'd never again live in a house that somebody else had built."

Enrolling at the Shelter Institute

Shelter Institute classes meet once a week for 3 hours, for 15 weeks year-round, beginning in February and September—they can be attended on Monday or Tuesday nights or Wednesday mornings. Or, for those participants who travel a long distance—Texas, Virginia, Colorado, for example—there is a compressed schedule: every day, all day, for 3 weeks; in 1978, intensive sessions begin on April 17, June 5, July 10, August 7 (in Jackson, Maine), and October 9. Enrollment is limited to 40, and even though the Institute doesn't advertise, it has had to start giving three concurrent sessions. There's usually a waiting list. The course costs $250 ($350 for a couple because "we found it put a real strain on a relationship if one person attended the class and the other didn't"). A summer session, designed to train people to be carpenters, is held in northern Maine, near Mt. Katahdin. And there are new short workshop courses—one on cabinetry, limited enrollment of 10; weekend workshops on power tools, and how to build your own double-glazed windows. For information, write: Shelter Institute, 38 Center Street, Bath, Maine 04531.

The Shelter Institute pays a lot of attention to energy efficiency. The better a house keeps and uses energy, the more comfortable the inhabitants will be, and the lower the bills for heating and cooling. In the box on page 42 are Shelter recommendations for building a well-warmed house.
Can a washing machine be beautiful?
Whirlpool thinks so. But to qualify, we believe that machine must also work as beautifully as it looks.
And that's why we designed our Solid State Touch Control Washer. It means that from now on, doing your laundry can be as simple as a few light touches of the control panel.
In a matter of seconds, you can actually program this washer to select the exact wash and care a particular load needs.
You see, this machine has been designed to treat different fabrics the way they are meant to be treated.
And when it comes time to wash, you simply "tell" it what to do by lightly touching the control panel.
The washer does it all from there. It gives you the exact wash, rinse and spin at the precise time and temperature needed for your washable clothes. Whirlpool quality combined with solid state reliability.
It's simply beautiful and better yet, beautifully simple. We believe the two should go together.

Whirlpool
Home Appliances

We believe quality can be beautiful.
James chops garlic with a medium-sized Sabatier knife; Jody attacks the onions, Chinese chopper in hand; Lucy criticizes, supervises, runs the show. They've been in the kitchen off and on since they were tiny and have acquired some strong opinions along the way. Peas are terrible; artichokes, asparagus, and Brussels sprouts are great. They like to cook their own recipes, which they imagine to be unique. The recipes are passed on only to the closest of friends, except for special occasions like the time Lucy taught her French class to make crêpes. No one encroaches on another's territory. Only Jody makes salad dressing. James is a vegetable and egg man who can never leave well enough alone. One time peanuts showed up in his frittata—not bad at all. Another time it's sliced dill pickle, and he's the only one who can eat it. Lucy hates breakfast, so she's made up a banana milkshake which provides enough energy to get her through a busy morning at school. She also makes wall-to-wall Meatballs and Surprise Burgers with a little help from her siblings. As the eldest child of working parents, she learned early that her help in the kitchen was truly needed and appreciated. Once she made brownies for a dinner party of 40 without being asked. Her stock was at an all-time high.

These children are compulsive label-readers. Once all the chocolate milk got left on the table at the zoo after James had read out the ingredients. No chocolate, no milk, lots of chemicals. They clip items of nutritional interest from the paper, though they are not totally involved with health foods. They tried an experiment called "food cookies," but only one kind is still popular. The rest, they said, were "too healthy-tasting." Still, they would like to have cookies be food rather than junk. Peanut butter, too, but Mom's homemade Cuisinart stuff consistently loses out to Skippy's. "Maybe next time," they say, "we'll be old enough to like the good stuff better." What we used to call an acquired taste.

Lucy, 15, is the only one who really uses a cookbook. It's probably a matter of age. A 10-year-old has a hard time imagining a finished dish from a list of ingredients. The younger ones love to cook when it's like a puzzle. How many meatballs will fill the pan wall-to-wall? No matter how many, they always eat them all. What is in the Surprise Burgers? It's hard, sometimes, to persuade them that all the surprises should be nice ones. Even a cake is a mystery. How can a flat, heavy batter become light and spongy in the oven? A cake-mix cake is not nearly as much fun because you know what to expect. It will certainly be acceptable, but it can't possibly be fabulous. Frosting is interesting if you flavor it strangely—almond, lemon, or daring Grand Marnier; it's even more interesting if you color it Captain Hook Green or Secondhand Rose with those little bottles of food coloring. Decorate with silver shot, M & M's, or more colors of frosting squeezed out of paper tubes. Birthdays come but once a year, though un-birthdays can be arranged a little more frequently.

Clean-up is never a pleasure, but it is utterly inescapable. Never, ever have the children been allowed to leave the kitchen a shambles for someone else to clean. It's the price they pay for the pleasure of cooking. This is the task that leads to bickering. Whoever cleaned the sink last time will only wipe the counters this time. Parents won't referee; it is simply required that the kitchen is left spotless.

Besides the fun of cooking, it's a thrill to overhear guests discussing Jody's Special Salad Dressing from the dining room. When Pop is late and Mom is locked in mortal combat with the typewriter, it's nice to be able to fix a good dinner for yourself, and sometimes even for Mom. And how fine it felt at that French-class dinner, to teach all those other kids to make crêpes, and to see them succeed, and to hear afterwards that it was the best class dinner ever. These rewards keep these three children learning and experimenting in the kitchen.

Jody's Special Salad Dressing

INGREDIENTS
- Pinch of salt
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard
- Pinch of dill leaves
- Pinch of fines herbes
- 1 tablespoon white vinegar
- 1 tablespoon French olive oil
- 2 tablespoons cold-pressed salad oil
- 1 head Boston or leaf lettuce

METHOD
- Put salt, mustard, dill, and herbs in the bottom of the salad bowl. Mix them together and add the vinegar. Stir thoroughly. Add the oils and mix vigorously until they blend with the vinegar. Put the well-washed and dried lettuce in the bowl and toss thoroughly. Feeds four.

Hints and variations: If you want to make the dressing ahead of time, be sure to mix it up thoroughly before adding the lettuce. Use basil or tarragon instead of dill and fines herbes. Use garlic salt or squeeze in some fresh garlic at the end.

AJAX TURNS YOUR SPONGE INTO A SCRUB BRUSH...

The Ajax power formula, with its 3 special bleaching and grease-cutting ingredients... gives you immediate scrubbing action as it powers out the toughest greasy food stains. There, a bright, sparkling clean sink. It's easy. And fast. Faster than Comet. Ajax turns your sponge into a scrub brush.
James' Frittata

INGREDIENTS

Basics for each person:
- 2 eggs
- ½ teaspoon garlic salt
- 1 tablespoon grated Parmesan
- Pinch of basil

Additions:
- Mushrooms cooked separately until their juice has run out and been reabsorbed
- Leftover vegetables, especially zucchini, broccoli, string beans, peas
- Meat, especially ham
- Odd inspirations, such as peanuts, sliced pickles, breadcrumbs

METHOD

- Mix the basics, except the oil, together with a fork or whisk until light and fluffy.
- Heat the oil, add the egg mixture, and let cook for about 2 minutes over quite low heat. The frittata is done when it is golden brown underneath and just set on top.
- Don't let it get leathery. If you have made the filling, cut it in wedges to serve.

Hints and variations: This Italian omelette is never supposed to taste quite the same twice, because it is designed to use up leftovers. Vary it according to your mood and what's on hand. Try it with rice, potatoes, eggplant, tomatoes, chicken, mint. It's an improviser's delight.

A Banana Milkshake Instead of Breakfast

INGREDIENTS

- 1 ripe banana, roughly sliced
- 1 teaspoon honey
- ½ cup powdered skimmed milk
- 1 tablespoon protein powder (optional)
- ½ teaspoon vanilla extract
- 2 ice cubes
- 1 cup cold skimmed milk

METHOD

- Put all the ingredients in the blender container and blend at high speed until smooth and thick. Serves 1.

Hints and variations: Strawberries and peaches in season are wonderful in this. Try substituting a tablespoon of jam for the fruit, but leave out the honey.

Surprise Burgers

INGREDIENTS

For each burger:
- ¼ pound lean ground beef
- Filling: (some or all of these)
  - Cheese—Cheddar, Boursin, or American
  - Sliced raw onion
  - Sliced pickle
  - Sliced tomato
  - Cooked bacon

METHOD

- Divide the meat for each burger in half. Make two flat patties. Lay the filling or fillings on one patty and cover with the other. Pinch the edges together and cook.

Hints and variations: Be sure to pinch the edges together very securely, especially if the filling is cheese, so it won't run out. These cook a little more slowly than regular burgers.

Wall-to-wall Meatballs

INGREDIENTS

- 2 tablespoons cooking oil
- 1 clove garlic, chopped fine
- 1 large onion, chopped fine
- 1 pound lean ground beef
- 1 can (about 2 pounds) tomatoes
- Basil
- Worcestershire sauce
- Salt and pepper

METHOD

- Heat the oil and add the garlic, stirring for a moment so it doesn't burn. Add the onion and cook over medium heat until it softens. Meanwhile, shape the meat into just enough little balls to fill the pan wall to wall. Push the onions aside and brown the meatballs on all sides, turning gently with a fork or tongs. When the meatballs are brown, skim off any fat and add the tomatoes, basil, Worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper to taste. Cook together for about 10 minutes, then serve in soup plates. Serves 4.

Hints and variations—and a story: I made up this recipe when I was about 13. After teaching it to my best friend, I forgot about it. It was a staple of her early married life, and she taught it to her children, who recently mentioned it to my children. I had to relearn it from my friends.

This dish is quite soupy and could be used as a spaghetti sauce. It may be served with grated Parmesan.

The children enjoy trying to divide the meat into just enough meatballs to fill the pan. It's not necessary, just fun.

Crêpes for a French Dinner

INGREDIENTS

The crêpes:
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup water
- ½ cup powdered skimmed milk
- 1 tablespoon melted butter or oil

The filling:
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 1 small onion, chopped
- ¼ pound mushrooms, sliced
- 2 cups cooked chicken, diced
- Sherry white sauce (recipe below)

METHOD FOR CRÊPES

- Mix by hand or in the blender. Let sit for at least an hour. Put about 2 table-

FIREPLACE EQUIPMENT

METHOD

- Melt the butter in a skillet. Add the onions and cook for a minute or two until softened. Add the mushrooms and cook over medium high heat until they have given off all their juices and reabsorbed them. Add the diced chicken and toss to warm. Reserve.

Sherry White Sauce

INGREDIENTS

- 3 tablespoons butter
- 2 cups hot milk
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons sherry

METHOD

- Heat the butter in a heavy saucepan until foaming. Add the flour and beat in the milk and the egg. Sift together the dry ingredients. Beat in the vanilla and then the cream and sides of two 8-inch layers or 12 cup-cakes. Bake about 15-20 minutes. The whole dish may also be assembled and frozen, but then allow at least 30 to 40 minutes in the oven for it to cook through.

Applesauce Food Cookies

INGREDIENTS

- 1 cup applesauce or grated apple with the skin on
- ¼ cup raisins
- ¼ cup chopped nuts
- 2 tablespoons honey
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon
- 2 tablespoons apple juice or water
- 1 cup butter or margarine
- 1 cup dark brown sugar
- 2 eggs
- 2 cups flour (preferably whole-wheat)
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- ¼ teaspoon cloves
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup milk
- 2 cups rolled oats

METHOD

- Beat the sugar into the softened butter. Beat in the eggs. Add the residue in the sifter if you have used whole-wheat flour, along with the oats. Stir well.

Unbirthday Cake

INGREDIENTS

- ¼ cup butter or margarine
- 1 egg
- ¾ cup sugar
- 1½ cups cake flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- Pinch of salt
- ½ cup milk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- ¼ teaspoon nutmeg

METHOD

- Cream butter or margarine; beat in the egg. Sift together the dry ingredients. Beat into the batter alternately with the milk. Add the flavorings. Butter 2 8-inch layer cake pans and pour in the batter. Bake at 350° for 25 minutes. Let cool in the pans for 10 minutes, then remove to a cake rack and allow to cool before frosting.

Hints and variations: This batter makes 12 cupcakes. Bake about 15-20 minutes. The flavoring may be varied by substituting 1 tablespoon lemon juice and the grated rind of 1 lemon for the vanilla and nutmeg.

Frosting

INGREDIENTS

- 2 cups sifted confectioners sugar
- ¼ cup soft butter
- 1½ teaspoons vanilla extract
- 2 tablespoons or more heavy cream

METHOD

- In a saucepan, warm the applesauce or grated apple, raisins, nuts, honey, cinnamon, and juice over a low flame while you make the cookie batter.

- Set aside about 1 cup dough. Drop the rest onto buttered cookie sheets. Make a depression in each mound and fill it with the apple mixture. Top with a dab of the reserved batter. Bake at 375° for 10 to 12 minutes. Makes about 3 dozen.

Originally, you couldn't get real cigarette taste without what has come to be known as tobacco 'tar.'

The problem of reducing this 'tar' to 5 mg. while maintaining taste is enormous. That's why when we set out to work, we didn't give ourselves a time limit.

The “Decade Total System.”

How were we able to keep the taste in a low 'tar' when so many others have failed? Mainly by developing our unique “Total System” in which every part of a Decade cigarette is arranged in perfect balance with each other.

The tobacco, the filter, and even the paper.

Only by concentrating on these parts were we able to perfect the whole.

The Tobacco. “Flavor Packing,” plus fifteen tobaccos boost taste.

Take the tobacco, for example. Its taste is boosted by a very unique method called "Flavor Packing" which allows us to concentrate a special patented tobacco flavorant in each Decade cigarette.

The Filter.

Unique “Taste Channel” gives first puff impact.

Our filtration process is also unique. Simply, we've created a "Taste Channel" within the filter to give you that first puff impact you've come to expect from only the higher ‘tar’ cigarettes.

The Paper. High porosity paper controls burn rate.

Even our high porosity paper is specifically designed to give an efficient burn rate that delivers optimum taste with a minimum of 'tar.'

The result.

A completely new kind of low ‘tar’ cigarette.

So try a pack of Decade for yourself. Regular or Menthol. And after one taste we think you'll agree that our last 10 years were well worth the effort.

The recliner that thinks it's a chair.

Wallaway by Berkline is the evolutionary ultimate in reclining. Wallaway's fashionable lines eliminate the ugly bulkiness of recliners.

Sitting close to the wall, it never has to be pulled back and forth; Wallaway glides forward as you recline, without endangering what's behind it.

In a variety of fabrics and vinyls, it's as much at home in the living room as in the rec room.

Don't be afraid of recliners anymore. The thinking Wallaway is here.

COOKING FOR PLEASURE

A lively cook and teacher shares her techniques for good cooking, enjoyable living

For someone who loves cooking as much as Judith Ets-Hokin, her life is exemplary. Every day she goes to her shop cooking school center in San Francisco. There she demonstrates, teaches, provides bridal shower luncheons, and invents cooking utensils such as the "B Fat Spatula." In a joint venture with Sonoma Vineyards, she also runs the Judith Ets-Hokin Culinary Institute for cooking lessons by mail. She has published a prize-winning cookbook, The San Francisco Dinner Party Cookbook, and is currently working on a new one. In addition, she runs a busy household of five children plus husband, and grows her own herbs, vegetables, fruits, and prize roses. (More on her house and garden on page 164, Recipes page 66.)

Not surprisingly, a woman who can do all this has found a way to organize her life, use all her talents, and learn considerable number of special skills both culinary and for daily living. Some of the things she has learned are listed below: for Judith Ets-Hokin believes in sharing what you know. "There should be no mystique about cooking, or indeed about living," she declares. "If you give a present of a jar of jam, give the receipt with it. Otherwise it is only half a gift. Here are some of the gifts that Judith Ets-Hokin has to offer.

1. "The first thing I teach in my cooking school is that we do fine cooking, which means (1) the freshest, best-quality ingredients, (2) thoughtful, careful preparation, and (3) an element of creativity that you must supply."

2. "The proper equipment and tools are an integral part of cooking. I love cooking in clay, for instance; hot air circulates constantly, and everything works better with it. Choose the right pan for the right dish. A cassoulet, for instance, should be cooked in the traditional cassoulet pot."

3. "Grow what you can, especially herbs. Even on a windowsill in a city apartment you can grow fresh herbs. I always insist on a rosemary bush and a lemon tree wherever I live. Lemon is essential and it should be fresh—use it on everything, for chicken, veal, fish, all kinds of fruit. I use a lemon nearly every day on something."

4. "Buy foods closest to their natural state; then when you break, slice, chop them, you begin to release their flavor. For instance, if you cut tomatoes..."

Most people who buy KitchenAid dishwashers owned some other brand first.

Live with a dishwasher awhile. And you learn a few things about it.

Like how well it cleans. How seldom it needs repair. And how long it lasts.

Maybe that's why so many people think KitchenAid dishwashers are such a good value.

They say things like, "Built solid, very dependable."

"Gets everything clean without hand rinsing, even dirty pans."

"Needs few repairs."

"Lasts a long time. Uses less hot water; saves on electricity."

"Can load it any way I like and everything comes out clean."

And people who've had experience with dishwashers don't merely think KitchenAid is best. They buy it.

In fact, over the years, more people have replaced their old dishwashers with KitchenAid than with any other brand.

And that's something to think about when you're thinking about buying a dishwasher.

KitchenAid. Because it's worth it.

Time & Energy Savers from Judith Ets-Hokin

To Save Time—Take 10-15 minutes each night to write down a list of tasks, in order of convenience and priority, that you wish to accomplish the next day. Then, next day, follow that list. When I don't have specific tasks written down, I find I waste time. There is truth in the saying, if you want something done, ask a busy person!

To Save Energy—enjoy what you do, which means getting pleasure from every aspect of the activity, including what you use, whether it's a tennis racket or a skillet. The key to energy is to find something you enjoy doing, surrounded by things you like, then you can survive the longest hours. For instance, when I visit people's homes to demonstrate cooking, sometimes they say, "Don't use this bowl, I don't like it," or, "This burner doesn't work." Eliminate nonworking equipment or things you get no pleasure out of; otherwise you are wasting energy brooding over the negative things in your life. After a long day, 7:30 to 7:30 on my feet in the store, I come home tired, cook a simple meal with my family, and feel restored. Channel energy into positive things and you will feel marvelous. For recipes, see page 66.

His destiny was to die in poverty and disappointment.

Yet his genius gave the world some of the most beautiful music ever heard.

At the age of 6, Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart was the talk of Europe. By the time he was 8, he had sat on the knee of Empress Maria Theresa, delighted the court of George III, and composed four sonatas.

Fame came early but fortune always eluded him—and when he died of kidney disease at 35, he was destitute and had to be buried in a pauper's grave.

Yet he left the fickle world an astonishing body of music, ranging, like his life, from lighthearted frolics to epic tragedy... as you will discover in TIME-LIFE's magnificent boxed set on Mozart—the first in a book and record series called GREAT MEN OF MUSIC.

Here is a "connoisseur's choice" of Mozart's creations, recorded in finest stereo sound by artists who have no peer. You'll hear Leontyne Price singing from The Magic Flute... Van Cliburn's rendition of Piano Sonatas Nos. 10 in C and 11 in A... Heifetz's interpretation of Violin Concerto No. 4 in D... Benny Goodman playing Clarinet Concerto in A...

The boxed set on Mozart is only the beginning of GREAT MEN OF MUSIC—an unparalleled collection of the world's greatest music, performed by leading artists of our time. In future sets, you will thrill to the genius of Bach, Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, Brahms, Debussy, Mahler, more than 20 composers in all.

And you'll listen with new understanding as well as enjoyment. Because each set is enriched with a color-filled booklet on the composer's life and times, plus program notes that tell you exactly what to listen for.

Start by auditioning Mozart for 10 days free. You'll receive four 12-inch LP stereo records (the kind which usually retail for $6.98 each) in an elegant slipcase, the background booklet complete with Listener's Guide, AND the valuable deluxe edition of The Golden Encyclopedia of Music—yours free just for purchasing Mozart and agreeing to examine future sets.

If after ten days you decide you'd like to own this $45.87 value, it's yours for only $17.95, plus shipping and handling. If however, you are not completely delighted, return the album and encyclopedia and owe nothing. Send no money. Just mail the attached card. Or write TIME-LIFE Records, Time & Life Building, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Bread sticks

INGREDIENTS FOR PASTRY
¾ cup all-purpose flour plus 2 tablespoons
3 ounces sweet butter, chilled
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
2 ½ tablespoons ice water
INGREDIENTS FOR FILLING
½ pint heavy cream
Sugar
Vanilla
1-2 baskets strawberries
Currant jelly, heated

METHOD FOR PASTRY

Place the flour on a pastry board or in a large mixing bowl. With a pastry cutter or the tips of your fingers work the butter, salt, and sugar into the flour. Work quickly until the mixture has the consistency of coarse meal. Add ice water 1 tablespoon at a time and knead lightly until pastry forms a ball. Chill at least 1 hour before rolling out.

Line a 9-inch tart pan with the pastry. Place tin foil inside, fill with dried beans and bake in a preheated 400° oven 20-25 minutes until browned. Remove tart from pan and cool.

METHOD FOR FILLING

Whip cream in a large bowl until it forms stiff peaks and sweeten to taste with sugar and vanilla.

Spread the cream in the tart shell and arrange berries on top. Glaze with currant jelly. Serves 8.

How to water hanging plants, where to keep household records, a new use for toast racks, and other clever solutions to household problems

BY MARY ELIZABETH FALTER

- Be sure to keep a list of all your credit-card numbers, driver's license number, automobile registration and ownership slips and their numbers, and the serial numbers of valuables like stereo, cameras, fine binoculars, and small TVs. Your safe-deposit box at the bank is the place to keep it.
- A marking pen kept in the refrigerator is handy to record the dates on cans and jars of food that are opened and for marking things like hardboiled eggs.
- A teaspoon of water in the top of a jar of heavy jam or marmalade will keep it soft and easier to spread. Add the water when the jar is about three-quarters full and let it stand overnight so it has a chance to absorb.
- English toast racks can be very helpful in organizing a desk top, even if they cool the toast in England. They always have a handle in the middle, so they're easy to move and as they are usually made of silver or fine china, they are decorative. The four slots make fine filing racks for bills to pay or letters to answer. Put them in the order of importance and you're ready for action when you have a free minute to sit down at your desk.
- All automatic washing machines usually have hot and cold inlet faucets attached to hoses that lead into the machine. It is important to keep the faucets turned off when the machine is not in use to reduce wear and tear on the water intake system and to avoid creating a vacuum in the household water supply that could suddenly cut down the hot water in the middle of a shower or abruptly reduce the water pressure. It's a nuisance to turn the hot and cold water faucets on and off by hand after every use, but a plumber can supply you with a neat little lever valve that does the job for you. Flip it up and both faucets turn off, flip it down and they're on.
- A fabulous new air freshener on the market called "Odors Away" is astoundingly effective: One drop of the liquid on one squirt of the spray can will keep an average room fresh and free of unpleasant odors up to 24 hours. The spray can is about a quarter the size of ordinary ones, lasts a long time, and the little bottle of liquid is only an inch and a half square. Fine for travel—a couple of drops on the air conditioner vent will do wonders for a stuffy motel room and the liquid is practically odorless by itself. Made by the Wrap-On Company, 341 West Superior Street, Chicago, Ill. 60610.
- The bathtub is the best place to water and spray hanging baskets of plants. Leave them there overnight and the water will absorb and stop any dripping. The bathtub is also good for washing down broad-leaf plants.
- A leather-bound canvas tackle bag or a feather-light vinyl camera case makes an excellent carry-on bag for air travel. Both have built-in compartments and pockets to keep things organized. Fully packed, they weigh very little, and can be carried over your shoulder. Heavy-weight clear plastic food-storage bags are good for keeping toilet articles sorted—one apiece for hair rollers, makeup, toothpaste and brush, soap, and medical supplies. The bags weigh nothing and you can see what's in them. Always think "lost luggage" when you pack a carry-on and include anything vital for the 24 or 36 hours it may take to find it.
- On a snowy, icy day, you usually have two dreary choices—to salt the steps and front walk and stay upright, or skip it, save the lawn and trees from salt-kill, and take chances. However, if on a dry day you slowly pour a bucket of water over the areas you usually salt, you can watch the run-off and protect the vulnerable areas with corrugated edging which you can paint so that it's hardly noticeable. The run-off usually only hits certain places and can be deflected and dispersed.
- Extra-large, round clay flowerpots (the kind that look like pumpkins) make excellent and decorative containers for garden and terrace hoses. They coil neatly inside the pot and are out of sight but on the ready.
- A wonderful little power-failure light on the market operates as a night light when plugged into a regular outlet on general duty, but automatically becomes a bright little beam light if the power goes off. It operates for some time on its own power (which is on recharge when the power is on). Every room should have one. Made by Sanyo, the light is called the Power Failure Light and is available at Hammacher Schlemmer in New York.
- Take your address book to a public stenographer (you should have typed it on loose leaves in the first place) and have it copied in list form. A good service will even look up missing zip codes. Then if you should lose your book, which is a terrible nuisance, the problem is already solved.

Meet Bobby Woo, the 200 Millionth American. His diapers are done in a Maytag.

Two weeks before Bobby arrived, Mrs. Woo got a Maytag Washer and Dryer. She was following her mother's example.

When she went to the hospital, Mrs. Robert Woo discussed diapers; her diapers were done in a Maytag. He was planning to buy a washer and dryer. He was following his mother's example.

When she went to the hospital, Mrs. Robert Woo got a Maytag Washer and Dryer. She was following her mother's example.

Two weeks before Bobby was born, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woo bought a new Maytag Washer and Dryer. They've been working overtime ever since. Diapers, playclothes, dresses, slacks, everything has been washed in the new washer and dryer. The machine have been working overtime every since. Diapers, playclothes, dresses, slacks, everything has been washed in the new washer and dryer.

Today you can get New Generation Maytags with many new features. A washer with giant capacity and numerous cycles. A dryer with Electronic Control that's just right for permanent press. But one thing hasn't changed. Dependability, in what we aim to build into every Maytag.

Whatever became of Bobby Woo, born a celebrity on November 20, 1967, when the Census people in Washington designated him the 200 Millionth American?

Well, since appearing in the Maytag ad reproduced here, "There are many changes in Bobby's life," writes his mother, Mrs. Sally Woo, Tucker, Georgia. "He has two sisters and one brother . . . he is a fifth-grader . . . he plays Little League baseball."

But one thing hasn't changed, states Mrs. Woo. The same Maytag that did Bobby's diapers in 1967 is washing for him today. The family laundry runs about 10 loads a week now. But that washer has only had one repair in 10 hard-working years. This doesn't surprise her, says Mrs. Woo, because she knows Maytag Washers are built to last longer and need fewer repairs.

Of course, we don't say all Maytags will equal that record. But long life with few repairs is what we aim to build into every Maytag Washer, Dryer, Dishwasher, and Disposer.

The E.P.T.™ In-Home Early Pregnancy Test is a private little revolution any woman can easily buy at her drugstore. It is highly accurate. Millions of women today in 13 European countries use this testing method. Now its high accuracy rate has been verified here in America by doctors who clinically confirmed the results of tests performed by women themselves in their own homes.

That means you can confidently do this easy pregnancy test yourself—privately—right at home without waiting for appointments or delays. That simple difference is the result of many years of costly research. And it’s worth every penny.

At last, early knowledge of pregnancy belongs easily and accurately to us all. It’s simple. Fast. And there is no risk, no physical danger whatever, in doing it because a sample of your first morning urine is all that’s needed for the test.

As soon as you become pregnant, your body starts to produce a special hormone — HCG. Starting on the 9th day after the date you expected your menstrual period to begin, there should be sufficient concentration of HCG in your urine to give an accurate reading of pregnancy. And that’s all there is to it. Follow the test directions with care, and three drops of urine can tell you quickly and easily what you want to know.

If you get a positive reading, you can assume you are pregnant. Such positive pregnancy readings in our clinical tests proved to be 97% accurate. If your reading is negative, your overdue period should begin soon. If a week passes and your pregnancy test is still negative, you should take a second E.P.T. test because there may not have been sufficient HCG in your urine at the time of the first test, or you may have miscalculated your period. Negative readings on a first test are about 80% accurate; on repeat testing one week later they are 91% accurate. If your second test result is still negative and your period has not begun, we urge you to consult your doctor as soon as possible.

E.P.T. is very simple to do, but it is important that you follow the instructions carefully to insure an accurate reading. E.P.T. Early Pregnancy Test gives women a new power, the power of time to help control the quality of their pregnancies. The first 60 days are critical in fetal development. Improper nutrition, cigarettes, alcohol, even commonly used household medications can be harmful in these crucial first 60 days before most women even know for sure that they are pregnant. Now with E.P.T. you can know. Now, when you call your doctor, you have the results of your test to report. And time is on your side at last.

1. Put three drops of urine into the test tube.
2. Add contents of the plastic vial, shake and place test tube in holder. It must remain undisturbed for two hours.
3. After two hours if a dark brown ring is visible in the mirror, that indicates an active pregnancy.

At last, an accurate early pregnancy test that women can do at home quickly, safely and very easily.

Wall art

I enjoyed the article on the Stewarts' great garden and house [June, 1977] and am writing to see if you would direct me to sources for American Primitives, as I would love some ideas for a mural in our hall.

—S.H., Fullerton, Calif.

Mrs. Stewart tells us she didn't copy any particular American Primitive (she's an avid student of art history), but for illustrations and a discussion of the paint recipes and methods American Primitive artists used, you might see American Decorative Wallpaintings 1700-1850 by Nina Fletcher Little. It's 169 pages long and is available in paperback for $8.10 ppd. from The Bookstore, Old Sturbridge Village, Sturbridge, Mass. 01566. Please make your check payable to the publisher, Old Sturbridge Inc.

Another book you might consider is The Flowering of American Folk Art: 1776-1876, which the Viking Press published in conjunction with the exhibit of the same name. It's available in hardcover for $16 ppd. from the Sales Desk, Whitney Museum of American Art, 945 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y. 10021.

Green-thumb storage

I would like to purchase plans for building an outdoor storage shed. Please tell me where I might obtain them.

—J.L.F., Staten Island, N.Y.

Three organizations that offer plans are: The American Plywood Association (P.O. Box 2277, Tacoma, Wash. 98401) has a catalogue illustrating over fifty plans, including five for garden storage sheds, one for a lawn tool storage cabinet, one for a carport storage unit. The catalogue is 50¢, most plans $1 each, ppd.

The California Redwood Association (617 Montgomery St., San Francisco, Calif. 94111) offers, for 35¢ ppd., its Garden Shelters brochure showing a Japanese-influenced summerhouse-cum-garden shed.

Vacuum bottles repaired

The glass liner of my thermos bottle has broken. Is the bottle repairable?

—E.M., Brooklyn, N.Y.

Yes indeed. If you send it via insured mail to Edward Stein at the Hormel Corporation, Room 1300, 212 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10010, he'll send you an estimate. Hormel repairs vacuum-lined pitchers and ice buckets, too. You may bring in broken items between 9 A.M. and 5 P.M. Monday through Friday, if you prefer. Hormel's principal business is importing—among other things a hard-to-find, gallon-size, vacuum-lined, wooden ice bucket that sells for about $120. Write for stores near you.

Chaise chase

I've searched high and low for the springs that go on Barwa chairs (the S-shaped patio chaises that can be angled for sitting or reclining). Can you suggest a source? —L.L.W., Nantucket, Mass.

The Patio (550 Powell St., San Francisco, Calif. 94108) sells new springs and canvas covers for Barwa chairs—and, of course, the chairs themselves. A set of springs is currently $17.25 ppd. The spring-summer catalogue is $1 ppd.

Pearly pieces

Where can I order mother-of-pearl? I have several pieces missing from a very old and beloved chair.

—T.B., Jr., Ashland, Ky.

You can mail-order flat mother-of-pearl pieces from the Pearl Design Center, 979 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. They're irregularly shaped, about 1/16th-of-an-inch thick, and up to 2 inches square in area. A 1-inch-square piece is about $5. A good jeweler or lapidary can grind pieces to fit your patterns. To make pattern, press tissue paper into cavity, trace inner edge with pencil. Transfer to cardboard, cut out, and test size and shape in cavity—it should be slightly smaller than cavity. Or with a nail file and lots of patience you can file down the mother-of-pearl yourself, but first soak it overnight in water to reduce brittleness. Glue finished piece into place with a white polyvinyl glue such as Elmer's, then match new white piece to its older, darker neighbors, graze it with a cloth-wrapped finger dipped in a tiny bit of raw umber oil paint. Wipe off excess. If your missing pieces are geometric in shape, the Pearl Design Center may custom cut them for you. Send Mr. Edward Kay there exact patterns, he'll send you an estimate.

A high utility bill is one of your best reasons to check out today's new, energy-efficient gas appliances. They use up to 50% less gas than the ones offered just five years ago, saving you money...and precious energy. Gas has always been the most efficient energy for the big household jobs of home heating, cooking, heating water and drying clothes. And, with utility bills going higher, gas and new gas appliances are a better choice today than ever before.

Does the cost of staying warm give you chills?

A new, energy-efficient gas heating system can heat the same amount of space as older systems with up to 20% less gas...enough, in fact, to take care of your total energy needs for cooking and drying clothes. They're quiet, clean, compact, long-lasting and have pilotless ignition.

Only sunshine is more efficient.

Today's new energy-efficient gas dryers can cut your use of gas for drying clothes by 25%. They have pilotless ignition, automatic shut-off when clothes are dry, and multiple temperature settings for all types of fabrics.

The pilot light went out...for good!

Pilotless ignition is just one reason many new gas ranges use up to one-half less gas than older models and cost on average far less to operate. They also feature instant on and off, super fast heat control, multiple temperature settings, ovens that clean themselves and smokeless closed-door broiling.

Now there's really something to sing about in the shower.

Did you know the average family uses 26,000 gallons of hot water a year? That's a lot of water...also, a lot of money and energy. You can save both with a new, energy-efficient gas water heater. Compared to older models, these new heaters heat the same amount of water with up to a third less gas.

Conserving energy is a national concern...saving money, a personal one. New gas appliances do both, and that's why we say:

New Gas Appliances are good for your economy!
How to make your own machine-embroidered appliquéd pillows

SEWING WITH A GREEN THUMB

Shade a rose with contrasting stitches

It's easy to make machine-embroidered appliquéd pillows like the ones on pages 142-143. All you need is a sewing machine, a variety of print fabrics, a thin embroidery hoop, thread, and a bit of creative imagination.

Begin by choosing a tentative design, using the pillows on pages 142-143 as a guide. Select a variety of coordinating print fabrics. The Designers Guild fabrics used for these pillows are available from Brunschwig through decorators. Cut out fabric designs, or flowers, according to your plan. Arrange the cutout appliqués in layers on one large background fabric the size and shape of your finished pillow. Play with the different shapes and prints until you have decided on a final design.

Example: The square bouquet pillow at the top of page 142 is made by layering squares of different print fabrics on top of each other, each square being about 2 inches smaller than the one beneath it. The result: a border frame punctuated by a single cutout bouquet in the lower right corner.

Pin appliqués to the background fabric and outline each one with a straight machine stitch. Trim raw edges. You are now ready to begin free-motion machine embroidery, which overstitches curved raw edges and creates depth and shading around and inside your appliqués.

Free-motion machine embroidery—using a plain zigzag or straight stitch—is accomplished without the guidance of the presser foot or feed mechanism of your machine. Fabric movement is controlled by means of an embroidery hoop which holds your fabric taut as you sew. Fill bobbin with a neutral color mercerized thread that can remain in place even when changing the top thread to match different parts of your design. For the top stitches, use machine embroidery thread, a fine, satiny thread that will not fray. If this is unavailable, mercerized cotton or polyester thread may be substituted.

Remove the presser foot, and cover or lower the feed mechanism of your machine, referring to your owner's manual for instructions. Place the design to be outlined in the embroidery hoop. Lower the presser foot lifter, and, holding the edges of the hoop lightly, run the machine at a moderate speed, following the outline of your design. Slow hoop movement will produce a short close stitch; faster movement opens and lengthens the stitch. Make a test sample with the thread and fabric you plan to use, adjusting the stitch length and tension properly, and practicing various stitches with the hoop.

The color of your machine embroidery thread is most important to the final look of your pillow. Study your fabrics to determine less prominent colors. Bring out these colors with machine embroidery. Some prints have enough color and design to give them shape and depth with nothing more than an outline of machine embroidery necessary. Other prints will benefit from the added dimension and texture that comes from embroidering within the outlined border of the appliqués. Experiment with different color threads on different areas of your pillow. A leaf may be shaded with different threads of green. A flower might be outlined in one color, filled in with another.

Back your finished pillow front with a solid piece of fabric; stuff, and close with a zipper.

Arrange print fabrics on top of each other

BRANCH INTO AN EARLY SPRING

BY RICHARD LANGER

Spring never seems to come soon enough. And although there's little one can do about that in the bleak, windy world outside, one can coax spring into being early indoors.

Where and when the idea of forcing dormant branches to flower indoors first originated remains an enigma. But the art grows in popularity with each passing year. Actually, it's not so much an art as it is a matter of knowing which plants can be readily forced, which ones may be difficult, and what to do to encourage the blooms to appear.

Basically, the closer to their normal blooming time the branches are cut, the sooner they will flower. In northern states, spiraea cut the first week in February takes over a month to demonstrate its beauty. But in the middle of March, it hesitates only a week before unfolding its petals. Dogwood will take about a month and a half if cut the end of January, but do your pruning in the month of March and you'll have a short wait. The same holds true for most trees and shrubs, so little is gained by rushing spring into February, as tempting as the thought may be. Now March, that's another story.

Branches for forcing should be cut on a sharp slant. And when you do your pruning, use a sharp pair of shears so as not to injure the rest of the shrub by stripping strings of bark away. The cold season is hard enough on your plants: you don't want to leave them weak and exposed to disease.

Those great sweeping sprays of movie fantasy settings, incidentally, are forced in a greenhouse. Three-foot lengths are about the maximum you can use in a house. Longer branches can't absorb water fast enough and usually don't make it.

Once you have your cuttings inside, slit the stems up the middle about 4 or 6 inches to increase the wood's ability to absorb water. On thick branches, those over an inch in diameter, it's also a good idea to scrape away the bark for the same distance up the stem.

Any type of vase or container may be used to hold the branches, though it's preferable not to use transparent ones, as they foster algae in the water. Algae is not so much a problem as it is an aesthetic malfunction. If you've ever tried to force branches in spring only to end up with a grouping of dried twigs and some very iffy water, you've encountered the slime problem. Traditionally one combated it with frequent changes of water. This is still a highly recommended procedure (remember, however, always to use tepid water—you are, after all, trying to create an illusion of spring for your plants). But the best way to avoid the unpleasantness of congealed water is to add a teaspoonful of household bleach per gallon of water. The bleach will retard the bacterial growth that causes the water problem. While you're at it, add half a teaspoonful of liquid fertilizer to each gallon of water as well. It's supposed to en-

A vase of cuttings should be kept in a warm, brightly lit, preferably sunny spot. Warmth is, of course, what makes the incipient flowers think it's spring, while the sunshine encourages the development of nature's finest colors. Branches forced in insufficient light tend to be rather paler than their naturally sunbathed counterparts. Daily misting is also a great aid, since it assures that the buds will not dry out. Tepid water—or even warm water, since it will cool rapidly as it is misted—is, as always, best.

The cold season is normally the time for the so-called white forsythia, Cytisus praecox, the warm yellow forsythia, and Abeliophyllum. The ever-popular forsythia, spiraea—with its masses of minute pink or white flowers—quince—one of the earliest bloomers—and witch hazel, all are almost fail-proof. Fruit trees such as cherry, peach, plum, and the rest of the stone fruits are also candidates for easy forcing. So too are apple, dogwood, rhododendron, and wisteria. These, however, are relatively late bloomers and will not force readily indoors if cut early. March—the beginning, middle, or end, depending on how severe your winters are—is the best time to bring an early spring indoors. And while you are at it, why not experiment? Try Abeliophyllum, the so-called white forsythia, or Cytisus praecox, the warm yellow Warminster Broom, with its yellow blooms.

These are the weeks when thirty minutes with your spreader and our Turf Builder will help you get the most out of Spring's good growing weather. This is one of the easiest tasks a good lawn calls for. You can do it the same morning you have a golf date and still tee off on time.

It's also one of the best things you can do to make your lawn thicker this Spring. The sun's moved far enough north now to warm up the earth and your grass is trying its hardest to grow.

But this is where nature needs some help. There's a desperate competition for food among the roots your lawn already has. Your soil alone can't come up with the nutrition all those grass plants need to branch out and form new plants.

A half hour with our Turf Builder and your plot will thicken.

Food is what Turf Builder gives it. Nitrogen, mostly, but phosphorus and potassium, too. Just one pass around your yard will help grow thousands of new grasses in less than a month.

And the exclusive way we make Turf Builder gives your lawn not just a quick feeding but also a prolonged feeding for up to two months.

We put this fertilizer up in tiny granules which provide a balanced mixture of plant nutrients, including both soluble and insoluble nitrogen. Rain or watering releases the soluble food right away. The insoluble food is then released slowly by organic action in your soil.

(This also keeps Turf Builder from burning your lawn. Just do what it says in the directions. In fact, you could accidentally put on four times too much this Spring and it still wouldn't burn.)

We make a different Turf Builder for different parts of the country. We've done research all over, from the West Coast to the Northeast, to make sure you get what's best for where you live.

You can also get some free advice from the Scotts' Lawn Pro™ who lives in your area. He's a local expert and you only pay for what you buy.

FOR THE LOVE OF ROSES

How to grow them, where to grow them, and what makes them the most romantic flower on earth

BY JAMES FANNING

There were roses before there was a word for them. Fossils preserve for us leaves and flowers much like today's familiar Rosa multiflora, millions of years old and unquestionably roses; and the five-petaled flower was so beloved by early artists that we can admire it cast and carved in the most ancient materials. When a word did exist—the gul of Persia, where the world's first rose garden was probably cultivated—it embodied the concept of all flowers, and in Romance languages, the rose's name also means its brilliant color: In fact, the English gules, the deep crimson of heraldic arms, seems to have bloomed straight out of Persia.

The ancestors of the garden roses we know now were brought to Europe by Crusaders returning from Asia Minor, and as soon as European poets discovered it they turned the flower into the medieval symbol of courtly love and heraldry. The Romance of the Rose, written about 1230, set the style for 300 years of passionate chivalry in France and in England, where the houses of York and Lancaster chose white and red roses as their tokens of identity and fought history's bitterest battle over the throne in the Wars of the Roses. The age of gallantry faded slowly at the end of the 15th century; but the rose is still the aristocratic flower, cultivated in the famous gardens of presidents and princesses. And, as anyone who has received a giant bouquet of long-stemmed beauties knows, it is still the flower of romance.

The Rose in the Wild. Roses have their natural home in the north temperate zone, where wild species grow all the way around the globe, from Mexico to Siberia. There are hundreds of species in the genus Rosa: practically all the wild species are single, with five petals surrounding a central tuft of stamens, but many-petaled varieties do occur, and it is these that have led to the development of the densely packed, high-centered blooms so much in favor today. The basic colors are white, yellow, and all the shades of red—from pale pink to deep maroon. When it comes to growing roses in our own gardens, an almost infinite variety is available, ranging in size from great, sprawling shrubs to teacup-sized miniature plants, all overwhelmingly floriferous. Queens of the garden are the modern hybrid teas and floribundas, which not only have the full range of sizes and colors, but flower almost continuously from late spring to late autumn.

How to Grow Happy Roses. The wild species roses give us the clue to successful rose gardening. They flourish at the edges of meadows, near the seashore, and in clusters where there is not much else but grass. We may improve on nature with fertilizers and insecticides, but the basic requirements of full sunshine, free air circulation, and good drainage (no standing water) are most important. A balanced fertilizer not too heavy in nitrogen is best for roses, and should be applied just before the time of most active growth, 5-10-10 (5 percent nitrogen, 10 phosphorus, 10 potassium) is a good formula. If used in a slow-release form, fertilizer need only be applied once a year; faster-acting types may be applied as often as once a month during the growing season. A particularly effective insecticide is Sevin—but this also kills bees, so use it with discretion. Phaltan is probably the best fungicide; it may be used in combination with Sevin and a spreading agent. Read the manufacturers' instructions for all three chemicals before using.

The Little Roses

Although roses have been grown in greenhouses for as long as there have been greenhouses, growing them in an ordinary living room had to wait for development of the modern miniatures. The first of these appeared shortly before the Second World War. During the 1960s, as interest in indoor plants grew by leaps and bounds, rose breeders increased their output of miniatures, so that now there are several hundred on the market. All the usual rose types and rose colors are represented in the miniatures, scaled down to be in proportion with the 8-to-10-inch-high plants. Their requirements are the same as for roses grown outdoors: lots of light, not too much water, and good air circulation to prevent mildew and similar ailments. Their one indoor enemy is the spider mite. These minuscule web-spinners thrive on dry indoor air and cause leaves to yellow and drop. Misting with plain water at frequent intervals usually conquers the pests. If not, one of the commercial miticides—used strictly according to the manufacturer's instructions, of course—will do the trick. Outdoor uses of miniature roses should not be overlooked, either. They are as hardy as roses of any other type, and make ideal accents in a rock garden, where they may be planted on upper levels, close to the viewer's eye, and where there is little danger of an oversupply of moisture.

A connoisseur's list of miniature roses for either indoors or out would certainly include the following six:

Simplex. Flowers are single, more than 1 inch across, with pointed apricot-tinted white petals, making it look like a wild species. Not among the smallest miniatures, stems reach as high as 2 feet.

Mimi. Flowers are the flat-opening, full-centered type we think of as old fashioned. They are sweet-scented, medium pink and, very long-lasting, on a 2-foot-high shrub.

Wayside Garnet. This old favorite grows about 18 inches high, and is densely branched, with clusters of very double flowers each less than an inch across, and of a true garnet color.

Hula Girl. This is a miniature version of that all-time favorite hybrid tea, Tropical. The bright orange, urn-shaped buds open to a diameter of just over an inch, and are very long-lasting.

Mary Marshall. A floribunda type, seldom growing more than 15 inches high. The flowers are orange-pink, with a perfect tea rose form.

Toy Clown. Very double white flowers, each petal edged with red. The plant is very vigorous. And Charles Marden Fitch, in The Complete Book of Miniature Roses (Hawthorn, $12.95), has words of high praise for Red Cascade and Green Ice (white), as ideal trailing plants for hanging baskets. Old-fashioned Roses

We usually think of old-fashioned roses as having a great many petals that open out into a flat-topped form as the flower matures. However, practically all of the wild species have just a single row of petals, and the oldest known garden rose—of unknown origin—is, at best, only semi-double. This is Rosa Damascena, the damask rose, supposedly brought from Damascus by the Crusaders. Its color and fragrance are those customarily associated with roses, and it is grown commercially as the source of attar of roses. Like most of the old kinds, the damask rose grows as a shrub, increasing in height and spreading year by year. From the modern viewpoint, old-fashioned roses have the handicap of sparse flowering—sparse, that is, because there is just one rather brief period of flowering, usually in late spring, and no more than a scattering of blooms the rest of the year.

Here are six of the old-time favorites, introduced during the two centuries from 1700 to 1900:

- Souvenir de Malmaison. Named in honor of the famous rose garden of Empress Josephine, this has small, perfectly shaped buds that open to 4-inch flowers of perfumed flesh pink. However, the plant does not survive cold winters.
- Frau Karl Druschki. This set the standard by which all modern white hybrid tea roses have been judged. It blooms at intervals during the growing season, each flower on a long, straight stem; pure, glistening white with perfect form.
- Reine des Violettes. The flower really lives up to its name, Queen of the Violets. It is very double, much bluer than most of the modern "blues," and, unlike the later arrivals, very sweetly scented.
- Maiden’s Blush. Victorians changed the name of this lovely blush pink rose from Nymph’s Thigh. The flowers are large, fully double, and very sweet-scented.
- Koenigin von Daenemark. Sometimes listed with the name Anglicised to Queen of Denmark, this is one of the most beautiful of all pale pink roses. It blooms only once a year, but fanciers like Peter Hewitt (see page 144) say it is well-worth waiting for.
- Striped Moss. A green fringe on flower stalks and sepals gives this type of rose its name. This particular moss rose has very double, flat-opening flowers, either white or pink, with candy stripes of pink or red. Floriferous and nicely perfumed.

breeders have developed, within the past 40 years, types of roses undreamed of by old-time gardeners. There are three general types—hybrid teas, floribundas, and grandifloras. Hybrid tea roses have the most beautiful individual flowers in all of rosedom, with an almost infinite range of colors, all in the urn shape we have come to expect in roses, and all borne on neatly branching shrubs that are small enough to be planted in variety in even a small garden. Floribundas are most profuse with their flowering. Individual blooms are smaller than the hybrid teas, but borne in huge trusses that keep appearing all summer long. For landscape color, the floribunda roses are unexcelled—they are also extremely hardy and, for the most part, resistant to diseases. Newest rose type, the grandiflora, has flowers of the tea rose persuasion, but borne on taller bushes, with stronger canes, better health, and a generally more robust constitution. Russell Page, noted garden designer, elects two hybrid tea roses as being tops among those introduced in the past 40 years:

Peace. This is probably the best-known rose in existence today. Ideal in form, and with an unparalleled peaches-and-cream coloring, it is resistant to most pests and flowers profusely throughout the growing season.

Tropicana. This coral-orange rose was a real color breakthrough at the time it was introduced, and is still unsurpassed. Extremely vigorous, it seems never to slacken its production of flowers. Another of Mr. Page's favorites is Iceberg, a white, highly perfumed floribunda, which is everblooming and extremely disease resistant. Other gardeners have their favorite floribundas, of which the following is just a small selection:

Betty Prior. Single pink flowers on a 3-foot shrub. Plants of Betty Prior set out when it was first introduced in 1935 are still thriving.

Circus. This has flowers of a distinctive yellow, pink, and red color combination, on a compact bush with healthy, leathery, dark green foliage.

Vogue. Still going strong after a quarter-century, Vogue has a vigorous constitution, glossy leaves, and great clusters of cherry-pink flowers.

The list of grandiflora roses is not a long one, but it includes some of the finest roses we can grow today.

Queen Elizabeth. With flowers of cameo pink, on long, straight stems, this is the rose par excellence for cutting. Hardy, vigorous, and tall-growing, it blooms throughout the growing season.

Comanche. A brilliant shade of orange-red, Comanche produces flowers all summer long on a vigorous, foolproof plant.

Climbing roses are a separate category that includes most of the familiar varieties in a form that makes long, flexible canes. Climbing roses do not actually climb, they sprawl, and need support of some kind to keep them up where the flowers will show to best advantage. Besides climbing Peace and climbing Tropicana, there are a few roses that exist only as climbers. Among the best are:

Blaze. A dazzling scarlet, this climber as though trying to reach the heavens, flowering profusely all the time.

City of York. One of the few white climbers, this has very large flowers on vigorous, hardy canes.

Tree roses are really a fancier's specialty. They consist of a top that may be any kind of rose at all, grafted onto an

A BED OF ROSES

We use the phrase "a bed of roses" to express the ultimate in easeful luxury. The term comes from Roman times, when the tables at ultradulxe banquets were strewn with rose petals, plus a particularly heavy layer on the floor, where over-indulging guests could sleep it off in sweet-scented comfort. Today, a jar or bowl of rose petal potpourri is about as close as we allow ourselves to come to the Roman bed of rose petals, but the substitution is an acceptable one for our more abstemious times. A silver or porcelain bowl on a side table, where guests can sift the scented flower fragments through their fingers, is an irresistible reminder of luxuries past. Helen M. Fox, in her gardener's testament The Years in my Herb Garden (Macmil-lan, paperback), gives instructions for making a potpourri that may be kept in either a closed jar or an open bowl:

1 quart dried rose petals
1 pint dried rose geranium leaves
1 pint dried lavender flowers
1 cup dried rosemary
1 cup dried vetiver root
2 tablespoons each of crushed whole cloves, allspice, and cinnamon
3 tablespoons each of crushed orris root and gum benzoin
20 drops rose oil compound
5 drops heliotrope oil compound

The ingredients should be thoroughly mixed and kept in a tight jar for 2 months, then placed in an open container. Mrs. Fox also likes to add red rose petals, dried to hold their color, and other colored flowers to the mixture when it is put on display. (Copyright ©, The Macmillan Co., 1978) Vetiver is the root of the grass Vetiveria. It may be had from the Caswell-Massey Co., Ltd., 320 West 13th St., New York, N. Y. 10014. This apothecary firm also sells the other ingredients for potpourri by mail order. Its catalogue is $1, from the above address.

New Earth Care nourishes the whole plant with 20 units each of nitrogen, phosphorus and potash. Plus easily absorbed iron and manganese for rich green leaf growth.

Earth Care's balanced 60 unit formula assures a plant's growth and vigor from its topmost leaf to the bottom of its root system.

Nurserymen prefer its soluble formula 2 to 1 for house plants, vegetables and flowers.

upright stem of one of the wild rose species. Usually about 3 feet high—although the stem may be any height—they stand out as accents among the normal-height roses in a formally arranged bed. Since the tall stem is subject to damage from winter winds, tree roses must be given good winter protection. In cold climates, they are usually dug up each fall and buried—lying horizontally—or taken into a root cellar.

When you receive a shipment of bare-root rose plants, try to get them planted as quickly as possible. If they have to wait for more than a few days, make sure they—particularly the roots—do not dry out. Wrapping the whole plant in damp burlap, burying it in sawdust or leaves or just wet newspaper will keep the delicate root and bark tissues from the dehydration that could severely damage the plant.

Be sure to spread the roots out the way they would grow naturally when planting. Sift the soil carefully around and between the roots so that they are all completely buried in a natural position, ready to start growing immediately. If the plants you buy are growing in pots, remove the pots completely as you set the plants in the ground. This gives you a chance to examine the roots, cut off any damaged ones, and spread out and separate any that have become tangled or grown around the inside of the pot.

Make sure the graft—a bulge where the top sprouts out of the root—is covered by about an inch of soil when the planting hole has been refilled and the ground leveled off. Watch out for suckers that may grow out from the root below the grafting point. Follow the stem of the intruder underground and cut it off where it grows out of the root. Use soaker hose or trickle irrigation on your rose beds. Overhead watering not only tends to spatter the flowers and leaves with mud, it encourages mildew by keeping the leaves wet.

Always remember that it is the leaves on a rosebush that manufacture food for the flowers. This means not removing any more leaves than necessary. Prune in the spring, when the buds are just beginning to grow, and cut off only enough to shape the plant or remove dead or severely damaged wood.

Rose hips are the fruit of the rose and hang on a rosebush like small apples. They vary in size from the tiny ones of Rosa Multiflora to plum-size hips of Rosa rugosa (which are considered the best to eat). They should be gathered in autumn, as soon as they turn red.

To prepare rose hips for recipes: Remove blossom ends, stems, and leave after gathering hips. Wash carefully to remove any insect damage. Chill in store in airtight container to prevent loss of vitamin C. Use quickly—they spoil fast. To remove seeds, cut the fruit in half and take out seeds, or make a hole in the top and insert a sharp knife to remove seeds. Always use stainless steel knives. To dry rose hips, wash and clean them first. Remove seeds or leave them in. If the weather is warm and dry, spread out or hang on a screen rack until hips are leathery without moisture left. If weather is cool or humid, dry hips in a dehydrator or by the sulphur method. Dried hips can be bought in organic food stores. As outdoor decoration: String hips, as you would cranberries, and tie to bird feeders. Birds love them!

STEP BY STEP TO A NEW TILED FLOOR
BY DEANNE RAFFEL

Working with colorful self-adhesive vinyl tiles is so easy and quick, you can install a new floor in just a few hours. Discuss the type of floor you want to cover with a flooring salesman. He will tell you if you can work directly over the present surface.

Step 1: Prepare the surface. The floor should be cleaned of grease, wax, dust, and dirt. Holes need to be filled, peeling paint scraped. Old tiles must be tight in place, protruding nails hammered down.

Step 2: Chalk the floor. Measure the length of two opposite walls of the room and drive a nail in at each midpoint on the floor. Stretch and tie a chalk line to the nails, across the floor. Repeat the procedure on the other two sides. The lines will cross in the center. Check to see they intersect at a right angle by using a tile as a square. A slight nail adjustment may be necessary—also a new chalk line (illustration 1).

Step 3: Lay tiles in each quadrant. First place a refuse container on the floor. The backing paper is extremely slippery and should be discarded as it is peeled from each tile. Work in each quadrant from the midpoint where chalk lines intersect. Press the flooring in place. Continue working in a pyramid until each section is filled (illustration 2).

Step 4: To complete border: Lay a dry tile over the last one in a row. Butt a second dry tile to the wall. With a utility knife, score a line on tile 1 where the edge of tile 2 overlaps. Again run the knife over the scored line and bend the tile until it snaps (illustration 3).

Step 5: Use a piece of backing paper to make a pattern for tiles that require irregular cuts. Be sure to turn the pattern over when tracing the outlines on the backing paper of a dry tile. Hold the tile over a light bulb or put in a warm oven for a minute to soften the material and ease cutting of curves with scissors or tin snips.

Step 6: Call in the troops. Immediate traffic will improve adhesion of the backing. Encouraging children to march around the floor will be a big help.

The heat’s off
A new system, Heatminder, for electrically heated houses, provides a switch panel for remote control of temperatures. It can save money wasted in heating unoccupied rooms, upper stories, or wings of houses. With M7-SB thermostats of the system in separate areas or individual rooms to regulate temperatures, the push-button panel can lower temperature settings from one distant location. By manual operation, two setback switches on the panel reduce heat by either 9° F or 18° in any designated area. Connected to a time clock the setback system works automatically. Equipped with 6 or 10 switches and thermostats, prices for the system range from $203 to $308. Mears Controls, Inc., a Cutler-Hammer Co., 13725 S.W. Millikan Way, Beaverton, Ore. 97005.

Home spa

A new showerhead attachment can convert your shower stall or tub into a relaxing steam bath environment. InstaSpa quickly turns hot water into steam mist. It has three parts: a diverter valve to install between any standard ½-in. shower arm and the showerhead; a 3-inch-long flexible metal hose for flowing water; the housing unit and spray nozzle from which the mist emerges. It won’t interfere with normal shower use and requires less than a gallon of hot water per minute—not as much as a shower bath. And it is claimed that no more condensation is created than by a shower. $49. in retail stores. B & M Mfg. Co., P. O. Box 787, Richboro, Pa. 18954.

Well-suited to high gabled flat ceilings without space for insulating above, the panels come in three patterns: A troweled design, Sculptured, and pebbly textured Stonebrooke, are 2-by-foot panels. A stucco style, Sanskrit, in 4-foot-square units. Sandy textured Cobblestone, 4 feet wide and 4, 8, 12 or 16 feet long (room length), is made with a 2-inch Fiberglas backer. The panels, said to absorb 85 percent sound reaching them, can be installed between wood beams or on a metal gusset system. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp., Fiberglas Tower, Toledo, Ohio 43659.
You get juicier, tastier meats in an oven that cooks with fresh air.
The Jenn-Air Convection Oven.

Now an open-fire, open-air taste comes to oven-roasted meats. Meats with a caramel brown coating that traps rich juices inside. Meats that are juicier, tastier, because they're cooked in a whirl of hot, fresh air. Only Jenn-Air gives you the oven that is actually two ovens in one. Just flick a switch and the conventional oven becomes a professional-type convection oven that cooks meats quicker, at lower temperatures.

The Jenn-Air Convection Oven cooks cleaner, too. Smoke and steam are exhausted direct to outdoors. And, in addition to cleaning during regular use, Jenn-Air has an exclusive "ACCELERATED CLEANING" cycle that cleans many times faster.

The self-ventilating Jenn-Air Grill-Range gives you more ways to cook, too. You can grill, griddle, spit-roast, shish-kebab, and deep-fry all on top of the range. For the Jenn-Air dealer nearest you, see the Yellow Pages, call toll free 800-428-1825, or write the Jenn-Air Corporation, 3035 Shadeland Avenue, Indianapolis, Indiana 46226. Also available in Canada.

Georgian and bog-wood furniture; the photographer found primeval oak forests and lanes covered with fuchsia while the writers were very content to sit back, eat well, and listen to stories about leprechauns and fairy gods who fought ancient battles and performed great deeds. Apart from that, the writers kept notes and here are some. (See map, page 98. Letters A, B, C, etc. in the text correspond to letters on the map.)

Quebec City: A Corner of France in North America by Geri Trotta

Quebec City, the only walled town in all North America, rises prettily from the banks of the majestic St. Lawrence River—nearly a mile wide at its narrowest point—in two tiers of lovely old Norman-style houses of indigenous gray stone, enlivened in summer by the rich green of venerable trees, in winter by a white coverlet of snow. At that time, it looks like a little vignette of latter-day France, perfectly preserved in the sort of paperweight one shakes to see snowflakes fall. This enclave is surrounded by a modern city of high-rise hotels and prosperous residential sections.

After just one day of strolling through Quebec City's quiet, shady streets—and this essentially European town is eminently suited to walking—chatting with a few people, many of whom speak English as well as the official French, and especially sitting through the half-hour Diorama ($1.50), a simplified son-et-lumière in the Musée du Fort explaining Quebec's history, I had an inkling of the intense Quebecois sense of tradition.

Making Summer Plans

Nourish your talents in two weeks of Irish life, architecture, gardens

By William P. Rayner

It was in early August that our Aer Lingus flight landed on the great green park they call Ireland. For the next fourteen days, my wife who is a decorator, Fred Eberstadt a photographer, and his wife Isabel a writer, and I would buzz about the southwest section of this park in a small 6-cylinder automobile searching out our interests. Each discipline was to be rewarded. For the decorator there is the rich cache of furnishings and period rooms; for the photographer there was the hard north light which pounces on the colors; and for the writer there was that delight in conversation and cozy chats that makes time only an accounting practice. The decorator found great Palladian architecture, housing magnificent

How to be a Savvy Walker This Summer

One by-product of President Carter's interest in physical fitness is the Kinney Shoe Corporation's public service project called "Walking Tours of America." The only thing that $1 sent to the Kinney Shoe Corporation, Box 5006, New York, N.Y. 10022 doesn't provide is a list of good walking shoes. What you will get by late this spring are 60 pamphlets with maps tracing walks in various cities around the country. These walks take you along the bluffs, on the beach, into the woods, or authority makes a running narration of what you're seeing—a pamphlet fits into a pocket or purse. If you're interested in certain sections of the country say so in your request. For instance, ask for all the pamphlets on Walking the West—16 pamphlets covering 4 states and 14 cities.

RESTAURANTS AND SIGHTS

Right on the waterfront, Place Royale, core of North America’s oldest city founded in 1608 by Samuel de la Champlain, represents the largest aggregate in this hemisphere of original 17th- and 18th-century houses, currently being tastefully restored. And it is restoration in the best possible sense: The houses are being lived in or put to other good use. One of the town’s excellent French restaurants, La Traite Du Roy, whose specialty is Gaspe salmon during its June season and beef Wellington year-round, occupies such a building with a downstairs disco called Meeting, with folksy armchairs ringing the dance floor. In Quebec, even discos tend to be cozy. That also applies to the disco back-to-back with L’Eperlan (The Smelt), a split-level restaurant (run by Hilton in another old house) that makes the most of the first-rate local seafood. Maison des Vins, an authentic old wine cave has become an intriguing wine shop selling an assortment of vintages not usually available. Then, behind its similar gray-stone façade, Brasserie de Mon Oncle Antoine is a simple, naked-brick room with wooden-tenet tops where people gather from mid-morning to early morning to drink Brador (Golden Arm) beer, peculiar to Quebec and fortified with more alcohol than the law allows elsewhere. Further on, a red-roofed 17th-century house is owned by a family who live upstairs and operate Aux Anciens Canadiens, a restaurant on the street floor. They serve hearty Quebecois standbys such as thick soup of whole yellow peas, tourtiere (hot pork-pie), country plates of grilled salt pork, and, for dessert, tarte au sucre du pays (home-made bread smothered in heavy maple syrup and fresh cream). To finish, there’s a blueberry wine, typical of Lac St. Jean, sweet as liqueur, concocted up north with the bumper berry crop.

WHERE TO STAY
Symbol of the old city, Chateau Frontenac, erected in 1892, its steep green-cop- per roof rusted with fairy-tale turrets and towers, dominates the high ground, Cap Diamant, overlooking the river. For all its age, it’s still a luxury hotel (with single rooms from about $31 and doubles from about $39, European plan) recently renovated to provide air conditioning in most guest rooms and a base- ment labyrinth of pubs and shops selling everything from boutique clothes to freshly baked bread. On the ground floor, a mellowed circular bar, all wood and leather, faces the St. Lawrence River and its opposite bank with the town of Levis, which is reached by ferry. From the Chateau a path leads to a skating rink and Promenade des Gouverneurs, a boardwalk rimming the cliff ending at the Citadel, now one of the city’s museums.

THE NEW TOWN
Also on high ground but set farther back from the river, beyond Place du Car- naval, famed for its winter ice castle and snow sculptures, the new town makes a handsome addition with Canadian sky- scrapers including three modern hotels: The Quebec Hilton with its fine rooftop restaurant, Auberge Des Gouverneurs with an ingeniously taper-lit cavernlike lobby, and Loew’s Le Concorde crowned by a revolving restaurant that combines an ingeniously taper-lit cavernlike lobby, and Loew’s La Concorde crowned by a revolving restaurant that combines Alabama has it all.

Imagine yourself strolling through Middleton Gardens in Charleston, S.C., or Longue Vue Gardens outside New Orleans, surrounded by hundreds of thousands of multi-hued azaleas, camellias and dogwoods. Perhaps you’re taking romantic candlelight tours of Natchez, Colonial Williamsburg or Savannah. Or maybe you’re in New Orleans’s French Market, tantalized by the aroma of thick black coffee and warm French-style doughnuts called beignets.

Of course, if you’re a sportsman, you might be combining the historic with the outdoorsy, fishing the Florida Keys or South Carolina’s Grand Strand, and playing golf and tennis at such distinguished resorts as Pinehurst and Sapphire Valley in North Carolina, the Grand Hotel at Point Clear, Alabama, or The Cloister at Sea Island, Georgia.

Stroll leisurely through a maze of English and Spanish gardens... radiant with roses, dogwoods, azaleas and camellias

Whatever your dream of a springtime vacation, the South has the answer and some welcome surprises.

Many people don’t realize, for example, that the Alabama Space and Rocket Center at Huntsville is the world’s largest space museum. The Center is a “Please Touch” place, where visitors may explore the world of the astronauts, fire a rocket engine, and touch the Apollo 16 moonship. During 1978, America’s newest space craft, the space shuttle Enterprise, will be on display.

Huntsville and the Space Center are an exciting introduction to Alabama, a state that gave the world Helen Keller and W. C. Fields (their childhood homes are open to the public), and whose Gulf Coast is noted for clean white beaches. The Grand Hotel, on the Gulf at Point Clear, is one of America’s most notable resorts. The hotel’s three golf courses skirt the blue waters of Mobile Bay, where guests may swim, fish, water ski, or sail. Mobile, only 20 miles away, is an exciting city in its own right. Its attractions include antebellum homes, the USS Alabama, world-famed Bellingrath Gardens, a pari-mutuel dog track and miles of scenic beauty along the famed Azalea Trail.

Like its Southern sisters, Mississippi beckons you back into the romantic days of the Old South. Although great columned mansions may be seen throughout the state, its proud heritage seems to be summed up in Natchez. This venerable Mississippi River city takes enormous pride in its annual Spring Pilgrimage, during which 30 of the most gracious old homes are open to the public. Similar pilgrimages are held in cities and towns throughout the state.

Like its Southern sisters, Mississippi has an exciting present as well as a proud past. The Gulf Coast boasts more than a dozen excellent golf courses, 100 tennis courts for day and night play, and beautiful stretches of white sand beach. The seafood is superb!

Diamondhead, on the Gulf Coast’s highest promontory, is the answer for those who can’t tear themselves away. Homes and condominiums are spaced among the oaks, pines and tropical palms. Resort-like amenities for home...

South Carolina’s Great Vacation No.17
The Sea Islands

We have 17 Sea Islands where you can find beaches, sun-drenched resorts, catamaran sailing and horseback riding. Or solitude.

The Sea Islands. Where vacationers, golfers and tennis players have found a mecca. Rare wildlife and waterfowl are here, too. In resort communities designed not to intrude on nature, but to complement it.

And there’s still room, here among the dunes and marshes and moss-draped oaks, for the solitary beachcomber. A walk on the shore yields marvelous treasures. Shells, driftwood, a silent communion with the sea. Give yourself an island—a South Carolina Sea Island. Whether you come to play, to feast on native shrimp and oysters, or to be alone, you’ll leave happy. And you’ll come back.

You helped him make it.
Now help him enjoy it.

As retirement approaches, you realize your husband is a success. He’s reached the ladder of achievement and arrived . . . and you’ve been with him step of the way. From the brash young days till now, you’ve shared the times in joy — and during the dark moments you’ve given him the encouragement he needed to make it all worthwhile. It’s your success too.
Now the times of struggle have given way to the security of status, and he needs your help in making the next step . . . to phase out the bustle of the workaday world and learn to enjoy the leisure he’s so many years earning.

Ordinary retirement won’t do for a man like yours. Accustomed to taking the reins, he needs an environment where pursuit of pleasure can be as a challenge as pursuit of fortune has always been.

Sugarmill Woods, in the heart of a different Florida, is the kind of place he can prosper at leisure. And you can help him get there, with your gentle leadership.

COMING TO THE GULF COAST FOR GRAND HOTEL TIMES ANY TIME OF YEAR.

Louisiana Downs. The nightlife in Bossier is very nearly as lively as in the French Quarter. For an exciting perspective, go to the top of the 34-story State Capitol in Baton Rouge and watch Old Man River sweep past the glowing refineries on his way to the Gulf. Louisiana's fishing grounds are plentifully stocked, and it's hard to come home from the Gulf, the mystery shrouded bayous, or the many lacs and rivers without an impressive catch.

It's little wonder that Arkansas has become a favored destination for outdoor enthusiasts. The rugged Ozark and Ouachita Mountains are blessed with thousands of lakes, streams and white-water rivers. In early spring, the first hardy rafters set off down the roller-coaster rapids of the Buffalo River. Back-packers are already climbing the trails through pristine forests. At the Ozark Folk Center near Mountain View, visitors may watch craftsmen demonstrate the skills of pioneer craftsmen, and at night sit enthralled as frontier tunes are plucked on the dulcimer, fiddle, guitar and banjo.

Hot Springs, in west-central Arkansas, owes its fame and name to 47 thermal springs that pump therapeutic waters into the many bathhouses. For the physically rejuvenated, spring is the start of racing season at the Hot Springs track. The Old State Capitol in Little Rock is one of the south's most superb classical structures.

Springtime in Kentucky means the sweet smell of the bluegrass and the excitement of the Derby. Several of the major horse farms near Lexington are open to the public. Kentucky boasts one of the nation's most outstanding state park systems. And whether your choice is the Cumberland Mountains and Daniel Boone Country, or the western lakes region, you'll find comfortable lodges...
Virginia invites you to visit the most beautiful homes in America's history.

An inside look at the homes where America grew up is just part of the excitement as Virginia welcomes you with open arms and doors and garden gates. And presidential masterpieces like Mount Vernon, Monticello and John Tyler's Sherwood Forest are just the beginning of a beautiful journey into the past.

You can explore America's great indoors along the James River as it flows back to the golden age of the plantation in room after room filled with antiques and memories. At Carter's Grove, "the most beautiful house in America." At Berkeley, where settlers celebrated the first Thanksgiving in 1619. And at Shirley, home of the Hill-Carter family for three centuries and nine generations.

You can visit the oldest brick house in English America, which Adam Thoroughgood built near Norfolk more than 350 years ago. Or you can travel north along the Potomac to Stratford Hall, home of the Lees, and on to George Mason's Gunston Hall.

But wherever you go, from Patrick Henry's Red Hill to the Fredericksburg home of Washington's only sister, give yourself time.

Time for winding garden paths, misty mountains and miles of golden beaches. Time for roadside shops, lush green eighteens, and feasts of ham and peanut soup. Time to savor whatever you love. Because, from Jamestown to Yorktown to Appomattox, whatever you love is here.

Virginia is for lovers.

Maryland

Palatial mansions recall romance of the Old South

Baltimore, the bustling port of Maryland, is a modern, sophisticated city—the birthplace of our national anthem. Annapolis, the state capital and home of the U.S. Naval Academy, is internationally renowned as a yachting center. The state's third largest city, Hagerstown, located in Western Maryland is a modern, sophisticated city. Small towns and country roads, all easily accessible from major highways and railroads, make the trip to Virginian routes. Along the Atlantic coast lies Maryland's eastern shore, the land of Southern hospitality. The weather's tailor-made for vacationers the year round. The weather's tailor-made for vacationers the year round. Washington, D.C., one of the world's most beautiful and best-managed cities, is readily accessible from major highways and railroads throughout the year. The weather's tailor-made for vacationers the year round.

Kentucky gave the world Abraham Lincoln and Jefferson Davis, and monuments honoring the rival Civil War presidents are near each other in western Kentucky. Old Fort Harrod State Park near Harrodsburg, and the reconstructed village of Shakertown at Pleasant Hill, will carry you back even further to Kentucky's pioneer beginnings. Pages and plays commemorating the state's colorful past are held in many locales. At Louisville, the old sternwheeler Belle of Louisville takes guests on nostalgic trips down the Ohio River. The famed Delta Queen another page straight from Mark Twain travels from Cincinnati all the way down the Ohio and Mississippi to New Orleans. Guests relax in old fashioned comfort as they enjoy the thrills of the river. The great sweep of the river takes them through America's riverboating past.

The weather's tailor-made for vacationers the year round.

Along the Atlantic coast lies Maryland, where Southern hospitality begins. Often referred to as "America in Miniature," Maryland is a state rich in history and charm, and is a place to go to sample Southern cuisine, enjoy spectacular beaches, shops, and museums. Luxurious resorts offer all the amenities to family vacationers.

Jefferson, Lee and Grant. The names are a litany of American heritage. And no better introduction than Colonial Williamsburg, the lovingly restored colonial capital, where you can almost hear the ghostly voice of Patrick Henry crying for liberty in the House of Burgesses. The tempo of the time is preserved by skilled craftsmen forging horseshoes, saving cloth, and dipping candles just our forefathers did. Williamsburg has a number of very modern and charming accommodations, and a number of packages are available for spring visitors which combine hotels with guided tours.

For a scenic drive that will be long remembered, get on the Skyline Drive at Mont Royal, Virginia, and continue onto the Blue Ridge Parkway into North Carolina. From this splendid balcony that follows the spine of the Southern Appalachians, you'll gaze awestruck across valleys abloom with rhododendron, dogwood and wildflowers of many hues.

Shopping Around features a special section on unique gifts and treasures from the South...see pages 198-201

North Carolina bills itself as the "Three-In-One" state, since its western mountains, central Piedmont and Atlantic coast are three distinctive vacation areas. The blue-green mountains-sequester some of the nation's best run resorts. The village of Cashiers has two. Sapphire Valley, centerpiece by white shingled Airfield Inn built in 1896, has golf, tennis, swimming and miles of hiking trails. Nearby High Hampton Country Club draws golfers (and loafers) from near and far. The rustic lodge is the center for social events, from bridge to afternoon tea. Fontana Village, set against a magnificent mountain backdrop, offers tennis, horseback riding and other outdoor activities in the uncommonly fresh air.

Asheville, the hub of western North Carolina, is a friendly city with numerous attractions. One of the most popular is the boyhood home of the novelist Thomas Wolfe. The city has first class accommodations and restaurants, as well as saultful golf courses and tennis courts.

South Carolina

Sand dunes and sea oats frame uncluttered beaches

Fripp Island, down the coast near Beaufort, is for those who want to get away from everything except golf, tennis, sailing and complete relaxation. Fripp has beautiful homesites for sale, and deluxe villas for vacation rental.

South Carolina has mountains, too, and its well-run state park system maintains modern rental cabins in many of the most scenic areas. The Chattooga River of "Deliverance" fame rises in South Carolina and rips headlong down the mountainous border with Georgia. Trips on the whitewater river, with an experienced guide, are available.

Whatever your dream of a springtime vacation, the South has the answer and some welcome surprises

Befitting the region's largest state, Georgia has a stunning variety of scenery. Its northerly Blue Ridge Mountains give way to a central plateau, and finally the sunny coastal islands. Bustling Atlanta is the South's largest city, with smart shops, skyscrapers, nightlife and major league sports. Stone Mountain Park, east of Atlanta, gets its name from the world's largest outcropping of granite (683-feet high), bearing the images of three Confederate heroes. The park also offers visitors a Swiss skylift, an authentic Southern plantation, picnic areas and many other attractions.

Downtown Savannah is a beautifully restored district of flowered parks, fountains, graceful 18th and 19th century townhouses and public buildings. Savannah's restaurants are noted for their seafood delicacies.

Further down the coast, the Golden Isles of St. Simons, Jekyll, and Sea Island are a trio of uncluttered year-round resorts. Spring is the ideal time for golf, and courses are plentiful. At the renowned Cloister Hotel on Sea Island... guests are accommodated in the Spanish-tyle main hotel, or secluded beach houses and cottages. A dance band plays lightly, and on moonlit nights guests go by minitrain to a plantation supper by the sea. The Cloister has 36 religiously maintained holes of golf and 18 tennis courts.

Tennessee is another astonishing, varied state. Memphis, on the Mississip-i, holds its annual Cotton Carnival, a week of festivities, every May. Nashville, of course, is Music City, and thousands annually visit Opryland USA, a rollicking musically-themed park that the Grand Old Opry calls home. Gatlinburg, a eastern Tennessee, is the gateway to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. Chickamauga National Military Park outside Chattanooga is a memorial to thousands of Union and Confederate soldiers who died in one of the Civil War’s bloodiest engagements.

There are many Floridas, but one of the most fascinating is the meandering ribbon of islands called the Keys, which culminate in intriguing old Key West, our southernmost city. The weather’s tailor-made for vacationers the year round. The fishing grounds are among the most productive in the world, literally teeming with pompano, blues, swords, mackerel and sails. The clear waters off the Keys have made this a popular destination for scuba enthusiasts.

Visitors to Key West should consider pampering themselves on a Caribbean cruise, or enjoying the excitement of a Windjammer Cruise, before heading north again. Eastern Steamship Lines offers three and four night cruises from Miami to the Bahamas for very affordable rates, which include sumptuous

GIVE YOURSELF A LIFT WITH color and nature

What's a fresh way to use color?

In a floating wall, between the living and dining areas of a room, paint the wall soft, yummy, ice-cream colors, peach, pricot, lemon, lime, raspberry, vanilla.

red color, any color, to a room, and the room wakes up. When that color is alive—a glorious tree, a basket of vibrant cyclamen—the space does more than wake up, it springs to life. In this issue, we offer color ideas from art, tradition, and above all from nature, the richest, simplest, and most rewarding source. Look around and see what plants, what flowers, what colors touch your emotions. Respond. Bring them into your rooms and enjoy what they do for your spirits. Below, 18 interior designers and architects give you some ideas to get you started.

What's the most effective way to use plants and trees?

“One large tree in a room is far more important than five little ones, just as one large painting is better than small ones. A tree should be out in the room, so you can sit under it.” Billy Gaylord, interior designer.

“Have indoor windowboxes made to fit the sills, then fill with pebbles and load with plants and flowers. They make a year-round flower garden.” Richard Neas, interior designer.

“Stretch a small space with a tall tree that goes all the way to the ceiling.” Juan Montoya, interior designer.

“Create a canopy of green, growing plants over a dining table.” John Saladino, interior designer.

“Use white flowers, narcissus, azalea, poinsettia, gardenias, to give punctuation in a room full of color. They act like an eye rinse.” Robert Denning, Denning & Fourcade, interior designers.

“See plant material for its sculptural potential. Ivy on a mound of earth, deep green foliage against a concrete wall. Landscape is the design of the building. Take money out of the building budget and put it into the landscape.” William Morgan, architect.

“Block out a bad view with lots of plants and trees in front of a window. They add softness and interest. Or you can hang plants instead of shades for privacy.” Noel Jeffrey, interior designer.

“Trees should emphasize the style of a room—in a modern room use cactus or ponytail, or a very bare ficus with leaves just at the top. A sculptural tree for a sculptural room. In a latticed room, you can choose a leaffier plant, maybe a ming tree.” Michael de Santis, interior designer.

“Lavender and purple flowering plants or cut flowers go happily in a space where you wouldn’t think of putting lavender pillows.” Bebe Winkler, interior designer.

“Fields of pachysandra and myrtle radiating from the base of a house in all directions give rich green ground cover throughout the year with no maintenance.” Myron Goldfinger, architect.
Suddenly there’s a new way to decorate with a green thumb.

Tree

When you bring in the green—bring it in big—with a noble tree, an exotic tree, a tree with charisma. Starting here, inspiring ways to use trees like art and sculpture, to give your rooms presence as well as style. Branch out. When you see what we mean, you’ll give tree cheers for decorating.
When you bring a tree indoors, you're bringing color, freshness, a whole new outlook for your rooms. "When you choose a tree," says horticulturist Renny Reynolds, right, who selected the trees here and on the following pages, "consider the needs of the tree and the needs of the room. If you fulfill both, the room will be enhanced and the tree will thrive." Starting here, ways you can decorate with trees.

Above: A flowering oleander softly rounding out a corner and contributing color besides. Opposite page, left: A 25-year-old ponytail—a work of art second to none, courtesy of mother nature. See it again, page 128.
There's no mistaking the Oriental influence. Everything in this room—18th-century Japanese screen, low-lying wood and brass tables, Chinese writing table and rug, Chinese cauldron-turned-planter, porcelain deer—contributes to the mildly exotic mood. Even the bamboo tree—"the quintessential Oriental tree," says Renny Reynolds—adds to the atmosphere and filters a lovely light through its mass of tiny leaves. The room's colors were inspired by the screen: gold for the walls' soft sunset wash and the linen used for the sofa and Venetian shades; green for stripes in the Turkish carpeting that covers the ottoman and armchairs.

Let the tree accentuate the look—here, bamboo with Oriental BAMBOO (Bambusa), native to Asia. Likes bright light, moist roots, and gentle breezes. Not too fussy about humidity and won't outgrow its container for years. Feed this and all trees on the following pages with water-soluble fertilizers in spring and summer.

Imagine this room without the trees. It would still have the natural appeal of pale colors, rustic textures, and informal furniture covered in nubby-textured fabrics. But see how the trees turn it into a landscape of nature against a city skyline. "Trees can enhance everything in a room," says Renny Reynolds, who proves his point in this room designed by Merrill Scott for William Silverstein, with a ponytail and two leafy oleanders: While the strict form of the ponytail stands like sculpture in the L-shaped room, free-form oleanders soften long expanse of windows. Stark carpet.
OLEANDER (Nerium Oleander), a slender-leaved shrub, native to the Mediterranean. Loves a sunny spot and moist soil. Will flower throughout the year. Poisonous if eaten. PONYTAIL (Beaucarnea recurvata) grows wild in Mexico, likes sun. Allow to dry between waterings.

"In a roomful of naturals, exotic and flowering trees are like sculpture and art."
Decorating with a green thumb
In a sparsely furnished room a tree is a major force

FIDDLE-LEAF FIG (Ficus lyrata), has bold leathery leaves, is native to tropical Africa. Mature tree easy to care for with indirect light, moist soil.

Take a strong, simple room, add a tree, and suddenly you've created serenity with a sense of drama. In his living room, designer Albert Hadley wanted a feeling of space: He kept furniture to a minimum, and covered it all in neutral-striped linen that disappears into walls papered in thin off-white stripes; windows are curtainless, the floor and walls bare. Mirror covers the recessed baseboard and cornice moldings, and the ceiling gleams with sky-blue vinyl. Into this ethereal setting, Renny Reynolds brought a fig tree—"Its strong masculine character, backlit here, has the power of a piece of sculpture."
Decorating with a green thumb
MINGARALIA (Polyscias fruticosa), native to Asia and Polynesia. Likes sun and moisture. May be pruned to enhance its naturally exotic form.
Decorating with a green thumb

HIBISCUS (Hibiscus Rosa-sinensis) is native to China. Rare spiny CHINESE BOX ORANGE (Severinia buxifolia) is 25-years old. Both need sunshine and moisture.

If you really love trees, look what can happen: "My whole apartment was designed around trees," says Renny Reynolds, whose living room alone has, from left, a Ming tree, a hibiscus, a young flowering maple, and an unusual Chinese box tree. Designers Bob Patino and Vincente Wolf mirrored three walls to fill the room with the illusion of even more trees and then painted the rest of the room a pale flesh color—"a great backdrop for people and plants," according to Mr. Reynolds. Movable furniture by Cy Mann can accommodate tree changes. Stark carpet.

In Mr. Reynolds's bedroom there's a banana tree behind the bed, a variety of plants on its right, and on its left a ponytail and a philodendron in a lacquered basket. To make room for all the trees near the window, the bed was placed on a diagonal. Sisal carpeting, from which the inevitable soil and water spills are easily cleaned, extends to cover bed platform. Shopping information, page 217.

BAHANA (Musa) won't provide fruit indoors but makes a fast-growing canopy if given bright light—full sun in winter—and lots of water. Use humidifier or frequent misting to duplicate its native East African and Asian homeland.
A trio of trees can add a whole new dimension to a contemporary room. "I wanted the tree statement to be simple and straightforward but, at the same time, to add softness and character," says Mr. Reynolds, who used two Mings and a palm to underscore the sleek lines of this room designed by Michael de Santis. The palm's leaves and their shadows draw attention to the painting above the sofa; the light green of the Mings' leaves contrast with the dark green lacquered table and the sofa's leather. In addition, their round full forms soften the bold shape of the window rimmed with stainless steel and fitted with bronze plexiglass vertical blinds. The three trees also work together: By arranging them in a triangle, Mr. Reynolds created an architectural element, subtle but deliberate, in a room full of squares. In the background on these two pages, a pleomele tree (P. reflexa).
Just what you need to liven up your winter decorating: more than a hundred good ideas with paint, paper, fabrics, furniture, plants, and mirror—all quick, inexpensive, and simple to do yourself.

PATTERN WITH PAINT
- If you love the look of a monochrome wall but crave a little variety, try painting vertical bands of one color, alternating flat and glossy finishes. Or, for a small room, you might paint a horizontal belt of a color one shade darker or lighter than the room.
- Patterns with paint include:
  - For roll-on wall pattern, meet the new roller with a raised soft-rubber pattern. Comes with floral, woodgrain, and marble-like reliefs.
  - For a catalogue, write to Designer Paint Supply Company, P.O. Box 757, Silver Spring, Md.

A LITTLE COLOR THAT GOES A LONG WAY
- In a white room, paint or paper the inside of a niche. You can have a solid jewel color, a big romantic floral, or maybe even trompe l'oeil clouds.
- Try lining the insides of kitchen cabinets and doors with color or pattern—a flash of color in a serene exterior.
- You've just rented an apartment, and everything's perfect—except the color of the bathroom tile. Are you stuck with it? Not necessarily. Two good tub and tile paints are Nu-Tile Epoxy Spray Enamel (15 colors) and Klenk's Epoxy Enamel Tub and Tile Finish (6 colors). Both are easy to use, dry overnight, and give a tough, glossy finish.
- Bands of paint can stand in for moldings around doorways and windows, unadorned fireplace openings, and archways. To make a straight stripe, use masking tape.
- Or, if you prefer fabric and paper to paint, frame everything with one striking wall-paper border or a crude-looking natural hemp gimp.
- If your hall is white, paint the doors something else—sky blue, maybe, or chocolate.

Do it with Durries—Those good-looking, sturdy, lightweight, hand-woven rugs from India make striking upholstery, bedspreads, and pillow covers. Or, for a terrific floor show, sew a few together to make one knockout of a rug. You can get a durrie for as little as $20 for a 3½-by-6-foot rug.

TIE IT, YOU’LL LIKE IT
Pale quilted cushions tied on dark chair seats and backs for a fresh, summery look.

WINDOW TREATS
- Something new to do with bamboo and matchstick blinds: Stencil border of leaves and flowers.
- Try clear acrylic rods as curtain poles: You can get them at a plastic supply house, cement ball finials on the ends.
- Give window shades a fresh outlook by adding gros-grain ribbon.
- If you like the light control of old-fashioned Venetian blinds, but wish they weren't so old-fashioned, consider replacing them with newer, narrower blinds in a bold color. Levolor Lorentzen makes its Riviera blinds in 60 colors and about a dozen patterns.
- A trio of tiebacks, all made with ribbon: Twist two colors into a spiral braid three, or stitch a narrow ribbon onto a wider one.
- New no-sew window idea: Swag on long piece of fabric over brackets, hooks, or tieback rosettes at the upper corners of the window frame. You'll need a length of fabric equal to twice window heights, one width, plus an extra yard. Idea from Harry Schule and Ned Marshall.
LIGHT UP YOUR TABLE WITH A DO-IT-YOURSELF STRIP CANDLEHOLDER. DRILL CANDLE-SIZE HOLES AT 4-INCH INTERVALS ALONG A 1-BY-4-INCH BOARD. YOU COULD HAVE A STRIPE OF LIGHT DOWN THE CENTER OF A LONG TABLE, OR A SQUARE OR OCTAGON IN THE CENTER OF A SMALLER ONE.

- If you like to use sheets as party tablecloths, wait ‘til you see some of the new bold colors. From Cannon, for instance, there’s Chocolate, Birch Grey, Bright Pink, Hyacinth Blue, Burgundy, Bright Lime, Turquoise, Gold, and Lipstick. All have white trim, so you can make tailored napkins from the remnants.

- Here’s a find for change-your-mind placemats: Clear plastic foam-backed envelopes into which you slide fabric, wallpaper, wrapping paper. Cases are less than $3 at paint, hardware, and department stores.

KEEP IT IN SUSPENSE

- Instead of pegboard, wood strips—painted, papered, stained to blend right into your room. Hung vertically or horizontally (with screws) and studded with screw-in hooks, they hold long neat rows of utensils. In corners, use triangular shelves on corner brackets for plants or cleaning equipment.

- Use baskets for bread or fruit—and when they’re not in use, hang them on the wall: They’re easy-to-care-for, look terrific, and are right there when you need them.

- Never waste a kitchen beam. Hang plants or pots from the ceiling.

FURNITURE ON WHEELS

Even a 6-foot-high bookcase can make life easier when you make it mobile. And so can chairs and ottomans, file cabinets, parsons tables, tall chests of drawers. You can add casters (chair legs may need shortening), or buy furniture ready to roll.

One-track storage: Run a book box (two 10-inch shelves 10 inches apart) around the walls about 2 feet off the floor. Idea by John Saladino.

Recycled storage: Scour flea markets and junk shops for old soda crates, milk crates, spool cabinets, post-office pigeonholes, and dentist, doctor, or lawyer’s cabinets. Paint or stain them and use as files or spice racks.

PLAN FOR PLANTS

Some tips from the new House & Garden book, Decorating with Plants (Pantheon, May, 1978)

If you’re building or remodeling, discuss plants with your architect, contractor, and decorator. Installing ceiling lights or power and water outlets is easier, earlier.

A simple dining cart laden with small plants can give you a garden on wheels, handy for rolling to light sources.

Pebbles in a watertight tray under a pot are a good way to boost humidity in a sunny area or in any house where watering must be a weekend matter. A canister lid or pizza pan makes a simple and practical plant tray.

Catch the sun—every way you can. If a room is dark, paint it white. Keep windows sparkling clean.

Wash off plant leaves so city grime or country dust can’t screen out light. Use mirrors or aluminized plastic mirrors to bounce light from walls to plants.

Small plants look best and do better if grouped together. As each adds moisture to the air, they raise each other’s humidity level.

Seal the bottom of clay pots with clear nail polish to be sure they’re moisture-proof.

The secret of compact full-flowering begonias and geraniums is to pinch-pinching旺季 without remorse, to make each growing tip produce not one but many flowers.

Living in a garden

How a passion for flowers and plants can inspire decorating all through the house
About half a century old, five rooms long, and one room wide, this little house was found a few years ago, dozing like the Sleeping Beauty in a Connecticut forest. Today, the Beauty has been awakened — with the kiss of hard work — to year-round springtime.

Capturing springtime is a matter of interior bloom. Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Doyle, who live in this summer-winter garden, asked their decorator, J. Peter Heerin, to give them every flower color that exists between April and autumn. In summer, the windows — uncurtained except in the bedroom — wrap house in green. In winter, they have a Christmas-card view of birds in the snow. To insure green all year, a porch was glassed in to become a greenhouse visible from living and dining rooms.

If there is such a thing, the Doyles’ house is an ingoing-outgoer. The outdoors comes in, the interior goes out—plants grow on both sides of the bathroom walls, the bedroom is colored like a flower. Nature’s and man’s two worlds are mortised with strategy, love, and wit.

Pink must be one of nature’s favorite colors, and it certainly is one of Mrs. Doyle’s. The master bedroom is a glory of pinks: Walls, bedcover, and curtains are of matching pink and white paper and fabric. Their plaid accents are intensified by white woodwork, a white shag rug, and a white-lacquered wicker chair. Pink roses and tulips, narcissi and lilies bloom in a Japanese rock garden outside. In the bathroom, an English tub was already in the house; the Doyles added plants to make the room a greenhouse. Interior design, J. Peter Heerin; landscape design, Melisande Congdon-Doyle.

Right: Master bath. When plants need soaking they go right into the cedar-cased tub.

You can outline an iris or give rise to a rose with raised zigzag stitching on appliquéd pillows. "Each pillow is a picture," says designer Tricia Guild, who fashions them from cutouts of her own fabric designs and stitches them up with a zigzag sewing machine. "Machine work is now accepted as an art," she says, and her glorious pillows prove the point. Her fabric, sold in Europe at her seven Designers Guild shops, is available in the United States through Brunschwig. All it takes to make your own stitch-textured pillow is to layer fabric cutouts in a pleasing arrangement and sew them together. Highlight designs with machine embroidery around and inside the appliquéd pieces, using a closely spaced zigzag stitch and contrasting threads. For complete pillow-making instructions, please turn to page 80. For shopping information, see page 217. (See Tricia Guild's own house, "The Lively Romantic," House & Garden, November 1977.)
You can zigzag a bouquet of easy appliqued pillows and fill your decorating with home-sewn romance.
A rush of roses

Even if you garden only on weekends, you can grow glorious roses—and more of them—in ways you never thought of.

How can ordinary rosebushes grow 9-foot canes covered with blooms? What kind of magic makes climbing roses romp over walls, tree trunks, rocks? Artist Peter Hewitt is the wizard of roses who created a romantic corner of his native England in Connecticut. One of his secrets: To bend rose canes out from the base, tie them horizontally to 3-foot stakes. “New stems shoot up, because the plants want to grow skyward. The more horizontally they grow, the more flowers.” Weekends, in spring and summer, he waters, feeds, and sprays in two steps. He gives each rose 2 gallons of water, with 2 teaspoons food (Miracle Grow). He sprays with a mixture of 2 gallons water, 2 tablespoons fungicide (Phaltan), 2 teaspoons insecticide (Sevin), plus an extra teaspoon of food for the leaves. He prunes only in spring to remove winter-kill, and when he snips bouquets for city friends, he cuts just above a 5-part leaf to encourage new growth. More on roses, page 84.

1. “New Dawn” roses clamber to roof and around windows. Snap-in mullions in standard windows made builder’s house an English cottage.

Doctors speak out on self-improvement and self-help books, and help you decide what's right for you

By Caroline Seebohm
Is self-improvement really good for you?

Bought together six experts, with special interest in this field, to speak out about the need for self-improvement, whether justified in terms of self-help books and whether working at self-improvement can really help you lead a happier, fuller life.

Dr. Herbert Holt

Dr. Holt is a psychiatrist in private practice in New York City. He is also Dean of the Western Institute for Counseling and therapy in Rye, N.Y., and a Fellow of the American Academy of Psychoanalysis. Dr. Holt is the author of Free to be Good Men (Evans), which he subtitled, "An Anti-Self-Improvement Book.")

"Self-improvement is based on a delusion. The delusion essentially is that people are perfect. Once you believe that you should be perfect, you naturally value men and women from the point of view of pure perfection, not how they really are. It is an illusion, as well as a delusion, reinforced by Hollywood, by titles, and books, in which everyone links that he or she has godlike qualities, and when people look at a woman they compare her with an ideal instead of comparing her with other women in existence, thus giving false comparisons.

"For example, an elderly lady I know as invited to a dance by a friend. She, as raised children, written many books, and a distinguished psychiatrist. She has only one problem—arthritis—and, as always wearing special shoes to the dance. At the dance, as she sat with her friend, a woman colleague came along, who was very elegant, with a wonderful figure, who danced divinely. This colleague asked her friend to dance. She watched them swirling around and became very sad as she compared herself to this younger attractive colleague. Then it hit her: Why should I compare my bad features with her good ones? Why don't I improve the fact that I have raised children who are doing well in life, that we written books, and have a distinguished career, whereas this lady can claim none of these things? So let's compare my achievements with hers. And then the moment on she felt better. And then the friend came back, he said to her, 'You know, I only danced with her because she was your friend.'

"There are many cultural, economic and social reasons why people have the illusion that they must improve themselves. In America, you find women look-
"When you shock a contemporary room with bold color, you give it a special vitality"

Any room that’s large enough to hold a 20-by-40-foot swimming pool with space to spare for living and entertaining requires special treatment. “It needs a lot of color to liven it up and give it warmth,” says Charles Merrill, who, with his wife, Evangeline, spiced up the room’s original blue, white, and yellow with a whole palette of primary colors: green for the walls, yellow for the curtains, valance, and one sofa; royal blue and red for the others. “The colors give the room energy,” says Mr. Merrill. The pool made blue by underwater lights is the same color as the indoor/outdoor carpeting that surrounds it. Indirect fluorescent lighting recessed under the ceiling gives the whole room an even, shadowless glow.

"Used abundantly, red is the warmest, most flattering color there is."

Walking into this room is like walking into a time machine: It takes you right back to the 19th century, to a time when decorating was plush and full of creature comforts. "I love Victorian decorating," says Françoise de la Renta, who adopted the style for her own living room. "It makes everyone feel and look wonderful." While the de la Rentas were gathering all the velvets and taffetas, the small tufted chairs and stools, the Orientaliste paintings, and all the needlepoint and silk damask pillows, their living room was an ivory colored background for a mother-of-pearl secretary, wicker made in Santo Domingo. As soon as they found the lush green and red carpeting on a trip to Paris, the de la Rentas began some serious decorating. The walls above the chair rails were covered with flocked red velvet; the walls below and the window and cornice moldings were marbelized in gradations of green. Into this luxurious background they brought their collection of small-scale furniture — "you can move everything around as you please," says Françoise de la Renta. It's all covered in voluptuous fabrics in rich colors. With lighting mostly from picture lights, firelight, and candlelight, the room is "romantic and comfortable even when there's just the two of us."

When you move into an apartment in a just-finished modern building and are faced with coloring a room from top to bottom, it's not always a simple matter of picking your favorite color and using it everywhere. "I've always wanted a red room," says theatrical producer Frank Milton. "But, at the last minute, I decided against doing the living room red because, for me, it's too intense a color to live with all the time. Maybe if I had a guest room or a den..." With the help of designer Richard Hare, Mr. Milton settled on blue, a soft, flattering color that enhances all the antiques he's collected over the years. First the cement floor was covered with a handsome wood parquet stained dark to absorb light, and the structural beam was mirrored to blend into the wallful of floor-to-ceiling glass. The chimney breast with its Louis XVI mantel was added for focus and architectural interest—"I wanted to draw attention away from the windows and into the room itself," says Mr. Hare. A carved wood cornice trims the walls, all covered with striated linen velvet. The same fabric was used for curtains, banquets, and the sofa. To warm the all-over blue, Mr. Milton added touches of gold—in the needlepoint rug, the Louis XVI open armchairs, covered in satin brocade, the French bracket clock on the mirrored beam, the gilded mirror over the mantel, on the glass-topped table (its base is a Louis XV daybed), the bronze lion, and candelabra.
What kind of house does an architect build himse-

One big friendly

This is a house to lift the spirit. With soaring space inside, and house-high windows that bathe it in light, it is unfailingly lively and cheerful. Architect-owner Donald Chapell says the plan was "shaped like an outstretched palm seeking the sun." He built it one room deep, spread it out, bent the end wings, used two-story south-facing windows. On the north side, too, wall-wide windows are floor to roof, so rooms gain light from two sides and overlook East Hampton woodland site.

Above: Welcoming the sun, the south side of the house is largely insulating glass to light and warm all rooms. Top, right: Entire rear of house with broad parallel deck. Right: Some friends on deck.

One big friendly space

Take the bridge to the bedroom, open panels to let spaces flow, have a party on a night-lit deck.
A dramatic house indoors, it's a stunning background for people and movement. The 17-foot-high living room is half the house's volume; at either end (connected by a sweeping bridge balcony overhead) dining and bedroom wings open wide, creating one huge space for living and entertaining. A tall Texan, Mr. Chapell likes spaciousness, sunlight, and openness. "Whichever room I'm in, I like to feel the whole house around me, not be locked in a corner." He also appreciates privacy—his bedroom, the ground-floor guest room-sitting room, and the work room-study upstairs can all be closed off with panels. For sparkle at night, the underside of the bridge is edged with a row of 7½-watt incandescent red bulbs. And there is constant surprise in light patterns as the sun moves overhead. How many houses let daylight come in so beguilingly from four sides?

What do you do when you have three tiny rooms and so much furniture it clutters your life? This Greenwich Village floor-through apartment had two working fireplaces and lots of charm but was woefully short on space. So its young owners, Ingrid and Lee Drotman, decided to sell their heavy antique furniture and start fresh, following a clever new plan given them by their friends, designers Bob Patino and Vincent Wolf.

Step one was to create a background that stayed in the background: one color—cream—perked with a hint of peach—and one carpet was run throughout. Blinds (matchstick) and furniture (wicker and canvas) were kept as simple as possible. Step two was to make everything do multiple duty. In the front room, only 14 by 14 feet, one oversized table—an 8-by-3'1/2-foot piece of polished butcher block on two sawhorses—and chairs, have the surprising effect of making the small space seem larger. Now twelve people can comfortably sit down for dinner, and the table has held a buffet for 30 with ease. It's also a sewing and makeup center, and an oblong "round table" for friends who like to gather there. During the day the back room, bottom left, is for sitting, with sofa backed up against file cabinets that store clothes. At night, cover slips off to reveal a bed. Canvas slipper chairs glide about on casters. A tiny porch off kitchen is for breakfast or guests. Even the art is flexible: a theatrical light spotlights a blank canvas for a "painting" whose color changes with substitution of gels. An inspiration from Patino/Wolf Assoc. Photographs from the Light Gallery.
“When you live in one room you can use all the space all the time.” That’s one good reason to make a maxi-sized room out of two small apartments, as writer Suzanne Slesin did. An environment of khaki-color, Ozite-carpeted platforms and partitions define areas for sleeping, working, cooking, and dining. Partitions kept low don’t stop the eye. Platforms raise people to selected views, conceal radiators, create the impression of floor-to-ceiling windows. And for Suzanne, who can’t bear to part with a magazine, plenty of storage was provided by architect Douglas Kahn and interior designer Stephanie Mallis—under platforms, in partitions, and even built into what look like ceiling beams.

How to fall in love

A lively young woman tells how to cook for pleasure from the moment you begin.

"Anything you do can be simple and enjoyable, but still the very best!"

This is Judith Ets-Hokin, founder of a cooking school and cookware shop in San Francisco, and cookbook author. She lives as you’d expect a passionate cook to live—with a wonderful working kitchen (designed with the help of Aaron Jones), a garden right outside with fresh vegetables and herbs (landscaped by Max Schardt), and a house of enthusiastic eaters—her husband, hair stylist Peter Esser, and their joint families of 5 children. Her philosophy of cooking combines quality—the best equipment and ingredients—with simplicity. "The more I cook, the more I appreciate and enjoy the very simplest dishes," she says. "What is better than a crisp, sweet lettuce picked fresh from the garden?" Her kitchen, right, is basically white—"Food and cookware are colorful enough."

"LEARNING TO DO NEW THINGS ENHANCES YOUR ENJOYMENT OF LIFE."
"Everyone has to eat. It's a basic sensuous pleasure." This is what Judith Ets-Hokin teaches in her classes—that good cooking is a creative act. That is why she insists on fresh ingredients, unprocessed food: "See what a wonderful experience a bowl of freshly ground almonds is." After a hard day at the shop, dinner at home is what she most looks forward to. "It is the pleasurable experience of the day, when we relax together over a meal." Her meals are delicious, and simple, such as the family dinner here, right. Garnishings just as simple: "If you roast pork in rosemary to serve cold, add a sprig of rosemary on the plate and that's all." For more of her ideas about cooking, see page 58.

self-help trends. It rests on the premise that for most people any kind of spontaneous, genuine relationship is impossible. The presumed way to deal with this dilemma is to manipulate people. Since manipulation in this view is what life is all about, people must be taught to do it more effectively. No one denies that a certain amount of manipulation may be required in life. But to make it the cornerstone of life and to build a whole way of living on top of it is a little frightening.

"Play-acting different roles for different situations in order to achieve this end is the inevitable result. Our contemporary preoccupation with "identity" is the result of such role playing. People who are in touch with how they feel about things and are operating in accordance with what they feel, know who they are. People who are forever acting would find it hard to avoid what we call today an identity crisis.

"The change in the psychosocial climate is reflected in the way in which individualism has changed in our culture to egocentrism. Cultivating egocentrism, or a "me first" attitude, in the name of self-improvement does not help the individual and surely works against social cohesion. There should be a balance between the American assumption that there is no problem that cannot be solved, and the other, European attitude which says, 'take me as I am'.

"Many of the modern self-help movements cater to those tendencies in people that are expressions of our problems—our tendency to treat ourselves as actors and others as audiences to be played to or manipulated, our inclination to separate sex from life and treat it as a matter of technique, our tendency to treat life as a series of disconnected experiences or sensations. Self-help catering to these tendencies is therapeutic in the sense that one could consider roulette a treatment for greed!"

"Self-help has a long tradition in America, starting from the time of the Pilgrims, when people lived in an environment where they had to be carpenters, physicians, everything.

50 ideas for adding tang to a dish with a squeeze of lemon—this very special fruit, indispensable to any good cook

We cannot imagine our kitchens without a basket of lemons on the window sill,” says Doris Tobias and Mary Merris, authors of The Golden Lemon to be published in April by Atheneum. “They are often the mainstay of a memorable recipe and can elevate an ordinary dish into something sublime.” Here are a host of ideas from the book for using a spray of a memorable recipe and can squeeze of lemon to add piquancy to everything from soups to desserts, plus star recipes.

Setting the best from lemon

The best lemons for juice and pulp are the small, round, or oval ones, with smooth, unblemished skins. The smaller lemons tend to have fewer seeds, but this really a matter of chance. Should seeds now up, they must always be removed. Store lemons at room temperature in an airy basket if you are going to use them within a few days, because you obtain more juice from a lemon that is not cold, however, if you intend to keep the lemons for some time, they must be refrigerated. Immerse refrigerated lemons in iced water for a few minutes before using to extract the maximum amount of juice.

The best way to get lemon peel, or zest, which is the same thing, off without the bitter, white pith that lies between the skin and the pulp is to use a potato peeler. When grating, be careful also not to include the pith.

Quick ideas

Squeeze fresh lemon juice over sautéed zucchini just before serving.

1. Sprinkle sautéed carrot rounds with grated lemon rind and grated onion.
2. Drizzle fresh lemon juice over eggs that have been scrambled with a bit of garlic; smoother with chopped Italian parsley.

Lemon-dill potatoes

1. Boil 12 new potatoes, peeled, in a covered saucepan in lots of water until tender, about 30 minutes. Test with a fork. Drain, and pour 3 tablespoons lemon juice over the potatoes, turning them gently so each has a brief soaking in the juice. Pour off the lemon juice, add 4 tablespoons butter, and toss carefully so the potatoes are well coated. Place in a serving dish and sprinkle 6 tablespoons fresh dill over all. Serves 4.

Lemon butter

1. Add freshly ground white pepper to taste and 4-5 tablespoons lemon juice to ½ pound softened butter and beat until well blended and smooth. Turn into a lidded crock or jar and refrigerate. Keeps 1 week. Or, shape the butter into a roll, wrap in freezer wrap and place in freezer. To use, slice off amount needed, rewrap, and replace in freezer.

Lemon jelly

INGREDIENTS
6 lemons, peeled and sliced
2 cups apples, peeled, cored, and diced
¾ cup sugar for each cup of juice

METHOD

1. Place juice and sugar in a saucepan. Bring to a boil. Meanwhile, place lemon slices and apples in the bottom of a saucepan. Press down with a large spoon so that the juices are released. If the juices do not cover the fruit, add a little water. Bring the fruit mixture slowly to a boil and cook until the fruit is soft.
2. Place thick strips of lemon peel in a warm oven for a few minutes to dispel unwanted odors.
3. Freeze lemonade ice cubes. Add to tall fruit juice drinks or Campari and soda.

Bountiful, beautiful country food from a cook who measures in eggshells, pinches, and fists, and never throws anything away

By Naomi Barry

Peasant is not a pejorative word. Pays, French. Paese, Italian. To be called a countryman became derogatory only because in medieval times, the peasant was attached to the land in contrast to the noble who had free riding mobility.

Peasants and those who grew up in peasant culture eat better than almost anybody else. They have an intimate knowledge of all the edibles that lie about—pungent grasses, wild mushrooms, mussels, snails. An old Tuscan saying goes “Don’t let the peasants know how good is the pear with the cheese.” The intimation is that the aristocratic town dwellers finally caught on and didn’t want to be deprived of such rustic delicacies as the best pears with the best cheese.

Jean Cocteau’s definition of art was achieving the maximum with the minimum. Peasants being traditionally short of money were obliged to make the most out of what they had at hand. Over the centuries, they developed enormous know-how. Their savoir-faire is a treasury of wealth and wisdom for anyone in budget distress.

The art of good eating

Inventive food like green tomato tart, pear and potato compote, and huckleberry mousse, from a painter who loves to cook Inspiration for cooking comes from many sources for a painter-caterer and cooking-school teacher. "When I begin to think about how a completed dish should look, I think about what Salvador Dali would do—as in his cookbook. It should be something that stretches you, pushes you." Bread is cut with scissors and pulled into branchlike shapes and christened Matisse bread. Six-minute eggs are served in nests of shredded carrot. From wide-ranging cookbook reading comes inspiration like the combination of boiled potatoes and fresh pears, both sliced and served in a compote with cream and grapes. Mrs. Peter Adams of Portland, Oregon, who runs Carol Adams Cooking, a cooking school and catering service, thinks of herself as a colorist when she paints. Her strong feelings carry over to the colors, textures, and shapes of foods. "Half the fun of cooking is to have the finished product look pretty, but it shouldn't be fussy." Carol Adams entertains frequently on weekends for lunch. "People relax at lunch, settle down and enjoy themselves." She enjoys the whole process of entertaining—"It's like a chain reaction from the shopping for the freshest, best things you can find, to the chopping, cooking, and to the rewards of having the dishes look right and sharing them with friends." Carol Adams cooks the night before and in the morning for a lunch—"I don't want people in the kitchen while I cook, and I like to be part of the party, so I do what I can ahead." Recipes, page 187.

A big batch of vegetables cooked lightly and marinated overnight. 5. Large green tomato tart feeds a crowd. 6. Wild huckleberries flavor a frozen mousse. 7. Sorbet of marc de Bourgogne

From The Box Tree restaurant

INGREDIENTS

- 1 quart water
- 1 pound sugar
- ½ cup marc de Bourgogne, or marc de Champagne, or anisette

Juice of 1 lemon

Fresh mint

METHOD

- Bring the water and sugar to a boil in a large pot. Remove from heat as soon as it boils. Cool.
- Pour 3 cups of the sugar syrup into an ice-cream freezer and freeze until it is half frozen and slushy. Add the marc or anisette and lemon juice and continue to freeze until done. It must be kept very cold.

Serve 3 small scoops in tall, stemmed vin d'Alsace glasses and garnish with fresh mint. Serves 6.

Soufflé meringue à la Bénédictine

From James Beard, cooking expert

INGREDIENTS

- Butter
- ¼ cup confectioners sugar, sifted
- 5 egg yolks
- 1 ½ cups sugar
- ½ teaspoon vanilla

METHOD

- Whip the egg whites with the pinch of salt until they are beginning to form soft peaks. Beat in the vanilla and liqueur.
- Put a collar of cooking parchment or foil around a 2-quart souffle dish to extend 1½ inches above the rim. Butter the inside of the dish and sprinkle with sifted confectioners sugar.
- Beat the egg yolks with half the sugar in a bowl until smooth and pale creamy white. Beat in the vanilla and liqueur.
- Whip the egg whites with the pinch of salt in a large bowl until they are beginning to form soft peaks. Gradually add the remaining sugar and continue to beat until whites become firm and shiny, as for a meringue. Fold a quarter of the whites into the egg yolk mixture to lighten them, then fold all back lightly and evenly into the remaining whites. Fill the prepared soufflé dish. The recipe can be made up to this point 2 hours in advance, provided the egg whites are beaten as directed and properly folded in.
- Bake the soufflé 25-30 minutes in a preheated 375°-400° oven. Just before serving, sprinkle the top with 2 tablespoons confectioners sugar and remove the collar in front of the guests— it will not deflate. Serves 10.

Butterscotch lemon sauce

INGREDIENTS

- 5 tablespoons butter
- 1 cup brown sugar
- ½ cup heavy cream
- 1 tablespoon plus 1 teaspoon lemon juice

METHOD

- Melt butter in a saucepan and add the sugar. Stir briefly and add the cream. Continue cooking over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until mixture comes to a boil and is thick. Stir in the lemon juice. Makes about 1 ½ cups sauce. Perfect over poached pears or apple slices and, along with a handful of toasted hazelnuts, turns vanilla ice cream into an old-fashioned sundae. It is also delicious over ripe, whole strawberries.

Lemon caper sauce

INGREDIENTS

- ½ cup light olive oil
- ½ cup lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons capers, drained and finely chopped
- 1 hard-boiled egg, finely grated

METHOD
□ Combine the oil and lemon juice in a small bowl and beat with a wire whisk until blended. Continue to beat with the whisk as you add the remaining ingredients. Pour into a jar and chill until ready to use. The dressing may be made in a blender, but it will lose the bitey texture that gives it distinction. Makes about 1 cup. Use with steamed artichokes, fresh asparagus, cauliflower, or cold, boiled shrimp.

1 cup green figs, sliced
2 cups lemon slices, halved
1 cup blond raisins

Scallops in cognac broth

INGREDIENTS
2 tablespoons butter
Juice of 2 lemons
1 red snapper, weighing 4 1/2 pounds, then boned and filleted

METHOD FOR FISH
□ Melt butter in a small skillet over low heat. Add cognac, lemon juice, salt, ginger, and parsley; simmer for 5 minutes, stirring to prevent burning. Place the bay scallops in the skillet and simmer for 5 minutes, stirring once or twice. Remove scallops with a slotted spoon to a heatproof bowl and keep warm.
□ Turn heat to medium and reduce the sauce, stirring, for 5-6 minutes. Pour it over the scallops and ladle into hot soup bowls. Serve at once. Serves 4.

Red snapper with puréed broccoli

INGREDIENTS FOR FISH
2 tablespoons butter
Juice of 2 lemons
1 red snapper, weighing 4 1/2 pounds, then boned and filleted

METHOD FOR FISH
□ Melt butter in a small saucepan and add lemon juice. Place fillets, skin side down on a lightly oiled shallow pan, or on foil. Slide under broiler—fish should be 1 inch below flame—and broil 8-10 minutes. Baste every 3 minutes or so with the lemon-butter mixture. Serves 4.
Note: To poach, braise, or broil fish properly, cook 10 minutes for every inch of thickness.

Cold lemon nougatine soufflé

INGREDIENTS
7 egg yolks
3/4 cup sugar
1/2 cup lemon juice
7 egg whites
2 tablespoons nougatine (recipe below)

METHOD
□ Beat yolks with a whisk in the top of a double boiler off the heat, until light. Add sugar and lemon juice and beat briefly. Place over simmering water and cook, stirring constantly with a whisk, until the mixture is quite thick.
□ Remove from heat and let cool. Placing it in the freezer for 5 minutes will bring it to the right temperature. While it is cooling, whip the egg whites until they hold a peak when the beater is removed.

Cirio canning factory in the small Tuscany fishing port of Porto Ercole, Nicoletta can be as well-dressed as any girl in school. Basil, the royal herb, never seems to thrive more luxuriantly than when planted in a cut-down orange crate. How can one live without the inimitable perfume through the winter?

"Do you want to make a roast chicken more moda? Put a whole lemon in the first place. Force the herb mixture into the cuts. Sprinkle with salt, pepper, and a drop of oil. Continued on page 1/6"

It costs much more to get natural gas now.

There are three basic operating units in the gas industry: 1. The producers who explore and drill for gas. 2. The pipeline companies that transport gas. 3. Gas companies that distribute the gas to customers like you.

All three have been hit by sharp cost increases during the 1970s. Take producers. For every inch deeper they have to drill to find gas, the costs go up. For every yard farther off-shore, the costs increase. And for drilling under Arctic ice, the expense is tremendous.

These costs are necessary to keep the gas coming.

There's no way your gas company can bring you today's gas at the old prices. The increase is partly caused by inflation. But it's mainly because gas is harder and more expensive to get now.

All these costs must be met if America is to have enough energy. Getting more gas is vital, because no other energy is available in large enough quantities to do all the jobs gas does.

Remember to conserve.

Wasted gas costs you money.

You'll save heat and save gas if you insulate, use storm windows, make your whole house as weatherproof as you can.

With all energies facing increased costs, gas will continue to be your best energy value.
Marinated baby sole

"This marinade's recipe is now one of the most popular banquet first courses at the very grand Gritti Palace in Venice, which brings me back to my premise, that people brought up close to the land and the sea eat better than almost anybody else."

INGREDIENTS
1 pound onions, sliced
1 cup olive oil ("I prefer to cut the amount of oil in half")
1 cup white wine
1 cup white wine vinegar
1 ounce pine nuts
1 ounce Sultana raisins
2 pounds fresh baby sole or baby flounder

METHOD
- Rub the bottom of a baking pan with a little olive oil and bake the eggplants on it for ½ hour, cut side up, in a preheated 350° oven. Serve half to each person.

Veal roll

2 tablespoons olive oil
Fresh rosemary sprigs
Fresh sage
1 clove garlic, smashed
1 cup water
1/4 cup white wine

METHOD
- Slice the veal 3/4 through lengthwise and open it flat like a book. You can cut it a little to further flatten and even the thickness. Lay prosciutto on the meat.
- Make an omelette with the eggs, tablespoons minced parsley, Parmesan and salt and pepper to taste. Cool an place on the meat. Sprinkle with more parsley; roll up the meat and tie with string.
- Heat oil in a Dutch oven with rosemary, garlic, and basil. As soon as the garlic has given its flavor to the oil, remove and discard it. Add the water and the veal. Cover and cook over low heat 20 minutes. Remove cover and add wine. Raise heat and brown meat on all sides. Let cool slightly. Slice and serve. Serves 4-6.

with foil. Roll out dough and fit into pan. Weigh down with beans and bake 10 minutes in a preheated 400° oven. Lift out beans and put in filling.

METHOD FOR FILLING

- Place all the vegetables in a large pot with oil, water, bay leaf, thyme, and garlic. Bring to a boil and cook about 2 minutes. Vegetables should be very hard still, as they continue to soften in marinade.
- Put all ingredients into a large glass container and season to taste with salt and lots of freshly ground black pepper. Pour the vinegar over all. Cool and baste occasionally. Serve cold or at room temperature. Serves 12 or more. The antipasto is better if made the night before.

America has been on analyzing ourselves as one avenue to this self-improvement. Some people try to help themselves, seeing therapists: some people join movements: some read psychological books. Beware, however! The psyche is complicated. It is much easier to construct a wall of bricks than it is to help oneself by reading a psychological self-help book.

"What we have to do is distinguish between books that really help and those that give the illusion of helping. If a person is reading the book, learns to analyze himself, to find the cause of his discomfort, enlarge the realm of his consciousness, to have more insight into what he is doing, then the book is useful. Erich Fromm's The Art of Loving is such a book. Karen Horn and Rollo May also write such books which give no easy formula, but which are more like psychological guides.

"On the other hand, there are books which give apparent solutions, that more harm than good. For instance, when an author says, 'It is useless to worry,' 'Anxieties are unjustified almost 100 per cent of the time,' this does not help because the reader already knows he should not worry, but he cannot help it. These kinds of books do not get at the reason for the worry. They concentrate on what we can do as secondary gains, that one obtain from focusing on the symptoms, not on the core of the problem. They simply help the reader to have a thicker skin, which may have some validity if there is nothing else around to help, but which also means that we instead of increasing your sensitivity and knowledge about the nuances of your subliminal feelings and thoughts, you leave only a superficial way of coping with the whole world. This kind of approach is more useful for administering a big firm or a corporation than for dealing with individuals.

"Some of these books also produce the trick of instant self-gratification—a magic formula that often makes them successful. The people who have read the book a left with the illusion that they will be able to face the future, and they have feeling of exaltation that they pass on to others. This feeling of exuberance is interpreted by the reader as proof that the book has been useful, when in fact it has only produced a temporary promise that does not last.

"I do not say that all books are like this. Those which give panaceas, formulate, and easy explanations without any work to do in private are more destructive than constructive. But those books which require some work on the part of the reader, which may be difficult, are more likely to be books to be trusted.

"Western man has always looked for improvement and progress, and the books are a symptom of this urge. In Western philosophy, on the other hand, the important thing is serenity, contentment. There are good and bad things to say of both sides. In Western culture this desire for constant self-improvement leads to anxiety and to a spirit of competition and

Manuscripts

House & Garden assumes no responsibility for unsolicited manuscripts, photographs, drawings, house plans, or uncommissioned material. Material submitted must be accompanied by return postage or a self-addressed, stamped envelope.
All things start with a goal; that is the human condition. Normally, you have two goals: to stay alive, and to be happier. Those are ideal goals, purposes, values. Once you have those goals, you look for methods to achieve them. Self-improvement is a method towards achieving those goals. The aim of sex books, for instance, is to show you how to do better at sex.

"The problem here is that people tend to translate this into feeling they have to do better at sex. Or, if you read a book about how to have a better garden, you might be interested in a better garden in order to compete with your neighbor. In both these cases, you will not fulfill your goal of being happier. You had better always, therefore, examine your motives for self-improvement.

Another thing to remember about self-improvement is that it includes how to live in a social group. Your goals concern living in society; so the 'self' part of self-improvement is partly what you like to do, and partly what you like to do with others, and the two are interrelated. The emphasis on looking out for Number 1, which some people falsely assume means you must be against others, on the contrary should include both these elements—looking out for you, and also looking out for your fellow human beings. So if you want to help yourself, you'd better include helping others.

"Self-improvement also involves self-acceptance. By self-acceptance I don't mean that you are all right as you are. To accept yourself starts with the proposition that you often act badly, therefore you'd better try to do better; but you temporarily accept yourself with your bad behavior. Take the tennis example: If you thought you were really all right as you are, you'd never take a tennis lesson.

"Accept yourself the way you are in order to improve that way and enjoy yourself more. That is how you achieve your goals."

Mildred Newman and Bernard Berkowitz

Newman and Bernard Berkowitz are married to each other and practice in New York City. Their first two books, How To Be Your Own Best Friend and How To Be Awake And Alive were best sellers. Their latest best seller, How To Take Charge Of Your Life (Harcourt, Brace, Jovanovich), is out this spring in paperback (Bantam). They are currently working on a new book.

MN: "People have always needed to learn about themselves. My feeling is that people aren't as ashamed of wanting to change as they used to be, so it now seems okay to buy a self-improvement book.

BB: "The problem of our time is a feeling of aimlessness. People have no idea where they came from or where they are going. They feel like victims. I think it's a product of a mass society, where the average person feels less and less in control of his or her destiny, and less and less able to make an impact on the forces that govern his or her life."

READY FOR SPRING

Fiestas of flowers, a harmless herbicide, zinnias top this year’s list

BY JAMES FANNING

Great spring shows

Regardless of what the weather may or may not be doing, spring begins with flower shows. Time was when the shows were rich men’s competitions, intended to pit the horticultural skills of estate gardeners against one another. Today wealthy exhibitors are few, and most of the expert horticulturists work for commercial organizations. As far as the gardening public is concerned, this is an improvement, since the flower show displays are designed to give practical instruction for homeowners. Seedsmen and equipment manufacturers are well represented at the shows, so that comparison shopping may be done in a real garden atmosphere. A carnival spirit prevails, and there can be no better way of celebrating the end of winter and the beginning of the year’s sweetest season than by spending a few hours at a flower show.

In 1978, the nation’s two oldest shows will be bigger and better than ever. The Civic Center from March 5 to 12. And one of the newer flower shows, the one in Chicago, has now earned the status of an established annual feature. This year’s will be at McCormick Place from April 1 to 9. Hours of opening and admission prices vary from show to show, in some cases from day to day. The wise flower show-goer will plan to arrive in mid-morning, lunch at the show, meet friends, and, in general, have a gardening bash.

Chicken Little rides again

Viewers-with-alarm have been having a field day. Every few weeks some common chemical—often one used in agriculture—is “shown” to cause cancer or to have some equally frightful effect. What the doomsayers carefully avoid mentioning is that the so-called proofs of dangerous effects are the result of laboratory experiments that have little relation to actual use of the materials in question. The chemicals tested are applied in concentrations and in ways that are simply never encountered in actual use. Plain fact of the matter is that anything, applied in unnatural ways and in concentrations far in excess of any naturally encountered, will have bad effects. Weedkillers, insecticides, and fungicides as used in the home garden or commercial crop production are subjected to the action of rainfall, sunlight, soil organisms, plant enzymes, cooking temperatures, and finally, to the action of powerful digestive juices in the human stomach. These factors play no part in the customary laboratory tests. This is not to say that chemical pesticides are completely blameless. Some, like DDT, have turned out to be definitely dangerous. But the case against others, such as the herbicide 2,4,5-T—much in the news of late—has simply not been proven. Knowledgeable gardeners will go on, as they always have, using pesticides as needed, but only as needed, never in excess, and strictly according to the manufacturer’s instructions. They will also make sure their spray equipment is working properly, free from wasteful leaks and delivering the solution as a cloud of fine droplets for even, effective coverage.

All-American

The 1978 list of All-America Selections is headed by four zinnias. It may seem a bit strange to select four varieties of just one kind of annual plant for one year’s list, but this is actually a good example of how carefully AAS looks after its customers. The selections in question were made during the past 3 years, but it was not until 1977 seed crops were in that AAS officials decided that there was enough seed on hand to be sure of filling orders for 1978 delivery. Now there is enough seed, so all you have to do is look for the red, white, and blue shield on packets of zinnias “Red Sun,” “Yellow Ruffles,” “Peter Pan Cream,” and “Cherry Ruffles.” The names describe the colors—all are large flowered, with medium height, except for “Peter Pan Cream,” which is low and compact. The only other flower on the 1978 list is Dianthus “Snowfire,” white with a cherry-red center, on a rounded, 6- to 8-inch-high mound of blue-green leaves. The other standouts for this year are the disease-resistant cucumber “Liberty,” the compact, large-fruited tomato, “Floramerica,” and a long-season, highly productive watermelon. “Sweet Favorite.”

Tomorrow’s roses

Roses are older than gardening, newer than tomorrow. Each year we are made aware of this by the All-America Rose Selections. These are made by a nationwide test program sponsored by commercial rose growers to evaluate new roses as they are introduced. After several years of testing, two new roses have been considered worthy of being called the AARS selections for 1978. These are Charisma, a floribunda with huge clusters of waxy-petalled scarlet and yellow flowers on a vigorous, healthy plant, and Color Magic, a hybrid tea with true rose-colored petals, shading to pale pink at the center. The AARS selections will be available at nurseries and garden shops everywhere for planting in the spring of 1978. For ordering by mail, Jackson and Perkins (Rose Lane Medford, Ore. 97501) and Star Roses (Box 231, West Grove, Pa. 19390) both specialize in the All-America selections and also handle a wide selection of other roses. Both catalogues are free for the asking.

Color Magic is the All-America hybrid tea rose for 1978. A true rose color, the urn-shaped flowers have lighter centers.

ON THE WALL

- Hang similar posters or prints edge-to-edge all in a row on one wall or on both sides of a corner for a dynamic effect. Or, arrange several of the same picture together as they do in the Paris Metro.
- For instant kitchen art: a cooking collage. Collect labels from boxes and tins of your favorite delicacies—or labels from memorable wines—glue on to a board or a piece of Styrofoam. If you shellac it, there's no need for a glassed-in frame. For other rooms, use old postcards, ticket stubs, or photographs.

TABLE TURNING

- The disappearing table: terrific in a room that must double for living and dining. A handsome lacquered or glass tabletop can be hung as wall art; for dinner, bring wood or chrome sawhorses out of storage, and pull up a chair.
- The convertible table: Hinge a Formica or butcher-block shelf to a wall or to the top of a desk or counter to open out for dining, working, or sewing.
- The basket table: A large lidded woven willow basket works as a sturdy tabletop can be hung as wall art; for dining, replace door with louvered shutters, install a half-height refrigerator with shelves above. Mirror behind the shelves makes the glasses sparkle.
- In the dining room, a closet with door removed can be fitted with glass shelves and lit from above or below to display porcelain and crystal.
- In a kitchen or bedroom, how about a mini-office? A set of file cabinets in a double closet with sliding doors, a desk top stretched between them, lots of shelves to hold work and correspondence.
- Or, remove the doors and curtain the closet as a romantic alcove for your bed's headboard. In the baby's room, a crib will fit lengthwise into the walled alcove.

CLOSET CASE

If there's an extra closet in your life, put it to good use for living. Here's how:
- Turn the hall or living-room closet into a bar: Replace door with louvered shutters, install a half-height refrigerator with shelves above. Mirror behind the shelves makes the glasses sparkle.
- In the dining room, a closet with door removed can be fitted with glass shelves and lit from above or below to display porcelain and crystal.
- In a kitchen or bedroom, how about a mini-office? A set of file cabinets in a double closet with sliding doors, a desk top stretched between them, lots of shelves to hold work and correspondence.
- Or, remove the doors and curtain the closet as a romantic alcove for your bed's headboard. In the baby's room, a crib will fit lengthwise into the walled alcove.

THE QUILTING BUG

- A quilt's twice as nice if you make it reversible: same pattern in two color schemes, or complementary schemes in two completely different patterns.
- You can make your own patchwork curtains, tablecloths, pillow fabric out of the odd scraps and accumulate from projects. Just zigzag odd shapes together on the machine.
- Or cover a nice old trunk with patchwork squares. It's a good idea to paint the surface white first, so the fabric colors stay clear.
- And customer quilt patterns can cover a pretty box. (For complete instructions, see House & Garden, March, 1977.)

MORE SUSPENSE

- Necklaces and chains, scarves and ribbons, can decorate a bedroom or dressing room wall.

The Charlie you kiss with.

How a lipstick makes your mouth feel is almost as important as how it makes your mouth look.

The creamy consistency of Charlie Extra-Extra Shine Lipstick makes your mouth feel soft, creamy, moist. The creaminess produces a luscious, glistening shine.

And the colors—37 lipsticks, 14 glosses—are as pure and distinct as they are special. And that's how it is with Charlie lipstick.

When it comes to replacing dishwashers, most people choose KitchenAid.

People who have had experience with dishwashers don't just think KitchenAid is best. They buy it.

People say things like, "Built solid, very reliable." "Gets everything clean without hand rinsing, even dirty pans." "Needs few repairs." "Lasts a long time." "Uses less hot water." "Saves on electricity." "The adjustable racks make it so easy to load."

Whatever their reasons, more people over the years have replaced their old dishwashers with KitchenAid than with any other brand.

And that's something to think about when you're thinking about buying a dishwasher.

Catnip in the kitchen

Here's nothing like fresh catnip. Ask any feline. The dried goodies sold in pet stores simply can't compare. If you don't have a cat, well, it makes a great tea, though why an herb which sends a cat into frolicking frenzy should be soothing and relaxing to humans is a mystery to me. Appropriately named Nepeta cataria, the plant is an easy-to-grow member of the mint family. As with all mints, it tends to grow spindly if not constantly pinched back. Regular harvests for yourself or furry friends remedy this problem. Another possible cause of spindly growth is insufficient sun. Though the cat might not object to the straggle, esthetically it does little for the plant, which is otherwise rather attractive. So keep your catnip in as sunny a spot as your home affords. Use a rich, loose soil with a teaspoon of lime per pot. Keep the soil constantly moist, and fertilize monthly with a balanced solution such as 20-20-20. That's all it takes to keep the plant—and the cat—happy.

The glittering prize

There will be cause for celebration this spring when the historic glass conservatory of The New York Botanical Garden is reopened March 18. The completion of the $4 million project, begun with a major gift from Mrs. Enid Haupt, in whose honor the conservatory will be named, is a testament to the dedication and determination of the Board of Managers to find private funds in the face of the desperate financial straits of New York City. Horticultural exhibits are planned for the conservatory's immediate opening. A gala, The New York Botanical Garden 1978 Spring Party, is being organized by co-chairwomen Mrs. Gardner Cowles and Mrs. R. Thornton Wilson Jr., and Carlton B. Lees, the garden's gifted horticulturist and designer. The party will be the evening of May 9. To quote designer Billy Baldwin, "this place has magic!"

The remark came at a fund-raising ball given last spring to mark the restoration's halfway point. The 90-feet-high Palm Dome, the focus for dining, was transformed with impatients, bougainvillea, and hanging baskets of nasturtiums and double Reiger begonias in which long tapers were lit and reflected in the glass panes. Guests entered an all-white garden where baskets of white caladiums hung from trees underplanted with white azaleas and fragrant white hyacinth. A grass-turf pathway illuminated by low lights in clay flower-pot lamphshades led guests to a dance floor marked with potted boxwood, tall pink and red geraniums, and amaryllis. Some called it the prettiest party they'd been to in years. The conservatory, designated a New York landmark, was built in 1899-1902 and is now being rebuilt under the direction of Edward Larrabee Barnes. In the restoration effort last summer, 150 students were brought into a work project preparing the plant beds for the great exhibition halls. One of the most exciting will be The Children's Green World, a place where "touch, don't just look" will be the way young people are introduced to the beautiful world of plants and flowers.

Chocolate mousse in a tiny pot

A collector of small-scale African art recently decided to install new shelves to display his pieces. Philip Gabriel in association with Howard Brandston Lighting Design, New York, designed ¾-inch plywood wedges that are hollow. They attach to the wall with a cleat that is either screwed in or nailed. The collector painted the wedges the color of his walls and when the track lighting system is lit, they float.

How to shirr a Wall

One of the prettiest, most romantic treatments for a hallway or an unadorned expanse of wall is shirring, top and bottom. It's also a great disguise for walls that are cracked or are covered with a peeling wallcovering. No-iron sheets do it well, because they're still a bargain and easy to care for.

To measure for the number of sheets you'll need, multiply the width of the wall in inches by the degree of fullness you want in the gathers, usually two or three times the width. Then divide by the width of the sheets you've chosen.

To prepare each sheet, measure the height of the wall, fold the sheet under equally at the top and bottom, and press. (If you don't have enough material for the height of the wall you can face at the bottom.) You will need a casing 1-1/2 inches deep at top and bottom, so allow for it when measuring height. Stitch down the edges top and bottom 1/2 inch; make another row of stitches 1-1/2 inches above that. This is the casing for a cafe curtain rod or a 1-inch half molding. We suggest that if there are windows or door frames, you make separate panels for them. The edges will blend into the overall shirred look.

To attach the fabric, use curtain rods, half-moldings, or, if you've used shirring tapes, staple it to the wall.

Making arrangements

Fresh ideas for your dinner parties are flowing, with the expert help available from Eleanor Pompili who achieved recognition designing tables for Tiffany. She will spend a day in your house, anywhere in the country, working with what you have, developing new ideas for your table settings.

The day usually starts with a shopping trip to the grocery store to buy vegetables for centerpiece arrangements. "They're more unusual than flowers." She will go through your house finding objects in other rooms which come to the table as fresh decorations. For example, she might retrieve antique linens from the attic, or unused fabrics put aside in a drawer. "It's a teaching process," says Miss Pompili. "I try to bring out a person's ability to design her own table in her own style."

Many different settings are created, then photographed and presented in an album for you to refer to when you're planning your party. "It's seeing things differently," she explains. "Everyone knows how to set a table, but you can develop a new style with a fresh eye."

A day's lesson, which includes help with organizing linens, china, and glass, is $250 plus expenses, which may be shared by a group living in the same area. For complete information write Eleanor Pompili, 147 East 81st Street, New York, N.Y. 10028.

The world of Frank Lloyd Wright

A singular opportunity for an overview of a little-known facet of work of one of America's foremost architects, Frank Lloyd Wright presented at the Smithsonian Institution's Renwick Gallery, through July 30. "The Decorative Designs of Frank Lloyd Wright" is a compact, very concentrated exhibit of his designs for furniture, dinnerware, lamps, tables, chairs, fabrics, and wallcoverings that intended, some for manufactured others for the interiors of cle homes. These pieces are given context by showing them against photographs of their original arrangements in the homes they fill. Guest curator, David Hanks, organized the show, says that Wright's interiors were meant to complement the architecture of houses and buildings. The show will travel to New York University and to the University of Chicago in early winter, 1979.

Chinese Chiêh

Your vessel or cup has been copied from a distinctive Chinese ceremonial bronze tripod libation vessel of the Chou Dynasty (1122-255 B.C.), called a Chiêh. It has an ovoid-shaped bowl provided with a loop handle and rests on 3 and sometimes 4 legs. On one side, the lip rim is extended in the form of a pointed lobe, while the opposite side is extended in the form of a wide pouring lip. Two chu-posts representing the North Star are attached to the rim (the name “chu-posts” is given to a pair of square or round posts, usually with bell-shaped tops, such as yours, attached to the rim of ancient Chinese libation vessels). Your chiêh possesses no rare age.

P. De B.—Rockaway, N.J.

Your dishes were made at a porcelain factory started in 1808 by Carl Hans Tuppack at Tienfurt, in German Silesia. They date before 1890; possibly mid-19th century.

English caddy spoon

Can you tell me who made my silver spoon and when? What was it used for? R.H. —West Caldwell, N.J.

According to the set of English hallmarks, your piece of sterling silver—probably a tea caddy spoon or scoop used to transfer the tea from the caddy to the teapot—was made in Birmingham in 1808-09 by Joseph Taylor, who worked there at least from 1787 or 1788.

Is the food you eat the key to the way you experience life?

Yes, says a world-famous biochemist, whose nutritional approach to health is explained in a new book, The Wonderful World Within You. / By Paula Rice Jackson

Editor's Note: Roger J. Williams, Ph.D., D. Sc., is 84 years old. He walks 3 miles a day to and from lunch and to his home from his office at The University of Texas at Austin where he is Director Emeritus of the Clayton Foundation Biochemical Institute with which he has been associated for 38 years. Dr. Williams is the discoverer of pantothene acid, a member of the vitamin B group, and did pioneer work with the synthesis of folic acid to which he gave its name. He is the author of some 20 books on the subjects of biochemistry, nutrition and the importance of individuality and variation in every human being. He is a member of the editorial board of Executive Health, a medical newsletter read by thousands of laymen and professionals across the country. Dr. Williams is also the first biochemist to be elected president of the American Chemical Society. His new book, The Wonderful World Within You, Your Inner Nutritional Environment, was published last June in an original paperback edition by Bantam Books.

It was one of the more popular catch phrases of the 60s. . . . "You are what you eat." It has taken, however, the consciousness-raising 70s to bring home the importance of nutrition to millions of Americans. Dr. Roger Williams became one of the pioneers of the study of nutrition as a result of his experiments with yeast cultures, determining the nutrients which would make yeast thrive, not just grow and reproduce, but thrive.

"I look upon nutrition as a universal thing that we as humans participate in. Animals, plants, fish, birds, microorganisms, and everything cellular in them requires nutrition. Since the things that are essential for their nutrition are also essential for ours, their nutrition becomes ours when we eat the tissues of plants and animals. I first began studying fundamental nutrition and its effect on different life forms when I was studying yeast. Now, yeast will grow in almost any sugar-bearing mixture, but in order to make it thrive, it has to have certain nutrients, some known, some unknown, but the point is that nutrients can be varied to produce good and bad effects on growing things. I maintain that the quality of human experience, the uniquely human ability to reason, to produce art and poetry, to appreciate music or beauty, the presence of an inner life, is affected by the quality of nutrition we take into ourselves. My book stresses biochemical individuality. It underscores the fact that each and every one of us has important and different biochemical needs. For example, certain aspects of the metabolizing process may go on in one person at a rate ten times faster than in another. If I were to give you a total rundown of everything I ate and everything I did, you'd have some information about me, but you wouldn't have much in the way of advice or information for anyone else. Extra vitamins and minerals have different effects on different people. People's nutritional needs can vary as much as 500 percent for one chemical and much less for others."

"The quality of human experience, the uniquely human ability to reason, to produce art and poetry, to appreciate music or beauty, the presence of an inner life, is affected by the quality of nutrition we take into ourselves."

Q: What is the connecting link if we are each so different?

A: "Vitamins, minerals, trace minerals, and amino acids are the parts of the metabolic machinery. If any one is lacking, the whole process stops. It's very hard to say which vitamins, or which major or trace minerals do what to benefit the body. It's like taking a watch apart. You find a tiny wheel and you ask, is this what runs the watch? Of course not, it's that wheel combined with all the other necessary mechanisms that run the watch. The forty basic chemicals which team up to make metabolism work are essential for the growth, repair, well-being, and reproduction of our bodies' cells. We need a better understanding and appreciation of how these assortments of chemicals keep our bodies and minds healthy."

Q: How has your research changed your own eating habits?

A: "I've found that as time goes on it is very important to reduce the amount of sugar I eat. I'm not one who spends a great deal of time considering and recording everything I've eaten, but it seems to me that you can hardly find a plain doughnut these days! If you were to go into a field where sugar cane is growing and chew on a stalk of it you would get much better nutrition than you would get by eating sugar out of a sugar bowl. I prefer to eat whole grain products wherever possible. My wife and I enjoy fish and we have it frequently, but that doesn't mean that I eat it all the time. Much of people's nutrition is a social thing. If you don't know anything about nutrition and if none of your friends are particularly concerned about it either, then, when foods are purchased, nutritional considerations are overlooked. But if we can make everyone aware of the importance of high-quality nutrition, then every food purchase becomes an informed one."

ABOUT THAT APPLE A DAY

"Bartlett's Familiar Quotations says it's an American expression from the 1800s. Though there is no such thing as a perfect food, by that we mean a food that has the total percentage of the forty growth and maintenance chemicals we require, the egg probably comes closest to it. The apple, as it turns out, is better nourishment than we supposed before we collected our data; it does contain almost every vitamin, major and trace mineral, and amino acid the body needs, though not in the best proportions. No one food does that, hence again the necessity for a wide variety throughout the day. When the "apple a day" phrase was coined, they couldn't have known anything about the essential nutrients the apple contained. It's a tribute to folk wisdom, or body wisdom, that our more precise, modern knowledge tells us that apples are a very wholesome food."

The food you eat

Q: Your book has charts of some forty foods that indicate a complete range of nutrients and their amounts. Where did you get the foods for testing?
A: "Our data concerns ordinary foods, the kind millions of Americans buy in the supermarkets everyday."

Q: Were you concerned about the additives and preservatives many of these foods contain?
A: "Some people will hear that a particular food will have a trace of something in it, say, a nitrite, as in the case of bacon. Now, nitrite is not good, but whether or not it is dangerous depends on the quantity of nitrite and the amount of the nitrite containing food a person eats. Even completely natural foods like fruits, vegetables, and grains contain things in nature in minute proportions that aren't good for us. One cannot simply reject foods out of hand because of the possibility that there is a contaminant in them. One thing I'm sure of is that with proper nutrition our bodies build their own natural defense systems against potentially harmful or dangerous substances that naturally occur. There's another aspect to this, too. There are diets that people go on that are limited to eating one food in large amounts—say, brown rice or grapefruit. It simply isn't smart nutrition to give nutrient chemicals to the body from one source only. Diversification is important. If there were one guideline that I could give to help others get the nutrients they need it would be—Diversify. Eat as wide a variety of unrefined, unprocessed foods as you have access to. To the best extent you can avoid foods whose ingredients are so processed and refined that they have lost their original character and nutrients. And listen to what your body wisdom says."

Q: What is body wisdom?
A: "I think it's a part of the overall food intake control mechanism that is at least partially located in the hypothalamic part of the brain. I think 'body wisdom' attracts or repels us from certain nutrients and may vary at different times of our lives. A desire for salt, sugar, or fats can come under the 'body wisdom' rubric. Exercise can help cultivate this wisdom. Exercise improves the circulatory system which carries the nutrients and oxygen to your brain and the other parts of the body."

Q: What's the difference between a natural and a synthetic vitamin?
A: "There isn't any except possibly the price. The synthetic vitamin, having been produced in a laboratory, will be the purer of the two. However, impurities contained in the natural vitamin, and there are some, can possibly benefit the body in ways we're not absolutely certain about now."

Q: How does a vitamin manufacturer manage to claim a distinction if the really isn't any?
A: "You can buy a bottle of 'natural' vitamin C that's composed mostly of synthetic vitamin C. Vitamin C from fruits and vegetables is added to the synthetic product. This is all that's 'natural' about it. We hope to encourage the medical community regarding the taking of supplements. We hope to encourage doctors and the clinics with biochemical profiling facilities to use the tests and methods that we have for a nutritional approach to health. Right now these testing facilities are very primitive. Adequate tests would aid people who otherwise must go through a trial-and-error process of finding out what nutrient chemicals and what doses are right for them."

"If there were one guideline I could give to help others get the nutrients they need it would be—Diversify"

Q: Did your research influence the way you fed your family?
A: "My interest in human nutrition surfaced when I was about 25 years old and, of course, my family was ready well grown and living on the own. We often had a vegetable garden but we had it as much for the fun of watching things grow as for the free vegetables we got from it. If I may, I like to elaborate about the nutrition value of one of America's most common foods—bread. I've been rather concerned about bread over the years. My brother, R. R. Williams, also a biochemist, was one of the principal scientists responsible for initiating the 'enrichment' of white bread. He convinced commercial bakers to add percentages of thiamine, riboflavin, niacin and iron bread. I was very interested to read Consumer's Reports last May, 1976 that a test was conducted to establish a nutritional quality of thirty-three of the nation's widest selling brands. One bread rated especially well, so let's consider what was in it: milk, whey solid soy flour, and eggs. Clearly a premium bread that would cost more. But anyone who categorically rejects white bread as being 'nutritional sawdust,' regardless of its composition, is mistaken."

There is this woman.
Watch her.

She is a tapestry of delicious contradictions.
Capable of laughter that all the world may witness.
And of tears that no one will ever see.
A swimmer who may never enter the water.
A musician who may choose to listen rather than to play.
A wife who feels like a lover.
A mother who remembers what it was like to be a child.
There is this woman.
And here is the fragrance that defines her: a melding of flowers and more flowers, mingled with a fresh flourish of spices.
We call it—Cabriole.

Two of America's favorite, most innovative sportswear designers will be offering their ideas about your fragrance and your makeup. The first is Calvin Klein, who will have both a fragrance and a makeup collection; the second is Ralph Lauren, who will have two fragrances—one for men, one for women. Mr. Klein describes his makeup plan as a carefully thought out system—much like his ready-to-wear ensembles. He's worked out "total looks" that he feels eliminate guesswork and therefore eliminate makeup purchase mistakes. They're called The Honey Face, The Coral Face, The Mauve Face, The Pink Face and The Rouge Face. One has four eye colors to choose from; another may have only two, but the point is the schemes give a look, an effect, and an appropriateness to the way women live and work today. He hasn't overlooked the fact that what goes on the skin must come off, so he's included skin care and treatment products, too. One's a Translucent Cleansing Bar that gently cleanses and refreshes skin with glycerines $5. Moisture Activated Facial lets you use the heat and steam of your bath to help perk up your skin in a hurry. A 4-ounce tube costs $12.50. A fragrance caps the whole group: Calvin Klein is scented with jasmine, violet leaves, clove bud oils, and sandalwood. Sounds entrancing. One ounce, $85; quarter ounce, $25. Everything will be at Saks Fifth Avenue.

Ralph Lauren's first fragrance is called, of course, Polo. The other, for women, is called Lauren. Both are classic scents updated just like the wools, furs, and leathers he's famous for, and should fit nicely into the fragrance wardrobe you already draw from year after year. Polo cologne, 8 ounces, $20; Lauren perfume, 1 ounce $87.50, ¼ ounce, $27.50. At Bloomingdale's.

This spring, Serge Lutens, the color and makeup genius behind the color revolution that's been going on at Christian Dior, has put together a look called Les Contrastes. Two pieces from the group work especially well with the refined yet somewhat rosy, healthy look American women like. One is for nails, called Tres Pale, and another for eyes, called Rose Italian. The nail enamel is virtually transparent with a finish we've not seen—not matte, not glossy, just clean. The eye color is a soft, muted rose that makes blue eyes bluer, brown eyes very sexy. And the eye colors come in a tiny 2-inch-wide compact that's perfect for an evening bag. They smudge on with a fingertip, too. Vernis Creme Nail Enamel, $3.50; Ombrette Mini Eye Shadow, $4.50 at fine department stores everywhere. (Continued on page 30)

He would be proud to sign this Kittinger reproduction today.

This important desk is an authentic Historic Newport Reproduction of the original made by Job Townsend in 1730. The delicately carved and fluted concave shells are typical of the Newport school. The unusual smaller shells conceal narrow drawers in each pigeon hole. And the desk top has a secret panel which slides back to reveal the interior of the lower case drawer, locked from the inside by wooden bolts.

The sign: Aries
Circa: March 21-April 20

Herbs and other plants identified with Aries are honeysuckle, cactus, and hawthorn. Easter usually occurs in Aries, hence the entire lily family, including onion, leek, and garlic, which are said to relate to the sign. Hyssop, used in Biblical times for purification and renewal rites, now is frequently blended in modern eau de cologne. Fragrances for the Aries woman should be distinctive, clean, and magnetic. New First de Van Cleef & Arpels is one of the fresh florals to try. Fashion designer Mollie Parnis has given her name to a perfume that’s piquant and bright. TERRIFIC REMODELING IDEAS TO HELP YOU MAKE THE MOST OF THE SPACE YOU HAVE.

LOOK FOR MAY HOUSE & GARDEN ON YOUR NEWSSTAND
Meet Linda and Mike and Erica Huss. Fourth in a series of stories about the kind of people who furnish their house, their way, at Ethan Allen.

"Even when Mike and I started out, we didn't stick to one style of furniture because we had very different tastes, and a crazy mixture of hand-me-downs we couldn't afford not to use. Our first apartment was early eclectic!

By the time we moved into the house we're in now, we'd discovered mixing styles could be done with real style. First, you have to buy good things, and second only buy things that you like. Then everything will work together successfully. My Ethan Allen interior designer agrees. That's one of the reasons I like shopping at Ethan Allen. They're flexible. Ethan Allen makes styles as contemporary as this modular sofa, as well as the classics, all at different prices. And their interior designers aren't afraid to help you combine different styles so you get the look you want at the price you want to pay."

Ethan Allen's furniture is made for families like ours. We want good things at a good price, and that's what we've always found at Ethan Allen.

When I visited the Gallery I got the idea of mixing the modern style of this Ethan Allen glass and brass table with the classic charm of our Georgian house.
Despite their reputation, bankers are not as ornery or as stingy as many people think. True, getting a mortgage or home improvement loan is sometimes difficult—especially in times like this when money is tight. However, more often than not, “the fault is not in our stars, but in ourselves,” as Shakespeare wrote. After all, bankers are in business to lend money. And lend they will, providing you approach them the right way. In fact, they'll even write a mortgage or home improvement loan for a do-it-yourself project. More and more banks are doing just that to meet the loan demand from do-it-yourselfers.

Basically, all a bank is really interested in is making money on its money. The sticking point for some borrowers is that a bank also wants some assurance that it will get its money back. And that's the key to borrowing successfully from a bank. You should be able to prove to a banker's satisfaction that there's hardly a risk in lending you the money. To do that, you'll need a good credit rating.

You should also be prepared to show the bank that you know what you're doing. That, in effect, will give the bank some security. For example, let's say that you want to build your own house. If you can convince the bank that you know how to build a good house, it will know that it could get its money back by selling the house if you suddenly went broke.

Money for do-it-yourself home improvements

Home improvement loans for do-it-yourself projects are, in some respects, much simpler to arrange. For one thing, much less money is usually involved. For another, you can use your home, condominium, or cooperative as collateral—providing you've paid off a good hunk of the mortgage. That's especially true if you can demonstrate that the home improvement you intend to make will enhance the value of your home. Then the deal makes even more economic sense to a bank. That's another point in your favor. By far the best way to demonstrate how a home improvement will enhance the value of your place is through comparisons. For example, ask your local brokers how much, say, a patio or a swimming pool will add to the value of your house. Then ask them for examples—actual listings of identical houses, one with the patio, the other without. Most brokers will be happy to do this for you, because they're always looking for potential customers as well as referrals.

If you rent your home, getting a home improvement loan from a bank will depend entirely on your credit rating and whatever assets you can put up as collateral. After all, enhancing the value of someone else's property won't benefit you financially, even though it might make you more comfortable. On the other hand, there's nothing to stop you from asking the present owner to take out the home improvement loan. Chances are that he or she might, if you can prove that you know what you're doing and that the improvement will make the property much more marketable. Some people have even been able to get a small break on the rent they have to pay in return for the time and effort they spent on the project.

Doing it yourself can pay off in a number of different ways. For one thing, there are the intangibles, such as pride of craftsmanship and accomplishment. For another, there's the tangible, monetary savings that's due a do-it-yourselfer.

How to get a do-it-yourselfer's mortgage

Make no mistake about it, getting a mortgage for a house you plan to build yourself will take some initial spadework. Even though more and more people are building their own homes, it's still a fairly recent phenomenon. And bankers tend to be somewhat conservative about new things. However, to sell a banker on financing your house, here's what you should do:

1. Have a basic plan for the house. It need not be an architect's blueprint. However, it should be neat and fairly detailed. If a picture is worth a thousand words, this is worth even more. It's worth whatever financing you're trying to get. Reason: Your plans will give the bank a fairly good indication of how much you know, as well as how much attention you pay to detail. So, the more professional the rendering, the better off you'll be.

How a Banker Looks at Your Credit Worthiness

When you apply for a loan or a mortgage, expect the bank to check you out closely. After all, you are flirting with their money. Of course, the degree of scrutiny you will be subjected to depends entirely on the amount of money you’re after and how long you want it for. Here are some of the factors that a banker will take into consideration when reviewing your loan or mortgage application:

Stability. The longer you’ve lived at one address and the longer you’ve stayed with the one company, the better off you’ll be. Of course, the bank will understand if you’ve moved from place to place, because your company has transferred you a lot.

Credit history. A bank will take a long, hard look at your past record of paying off debts. As Ben Franklin once said: “Creditors have better memories than debtors.” Paying off debts on time is a strong plus. When a bank loses the use — say, a long painful illness — of a long, painful illness, the bank will probably smile on your current application. However, if you’ve only paid off charge account debts in the past, your ability to pay off a large debt will be problematic for the bank.

Income. As good as your credit history may be, the question of whether you get the loan or not will hinge on your ability to pay it off on time. And that depends on how much income you now have and the level of your current debt burden. Do note, however, that you can ask the bank to take your spouse’s income into consideration if the bank says it isn’t sure that you can handle the payments. Should you do that, the bank will then look into your spouse’s credit history the way it examined yours—which is now required by the Equal Credit Opportunity Act.

The lending institution. Whom you borrow from also plays a great role in determining whether you get a loan or not. Different types of lending institutions have different approaches to lending money. Savings banks, savings and loans, and other types of thrift institutions are easier to get mortgages from than commercial banks. Reason: That’s a large part of a thrift institution’s business. And since it has more experience with mortgages, it tends to take a less rigid stance than does a commercial bank, which usually doesn’t do much mortgage business at the consumer level. By the same token, finance companies are willing to take greater risks on loans. And they’ll charge you for it by asking for a higher interest rate.

Two new, peppy American cars compete with fuel-conscious foreign imports

SAFER, SUPER-EFFICIENT FRONT-WHEEL DRIVE CARS

It has taken twenty years for the American automobile manufacturers to produce a popular, low price, gas- and space-saving front-wheel drive car. Now the Chrysler Corporation has clearly scooped the rest. Its front-wheel drive Dodge Omni and Plymouth Horizon, offering comfort along with 40 mpg, more than meets the 1985 government regulations that the average car sold in this country will have to return 27.5 mpg. General Motors plans to introduce a small, front-wheel drive replacement for the Nova in 1979 and Ford will present a new line of similar cars in 1980.

The modern front-wheel drive principle was evolved by designer Sir Alec Issigonis in 1951. His idea was to mount the engine across the front of the chassis instead of lengthwise, so the car would be shorter and more maneuverable. To accompany this “transverse” engine, he also designed a front-wheel drive unit that had superior handling, excellent traction, and incredible fuel economy. The car, the Austin Mini Minor went into production in 1959 and earned its designer many honors, including his knighthood.

This transverse engine and front-wheel drive idea was quickly copied by designers elsewhere who were interested in efficiency. Cars like the Volkswagen Rabbit and Honda Accord use this system, as do small cars from Lancia, Fiat, Datsun, and Ford of Germany. Indeed, 40 percent of all cars sold in Europe now are built this way. While Cadillac and Oldsmobile experimented with the front-wheel drive principles, American companies did not develop the idea in efficiency automobiles. They decided the transverse engine was most appropriate for little cars which wouldn’t interest the American public at all. Of course, the energy crisis has changed that thinking.

In a transverse engine front-wheel drive car, the engine actually rides ahead of the front wheels. What would be the front of the engine in a normal car is at the right. The transmission is at the left. The fan is electric and mounted up in front behind the grille. Power is taken out of the rear of the transmission and transmitted through a “differential” by a short shaft to each wheel. Having the car “pushed” by the rear wheels, rather than “pulled” by the front wheels gives much better traction on slippery roads. Front-wheel drive concentrates all the car’s mechanical components in one place, which means the car is light but stronger and easier for mechanics to service. Since the engine, transmission, and drive axles are all up front, there’s no bulky driveshaft hump going down the center of the car floor inside. The interior is therefore more spacious. The car tends to pull itself through a corner when you turn the wheel, thus making driving safer. With independent suspension on all four wheels, bumps that affect one wheel won’t affect the others, so the way the car handles, steers, and stops is exceptionally smooth.

Front-wheel drive cars are built by over a dozen different companies, in a variety of sizes and styles, from high-performance sports coupes to snappy station wagons. Some are better gas savers than others, but all boast more room inside than their conventionally designed competition and better performance from small engines. Motoring experts feel the new efficiency American models, the Omni and Horizon, will have a profound influence on American driving in the future. Roy Axe, who designed these identical cars, admits that he was inspired by the VW Rabbit. They have the same 5-door hatchback styling. The rear seat folds down to turn the vehicle into a station wagon if needed. There are two comfortable reclining bucket seats in front. The new rectangular headlights point up aerodynamic lines, and large, safety turn signals wrap around the fenders. Fiberglass belted radial tires and disc brakes are standard. The big plus is in interior space and finish. Bigger than some compact cars inside, because of the gas-saving mileage and price ($3,700 base) they compete with the small sub-

Once a week is not enough.

If you have dry skin,

you probably think the ultimate treatment for it is a long soak in a tub with bath oil. But your busy schedule may only permit that luxury once a week. And that's not enough.

Dry skin needs help every day. Every time you bathe or shower. Or it gets itchier, scalier, harder to live with. And that's why Neutrogena® Body Oil was developed.

Neutrogena Body Oil is a new concept in dry skin treatment, for women who don't have time to soak in a tub. It's a pure, light, natural sesame oil formula that gives you the "soaking-in" benefits of bath oil, but in a non-greasy form, so it can be put directly on your skin.

Doesn't it feel greasy? No. Unlike ordinary bath oils which are made from mineral oil, the unusual sesame oil formula of Neutrogena Body Oil is quickly absorbed by your wet skin. You apply it right after you shower or bathe. No waste. No staining your clothes.

Safe and mild. Medical tests have shown that no other oil tested is less irritating. That's why dermatologists can recommend it.

It's more expensive to put sesame oil in our formula, but the results are well worth it to your dry skin. Try it today. And tomorrow. You'll want to use it every day. Because nothing will make your dry skin feel better.

I feel like Stanley knows us! Because their new Timbermist is so much like the way we feel about things. It's relaxed and kind of casual, but with a lot of style. And it's honest furniture... practical and sturdy, with oodles of storage and a soft finish that shows real respect for the wood.

But Timbermist is fun, too. I love the map drawer look and tambour doors. The near accents of brass kick plates and pegged table tops. And the way it coordinates our living, dining, and bedrooms. Timbermist is a natural for us... made to last, comfortable to live with, and really reasonably priced. My husband and I have been asking for furniture like this. And Stanley heard us.
The Humphryes Asburn Middaugh Archives announces the first American porcelain china plate in a collection beautifully depicting "Game Birds of America"....

"RUFFED GROUSE"

The breathtaking beauty of nature and the grandeur of the great American outdoors are to be magnificently evoked by a superb group of six outstanding American porcelain china collector's plates.

The distinguished American artist-sportsman, Stanley Maltzman, whose works have for years been exhibited by the Smithsonian Institution, has created six original lithographs for this exclusive series. His works are avidly sought after by collectors, and continue to increase significantly in value.

"Ruffed Grouse," shown above, is the first plate in this supremely impressive collection. It portrays in precise detail the spectacular splendor of this magnificent bird.

These exceptional plates will be crafted to the most exacting standards in fine American porcelain china by Ridgewood. This noblest of chinas combines surpassing whiteness, translucence, and strength unequalled in other porcelains. Ridgewood, of Southhampton, Pa., is one of America's premier producers of America's fine-art porcelain china.

Each of these beautiful plates will measure a full 10 1/2 inches in diameter—a size that permits the depiction of each bird in the most exacting detail. Each plate will be issued in an edition strictly limited to 5,000, and will be available exclusively from The Humphryes Asburn Middaugh Archives. They will not be sold through any stores or art galleries.

Owners of "Ruffed Grouse" will have a guaranteed option to acquire each of the other five plates in the "Game Birds of America" series—including "Woodcock", "Ring-necked Pheasant," and "Bobwhite"—as they are issued. However, there is no obligation to purchase any of these later works.

Because "Ruffed Grouse" is being issued in such a limited edition, it is important that you mail your order promptly. And if you wish to have "Ruffed Grouse" sent as a gift in your name, we will be happy to do so. The issue price is $35 (plus $2.50 to partially cover packaging, shipping, and insurance), and we unconditionally guarantee flawless delivery of every plate.

PERSONAL COMPUTERS

What can a “home computer” do?

At least theoretically, it can do such a wide variety of tasks nobody could think of them all. Practically, it does do only what it’s programmed to do. The simplest home computer applications are those which involve memory. For example, a computer could store your entire Christmas card list, displaying the names and addresses as you need them, and letting you change any of them as necessary. (It could even print them out on gummed labels if you installed the extra equipment, but you probably don’t want to send Christmas cards that way.) It could store your complete recipe file, and make suggestions if you want a vegetable or a wine which goes with chicken Kiev.

In addition to the storage function, computers can interact with people or other computers. A computer can help you prepare your income tax by quizzing you and letting you feed in the answers. It can develop a complete program of diet and exercise to let you lose a specific amount of weight in a given time, if you give it all the pertinent information. It can keep track of your budget and perform other useful household management tasks. It can play sophisticated games with you at whatever level of difficulty you wish—chess, blackjack, and so forth—or amuse you with elaborate arcade-type video games. It can quiz the children on the subjects they learn at school, correcting them when they’re wrong and adjusting itself to their level of knowledge and learning speed.

Control functions are more difficult only because they generally require elaborate mechanical hookups. For example, a computer could program the heating, cooling, and ventilation of your home for the optimum in fuel-saving and energy conservation. It could take over many of the kitchen chores—defrosting and cooking meals for exactly the right length of time at the proper temperatures. It could operate a complete home fire and burglar alarm system. But the mechanical “peripherals” needed to carry out these tasks probably would cost more than the computer itself.

Some day home computers will be able to interact with a central data bank at the public library or elsewhere to “look up” almost anything you want to know.

Computers must be programmed to perform any function. Most of today’s “personal computers” have program cartridges available for various common tasks. They also provide instructions on how to develop your own programs. Some supply easy-to-follow, step-by-step programming lessons on special cartridges, so the computer actually teaches the user how to program it.

Many of the people now buying personal computers are hobbyists who enjoy talking computer language and developing their own programs. Others are small-business people who require simple computers in the course of their work. The home computer’s appeal is broadening rapidly, however; prices are coming down, and there’s no question that it will find a niche in the household of the near future.

There are so many different styles and types of stereo equipment advertised that it’s difficult to know how even to begin to choose. How can I make sense out of all the different kinds of units?

Aside from the big, furniture stereo consoles, stereo systems are sold in three principal ways: as “compacts,” pre-selected component ensembles, and individual components.

The compact is an all-in-one music system ready to plug in and play. It may be priced as low as $100 or as high as $400 or more. A compact usually comes packed in a single carton and consists of three separate pieces—a combination tuner and amplifier (receiver) with an integral, built-in record changer (sometimes including a cassette or 8-track recorder or player), and two speakers. Compacts vary in sound quality from

For maximum beauty and durability...

WHERE TO APPLY: On all interior walls and ceilings, including plaster primed wood, primed metal, over wall paper, finished surfaces, bare dry wall or wallboard.

COVERAGE: Up to 400 sq. ft. per gallon using quality painting tools such as GOLD LINE Rollers and Kmart brushes. One full roller, rolled in a straight line, four to five feet in length, will closely approximate this rate.

HOW TO PREPARE FINISHED SURFACES: For maximum paint adhesion, WASH THOROUGHLY WITH POWDER DETERGENT AND WATER. RINSE COMPLETELY. Make sure all dirt, grease, oil film, oil buildup are completely removed. Patch all holes and cracks with patching paste — allow to dry — and sand smooth. • Wallpaper: before applying new finish, paste all loose sections down. • Primer and Sealer: allow to dry, overnight. • Glossy finish is water based and must be washed with household powder, cleaner, and in water — rinse well, or sand lightly.

HOW TO PAINT EFFECTIVELY — Stir paint well. Sp prime all patched areas. Use top quality painting tools for best results. • Bare Dry Wall or Wallboard — when all dust is removed, coat directly with the FRESH LOOK. Two finish coats recommended. • Bare Plaster — new or old should be dry, cured and hard. If textured, swirl, soft, porous or powdery, treat with solution of one pint household vinegar in one gallon water. Repeat until surface is hard — rinse well — let dry and apply Wall Primer and Sealer. • Bare Wood or Metal — apply a first coat of the appropriate primer.

HOW TO PREPARE UNFINISHED SURFACES • Bare Dry Wall or Wallboard — when all dust is removed, coat directly with the FRESH LOOK. Two finish coats recommended. • Bare Plaster — new or old should be dry, cured and hard. If textured, swirl, soft, porous or powdery, treat with solution of one pint household vinegar in one gallon water. Repeat until surface is hard — rinse well — let dry and apply Wall Primer and Sealer. • Bare Wood or Metal — apply a first coat of the appropriate primer.

WHEN TO WASH — To assure durable benefits, do not wash for 30 days. Once cured, the FRESH LOOK cleans easily with dry, non-abrasive detergents and water. "Spray-foam" and abrasive cleaners not recommended.

The equivalent of the old-fashioned portable phonograph to the equal of a medium-priced component system. Compacts are especially suited to smaller rooms, where people have limited budgets, and often are ideal as a first stereo system for children.

Next come the "pre-packaged systems" or "component ensembles." These audio components which have been re-selected by the manufacturer or dealer to meet various tastes and budget requirements. A basic ensemble generally consists of four pieces—the electronics (a receiver), a turntable, two speakers. They provide a convenient matched system with more flexibility than compacts, since new components can easily be added or old ones replaced at any time without disturbing the entire system.

Individually components are the basic building blocks of a high-quality sound system. They include turntables, receivers (or separate tuners and amplifiers), and loudspeakers. To these may be added a wide range of additional equipment, such as tape decks, headphones, mixers, and equalizers. In selecting components, it's important to listen comparatively to various combinations of electronics, turntables, and speakers. A proper balance in the quality of the components you select is advisable, and experts suggest you should earmark about 25 percent of your component budget for the turntable and phonograph cartridge, 45 percent for the receiver, and 30 percent for the speakers.

Q Since stereophonic sound is so popular on records, tapes, and FM radio, why can't we have it on regular AM radio and TV?

A AM stereo is on the way. A broadcasting industry engineering committee recently conducted field tests of three proposed methods for broadcasting stereo over the AM radio band and concluded that all the systems were capable of producing good stereophonic sound without degrading the broadcast for those listening in the conventional monophonic way. These conclusions and measurements were turned over to the Federal Communications Commission, which is expected to authorize AM stereo broadcasting within a year. AM stereo may have the greatest impact in the field of automobile radio, where good reception of FM stereo often is difficult.

The FCC is also considering the use of stereo sound with television. But here the near-term prognosis isn't so good. Even though the American Telephone & Telegraph Company's TV network interconnection system soon will be capable of handling full-range stereo, broadcasters and set manufacturers are less than enthusiastic about the prospect. Most observers feel that some day there'll be three-dimensional sound along with the color television picture, but that "some day" could be a decade away.

Q When television set manufacturers advertise "automatic" color adjustment, just what do they mean? And does it work?

A There are two basic color systems which are truly automatic. The first is called "VIR," which stands for "vertical interval reference." This is a signal which is transmitted by many television stations along with the picture, designed to assure color uniformity all along the color TV broadcast chain, because it is a series of electronic impulses, which are used as references to keep the color right. VIR-equipped television sets pick up this signal and use it in much the same way the TV stations do, to correct any possible errors in the color picture.

The other system, sometimes called autocolor, actually is marketed under many trade names—ColorTrak, Color Sentry, Color Monitor and so forth, which are all similar in major respects. They include automatic fine tuning to prevent drift (as do VIR sets), and automatic tint control to keep flesh tones looking realistic, and an automatic color circuit which continually monitors the incoming picture to cancel out any variations in color intensity. Some have additional features, such as devices to eliminate airplane flutter and automatic circuits to keep blacks and whites from fading into tones of gray.

While the VIR system might conceivably keep colors more natural—or at least the way the broadcast station intended them to be—the auto-color system also provides a natural-looking picture. The auto-color system works full-time whether or not the station cooperates, while the automatic VIR adjustment can occur only when the station is transmitting the VIR signal. The majority of TV stations, but not all of them, use VIR at least part of the time.

Both systems have their advantages, and the only sensible way to choose is to watch a demonstration of the automatic features of any sets you're considering. Certainly automatic color systems have eliminated most of the knob-twiddling which used to be so annoying in color TV. Most of today's sets need only to be turned on to bring in excellent, consistent color.

HOW TO MAKE A TIE-ON SLIPCOVER

(like the one on page 117)

It only takes a few minutes to tie up a pretty package of a chair. You can use any 30-inch-wide fabric—the one shown was designed by Angelo Donghia, woven in India, available through & Vice Versa—plus a tapermeasure, scissors, straight pins, a needle, thread, package of grommets, and cord or ribbon for the ties. To determine necessary yardage, measure from the floor to the top of the back of the chair, and down the front of the chair to the seat, over the seat (with cushion removed), then down the front to the floor, and add one extra foot to allow for hemming and graceful fullness. With the cushion removed, lay the cut fabric over the chair, tuck it in at the seat joint, and let it fall naturally. Pin a hem all around, rounding the corners, letting fabric fall so it just skims the floor. Pinch the excess fabric at the back into a pleasing gathering of folds toward the seat, mark the fabric at two points at each side. Remove the fabric, stitch hem, and apply grommets at the marks according to package directions. Now you are ready to replace the fabric and draw cord or grommet through the grommet holes and tie it into a bow at the sides. To cover the cushion, center it on a square of fabric large enough to wrap the top and sides plus a little extra for a casing. Cut out extra corners (see picture, below) to form a wide cross. Turn all edges under 1/2 inch, stitch, and guide cord or elastic through this casing to form a "shower cap" around the cushion. Plump it up.

Angelo Donghia marks points at the side of the chair for grommets. At right, drawing shows hemmed fabric ready to tie onto chair.

Here we share some interesting letters from our readers and answer your questions

BY MARGARET MORSE

Hand-washing silks

The “Life-Insurance For Your Wardrobe” article in the October, 1977 issue was especially wonderful. Could Mrs. Aimée Musich possibly tell me how to wash silks? — R.B., Laguna Beach, Calif.

Mrs. Musich replies: Most silks except taffeta (never hand wash) and some embroidered silks can be handwashed. Test-wash a shirttail, obscure corner, or a scrap from a seam first, as below. If unsuccessful, resort to dry cleaning. Otherwise wash as follows: Dissolve soap flakes such as Lux or Ivory in hot water, adding cold until tepid. Quickly immerse garment. For white or pale colors, add drop of ammonia. Gently squeeze suds through garment, then gently squeeze out (don’t twist) excess water. Rinse well in tepid water till no soap trace remains. Fill sink again, add 3 tablespoons white vinegar. Rinse garment again in this, then in plain water. Roll garment in towel, gently twist out excess water. Then roll gently in second towel and keep damp until ironing. Iron on wrong side with dry iron, working up from a warm to a medium-hot setting. Don’t air-dry silks—it yellows them.

Washing embroidered silks is always risky. To help keep colors from running, first give garment a bath in cold salted water (about 4 tablespoons table salt to a gallon). If colors still run, don’t risk washing. Otherwise, wash as above. However, never scrub embroidery. Iron as above.

Rag rugs rediscovered

I love the rag rugs in Mrs. Henry Parish’s Maine house December, 1977 issue. Can you tell me where I might buy something similar? — K.A.H., Atlanta, Ga.

If you can’t find rag rugs at your local department or specialty stores, ask your interior designer or the decorating service of your department store to investigate these decorator sources:

1. Harmony Carpet Corp.—custom and stock colors.
2. Rosecore Carpet Co.—“Cologne” cotton rug collection with 27 color choices; plaid, plaid-and-tweed, and box-patterned rag rugs, too.
3. Stark Carpet Corp.—“Laval” collection of rag rugs, plus a rag rug look-alike wool broadloom called “Candystripe.” Incidentally, Stark also has Irish flat-woven wool and wool-and-linen rugs similar to the rug in Mrs. Parish’s guest-sitting room (December, 1977, page 115). Ask for the “Tack” collection.

All these companies make solid and multicolored cotton rug rugs in stock and custom sizes, and all are located at 979 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022.

Inexpensive hit-or-miss-patterned cotton rag throw rugs and runners are available by mail from Jenifer House, Great Barrington, Mass. 01230 (the catalogue is 25¢).

Building a barbecue

You’ll find instructions for building two brick barbecues in the pamphlet “16 Outdoor Brick Projects You Can Build,” which is available for 50¢ ppd. from the Marketing Division, Brick Institute of America, 1750 Old Meadow Rd., McLean, Va. 22101. The mortared design is well worth the extra time it will take to build because of its superior stability. As you must adjust the instructions to the size of your two grill racks, be sure to buy them first.

Switch ons

I am looking for some unusual and handmade switchplates for my home. — A.M.C., Wollaston, Mass.

You might consider glass mirror plates that can be installed on ordinary wall switches and floor sockets, such as those made by J.C. Budd Associates and by Weiss & Biheller. You may order them from Rosetta Electric Co., 21 W. 46th St., New York, N.Y. 10036; One for a single switch is $3.95; for duplex socket, $3.95; for double switch, $4.95; for single switch plus duplex socket, $4.95. Shipping is additional—about $1.50 for five items. (Continued on page 62)

Lend-a-hand housing

I'm interested in building an apartment building with provisions for the physically handicapped in one apartment. Where can I turn for information?

Since many architects and contractors know Ramsey and Sleeper's reference book Architectural Graphic Standards (published by John Wiley & Sons), which includes illustrations of ramps, doorways, sidewalks, and bathrooms accessible to most handicapped persons, they could adapt or design building plans to suit your needs and local building codes. Three other sources of information are:

Colonial-style sinks

I'm looking for a dry sink. Can you help?

—R.P., Zebulon, N.C.

A mail-order source for an unlined Pennsylvania Dutch-style dry sink is the Sturbridge Yankee Workshop, Brimfield Turnpike, Sturbridge, Mass. 01566. Catalogue, 50c.

Two manufacturers of copper-lined maple or pine dry-sinks who sell only through stores are: Ethan Allen Inc., Danbury, Conn. 06810—You may pick up a free copy of The Treasury of Ethan Allen catalogue at any Ethan Allen store (those nearest you are in Asheville, Charlotte, and Greensboro), or order a copy from Ethan Allen for $7.50 ppd.

Heywood-Wakefield Company, Gardner, Mass. 01440—Both the Old Colony Pine and the Publick House collections include a dry sink. Write Mr. Howard Hauger at Heywood-Wakefield for stores nearest you.

Refreshingsilk flowers

I have inherited some silk flowers that would be even more beautiful if they weren't so dusty. Can you suggest how I might clean them?

—C.W., Armonk, N.Y.

Joan Tupper, who makes and imports silk flowers and who has designed bouquets for several museums, has several tricks for cleaning silk flower arrangements. To dust, pass a pistol hair dryer over the arrangement, holding on to the back of each blossom in turn. A brush-and-lub lens cleaner, or a spray can of pressurized air (both sold at camera stores), works well too. If the flowers are very dirty, you can go over them with a semi-dry soft toothbrush or a camel's hair artist's brush. Keep washing the brush in soap and water and dry out on a towel before each use so the flowers are dampened as little as possible.

To clean loose silk flowers, fill the bottom of a paper bag with some borax or table salt, make a bouquet in your fist, close bag around flowerheads, and shake. The secret is to clean gently but often—at least once a month —so the flowers don't lose their shape but are never allowed to get too dirty.

Mrs. Tupper sells her flowers by mail from 49 St. Marks Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y. 11217. Price list is free, photographs are $3 ppd. (deductible from a purchase.)

Four rooms within a room where two small sisters live and play house

A few years ago, Christie and Evelyn, the two sisters who live in this marvelously scaled-down mini-apartment, originally wanted to share the same room. So their parents gave up their large master bedroom and moved into a smaller room. The girls had one glorious space to sleep, play and entertain in. Then sibling rivalry set in. And the sisters decided each wanted her own quarters. At this point, the parents didn't want another total upheaval, so they devised a way of dividing the room to give each girl a separate bedroom, plus a shared play space and hallway with a swing and climbing rope for indoor gymnastics. The result attracted the interest of Professor Don Wall of the New Jersey Institute of Technology, whose specialty is child architecture. "It's one of the best environments I've seen for youngsters," he reported. "The children feel as if they have their own apartment, which gives them a sense of identity and control over their own territory. But the scaled-down dimensions of the spaces have a do-it-yourself quality, which responds to the child's natural instinct for play."

The transformation of the space was a simple building project. Two free-standing walls were constructed across the room with 2-by-4-inch framing, covered with sheet rock. They are 7 feet high, 2 inches lower than the ceiling, to allow light in and counteract any sense of "boxy" enclosure. The walls have 4-foot windows (shatterproof plastic panes) and 6-foot doorways with sliding louvered doors, see sketch. A third wall perpendicular to these walls divides off the space into two bedrooms, one for each sister. All walls are nailed to the floor right over existing carpet, which is own and furry, like a teddy bear. The same mosaic-striped wallpaper that covers the original bedroom walls is repeated for continuity on the new walls of the playhouse apartment. Yellow-and-white gingham makes curtains that hang the windows and covers for the beds. Each sister can look out onto the shared play area or the exercise hall. Or they may close off their space by drawing the curtains and shutting the doors, when privacy is required. Each girl has her own white Formica-topped desk and yellow miniature secretarial chair for homework. Two more secretarial chairs enrich the shared play area, along with circular white Formica play table. A crib, used when Christie and Evelyn were infants, has one side removed, its mattress covered with yellow-and-white print cotton, and serves as a cozy sofa. All toys, games, dolls, books, and records are stashed in storage cubes. Some sit across the floor on castors, performing as extra seating. Others are stacked one on top of the other to make shelving.

These days Christie and Evelyn are the envy of their peers in the second and fifth grades. Everyone wants to be invited to play in their apartment. Such actions don't surprise Professor Wall. The spatial complexity makes it an enriched environment. It's exciting to see from window to window and door to door. The space allows children to live their fantasy and be inside a dollhouse. What's more, he adds, it's a learning experience, bringing them in touch with architecture. They are conscious of exterior and interior spaces.

For Christie and Evelyn's parents, there is satisfaction in having created a room that works. "It's very effective and efficient and will probably suit the girls or another four or five years. After that, we can take everything down very easily and the room will be just as it was before we started."

Above: Christie and Evelyn visit in one of the girls' private bedrooms. Each has her own desk, chair, and window, plus storage space.

Center: Looking over from the hall to the shared living room. It's complete with sofa, round table, and stackable cubes for toy shelves.

Below: Door and paneled windows give each girl a personal entrance and view from bedroom to living room.

"Contrary to popular belief, life in the flower business is no bed of roses. "It's a jungle out there. "And although, as Vice-President of the largest flower business in St. Louis, I'm an expert on the likes of Floridian gladioli, Dutch parrot tulips and South American carnations, what I used to know about media buying did not amount to a hill of beans. "So, like my competition, I depended on radio, local newspapers and the inevitable neighborhood grapevine. "But as my business began to branch out from corsages to conventions, bouquets to banquets, I wanted a media buy that would reach more successful businessmen without nipping too far into my advertising budget. "Then last year, my advertising agency—Harris McKenna Meng—told me about MNI. "Magazine Networks, they said, is an inexpensive way to buy national upscale magazines in compatible local groups. With networks you can choose demographically, geographically, even psychographically. In markets as local and diverse as Beverly Hills, Brooklyn, Kansas City and Kalamazoo. "So in the past year, ads for Nettie's appeared in magazines like Time, Newsweek, U.S. News & World Report, Dun's Review, Nation's Business, Sports Illustrated, Business Week and, of course, Money. "And our business has grown bigger than ever, while—unfortunately—the flower industry in general has wilted slightly. If there's a smell sweeter than roses, it's success." If you want to find out more about Magazine Networks and how it can be used for heavy-ups, test-marketing or special promotions, call Jim Hagan at (213) 478-2596.

How to keep Western living from getting to your carpet.

Look for this label.

Now there's less need to worry about your active lifestyle getting to your carpet. Just be sure "Scotchgard" Brand Carpet Protector is built in. Because its invisible shield holds dirt loose, near the surface. So vacuuming's more effective. Spills come up with simple spot cleaning. Carpets stay cleaner two to three times longer.

And the protection lasts, even after several "steam" or extraction cleanings.

Today, more and more carpets have "Scotchgard" Protector built in. So make sure your next carpet has the label that means protection: "Scotchgard" Carpet Protector.

So sensitive, so responsive, so advanced. Now there's a better way to sleep.

The SLEEP MACHINE

Look into it. The Serta Perfect Sleeper—The Sleep Machine. There's a lot more to it than the rich, quilted cover you see. Inside it's awake and working while you sleep. Sensitive Synchroflex coils respond to your every move while the exclusive SertaLiner bands distribute your weight evenly over the surface. And you can sleep comfortably even to the edge of the bed. That's because Serta's TwinEdge design stretches support border to border, edge to edge, giving you up to 20% more sleeping space! Serta's Perfect Sleeper keeps on working right down through its matching SertaLock foundation. A SpanLock top, OmniFlex coils and TorqueLock edge are integrated to add maximum support, comfort and durability. It all adds up to a totally advanced sleep system we call "The Sleep Machine"—finely tuned for maximum comfort, support and sensitivity—for a better night's sleep. The Serta Perfect Sleeper. The Sleep Machine. It's a better way to sleep. Look into it.
Q I’ve only been sleeping five or six hours a night. Is this short sleep likely to affect my health?

A Some differences between “long” (ten hours) and “short” (about six hours) sleepers have been detected by research at the Sleep and Dream Laboratory, Boston State Hospital. Studies indicate that you should not be worried about short sleep. People who sleep briefly tend to be efficient men and women, who accomplish much and deal with problems by keeping occupied. They tend to be nonworriers and generally, things go well for them. Longer sleepers tend to have more mild psychological and somatic complaints. They take problems “hard” and find more difficulty in making decisions. They may use sleep as a refuge and prolong it to escape reality, but with negative results. Physically, long sleep can be harmful as the circulation slows down. Among older people, long sleepers have a high incidence of thrombosis and clots. Many happy, busy, productive people get along well on as little as four hours sleep a night, as Edison did. Certainly there is no need to resort to sleeping pills to extend rest. Almost all of the drugs interfere with the pattern and purpose of sleep. Barbiturates and some other hypnotics inhibit REM (Rapid Eye Movement) sleep, which is the dreaming state. Studies have shown that dreaming is essential to a refreshing sleep. During this time, it is hypothesized, we work out our problems subconsciously, often in a wild and bizarre way, thus enabling us to start fresh another day.

Q Does sexual fidelity really improve a relationship?

A Sexual faithfulness or monogamy is often considered an attribute which distinguishes man from other animals. There is not a sharp line drawn between them, however, as we know that in man faithfulness is not universal and among animals the cardinal bird is monogamous and the swan and coyote take one mate in their entire lives and remain alone if that partner dies. Although Bertrand Russell said that uninhibited people are often polygamous in instincts, the pattern of fidelity was set early in history because of the long period of children’s dependence and their slow maturation. For survival of the race, mother and father were necessary to enable the children to be nourished and cared for until adolescence.

Bruno Bettelheim, in his book, Children of the Dream, discusses societies in Israel whose children are brought up in a regimented group environment without their parents, as they are also in China and Russia. On the surface, this seems to lessen the need for monogamy. The children are healthy and very cooperative, but they lack a competitive spirit, personal drive, and the individuality that we prize so much.

One common cause of sexual infidelity is the continuing into adult life of the childish dream of a prince and princess living happily ever after. The blunt reality of problems that inevitably occur in marriage may explode this myth and make an immature partner want to brush off the whole situation and seek greener fields, when with love, patience, and cooperation, the marriage could have been saved. Those who split up, as Sigmund Freud said, often repeat the same mistakes in their next involvement, choosing a similar partner and carrying their own neuroses and misconceptions with them. The success of a sexual partnership, like any other project in life, is only proportional to the amount of work put into it. It’s true that most of us at some time or another have felt attracted to a member of the opposite sex, other than our special partner. Similarly, most of us have also been tempted at times to overeat or gourmandise, only to regret the experience later. One meaning of love is to nurture and be nurtured, and if there is true and total love between partners and they are emotionally mature, there will be little probability of unfaithfulness. Recently, even two authors of a book advocating “open” marriage a short time ago, have recanted and stated that they feel it is not the way to true happiness.

HOW TO GET FRIENDLY IN FRANCE BY CORALEE LEON

"There's the sign!" Darryl shouts, just as we go past it. In one practised motion I apply pressure to the brake and the bread and cheese in the back seat glide gracefully onto the heap of sweaters, travel guides, and Michelin road maps on the floor. We back up. "La Boulaye," the sign says in faded hand-painted letters: the birch grove. A little dirt road leads us across a green-gold meadow like the ones we've been passing since we left Paris two days ago—the kind that roll away beneath picturesque sprinklings of cows or sheep and disappear into misty forests. At the end of the road, an iron gate spreads its arms in welcome, and beyond it, at the head of a gravel drive edged with lawns and carefully nurtured flower beds, the chateau presides over its woodland, its small row of outbuildings, its gardens, and its little village just over the rise, as it has done for the last several hundred years.

"This is a castle?" Darryl asks. "Where are the turrets? Where is the moat?" Good questions, for La Boulaye is not the sort of chateau we found along the Loire. It is more a stately manor house, gray stucco, its grand front staircase facing a green through which runs a little stream that imitates perfectly the sound of rain. But it is a chateau nonetheless, and to prove it, here on the grounds is the stone silo-shaped pigeonnier, unmistakable symbol of nobility and a little stream that imitates perfectly the sound of rain. But it is a chateau nonetheless, and to prove it, here on the grounds is the stone silo-shaped pigeonnier, unmistakable symbol of nobility from the days when only noblemen were entitled to keep pigeons, squab being considered a strictly noble dish.

We pull up in front of the ivy-covered outbuildings—once stables and servants' quarters, now charmingly converted into a house for Monsieur Alain de Champeaux and his wife and family (Monsieur's parents still live in the chateau itself. We're glad to be stopping for a few days, but won—(Continued on page 72) under how it will be, living as guests in the home of people we have never spoken to, never even laid eyes on, from whom we have been separated by an ocean, a language, a culture. We don't wonder long, though. The front door opens and smiles pour out. A handsome, distinguished-looking woman, a man whose kind expression puts us instantly at ease, a couple of dogs, and two teen-aged boys looking quintessentially French in short trousers and sandals. Welcomes, endearingly formal; help with our bundles; questions, questions. And shy curiosity among the boys—Antoine and Dominique, and Darryl, my 11-year-old monsieur le navigateur—who within half an hour will be consulting one another about electric trains, the Concorde, and Ping-Pong strategies, quite unaware that they are speaking two different languages.

We stayed with three families, beginning with the de Champeaux in Burgundy, at the top of the region between the Loire and Rhône valleys, where the map reads like a wine list: Jean-Loup and Veronique Desouche in the Cha-rante, where those famous, delectable little Charantais melons come from; and Pierre and Isabelle de Maleville in Provence, about an hour's drive from so many interesting ruins, markets, and festivals that you could easily spend an entire summer here and not be bored. I figured my college French had about rusted through in its 12-year dormancy, so Chez des Amis made sure there would be someone at each stop who spoke at least a little English. But even when my struggles in French were matched by theirs in English, language was anything but a barrier. As Isabelle de Maleville said, to translate from her French, "When you like someone, you speak without words." And one has only to sit at a dinner table with a family engaged in an eager conversation complete with gestures, facial expressions, halting translations, and gales of laughter, to know that firm human connections depend on something quite apart from a mere fluency with words.

CHEZ DE CHAMPEAUX

The boys emerge from Dominique's room, where the trains are, in time for dinner, which Madame has been preparing while Monsieur and I chat in the low-ceilinged living room. The house, furnished with family heirlooms, feels comforting and close against the mist that has settled over the dusky hills. We gather around the big oval table for the first of many family rituals practiced at every mealtime all over France. It is apparent everywhere that the first love of every man, woman, and child is food. They spend hours discussing, growing, preparing, and eating it. Every village, no matter how tiny or how ancient, has its boulangerie, its charcuterie, and, God bless it, its pâtisserie. You have never tasted French bread until you've tasted it in France. The pâtes and sausages bring tears to your eyes. And in the pâtisseries, which Darryl frequently had to insist that I drive by without stopping (he being the sensible member of the party), we found a certain species of double-decker chocolate-iced cream puff filled with chocolate custard so heavenly it's called a Religieuse. The French preoccupation with food strikes straight to the family kitchen. All the families we stayed with had gardens, and Veronique Desouche grew several kinds of chickens and sheep along with her vegetables, fruits, and berries. When Darryl was given a baby pigeon that had fallen from its roost in a neighboring pigeonnier, Mme. Desouche licked her lips with such enthusiasm that Darryl clutched the feathered morsel protectively to his chest. Indeed, in France, if something doesn't move fast enough, it's in danger of being eaten.

Each meal begins with an opening course—tonight, at the de Champeaux, homemade pea soup—followed by the main dish (chicken in a thickened broth with rice), salad as a separate course (lettuce only in a delicate vinaigrette—we never saw a tomato in a salad anywhere), cheese (mainly goat cheeses of the region), and a dessert. Tonight Mme. de Champeaux has made a Marquise au Chocolat, like a rich molded mousse, served with vanilla sauce (see her recipe on page 80). Bread, delivered twice a week and kept in an upright wooden box 3 feet high, is served throughout, and there's always a bottle of wine on the table, freshly opened in honor of each meal.

The de Champeaux are not wine-growers themselves, but they can arrange to take you to the caves of some of their friends if you like. Monsieur is a forester who grows conifers from seed and tends them until they are a robust 5 years (and 6 inches) old, when they are transplanted to the surrounding hillsides. It is a serene existence, and a lovely way to begin a visit to the French countryside. The de Champeaux are eager to share with us the region they love, its history, and its landscape, and they have a talent for talking about it while Madame busies on with knitting, or looking up Roman-inspired architecture in a big worn book from the cupboard. And then we return to our room, a cozily papered one with a private entrance, a window curtained with ivy and overlooking the green, twin beds, lovely antiques, and an adjoining cabinet de toilette (the salle de bain—room for the bath—is upstairs, and shared with the family).

In the morning we rise rather later than we had expected. Monsieur smiles: "It's the trees," he says fondly. "They give off oxygen, and since there is no noise here, people sleep very well."

You could spend your days swimming in the little lake, catching trout in the stream, playing tennis on the court behind the house, or sailing at the digue (dam) nearby; but the greatest pleasures, Darryl and I think, are to let the families take us to the places they love best, for then their personalities come alive. Monsieur de Champeaux walks with us in the woods, which he tends with care and great respect, and takes us to the preserve of the wild boars, whose spiky-toothed inhabitants come to the fence to partake greedily of the sugar the boys offer from a respectable distance.

We exchange wildflower names as we pass them: buttercups are boutons-d'or (gold buttons); foxgloves, digitale (the source of the drug digitalis). We explore La Petite Verrière (The Little Glassmaker, the name of the town of which M. de Champeaux is mayor) built entirely of ancient yellowed stone, with tiny houses in which live farmers, millers, craftsmen. There is a church here that stands empty because the village cannot afford a vicar. The de Champeaux drive each Sunday to the lovely Roman-inspired Cathédrale de St. Lazare in the town of Autun (pronounced, with great difficulty, "oh-tuh"). where Madame sings in the choir ("I stand just here," she says, placing herself before a huge pink marble pillar that has stood for 700 years). The church is full of delightful primitive carvings of humans and animals wearing alternately fierce or inane expressions, all of which were plastered over by later Catholics who found them distasteful. It was through the efforts of a lively young priest that they were uncovered in recent years. The head of the Christ, which had protruded beyond the plane of the main entrance, had been sawn off and the wound plastered over. The young priest, quite by chance, discovered a similar-style head in a museum, suspected it was the very one, and waltzed off with it concealed beneath his robes, but not before being waylaid to drink tea, his prize cumbersomely concealed, with the museum curator's wife.

From the bell tower of St. Lazare, which Madame and I climbed, we can see the whole of Autun, with its houses and walled gardens, and, beyond its protective stone walls, the green hills rolling away, a castle or two tucked in its folds. "Remodeled," Madame says disdainfully. "In the 18th century, there was a great flurry of turret-building."

When we return to La Boulaye, I'm sent to the garden with Monsieur and the boys to gather strawberries for dessert, and a lettuce for the salad. We laugh and joke together, and feel the awakening of real affection. In the morning the car is packed and we are ready to leave, and M. de Champeaux tells us he feels we have known each other for years. It is a wonderful gift; we know we are saying farewell to friends.

CHEZ DESOCHE

We drive west across the Massif Central, past mille-fleur meadow tapestries that let us know exactly what inspired the famous needlework, and through sunspattered woodlands whose light is like an impressionist painting. France, we agree, must have been the birthplace of art. We stop and taste honey so rich and grain, it's like eating candy with a spoon, and make meals of bread, cheese, and fruit. We're following our Michelin Yellow maps, opened to the fold directed by the reassuring instructions sent us by Chez des Amis. If a place is so remote even the roadmap can't pinpoint it, you're supplied with a hand-drawn map that leads directly to the front door. The French road signs are less cooperative: Many of them point in one direction only, and you must drive beyond them to see where you're going. (The bread and cheese landed on the floor more than once.)

Where we're going is at the end of a drive that leads through acres and acres of grapevines growing in the chalky hills of the Charante, in the town of Fouquebrune, near Cognac. We're greeted by a lively young couple—Jean-Loup and Veronique Desouche, their son Xavier, 14, and a big cheerful airdale named Maya. All around is the friendly cackle of hens and geese, and Darryl, without so much as a twinge of shyness, amuses everyone by showing how to hypnotize a chicken. It is the beginning of a relationship marked by great mutual respect between him and Xavier. The house is pink stucco, built in the 18th century and full of large, airy, beautifully furnished rooms. Darryl and I are shown to separate bedrooms and private rooms for bathing and washing up, all with big windows that overlook the gardens and the miles of peaceful vines. Dinner is chicken from the coop, cauliflower from the garden, and a luscious cake of whipped cream, strawberries, and raspberries, also from the garden. After dinner, cognac of course, since M. Desouche's grapes are pressed and distilled into Martell cognac. He shows us his private casks, which were begun in 1973. In ten years they will be drinkable, he says: Thirty or forty years will make them better (these are for Xavier); and a friend of his won't even sell his cognac until it's 130 years old—at $700 a bottle. All the wine drunk here comes from the vineyards of friends, and is the subject of much heated discussion.

With the adult Desouches, charming and sensitive hosts who appreciate an enthusiastic guest, Darryl and I visit the Martell distilleries, the town of Angouleme with its 12th-century church, and a country fair at Souillac, just north of Angouleme, where people from all over the region gather to exchange news and gossip and buy and sell everything from livestock to fresh fish to T-shirts printed with the great American words "It's the Real Thing" and "Keep on Truckin'". The country people buy here, Veronique Desouche explains, because they're too timid to go into the village shops. On the way back, we stop in Mouthiers, a tiny town with a church built before the 9th century, through which Veronique shows us with great reverence and affection. The Desouches attend Mass here every Sunday. We poke around the ruins of a castle covered with vines and standing quietly on its hilltop with a tiny village at its feet. A berry grove gone to brambles tumbling in its courtyard, and lemon trees grow within its crumpled walls. We explore its main hall, with a huge fireplace and windows overlooking the countryside, then go down to the guard room, where M. Desouche points out the grisly oubliette, the pit where prisoners were taken and, as the name implies, forgotten.

With Xavier as our tour guide, Darryl and I are led through the woods just beyond the vines, to the caves where amateur archaeologists can be found digging underground of the caves, turning up the remains of prehistoric man. Darryl himself finds a few teeth and a spearhead certified by an amateur digger nearby.

Our final meal with the Desouches is a home-grown masterpiece: poached eggs on artichoke bottoms to begin; followed by a pinteade (guinea hen) braised in cognac; salad; cheese; and Charantais melons filled with Pineau—the wine made from cognac grapes, only undis- tillated—for dessert. Madame's recipe for pinteade calls for making the bird drink a glass of cognac the day before slaughter, "to perfume the meat." But she assures me this step is optional, once I explain to her that Americans can hardly be expected to take an axe to any creature they'd been drinking with just the day before. (Her recipe is on page 80.)

CHÉZ DE MALEVILLE

Southward and eastward we drive, stopping for pâté along the Garonne, cassoulet in Toulouse, and pizza in the Medieval walled city of Carcassonne, which reminds us a lot of New York's Greenwich Village, with its little artisans' shops and cafes where guitarists strum and sing folk songs. The shape of the land changes from rolling vineyards of Bordeaux to the steep mountains that lead south to the Pyrénées, to the broad clay-colored expanses of the coastal plains. Our last family, Pierre and Isabelle de Maleville and two small children, lives in a 17th-century farmhouse in Marguerittes, a tiny village between Nimes and Arles, convenient to just about every place of interest in Provence. The couple is young, loquacious and affable, she charming, full of life, and sensitive enough, without any English, to get complicated ideas across. She's a pleasure in conversation, and a wonderful cook. Here Darryl and I share a first-floor room with a farmhouse-style sink in a small, kitchen next door. Upstairs, where the family lives (the children are away visiting their grandparents), the living room is furnished with country antiques, and all the rooms look out over wheat fields through which the wind ruffles as soothingly as the sounds of breakers on a shore. Our first dinner is veal in cream and mushroom sauce, and potatoes purée with cheese. Mme.'s a

The E.P.T.™ In-Home Early Pregnancy Test is a private little revolution any woman can easily buy at her drugstore. It is highly accurate. Millions of women today in 13 European countries use this testing method. Now its high accuracy rate has been verified here in America by doctors who clinically confirmed the results of tests performed by women themselves in their own homes.

That means you can confidently do this easy pregnancy test yourself — privately — right at home without waiting for appointments or delays. That simple difference is the result of many years of costly research. And it's worth every penny.

At last, early knowledge of pregnancy belongs easily and accurately to us all. It's simple. Fast. And there is no risk, no physical danger whatever, in doing it because a sample of your first morning urine is all that's needed for the test.

As soon as you become pregnant, your body starts to produce a special hormone — HCG. Starting on the 9th day after the date you expected your menstrual period to begin, there should be sufficient concentration of HCG in your urine to give an accurate reading of pregnancy. And that's all there is to it. Follow the test directions with care, and three drops of urine can tell you quickly and easily what you want to know.

If you get a positive reading, you can assume you are pregnant. Such positive pregnancy readings in our clinical tests proved to be 97% accurate. If your reading is negative, your overdue period should begin soon. If a week passes and you still have not started menstruating, you should take a second E.P.T. test because there may not have been sufficient HCG in your urine at the time of the first test, or you may have miscalculated your period. Negative readings on a first test are about 80% accurate; on repeat testing one week later they are 91% accurate. If your second test result is still negative and your period has not begun, we urge you to consult your doctor as soon as possible.

E.P.T. is very simple to do, but it is important that you follow the instructions carefully to insure an accurate reading.

E.P.T. Early Pregnancy Test gives women a new power, the power of time to help control the quality of their pregnancies.

The first 60 days are critical in fetal development. Improper nutrition, cigarettes, alcohol, even commonly used household medications can be harmful in these crucial first 60 days before most women even know for sure that they are pregnant. Now with E.P.T. you can know. Now, when you call your doctor, you have the results of your test to report. And time is on your side at last.

1. Put three drops of urine into the test tube
2. Add contents of the plastic vial, shake and place test tube in holder. It must remain undisturbed for two hours.
3. After two hours if a dark brown ring is visible in the mirror, that indicates an active pregnancy.

At last, an accurate early pregnancy test that women can do at home quickly, safely and very easily.

healthy cook, and believes in fruit for dessert, followed by a risane or infusion—a tea-like brew of flowers she picks herself from the tilleul (linden) tree, steeped alone or with mint. The flowers smell delicious, too, and you can put them, straight from the tree, into your bath water.

In this region the Roman influence is everywhere. The fabulous Pont du Gard, the Roman bridge across the Rhône, is just a few miles from the de Malevilles' house, and the ruins of St. Remy are not far the other way. In Arles, they still have bullfights in the arena where gladiators once fought, and in the tiniest villages you're likely to stumble on some small Roman temple or bit of aqueduct turned by later citizens into a village square. Also in Arles, the biggest market in France spreads all over the streets every Saturday. You can wander through stalls filled with meat and cheese, vegetables and flowers, antiques and leather goods, kitchen gadgets and hardware, and livestock. Old women carry chickens about, squawking, by their feet, and birds and rabbits wait in cages to be taken home as pets. You can find a chipmunk (écureuil de Corée) for $30, and a bat (roussette des Indes) for a tidy $130. You can buy (and we did) beautiful baskets like the ones the French shop with—an ecological alternative to paper bags—and see hand-dyed yarns guaranteed to quicken the heartbeat of any American needlewoman. Along the thoroughfare, people take time out in sidewalk cafes for a glass of wine or citron pressé—fresh lemon juice, a little sugar, and water, which you combine yourself from pitchers brought to your table.

In Avignon, you can snap a picture of the famous bridge; at Les Baux, climb to the top of an ancient hilltop town with pure white, narrow streets, a cathedral, and a view of the white-cliffed province that will take your breath away. And after you've seen the sights, you can stop for lunch at L'Ousteau de Baumanière, a favorite of James Beard's for many years, where the maitresse herself takes your order and brings you little flaky morsels pour amuser la bouche (to amuse your mouth) while you await the meal. We indulge in duck à l'orange and a beautiful raspberry mousse for dessert.

West of Marguerittes, drive through the Massif de Cédrès, along the crest of the mountain where the Provençales take Sunday picnics, and from which, on a clear day, you can see the Alps shimmering and white in the distance. Nearby, there's sail-planing over the Alpilles, or, as the French call it, vol-a-voile. To the south, you can explore the vast salt marshes that form the delta of the Rhône—the famous Camargue, Everglades of France. Bulls, flamingos, and horses run wild here—some of the horses are so wild you must beckon them twice before they'll saunter over to take the apple from your hand. You can go riding on the beach, and have a picnic of sandwiches made by your Chez des Amis hostess, a bottle of wine, and Charantais melons, eaten in the company of horses looking on with great interest.

Our final meal with Chez des Amis is a fresh ratatouille served by Mme. de Maleville with the surprise of eggs poached on top (recipe, below). She tells us as we eat that Chez des Amis is as rewarding for her as it is for Americans. "The French take a long time to warm up, even to each other," she says. "Americans are instantly friendly and talkative, and very easy to like." And that's good, because we, as guests in France, are cultural representatives. As we discover our families, they're discovering us, and maybe, we hope, deciding that Americans are pretty nice bunch. But the real advantage of Chez des Amis is that it gets you involved not as a spectator, but as a participant, a caring member for a few days, of a household full of living, interesting people. You make human connections for which there's no substitute. Isabelle de Maleville has only one criticism of Chez des Amis: "Just when you want to get to know people better, they leave. I'm always sad to see them go."

GETTING THERE

Air France, a great friend of Chez des Amis, can fly you to Paris, from which it's best to rent a car for the rest of the trip (Chez des Amis can arrange your air transportation and car rentals). Leave yourself lots of time to get from one family to the next. There are so many charming places to visit that you'll be frustrated if your deadlines are too tight.

Your Chez des Amis rooms will cost between $24 and $47 a night, depending on the type of accommodations and on the number of people in your party. This includes breakfast of bread or croissants, coffee, tea, or chocolate, and whatever else your hostess can bring to make you happy. If you want to have lunches or dinners with the families, these will cost an average of about $7 apiece, payable in francs to each family. Incidentally, many country hotels, restaurants, shops, and gas stations want to be paid in francs. Amis, Box HG, 139 West 87th Street, New York, N.Y. 10024.

Mme. Isabelle de Maleville's Ratatouille

INGREDIENTS
1 generous tablespoon olive oil, or more
1 large onion, sliced
4 small eggplants, cut in 1-inch cubes
4 zucchini, sliced
5 large tomatoes, peeled, seeded, and cut in chunks

METHOD
□ In olive oil, saute onion. When it turns yellow, add eggplant, zucchini, tomatoes, garlic, peppercorns, salt, bouquet garni, green pepper. Simmer over low heat at least 1½ to 2 hours—it's wiser to prepare the day before; it tastes even better reheated. At serving time, make little nests in middle of vegetables in which to break eggs, cook over moderate heat until eggs reach desired doneness. Serves 4.

Mme. Louise-Marie de Champeaux's Marquise au Chocolat

INGREDIENTS
3 squares unsweetened chocolate (3 oz.)
5 ounces German sweet chocolate
½ pound sweet butter
2 ounces sugar
4 eggs, separated

METHOD
□ Break the chocolate into pieces; soften over low heat with a little water (¼ cup or more) until the consistency is thick and smooth. Let cool. Cream butter; mix with sugar and egg yolks; add chocolate. Blend well before folding in stiffly beaten whites. Turn into a charlotte mold, let set surrounded by ice in the refrigerator about 4 hours before serving. To unmold, dip the iced mold in warm water. Serve with vanilla sauce. Preparation time: 15 minutes, 4 hours before serving. Serves 6.

Mme. Veronique Desouche's Pintade (Guinea hen) au Cognac

INGREDIENTS
3 tablespoons butter
1 guinea hen, about 2 pounds, or squab or pheasant
1 medium-large onion, finely chopped
Salt and pepper to taste
1 port glass of cognac (2 to 3 ounces)

METHOD
Place butter in a small flameproof caserole with a lid. Heat until melted, then add hen and brown all over on low heat, about 15 minutes. Do not let butter burn. Add onion and season to taste with salt and pepper. Cook until onion turns golden (another 15 to 20 minutes), add cognac, and simmer to evaporate alcohol. Cover and stew 15-20 minutes until tender. If desired, stuff the bird with a mixture of finely chopped liver, broken-up sausage, and a soup spoon of raisins that have soaked in cognac ½ hour or more and then drained. Salt and pepper to taste. Total cooking time: 45 to 60 minutes. Serves 2.

the creative come to Captiva. It is peace and strength, and nature, silence and solitude. At dusk the pelicans perch on the rocks, gathering for an evening chat. You peek, but quietly back away. It seems to be their island. As Mrs. Lindbergh described it, "an island from the world and the world's life... the waves echo behind me."

South Seas Plantation covers 75 of Captiva's 448 acres. And for the visitor this resort is Captiva, as everything is there, from sports to shells to serenity. The rest of the island is mainly residential—neither seen nor heard as the vegetation is luxurious, and the houses are deep in the island greenery.

At the turn of the century, the resort was a coconut and bay lime plantation. During the 1920s it became a fishing camp with guests coming over from the mainland on the mail boat. In 1963, a causeway was built, the mail ferry retired, the mangrove swamp was cleared to make a yacht basin, the golf course was started, a new plantation house built. A quiet camp was becoming quite a resort.

Since 1972, South Seas Plantation has been owned by Mariner Properties, and now there is tennis by day and by night, a sailing school, a 9-hole golf course, baby sitters and bicycles for hire, as well as golf carts and small cars.

Yet with all these pleasures and possibilities, the resort retains an old-fashioned flavor. Sometimes the only movement seems to be the swoop of a pelican's wings, the swaying palm trees, the curve of the surf. The overall look, perhaps because of the 11 white wooden guest cottages with screened porches, is that of a military post happily forgotten somewhere in the tropics. The King's Crown (that's the name of a shell) dining room was once the commissary of the old plantation; the cottages of board and batten housed the hired help. Beyond the coconut trees, the new plantation house sits like an ante-bellum stage beyond the coconut trees, the new plantation house sits like an ante-bellum stage. PITTING ENERGY INTO plants

How to grow luxurious grapevines, date palms, guava, and citrus foliage from pits

Avocados have become in the last decade one of the most popular of indoor trees. Growing them from pits has reached almost cult proportions in some areas of the country, with window after window in the cities lined with graceful homegrown avocado trees as the urbanite's answer to his country cousin's garden. But there's more, much more in the line of attractive and interesting, in some cases even usable, plants recyclable from the pits and parings discarded in the kitchen.

The citrus family is perhaps the most obvious of these. Orange, lemon, and grapefruit trees can all be grown with ease. Date palms are an intriguing addition to indoor greenery. Stuff the dates with cream cheese and stuff the pits in a pot. It's almost that simple, although there is one little catch, which I'll get into later.

But first the easy citrus, which means all of them from limes to grapefruit (except, of course, the seedless varieties). All you need is a pit, a pot, and a warm, sunny spot. Just about any soil that of sharp sand in consideration of the fact that most citrus fruits are grown in Florida and California and I think of both as sandy states. It's not exactly a precise botanical approach. But it works. Keep the soil moist, and the seeds should sprout in 3 weeks or so.

You may see flowers bloom in your citrus grove after 6 or 7 years, but very rarely fruit. Don't let this discourage you from a grove; the shiny dark leaves of citrus plants make them about as attractive foliage plants as you can grow indoors.

Still, if you want something more harvestable, consider ginger. The burgeoning of gourmet cooking has more and more of us slicing it up in the kitchen.

And while many Oriental dishes call for fresh ginger, it's not something found with frequency yet at the local greengrocer's or the supermarket. Growing your own is no problem, once you've gotten to the root of the problem—finding your first fresh root. Chinatown is a sure source if the local health food store doesn't happen to have the roots in stock.

Select firm, plump rhizomes. Quite often you'll see small bulging eyes just waiting to burst forth into growth. At other times the ginger looks lifeless. As long as it's not dried out and shriveled, go ahead and plant it anyway. Use a rich, loose, all-purpose potting soil. Water well to settle the ginger in, making sure the rhizome is barely covered with soil.

Ginger is a snappy grower. Within 2 weeks you'll see small shoots breaking the surface. In 2 months you'll have a stand of bamboolike stalks almost 3 feet tall. These stalks will die down as new ones sprout up. Just prune off the browning stalks to keep things neat.

Every 6 to 9 months the shoots will all die down. Dig up the rhizome and you'll now find half a dozen where you planted one. Replant two, reserve, and wash off the rest. They will keep several months in the vegetable crisper of your refrigerator—assuming you don't go on a Chinese cooking spree.

Whereas ginger grows fast enough to be considered almost an instant plant, the same can't be said for date palms. Start now and you'll have a nice 6-foot specimen for your grandchildren. Then why grow them, you may well ask. Because the seed's (Continued on page 86)

RECYCLING POTS

In this throwaway society of ours, we've learned to think of many things in terms of being used only once. Yet there are a lot of items that serve functions for which they weren't originally intended.

Take the ubiquitous clear plastic bag wrapping our daily bread. Use it to cover your pot filled with seeds, and you have a mini greenhouse that helps speed up germination. Or take those little plastic cup creamers that come with restaurant coffee. They make perfect individual starter pots for sprouting seedlings such as grapes and citrus fruit. The wooden coffee stirrers that often go with them these days can be recycled as plant labels.

Aluminum trays from brown-and-serve rolls and such also make useful seed-starting trays. And those spray detergent bottles, particularly the pistol-grip varieties, make excellent misters to keep the humidity around your plants pleasantly high. Look around the kitchen and you'll probably come up with another dozen creative ideas for recycling containers to go with your recycled plants.
Anything you plant in your garden wants to grow, and if the soil’s halfway decent and you give it just a little help, it will. (And your own fresh peas, beans and sweet corn will not only save you some money with every meal, they’ll likely taste better, too.)

Use Scotts Vegetable Garden Fertilizer once. (Just once.) See what a crop you get.

The chief difference between getting, say, up to 10 pounds of tomatoes and only half that much is simply fertilizer.

And you don’t have to make a career out of putting it down.

We’ve created a vegetable garden fertilizer you use just once a planting. It has enough nourishment in it to last for your entire crop.

(This is different from quick-release fertilizers that give you a burst of food right away and then run out on you. They’re the ones that tell you to “apply” two or three times.)

We make our fertilizer so that it releases nitrogen gradually, enough at first to get your plants off and running, and then a little more week after week.

It’s this steady feeding that helps give you all those extra tomatoes, beans and corn. And one feeding is enough unless you’re in the South and have sandy soil.

You can use this fertilizer on all your vegetables and you don’t have to worry about harming them. It’s a slow-release fertilizer, so it won’t burn. Just follow the directions on the box.

The best time to use it is when you plant your seeds or seedlings. Just spread it as evenly as possible and work it into the soil an inch or two.

We’ve tested this fertilizer ourselves on all sorts of vegetables so we know what it can do. And we sell it with the simplest guarantee we can think of. “If for any reason you are not satisfied with results after using this product, you are entitled to get your money back. Simply send us evidence of purchase and we will mail you a refund check promptly.”

You won’t have to go looking for us. We’ll be right here in Marysville, Ohio.
Pitting into plants

there, to paraphrase the old mountain climber's reply. Indeed, the seed is the challenge, one that few plant recyclers fail to take once they've grown the more common after-dinner gardening plants. Also, since the date palm is used to dry desert climes, it's an ideal plant for homes with low humidity, so often the situation with central heat.

The key to growing date palms lies at your local health food store. Most commercial dates are pasteurized. Having been oven baked, the seeds lose all desire to grow. However, the "unpasteurized" fruits at specialty stores are raring to grow. Or at least willing to grow.

Barely cover the seed, and make sure to keep the pot in a warm spot. Bottom heat is particularly beneficial, and a starter location on the radiator cover or close to the kitchen stove does wonders in getting the leaf to sprout. After 4 to 6 weeks, one long thin leaf should emerge. That's about it for the first year. Given a few more years, however, you'll have a splendid specimen. Meanwhile, keep the plant in a sunny spot behind your other pots as an exercise in patience; remember to keep it watered.

Pineapples give you plants the minute you pot them up. They reproduce vegetatively, rather than by seed, and most fruitfully so, which is how they became such a universally cultivated crop in the Orient. In the 1500s European explorers stocked up on the fruit in Central America for voyages across the Pacific. After dining on the fruit they simply chucked the pineapple tops behind them. Wherever it landed, the top took root, and you could chalk up another garden to the explorers. For a potted version of the same story, lob off the top of a fresh pineapple. Scrape out any remaining fruit from the top and let the cut dry overnight. Remove the bottom few leaves of the rosette. Now put it on top of the soil in a pot and pin it in place with straight pins to keep it from wobbling. Keep the soil watered as you would real greenery. The rosette of leaves will appear to be just sitting there for several weeks. But what it's really up to is root development. Keep your eye on the pineapple top; after a while you'll see the leaves in the center getting longer. It's off and growing.

Small guava trees, with their chartreuse leaves and peeling shaggy bark, make truly unique showy specimens. The only way you'll have one is to grow your own from fresh fruit. Plant as you do other seeds; but be sure to water well and keep the soil wet. Guavas are one of the few house plants it's almost impossible to overwater. Though it's a good idea to let the soil become reasonably dry on occasion, don't let it reach the point where the leaves drop, or the plant will stunt. Keep the soil wet. Guavas are one of the few house plants it's almost impossible to overwater. Though it's a good idea to let the soil become reasonably dry on occasion, don't let it reach the point where the leaves drop, or the plant will stunt.

As a last thought on after-dinner plants, consider the grape. Grapevines trained up the side of a window will frame your other greenery admirably. And, unlike their vineyard fellows, indoor grapevines grown from seed will stay evergreen. They won't bear fruit, though, in most cases, not even if you decide later to plant them outside. The first grape seeds I planted are represented by one robust 10-year-old plant that's been fruitlessly hanging onto a trellis for some half-dozen years now.

But with recycled plants, it's the growing that counts, not the eating. Grape seeds will germinate in just about any soil if barely covered and kept moist when planted. The vines themselves, once they start reaching for the ceiling, prefer their soil a little drier than most of your other potted endeavors.

For real vintage greenery, grow three or four vines to an 8-inch pot. This assures you of a lush robust vineyard striking enough to be talked about.

 HOW TO PLAN A TERRACE GARDEN

BY MARYBETH WESTON

Even though Kerry FitzGerald has made Manhattan gardens for Nelson Rockefeller and Woody Allen, designing his own penthouse garden was a tall order. Every window and door looked out on a blank wall, a 6½-foot parapet hemming in a long narrow terrace. The location was good—as was the eastern exposure—the tile walkway was solid; water pressure, drainage, and outdoor electrical outlets checked out to his professional satisfaction (he heads a firm called The City Gardener); so despite the limitations, he rented the tiny penthouse as a home office and set about planning his garden “from the inside out, as almost any garden must be planned, for a pleasing view year-round.”

He painted the walls white—“white reflects maximum light, and this can do a lot for a city garden.” He built portable redwood boxes—“any renter’s garden should be portable.” He also painted the boxes white and lined them along each side of the 10-by-45-foot terrace. “If the terrace had been even 2 feet wider, I might have varied the width of the pathway between the boxes, but I needed all the space I could get for walking and for tables and chairs.” For height, he anchored a box on top of the parapet and filled it with cascading white petunias and spiky ivory-belled yuccas. “The flowers take the eye skyward, and that was the only way I could enlarge my space.”

The boxes, reinforced at the corners with aluminum bands, are mostly 18 inches wide and deep—“with anything shallower you risk losing plants to frost.” Two silvery-leaved poplar trees and a Japanese black pine grow in separate boxes 24 inches deep. A row of vines—clematis, wisteria, climbing hydrangea, honeysuckle—hugs the inner wall on a trellis of large-mesh, vinyl-covered wire. The trellis can be unhooked from the roofline and laid down to make any painting job easy.

Planted with city-wise flowers, herbs, shrubs, and trees, within one year this long lean passageway became a secret enclosure where one is aware only of plants and sky. Some of the outer boxes contain evergreen vinca, red-berried cotoneaster, and Euonymous Fortunei “Minima” for year-round greenery. In the cold months, balsam boughs cover all of the boxes to prevent thawing and heaving and to give a lush view during the winter.

By St. Patrick’s Day, the boughs are lifted to let the sun coax up the first green shoots, and spring comes with “an extravaganza of bulbs,” all planted the previous fall. Hundreds of crocus, snowdrops, daffodils, miniature tulips burst into bloom, as do trees and shrubs: a Bechtel’s crab apple, a variegated dogwood, apricot Exbury azaleas, ‘Tang’ rhododendron, fragrant Viburnum Carlesii. As the bulbs begin to fade, Mr. FitzGerald lifts and gives them to country friends for naturalizing: here they are planted too thickly to spread, and they take precious space that can be filled with color. Flats of early pansies, English daisies, petunias, and wax begonias join perennials such as Candytuft. Shasta daisies, geranium, lily, veronica, lythrum, zinnias, cosmos, and marigolds are added later to make summer three months of brilliant flowers, like an English cutting garden.

In the fall, chrysanthemums and autumn lilies replace the fading annuals. Christmas brings twinkling white lights wrapped around the spiral-cut topiary junipers on each side of the pool. And soon after, all begins again. “It’s rather fun to be in a confined space,” Mr. FitzGerald says. “I know each plant: I can almost measure its daily growth.”

The focus of the garden is a splashing pool set against the parapet opposite the living room windows. Softly lighted at night, it is banked by green plants with flowers wrapped around the spiral-cut topiary junipers on each side of the pool. The liner, available at building supply centers and stripped of its paper backing, keeps the rich porous soil from draining out with excess water and muddying the terrace. Mr. FitzGerald uses soil with lots of leaf mold and lightweight perlite, covered with a layer of porous fiberglass insulating material, 3/4 of an inch thick. The liner, available at building supply centers and stripped of its paper backing, keeps the rich porous soil from draining out with excess water and muddying the terrace. Mr. FitzGerald uses soil with lots of leaf mold and lightweight perlite, kept at least a half-inch below the top of the boxes to prevent overflow and spattering. Each fall when plants are removed, the surface is scraped off and replaced with a half-inch of fresh mix and calla lilies. The marble fountainhead was found in Rome some 12 years ago and stashed away for the time and place. With a hard-working Little Giant pump and a short piece of clear plastic tubing, it plashes a cool stream of recycled water through the days and nights of summer. The pool is a redwood box with a watertight lead liner, welded by Mr. FitzGerald’s plumber. It has a bathtub stopper, and a few rocks set in the bottom to add music to the splash. The pool is refilled twice weekly because of evaporation, and is drained occasionally so that it can be cleaned.

The planting boxes also are designed for easy care and good drainage. The bottoms rest on cleats an inch above the terrace floor—“about a broom’s width for cleaning”—and are drilled with 3/4-inch drainage holes at 6-inch intervals. Inside each box is a half-inch of gravel covered with a layer of porous fiberglass insulating material, 3/4 of an inch thick. The liner, available at building supply centers and stripped of its paper backing, keeps the rich porous soil from draining out with excess water and muddying the terrace. Mr. FitzGerald uses soil with lots of leaf mold and lightweight perlite, kept at least a half-inch below the top of the boxes to prevent overflow and spattering. Each fall when plants are removed, the surface is scraped off and replaced with a half-inch of fresh mix to prevent overflow and spattering. Each fall when plants are removed, the surface is scraped off and replaced with a half-inch of fresh mix because city soil becomes acid from pollutants. Major fertilizing is done in spring, though some bone meal is always added in fall when bulbs are planted. Little doses of 5-10-5 are often watered in to replace the nutrient’s lost from the frequent waterings that a container garden needs—usually weekly in spring and daily in summer. Mr. FitzGerald also warns that a city garden may even need water in winter; “a thaw followed by harsh winds can dry out trees and shrubs.”

Long experience with city gardens has given him other helpful pointers: For terrace pathways he recommends decking or tile, not gravel, which is high-maintenance and heavy; and not plastic grass, which gets dirty and can be hard to sweep and dangerous to vacuum if wet. As a long-time garden lover, who is also a cat lover, he even has a suggestion for people who have trouble keeping pets from eating plants. “In spring, city cats are hungry for fresh things. Try giving them diced vegetables and shredded lettuce.”

What makes Kerry FitzGerald, a native of New Zealand, a confirmed city gardener? Maybe it’s waking up to the sound of a fountain and birds 15 stories up. Or coming home to honey-sweet plants when the city is a honeycomb of light. Or, he adds, “Sitting out in the moonlight in the city, among the flowers. That’s something very special.”

The skincare system that's as personal as your signature.

When an Erno Laszlo specialist designs a skincare ritual for you, it’s based not only on her evaluation of your skin and its present condition. She must also analyze the answers you provide to questions about the way your skin acts, looks and feels on a day to day basis. This personalized approach is the very essence of Erno Laszlo Skincare. And one of the reasons it is so effective. Faithfully followed, the ritual recommended for you can produce a noticeable improvement in the health and appearance of your skin.

Meet with a trained Erno Laszlo specialist. She will explain how to use the scientifically formulated preparations that comprise your personal skincare ritual. And you’ll receive an Erno Laszlo membership card bearing the name that’s as personal to you as the skincare program it represents.

6-point program for house and yard

BY DEANNE RAFFEL

Spring calls for the annual post-winter checkup of house and yard. Snow, wind, and freezing temperatures can wreak havoc on many materials. Masonry does not survive well under severe winter conditions. Heaving earth makes it break at weak points. Most large cracks appear at sewers. In some areas, masonry may have even crumbled. Check stucco, sidewalks, foundations, and patios for damage. Clean out broken areas and patch. Large cracks should be opened up, undercut, and re-cemented with patching cement. Follow directions on the package.

Roofing curls, dries out, and cracks with age. Fissures develop, letting in rain that can ruin ceilings. Examine the roof carefully. Check flashing around the chimney, too. Use roofing nails and roofing cement to flatten shingles. Fill in crevices with cement.

Gutters suffer from snow and ice. Seams may split and open. Downspouts may have longitudinal joints open. Clean out rubble and patch all small openings with silicone sealer.

Check storm windows for damage. In all probability, caulking is dry and falling out in chunks. Scrape out as much loose caulking as possible and replace with flexible butyl or silicone. Remember, if glass has to be replaced, by law, now, all doors must be fitted with shatter-proof plastic.

Screens may need surgery. Patch small holes but replace the entire screen if the rip is large. Rake away leaves and other debris around the foundation. Check to see that there is no soil erosion next to the house. Improper banking and erosion causes a wet basement when there is a heavy downpour. Rebark soil if necessary so that the water will wash away from the house when it rains. Remember: No wood should be stored adjacent to the structure. It is an invitation to swarming termites in the spring. Look for mud tunnels running up the foundation masonry. If any are evident, deal with them immediately.

For better burning

Designed to make your fireplace yield more heat effectively, this heater has grate of stainless steel tubes behind following glass doors. By convection, the tub draw in cool room air, which is heat by the wood or coal fire then returned warmed, to the room and not up chimney. Tempered glass doors help retain heat, keep smoke out of the room, provide safety from flying sparks. The unit slides into place against the fireplace opening, is anchored in two places for many sizes and models range from $425 to $632. It has an air-dra control; an optional extra is an electrically powered blower. Thermograte Enterprises, 2785 N. Fairview, St. Paul, Minn. 55113.

Dramatize your lighting

A ready-made particle board light trough, behind which light tracks and lighting units may be mounted, is now available in place of costly custom installations. The Lytetwork serves as a ceiling-height baffle or valance to conceal a wall washing or accent lighting system that highlights paintings, sculpture, draperies, bookshelves, or provides general light. The white vinyl veneer baffle boards are 60 or 120 inches long, 6 inches high, with a 21/2-inch lip to mask lighting equipment. Corner plates, end plates, installation hardware are included. For use with Lytespan track, "A" lamp wall washers, or Mini-Swivel wall washers. Lightolier, Inc. Available through lighting and electrical wholesalers.

Two-part alarm

A smoke detector, LifeGuard II Fyrnetics, Inc., is radio controlled to sound alarms at two places in a house simultaneously. The two-unit system consists of the smoke detector (alarm and transmitter with a double ionization element) and a portable receiver with alarm. In case of smoke or fire the detector alone activates the transmitter; it signals the receiver by radio frequency control and it also sounds an alarm even at 200 feet from the detector. Operating on a 9-volt battery, the detector has a testing button, an automatic reset when smoke has cleared. The receiver plugs into normal house hold current, has a reset button to turn off the alarm, a power indicator light. Suggested price under $100 at department, hardware, home-center stores.

An expert shows you how to give an ordinary oak floor

A FABULOUS PARQUET FINISH

Do you love bare wood floors? Marie Antoinette did, and ever since 18th-century France, parquet—the art of laying a wood floor in geometric patterns—has been considered the ultimate woodwork underfoot.

One of the most respected specialists in fine wood and parquet floors today is the William J. Erbe Co., Inc., of New York City. Founded in 1907, it is a third-generation family business that prides itself in "Thinking not how many acres of floor we can install but how well we can do each square foot," in the words of David Erbe, son of the founder. The Erbes have put wood floors of museum quality in beautiful private houses in America and abroad. Sometimes their floors have even been donated to museums as examples of superb workmanship. When the Kennedys were in residence at the White House, it was the Erbe company which refurnished the floors to accompany the redecoration organized by Jacqueline Kennedy.

As 12-inch squares have diagonals of 17 inches, let ⅜ inch equal 17 inches, ⅜ inch equal 5½ inches. Pattern for a 16-by-19-foot room above.

Today parquet can be very expensive, so we asked the William J. Erbe Co. to show you how to stain a parquet pattern on an ordinary wood floor.

Step 1: Scale the design to suit your room. Measure room dimensions. Sketch room as large as possible on graph paper. See diagram, above, for how to divide floor into a diagonal pattern of 12-inch squares. Each square has a diagonal 17 inches long. So that the design will be symmetrical, each side of the "parqueted" area must be marked off into an even number of 17-inch divisions.

Step 2: Sand floor to an absolutely smooth, even, scratch-free surface. Since good sanding machines weigh at least 100 pounds, this is work for profes-

Step 3: Chalk in border lines of parquet design with a chalk-line—you'll need a person to help you. Mark off each side into appropriate 17-inch divisions. Be sure marks are accurate. Then chalk in diagonals. Check all chalked angles with triangle: Squares in center must be as true as those at the perimeter!

Step 4: Tape the design on floor. Each chalked line is "framed" with a continuous strip of tape. For 1½-inch-wide diagonal stripes, place tape ¾ of an inch away from chalked line. For 2¼-inch-wide border stripes, place tape ½ inches away from chalked line. Tape all stripes in one direction, then other.

Step 5: Paint on stripes with walnut stain, 2. Apply lightly, with semidy.

Step 6: To whitewash and seal the pattern, apply (very evenly!) the blend of cheesecloth, going back and forth over a small area at a time to get even coverage. Wait till thoroughly dry—overnight or at least 12 hours on a dry day. Remove tape. Vacuum floor.

Step 7: To protect floor, blend equal parts satin and gloss polyurethane with cheesecloth, going back and forth over a small area at a time to get even coverage. Waiting till thoroughly dry—overnight or at least 12 hours on a dry day. Remove tape. Vacuum floor.

You will need:

- Pencil
- Yardstick
- Ruler
- Chalk-line measurer
- Any size 45°/90° drafting triangle
- Masking tape
- Wallpaper roller

HOW TO BRIGHTEN YOUR HALL

When designer-muralist Richard Neas spotted the hallway on page 116, it not even a window to cheer it up. He added his own sunshine with paint and paper.

To create this easy, inexpensive hallway, Mr. Neas followed these steps:

- Paint the background. Brush white mel on the ceiling and yellow on the walls—light colors to add height and widen cramped quarters. A glossy finish goes on doors and moldings, too.

- Accent the positive. Stripe door-panel moldings with the walls' yellow, then try the accents to the raised door panels with designs of blue and yellow, stenciled freehand or with a stencil as desired. For the border around the doors, apply a bit of blue acrylic paint over the walls—follow the simple technique outlined in House & Garden, February, '78, page 152. Try the same effect und the ceiling edges, then add a bold stripe at the floor molding and the sides of the doors. Let everything dry right.

- Get to the bottom of things. Sand and prime the floor and apply a primer/sealant. Let dry for 24 hours. Next, apply three coats of white deck enamel, letting each dry 24 hours. Apply the design in acrylic paints, either by hand or with a Stencil-a-Door. Then, border with comb painting a wide blue stripe. Let the design dry, then seal with two protective coats of glossy polyurethane (let each dry right).

- And, for the last act. Read your paint cans for final touches—cut manageable strips of Con-Tact paper “Dutch Tiles” pattern and press along the sides of the doors, cutting tiles to fit at corners. Cut a wide border along floor and around ceiling. Plaster sconces were hand-painted to nplement tiles; you could glue similar outs to your lights.

Mr. Neas, who painted the blue and its foot-the-eye porcelain over the floors himself, advises that you “coax an artist friend” to help, but use your imagination—it will make the dramatic difference.

The trend is to the naturals. Quarry greys. Golden grains. Verdant forests. Bold sunsets. A spectrum of clear, warm natural shades. Benjamin Moore has captured them beautifully in their new Natural and Earth Tone collection of interior and exterior paint colors.

See your Benjamin Moore dealer. He really knows his paint. And his colors.

DECOUPAGE

"Everyone has grown up with the skills needed for découpage," says Leslie Linsley, shown at work on the beautiful chest on page 116. If you can cut, paint, and paste, you can follow her easy step-by-step directions (and read more in her book Fabulous Furniture Decorations, the latest in over 12 crafts books by this expert).

For the cabinet pictured, or a similar piece of furniture, you will need:
1. any all-purpose paint remover
2. scraper or putty knife
3. Fine steel wool, grade #0000
4. 2 throwaway sponge brushes, 1-inch brush
5. 1 book to cut designs out of, or buy special découpage prints in crafts stores.
6. Cement for gluing the designs — Miss Linsley recommends 3M's Spra-Ment, which allows you to lift up the print and reposition it if you change your mind — or use any white, clear-drying glue, such as Elmer's.
7. Varnish — Miss Linsley uses polyurethane, prefers a satin or matte finish; or use any indoor wood varnish, or Krylon spray varnish. You will apply 5 to 10 coats of any of these, but don't overbuy, as varnish spoils quickly. If you use an acrylic paint, water-based, be sure to apply the varnish, oil-based, with a new brush.
8. Sandpaper — #400, super fine — Wet-or-Dry brand by 3M — one sheet.

For the nicest possible finish, it's best to completely strip the piece of furniture, especially if it was previously painted. Remove any hardware, then apply paint remover according to manufacturer's directions.

If Kohler didn’t make the best whirlpool baths you can buy, we wouldn’t make them at all.

Kohler’s leadership in design begins with something very basic:
The bathtub. We design ours to accommodate you, not the hidden whirlpool mechanism. That's why there are no awkward ridges or bulges in our tubs. Your comfort and safety come first.

And, of course, your enjoyment. So we give you more jets than most other whirlpool baths. And we make them adjustable to let you localize the massaging action. Then we add dual independent air controls so you can regulate the amount of hydro-massage you want.

But the superiority of Kohler whirlpool baths doesn't stop with greater comfort and stimulation. We also give you a choice of styles and materials, including the only enameled cast iron models available. And we give you the durability of solid brass parts, plus the convenience and safety of automatic low voltage controls, one with a digital time display.

Look at all the facts about Kohler whirlpool baths. Look for your Kohler dealer (in the U.S. and Canada) in the Yellow Pages, or for more information send $1.50 to Box WC, KOHLER CO., KOHLER, WIS. 53044. (Please mention this publication's name.)

How to take your decorating in hand

If you like to do things yourself, you're not alone. Two out of five Americans are active in woodworking, weaving, ceramics, and other crafts, according to a recent Harris poll. Cooking schools have quadrupled in the last five years. Crafts courses to the master-degree level are offered in 15,000 schools and colleges. The American Crafts Council's library boasts 3,400 handbooks and. Home centers have doubled to 25,000 over the last four years. We're gathering where the craft action is: 50,000 people were attracted to the great Rhinebeck Craft Fair last June. The do-it-yourself project is at the center of living now. This issue speaks to your hands. Whatever your decorating interest, you can find ideas and inspiration, starting with these:

paint

Handpaint a durrie rug on the floor. A good idea, particularly if you have an oddly shaped room, paint an Indian durrie rug pattern on the floor. First sand down the surface very well. Apply pattern in acrylic paint. Coat with polyurethane to seal design. Prudence Spencer, interior designer.

Paint cement floors to look like tiled floors. Turn a cement porch floor, or even all the cement floors in a new house, into a handsome tiled floor. First treat with concrete sealer. Then sand to a smooth surface. Paint with terra-cotta latex paint, cover with antique glaze. Hand-stencil on a grid pattern to resemble tiles. Polyurethane to seal pattern. It's money-saving. Linda Carbutt, interior designer.

Wallpaper picture frames. Buy inexpensive frames from the variety store and apply wallpaper borders. Attach with a thin coat of Eimer's glue, sponged firmly on the frame. Spray a polyurethane finish for protection. Hint: Keep a decorating scrapbook to collect how-to ideas, pretty scraps of paper, articles from magazines. John Robert Moore, interior designer.

Wallpaper everything in the bathroom except the walls. Cover the moldings, vanity, towel bars, window jambs, boxes, shelves, mirror frames with a vinyl paper that's sturdy and washable. Apply with vinyl adhesive paste. When doing mirrors, cover the whole surface and out around the frame with a razor blade. Towel bars can be stapled as well as glued. Ronald Cacciola, interior designer.

Build a storage partition with a window. Divide off two areas, say kitchen and dining room, with a wooden storage unit with doors that give access on both sides. Put in a glass window at the top, so it doesn't cut out light. Hint: Before starting this kind of structural project, live in the space you want to change. Willy Van Bel, architect.

Build a woodshed, or a garage, or a studio. Organize twenty-five friends into a-weekend help party. It takes no time to frame up and enclose a space. Get the materials, tools, and work out the various tasks for each person ahead of time. It can be a lot of fun. A large group can do a job in a weekend that would take two people at least a month. Have a party with dancing at the end. David Sellers, architect.

Enclose a porch with painted canvas walls. Make canvas "walls" to the dimensions of the open spaces. Be sure to treat fabric with Gesso waterproof finish. Then handpaint the canvas with your own designs—perhaps a window, or an etagere with ginger jars to match the print of sofa pillow. In winter, canvases can be brought inside to serve as screens or paintings. Kate Wharton, interior designer.

Fabric and stencil a chest of drawers. Cover the entire piece of furniture with red and white ticking. Then stencil red hearts on each drawer, five on the top drawer, four on the next, three on the next, and so on. Before you begin, make a sketch, think the project through. Choose the right tools. For instance, use cuticle scissors for small areas, larger scissors for larger areas. Leslie Linsley, crafts designer.

Make a birdhouse. Buy some terra-cotta or brown clay. Roll out to 1/4-inch thick. Cut out four sides, the base, and two sections for the pitched room. Use a coil of clay to seal all edges together. (If you want to add texture, roll clay on woven place mats or burlap.) Let dry for a week. Take to a local kiln to be fired. Hint: Be sure and make the clay item larger than you anticipate the finished piece. Clay shrinks when dried. Kitty Bright, Crafts designer.
If your rooms need a quick refresher, a little pep talk, a livelier look, you've come to the right place. Starting here, an action portfolio of inventive ideas to show that whatever your decorating problem is...

How do you rejuvenate a stuffy Victorian?

Strip it down to its original charms

When you remove a century of paint and add air and light, suddenly a house can be young again

Even with its new white trim, the countenance of this 1879 beach house remains uncompromisingly Victorian. But inside, the Victorian has been brought right up to date by the simplest means—restoring the best of the original architecture, stripping everything that could be stripped, using white paint everywhere, and adding inspired contemporary touches to give the house the look of today. "This is a beach house, for barefoot, indoor/outdoor living," explains interior designer Eleanore Kennedy. "Hence all natural materials and no color; the integrity of nature is part of the design." Integrity, too, is the basis of the restoration. Take the ceilings, for instance. Under layers of old paint were cherrywood moldings—different patterns in each room. "So we made a diagram of each ceiling, took down the wood, stripped and varnished it, put up white wallboard, then replaced the strips." She also stripped and revealed the cherrywood windows and natural pumpkin pine floors. Then she added the most up-to-date furnishings—the crescent-shaped white laminate banquette, with huge down-filled duck cushions, for instance, designed for the living room, left, "because we wanted some curves." White cubes on castors act as footstools or tables. No curtains or rugs anywhere.

Top: Outside, the white-trimmed house is pure Victorian.

Strip it down

rising from the dunes, the 100-year-old house was built to last by ship and dock builders. That’s why its solid shell now contrasts with the light, airy feel of the interior. Windows are unobstructed: “The beach views are works of art in themselves,” and night lighting comes from ceramic shell wall sconces on dimmers. The kitchen, left, is the only room remade from scratch (it was formerly a bedroom), since the original kitchen consisted of brick ovens in the basement—shades of Upstairs, Downstairs. For the new kitchen, along with the contemporary island, cabinets and Garland stove, designer Eleanore Kennedy installed tin ceilings and dado painted racing green. “Pressed tin was much used in Britain 100 years ago,” she explains, “and in keeping with the essential character of the house.”
What if your house is short on character?

Give it personality with add-on architecture

Moldings, a mantel, lots of glass, and a vaulted ceiling to give the space a lift

What starts out as an ordinary house on a village street can be turned into a cheerful country cottage, and here's the house that proves it. First, the old screened-in porch was annexed to the living room, doubling its size; sliding glass doors and a brand new wood-slatted deck were added to the dining room; and, in the kitchen, left and bottom left, the old ceiling was removed to reveal the original peak now beamed with pine, and a triple-paned picture window went into the once-solid rear wall. Architect Charles La Malle, who transformed the space, replaced the old floor with crisp, white, easy-to-maintain linoleum patterned like brick. Once the space was right, designer John Rogers moved in with lots of informal, comfortable furniture—some he designed himself (most of it's available in his shop in Southampton, N.Y.) and some picked up at local second-hand shops. And everywhere he could, he added his own personal touch. In the breakfast room, for instance, walls and racks are full of pots, pans, baskets for a country cottage feeling.

Give it personality

All the space in the living room, from the front of the sofa to the fireplace wall, was borrowed from the old porch. Now enclosed with windowed walls trimmed with added moldings and an old mantel, the new space blends beautifully with the old. The whole room was painted taupe and white like the exterior of the house, and Mr. Rogers decorated it with a mix of found furniture—like the sofa and armchair he redesigned and covered in durable Indian cotton—and a handful of his own cleanlined designs: the cocktail table, wrapped in lacquered Oriental wall covering and, on the left-hand wall, the chest and mirror with half rounds of bamboo. The result: a room that looks as it was always meant to.
How can you make one room live like more?

Expand with mirror, divide with books

All the light and airiness of the outdoors plus an abundance of storage may sound impossible in a one-room apartment, but it's all here—and for less than $3,000. Art director Rochelle Udell brought the view right in by mirroring walls across from the window. More mirror on the side wall expands the space. To divide it into living and sleeping areas, and hold books and music, she designed an ingenious double-faced bookcase. Composed of five interlocking modules set into a base and top, the shelves are of varying depths—16 inches for records, speakers, and stereo equipment, 12 inches for art books, and 8 inches for novels.

How one strategic bookcase and a whole lot of mirrors put new excitement into a one-room apartment
Expand and divide

Bookshelves march from the kitchen wall right into the main room (see plan, previous page) to form a separate sleeping alcove. With the bed facing the wall of windows that look out on a huge expanse of sky, "it's almost like sleeping outside," Rochelle Udell says. In the kitchen, bottom left, butcher-block shelves and counter provide storage and work space, and tiles cover a wall and then some. "Now it helps satisfy my appetite just to look at the kitchen," she says. More mirror and built-in shelves, drawers, and counter make the tiny dressing area, bottom right, work in a big way.

FIX IT!

If you're stuck with an old-fashioned kitchen and can't afford a full-fledged remodeling, you can still make it look—and work—like new. Here's how one young couple did theirs, without even replacing their old cabinets and appliances. "All it took was a lot of imagination and good old-fashioned hard work," say Pat and Tom Falzarano. The kitchen now has new graphic print wallpaper, a new vinyl floor patterned like quarry tile, simple open shelves where old cabinets once hung, and new butcher-block countertops. "It took three months of pressing on after work and on weekends, but we really learned a lot." Designers Donna Lang and Lucretia Robertson got the Falzaranos off to a well-planned start and helped with advice along the way. Since all the old appliances stayed—"they work well, and add a certain lived-in appeal"—Pat and Tom put their money where it showed, in a new background of top-quality materials. First, they cleared out everything that was no longer appropriate or useful: the window valance above the sink; the stove hood; two mismatched cabinets. Then they extended a shallow wall (a matter of studs, wallboard, and "Renoir Plaid" vinyl wallpaper by Lloyd Reed) beside the refrigerator to make it look built-in—and create a cozier breakfast nook.

Simple changes that make a big difference: stretches of open shelving where cabinets were; clean-lined wallpaper; a fresh new outlook for windows

The first thing the kitchen needed was conviction—a unifying wallpaper to replace the ditsy print, a strong statement of shutters at windows once overhung with afterthought valances. “Donna and Lucretia knew we weren’t the café curtain type,” says Pat, “and the shutters look so clean and modern.” Light chipboard shelves, cut to size at the lumberyard, and set on brackets all around the room, were an inexpensive way to add color and individuality, displaying an attractive collection of baskets, terra cotta, glasses, preserves—and the sweeping horizontal lines give the room continuity and modern dash. Attention to details ties the kitchen together: New chrome wire hardware replaced a variety of old knobs and pulls, and hutch doors were trimmed with narrow half-round molding, then painted Biscuit to match stripes painted on neighboring doors. All paint is Pittsburgh Paints’ Water Base Gloss Enamel. To offset all the whiteness, Pat and Tom painted the inside of the cabinets a spicy cinnamon color, laid a new vinyl floor, “Quarry Tile” by Armstrong, and cut butcher-block countertops from slabs of maple. “When you’re working with expensive materials, it’s important to measure carefully two or three times before you begin to cut,” cautions Tom.

How do you furnish a house in a hurry?

Try take-out furniture, a terrific new way to shop

Come to the furniture supermarket, where you can buy everything you need for the house, and decorate when you get home

If you ever wanted to wave a wand and have your rooms decorated from scratch, almost overnight, now you can do it with the new "take-out" furniture. Everything shown in this house can go straight out of the store with you. (Special fabrics take a little time to order.) Wood furniture comes in kit form, with step-by-step assembly instructions. What a way to get more decorating for your dollar. This big living room, with library, dining, and foyer areas, plus master bedroom were furnished for just over $5,000. Architecturally, the house is a match for the speed-oriented decoration. A breakthrough construction technique using precast concrete blocks and planks permitted 21 levels of roof to be put in place in only 3 days. More details from architect Dimitri Bulazel, page 223.

Nature provides the color in a house with floor-to-ceiling glass walls looking out to a tree-filled garden. These huge windows were purposely kept bare to allow maximum light and view. Floors are stone, like a greenhouse, warmed here and there with furry rugs. Clean-lined modern furniture respects the design of the house by Dimitri Bulazel: a cluster of cubes with differing ceiling heights to provide a variety of spatial experiences. The living room is furnished with five sectional seating units that form an L-shaped conversation area. Units come covered in stock fabrics, which you can take home the same day (special orders such as the sand-colored handwoven cotton here have a 3-week delivery date). There are four canvas sling chairs, and pillowed banquettes on each side of the fireplace. Two small trolley tables move around as needed. The big coffee table is a do-it-yourself project—a plywood box painted charcoal and topped with a square of rough-cut gray marble. Two alcoves off the central living space are furnished with identical carry-home-and-put-together tables—one is for dining, the other behaves as a desk in the library area. Stackable dining chairs are yellow metal, giving a sunny-day feeling under any sort of sky. Master bedroom is organized as a second sitting room with two face-to-face loveseats. Beds, tables, and terrace furniture are all put-together-yourself items. Everything from Conran’s, New York.
Are you a passionate collector or a seeker of simplicity? Do you love convivial clutter or the freedom of space? And, if you wanted to, could you change? Here, the story of just such a dilemma.

I have always been fond of things—mad, at an early age, for objects; attracted, like a magnet, to anachronisms: lacquered boxes, snuff bottles, miniatures, Venetian papers, leather-bound books, sagging sofas, porcelain, not to mention antique napkin rings, silver tea trays, battered chests, and threadbare carpets. Found objects as well as art objects, no matter: The pull of these things, to me, is their past.

There's little allure in the new, freshly lacquered artifact; somehow the aging, time-tossed object is always more seductive. Seldom do I stroll a beach without searching for some sea-worn shell; pass a creaking, antique chair or crumbling column without imagining its history; or sightsee in a foreign city without combing through antique shops.

It's not merely a question of acquisitiveness. I believe objects speak; things echo their eras. The humblest—encased in glass or poised on pedestals—peer from museums like glamorous, aging phantoms. A suave Egyptian chair; a baroque rock crystal cup; a leafy mask of Mycenean gold—these are still, yet articulate ghosts that recall distant places and people, the past.

There have been others—kings, queens, courtesans, tycoons—who felt this pull of things. Aficionados of the object all; feverish collectors of paintings, sculpture, and antiques. Some who come to mind immediately: Catherine the Great and her self-admitted “gluttony” for her raging “picture fever”; Madame de Pompadour, rearranging her houses and fussing with furniture; Heinrich Schliemann, smuggling out gold-drenched Troyan tidbits; Thomas Jefferson, waxing poetic about the ruins near Nimes; the great families of the quattrocento—the Medici, the Sforzas, the Montefeltros of Urbino. Later, there was Isabella Stua Gardener, with her house in Boston bathed like a mini-palazzo on the Brenta crammed with everything from souvenir sombreros to Roman heads and Sargent and, finally, Christina of Sweden—legendary, in her pre-Garbo era, as Scandinavian eccentric, and eclectic.

My own things, considerably more humble than those of that crowd, are treasure no less. Few are new; most are European. A bit of Renaissance glass, for example; French 19th-century map of Troy; enameled cup from the coronation of Nicholas and Alexandra. These things are like charming, old, familiar friends.

Occasionally I’ve questioned the romantic inclinations, thinking they contradict those modern dictates to Eliminate the Unnecessary; Simplify; Pare Down. Once or twice my sensible Scotch-Irish side has persuaded me to try to imagine the thrill of spareness and the freedom from things. Until, invariably, my resolve petered out: All it takes is one visit with a kindred acquisitive soul to get my baroque Italian blood going. This instinct, especially for decoration, will never suit the school of spareness. “Real luxury is space and time—you don’t want to fill them up with a...”

of things," said Halston recently, photographed, priestlike, in a bewitchingly spare mirrored bedroom. I am rapt with fascination before such starkness. It is a sleek but foreign cult, practiced in newly minted rooms without a hint of memorabilia. Rooms without things; places without past.

There are many offshoots of that look, some more utilitarian than elegant. What binds them is newness and the absence of things with patina. Silent spaces in stainless steel, flannel, Lucite, and chrome; everything solitary and shiny, nothing in profusion. One-single calla lily in the obligatory, globelike bowl. Furniture that is sensible, washable, wipable, easy to care for: sailcloth covers, seats in swirling plastic; chairs with mildew-resistant, vinyl-coated backs; alcohol-proof acrylic stacking tables and chairs of palm stumps and ogs; "sleeping chambers" with little more than a pad and a pillow.

There was a time when, seeing places like these—rooms so unlike those in my memories—I would return to my own surroundings, disquieted. How much simpler, how much more sensible and practical, would life be like that, I would ask. Why shouldn't living be cozy, in fact? Yet the company of treasured things would always reassure me; so would the words of a friend, artist Tony Duquette. "I am not new by the perfect piece of plastic," he known to have announced.

Two years ago, in fact, I came to such a confrontation. Straight out of college, with a new job and a new apartment, I decided that my affinity for things was at the very east, outmoded and old-fashioned; a bit bourgeois and sentimental; not sleek, not N, not spare, and—worst of all—not intellectual. And so, the time had come to clear away my memorabilia and Simplify My Life. Enamored of starkness, and hypnotized by the easiness of emptiness, I would become marvelously modern, un fettered by things.

Looking back now, I wonder whatever possessed me to take such a step; first, wrestling with collecting had never been my forte. Secondly, my taste in music, art, and literature has always leaned to the antique; to objects with age; to houses and cities with a strong sense of the past. Oxford, Paris, Venice; my favorite things brought to mind those romantic places—their atmosphere, their past, their rooms, their objects. And yet moving to New York made me think that this attitude would have to be amended for sleek and modern city living. Religiously I pored over magazines and studied the looks of those modern, stark rooms, wondering what was the secret of being oblivious to things. A friend lived in a gleaming, all-white apartment—a vision of minimalism if ever there was one—utterly devoid of objects. Cotton-padded sofas; bare and gleaming walls; no clutter; no books; no things. Just mirrors and plants and low-lying tables. "All you need is a sofa and a stereo," was my friend's advice.

But back in my own apartment, boxes filled with things had already stacked up, and cartons of books were en route. The walls were waiting to be painted. A decision was imminent. To be modern and with-it or submit to this outmoded affec tion for things, this clamor of objects?

And so, with the zeal of a city-dwelling Savonarola, I decided to excommunicate the extraneous and join the stream-lined Spartan school.

Among my Draconian measures: First off, the walls were to stay white. The baskets and boxes would remain in storage. Some books I thought permissible—dictionaries and reference sets, for instance. The others—my Renaissance art books, 19th-century classics bought at Blackwell's in Oxford, worn editions of Tolstoy, Flaubert, Austen, Wharton, and James—all of those would stay crated, at home in California. As for my posters, they were simply rolled in cylinders and locked in closets.

And so the room was set: gleamy-topped tables, a cool cream-covered sofa; low, white-lacquered chairs. It looked so utterly IN; so terribly spare; with just enough quasi-Oriental touches to rescue the room from being merely monastic. The cool white walls were shadowed with plants; the test-tubelike vases filled with a few tilting lilies.

At first, it worked. My new job absorbed me, and it was satisfying to see that I, too, could live without objects.

But the reformation was short-lived. I began to linger at the windows of dusty junk shops, and steal surreptitious glances at painted Regency chairs and crystal sconces; at odd and impractical bibelots and boxes; at enameled spoons and antique teapots; at little, in fact, that was minimal. Studiously I'd go to museums and study Rothkos, Lichtensteins, and Stellas, only to find that the moonlit Zurbarans and Giorgiones, the Egyptian and the Roman rooms beckoned more strongly. It was the pull of the past, once more.

What is this power of things? Is it a strong material urge? A crass acquisitive instinct? Or a mild but incurable affliction that must be treated gingerly—like weak ankles?

The revolution happened a year ago. I missed my books too much and all my memorabilia—the engravings of Oxford; the shells from my grandfather's birthplace on the Adriatic; the photographs of Paris; my small bronze Chinese dragons.

It was heresy—but happiness—to paint the walls pale terra cotta. Fervent letters implored my family to send my books and my stashed away things. Posters and paint ings, unfurled and framed, now surround me. A worn blue and white Chinese rug, found in a junk shop, was lugged back in a basket. I massed the plump, chintz-colored pillows unabashedly on a sofa, and even made more; over the other sofa went a large throw of paisley. Up went shelves above my desk; now they are lined with letter-paper in baskets, leather-bound journals, photographs, and flowers.

What is this power of things? Is it a strong material urge, perhaps? A crass

A wish to garden, cook, enjoy life, and savor the seasons can become a reality when you exchange city life for a few acres and a farmhouse. This one, restored by Robert Nunnelley and Gerald Coble, is near the Vermont border in upstate New York. The growing season is short, but with an early start in cold frames, the harvest includes tomatoes, eggplant, herbs (opal basil is a favorite), salad greens, beans, potatoes, and leeks enough to sell. Easy flowers like cleome, marigolds, and calendula spice the 100-by-50-foot garden with color; neat hay paths enclose beds.

You can cook, chat, even take a nap in the big cozy keeping room-kitchen

"I just wanted the house to look the way it used to," says Bob Nunnelley, painter and exceptional cook. The house had fallen on hard times—even a makeshift bath, added when the house had been converted into apartments, had to be cleared out of the kitchen. The trim around windows, doors, and floors was taken down to the original paint, and left that way. Planks removed from a pantry, now a sunny studio, were recycled to make the big kitchen table. Furniture, all but a few Southern family pieces, was found in and around Washington county. "We don't 'collect.' Everything is simple, and most important, there's nothing here that isn't used."

We asked for uncluttered rooms that really work for us, and we got a bonus—furniture that looks like sculpture.

"In decorating, if you try to avoid clichés, you'll get rooms that really say something."

If you're decorating a house on a limited budget, you'll probably have to make some important decisions about where to put your money. "Experience has taught us to invest in decorating that can grow with us," say Neal and Lynn Fox, whose lifestyle accommodates two full-time careers and two teenage sons. When they settled most recently into a turn-of-the-century San Francisco town house, they asked designer John Dickinson to help them design a master plan for flexible rooms with good-looking, adaptable furniture. Giving the shell of the house a simple update—grasscloth walls were painted crisp white, floors carpeted, woodwork left untouched—Mr. Dickinson devoted his energies to what goes on inside. His clients had already invested in a good sofa and two chairs, so he started with these and filled in with his own handcrafted designs. "We like the way John operates. He worked out his whole proposal, we approved it, and then he took it from there. We ended up with rooms that work, and furniture that could very well be tomorrow's antiques."

(An exhibition of John Dickinson's custom-made furniture—all new designs—in settings which he designed, will be at Macy's in San Francisco, opening April 30 with a benefit for the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art.)
JOHN DICKINSON: HOW TO CREATE THE ROOM YOU WANT

Q. When you first confronted the empty room, what’s the first thing you did?
A. Before anything else, I always measure. I measure every inch of the room, draw floor plans showing alternative ways of arranging furniture—all to scale—and work out all the traffic patterns. It’s like turning a table upside down: When you do, you know a lot more about that table. After you really understand the architectural direction of the room, then you can start choosing furniture to develop it.

Q. Do you always have to have furniture that adheres to the architecture?
A. Of course not. Quite often a contrast is the basis for a very attractive room. That’s what I had in mind for this house: crisp modern furniture set against its sober background.

Q. And the result is very appealing, even witty. It is the contrast between background and furniture that creates the wit?
A. That’s part of it. The other part is the furniture designs themselves. Those tables for instance, are carved not to look like stone, but an interpretation of stone. They’re such obvious fakes—the middle slab of the solid tables is slightly off-center—that they have character and give the room a sense of humor.

Q. Why so many of these tables?
A. Using a lot of the same styles and textures gives you a feeling of uninterrupted flow—even from room to room. Notice, we’ve used the same canvas for the curtains in the living room and the shades in the dining room; the same vinyl for banquettes in both rooms; and the leather on the Foxes’s living room furniture is duplicated on the dining room chairs. Not only does everything in each room work together, but the two rooms harmonize.

Q. Why do you stick to neutral colors?
A. Same reason. Neutral colors have natural affinities for one another. They give you continuity and let the whole room speak softly. But I always like to spice them up with a color. In the Fox house, I used a strong pink—a Brooks Brothers Oxford cloth pink—that highlights the old wainscoting.
On the theory that you can’t go wrong if you invest in quality, the Foxes bought the Italian sofa and chairs 2 years back. Mr. Dickinson thought neutral colors and natural textures would complement them. So when he added yards of seating with a banquette, he covered it in white vinyl, and placed stone-carved tables within easy reach of wherever you sit. On the windows he hung canvas, draped like the door to a sheik’s tent. Still to come: 3-panel screens all covered in white vinyl that will conceal open bookshelves.

ince the Fox’s dining style varies—informal family meals, formal sit-down dinners, large cocktail buffets—Mr. Dickinson gave their dining room an assortment of tables: a round recycled Brooks Brothers display table, now freshly lacquered; an oblone table draped with a Jacquard weave; and the carved buffet he designed himself. To keep the three tables from fighting with each other, Mr.
Dickinson surrounded them all with banquets (which look built-in but aren’t) and white-painted chairs upholstered in leather.

Here's a house that fits a family of five like a glove. Designed by architect Will Trout for himself, his wife, and three young sons, it is flexible and informal to match their lifestyle precisely. Detailed with exceptional thoughtfulness—built-in furniture, storage for every need, low-maintenance materials—it is a house for ease and enjoyment, not one that rules and runs the family. "I wanted a house I could be proud of," said Will Trout, "but one that was relaxing and not ‘demanding’ of me all the time.”

Modest in size (1,400 square feet), it was built in 1975 at Rocky River, Ohio for under $50,000; the figure would be nearer $55,000 today. What is more, energy conservation features, an integral part of its structure, make it a cost-saving house now.

In planning it, activities and ways of living had first consideration. As Beverly Trout says, "Will, Billy, Peter, and little Timmy and I seem to spend our time together in the same room." So almost half this house was given over to one communal space for living, dining, and kitchen. Part of it is 2 stories high and the parents' room upstairs overlooks it. Adjacent is the three-boy dormitory atop the garage.

The house faces north, exposed to chill winter wind, so W. Trout, experienced in studying winds on his boat, devised heat-saving measures to combat it. On the 2-story glass bay, he installed wood cross bracing to set the wind in motion, circulating escaping warm indoor air over the glass. Recessed 6 inches into the 12-by-12-inch timbers, the glass is shielded from direct wind. Wind impellers cover other second-story windows and, on the ground floor, panels like barn doors slide over windows and doorways in severe weather. Another method of saving heat is the double construction of outside walls that enclose a layer of heated air. Framed by standard 2-by-4-inch wood studs, the walls have an additional 2-by-2-inch framework. In the space between the two, heated indoor air circulates in a warm air stream. The warm air is pulled into the channel, on the windward side of the house, by wind currents at the base of the walls. A forced-air system heats and cools the house through ducts under it and upstairs. Average heat bill: $28.50 monthly. The unused fireplace, with a metal firebox and fireback reflector, can, in emergencies, be a substitute heater for the house.

A place for everything—even boats!
The Trouts tucked into their small house a wealth of storage and built-ins exactly where needed. A desk for writing, drafting, and reading is wall hung, as are book bins above it and drawers fitted under the stairs. Dining table and matching bench are handy for meals or homework. China, glass, and utensils are instantly available from open shelves. Children's lockers for coats, school books, and boots are beside the mud room entrance, with pegs outside for other gear. Upstairs, parents' platform bed and children's bunk beds (with storage drawers) are built in; bathrooms have under-counter cabinets, towel bins, and racks. The garage has bicycle and boat storage, a workshop, open lockers.

If you have a good credit rating, have done all your spadework, and own the land on which you plan to build, and have some money on the side, you can probably get a bank to give you an unsecured short-term loan at interest only. Roughly speaking, it would lend you enough money to build your house, give you six months or a year to pay it off, and ask for only interest payments until the house was built. At the end of six months or a year, depending on the terms of the loan, you would have to get a permanent mortgage to pay off the short-term loan. That's a fairly simple procedure, since you already own the land and have a good track record in paying off debts.

What most people don't realize, however, is that they would have been far better off arranging for a permanent mortgage before trying to arrange the short-term loan. The bank writing the short-term loan will be more willing to lend you money because it will have an assurance of being paid off. What's more, getting a mortgage commitment before a house is even built is easier than you might imagine. All you have to do is present your dossier of plans, costs, and personal financial data to a savings bank, savings and loan, or some other kind of thrift institution that writes mortgages. Spell everything out for the banker and ask for a letter stating that it will indeed give you a mortgage on the house if it's built according to the specifications in your plans. Then you could use that letter to convince a commercial bank to give you a short-term loan. Since the letter from the thrift institution is like money in the bank, the commercial bank will have few qualms about lending you money.

Alternatively, you could go to a thrift institution and ask for a permanent mortgage on a construction loan basis. If you meet all the qualifications, the bank will lend you the money to build your house in stages. The first part, however, is up to you because you generally have to use your money first—either to buy the land or pay for the initial stage of construction. There are usually four stages. Generally, the first stage is when you have put up the sides and added the roof. The second stage will be completed when you...
THE JOY OF COOKING SCHOOLS

The new way to have fun and learn A+ dishes like green bean timbale
There may still be places on earth where Grand Marnier isn't offered after dinner.
Within the last ten years, cooking schools have become big business. The Washington, D.C. area supports about 68 schools, double the number of five years ago. Seven years ago, San Francisco had no more than ten or twenty cooking schools; now the city boasts more than 100. And in Minneapolis, the number of schools has about doubled also, to fifteen. Other indications of the boom: 2,000 cookbook titles in print, the prediction that 2,000,000 food processors will be sold in 1978 (about 700,000 were sold in 1977). 1976 saw the sale of 1,485,000 microwave ovens, and it is estimated that by 1984, 46 percent of American households will be using microwaves. Closer to home, a popular present is a cooking-school teacher's cookbook and a gift certificate for a series of lessons with the author.

Being part of a cooking class is as much fun as going out to dinner or a movie, maybe more, because the food is good (the movie may not be). And you know how to recreate it at home, how it should look and taste; you can try it on your friends for parties, dinners—it's an opportunity to star in your own, homemade drama.

A three-course menu (sometimes four, if the class has time) with recipes provides the structure of most classes and dictates scheduling—a duck needs 1 1/4 hours to roast; bread takes 1 hour to rise; the dessert may have to chill. The teacher usually hands out the menu and recipes or dictates them, describes their origin and, depending on his method of teaching, on the size of the class, and a dish's intricacy, assigns one, two, or three students to work on each, or the whole class might take part in all the dishes done. You learn terrific little techniques along the way. For example, from Maurice Moore-Betty, who runs one of the best schools in New York, "We will separate the eggs while they are still cold, when it is easier, but not use them until they warm to room temperature when you get more out of them." And from Mr. Bugialli, who lightly dusts his chicken pieces by putting them in a colander, adding a bit of flour, and shaking. The excess falls through.

Demonstration classes have become a popular indoor spectator sport and keep your fingers busy taking notes. Participation classes get your fingernails dirty—with flour and butter. Demonstrations tend to be less expensive and involve a larger number of students. They can cover more ground than can be accomplished in the swirling activity of participation classes. Then you go straight home and practice!

But that's not all. If you keep a sharp eye on the cooking school scene, you can take advantage of specials—how to use your new equipment, a week of cuisine minceur, a course in summer foods in June, when suddenly summer finds you without new ideas, holiday baking, or wonder of wonders, a class in chocolate! Cooking-school teachers like to travel as much as anyone; if you particularly admire a teacher away from your home and can't make it to an out-of-towners' week—another special growing in popularity—write. Get a group of friends together Continued on page 182.
"Every student wants to know how to give a dinner party easily, so I teach how to organize and do things ahead," says Janeen Sarlin, who emphasizes advance preparation, storing, scheduling, and garnishing at Cooking With Class, her New York cooking school, where she entertains as well. The menu here, a favorite for her own dinner parties, is also a lesson for students. Everything can be prepared ahead: Just the timbale and oysters need to be cooked and the rice reheated while guests enjoy a first glass of wine. What is left for last-moment inspiration is the final garnishing—"I take an extra five or ten minutes to garnish a dish"—and students and guests like to watch because it's fun—spontaneous creation. "I tell my students to be creative, to look in the refrigerator to see what could be used—and not to allow a dish out of the kitchen until it is properly garnished." A garnish should be related to the ingredients, she feels—like the beans and peas that top the timbale, "I keep an apple and a sweet red pepper on hand, and a big bunch of parsley is my security blanket." Table settings are as important to Mrs. Sarlin as her presentation of food. She uses fresh fruits and vegetables—"appropriate, in the kitchen." Candleholders are carved from tiny eggplants (sometimes from lemons and cucumbers); broccoli shares a vase with the flowers; a carved melon might hold dip for crudites. Her guests sit around a central butcher-block table with an 18-inch lip, so chairs can be pulled in comfortably. One final tip to help the hostess relax—"Cut the cocktail hour short and enjoy an extra glass of wine—and your guests—as a break before dessert." Recipes, page 172. The joy of cooking schools

A week with Michel Guérard

“There is no other cooking school with such style; it is like an elegant house party,” says French super chef, Michel Guérard, of his first sortie into teaching nonprofessionals at The Wine Country Cooking School at The Robert Mondavi Winery in California’s Napa Valley. Three-star chef for the Pot au Feu at Les Pres et les Sources de Eugénie-les-Bains, where cuisine minceur evolved, Guérard was invited by the school’s directors, Michael James and Billy Cross, to teach a one-week course for twelve students, who each invested almost $1000 in the five days of intensive classes and Lucullan feasting interspersed with wine tastings at other wineries. “Cooking is a serious discipline,” says this gifted teacher, who prefers precision to improvisation, and who stresses the importance of a work plan. Meticulously thought-out sequences of details showed students how to start dessert for the next day, for instance, while preparing that night’s dinner. “Michel prepared one beautiful dish after another; he taught us a pastry chef’s sense of perfection,” says Gael Greene, who acted as commentator and translator. Always the first one in the kitchen, grinding almonds or cleaning turnip greens, Guérard had everything in total readiness for each class. His wife Christine contributed, as well as her aura of serenity, the tisanes, a version of the herb teas prepared at their spa, and served as aperitifs each night. Recipes, page 172.

Dessert Tips

For an easier version of the apple tart, right, use sweet short pastry instead of puff pastry. Try it with other fruits—pitted cherries, apricots, peaches, or pears. They can be made ahead and then frozen. (Juicy, red fruit like strawberries or raspberries, are too delicate to freeze well.) When ready to bake, place tarts frozen into hot oven for 30 minutes. For a quick fruit granita, freeze leftover peach juice and sieved frozen raspberries in shallow metal trays until slushy. Serve a dollop of each in a wineglass with a mint for garnish.

Vegetables with honors

Sweet and sour onions, carrots with marmalade, and other vegetable dishes from a teacher who gets to the roots of good cooking

Students gather around yellow Formica-topped worktables and learn to appreciate the enthusiasm of their cooking teacher, Richard Nelson, a long-time James Beard assistant, who teaches in Portland, Oregon. "The root vegetables make a great food. They have good texture, taste, and color." And he grows a garden full of parsnips, turnips, beets, carrots, and leeks, plus squash, eggplant, and rhubarb, and all the herbs he can manage, to back him up. His cooking is in the best American tradition—using local, seasonal foods with imagination and creativity instead of following strict rules. "My ideas are basic, and I am always learning—even from my students, from their questions and experiences," says Mr. Nelson, whose class menus as well as his personal menus "are heavy on the side of vegetables." Students take notes on the tips he gives while they are preparing the dishes for class: Certain foods need help: Spinach needs something acid, like lemon, tomato, or orange. For the quick pea salad, pea pods add a crunch and break up the singular look of just peas. In the cauliflower mousse, cayenne and nutmeg take the whole flavor up a notch. The eggplant pizza seems almost like a meat dish. The mozzarella and the anchovy fillets give it a solid taste that you don't expect with meatless ingredients. It makes a great snack and is a huge hit for buffets. Carrots get a lift from a squirt of lemon juice, or orange marmalade.
The people who are supposed to have invented spirited white vodka are the Russians, though I know a Pole or two who might object, saying that the honor should be Polish. In any case, a Russian lady of my acquaintance, named Olga, swears that it would be impossible for any Russian to drink 40 thimblesful of vodka. "Because they inhale more than they drink," she says. "So a good Russian can easily down a bottle of vodka, almost at a gulp, but not 40 thimbles of it." Since Russians can go on toasting each other for hours, thinking up new excuses to do so with admirable inventiveness and without apparent effect, I am inclined to take that statement with a grain of salt. (Which, of course, is how you take tequila, but that comes later.)

Americans, believe it or not, managed to drink about 150 million wine gallons of white alcohols (known as white goods in the industry) in 1976. (Bourbons, blends, Scotches, and Canadians, known as brown goods, still have the edge selling 222 million wine gallons in 1976. Facts from Marvin Shanken's Impact, a liquor industry newsletter.) The white alcohol that wins the quantity prize is vodka, which sold about 90 million gallons; next comes gin, which sold about 42 million. The fastest grower, however, is rum, which sold 22 million gallons. Anises, aquavits, white fruit liqueurs, and kummels are not considered part of the white goods category by the industry, but they, too, are gaining in popularity, especially as mixed drinks.

Vodka, in theory, is made from potatoes, but most of what we drink is made from grain neutral spirits. A keeper of the Moscow zoo, however, is known to have got into deep trouble from making an illegal batch of drinkable vodka from peanuts and other things he was supposed to have been feeding the monkeys. However, the most usual way to drink good vodka is ice-cold, served preferably with caviar. But there are ways to make it (and you) last longer, by combining it with other goodies. If you mix about 12 parts of vodka with 1 of dry vermouth and 2 of strained cucumber juice, you have a Lucky Jim, a smooth, subtle bombshell.

The Russians and the Poles like their vodka with pizzazz. One version is made by steeping a red chili pepper in your vodka bottle for a few weeks (the longer it stays, the hotter the vodka gets). Another that the Poles especially favor, as do I, is Zubrovka, in which a stem of the herb of that name is allowed to sit for as long as the vodka lasts. You can make your own flavored vodka easily—for instance, try putting the zest of a whole lemon into the bottle for a week, giving it a shake every now and then. It will remind you of the Florida lemon groves at blossom time, when you drink it.

Dry gin, also known as London gin, is made by double distilling neutral spirits with a combination of flavorings that includes coriander, cardamom, angelica, calamus, almond, and orris roots, but mainly juniper berries, which is how it got its name; "gin," being a corruption of the Dutch way of saying juniper. Dutch gin or Genever uses malt wine as part of its flavoring, and because of that it is difficult to drink any way but straight. Plymouth gin, another variation of London gin, but without the addition of lemon zest, used to be the favorite aperitif of the British navy, mixed with a few drops of Angostura to become "Pink Gin."

An interesting variation of the Martini to swish a few drops of Pernod around the glass before making the drink. Gin also goes well in a Ramos Fizz, which goes well in you. This consists of 2 parts gin, 1 part cream, the white of an egg, the juice of half a lemon and half a lime, shaken with ice until it seems fluffy. Pour into a tumbler, its edge frosted with lemon and sugar. Add orange flower water, or soda water if you like.

The qualities of Dutch gin may be inferred from some of the nicknames it has been given since about 1640, when it was invented: Lift Your Skirt, Consolation in Bitter Suffering, Naked Navel, and Venus Oil. The Germans, on the other hand, for their schnapps, another form of gin, are much more serious. They use schnapps sometimes like alcohol, for rubbing on cuts and bruises, or massaging torn muscles. Schnapps, by the way, is usually gin, but can be any spirit taken as a "quickie" before a meal. Schinkelhager and Steinhager are German schnapps much like Dutch gin. They also have a malt-flavored Doornkaat, and a delicious caraway-flavored kummel called Bonmmerlunder, that boasts a 200-year-old pedigree.

Moving farther north, you begin to find more white spirits made with caraway, and in Scandinavia, aquavit (which is like kummel), is the national drink. Aquavit is supposed to be better if it has made the trip to Australia by boat and back. It gets there by being used as ballast in freight ships and is known in

Then, our own way of blending allows us to produce wines with continuity of taste. Each time you open a bottle from our cellars, you will enjoy all of the quality that The Christian Brothers name promises.

Our California Burgundy is an excellent value. This fine, dry red table wine has a full, delicious flavor and is a good choice to serve with almost any red meat. It is equally at home with spaghetti, lasagne, or any of the hard yellow cheeses.

The Cabernet Sauvignon grape has found an exceptional home in the Napa Valley. The Christian Brothers bottling of this wine will please you with its distinctive bouquet, and deep, dry taste. This is a wine to go with steaks or roasts.

The hillside vineyards above our Napa Valley Monastery are planted with the rare Pinot Saint George grapes used to produce one of our Estate Bottled wines. It is exceptionally full-bodied with a smooth finish, a wine to serve with special meals.

These are just three of the red wines we produce in our cellars. If you would like to know more about our wines, you may write to me.

Nordic countries as “Linie Aquavit.” Somehow the gentle (or stormy) movement of the sea, combined with the gradual shift in temperature from Arctic Circle through tropical seas to the Antipodes and back, mixes and blends the alcohol to a fabulous smoothness. Aquavit, also a schnapps—or snaps, if you are Scandinavian—is made from distilled potato mash, flavored with caraway, marinated in second-hand American whiskey or Spanish sherry barrels.

There is a ritual to drinking aquavit. You take the stuff, “right lovesom, white and small” (as the British poet, Dunbar, once said of his lady-love), out of tiny glasses, gulping the mouthful down—no sipping. First, though, you look your partner at dinner right in the eye, and say “Skål” (pronounced skoal). He or she stares right back. Then you down the skull in question was not your own.

Your partner at dinner right in the eye, and meant “skull,” and it was from a cup made of the skull of your enemy that you put the glass down. According to Paul Fabian, a knowledgeable aquavitian (or appeals to me is called a Viking. It consists of equal parts akavit (to be "native" about it), Noilly Prat, and orange juice, on the rocks.

Some rums are as white as vodka, and these are becoming more and more useful in mixed drinks. However, as one of my favorite Trinidadian sources of rum lore, Mona Defour, points out, it is mighty good straight, too. “My father,” says she, “keeps a bottle of the best, in the house. On cold rainy days, instead of drinking coffee, as you do up here (in England, but she could just as easily have meant the USA), we all have a drink of rum. Which helps to keep us warm.”

And to bear her out, here is a recipe by, and named for, Docteur Pitat, who was a Parisian gourmet and doctor. This is made with 2 parts of the best Martinique rum, Imperial Blanc St. James, and 1 each of Cointreau (a white liqueur, by the way) and orange juice. Shake well, drop in a cherry if you like decor with your drinks. “Nothing like it,” the good Doctor claimed, “to put you on your feet.”

Remember the old song, about rum and you-know-what? Well, it was sung by Raphael DeLeon, “The Roaring Lion,” a calypsonian from Trinidad who emigrated to England. He based his song on an old tale about American sailors who came to the island and found the local brew too dry. So they mixed it with cola, and so the song—Rum and Coca

An interesting variation of the dry martini—which is getting drier all the time—is to swish a few drops of Pernod around the glass before making the drink.

Cola. Today, that is one of the most drinkable of rum drinks.

Other pure white spirits come from central Europe. Most of them are made from fruit distillations. Probably the most ubiquitous of these is made out of plums, and variously called Mirabelle, Slivovitz, Quetsch, or Pflumi, depending on which part of Europe it comes from. Other fruits, like raspberries, give Francophone strawberries give Fraises, and cherries Kirschswasser. But my favorite white fruit alcohol is made from pears in Switzerland or France, and is called Poire William, or Williamine. For a delicious dessert, try it with fresh pineapple. The marriage, to my mind, is perfect.

All round the Mediterranean coast the inhabitants seem to love the taste of anise, a licorice-flavored liqueur or apéritif that turns from clear white to milky white when you add water to it. In Greece they call it Ouzo; in France, Pernod or Ricard; in Spain, Anís; and in the Middle East, Rakı. It is strong and heady. Makes a marvelous flavoring for otherwise boring vanilla ice cream. Other good vanilla ice cream pepperuppers are Cointreau, triple sec, and curaçao which have nothing to do with anise, but are definitely white, and have an orange-petal flavor.

Liqueurs especially the white ones, I think, are good in solid form—that is as condiments in or over food. Fruit-based liqueurs go well with the fruit they were made from—cherries in Kirsch, or strawberries in Fraises, plums in Quietsch accentuate their qualities with perfect authenticity and lend them an admirable sense of decadence.

And now for that tequila, Mexico’s contribution to the white alcohol world. It is made from the pineapple-shaped heart of the century plant, a sort of cactus, and you drink it like this: Lick the web between thumb and first finger and sprinkle it with salt. Pour 1 1/2 ounces of cold tequila into a 1 1/2-ounce glass and hold the glass with thumb and forefinger. Then place a quarter of lime between forefinger and middle finger. Quick! Lick the salt, gulp down the tequila, put out the fire with the lime. Your drinking hand can never have been so busy, and that warm glow that comes over you is likely to last. ■

Poached squab in tureens with vegetables

(INGREDIENTS)
1 squab pigeon, trussed (You need a bird that weighs at least 1 pound. The recipe calls for a young pigeon; a Rock Cornish hen, which averages about 1 1/4 pounds, may also be used) Chicken stock (recipe below)
4 pieces carrot, cut into olive shapes
4-inch piece celery, cut into slim julienne sticks 2 inches long
About 12 leaves from a heart of Bibb or Boston lettuce 6 young green beans, cut in half twissle or whole young snow peas
2 tablespoons fresh young green peas
1 small cooked or canned artichoke bottom, cut into 1/2-inch dice
8 small fresh or canned button mushrooms
1 small fresh or canned cèpe, cut into 1/4-inch dice
4 slices truffle, cut into thin julienne sticks or 2 canned morels, drained and cut into thin julienne strips
Salt, pepper to taste
1 tablespoon truffle sauce (recipe below), optional

METHOD
The bird may be roasted, but it is simpler, and better minceret practice, to poach it. In a saucepan, bring enough chicken stock to cover the bird to a boil. Lower the heat and add the trussed bird and simmer 7 minutes for a squab or 10-12 minutes for a Rock Cornish hen. Remove bird to a cutting board and carve it on each side as follows: Cut off the breast meat all in 1 piece and slice it. Discard the wings or not, depending on the size of the bird. Then cut off the second joint and leg in 1 piece. For a lean squab or game bird, you do not have to remove the skin; remove all the skin of a Rock Cornish hen.

In one saucepan, cook the vegetables in boiling salted water, putting them in the following sequence: carrot and celery to cook 10 minutes; 5 minutes later, lettuce, green beans and peas, to cook 5 minutes; 3 minutes later, the diced artichoke bottom and snow peas if using them, to heat through in 2 minutes-10 minutes' cooking time in all. All the vegetables should still be a little crisp. Drain them in a colander. The recipe may be prepared ahead to this point. Cover bird and vegetables to keep them moist.

Put 1/2 the cooked vegetables in equal portions, in 2 deep individual tureens, and add the button mushrooms, cèpes, and truffle or morels, all 3 of which—not having been cooked previously—will give the maximum of their flavor to the dish. Then all the slices of breast meat and a second joint and leg to each tureen, followed by the remainder of the cooked vegetables. Finally, divide the truffle sauce and 1/2 cup chicken stock (seasoned, if needed, with salt and pepper) between the tureens.

Cover the tureens with aluminum foil and tie in place with string. Bake in a preheated 450°-475° oven 10 minutes for a small bird, 15 minutes for a Rock Cornish hen.

Serve still covered with the foil so that the full aroma of the dish may be appreciated when the foil is removed at table. Serves 2. The recipe is easily doubled for 4.

Chicken stock

(INGREDIENTS)
6 pounds chicken carcasses, cut up, or chicken wings and backs, or a large stewing hen
3 large carrots, scraped and sliced
1/2 pound fresh mushrooms, stems trimmed, rinsed, and sliced
2 leeks, most of the green parts cut off, well washed
1 medium-size stalk celery
1 large or 2 small cloves garlic, crushed
1 1/4 cups dry white wine
4 1/2 quarts cold water, or to cover ingredients well
2 medium onions, peeled and one cut with a clove Bouquet garni

METHOD
Put chicken carcasses in a sauce kettle with the carrots, mushrooms, shafts, leeks, celery, and garlic. Add the white wine and boil 15 minutes to evaporate the alcohol.

Add the cold water, the onions, and the bouquet garni. Simmer the stock gently, partially covered, over low heat for about 3 hours. Strain, periodically, the scum and fat that rise to the surface.

Strain the stock through a large, fine-alcohol.

Truffle sauce
(Sauce perigueux)

INGREDIENTS
1 cup port
\( \frac{1}{2} \) cup Armagnac or cognac
One 1 1/2-ounce can Périgord truffles
2 cups demi-glace, well skimmed (recipe below)
Salt and pepper
3 tablespoons cold butter (optional)

METHOD
- Heat a small saucepan, pour the port and Armagnac into it, and boil until \( \frac{3}{4} \) of the liquid has evaporated. It should be reduced to about \( \frac{3}{4} \) cup. Meanwhile, drain the truffles, reserve the juice, and mince the truffles.
- Add to the saucepan the truffles, truffle juice, and the demi-glace. Season to taste with salt and pepper, and simmer over low heat 15 minutes.
- If the sauce is to be used as is, just before serving, cut the butter into pieces and swirl them one at a time into the hot sauce by rotating the bottom of the pan over the heat. In cuisine minceur, the same sauce is served without the butter. Makes 2 cups sauce.

CORNING WARE PTY. Div., Corning, N.Y. 14830
METHOD FOR STOCK

□ Brown the veal bones and knuckle in a roasting pan in a 475° oven without any fat (à sec) for 15 minutes. Turn the pieces over several times as they brown.
□ Add the ham, stewed beef, carrots, mushrooms, onion, shallot, and garlic. Heat in the oven another 5 minutes, or until the vegetables wilt but have not begun to brown.
□ Transfer everything to a soup kettle.
□ Add the ham, stewing beef, carrots, pastes, celery, chervil, tarragon, and bouquet garni. Simmer stock gently, partially covered, over low heat for about 3 hours. Periodically skim off the scum and fat that rise to the surface.
□ Strain stock through a large, fine-mesh strainer into a container. Let cool, then store, covered, in the refrigerator. For a perfectly fat-free stock, merely wait until it is well chilled; the hardened fat on the surface is then easy to remove. Makes about 1 quart stock.

METHOD FOR DEMI-Glace

□ Dissolve the potato flour or arrowroot in the water or wine. Bring the veal stock to a boil in a large saucepan and add the flour mixture while beating constantly with a whisk to achieve a perfectly smooth blending or liaison.
□ Simmer stock gently again until it is reduced by half, or to about 2 cups. During this simmering, more scum will rise to the surface which must be skimmed off.
□ One can achieve the richness of a demi-glace without the arrowroot binding simply by simmering the stock longer over very low heat and skimming often.

Apple tart

(Tarte feuilletée chaude aux pommes)

INGREDIENTS

8 small apples: Golden Delicious or pippin
Juice of 1 lemon
Handful flour
1 pound prepared puff pastry or sweet short pastry
½ cup sugar
12 tablespoons unsalted butter, at room temperature
Crème charbonnière or crème fraîche
Applesauce (recipe below)
Raspberries, wild strawberries, and mint leaves for garnish

METHOD

□ Peel apples, cut in half and remove cores. Cut each half into quarters lengthwise. Place them in a bowl and toss with the lemon juice.
□ Lightly flour a working surface. Divide the pastry you are using into 4 parts; form them into neat balls, then roll them out into equal rounds about 8 inches in diameter (to make very exact circles you may place a dessert plate over each piece of dough and trace around it with a knife)
□ Invert pastry rounds and place them on a baking sheet. Using a paring knife, trace a ⅓-inch-wide border around the perimeter of each circle, allowing the knife to cut halfway through the thickness of the pastry; this will help the sides of the tart rise and form a border to hold in the juices of the apples (if you are using short pastry, you may wish to pinch up the edges to improve a similar rim).
□ Lay the apples in a neat spiral on the inside circle of each pastry round. Sprinkle half of the sugar over the tarts, and dot with half of the butter. Bake in a 450° oven 30 minutes; halfway through the cooking, divide the remaining sugar and butter among the tarts.
□ The desserts are done when the pastry is a nice golden color and the edges of the apples are tightly caramelized. Serve on hot plates, either plain or with crème chantilly or crème fraîche and applesauce. Garnish with raspberries, wild strawberries, and mint leaves for color. Serves 4.

Tart applesauce with brown butter

(Compote de pommes au beurre)

INGREDIENTS

2 pounds good apples: Golden Delicious, pippin, Granny Smith, etc.
5 ounces unsalted butter
½ cup water
1 cup sugar
1 vanilla bean, split in half along its length
Juice of 4 lemons

METHOD

□ Peel and core the apples, and cut them into small pieces. Melt 1 ounce of the butter in a 3-quart heavy-bottomed saucepan and add the apples, water, sugar, and vanilla bean. Cook over medium-low heat for about ½ hour, stirring from time to time with a wooden spatula.
□ When the apples are tender, remove the vanilla bean and purée the mixture—either in a food processor or through the fine disk of a food mill (the applesauce should be very smooth). Stir in the lemon juice.
□ Melt the remaining butter over medium-high heat in a small saucepan or skillet and cook 2-3 minutes to a beurre noisette (brown butter); it is ready when it is a light caramel color and has a nutty fragrance.
□ Stir butter into the applesauce and it is ready. Serve cold, for contrast, with the warm apple tart; or, as a summer dessert, it is nice served warm just by itself. Serves 4-6.

Sweet and sour onions

INGREDIENTS

2 pounds pearl onions
3 cloves garlic, slightly crushed
4 tablespoons peanut or olive oil
5 tablespoons currants
2 tablespoons sugar
Juice of 2 lemons

METHOD

□ Peel the onions and cut a shallow cross in the stem end of each one. Sauté the onions with the garlic and oil in a heavy skillet, browning the onions slightly and evenly.
□ Add the currants and sprinkle on the sugar and lemon juice, stirring to dissolve the sugar. Cover, and cook over low heat, but stir frequently to prevent the sugar from scorching.
□ When the sauce has turned a dark caramel color and the onions are tender, discard the garlic and remove from heat. Put the onions in a serving dish and spoon the sauce over. Serve at room temperature. Serves 12. Assembly, 25 minutes; cooking, 40 minutes.

Cold, dilled pea salad

INGREDIENTS

2 10-ounce packages frozen peas
1 10-ounce package frozen pea pods
½ cup sour cream
1/2 1 teaspoon curry powder
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
Boston lettuce

METHOD

□ Defrost the peas, if frozen ones are used. Combine sour cream, ½ cup dill or chives, curry powder, and salt and pepper in a small bowl and mix thoroughly. Combine with the peas, mixing together lightly so as not to break or mash the peas. Serve in a glass bowl, garnished with more dill and/or chives. Chill 10-15 minutes in the refrigerator, if desired. Serve on leaves of Boston lettuce. Serves 12. Assembly, 10-15 minutes.

Carrots in orange marmalade

INGREDIENTS

6 cups carrots, sliced thinly on the diagonal
2 tablespoons butter
1/2 cup chicken stock
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
1 cup orange marmalade
Dash Grand Marnier
(optional)

METHOD

□ Put the carrots, butter, and stock in a heavy saucepan. Cook, covered, over high heat, for 3 minutes. Add the remaining ingredients and cook, uncovered, over low heat until the carrots are tender and the sauce has become a thick glaze. Stir often as the sauce thickens. Serves 8. Assembly, 10 minutes; cooking, 20 minutes.

□ Arrange the eggplant slices in a single layer in an oiled baking dish. Cover each slice with a tomato slice. Decorate with 2 criss-crossed anchovy fillets and 4 olive halves apiece. Sprinkle each pizza with oregano or basil, pepper, Parmesan cheese, cover with a slice of mozzarella.

□ Bake in a preheated 325° oven 10-15 minutes, or until the cheese has melted. Garnish with more sliced black olives and a sprinkling of chopped fresh basil.

Serves 6. Preparation of eggplant, 45 minutes; assembly, 20 minutes; cooking, 10-15 minutes.

and maybe the teacher will come to you. Junior Leagues are particularly adept at this maneuver. You can travel, too: to a near-by city, to take advantage of professional schools; to Paris, for one or more weeks of intensive cooking classes at the venerable le Cordon Bleu or at Anne Willan’s new La Varenne; to Italy, to cook with Marcella Hazan in Bologna or with Giuliano Bugialli in Florence, or with Julie Dannenbaum and the chefs of the Gritti Palace Hotel in Venice.

It may comfort some students to remember that cooking can be exercise. Sustained whisking of hollandaise builds stamina; kneading the fabulous bread you learned (and you learned how to make it crusty—terra-cotta tiles in the oven) shapes your upper arms and chest; the mad shoveling of stir-frying gets the whole body in motion.

Saving the best for last, the results of the joint venture are tasted at the end of class and enjoyed with an “appropriate beverage,” usually wine. If the teacher is serious about wine, the meal may also become a wine tasting. Conversations range from restaurants, the food just made, the wine, special dishes done at home that succeeded and failed, diets that did or didn’t work, the food, dinner parties, other cooking classes, the food.

The teacher acts as a moderator, and often as a host or hostess as class becomes a party, and his advice is sought on where to purchase ingredients, and pans, and what restaurants to try. Classes break up slowly, no one wanting to be the first to leave. A common refrain heard in down elevators: “Now that I’ve been bitten by the bug, I’m going to take more classes!” Many students so enjoy a teacher and the experience of class that they sign up, not just again, but again and again. Lydie Pinoy Marshall of A La Bonne Cocotte in New York, who James Beard calls one of the best teachers in the country, has begun to encourage some of her long-time students not to sign up again to make room for new students (the waiting list for her classes is now about four years!). And some students are brave enough to invite their teacher home for dinner when a real friendship develops. An intrepid student confesses to ten courses including three desserts and chocolate truffles when Lydie Marshall came to dinner, “You cook a lot when you’re anxious.”

Conviviality is part of what makes classes so addictive. As James Beard puts it, “Participation classes, where everyone gets his hands and feet in and must add something to make the class and meal a success” are particularly conducive to the warmth and friendliness that so often develop. Ruth Spears, one of Richard Nelson’s students (see his class on page 166) says “I look forward to each class as if I’d never done it before. Cooking is an art form and allows us to express ourselves as well as give other people pleasure. It is something you can share with everyone.” Another student is in class “to learn the right way to do basic things like holding a knife; I was intimidated by complicated recipes.” More and more men are turning to cooking schools as a pressure release from work and they can look forward to a good meal at the end of class. Learning to cook also saves single men from forever eating out or facing hamburgers in; it can also help them watch their weight with imagination instead of cottage cheese. And for a new twist, one businessman-turned-cook that we know, before his Saturday night dinner parties, invites a pretty girl up for some cooking in the afternoon. The lucky girl gets his private instruction in soufflés.

Of the hundreds and hundreds of cooking schools across America, we have compiled a list of a few to start you on your way. James Beard offers a piece of advice: “Students should experiment at home to find out what kind of cooking appeals the most, then find a class that stresses it.” Check local newspapers for more complete listings in your area.

The goodness of nature sealed inside.

The goodness nature gives long grain rice is on the outside and most rice you buy has that goodness stripped away. But Uncle Ben's found a way no one else found to seal that goodness inside every grain. Beautiful, separate and naturally delicious, every time. And there's only one Uncle Ben's Converted Brand Rice.

Apricot Glazed Ribs with Almond Raisin Rice
Combine raisins with UNCLE BEN'S CONVERTED Brand Rice and prepare according to package directions. At end of cooking time, stir in slivered almonds. Serve with spareribs baked until tender and glazed with sieved apricot preserves.

ALL GOOD THINGS MUST COME TO AN END.

Sometimes ALL TOO SOON. Imagine. Making a wine as good as Inglenook Estate Bottled Charbono. And not making enough to go around.

But that's just the way many truly great wines are created—in carefully made limited bottlings. Limited, in the case of Charbono, by the small quantity of grapes grown. Which makes Charbono one of the rare wines of the world.

That's why you may have to look a little harder than usual to find our full-flavored ruby red Charbono. Sure, it may not be the best business for a winery to run out of a wine. But we refuse to lower our wine making standards in order to meet public demand.

So once again, we've created too little of a great tasting wine. But at Inglenook, we would rather apologize for the lack of quantity, than for the lack of quality.

If a rosé is just a rosé, why does Almadén make three?

All rosé drinkers are not alike. Some like rosé with a hint of sweetness. Some like it dry. And others like it in between. So to satisfy all three, Almadén makes a rosé for each.

If you're one who prefers rosé with a hint of sweetness, may we suggest Almadén Mountain Nectar Vin Rosé on the left. Fresh, light and exciting. With a rich satisfying taste—like that of fresh, ripe fruit.

If you prefer a drier rosé, you'll enjoy Almadén Grenache Rosé in the middle. A fresh, fragrant wine made from the Grenache grape—similar to the grape used in the Beaujolais wines of France—it's a distinctively different rosé. Fresh and complex—more full-bodied than our other rosés. Unlike any you've ever enjoyed.

Whichever you prefer, serve it well chilled—with your favorite food or by itself. Either way, you'll enjoy the taste of a truly fine wine. Because at Almadén, we care for our grapes as if they were our children. And you'll taste this tradition of quality in every bottle of Almadén wine.

To learn more about wine, send a postcard for a free copy of “The grapes and wines of Almadén” to: Almadén, P. O. Box 24249 HG, San Jose, CA 95154.

How important is touching to a person's well-being?

A Dr. Harold J. Lief, Professor of Psychiatry at the University of Pennsylvania found that touch is even more important than food to the rhinovirus in infancy. The babies cried to their mothers or even a substitute mother (a dummy covered with cloth or fur) in preference to taking milk from a bottle. If separated from bodily contact, they grew up with serious impairment of their sexual and social behavior. As adults, they tend to bite and scratch instead of touching and holding and act in a generally asocial, antagonistic and psychopathic manner. Holding or being held and touching skin to skin is vital to development of a sense of security and comfort. Now, many obstetricians start this at birth by placing the new born immediately after delivery on the abdomen of the mother, skin to skin. Many psychologists, among them Dr. Jean Francois Sancier of Quebec, urge breastfeeding for the best psychosocial development of the child. Such close contact results in a more active, outgoing and assertive child and a happier, more secure one. What's interesting, too, is that breast milk has four times less sodium than cow's milk. Dr. Jean Mayer believes that excessive sodium early in life lays the basis for hypertension later. Touching from birth is a recognized psychological constituent of a healthy, happy, well-integrated personality.
AJAX TURNS YOUR SPONGE INTO A SCRUB BRUSH...

The Ajax power formula, with its 3 special bleaching and grease-cutting ingredients... gives you immediate scrubbing action as it powers out the toughest greasy food stains. There, a bright, sparkling clean sink. It's easy. And fast. Faster than Comet. Ajax turns your sponge into a scrub brush.

acquisitive instinct? Or is it a mild, but incurable affliction that must be treated gingerly—like weak ankles, or a case of color blindness?

Not long ago, while reading, I think I found the answer: The words that struck me so were Lesley Blanch's:

‘. . . From an early age I collected things—objects rather than objets d’art, and took them about with me, even on the shortest journeys . . . From childhood

I was always conscious of this unity with what are described as inanimate objects. To me, this adjective has never applied. No brassbound Arab cof ¡er or sagging armchair but it cries aloud to me of its past.’

That's why my things had inevitably crept back in: It is impossible, given those early romantic affections, to ignore them. Mine must be the route dotted with objects, peopled with antiques. And my motto: Give me my books, my baskets, and my bibelots. ■

How to make your wash turn yellow.

One of the simplest ways to dye light-colored fabrics in sunshine bright colors like yellow or orange is to use RIT Dye right in your washing machine. Be sure that the fabric you want to dye is washable, and that you remove any spots it may have first. Then, follow these RIT tips to get luscious fresh colors:

1. For best color results, use the hottest water possible.
2. Use two boxes of powder dye or one bottle of liquid dye for each two pounds of fabric. (Double the amount of dye for dark colors.)
3. For richer colors, reset your washing machine cycle so that the dyebath agitates for a total of 25-30 minutes.

You'll find dyeing in your washer safe. And RIT directions will give you all the simple clean-up instructions you'll need to keep your washer clean and safe for other clothes.

A free booklet or answers to questions on how to make your wash turn yellow by writing RIT, Dept. Y, 1437 West Morris St., South Bend, Indiana 46603.

ONE-DAY EXCURSION:

Hire a car to drive to the larger near island of Sanibel to buy supplies at Bailey's. Lunch at Duncan's, 2075 Pecky Way, then visit the vast J. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge. On the way back, shell-gaze at shop at Elsie Malone's where the shells are in glass cases and of first-rate specimen quality.

ON CAPTIVA:

Try stone crabs at Timmy's Nook, 23 Munson Drive. Visit the Green Flash Palm Avenue where there are boxes and boxes of shells from which to pick reasonable, casual, comfortable shell collecting without rising with the tide. After a storm, this small shop is closed. The owner finds the shells.

THE SHELL GAME:

Shelling on Captiva is done on the W beaches rather than on the bay side where there are live shells. And there are over 50 varieties. You soon find yourself developing the Captiva Curve—hunched, eyes down, searching the shore for a Sailor’s Ear, a Scotch Bonnet, Turkey Wing. Then you picnic under Australian pine and like children spot your new-found treasures on fat grape leaves. Remember to wear tennis shoes or bathing slippers on the beach while shelling in low water. And if you're very serious, bring along a canvas stool for sitting and sifting shells. To brighten the colors of shells rub on a few drops baby oil or clear shoe polish. Once glued your shells as border trim on plaques of glass, 8 by 10 inches, as picture frames for friends, party place cards, or simply hang them all over your tree next Christmas.

WEATHER:

The rainy season is June through early August. Average temperature year round: 68-70 degrees. August and September in the 80's.

HOW TO GET TO CAPTIVA:

There are 9 non-stop flights a day from Atlanta to Fort Myers, plus direct flights from Chicago, Miami, New York, Atlanta, Washington, D.C., Jacksonville, Tampa, and Sarasota. Eastern, Nation and Florida Airlines service Fort Myers. Captiva is about a 40-minute drive from Fort Myers by taxi. You can rent a car, but once at the plantation you won’t need it. South Seas provides limousine service but expensive for just two.

For further information, write South Seas Plantation, P.O. Box 194, Captiva Island, Fla. 33924. ■
How Candice Walker got Slender and stayed Slender.

Candice Walker’s thick, auburn hair falls softly to her shoulders. Her eyes are sky blue. She has the cheekbones of a model. She has the figure of a model—almost. Yet Candice once weighed 220 pounds and rarely went outside her house.

Today, Candice, who’s 5’7” tall, weighs 137 pounds. Her waist measures 26”, not 39”; her hips are 37”, not 48”. Instead of a matronly 40” bustline, she’s a trim 34B.

Candice did it with Slender® diet food and sensible portions of solid foods. It took 14 months. But Candice is a realist. She’d spent half her life putting it on.

“I tried lots of diets before Slender but I couldn’t stay on them. I tried pills but they made me climb the walls. I screamed at everybody I was so nervous.

“You see my downfall was that I loved things like ice cream and milk shakes... so when I finally found Slender it was like a thick, creamy shake to me. I prefer Slender powder because you can shake it up. I put in the milk and a couple of ice cubes and shake it until it becomes thick and foamy. Then I sip it with a straw. I varied my Slender diet with solid foods. Sometimes I’d have nothing but Slender for 3 or 4 days. Then I’d start off with a light breakfast, Slender for lunch, and a salad and lean meat for dinner. After a week or so, I’d go back to Slender again for 3 or 4 meals a day. Yet I never think of Slender as a diet; it’s more of a newfound way...

A NEW WAY TO BUILD

Few time- and labor-saving methods and materials can expedite the building of an individual, custom-designed house. In this three level, luxuriously spacious house in Greenwich, Conn. (see pages 36-139), architect Dimitriulazl introduced industrial construction concepts that cut own building time. In the redspread house all walls, inside and outside, are economical concrete-perlite locks. Laid without mortar and the work of applying it), they have a fiberglass stucco surface finish that bonds them, a polystyrene filler that insulates them. All roofs (twenty-one different levels provide delightful varied ceiling heights) are standard precast concrete planks that bridge the walls and form complete roofs. They eliminated complex truss or other roof construction, and crane lifting them in three days saved labor. All metal frame windows and doors are industrial units in readymade stock sizes for easy installation. And architect-designed light fixtures, door, and cabinet pulls were made on the job.

Today, there are those who find themselves asking this question.
Certainly the funeral can do nothing for the person whose life has ended beyond providing the dignity of a proper burial. But no matter where, when, or under what circumstances death may occur, there are needs that must be met—for the bereaved family, their friends, their close circle in the community.

The funeral helps meet those needs. It helps those who grieve accept the reality of death. They know it happened. But a part of their mind rejects it, runs away from it.

The funeral takes them gently by the shoulders and turns them to face it. And having faced it, having viewed it, things are easier.

Things continue to be easier (though it may not seem so at the time) as arrangements have them talking with sympathetic friends, reflecting upon moments shared, giving testimony to the life that was lived on earth.

Another thing the funeral does—whether the choice is made for a traditional, a contemporary or a humanist service—is to reaffirm the faith, the creed, or philosophy by which one’s life was guided.

As the poet John Donne said: “No man is an island . . . His death touches his world. A funeral considers the feelings of all those who shared his life. It is a moment when grief shared is grief diminished. It is truly a unique moment of sharing . . . for the family . . . for friends . . . for society.

SPRING SPLASH

Dazzling with bulbs
Some of the most dazzling color displays of the summer come from spring-planted bulbs. Those flower arranger's stalwarts, gladiolus and dahlias, are outstanding examples, as are cannas and tuberous-rooted begonias. But there are lots of others, and they're all reliable performers.

One of the best is Caladium, which gives us summer-long color in the form of broad, arrow-shaped leaves streaked, splotted, and spotted with vivid green, pink, white, and red. Caladium bulbs should be started early — April in the North — in pots and moved outdoors into bigger pots or the open ground, as soon as the danger of frost has passed. Three bulbs will fill an 8-inch pot nicely, and in

Caladium Mrs. Haldeman makes a beautiful summertime display of white, red, pink.
The garden they should be set in clusters of not less than 3 for the best effect. Caladiums like a rich, humusy soil, not much sunshine, and plenty of water. Flowers like small calla lilies appear early in the season, but should be re- moved to send all the plant's strength into the leaves. Come fall, when the leaves are touched by frost, the bulbs should be dug and stored for the winter in dry peatmoss, in a not-too-cold cellar, and started into growth again the following spring.

Of the gladiolus persuasion but somewhat more graceful is Crocosmia, sometimes known by its old-time name, Montbretia. The leaves are long and narrow, and the flower stalks grow from 2- to 3-feet high, with shorter side branches. Several of the trumpet-shaped flowers open at a time, in shades of bright yellow and light to dark orange. Cut when the first flowers are opening. Crocosmias make long-lasting bouquets. For garden display, they generally need staking to show to best advantage. Plants should be lifted before freeze-up time in the fall, the tops cut off, and bulbs stored dry for the winter. Crinum might be called the summer amaryllis. A close relative, it has the amaryllis's habit of bearing a cluster of flowers atop a bare stalk that grows out of the bulb beside the cluster of leaves. Narrow-petaled and sweet-scented, the flowers may be white, pale pink, or a handsome combination of red and white stripes. Each blossom lasts 3 or 4 days, but, since there are several in a cluster and they open successively, each flower stalk is good for more than a week of display. Crinum is an interesting pot plant, since the leaf cluster looks very much like a small palm tree and stays green for most of the year. Outdoors, the bulbs should be planted, with tops above ground, as soon as there is no more danger of frost. Fleshy roots that grow out of the bottom of the bulb should be handled carefully, spread out and buried as Caladium candidum has leaves that are mostly white, vivid green veins and edges...

Time for vigilance

With lawnmowers and other motorized equipment coming out of winter storage, this may be a good time to vary an old maxim and declare that eternal vigilance is the price of safety. The manufacturer of a lawnmower, for instance, should not be held responsible if the person using the mower is forgetful enough to stick his hand into the discharge chute while the motor is running. Use your head and keep hands and feet away from all moving parts as long as they're moving. Use your head again and keep children and pets away—locked up if necessary—from any and all power equipment while it is operating. A little common sense is worth more than a million dollar's worth of safety devices.

And, speaking of lawnmowers, the newest “mulching” type has no discharge chute, so the danger of accidents is reduced by a considerable factor. The idea is to whirl grass clippings around inside the mower housing until they are finely chopped and fall to the ground to act as mulch on the lawn. Mowers of this type, introduced by Bolens in the early 1960's, are made by Toro and Jacobsen, and are in the Snapper line of the McDonough Power Equipment Co. Of course these makers all have traditional mowers, with or without blower pickups for clippings.

They like it damp

reconstructions. Be careful not to gouge the wood if you use a scraper. If you can't spare the time to strip the furniture, use heavy sandpaper (wrap around a block of wood for greater ease) to remove the old wax and paint surface and use a soft cloth to wipe away the dust. Mix paint overher. Miss Linsley's cherry color is a cross between red acrylic and white latex. Apply two coats (three if you're using a light color), allowing each coat to dry thoroughly and sanding each lightly to smooth out any bumps or ridges. While your furniture is drying, choose designs to be applied and cut them carefully with cuticle scissors. Avoid lacy or complicated cutouts at first. Experiment with different arrangements and combinations of designs before gluing them, and when you're ready, turn them face down on newspaper and spray the backs, one at a time, with the adhesive. Press firmly onto the furniture—for added strength, a brayer (rubber roller) can be used.

Wipe away any excess glue with a damp sponge. Apply varnish on a dry day, as high humidity lengthens the drying process. If you're using a brush, try to apply thin coats to avoid yellow ridges which you'll be unable to remove with sandpaper later. Let every coat of varnish dry at least 24 hours. This is the secret of a lasting finish—otherwise, you create a buildup which will dry at the edges and eventually pull away, lifting off the design. After the third coat, sand between every coat very lightly with WetroDry sandpaper, dampened very slightly. Finally, when you've achieved the desired finish—fewer coats will leave the design somewhat raised, an effect Miss Linsley likes—sandagain, and go over the piece with the fine steel wool for an extra smooth surface. Apply a coat of clear furniture paste wax, let it set at least 10 minutes, and then buff thoroughly.

Other disposers can’t compare to KitchenAid.

KitchenAid disposers have a cast iron drain chamber to fight corrosion. Other disposers don’t.

KitchenAid has a push-button Wham Jam Breaker to break up stubborn jams. Other disposers don’t.

KitchenAid has a powerful motor. Stronger start-up power than any other, to handle tough stuff like steak bones and corn husks. Which some disposers can’t.

In fact, when you make a point-by-point comparison, it turns out there really isn’t much comparison. And, perhaps, that’s why so many people choose a new KitchenAid stainless steel disposer when it comes time to replace their worn out disposers.

KitchenAid. Because it’s worth it.

Nothing compares to the elegance of sterling. And nothing says it more impressively than the bold, new "Avondale" by Lunt. On your table "Avondale" says it all so plainly. This is success. This is the luxury I enjoy. This is the standard I've set for my home.

For integrity and craftsmanship, few patterns will match this superb design. Its ornamentation is magnificent, crisp and sharp in every detail. Its outline is particularly graceful, curving into an unusually strong, cameo-like shield area at the top. You will appreciate, too, how solid it feels in your hand. Extra heavy. And all of it pure precious sterling silver. An investment now and for the future.

If your life-style demands sterling and your taste trends toward the elegant, there will be few other pattern choices to challenge the superb, new "Avondale" by Lunt. FOR INFORMATION AND LITERATURE WRITE LUNT SILVERSMITHS, DEPT. H8, GREENFIELD, MASS. 01301.

There is something so naive about most peasant prints. Actually, that something is color. But for a rather different effect we substituted our colors for the more expected ones. A rich Bordeaux for red, vibrant teal for green and soft colors, like dusty rose, for brighter ones. Now our “Pageantry” is quite knowing indeed.

Private label tea

Grow tea and see—it's easy, it's fun, and it makes a striking addition to your indoor greenery. True tea, Thea sinensis, is a close relative of the camellia, though its flowers may not be as romantic.

To plant your own tea, start with a 4- or 5-inch pot. Smaller ones will do, but the larger size is less likely to dry out between waterings. Soak the roots overnight in tepid water, then plant them just below the surface of a potful of loose soil; a good mix is equal parts potting soil, vermiculite, and sharp sand. The plant will begin to emerge in about 60 days but it may take much longer, so don't despair. Make sure your tea plant receives good light but not too much direct sunshine. Water and care for it the way you would an average house plant. Flowers take 4 to 5 years to develop, but you can brew your first cup much earlier than that. As soon as the plant has a number of strong branches, you are ready for your first harvest. To put by your crop of tea, pick off the growing tips, including the two or three leaves just below them, from all the plant's shoots. Let these lie overnight on a piece of cheesecloth. This process is known as withering, the leaves losing about 40 percent of their moisture. Then crush them with a rolling pin and let them sit for 6 hours. Let them sit another two days if you enjoy your tea green, or "fire" it in a 180° oven about 10 or 15 minutes if you prefer it black. Tea seeds, 10 for 65¢ may be ordered from George W. Park Seed Co., Greenwood, S.C. 29647.

Art smarts

Collecting the catalogues that accompany great shows can be almost as much fun as going to the shows. Those catalogues are rare, too. Dagny Corcoran has opened up what has to be a unique service: She's dealing in art catalogues, in and out of print, and having a great time doing it. Most of her clients are libraries, but serious art collectors come to her for these valuable books. She has about 2,000 people on her mailing list and sends out an annual inventory list plus updating supplements three times a year. Her office in Los Angeles is just above the Nick Wilder Gallery and just next door to her husband's Corcoran Gallery. Friends have helped her make it look terrific. "I didn't want it to look like a real booky bookstore. That's why I've kept it loose," she says. Her large glass desk doubles as a dining table, which is wonderfully convenient as clients love to join her for breakfast and lunch almost every day. The desk was designed for her by artist Chuck Arnoldi. Her friend, Mimi London, famous for her affinity with natural materials, also designed the wide chair. Advise and preserve

The President's Advisory Council on Historic Preservation is a government agency that protects historic buildings and land from development. Created 12 years ago, it now has 29 members representing principal departments of the executive branch. Each member has one thing in common—caring what happens to America's landmarks. Richard H. Jenrette, the Council's newly appointed chairman, right, describes the kinds of problems that the council deals with: "Several years ago a new 4-lane highway bridge was proposed to link the lower Charleston peninsula with greater Charleston producing an increase of traffic into the historic Charleston area. We persuaded the planners to develop another site."

Is there a preservation issue in your neighborhood? Contact the council at 1522K St., N.W., Suite 430, Washington, D.C. 20005.

Now you can take the painting off the wall and put it on the dinner table. What potter Dorothy Hafner has done with handmade dinner plates turns the colors of a meal into a work of art.

Her plates were paintings, at first. “I wanted to return from ceramics to painting but couldn’t afford the supplies … so I painted on ceramics,” says the 25-year-old artist.

By tipping the edges of the rectangular paintings, she produces painted plates and bowls. By special order at Henri Bendel in New York or through BFM Gallery, 964 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022, sets start at $110.

Strawberry pot bonanza

Strawberries are one of the easiest plants to grow, with tenfold results. In addition to harvesting fresh strawberries, you can make jam, tea, sundaes, wine, and even a remedy for sunburn.

Buy mature plants. Ever-bearing ones give two or more crops; Fraises-des-Bois will be tastiest. Start them indoors now, in a pot or an old barrel with holes drilled in the side for pockets. Layer the bottom with pebbles for sufficient drainage. Fill the pot with a 3:1 combination of potting soil-peat moss mix. Sunburst is a new “everbearing” variety which grow well in all areas.

Spring Giant, a new June-bearing strawberry is 3 times large than the usual berry.

Mayan magic

If the mystery of the pyramids intrigues you, but you can’t go to Egypt, visit the ruins of Palenque instead. This site in Chiapas, southwest of the Yucatán, was once the westernmost city of the Mayans. It must for archaeology buffs. Besides the towering Temple of the Inscriptions, Palenque has remarkably well-preserved hieroglyphs and stucco artwork.

The excavated area of the site can be covered in a half day, but you should plan on a full one. The top of the Temple of Inscriptions offers a fantastic view and in its crypt lies the original tomb of a Mayan king. The hieroglyphic tablets here and in the temples of the Cross Group are as clear today as they were a thousand years ago.

The present town of Palenque is small but has several comfortable hotels—Canada and Chan-Kah, where you may rub elbows with experts in Mayan studies. Mari-Sol Ha and Hotel Palenque are near the taxi stands and bus stops. Taxis to the site run about $4. Many people choose to stay in the larger city Villahermosa, about an hour-and-a-half away. Stay at the Hotel Manzur as it’s possible to get a 4-seater plane to fly to Palenque’s airport.

What to do: If time permits, hire a jeep or small plane and visit Mayan ruins at Yaxchilan or Bonampak; picnic at Agua Azul, famous for its waterfalls; watch craftsmen work with tools and methods used centuries ago; bring a windbreaker because this area has constant rain.

A child and you can make this Thai Dragon kite on a rainy afternoon, to fly on a sunny spring day.

Materials: 4-ply cotton string or 30-pound test nylon; construction or rice paper, or plastic trash bag; scissors; crepe paper in 15-foot sheets; masking or fiber strapping tape; Sobo or Elmer's glue; ruler; lightweight sticks: one 33-inch rattan, fiberglass, or plastic, one 23-inch dowel, one 10-inch dowel, all ¼-inch thick.

Instructions: Bend the 33-inch piece into a bow 23 inches wide. Notch ends and tie together. Dab with glue or tape over knots for reinforcement. Tie 23-inch spine to middle of bow and reinforce with glue. Tie middle of 10-inch tailbone to spine. "V"-notch ends of tailbone and attach two 24-inch pieces of string. Tie to bow's ends, each measuring 14-inches.

Decorate face either before or after attaching it to kite's frame. If after, be careful. Lay paper over frame's joints. Cut lengthwise from leftover paper and glue around kite's frame. Press firmly and apply another coat of glue on top. Cut triangular paper patches after attaching it to kite's frame. Lay paper under frame. Cut around leaving ⅛-inch border. Apply a thick coat of glue to edges and wrap around frame's joints.

Make paper tail by cutting crepe paper into 10-inch-by-15-foot strips. Cut lengthwise from one corner to middle of other end, which makes 2 pieces tapering from 10 to 5 inches, then from 5 inches to a point. Glue 5-inch sides. Glue wide end to tailbone. Tail will measure 30 feet long. Cut 2 1-by-2-inch paper patches. Center on spine and glue one 4 inches up from tailbone: glue second just below bow center. Cut a 45-inch piece of string and thread a large needle. Poke it through patch at bow close to spine, pass around spine, and bring it back up through front. Tie. Stitch through bottom patch the same way and knot.

Keep slack on the kite's face side. This is the bridle. Pull bridle to a 45-degree angle and tie a loop by wrapping string around a finger. Attach your flying string to loop and it's ready to take off. Instructions from Go Fly a Kite, 1434 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10028.

Jet pet

"When you travel, changes in water, food, and climate can affect your pet as much as they affect you," says Dr. Leonard R. Levine, New York City veterinarian. "If your pet is not used to flying and you are only going for a short time, it may be best to leave your pet with a reputable kennel." However, if you must travel it may be best to leave your pet with a reputable kennel. Many airlines welcome small dogs, cats, or birds in the cabin during flights. Request "Pet Approval" when making reservation. The E.P.T.™ In-Home Early Pregnancy Test is a private little revolution any woman can easily buy at her drugstore. It is highly accurate. Millions of women today in 13 European countries use this testing method. Now its high accuracy rate has been verified here in America by doctors who clinically confirmed the results of tests performed by women themselves in their own homes.

That means you can confidently do this easy pregnancy test yourself — privately — right at home without waiting for appointments or delays. That simple difference is the result of many years of costly research. And it's worth every penny.

At last, early knowledge of pregnancy belongs easily and accurately to us all. It's simple. Fast. And there is no risk, no physical danger whatever, in doing it because a sample of your first morning urine is all that's needed for the test.

As soon as you become pregnant, your body starts to produce a special hormone — HCG. Starting on the 9th day after the date you expected your menstrual period to begin, there should be sufficient concentration of HCG in your urine to give an accurate reading of pregnancy. And that's all there is to it. Follow the test directions with care, and three drops of urine can tell you quickly and easily what you want to know.

If you get a positive reading, you can assume you are pregnant. Such positive pregnancy readings in our clinical tests proved to be 97% accurate. If your reading is negative, your overdue period should begin soon. If a week passes and you still have not started menstruating, you should take a second E.P.T. test because there may not have been sufficient HCG in your urine at the time of the first test, or you may have miscalculated your period. Negative readings on a first test are about 80% accurate, on repeat testing one week later they are 91% accurate. If your second test result is still negative and your period has not begun, we urge you to consult your doctor as soon as possible.

E.P.T. is very simple to do, but it is important that you follow the instructions carefully to insure an accurate reading. E.P.T. Early Pregnancy Test gives women a new power, the power of time to help control the quality of their pregnancies.

The first 60 days are critical in fetal development. Improper nutrition, cigarettes, alcohol, even commonly used household medications can be harmful in these crucial first 60 days before most women even know for sure that they are pregnant. Now with E.P.T. you can know. Now, when you call your doctor, you have the results of your test to report. And time is on your side at last.

1. Put three drops of urine into the test tube.
2. Add contents of the plastic vial, shake and place test tube in holder. It must remain undisturbed for two hours.
3. After two hours if a dark brown ring is visible in the mirror, that indicates an active pregnancy.

At last, an accurate early pregnancy test that women can do at home quickly, safely and very easily.

American coffee service

From the mark and photograph, can you identify the firm or the designer who was responsible for making my coffee service? R.L.H.—Naples, Fla.

Your urn-form coffee service of octagonal plan bears the sterling silver mark of the Barbour Silver Co., which was established in 1892 at Hartford, Conn. In its 1893 catalogue, comprising more than 100 pages, only five were for sterling silver holloware, the remaining being for plated silver. The company was one of the original firms to become part of International Silver in 1898.

Boston State House plate

My blue plate bears the impressed mark "Rogers." That's all I know about it. Can you tell me more? M.K.—Lakeview, Conn.

Your parian porcelain plate is of English provenance, probably dating about 1850. The nest is very well done, as it was usually not woven but rendered more simply, often like a picket fence.

Parian porcelain

Do you have any idea how old my porcelain dish is and where it originated? D.B.L.—San Juan, P.R.

Your parian porcelain chicken on nest is of English provenance, probably dating about 1850. The nest is very well done, as it was usually not woven but rendered more simply, often like a picket fence.

Sheffield mark

From my drawing of the mark that's on my 14-piece English antique epergne, can you tell me who made it and about when? A.C.C. Jr.—Northport, Ala.

Your centerpiece was made by the Victorian silverplaters, Walker and Hall, of Sheffield, who later, in 1900-1901, registered their mark as manufacturers of sterling silver. According to the set of hallmarks, Walker and Hall made your sterling silver centerpiece at Sheffield in 1905-1906.

American tea service

I would like to know something about the origin of my 6-piece silver tea service. I have drawn the mark that is on the bottom.  G.W.S. Jr.—Topeka, Kans.

Your plated silver tea service was made by the Wilcox Silver Plate Co., which was active at Meriden, Conn. from 1865-1898, when it merged with the International Silver Co. Your service probably dates about the 1880s or 1890s.

Victorian glass

I would appreciate anything you can tell me about my colored glass vase.  J.E.L.—Dallas, Tex.

Your colored-glass vase is a characteristic Victorian product, dating about the 1850s. It is a kind of art glass, which was made both in European and American glassworks. This glass is generally attributed to Frank Latham, who, we understand, worked at the Boston and Sandwich Glass Co., which produced every type of fashionable glassware during the 63 years it was in operation (1825-1888).

Renaissance-style chair

Can you tell me anything about the style of this ornate old chair, which we bought in a second-hand shop?  B.G.—San Antonio, Tex.

Your tall, rectangular side chair with quadrangular supports and a wood seat has been copied from a distinctive type of late 16th-century Italian Renaissance chair. In the original model, the uprights were surmounted with carved finials; the back consisted of two and sometimes three broad, ornately shaped and carved, decorative crosspieces, and a similar crosspiece joined the two front legs. Your chair is of recent manufacture.

Silver pitcher

I thought my old pitcher was pewter, but since it's been cleaned, I'm not sure. From the mark and drawing, can you tell me anything about it?  M.H.A.—Sessums, Miss.

It is not pewter. The mark indicates that you have a plated silver pitcher which was made by the Homan Manufacturing Co., which was active at Cincinnati, Ohio from about 1904 until 1942. Your pitcher is probably an early piece. The reason that you thought it might be pewter is because the plated silver has practically worn off. We would suggest you take it to your best jewelry and/or silver store and have it replated.

Durable finishes in fashion-colors, metallics and wood tones express your decorating ideas. Only rods fine enough can wear the Graber mark. The mark of a great window. Look for it in department stores, decorator shops and on great windows everywhere.

Personal finance is one of those terms that get tossed around so much that its meaning becomes vague. James D. Schwartz, a personal financial planner in Denver, probably has the best definition around: "Personal financial planning is merely a way of achieving your life goals." It may help to put it in perspective by looking at the four broad areas it is concerned with:

Asset protection. Insurance to cover you and your family against the loss of your house, other types of property and even yourself. Whether you like to think of yourself that way or not, you are a financial asset to your family if you earn money. Hence, you need health, disability, and life insurance to cover the possibility of something happening to you.

Asset accumulation. Funds for your retirement, your children's education, or nest egg for investments.

Asset conservation (living). Strategies for keeping more of your income by saving as much as possible through tax planning, investing in a house or some other type of tax shelter, and tax deferral through pension and profit-sharing plans.

Asset conservation (death). Provisions for your spouse and family after you die. This involves making sure that there's enough cash on hand to meet their immediate needs, as well as making sure that you draw up a good will so that your property is passed on to them as efficiently as possible.

Because most of us have either failed to establish a reasonable game plan or have set unrealistic goals, Schwartz and other personal financial planners recommend personal financial planning by objective—PFPO.

It's somewhat similar to management by objective, a technique that has proven successful in managing businesses. The only difference is that PFPO also involves some psychology. You have to figure out where you want to go and what you're willing to pay to get there before you can choose a means of getting there. The idea is to work up a plan that fits your needs and resources to reach practical goals. That will help avoid the commonly made mistake of getting so lost in the labyrinth of personal finance that we lose sight of what it was that we wanted to achieve. It can be a very costly mistake because it means that your personal financial portfolio's insurance policies and investments consist of what you've been sold, not what you have bought.

So the first step is to figure out what you want. And that can be trickier than you may realize. You have to refocus your thinking to come up with attainable wants, not a wish list of unrealizable fantasies. And that takes help. If you don't have a personal financial advisor with whom you can work out a plan, work with your spouse and trusted friends. And even if you do have a personal financial advisor, you'd be wise to bring your spouse in on these planning sessions. For one thing, your planning sessions will affect your spouse's financial future as much as yours. For another, your spouse will be able to give you some valuable psychological feedback—which is absolutely essential. Additional insights are invaluable because the way we perceive ourselves and the way others see us are often a Jekyll and Hyde apart. For example, you may think that you're willing to take a reasoned risk in stocks in return for a shot at a hefty capital gain. That may or may not be an accurate assessment. Your spouse should be able to tell you if it is. Moreover, he or she will be able to give you equally vital information. Let's say that everyone agrees that you have a taste for risks. That only partly suggests speculative investments. To succeed with a speculation, you also need other characteristics such as the willingness to keep track of your investments, the wisdom to weigh all the information, and the courage to bail out of a losing situation or take your profits and run if the investment turns out to be a winner. Setting a reasonable goal for profits and sticking with it is just as important as having the courage to get out of a losing situation. As an old Wall Street maxim puts it: "Bulls can make money and bears can make money, but pigs seldom do."

Let's take another example: Providing for your family in the event that something happens to you. There are a staggering number of options. You could buy a whole life-insurance policy with a huge face amount. (Whole life insurance has a built-in savings plan called a cash value build-up.) That would be okay if you found that you had

Our Jamie’s 5 months this week. His little cradle is from Ethan Allen, too.

Now with Jamie, I can’t always browse around the Gallery, so I browse through their Treasury. 392 pages of pictures and ideas, free— you don’t have to buy anything.

This is our house.

"WE’RE NOT RICH, BUT WE KNOW IT’S SMARTER TO BUY GOOD FURNITURE ONCE, THAN TO BUY CHEAP FURNITURE AGAIN & AGAIN."

Meet Judy and Nick Merrill. Second in a series of stories about the kind of people who furnish their house, their way, at Ethan Allen.

“When Nick and I decided to renovate this old house, we knew it would mean a lot of work. But to us it’s worth it. Not just because the neighborhood is worth preserving, but because these houses stand for the kind of values that are important to us. That’s how we feel about our furniture, too. And it’s why I fell in love with the things at Ethan Allen. They seem committed to making really fine furniture, in styles that never go out of style, like this Canopy Bed from their Heirloom Collection.

When I think about what life was like years ago, when people cherished their few possessions, I realize it’s not so different now. Nick and I think about every piece before we buy it, to make sure we get the kind of quality and value we want. You can tell just by looking at it, this furniture is going to last a long time— I bet Jamie inherits this bed! Then it really will be an heirloom.”

You know, when our friends come over they can’t believe we own such good furniture. When I tell them it’s all from Ethan Allen, they’re even more impressed. They don’t realize that in the long run, buying good furniture from the start is one of the best investments you can make.

8 PRINCIPLES
FOR FINANCIAL CONTROL

Personal financial planning by objective, PFPO, can be broken down into broad principles—eight if you’re working with a personal financial advisor. They are:

1. Determining and setting realistic goals. For example, you may find that setting aside enough money to send your children to a good college is a reasonable goal, while funding their education at a costly Ivy League university is unreasonably ambitious.

2. Formulating plans to achieve the goals. That might, for example, involve budgeting a certain amount each month for savings or investments.

3. Setting up a system to monitor and measure your progress. This is vital. Most people don’t get ahead because they don’t keep track of their assets. When something does go wrong, they’re usually oblivious to what has happened and hence suffer the consequences. What’s worse, they don’t have a good fallback position. It’s important to have an alternate plan, if things don’t go as you planned.

4. Deciding rationally, rather than rationalizing decisions. That will help you avoid what Schwartz calls “the good deal syndrome”—those bargains that wind up actually costing money.

For example, buying an annuity because its terms are fabulous, even though you don’t really need an annuity.

5. Using your resources effectively. This simply involves determining what you need to do to reach your goals, given your resources.

6. Using your resources efficiently. Once you’ve decided what you can do, you have to find the right way to do it. For example, if you have found that you need $150,000 of life insurance, you now need to find the best policy for that money.

7. Common understanding. You, your spouse, and your advisors all have to understand what’s going on, what the plan is. Sounds simple. It’s not. Often people don’t use the same language when talking to one another. For example, if your broker says a particular investment will give you a decent return on your investment, you may well have visions of 12 percent rates of return in your head, when all he meant was that you might get a 7 percent return.

8. Make sure your plan is custom-designed for you. If you’re working with a personal financial advisor, be sure his suggestions are tailored to your interests. Many advisors would rather try to make you fit their plan.

Many try, but none succeed. You just can’t copy a true original.

Because it’s rare.

“lacks follow through,” “too ambitious,” “too greedy,” or “too frightened of risk.” Then review the list a day or two later so that you can go over it as dispassionately as possible. You’ll be amazed how objective you can get by listing what you think are the objections of others.

Now you’re ready to weigh all the factors and decide which objectives you can reasonably pursue. This involves a series of trade-offs. You’re going to have to give up certain things, at least temporarily, to pursue others. And that’s as it should be. It helps put your objective in order of priority, which will help you avoid wasting a lot of time and energy chasing after minor goals.

The beauty of this type of system is that it gives you a unified and integrated plan. That by itself gives you an advantage. For one thing, you will avoid costly duplications of effort—say, three insurance policies where one would be cheaper and more effective. For another it lets you monitor your progress more effectively. And that’s an important element of this system. As Schwartz puts it: “The key to success is to obtain timely continuous feedback, allowing one the option to correct or modify tactics and minimize potential losses.” It is, in effect, a financial map that is designed to let you know where you are so that you can track your progress toward your goals.

That’s especially important in these days of shifting politics, erratic stock and bond markets, new tax laws, and other “environmental” factors. These environmental factors are the framework in which you will have to work. And do note that changes in your family are also environmental factors, which have to be taken into account. For example, your estate plan will have to be changed if there are any births, deaths, marriages, divorces, and inheritances.

One of the greatest benefits of this type of personal financial planning is that it tends to perpetuate itself. The plan becomes almost automatic. As the psychologists put it, the plan involves three key elements: unfreezing, changing, and refreezing. (The psychological factors are extremely important, even though most of us tend to disregard the word “personal” in personal financial planning.) Unfreezing or thawing out established behavior patterns happens almost automatically when you set up the plan. You are moving from the haphazard to the planned—and hence are changing the habits which have probably hindered your financial success. Changing occurs as you monitor the plan. You’re replacing one type of behavior with another. As that continues, you refreeze or establish a new pattern of behavior.

Exercises from expert Barbara Pearlman for indoor and outdoor gardeners or anyone who wants to make chores do double duty. By Caroline Seebohm left: Barbara Pearlman lifts a heavy watering can and keeps the eight close to the hip; lower shoulder to reach.

Right: The correct crouch keeps your back straight; after gardening, relax by dropping from the waist, swaying shoulders and arms.

Now's the time when gardening buffs are getting down on their knees, bending their backs, and stretching every muscle in order to reap the rewards of nature's fruitfulness. Do you see the beautiful, lustrous colors, heady scents, rows and rows of fresh green vegetables float before your eyes as the result of your labors? Or are you rather bracing yourself for the aches and pains that seem inevitably to accompany the joys of gardening?

Exercise expert Barbara Pearlman, whose book, Barbara Pearlman's Dance Exercizes, has just been published by Doubleday/Dolphin, recalls how she enriched last summer on a variety of vegetables from a friend's garden. "The trouble is," explains Mrs. Pearlman, "that people abuse their bodies when they rush out into the garden as the weather improves. They are just like weekend athletes—making sudden demands on their muscles and joints that cannot be met without penalty." It's not that gardening is bad for you. On the contrary, according to Mrs. Pearlman, gardening is a very good way of getting exercise. "You inhale fresh air, you oxygenate your body, and you stretch your body in ways that can do it a lot of good." The problem is that if you start doing it all at once, your body is not ready. Ideally, all year-round exercises should be your goal in order to have a happy gardening season. As Barbara Pearlman says, "Hours spent working among the lettuce and lilacs need not be agonizing. However, to garden—or do most kinds of work around the house—and not abuse your body does take a bit of common sense, muscle flexibility and adherence to some fundamental rules:

1. Never lift anything at arm's length, with knees locked. Instead, bend your knees, bringing the object close to your body. Then lift it by straightening your knees. By doing so, the strong thigh muscles bear the majority of the weight...not your back.

2. Carry heavy or bulky objects as close to your midline as possible.

alternate arms when digging, weeding, planting, etc. This prevents the stress from being placed on only one side of your body.

4. Avoid remaining in the same position for too long.

5. Periodically, take time out for a slow stretch. Or, relax your head, neck, and shoulder area by doing a slow head roll or shoulder rotation. Both can do wonders for quickly relieving stiffness and muscle fatigue.

6. Stop before feeling overly fatigued. Take the signals from your body. Use it! Don't abuse it!

"In order to derive maximum pleasure (and minimum discomfort) from your garden chores, it does help to be as fit and flexible as possible. The easy-to-follow warm-ups, shown on page 35 have been specifically chosen to limber you up for the rigors of gardening. All six exercises are based on slow stretching which develops greater agility and muscle suppleness. Practice the movements daily, beginning today, and, if you can, keep them up all year-round. Then you'll always be in top form."

Gardening and your well-being

The pleasure you experience while gardening is a lot more than just physical. Besides the visual stimulation and the wonderful relaxation that comes from being outdoors, gardening can be a constructive outlet for creativity or frustration. It is not surprising, therefore, that some therapists, like horticultural therapist Mary Mandeville at the University of Michigan, find gardening a very successful health prescription for physically disabled and emotionally disabled patients. By implication her successes have significance for healthy, active gardeners, too.

"Since you are working with a living medium, you discover a basic pleasure in seeing things grow. Plants respond to your treatment. This means that you learn to take responsibility, because they depend on you. This goes for children, the elderly, people with psychological or emotional problems because it reestablishes an investment in the future, a study in the importance of continuity," explains Ms. Mandeville.

At The Institute for Rehabilitation Medicine, popularly known as New York's Rusk Institute, the focus is very much on horticulture as a means of therapy. Horticulture therapist JoAnn Hiott, who has studied botany, horticulture, and physiotherapy, describes some of the activities that take place during a session with a patient. "We mix soil, take root cuttings, start seeds, dry flowers, make terrariums, and cut weeds as ways of developing hand and eye coordination, improving spatial perception, studying and developing dexterity of hands and fingers where the patient needs it. Our horticultural therapy program is conducted in a non-technic, non-threatening, and nonclinical environment. There's a special kind of relief that comes with a patient's progress towards self-sufficiency and self-reliance. When they learn here they can do at home recreation as well as physical exercise.

Is there someone you would like to start a "gardening therapy" program for? If so, "make the first effort easy," advises Mary Mandeville. "For example start with, say, coleus cuttings. They are easy to grow and you can see results in only a couple of days. Or start a simple window sill garden of herbs, which smell wonderful, or with begonias that are fairly hardy and, also, flower. These always children and grownups alike can immediately see how their personal care-relen can reap wonderful rewards."

Beauty and health products

new this month

in the stores

A fragrance-free, simple skin-care system which looks after skins that are combinations of dry and oily areas is being introduced this month. Montage is a complete line of treatments and makeups in which each product does two things at once—absorbs excess surface oils in oily areas and replaces lubricants that are lacking in other parts of the face. The treatments include a cleanser, moisture balance, a light night cream, a mask, a toner, and a light facial soap. Each includes powders to absorb, lubricants to soften, and humectants to balance the humidity of the air with your skin's own natural moisture content. The liquid products come with a push-pump applicator so you get exactly the amount you need. The makeups continue the treatment and are reasonably priced, from $3.75 to $5. The array of colors—lipsticks, eyeshadows, and nail enamels—is tremendous. There are 220 to choose from and they're available for you to try from a huge saucer-shaped tester. Montage is at Bloomingdale's; Sander-Harris; Burdine's; Lazarus; Abraham & Straus.

Good things come in threes—luck, surprises, sometimes even presents. Estée Lauder's contribution to the truth of this saying takes the shape of fragrance—The New Romantics. They're three different scents that comprise a fragrance wardrobe in themselves, "White Linen," "Celadon," and "Pavilion." What's really new is that the scents "layer." You can wear one, two, or all three right on top of each other—they work ingeniously.

Among the Taurean herbs are pennyroyal, goldenrod, and cowslip. Flowers identified with Taurus are violets, daffodils, and the peerless rose, dedicated to the goddess of love by the Greeks, planted throughout the Empire by the Romans, who favored it above all others. The rose has been used for adornment, for symbolism, and even for medicine for thousands of years. A true-to-nature essence is Tea Rose by Princess Luciana and every Taurus will love Joy, luxury realized by Jean Patou. Taurean men agree that Moustache by Marcel Rochas is grand.

Once a week is not enough.

If you have dry skin,
you probably think the ultimate treatment for it is a long soak in a tub with bath oil. But your busy schedule may only permit that luxury once a week. And that's not enough.

Dry skin needs help every day.
Every time you bathe or shower. Or it gets itchier, scalier, harder to live with. And that's why Neutrogena® Body Oil was developed.

Neutrogena Body Oil is a new concept in dry skin treatment, for women who don't have time to soak in a tub. It's a pure, light, natural sesame oil formula that gives you the "soaking-in" benefits of bath oil, but in a non-greasy form, so it can be put directly on your skin.

Doesn't it feel greasy? No.
Unlike ordinary bath oils which are made from mineral oil, the unusual sesame oil formula of Neutrogena Body Oil is quickly absorbed by your wet skin. You apply it right after you shower or bathe. No waste. No staining your clothes.

Safe and mild. Medical tests have shown that no other oil tested is less irritating. That's why dermatologists can recommend it.

It's more expensive to put sesame oil in our formula, but the results are well worth it to your dry skin. Try it today. And tomorrow. You'll want to use it every day. Because nothing will make your dry skin feel better.

TELEPHONES: BRAND-NEW CONNECTIONS

News about giant projection TV systems, plus how TV works as a tornado warning device

Q What are some of the new telephone services that are available?

A Thanks to the capabilities of new electronic switching systems, some telephone companies now offer four “Custom Calling Services.” Call Waiting lets you know that somebody else is trying to get through to you when you are talking on the phone. There will be two short tones, 10 seconds apart. Depressing the switch-hook puts the first call on hold, so that alternate conversations can be held, each one private. The signal tones are heard only by the party being called. The caller hears the regular ringing signal. Call Forwarding automatically transfers incoming calls to any other phone designated. A dialed code is used to indicate the number to which the call should be transferred. Three-way Calling permits three people to talk together from different phones. The third party can be called and added to any conversation while it’s in progress. Speed Calling is a fast way to dial frequently called numbers by using one, two, or three digits instead of the usual seven or ten. Each user of this service may have 8 or 30 preselected numbers programmed into the phone company’s computer.

These services are available at only some of the Bell System’s exchanges—those using electronic switching. Each service costs an average of $2.25 extra per month.

Q What are the advantages and disadvantages of owning your own phone?

A A decision by the Federal Communications Commission, upheld last year by the courts, permits anybody to buy and connect telephone instruments. Principally, the advantage, aside from the wider variety of styles available, is that eventually you save money buying your own phone (assuming nothing goes wrong with the instrument). The disadvantage is that if something does go wrong, you’ll have to take it to a repair shop. With a rental instrument, of course, the telephone company maintains the phone quickly and efficiently, replacing it if necessary without extra charge. The Bell Telephone Companies, which opposed the proposal to let consumers own their own phones, are now meeting the competition by setting up “Telephone Stores,” which offer hybrid phones. The customer buys the outer shell of the phone, but the phone company continues to own the interior machinery, which it services just as it does its rental telephones. However, what’s interesting is that the buy-your-own telephone business is expanding beyond styling with advanced features that have never been available before. One new phone displays the number you are calling in bright electronic digits. Another sings like a bird instead of ringing. A cordless telephone is now available for use in the yard or around the pool, tuning in by radio to the telephone lines. Probably the most elaborate is a new instrument which contains a built-in calculator, using the same push-buttons which dial the telephone numbers, a digital clock with an alarm that buzzes every 10 minutes, a “memory recall,” which lets you call back the last number dialed at the push of a button in case you’re disconnected, and a timer, which gives you a constant reading of how long you’ve been on the phone.

Q Is it true that a television set can give warning of an approaching tornado?

A Some people claim their lives have been saved by their television set’s sensitivity to electronic impulses created by severe storms. A system employing television receivers as a direct warning of a very nearby tornado is widely used in the Midwestern tornado belt. However, the United States Weather Service cautions that the method should only be used along with other storm-warning systems, because it’s not infallible. The TV tornado-warning system is known as the “Weller Method” after...

Newton Weller, a self-taught electronics engineer who developed it.

Weller found that tornadoes generally are accompanied by an "electrical signature," which is very close in frequency to television's Channel 2. He gives these rules for using the family set as an auxiliary tornado-warning device: In the event of threatening weather or a tornado alert in your area, turn the set on, disable any automatic-picture devices such as InstaMatic or ColorTrak, and let it warm up. Tune to Channel 13; then turn the brightness knob down to the point where the picture just disappears. Now turn to Channel 2 without resetting the brightness control. Leave the set alone. A lightning storm will cause horizontal streaks or flashes on the screen—the broader the streaks the more severe the storm. But as long as the screen doesn't glow steadily, the storm is not a tornado. The signal of a tornado is an increasingly steady bright light filling the screen. If there's a station in your area on Channel 2 and the darkened picture becomes increasingly visible and remains visible and bright, this could also mean there's a tornado within 15 or 20 miles. This is a signal to take shelter immediately. This method will work properly only if you have your own outdoor or indoor antenna. If you're connected to cable TV, don't attempt to use it.

Q How good are the new super-screen television sets?

A The largest American direct-view television sets have 25-inch screens. The new projection sets start where these leave off—with pictures from about 40 inches in diagonal measurement, up to 7 feet. Projection sets range in price from about $700 to nearly $5,000. Advent Corporation, the relatively small Cambridge, Mass., hi-fi manufacturer, which started the whole trend with a 7-foot system, is now also offering 3-tube designs with 5- and 6-foot screens starting around $2,600. About 60 other manufacturers and assemblers offer various types of projection systems.

At their best, these systems can be extremely engrossing, an experience rather closer to going to the movies. But the picture must be good. Snow, distortion, and ghosts are far more objectionable on the life-size screen than they are on a direct-view television. This means you must be in an area of good reception and have an adequate antenna system.

The simplest projection TV system is basically a small-screen color television set with a lens system in front of its picture tube to focus the picture on the screen. The more elaborate type uses specially designed electronics, three projection tubes and lenses, one tube-and-lens set for each primary color. This type provides a brighter picture, but also is bulkier and more expensive and often more difficult to adjust. Before buying a projection system, view demonstrations of several different brands, as they vary widely in quality and performance. Know exactly the space each system requires and make certain you have ample room for the one you choose. It's best to have the dealer install the unit and show you exactly how to operate it.

Q Some tape decks for stereo hi-fi systems have "three heads." If one is for recording and the other for playback, what's the third head for?

A It's for monitoring—so you can tell exactly how a recording is going to come out while you're making it. The third head actually lets you listen to a playback of the tape while it's being recorded—or, more accurately, a tiny fraction of a second after it's recorded. By using either headphones or a loudspeaker, you can listen to what's going into the recorder with what's coming out, and make adjustments for maximum fidelity of the recorded tape.

THE SPORTS CAR BOOM

A rundown on twenty-two open and closed high-performance cars that make driving safer

By Richard and Jean Taylor

Today, standard components take the headache out of owning a sports car. With good road holding, quick steering, fast acceleration, and superior braking, sports cars offer an incredibly high standard of safe driving.

Not so long ago, a sports car was a hard-riding roadster made only in England or Italy. It came in British racing green or bright red and tended to spend as much of its time in the repair shop as it did on the road. Drivers wore big scarves, waved their imported driving gloves, or honked their horns, every time they passed one another. Owning a sports car made them members of an unofficial club. Today the sports car is no longer such an esoteric machine. It is roomier, carries four people in comfort and runs with all the familiar reliability of a sedan. Many such automobiles are now made in America, though the single most popular sports car, the Datsun 280Z, comes from Japan. Sports cars are not necessarily open either. The practical closed coupe with an air conditioner is an alternative to the romantic, breeze-in-your-hair roadster. Twenty years ago, waiting for parts to arrive from Europe was an integral aspect of owning a sports car. Today, they're really no more trouble to own than anything else. The Datsun 280Z, for example, uses the same basic engine and transmission that are in the best-selling Datsun 810 sedan. Chevrolet's Camaro and Corvette use the same V-8 engine fitted to all General Motors sedans. While it may not be so exciting to car buffs who like to brag about exotic refinements under the hood, there's something to be said for sharing components. You can get your Corvette serviced in any Chevrolet dealer and you certainly don't have to wait months for the parts.

What makes a sports car different? Well, first and foremost, a sports car is fun to drive. Because its body is lighter and smaller than a sedan with the same engine, it has quicker acceleration and a higher top speed that gives effortless cruising at legal speeds. All true sports cars have manual transmission, either 4-speed or 5-speed, and many can be fitted with overdrive that further increases gas mileage and reduces engine noise and wear. But what really makes a sports car an exciting driving experience is the handling. The engineers spend endless hours refining the sports car's chassis and suspension so that it will zip around corners quickly, solidly, and safely. In the old days, the only way to make a car handle well in corners was to make the suspension very stiff. But modern suspension designers have learned a lot, and a good sports car has a ride at least as soft as a big sedan. It also has tight, nippy steering that lets you control exactly what the wheels are doing every second. Power steering is rare on sports cars, because a good driver needs to "feel" the road through the steering wheel. He can sense if the wheels are going to slide on a slick road, for example, and because the sports car's steering wheel takes fewer turns than a sedan's, he can react much more quickly. A sports car also has better braking power. Although most models now use the same brakes that are fitted to the manufacturers' sedans, because the sports car is much lighter, the brakes have less work to do, so they're more efficient. An additional reason a sports car stops and corners so well is because it has much bigger tires for its weight than do most sedans. High performance radial tires are standard equipment on all sports cars. Thus, with its good road-holding, quick steering, fast acceleration, and superior braking, the sports car offers an incredibly high standard of safe driving.

The cheapest sports car you can buy is the MG Midget at $4,150. An average price is closer to $10,000, while a new Ferrari will cost around $30,000. Of course quality always costs more. Surprisingly, most sports cars are quite economical as far as gas consumption and running costs go. This is because they have small, efficient engines, and weighing less, don't wear out tires, shock absorbers, and other components as quickly as heavier sedans. What's more, they're fitted with the best available parts which have more durability.

Of course quality always costs more. The cheapest sports car you can buy is the MG Midget at $4,150. An average price is closer to $10,000, while a new Ferrari will cost around $30,000. Actually, the most expensive Italian sports cars aren't sold in America because their high-performance engines don't meet the Federal air-pollution standards, but the MGB is still a pleasant little sports car. Good value for the money.

FIAT 124 SPORTS SPIDER Neither very traditional nor very innovative, this car is one in which everything works better than you'd think it should. It has 5-speed transmission, 4-wheel disc brakes, a double-overhead-cam engine, smooth Italian styling by Pininfarina, and a comfortable feeling in every part.

Economical to run, fun to drive. Triumph Spitfire.

NEW SPORTS CARS

ALFA ROMEO 2000 SPIDER VELOCE
More expensive than the Fiat 124 but otherwise very similar, right down to its 5-speed gearbox, 4-wheel discs, double-overhead-cams, and Pininfarina body.

EXCALIBUR SERIES III
The Excalibur is the largest engine you can buy in any car, a huge 454-cubic-inch V-8 from a Chevrolet truck. It also has the 4-wheel disc brakes and all independent suspension from a Corvette, covered over by a fiberglass and aluminum body that’s meant to look like that of a 1929 Mercedes-Benz. Understandably, the car attracts lots of attention.

COUPES

CHEVROLET CAMARO
The Camaro Z28 is large and heavy for a sports car, but it’s also surprisingly nimble. With good styling, excellent suspension, a durable engine, and a luxurious interior, at the price, it’s a bargain.

PONTIAC TRANSAM
Pontiac’s version of the Camaro, with an even bigger engine, better suspension, and more luxurious interior. Even more of a bargain.

TOYOTA CELICA GT
The Celica GT has the same durable chassis that the Celica has used in previous years, complete with single-overhead cam engine and 5-speed transmission. But this year it has an all-new body with prettier styling. Reliable, economical, and fun to drive, costs less than comparable cars.

TRIUMPH TR7
The TR7 is a British version of the modern, aerodynamic coupe pioneered by Datsun’s 280Z. The TR7 is a car you can love for its spacious interior, good trunk space, and excellent performance.

ALFA ROMEO SPREAT VELOCE
Alfa’s coupe is completely different from the Sport Spider. It uses the same engine, but the transmission is built into the rear axle, and there’s an unusual independent rear suspension called a DeDion, patterned after many racing cars. This Alfa is made in very small numbers, so while it’s not particularly expensive, you won’t see very many on U.S. roads.

DATSUN 280Z
The 280Z has been around for almost a decade, and it’s far and away the most popular sports car ever built. Someday people will collect these cars and consider them classics. The 280Z is relatively big, for a sports car, but it’s also smooth, nimble, powerful, and durable.

LANCIA BETA COUPE
Lancia is owned by Fiat, but it’s a very small company making just a few high-quality cars. The Beta Coupe uses a Fiat engine, mounted transversely in the front and driving the front wheels. It has excellent traction, 4-wheel disc brakes, a 5-speed transmission and the styling is handsome.

CHEVROLET CORVETTE The Corvette has been in production since 1967 in virtually the same form, and it's become a true collector's item for many car enthusiasts. It has a new roof design this year, but otherwise remains the same—big, fast, heavy.

PORSCHE 924 The 924 is the first front-engined Porsche, using a combination of Audi and Volkswagen Rabbit components. It does have wonderfully balanced handling and a new 5-speed transmission adds a useful gear for highway cruising.

LOTUS SPRINT/ELITE Lotus has been making virtually hand-built fiberglass sports cars for over twenty years, and they're just about the nearest thing you can buy to a real racing car. The Sprint and Elite have slightly different styling, but everything else is the same... double-overhead cam engine, 5-speed transmission, all-independent suspension and luxurious interior.

PORSCHE 911 Porsche's 911 has been in production since 1964, and it's the only rear-engined sports car left. It comes in a variety of trim and performance levels, from the relatively tame 911 SC to the 165 mph, $32,500, 911 Turbo. All models have a 5-speed transmission, 4-wheel disc brakes, all-independent suspension and air-cooled engine. Porsche 911 is a wonderfully built, sturdy and as fine finished as a Swiss watch. They attract breed of drivers who won't compromise on quality.

FERRARI 308 The 308 is the "little" Ferrari, with a small engine and relatively light weight. It is also an exotic sport car of such high performance, it's an anachronism in this country with speed limits, heavy traffic, and relatively high gasoline cost. Nevertheless, it's a wonderful anachronism.

ASTON MARTIN V-8 Aston Martin went bankrupt two years ago, but a group of American enthusiasts rescued this old-time British company and restarted production. The Aston coupe has incredibly high performance in every possible area, but it's also perfectly usable on a day-to-day basis. Big, comfortable, luxurious.

THREE SPORTY CARS NEW THIS SPRING

Three new sports cars will be available this spring. The first, an all-new coupe from Mazda, will be introduced in May. This new model, the RX-7, will be the only sport car in the world to use the lightweight, efficient, and reliable Wankel-type rotary engine. Mazda's rotary engine develops 120 hp from only 70 cubic inches, making it much more powerful for its size than normal engines. It should also deliver 25 mpg. Mazda says the RX-7 will come with a 5-speed transmission, hatchback rear window, disc brakes, AM/FM radio, tinted glass, radial tires, and reclining bucket seats as standard. Base price will be under $7,000.

Toyota and Datsun both have new sports cars, too. Toyota will have another version of the popular Celica this spring, with a longer hood and longer wheel base to make room for a 6-cylinder engine. The current Celica has a 4-cylinder engine of 134 cubic inches and 95 hp, the 6-cylinder will be of 165 cubic inches and 120 hp. It will use electronic fuel injection.

Datsun's new sports car will appear in early summer, and will be a lighter version of the current 280Z, with an all-new body and smaller engine. Like the Mazda RX-7, the new Datsun will hold only two passengers. The Toyota Celica can carry four.

Painted Pails for Flowers and Fruit

With a can of enamel and a tin pail or pudding mold, you can make table decorations like the ones on pages 160-165.

Tin tubs and buckets can go to the dinner table if you dress them up with paint.

You can turn a tin pail into a charming, inexpensive centerpiece with just a few quick strokes of paint. Joseph Staiano, who spruced up the containers here, says you can use spray paint, but "a brush is easier and gives the topcoat a nice texture." All you need is a galvanized tin pail (find them at your hardware store or see Shopping Information, page 210), or use a watering can or pudding mold, any shape that pleases you—plus metal primer, high-gloss enamel paint, and a small brush. To prevent paint from flaking, coat the pail inside and out with the primer, let dry overnight or according to instructions on the can. Apply a coat of enamel and let dry completely. If you like, you can experiment with finishing touches like a contrasting color band around the top and bottom or perhaps a stenciled pattern border or overall design. Fill the pails with fresh flowers or polished fruit.

Don’t Compromise When You Economize.

Sure you want economy. But you’ve probably convinced yourself that you’d have to give up most of the things you’ve come to expect from a bigger car.

That’s why we’d like you to see Volare. Because the 1978 Plymouth Volare 4-door sedan is designed so that you don’t have to give up room for six. Its special suspension system means that you don’t have to give up a bigger car ride. And, as you can see, with Volare, you don’t have to give up economy.*

The 1978 Plymouth Volare ... proof positive that a smaller car can give you the things you’d expect from bigger cars. Things like room for six, ride and comfort. So why would anyone consider compromising in order to get economy? We give up.

"If you're just starting to be interested in antiques, you're not sure of your taste, your interests are not confirmed. First you must explore, expose yourself to shops, museums and galleries, and study magazines. It's an educational process. And there is no substitute for education. You probably don't know whether you want to go English, French, American, Spanish, or what. You might end up mixing rather than matching. You just don't know. That's part of the fun, the excitement, the individuality.

"To shop is to look—and to learn. It's also a process of elimination. For example, once you've seen Regency rosewood, and you discover you don't want it, you never have to look at it again. You pare down, you channel your interests by going again only to shops where you might find what is suitable, appropriate to your taste, your own lifestyle. And go to reputable dealers, who are only too willing to talk and to teach.

"The second step is to take the plunge. Granted it is an emotional moment, but that Americans move about more. True, we are a mobile society, but that doesn't necessarily mean you have to buy small-scale. I remember a room with few pieces, but one table almost the length of the wall. On it was an assemblage of love and careful thought—china, some books, flowers. It made the room. Just remember to ask yourself—is it appropriate? If you do find later that you've made a mistake you can always sell it, and find something that works better for you.

"Our lives now are more casual, in formal, and country furniture—the natural look, pine, oak, bleached wood—keeps company very well indeed with almost everything else. For instance, in a dining room, a pine farm table can be very handsome with contemporary steel chairs or a mixture of objects from different times of your life. Pieces that were wedding presents, pieces that were handed down from another generation, and pieces that you bought together, or with your decorator. If they are compatible, and only you will know and feel this, it will all work together. And mean so much.

"Color as a background brings out the patina of wood, and gives a room vitality. In Nantucket House we have a tomato red living room, a pumpkin bedroom, a chocolate-brown kitchen with white trim. Color, paint color, is the least expensive commodity in design. If you want you can paint a room three times a year and it still won't add up to the cost of recovering a sofa. When everything that is expensive to change—upholstery and floor coverings, for instance—is neutral, you can have a glorious time splashing around with color."

EDITOR'S NOTE: Gary Knight, interior decorator, and partner with Mr. and Mrs. Hudson Holland Jr. in "Nantucket House" antique shop—see page 134—chose his profession when he was a very small boy, "At the ripe old age of 12, the highlight of each week was collecting for my newspaper route. That way I could peek at people's houses, and sometimes they even gave me a tour. I loved it. And I knew I wanted to be a decorator some day."

"He majored in Interior Decoration and Fine Arts at the University of Michigan and then spent 4 months in Europe "looking at every museum, gallery, and stately home possible and studying architecture and furnishings. Florence and London were my favorite cities then and still are." After 15 years as a decorator at J. L. Hudson in Detroit, he moved to Nantucket and with the Holland's started "Nantucket House" for which he does most of the buying. Here, he shares some of his thoughts on selecting and living with antiques."

How Emotions Affect the Skin

Plus latest facts about marijuana and news for women who want to have a baby after 40

Q How do emotions affect the skin?
A Some skin reactions to emotional changes are very obvious. The pink flush that spreads over the face from embarrassment, shyness, or guilt is well known, as is the dead white color of the skin that may follow any severe shock, such as seeing a street accident, or hearing some appalling news. We speak of people whose skins are gray with anxiety, worry, or fatigue. Such strain can cause constriction of the blood vessels of the skin and thereby decrease its circulation.

In fact, all organic skin afflictions are tremendously influenced by the emotions. Psoriasis, for example, is a metabolic disease with a hereditary background, but a psychologic reaction. Depression or worry may trigger a severe generalized flare-up of the condition, which may have been quiescent and relatively insignificant. This reaction might occur, too, in any type of dermatitis which may be basically allergic or chemical. Urticaria, or hives, are notoriously connected with the psyche. Most attacks are caused by a considerable mood change, brought on by stressful conditions and will respond to tranquilizers as well as antihistamines.

Even the common acne of adolescence can be aggravated by emotional stress, of which there is ample at this time of life. When it occurs in the twenties or thirties, dermatologists feel it is usually associated with pressure or tension. Eczema is of allergic origin in children, but in adults it is predominantly from emotional distress. Recently, I observed several women who shortly after being widowed developed eczema, on their wedding ring finger. This close union between our epidermal covering and our mind and emotions is not just chance. As the embryo develops, at an early stage it is like a tube composed of three layers, ectoderm, mesoderm, and endoderm, and the brain and nervous systems and skin develop from the ectoderm. In the evolutionary sense, they develop from the same primordial cells. Apparently to have a healthy glowing skin, we should not only be in good physical condition, but also psychologically well-adjusted.

Q What is the truth about marijuana?
A Marijuana has been around a very long time. It was used by the Chinese 200 years B.C., mixed with wine, as a pain reliever and anesthetic. Later, it was used for many centuries in India for an amazing variety of medical purposes.

WallAway gives you more living room in your living room.

This is the way all recliners will be made someday. The Wall-Away, by Berkline, is the recliner that doesn’t have to sit in the middle of the room. Its patented gliding design lets it rest just a few inches from the wall without ever touching it. Even in full recline, with the hidden headrest up, WallAway won’t endanger your wall, or fill the room. And it’s as stylish as any fashion chair you can buy.

Look for the Wall-Away, by Berkline. It’s the recliner that thinks it’s a chair.
The sleek, modern beauty of General Electric's Electronic Digital Clock Radio is easy to see. But you have to experience the pleasures it provides. Soothingly silent operation (no tick-tock, buzz-buzz or click-click to disturb your sleep). Large lighted numerals, brightness-controlled for comfort. The dependably accurate wake-up system. The ease and simplicity of fingertip operation.

GE's Electronic Digital Clock Radio is not just another pretty case. It's the achievement of the sophisticated electronic technology you expect of GE. At a price you don't expect.

That's another beauty of it.

GENERAL ELECTRIC
and by Hindu priests as an intoxicant to expand their minds and reach God. It was introduced to the West by a British army doctor in India and by Napoleon's troops returning from Egypt, around 1840. Since then, we have heard conflicting reports about it. Some call it destructive, others say it is a pleasant recreational stimulant. The truth is somewhere in between.

In our country, it was used in the 19th century to treat all sorts of pains, including migraine, up until 1937 when Mayor La Guardia's commission made it illegal. Today, it has become widespread throughout society. The counselor of one of our finest private high schools has said that perhaps 60 per cent of his students have tried marijuana. He divided them into groups of three: the very occasional smokers who had tried it once or twice at a party; the students, who perhaps looking for trouble, smoked occasionally at school; and the ones who smoked regularly in or out of school and had a real dependence on it. The latter group lacked the interests and enthusiasms seen in usual adolescents and were the ones most likely to drop out of school and out of a normal life.

It has been stated often that marijuana does not necessarily lead to addiction in itself, or to LSD, uppers, downers, or hard drugs like heroin. However, the converse is true. Almost without exception users of hard drugs began with marijuana. Perhaps the poorly motivated with little enjoyment or understanding of real life are the ones that seek an ever wider escape.

It is now believed that the very occasional, intermittent use by healthy adults is probably not a health hazard, but then probably very occasional use of tobacco, DDT, and nitrates in healthy adults may not be dangerous, but why take chances?

It has been proven that marijuana is carcinogenic, because it can produce lung cancer. It is an irritant of mucus membranes, causing cough and sore throat. It causes emphysema at a much higher rate than tobacco, by resulting in obstructive lung disease. It causes a decrease in oxygen in the blood, making it dangerous for cardiac patients. It decreases the level of testosterone or male hormone in adolescents and adults. It diminishes the level of acid in the stomach, which may protect against peptic ulcer, but also allows ingested bacteria to survive in the body instead of being destroyed by the acid. It may cause genetic changes in the fetus. It lowers cellular immunity. At first, evidence in England showed shrinking of the brain in heavy marijuana users. While this has now been denied, recent studies show micro-cellular damage to the brain in rhesus monkeys smoking one cigarette a day, 5 days a week for 6 months. An enlargement of the gaps occurred across which one nerve sends its signals to another, and other changes developed within the nerve cells.

Marijuana is dangerous because it persists in the body for more than a week, so that one cigarette a week might cause chronic effect. The report by the American Medical Association issued in February, 1978 warned against the use of marijuana by children or adolescents, pregnant women, emotionally unstable individuals, and all people with physical illnesses, especially heart disease. It is not recommended for those driving vehicles because it does impair visual perception and motor control.

Q  Dare I have children in my forties?

A Until recently, second families, or first children born to mothers in their late thirties or forties were considered to involve a great risk. Genetic defects resulted from the aging of the ova. Today, the risk of having an abnormal child no longer exists. A simple procedure, as painless as giving a sample of blood, can determine with complete accuracy if the fetus is defective. It is called amniocen-
Stainless advice

My new apartment has a stainless steel sink. I've heard water-spotting can be a problem. Can you give me any tips on care? —A.M., New York, N.Y.

Stainless steel is hard, slow to tarnish, and — true to its name — impervious to almost all household stains. It's relatively problem-free except for the tendency for water-spotting that you mention. (The "harder" the tap water, the worse the problem.) Wiping the sink after each use is a good deterrent. One industry chemist suggests putting a little vinegar on your towel or sponge to help remove water-borne minerals. Don't use harsh abrasive cleaners. Polishes made especially for stainless steel will restore the brightness and remove tarnish, most often from water spots — two to look for are Goddard's Stainless Steel Care Kit and Dagerity Stainless Steel Polish. Polish in the direction of the "grain."

Putting the lid on it

A long time ago I bought a full set of glass-lidded cookware. The manufacturer is now out of business, and I need some new lids. Do you have any ideas? —S.C., Palm Beach, Fla.

One nationally distributed manufacturer, Corning, will sell its own replacement glass lids to you. All you have to do is take your pots to a Corning Ware or Pyrex dealer to try out its lids for size. Don't force a fit — the lid must fit your old pot as easily as it does its own. When you find the right lids, note the model numbers (a salesperson can help here), then write the Consumer Service Dept., Building E, Corning Glass Works, Corning, N.Y. 14830 for ordering information.

Fringe benefit

We love the fringe and cording shown on Sandra Osborne's sofa (March, 1977 issue, page 103). Can you please tell me the source? —B.A.B., Merritt Island, Fla.

The interior designers, Robert Denning and Vincent Fourcade, tell us that they had the fringe and cording custom made and would gladly have the same (or similar) trimmings made for you. You may write them at Denning & Fourcade, 125 E. 73rd St., New York, N.Y. 10021.

*The sources marked with an asterisk can also have many trimmings custom made — usually there is a minimum order.

Many fabric and notions departments and stores carry fringes, cordinings, and other trimmings for home sewing made by Conso Products Co., 261 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10016. Write to Conso Products for a list of stores that are near you.

How Karen Frederick got Slender and stayed Slender.

“When I married Karen, she was already wearing a size 20, but I loved her because a man doesn’t marry a dress size. And now... I’ve watched her blossom into a beauty!”

That’s what Bill Frederick says about his wife, Karen, who lost 148 pounds with the help of Slender® diet food. Karen, who went from a high of 277 pounds to 129 pounds in 19 months, says, “I’ve been heavy all my life. Nobody had ever seen me slim. Nobody.

“Then, I finally tried Slender. Well, honestly, it’s delicious... the canned Slender tastes just like a malt. I think the Slender worked.

Karen has kept her new Slender figure for over a year. “I can eat whatever I want now,” she says, “but I don’t desire the sweets like I used to eat all the time.”

“That’s right,” Bill Frederick says, “Karen tried to lose weight for so many years... and she’d get aggravated and quit. But I never made fun of her or said the word ‘fat’. Who am I to talk anyway... I’m no Mr. America. I loved her for what she was from the start... and I encouraged her. But if somebody gave us a million dollars to have her back the way she was, I wouldn’t take it!”

When Karen finally reached 129 pounds she had her wedding ring cut down from size 9½ to 5.

Just look at Karen’s picture. You’d never guess that this vibrant, auburn-haired woman had to make all of her own clothes; there were so few dresses in her size. And now—for her Slender “after” picture, she’s slipped into a size 10!

Think about it. It could be you. Just stop by your market and get a week’s supply of instant Slender, Slender liquid or new Slender Diet Meal Bars. They are so delicious, it doesn’t seem like dieting at all. Next thing you know, you could be in one of our ads—looking fantastic.

Hamilton Beach proudly introduces the SMART IRON

The moment you plug it in, you know it's different! A Power Light tells you so. Because it tells you it's ready to go. Set it for the fabric you're ironing, and a Ready Light tells you when the sole plate temperature is ready to go. You iron when you see the light — and you can't make a mistake — even when you are ironing different fabrics. Just change the setting — hotter or cooler — and when the Ready Light comes back on, you will know the iron is at the perfect temperature. That's why we call it the "Smart Iron."

- Self-cleaning so lint and mineral deposits won't build up.
- "Burst of steam" to iron out the most stubborn wrinkles.
- Full-size sole plate that lets you finish your ironing fast.

POWER LIGHT tells you the Smart Iron is plugged in. Reminds you to unplug, too!

READY LIGHT tells you the sole plate temperature is correct for the selected fabric!

Rub-a-dub tub

In the January, 1978 issue on page 90, in the Lindsay beach house, there is a huge "Chinese tub" for bathing. It looks like a terrific idea. Where can I get the tub?
—M.I., Farmington, N.M.

This splendid oval tub of glazed ceramic is a one-of-a-kind antique that was imported by M. Levee & Daughters, located at 8437 Clinton, Los Angeles, Calif. 90048. The firm occasionally has a similar tub of more recent manufacture in stock, but usually it has to be special-order from the Orient, in which case delivery can take about 6 months. Price varies widely according to shipping, but most of the nonantique tubs that M. Levee has imported have cost roughly $600 apiece, in-store. Most measure about 3 by 2½ feet across and about 30 inches deep. To see what's currently available, send 50¢ to M. Levee for a photograph of a typical design.

Saying it with flowers

I would love to order wedding bouquets with flowers chosen for their symbolic meanings. Can you suggest some references?
—H.M., Lexington, Ky.

Adelma Grenier Simmons of Capirlans Herb Farm, where a number of outdoor weddings are held,devotes much of her 34-page homespun book Valentine Remembrances to the sentimental bouquets (called nosegays or, less commonly, tussie-mussies) beloved by the Victorians. It's $2.05 ppd. from Capirlans Herb Farm, Silver St., Coventry, Conn. 06238. A pocket-sized dictionary that gives one- and two-word "definitions" from abecedary plant to zinnia Kate Greenaway's Language of Flowers (Merrimack Publishing), is $3.85 ppd. from the Sales Shop of the New York Public Library, Fifth Ave. at 42nd St., New York, N.Y. 10018. Bridget Boland's small book Gardener's Magic and Other Old Wives' Lore spends a chapter on love. The book's available for $6.35 ppd. from the order department of the publisher, Farrar, Straus & Giroux, 19 Union Square West, New York, N.Y. 10003. Above prices include four-class delivery. Please add state, city sales tax where applicable.

Wrought-iron refresher

We left some green wrought-iron plant stands outdoors, and parts of them rusted. We've sanded off all the rust, but wonder how we might duplicate what looks like "antiquing."
—R.E.W., Buffalo, N.Y.

We referred your question to Neil Janovic of Janovic/Plaza paint and wallpaper store (1292 First Ave., New York, N.Y. 10021). He suggests a five-step process that produces a blueish-green color like verdigris. You'll need vinegar, bristle brushes, turpentine for cleaning them, and—for each plant stand and liner—about ⅜ of a pint of each of the four products below. (Mr. Janovic suggests Benwood and Carver Tripp products, available from Janovic/Plaza for the prices below. Add $1.50 per order for shipping, and applicable sales tax.)

For best ventilation, work outdoors.

(1) To help base coat adhere, sand entire stand and outside of liner, then wipe outside of liner with vinegar. (2) Paint liner exterior and stand with Benwood base coat ($1.59 a half pint, $3.79 quart). When dry, turn stand over and do its "soles."

(3) Blend equal parts "palm" and "cornflower" Carver Tripp glazing stains ($2.29 a half pint each). Apply to liner exterior, stand. (4) When nearly dry, use dry brush to blend out stain so half the base coat shows through. (5) When dry, apply Carver Tripp clear satin gloss ($3.99 a pint, $2.29 a half pint). Do "soles" too. Though weather resistant, finish will last longer if you move the stands to shelter whenever it rains, or at least dry them promptly after wards.

Looking for glass

Please tell me where I might get a convex glass to cover a three-dimensiona round picture.
—J.F.S., Darien, Conn.

Gem Monogram & Cut Glass Corp. (623 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10012) has a large, constantly changing stock of hard-to-find glass items from brand-new to antique. According to president David Noren, if Gem does not have a convex glass in stock when you inquire it can custom-make one for you. Gem can also supply a Federal-style convex mirror for an existing frame. Prices depend on availability; custom items can be several times what the ready-made price would be, but even ready-made pieces are not inexpensive. For an estimate, send Gem exact measurements of your frame.

FIRST AID FOR THE HOUSE

How to keep vegetables from overcooking, a “seat belt” for your dog, preventing house-plant holders from staining furniture, and other clever housekeeping strategies

BY MARY ELIZABETH FALTER

Steam vegetables is the very best way to cook them—tightly covered on a rack over boiling water. One of the most important aspects of good steam cooking is stopping the cooking the minute the vegetables are exactly right—sort of crisp tender. Do this with ice cubes. Dump them in the boiling water to stop the boiling and scatter a few over the vegetables. Reheat quickly when ready to serve.

Two things that help the kitty litter situation: rectangular dish pans and baby powder. The dish pans have high sides and are sturdier than most commercial litter boxes and a liberal layer of baby talcum in the bottom makes emptying them much easier.

Hellerware can make a simple meal a movable feast. The largest size plate (which can also be used as a small tray) will hold your egg cup, toast, and juice, and you can carry it and your Heller mug of coffee back to bed or in by the fire for a cozy breakfast on a snowy morning. Or put your sandwich, salad, and a glass of iced tea on the plate and take it out to the garden in summer. Mixed or matched, Hellerware also makes a handsome table setting, is virtually indestructible, dishwasher proof, and stacks neatly. Great for young families, vacation houses, and boats.

If you've ever had the sour experience of reaching for the coffee on a sleepy morning only to find the cupboard bare or cut your finger without a Band-Aid in the house, you're probably a good candidate for an extra supply cupboard. You don't have to go in for caselots of things, but it's very practical to set aside one small cupboard for one or two “extras” of the basic necessities of life, things that are very frustrating to run out of at the wrong moment. Your list might include aspirin, pantryhose, shoelaces, razor blades, Kleenex, paper towels and napkins, cat and/or dog food, soaps, dishwasher detergent, scouring pads, plus anything else especially dear to your heart. It’s a good idea, as we all know, to be sure you have the makings of a meal or two and emergency hors d’oeuvre in the pantry and freezer. If you have these backups and replace them promptly, you'll never be caught short and you won't be using up a lot of storage space.

It’s dangerous to drive with a large dog in the back seat unless he’s tethered in some way. A sudden stop could hurt him or he could become excited, jump over the front seat, and distract the driver. One way to secure the dog is to put him on a 6-foot, flat-webbed leash and seat him on the back seat on the side away from the driver. Allow him 2 or 3 feet of leash (depending on his size) so he will be comfortable, and then neatly double the remaining length back on itself and shut the door on it so that just a small piece of the loop sticks out on the outside, indicating the whole door has closed on it. This will anchor the dog where he belongs and also prevent him from jumping out of the car at the wrong moment when you stop—sort of a doggie seat belt.

No-stick pan sprays are useful beyond the regular cooking use—they help keep any pan clean. If you spray the whole inside of a saucepan when you cook spinach, for instance, you won't have a scummy rim to scour off. Excellent for pans used to heat milk or make cream sauce. Helps to cut down on boilover, too.

A tape measure is a reliable (if painful) traveling scale. Tuck one in the corner of your suitcase—after having taken an accurate reading of your waist, hips, and abdomen before departure. Then you can check the horrid truth as you travel. A 5-pound gain is usually about 3⁄4 of an inch.

If you have house plants on wooden floors and tables, you’re probably fully aware that most plant saucers are inadequate and dark rings are apt to form on the wood. It helps to use extra-large saucers that will surely catch the run-off water and are made of nonporous material. But even these tend to sweat and create moisture, so it’s wise to put something else underneath the saucer. You can look in antique shops for little wooden stands—in junkyards for scraps of marble and interesting woods, and even the beach will yield pieces of driftwood and occasionally a thin flat rock that can be used. These, underneath the saucer, will protect the wood and be decorative as well. Utilitarian substitutes are pieces of Masonite or carpet scraps, cut so they don’t show.

Make sure it has a Direct Drive Motor. This means it’ll have the added power to do tough jobs like chopping meat, mixing and kneading. And the added durability to do these jobs day after day.

Make sure it has 4 blade attachments. With 4 blade attachments, you’ll always have the right blade to deftly cut hard and soft cheeses and vegetables. As well as chop and shred, grate and grind, slice and dice your way through gourmet and everyday recipes.

Make sure it works quietly. Food processors perform with unheard-of speed. Ideally, their noise should be unheard-of, too. Get a machine that’s as easy on your ears as it is on your hands.

Make sure it stands firmly on the counter. The Norelco Food Processor doesn’t start walking when it should be working. No matter how tough the processing gets.

Make sure it has the Norelco name on it. No other food processor offers you more for less. And Norelco does it all without cutting corners on quality. No wonder Time magazine calls the Norelco Food Processor “Best buy in its [price] range.”

Old rose potpourri

This recipe is strongly rose-scented, so you may want to add a few more cardamoms for a spicier, less floral effect—or a bit more lavender or sandalwood.

\[\text{1/4 pound dried rosebuds (about 5 cups)}\]
\[\text{3 ounces oakmoss (about 3 cups)}\]
\[\text{3 ounces lavender (about 3 cups)}\]
\[\text{1/2 cup sandalwood, powdered}\]
\[\text{1 cup broken-up cassia bark}\]
\[\text{2 medium pieces dried ginger, crushed}\]
\[\text{1 tablespoon allspice berries, crushed}\]
\[\text{6 cardamom pods with seeds, crushed}\]
\[\text{1/2 nutmeg, grated}\]
\[\text{1 teaspoon powdered cinnamon}\]
\[\text{2 or 3 tonka beans, broken up}\]

Cost to prepare: about $13 per pound.

“Four centuries” potpourri

An Elizabethan recipe originally created for a “Quilt Bag,” which, when sprinkled with white wine and heated, was applied to relieve aches and pains.

\[\text{1/2 pound sweet melilot (about 4 cups)}\]
\[\text{3 ounces camomile flowers (about 4 cups)}\]
\[\text{3 ounces lavender (about 3 cups)}\]
\[\text{1/4 pound rosemary (about 3 cups)}\]
\[\text{3 ounces elder flowers (about 1 to } 11/2\text{ cups)}\] you like the clean, biting scent of citrus, add an extra orange or lemon peel. Any of the optional ingredients, thoroughly dried and gently crumbled, make an unusual aromatic addition to this potpourri.

4 pound dried peppermint leaves (about 5 to 6 cups)
4 pound dried lemon verbena leaves (about 5 to 6 cups) ounces dried crumbled sage (about 1½ cups) ounces orris powder bay leaves, crumbled ounces fenugreek seeds, crushed whole cloves (1 package)
Peel of 3 oranges and one lemon sweetfern, sweet gale, bayberry leaves (optional)

Clove-studded citrus peel to be added

Peel fruit rind in continuous strips and stud with whole cloves along the length of the strips at intervals of about ½ inch. Cut with scissors between each clove, let the pieces dry 4 to 5 days, then add to potpourri.

Cost to prepare: about $12 per pound.

Note: Maida Silverman does not advise the use of oils in a potpourri, as they're overpowering—the natural perfumes of the ingredients are much nicer and last very well.

Day 1

9:25. Delta flight to Atlanta from Guardia. Brunch of scrambled eggs, sausage, hot biscuits. A smooth change (plane two hours later to a Lockheed Tri-star L-1011 "the latest state of the art") reports the pilot, reminding us that just one of its four cabins measures the same length as the Wright brothers' original flying machine. So to Orlando, where for our Hertz car ($109 a week unlimited mileage) we follow the road signs to Disney World.

3:00. Check-in at the Polynesian Village Hotel, our hostess helps us park the car transferring the baggage to an electric golf cart and driving us through green velvet lawns to the Polynesian Village. The temperature is an appropriate 90 degrees as we reach the South Seas Island long houses, each 3 stories high with 70 odd very comfortable rooms in each (ours all green and white with pretty leafy wallpaper and lattice print curtains) perched on the edge of silvery Papeete beach on Disney World's man made Seven Seas Lagoon. We step out on to our green carpeted balcony to glimpse a surf rider through the palm trees. It's too tempting! The children swim; then take a yellow 'Aqualark' motorboat across the water. I sip a strawberry daiquiri (Continued on page 76)

You and your car can take the train to Florida

how you want to take your car to Florida but don't want to drive all that way, you can take the Auto-Train to Sanford, a short car-trip away from Disney World, Cape Canaveral, and Sea World. The train is a flashy, streamlined village-on-wheels that shuttles passengers (cars and people) to Florida daily saving 900 miles of driving in a pleasant 17 hours. Each car must be accompanied by a driver, and you must bring your car to ride the train! And what could be more romantic than sleeping under the sky on the top deck of the observation cars? Wide windows wrap up and over your head. Supplies of books and needlepoint lie forgotten as everyone gets caught up in watching the stars overhead plus slices of life slipping by along the track. People do still wave at trains. You can't miss dinner. The most elegant cars on the train, the dining cars, are upholstered in deep blue, punctuated with mirror—and you can eat on the top level under the stars! Marriott caters the food, providing a choice of three entrées and desserts as well as a salad and vegetable. Beer is available, plus California's Los Hermanos red, white, and rosé wines, $1.50. For between-meal snacks, there are buffet cars fitted with booths and tables and hot-drink machines. Many passengers play cards here. Walk off your dinner by trekking down to the Starlight Continued on page 81

Custom Cruiser: full-sized for families who need room and want even more luxury. The full-sized Olds Custom Cruiser has plenty of loading room inside, practical dimensions outside, and comfort all around plus the luxury you'd expect to find in a full-size Oldsmobile. With a ride that's all Oldsmobile, smooth, solid, serene. And you can expect good fuel efficiency, too. EPA estimates are 22 highway, 15 city and 17 combined with standard 350 V-8 and automatic transmission. (Estimates are lower in California.)

Cutlass Cruiser: for young, growing families on a budget. Now you can discover that great Cutlass Feeling in a wagon. Cutlass Cruiser is a whole new size that looks and feels like a Cutlass, but loads and carries like a wagon. And it has a short turning radius, a new chassis and suspension and a quality Oldsmobile ride. And good gas mileage, too. EPA mileage estimates are 25 highway, 18 city, 21 combined with available 260 V-8 and automatic transmission. The best V-8 EPA gas mileage ratings of any mid-size wagon! (Engine not available in California.)

Test drive the Custom Cruiser and the new Cutlass Cruiser at your Olds dealer's, and discover the working wagons with the quality Oldsmobile ride.

*Your mileage depends on how and where you drive, your car's condition and equipment. Cutlass Cruisers are equipped with GM engines produced by various divisions. See your dealer for details.

the thatched-roof bar by the pool. South Sea Island music wafts through the flowing trees, exotic birds chase each other through the laburnum bushes. A little sun, then a quick spree in the Polynesian Princess boutique (black maillot, $28) before the children breeze in from the boat dock. (The Main House at the Polynesian is composed of shops and restaurants around a luscious indoor garden of tropical foliage.)

6:00 P.M. The beach is deserted. We take a quick dip, the water’s so soft and warm you could stay in for hours. We watch grass-skirted dancers rehearsing for the evening luau farther down the beach. It could be Tahiti—if it weren’t for the Star Wars-type monorail towering around the perimeter of the lagoon.

Benjamin on boating:
For $6, and a lot of gab from mother, I decided to take Jasmine and myself for a ride in a yellow “Aqualark.” These boats are approximately 7 feet in length and are powered by a Mercury 10 horsepower engine. Once you see these little runabouts, you are hooked. After a half hour of full-throttle cruising, jumping wakes, making high-speed turns, and generally messing about, we cruise into the boat dock and park. For fast thrill types like me, these do not fully satisfy you, but are worth the money. After about 10 minutes searching for mother, we find her busy drinking strawberry daiquiris. We tell her we need another text ride, but are told to go and jump in the lake, which we promptly do. Oh, there’s always tomorrow. And besides we want to go to Space Mountain...

8:00. Changed for dinner, we take a dusk ride on the monorail from the Polynesian resort station, to get a feeling of Disney World’s geography. From the Polynesian, the train stops at the Magic Kingdom. (Cinderella’s castle is the jewel in this fairy tale land of adventures and thrills.) We save the Magic Kingdom for tomorrow and continue on the monorail to the Contemporary Hotel, where the train glides right into the massive A-frame building. We get off at the Grand Canyon, a busy shopping center and find the ambiance quite different from the Polynesian. Here it’s much more urban and modern. It’s clear that there are more high-rise buildings at Disney World. The Contemporary is just that—glitter and glamour with the “Top of the World” restaurant on the 15th floor. But the visitor who likes the opposite of this—peace, quiet, and solitude—can have that, too, at the Golf Hotel (known to the bright young things as the cemetery). We are glad we chose the palm-fringed tropical shores at the Polynesian.

9:00. As we ride the monorail back, the evening procession of seahorses and floats crosses the lagoon, lit up with myriad lights, choreographed to music.

9:30. And so to the Luau Cove for Polynesian dinner (barbecued ribs, sweet and sour vegetables, saffron rice) in a thatched-roof, open restaurant. Mai Tais are served on the lawn as we wait for our table. The late beach show of South Sea Island dancing and Hawaiian guitars gives you a fabulous view of the nightly fireworks displays. Bursts of brilliance explode over the water, each dazzling cascade seems to get nearer and nearer.

Jasmine on the Diamond Horseshoe Show:
First come funny film pictures. Then can-can dancers came out, showing frilly skirts. Then, wow, a very pretty gal came out. She started singing and the girls did splits and pretty things like that. Oh, yes, I forgot to say that we sat in a box and the girls came right up and posed in front of us.

Benjamin on the Magic Kingdom:
The Magic Kingdom is the “bees knees,” as some people would say. Once you go there, you’ll want to go back next year. One of the best attractions is the Hall of the Presidents in which there is something like a slide show. This tells us something about the more famous presidents, and then the curtain is opened, revealing the presidents including Jimmy Carter. They all move in one way or another and Abe Lincoln even stands up and makes a speech. This is the best example of audio-animatronics in the whole of the Magic Kingdom.

6:30. Dressed and ready for an early dinner, we drive 15 minutes to yet another slice of Walt Disney World—Lake Buena Vista, the Walt Disney village. Rustic shops, a clubhouse, several restaurants, pretty villas, and motels around yet another man-made lake, make this a convenient vacation choice for many families. You can rent a tree house here, or a town house, cater for yourself, buy—

Day 2

9:00. Breakfast order phoned through and promised in half an hour. And it is on time. The waiter comes with the morning newspaper. Polynesian breakfasts for the children (scrambled eggs and bacon), Village breakfast for me (grapefruit, cereal). Cameras equipped, we take the Monorail to the Magic Kingdom. And into the adventures—the Pirates of the Caribbean, the Haunted Mansion, It’s a Small World. (Jasmine’s face lights up with smiles here, “everything’s so pretty!”) On to the tossing and turning Mad Tea Cups. It’s hard to stand up after that, but we brave it to the American Is Beautiful pavilion for a nine-screen, in-the round, 360-degree movie tour of the U.S. from Rockport, Mass., to winding cobbled streets in San Francisco. There’s only one other movie presentation like this in the world and no prizes for guessing it’s in Disney Land, Calif. At last, it’s time for lunch. We sink into comfortable booths away from the crowd at the Top of the World restaurant in the Contemporary Hotel. It’s a cool, refreshing experience, a serve-yourself buffet of cold salads and hot roast beef. We don’t have room for dessert. Ready to return to the Magic Kingdom, the children discuss the afternoon program. Space Mountain or the PeopleMover? Soon, we are blasting off to Mars! Then it is on the PeopleMover (when will other real cities copy the Walt Disney transportation inventions?) We follow this ride with the show at the Diamond Horseshoe Saloon. Then back to the la—

COME SEE THE REAL ITALY

Where even hospitality is an art.

Famous cities, beaches, mountains, lakes, folklore—Italy has it all.

You'll find incredible art treasures, of course. And history at every turn. But today's Italy offers so much more to satisfy even the most demanding visitor.

There are art festivals. Opera and folk music. Fashions, handicrafts and sports for every season. Large cities and untouched medieval towns. Spas and tourist villages. Modern hotels and quaint inns. All set in spectacular scenery among mountains and lakes and beaches, and offering you a delightful variety of climates from the Alps to Sicily.

Making your visit more memorable are Italy's superb wines and foods. An ultramodern system of superhighways, and an extensive network of railroads, air, land and sea transportation will make your sightseeing easier. You can even buy a museum card for a nominal charge which entitles you to visit some 800 national museums, art galleries and archaeological sites.

Most memorable of all though, is the warm welcome you get from Italy's friendly people—people who have made hospitality an art. Why wait? Visit Italy, the inexhaustible treasure.

Jasmine and I go to bed.

Day 3

Fort Wilderness is another side of Disney World. It's a rustic, "frontier" land on the other side of Bay Lake with over 800 campsites. Here you rent a horse, play cowboy, and live a wonderful outdoor life. The center of it all is Pioneer Hall, where evening do-si-do entertainment goes on. We take a canopied motor launch and enjoy the hour-long cruise across the water from the Polynesian Village. During the day everyone swims into River Country and its ole swimmin' hole. This man-made aquatic spectacular has a 260-foot rushing flume of water leading downhill to the pool. Picnic lunch of fried chicken on the beach and we're ready to return to the Polynesian Village for more boating and swimming, a quiet dinner in our room, before one last visit to the Magic Kingdom. Jasmine and I take our last adventures, riding the old steam railroad, seeing the Enchanted Tiki Birds, laughing at the Country Bear Jamboree, shopping for candies, sauntering down Main Street looking at the stores and listening to a New Orleans jazz band. Benjamin takes off independently into Tomorrowland for two more adventures in Space Mountain.

In three days, of course, you can't see or enjoy anywhere near everything Disney World has to offer. I suspect you could return time after time and not see it all. You need cool, comfortable clothes to enjoy it best. Children and grown-ups need hats and sunglasses and T-shirts, or dresses that cover the shoulders to avoid sunburn in summer. Pants or an easy skirt are essential for getting in and out of cars, trains, Mad Tea Cups, and other transportation. Be kind to your feet. Wear comfortable low sandals. Men wear casual dress at night, with a jacket and tie at smarter restaurants. Women dress up at the more sophisticated restaurants, equal to any big resort. The weather can be extraordinarily hot in June, more comfortable at Christmas, which is when Disney World is at its most crowded. If you don't have children clamoring to go with you, you'll find it less crowded out of school vacation time. If you like sports, there's plenty of tennis (with illuminated courts at night) plus three 18-hole champion golf courses. We were sorry to leave, of course. Happy though that we did meet and shake hands with three larger-than-life-size walking, talking Disney characters, Pluto, Goofy, and Mickey.

Two more pleasure parks

In Saronno, all we think about is love.

For it was here that Amaretto, the drink of love, began 450 years ago. When a beautiful young woman created an extraordinary liqueur for the man of her heart. To be known for the way you make love in Italy... believe us, that is no small matter.

So here in Saronno, we do not fool around with love. We still make Amaretto di Saronno as we have for centuries. We allow the flavor to develop until it is soft and full. We take our time — can love be hurried?

Sip it as it is, on the rocks, in a mixed drink. Just bear in mind: only Amaretto di Saronno is originale. There are other amarettos you can buy. But true love comes only from Saronno.

| Have a vacation at home in somebody else's house while they feel at home in yours. "Inquiline" (means "birds using other birds' nests") is an executive house-swapping and rental service, which will list your house in its twice yearly digest or its updates for $15 a year. Fifteen dollars buys the digest and four quarterly newsletters. If you read about a house you like, contact the owner directly. A digest entry describes the owner's house or second house, sometimes includes a picture, gives preferred swap locations (e.g. California residents often want to swap with East Coast or Europeans), plus the name and address of the owner.

In a swap, money only changes hands when a big house swaps with a little one. Some potential swappers will rent if they don't find a swap in return. trains have a few peculiarities—they toss around on the track bed a bit—but handrails line all passageways which are carpeted up the walls, too. The train runs at about 65 M.P.H.; it could go faster, but the slower speed is a more comfortable riding speed. The train stops every 3 to 4 hours or 150 miles—union rules—for a new conductor, brakeman, flagman, and engineer to come on. There's a division of labor here: Auto-Train crews take care of the people, while only employees of the railroads over whose tracks Auto-Train runs can drive the engines.

Amateur historians will want to talk to the conductors—Auto-Train is high seniority duty—so conductors have maybe 35 years of railroading behind them. And they love to talk . . . about the days of the steam engines, crack trains, how conductors had their own cabooses and engineers their own engines. But they like riding Auto-Train, too, and say its success is good for railroading. Cabooses are no longer red; they're bright blue or yellow or red, white, and blue! WHEN YOU GO: You pay $99 for your car, from $49 to $99 per passenger, depending on the season, for a seat. Do you recognize this American landmark?

 Probably not. No famous person was born in this house. No treaties were signed here.

This house is simply a charming example of period architecture that is perfectly suited to today. It doesn't take a mansion to be a landmark. There are thousands of fine buildings like this one all across the country. They're part of our heritage too, just like Monticello and Mount Vernon.

These buildings can be revitalized by adapting them to modern uses.

Let's hold on to these pieces of our history while we still can. Support historic preservation in your community.

PLANTS AROUND

How to gain satisfaction and save money by growing house plants from seeds/By Richard Langer

SEEDS of PLEASURE

The first thing you'll need, after acquiring the seeds, is good sterilized soil. The various formulas for favorite soil mixes are probably more numerous than the recipes for beef stew. Almost all of them will work as long as they are sterile and light. If you don't have your own favorite starter mix, try a simple one, such as one part sterile potting soil, one part milled sphagnum moss, and one part vermiculite. It works well with almost any seed. Just be sure it's well moistened before sowing your seeds.

The choice of containers to hold your potted seed garden is equally broad, ranging from the standard clay pot to leftover plastic refrigerator containers. The one thing you need to do is to conserve moisture. That means putting your pot (or pots) in a plastic bag or some other transparent container.

First fill the pot with soil. Then plant the seeds, or scatter them on the surface. Mist the top of the soil with tepid water. Now find a few small sticks to put around the edge of the pot. Slip the whole affair into a leftover plastic bag from the dry cleaners. This will keep the humidity around your seeds and seedlings at a happy level, while at the same time keep the plastic roof clear of your seedlings as they emerge.

Once the seeds have sprouted, leave the bag open a little on one side to allow ventilation. Day by day, leave more of the pot exposed until, say in a week or 10 days, you've removed the plastic entirely. This will harden the plant off to the age of growing your own house plants. Growers are discovering that while it may take a year to bring a seed from its diminutive dormant self into a lush, flowering plant, the pleasures and rewards of growing one's own make it more than worthwhile.

Surprisingly, even though the patience required might seem to suggest otherwise, growing plants from seed is also the best way I know of getting children involved in gardening. Even my youngest, not yet 4 years old, takes special pride in the plants she's grown from seed.

The main problem here is quantity: What plants? Switch to seedless oranges and you'll lose all the fun. And it's a lot of fun. So what's the catch? Time, that's what.

In our instant society, most of us have come to accept a ready-made world. Although the trend, exemplified by needlepoint, gourmet cooking, and hobby carpentering, is back to making things ourselves, this enthusiasm has only recently entered the world of house plants. Growers are discovering that while it may take a year to bring a seed from its dry, dormant state into a lush, flowering plant, the pleasures and rewards of growing one's own make it more than worthwhile.

Most popular house plants—among them philodendron, begonias, peperomia, schefflera, gloxinia, and a host of others—can be grown from seed for a fraction of the cost of buying the plants pre-grown. And it's a lot of fun. So what's the catch? Time, that's what.

In our instant society, most of us have come to accept a ready-made world. Even my youngest, not yet 4 years old, takes special pride in the plants she's grown from seed. The main problem here is quantity: What does one do with some hundred-odd orange trees, grown from carefully culled seeds? Switch to seedless oranges and bananas? Well, that's one answer. The other is to order enough different seeds to keep all the pots, and all the children, occupied.
Just about everything that grows in your yard is going to look better when it's fed. And you don't have to know much about your trees, shrubs and flowers to do it right. You don't have to know much about fertilizers, either.

We have a simple word for well-fed flowers, shrubs and trees. It's "Grow."

Take flowers like marigolds and geraniums. The right fertilizer will give them the nitrogen, potassium and phosphorus they need to get you more blooms and brighter color. Ordinary soil by itself just can't come up with the nutrition to do this. It needs some help.

Here is where some people make it complicated. They tell you you have to use one thing for annuals, another for perennials and something else for roses. But that just isn't so.

Here at Scotts in Marysville, Ohio, we make one fertilizer you can use on all your flowers. And that includes seeds, seedlings and full-grown perennials. We simply call it Grow Flowers.

You don't have to use this fertilizer as often as some other brands.

While most fertilizers are made to release their nitrogen right away, we make ours to release its nitrogen slowly. Your flowers get a good feeding to start off with, then a little more week after week. This longer feeding is what helps give you more blooms on your plants and brighter color too. (You look better when you eat regularly. And so do your flowers.)

As you can see from the boxes below, we also have some simple ways to take care of your shrubs and trees, acid-loving plants and transplants. The nutritional ingredients in each of these are in correct proportion to their use. (Flowers need more of one thing, trees more of another.)

They're all safe to use if you just do what it says on the package. Like every fertilizer we make, each one has our special slow-release formula for a balanced, prolonged feeding and slow even growth.

We tested all these fertilizers ourselves so we know just what they can do. They will give you healthy looking plants and better growth and that's a promise.

You'll find our guarantee right there on every box. It says, "If for any reason you are not satisfied with results after using this product, you are entitled to get your money back. Simply send us evidence of purchase and we will mail you a refund check promptly."

We made that simple too.

germinate, so place them on top of the soil. Don’t worry, the roots will burrow down promptly enough. Keep the pot in a sunny window where it’s warm. But, at all costs, avoid drafts, which can cause the leaves to drop off with alarming rapidity. You’ll have foot-tall specimens in about a year.

EUCALYPTUS CINEREA
The lovely silver-dollar plant is a fast-growing, exotic foliage plant that’s easy to grow from seed. Germination takes 2 to 3 weeks in a sunny window. Plant the seeds any time of the year for a potful of intriguing bluish silvery leaves that add color contrast as well as unusual form to your indoor greenery.

HARPEPHYLLUM CAFFRUM
A native of South Africa, this tree bears with deep green, curly-edged leaves. It is nevertheless a very showy foliage plant any time of the year for a potful of intriguing bluish silvery leaves that add color contrast as well as unusual form to your indoor greenery.

PEPEROMIA
Quick and easy to grow, most peperomia seeds germinate within 3 weeks. The one thing to look out for is stem rot due to overly moist soil. The peperomias as a group like their soil on the dry side; not dry enough for the plants to wilt, of course—this will stunt the seedlings if not kill them—but drier than such house plants as African violets and begonias.

PHILODEONRON
A surprising number of this “doctor’s office special” can be grown easily from seed. Among them are P. lundii, with broad, arrowhead-shaped leaves, P. pe- trusum (monstera deliciosa), the familiar climbing round cutleaf philodendron, and P. bipinnatifidum, or elephant ears, to name a few. Most of the seeds take less than a month to germinate, but there are some stragglers that can take considerably longer. Their soil should be kept on the moist side, and partial sun is a growing boost, although good indirect light will suffice.

PILEA REPENS
Pilea seeds germinate readily in 2 weeks or less, with mature show specimens developing in 6 to 10 months. Pilea repens is the most readily available seed. The plants grow into nice hanging-basket specimens, the wrinkled bronzed leaves often topped off by clusters of white flowerheads when grown in bright indirect light.

SAXIFRAGA (Stolonifera)
D Pilea repens seeds take about 2 weeks to germinate, and the plant will grow well in a partially sunny location.

PALS
While palms are attractive and popular plants for indoor gardens, and the seeds are often available, the caveat concerning palm seeds is that they’re in no rush to germinate. One of the natural ways in which palms assure themselves of continuing generations under rather hostile conditions is the producing of time-released seeds. In any one batch of seeds, there are some that will germinate almost instantly, others that will take weeks, others months, and still others years. Since there’s no way of knowing which ones have ended up in your pots, a lot of patience may be required. Soaking the seeds in warm water will usually help break dormancy—but remember never to let them dry out afterwards. Keep in a sunny warm spot forever.

SINNINGIA SPECIOSA (Gloxinia)
The lush and expensive florist’s gloxinia is easy to grow from seed. Just remember it’s another species that needs light for best germination. And don’t sneeze while planting, because the seeds are hardly more than dustlike in size. They can be planted any time, although late summer is traditional. Since the plants take about 4 to 7 months to reach blooming size, this means they’ll be ready for the holiday season. Buell’s Greenhouses, Eastford, Conn. 06242, is an excellent source of seeds for these plants, with a large selection of striking hybrids available (list, 25¢, plus self-addressed stamped envelope).

GREGVILLA ROBUSTA
The so-called silk oak is an excellent bit of featheriness for homes too dry to sustain a good glen of ferns. Although delicate and frondy in appearance, the silk oak’s leaves are tough. Seeds normally take around 3 weeks to germinate, about a year to reach a foot in height, and the sky’s the limit after that, with the plant adding about a foot a year to its vertical growth.

SAXIFRAGA (Stolonifera)
The strawberry geranium makes a splendid, no-special-care hanging-basket specimen. A seed usually takes less than 2 weeks to germinate, and once it’s growing, there’s no stopping it.

USE THE PLANT FOOD RECOMMENDED BY THE PLANT. NEW EARTH CARE

Some plant foods feed one part of the plant at the expense of the rest. New Earth Care nourishes the whole plant with 20 units each of nitrogen, phosphorus and potash. Plus easily absorbed iron and manganese for rich, green leaf growth.

Earth Care’s balanced 60 unit formula assures a plant’s growth and vigor from its topmost leaf to the bottom of its root system. Nurserymen prefer its soluble formula 2 to 1 for house plants, vegetables and flowers.

Buy Earth Care at your lawn and garden center, and give a healthy greenhouse glow to everything you grow.

Real ceramic tile. It makes so much sense in so many rooms because it's not only one of the most beautiful materials on earth—it's also one of the most practical.

Whether you use it on floors, on walls or on countertops ceramic tile sparkles with just soap and water. Without the scrubbing, buffing, waxing, polishing or vacuuming other materials demand.

And under normal conditions it also resists scratching, denting, warping, even burning. And probably will never need replacing.

In buying any house today, caution should be the keyword. Sales prices have soared sky-high, so it is vital to find out precisely how sound of wind and limb a prospective house may be. More than ever, a comprehensive physical inspection is important to learn what you are actually getting when you buy. Remember that the structure of any house and the heating, wiring, power and water supply, the materials, and equipment that make it habitable are subject to constant change and deterioration. Today, with escalating costs of heating and electricity, and ever-increasing prices of all repairs in labor and materials, it is essential that a house be in good health before you buy it.

In considering any existing house, be sure to ask the owner when it was built and try to learn the builder’s name and present address. This may not be possible for older houses but, if you succeed, the builder as well as the owner may be sources of other valuable information.

The age of a house has a lot to do with the condition of equipment and materials in it, because the electric wiring, heating equipment, insulation, plumbing, and hot-water supply in houses built before World War II may not meet present standards and requirements. Wiring was frequently inadequate, heating systems were often rudimentary, insulation was meager, plumbing was sparse for today's needs. Since these are the principal parts of a house that need checking, it's wise to discover all you can about them at the start. Then, armed with a comprehensive checklist—and flashlights, binoculars, penknife, plumb line, and notebook—you can set out to gauge the fitness of a house at firsthand.

Peeling, blistering paint must be removed

Have wood siding boards or mortar joints in masonry walls opened to the weather with vertical cracks? Is the wall paint or stain in good condition or will it need redoing? Is paint peeling, blistering, or cracking? A moisture problem in the walls may be causing this. Is the wood or shingle stain blackening?

4 Roofing—your protection overhead.

If the house has a pitched roof, it should be checked for loose, cracked, curled, or missing shingles or roof tiles that could cause leaks. (You may need your binoculars to see them.) On a flat roof, a deteriorating, cracked bituminous surface, with the top gravel gone, can present the same problem. Inside attic or top-floor rooms look for water stains on walls or ceilings that may indicate a leaky roof. Chimneys should be surveyed for cracked masonry which is loose and for fireplaces with tile flues—they are nonflammable. Find out as well if the flashing around chimneys and roof valleys is copper, galvanized metal, or other material and its state of health. Rain gutters and downspouts (are they copper, wood, galvanized metal, aluminum, or bricks that need replacement?)

A 12-point checklist

1 Foundations and basements—the bottom line. Since the foundation supports the whole structure of a house, it is a good place to start an examination. If there is a basement with masonry walls, do they show vertical cracks or leaks? Are there signs of dampness or moisture on walls or floor? Do you detect a musty odor, mildew patches, or water stains on walls; loose mortar in masonry; rust on pipes, boiler, or water heater? They may indicate a wet basement which can be unending bad news. Look over wood posts, ceiling beams, and joists for rot and note any sagging beams; they could mean shaky structure. On the outside, land should slope away from foundations for good drainage, and water from drain spouts should be carried off so it won't back into the basement. Wood framing such as wall sills should rest on masonry foundations 6 to 8 inches aboveground.

2 Termites—the invisible enemy. Termites can undermine the whole house structure; their presence is best checked on wood framing in basements or foundations. Dig into floor beams, sills, and posts with a penknife or icepick. If they are hollowed out by termites or dry rot the tool should sink into it and turn up a powdery deposit. You can find termites, sometimes, by the tunnels they build on masonry foundations supporting wood framing. But they can be difficult to uncover and examination by expert termite exterminators may be wise. FHA mortgage lenders sometimes require this.

3 Exterior walls—the surface that shows. Are there bulges in the walls that could indicate structural defects? Do any walls, wings, porches appear to sag? You can judge this by using a plumb line. It could mean faulty foundations or just the settling of the house. Are there missing, loose, or broken wall boards, shingles, or bricks that need replacement?
"THE BEST REASON FOR BUYING A NEW GE REFRIGERATOR IS AN OLD GE REFRIGERATOR."

—The Steele Family.

Jane Steele
Verona, New Jersey
GE refrigerators are really built to last. And my old "Monitor" is lasting proof!

My sister-in-law’s Aunt Agnes bought it in 1934. Talk about a great investment!

It was handed down to me in 1957, and I nearly didn’t take it. I thought it was so old. But after 21 years as our second refrigerator, it still works like a charm!

And aside from a new door seal my husband put on, it hasn’t needed one repair.

Of course, it doesn’t have all the improvements and innovations GE’s added over the years. Like automatic defrosting. And an ice dispenser on the door.

But it really gives me confidence in the reliability and dependability of General Electric products. I told Mary Ellen, get a GE. They can’t be beat, really.

Great Aunt Agnes Spina
West Orange, New Jersey
I’ve spent nearly half a century depending on GE refrigerators.

We bought one of these GE refrigerators in the mid-fifties, after we decided to get up to date and give away the faithful old 1934 GE “Monitor” Jane has now.

What a workhorse! Why, our son and his friends must have opened this door thousands of times.

Soda was always cold, ice cream stayed hard. And, would you believe, it never needed any service.

So naturally, when we modernized again five years ago, we went right back to GE for a big, beautiful side-by-side.

We love how well General Electric refrigerators hold up.

If Suzanne asks us, we’d recommend GE. And we’ve had enough of them to know!

Mary Ellen Steele Burns
Totowa, New Jersey
General Electric is a name you grow up with. You know it’s reliable and dependable.

And with GE, the lower-priced refrigerators give you the same quality and reliability as the most expensive models. I wouldn’t feel that same confidence with other brands.

Ours has all the features we need, at a medium price. Plus a fantastically large freezer. Automatic defrosting. And four adjustable shelves.

When we were looking for a refrigerator a year and a half ago, my mother told me GE was the best kind to get, and I value her opinion. And of course we did quite a bit of shopping around.

But no other brand had the features GE did for the same money. Or was as nice-looking, inside and out.
Suzanne Steele Walsh
Morristown, New Jersey

Having had GE refrigerators in the family for so long impressed me more than any brochure or sales talk. So when we buy our new refrigerator, it won't be a question of "whether GE," but of "which GE."

And I think I know which—this gorgeous dream of a side-by-side!

It has plenty of space, which is important with our five children. And adjustable glass shelves, great for cleaning up spills.

The GE dispenser gives you chilled water, ice cubes, even crushed ice, without opening the door.

There's a separate temperature control for the meat pan.

And I love the "New Naturals" colors—so soft!

The reliability General Electric's been building into their refrigerators since Great Aunt Agnes bought hers makes me feel really confident. Maybe some day my GE refrigerator will become a family heirloom too!

or plastic?) need examination for possible rusting or rotting. Are sections missing, not anchored or choked with debris or nonfunctioning? And look for deterioration of wood cornices or other carpentry and trim.

5 Insulation for year-round comfort. Ample insulation in walls, roof, attic floor, or basement is crucial today. It cuts fuel bills and saves energy expenditure, but few older houses have enough to meet today’s standards. How it can be added will vary with the house. Ask how much insulation a house has and where it is located. Are foundation walls, unheated basements, or “crawl” spaces under the house insulated, and how? Can they be insulated now? Are outside walls insulated and could more insulation be blown into the walls? Are there insulating batts between attic floor joists or roof rafters? Could they be added? You can tell if a roof lacks insulation when snow melts rapidly on it from escaping heat. And, by holding one hand against an exterior wall inside a house, and one against an interior wall, you can learn if the outside wall is insulated. It shouldn’t be much colder than the inside one.

MARIANNE BARCELLONA, © 1976 SHAW ELLIOTT, INC.

6 Electric wiring—the nerve system of the house. Like the human nervous system, house wiring is concealed from view and can’t be appraised visually. But it is vital to learn whether it is ample, adequate, obsolete, or defective in any house you consider. Supplying the power essential to run a house today, it is rated in terms of amperes. At least 100 amperes of electric power is necessary for average appliances and lighting now, more for electric heating, air conditioning, and today’s new electric wonders.

Power lines come into basement or utility areas where any circuit breaker or main fuse box is liable to be located. Look for the amperage listed on them. One way to test house electrical capacity is to turn on all lights and then turn them off, check to learn if outside walls are insulated check the heating equipment nameplates and model numbers.

Look for faulty, frayed wiring, a fire hazard. Major appliance to see if lights flicker. It indicates inadequate power. Make a survey, too, of the switch plates and electric outlets in rooms. Do the switches control outlets for lamps, TV, stereo, ceiling fixtures? Are there ample wall outlets— one to a wall at least? Are there special circuits for kitchen and laundry appliances? And check garage, basement or attic for evidence of frayed, makeshift wiring, which may be a fire hazard as well as obsolete.

7 Heating (and cooling) systems—for winter and summer survival. In considering any house, find out the type and operating method of its heating system as well as the fuel it uses. Is it a forced warm-air system or hot-water heating? Is it fueled by oil, gas, or coal? Is cooling part of the system or an auxiliary system? Could it be added? Is it heated electrically by room units or heat pump? Or has the house under inspection one of the older gravity or steam systems which may be sadly outmoded? The major concern may not be the type of system but in what condition and how up-to-date the various elements are—furnace or boiler, heat distributing ducts, pipes, radiators, baseboard, and wall units. They need gimlet-eyed inspection. Does the system have modern controls—thermostat, circulating pump, blower fan? The manufacturers and model numbers of all this equipment can sometimes be learned by checking the nameplates and serial numbers on them—it’s a clue to their age. Perhaps the installer-dealer can be located if the house isn’t
At Whirlpool we know how you feel about fingerprints. So we designed a refrigerator with textured steel doors that help hide fingerprints.

Now we've put the same beautiful textured steel doors on all the kinds of refrigerators we make. And we make more kinds of refrigerators than anyone.

Side-by-side. Freezer-on-the-top. Freezer-on-the-bottom. And the Serva-Door™ refrigerator, with a unique door-within-a-door. It lets you get to the foods you use most often without opening the whole refrigerator. Some models even come with a new ice dispenser that lets you get ice without opening the freezer door. Others offer ice and water through the door.

Most models have humidity sealed crispers to help keep food fresh. And porcelain enameled interiors that are especially easy to clean. Plus textured steel doors that help hide fingerprints.

We do all this because we want you to like your Whirlpool refrigerator, and us, for a long, long time.
Health of a house

too old. How well the equipment works will depend mainly on how well the system was designed and installed. A simple test is to set a thermostat higher than room temperature on a thermometer and wait to learn how long it takes for the heat to rise. Another gauge, to check costs, is to ask to see winter fuel bills.

8 Plumbing— a life line in the house. Is the house connected to the city water main or a well? Well water may need analysis by the public health department. Is the house connected to a sewer system or a septic tank or cesspool on the property? A tank also needs careful checking on its state of health by experts. How often does it need cleaning? (This may be costly.) When was it last cleaned? Will frequent use of an automatic washing machine overload it? Test the water pressure in the house. Is there an ample water flow? Turn on all water faucets on the top floor and flush the toilet simultaneously. If the flow slackens the water supply will be slow, poor. Are plumbing pipes copper, brass, bronze?

Turn on faucets, toilet to check water flow

These are the most durable but not found often in pre-World War II houses. Galvanized iron and steel pipes in older houses may be corroded and reduce water supply. What is the capacity of the tank that provides hot water? How many gallons of hot water does it store? The manufacturer’s nameplate on it should give capacity and type. And examine the tank for signs of rust or leaks. Is it heated by gas or electricity?

9 Windows and doors, the indoor-outdoor links. Do window and door frames show chrevices that leak air, admit water? Is there caulking between walls and window or door frames or has it dried up or dropped out? Do doors stick or sag? The door frame or house itself may be out of plumb if they do. Do double-hung windows move up and down easily or do casements swing in and out readily? Is all window hardware in place and working well? Have any windows insulating glass? Storm sash for insulation of windows and doors? Is there weather stripping around doors and windows and is it securely in place. Are there window and door screens? In good condition?

10 Ventilation— to keep your cool. Some circulation of fresh air is vital to comfort in houses. Do windows provide cross ventilation in rooms? Are there exhaust fans in kitchen and bathroom to remove heat and moisture adequately? Are there air vents in attics, basements, or “crawl” spaces under the house to prevent hot air, mildew, or condensation accumulating? Does the house have an attic fan? (More on ventilation, page 112.)

11 Interior walls and ceilings, the indoor environment. Older houses with plaster walls and ceilings may show cracks caused by settling of the house, warping of wood framework, use of green lumber. The cracks can be filled and if the house has stood for years it will undoubtedly endure. Loose or missing plaster must be replaced, but damp or spongy plaster is probably caused by leaks coming from faulty piping or the roof—trouble ahead. Check the plaster in walls under bathrooms, in top floor ceilings and walls. In dry wall (wallboard) interiors customary today, protruding nailheads in the panels, open joints or exposed tape between the panels are the flaws to look for. The condition of the paint, hardware, and any kitchen or bathroom tile walls needs careful going over as well.

12 Floors— the underpinning. The prime unknown factor here is stability. Do the floors sag or tilt? Try placing a marble to see if it rolls to one side or corner of a floor. Any pronounced sag may, again, be just the settling of an older house but it may also be caused by defective structure and require added posts and beams as supports. Try jumping up and down in the middle of the room; if the room and the windows shake badly, some structure reinforcement could be essential. Look for loose boards and an uneven surface on wood floors. Are they squeaky, in need of repair? Will refinishing be necessary? If masonry floors show discoloration or chalking, ask if sealers were applied originally? Are tile floors cracked or crazed? Are resilient floors of vinyl, asbestos, asphalt, or cork, and when were they put down? Are they in good shape?

The extent of this checklist makes it obvious that judging the health of a house can pose many problems—many of them technical. If it seems an overwhelming task, another method is to hire experts to evaluate the condition of a house. Home inspection firms, including the American Standards Testing Bureau offices, are listed in Yellow Pages of the telephone book of major cities. They are engineers mainly and can appraise house structure and equipment expertise. Home builders and architects are also qualified if you can snare them; local FHA and VA offices may be able to direct you to the inspectors they use.

It gives you more ways to cook... vents away smoke and odors right at the rangetop to keep your kitchen cleaner, sweeter.

Most ranges on the market today differ little from the ranges of 30 years ago. The Jenn-Air range differs a lot. It breathes.

The range that breathes. It's the simplest way to explain how the extraordinary Jenn-Air range works.

There's no hood. A powerful ventilation system, built into the oven and rangetop, breathes in air to whisk away smoke and odors, breathes out air to keep your kitchen cleaner, sweeter.

And most important, Jenn-Air's built-in ventilation gives you more ways to cook — virtually every method of cooking the world has ever known.

You get more ways to cook, including 5 ways conventional ranges don't offer.

A Jenn-Air range can give you just the right temperature for all conventional cooking methods: boiling, braising, frying, baking, roasting, and broiling. But then, a Jenn-Air range gives you even more ways to cook, cooking methods that conventional ranges don't offer, cooking flavors you can't get any other way.

Standard rangetop heating elements are removable and replaceable in seconds with any of 5 different Cooktop Convertible units that give you your choice of 5 more ways to cook.

You can grill indoors with a Jenn-Air range. Thick steaks, or heavy chops sputter and sizzle as they absorb a rich char-flavor. Smoke is whisked away into the rangetop ventilator located just inches from the meat.

You can spit roast buttery chickens, spicy barbecue ribs, succulent pork roasts, whole legs of lamb. The meat turns lazily on the electric spit, basting itself in its own rich juices.

You can griddle a breakfast of bacon and eggs for a whole family, short-order quick.

You can shish kebab with 4 spits turning at once, loaded with beef, lamb, shrimp, sausage, vegetables, whole meals on a skewer.

And you can deep-fry
Choose from 2 different ways to roast and bake, including the way professional chefs use.

The roast-and-bake oven of the Jenn-Air range is actually two ovens in one. First, it's a conventional electric oven and broiler that lets you cook all your present recipes without change. But then, just by flicking a switch, it becomes a professional type convected oven that roasts and bakes in a stream of power-driven air — quicker, at lower temperatures.

Cooked in this swirling airstream, meats brown-up more quickly with a crust of delicious brown coating that traps the hot, seething juices inside. Beef roasts cook lushly pink and fork tender all the way through. Turkeys turn a rich, golden brown, bubbling with rich juices, and they cook in less time. Chickens, hams, roasts of pork all come out filled to bursting with juice and flavor.

This oven not only stays cleaner, it has an "ACCELERATED CLEANING" cycle, too.

Every time you use the Jenn-Air oven it works to keep itself cleaner. Greasy build-up is reduced because this oven, like the rangetop, is fully vented — smoke and steam are exhausted direct to outdoors. Spattering is reduced because the Jenn-Air oven cooks cooler.

The oven stays cleaner, too, because of a special surface that works to disintegrate deposits in normal oven heat.

The Jenn-Air oven also has a special cleaning cycle. Just switch the oven selector knob to "ACCELERATED CLEANING" to remove accumulated deposits.

Cook the way you want to in a cleaner, sweeter kitchen.

If you're in the market for a range today, be sure to see the self-ventilating range with five Cooktop Convertible units that let you choose the way you want to cook. Frigidaire is making a lot of noise about a dishwasher that doesn’t.

We believe dishes should be cleaned and not heard. So when we designed our Electri-Saver dishwasher, we packed in a lot of extra insulation around the motor compartment where you’d expect to find it.

And all around the top and sides of the tub where you might not expect to find it.

The result? A dishwasher so quiet you’ll find it hard to believe how furiously our Super Surge Wash Action is working to get your dishes clean.

It also has a tub large enough to clean an average day’s dishes for a family of four all at once.

And a heavy-duty Pots and Pans Cycle that can clean crusty casserole as easy as pie.

So bring home a Frigidaire Electri-Saver dishwasher, soon. And start hearing the chatter of your guests. Instead of the clatter of your platters.

Beat the blackout

A new gasoline generator supplies enough power to keep your heating system, electric range, and refrigerator going during blackouts. Self-contained, it is wired to the house electric system and consists of a 5,000-watt generator, gasoline fuel engine, starter motor, and a gas tank that holds an 8-hour fuel supply. When a blackout occurs, you unlock the Homelite System unit, push the ignition and the start buttons, flip the 30-amp. circuit breaker to "on," throw the transfer switch, and get enough power to warm the house; keep pipes from freezing; and run a limited number of lights and appliances. The 27-inch-high, 35-inch-long, 36-inch-wide unit, about $2,000 installed, can be bolted to a concrete pad outdoors. Homelite Div., Textron Inc., Charlotte, N.C. 28217.

Heat detective

A hand-held device, 4 inches long, that detects the sources of costly heat loss as air infiltration in a house is Heat Sleuth. It tracks down hidden cracks and openings in walls, corners, windows and doors (where air may be escaping entering) with a 6-inch heat wand. The wand, on the end of a 4-foot cable, used to scan indoor surfaces; temperature variations register on the meter of the indicator unit, which operates on a 9-volt battery. Readings can indicate heat leaks, hot spots, normal temperatures. The unit can also check refrigerator and oven door seal leakage, the effectiveness of heating and air-conditioning systems, dangerous temperature build-ups in furnace, hot water heater, chimney. $39.25. Enertron Corp., 241 Crescent St., Waltham, Mass. 02154.

Safety first

The danger of scalding in a shower or the discomfort of sudden icy water is eliminated by the IdealMix thermostatic valve. It has a temperature scale from 68°F to 140°F circling the single control knob, so you select the temperature you want and the control keeps it constant. There's a red safety button to press if a temperature between 110° and 140° is desired; the control shuts off hot water if the cold water fails. A protection for children especially, the control fits shower or tub. Approximately $127. American-Standard, Inc., New Brunswick, N.J. 08903

Good insulation is important, we know, in saving energy and fuel bills. If only houses were giant refrigerators, storing lifeless objects, there would be little more to say. But since owners and buildings need to breathe, proper ventilation, in conjunction with insulation, is vitally necessary for personal comfort indoors. Today, with electric fans and air conditioners, ventilation has come to mean forced ventilation to most of us. While fans are relatively inexpensive to operate, there's obviously a lot to be said for natural ventilation that doesn't require any mechanical assistance at all. Natural ventilation is the movement of air through a building by channeled currents. It utilizes the principle that warm air rises while cool air falls. It relies largely on orienting the building to the warm, gentle zephyrs of summer. To understand how you can get the most out of air currents, you must realize that air is pulled through buildings, not pushed. A remarkable physical principle known as the Venturi Effect (named after its discoverer, a 19th-century physicist) demonstrates that fact. If a building has large openings on the facade, generally facing the breeze and quite small ones at the back, the increase in velocity as air moves out the rear windows actually sucks air in the open side. Tropical houses often use this technique to increase air flow. Houses built before 1920 are often ingenious examples, too, of how natural ventilation can work. Encircling porches, high ceilings, French doors, and roof-top cupolas are some of the devices used to move air quietly and efficiently through rooms. But you probably don't live in such a house. How can you use natural ventilation to affect your life in 1978?

Natural ventilation and modern insulation techniques can work together to provide comfort in several ways:
1. By making the insulation more efficient.
2. By removing excess humidity from interiors.
3. By cooling air before it enters living areas.
4. By moving the available air continuously through rooms.

Ventilating insulation

Insulation stabilizes interior temperatures. By minimizing heat loss during winter and heat gain from the sun during summer, insulation dramatically reduces the energy needed to provide comfortable temperatures all year-round. When coupled with efficient weather stripping, insulation enables you to control cold-weather ventilation problems—drafts and chilly spots near windows and doors. But even during winter, ventilation is important in a well-insulated house.

Insulation must remain dry to be effective in resisting heat transfer. Plastic foam insulations may not hold moisture, but batt and many composition board insulating materials can become soggy if not well-ventilated. Keeping insulation dry in vertical walls is relatively easy.

If a good vapor barrier has been installed on the room side of the insulation, water vapor build-up from showers, vaporizing, laundry and kitchen activities can't get to it. This is what creates fogged windows, which in turn can cause rotting of window sills. If you have a well-insulated house, you must learn to open an upper window a crack for an hour or two until the excess moisture has been pulled to the drier air outside.

If rain or humidity from the outside gets through the siding and sheathing, chances are that they will not enter the insulation but run down the sheathing itself and leak out onto the ground. Besides, sunlight on a frame wall can warm the air inside the wall, making it rise.

Even a dorm-full of schoolgirls didn’t faze her Maytag, says Mrs. Howe.

10 years of work, work, and more work—but it’s still washing away.

“We bought our Maytag Washer in 1967 when John was just beginning a job as chaplain at a New England preparatory school for boys,” writes Mrs. Karen Howe, whose husband is Rector of Truro Episcopal Church, Fairfax, Virginia.

Good thing Maytag builds washers to last longer and need fewer repairs, because hers has led a harder life than most. “We lived in the dormitory, and I handled the boys’ emergency washes plus our own,” says Mrs. Howe. “A few years later we moved to a girls’ school where we were houseparents to 39 eighteen-year-olds, many of whom frequently needed the help my Maytag could offer.”

Since those days the Howes have had three children and moved four times. Who can count the loads her Maytag has done in its 10 years! But it’s still going great, and the repairman has been virtually a stranger, according to Mrs. Howe.

Naturally, we don’t say all Maytags will equal that record. But long life with few repairs is what we try to build into every Maytag Washer, Dryer, Dishwasher, and Disposer.

Lator along with vents in the underside of the eaves. This will ensure a continuous current of sun-warmed air. Or you can place small louvered ventilating ports near the ridge on the outside of the roof, with openings cut into adjacent rafters.

Sun and wind conditions

The sun is an active partner in natural ventilation. Breezes based on warmed air moving uphill from a lower spot, or an off-shore-on-shore wind during the day, can be exploited by an observant property owner. You can use an anemometer and weather vane to keep track of the force, speed, and direction of your local winds. The readings can dictate opening or closing of windows for delicious cool breezes—ones that you may never before have sensed to be there, even after years spent in a house.

Trees and shrubbery also offer natural insulation and ventilation. They insulate because they provide shade. Properly placed, as in orchard planting or hedgerows, they can also channel gentle winds through the house. Shade creates cool air, too, and if near the ground next to a house can sometimes be drawn indoors.

HOW TO CATCH THE AIR CURRENTS IN A NEW HOUSE

1. Don't build a flat roof. A pitched roof soaks up and holds much less of the sun’s heat during the day than a flat one. Outside air movement up the slope tends to draw off heat that otherwise isn’t easily dissipated. Use the sloping roof to create high ceilings and warm-air exhaust openings near the ridge. You can use a pole or gear- and-chain arrangement to operate your ventilator as needed.

2. Consider larger-than-usual covered porches on the sunny side of the house. Traditionally porches have worked as a zone in which shaded air is cooled before it enters the house.

3. Look for windows that open easily, have two or three different positions while open, can be left open in rain to emit cool air. A number of small windows are preferable for ventilation purposes to an expanse of glass with large panels that slide open.

How the leading maker of asphalt roofing can keep you from making a very expensive mistake.

A new roof can end up as one of your smartest investments. Or one of your more regrettable mistakes.

That's where GAF can help, by telling you enough about roofing to make certain your decision will be the right one.

First of all, remember that asphalt shingles protect over 80% of all American homes. That's because they give homeowners superb durability, tested fire-resistance, excellent weather-protection and, not least of all, great beauty.

Now let's discuss which asphalt shingle is best for you.

A heavyweight shingle does a heavy-duty job.

Weight is one of the most important factors in deciding which shingle to buy.

Asphalt shingles come in standard, medium, and heavy weight. Heavyweight premium shingles, such as GAF™Timberline, weigh nearly 40% more than standard weight. With this extra weight they're likely to last over 50% longer.

The initial cost of the heavyweight shingles is higher, but since installation costs are similar for all asphalt shingles, your net cost per year can actually be less.

Will wind blow your investment away?

Not if your shingles are sealed down tight. Make sure the shingles you choose have a factory-applied adhesive (see illustration) that seals them tightly to each other. This enables them to better withstand the ramp of wind and weather.

Asphalt shingles protect your house, but what protects the shingles?

A roof's worst enemies are sunlight and moisture, and in time they can cause even the best roofs to deteriorate.

Asphalt shingles have a mineral-granule surface that reflects the sun's damaging ultraviolet rays away from the waterproofing asphalt underneath. So the weather outside stays outside.

Will flying sparks make your investment go up in smoke?

The mineral-granule surface also resists fire. All quality asphalt shingles are tested for fire-resistance to meet the exacting standards of Underwriters' Laboratories. Certain GAF premium shingles meet the highest UL fire-resistance standards.

So, even if flying sparks do land on your roof, you won't see your money burn.

GAF offers asphalt shingles to suit every home

As the leading maker of asphalt shingles, GAF offers many types of shingles.

Awnings and Energy

How to choose the right awnings, plus how to install and care for them.

If summer sun overheats your house or apartment, and winter winds steal through your windows, awnings are a simple, practical way to save energy and lower your utility bills.

"Don't disregard awnings simply because they've been around for years," says Stephen Selkowitz, a scientist at the Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory in California, one of seven national laboratories involved in research for the U.S. Department of Energy. Selkowitz recommends awnings as an effective approach to sun control, along with shades and curtains, solar control screens, landscape shadings, and reflective window films. Without awnings, air conditioners and heating systems must work overtime to compensate for solar heat gain in summer, and heat loss in winter, through unprotected windows. The best awnings act as buffers between glass and the outside world, fending off wind, snow, and sun when necessary, adjusting in winter to expose the window, allowing useful solar heat to warm your house or apartment.

Choose awnings according to the direction your windows face.

Western and southern exposures receive the most sunlight year-round. Here, fabric awnings and louvered or roll-up metal awnings are best. Against the forest-green walls of his house, composer-conductor Aaron Copland hung red canvas awnings to shade his western-facing studio and terrace. In summer, awnings must extend out far enough to block high overhead sun, with low overhangs on the western side to shade the setting sun, the hottest of the day. In winter, when the sun is lower in the sky and its warmth is welcome, fabric awnings can be removed and metal awnings adjusted to let in the sun.

For eastern windows, an ideal awning shades in the morning and lets in light the rest of the day, when the sun has moved to the south. Choose a louvered metal awning or a fabric one that adjusts to different positions. Or, if you prefer a fixed awning, a light translucent nylon or polyester one will block direct light, while allowing filtered light to pass through.

Northern windows are targets for cold prevailing winds. Here, awnings can discourage heat's natural tendency to move from a warm spot to a colder one. Awnings block incoming drafts, and more importantly, deflect the wind and snow that can chill your windows and encourage heat loss through the window glass. Metal awnings are particularly effective over a northern exposure, as they are STYROFOAM® brand insulation can make re-siding very rewarding.

Re-siding can do more than just improve the appearance of your home. By adding STYROFOAM® TG brand insulation you can reduce your energy bills, too.

For example, energy consumption analysis of occupied homes before and after the application of STYROFOAM TG brand insulation and new siding show substantial annual dollar savings. (Write for results.)

Your contractor installs STYROFOAM TG brand insulation right over your old siding. And your new siding right over it. Quickly. Easily.

Your energy savings start immediately. And continue—summer and winter—for as long as you own the home. sturdy enough to withstand any kind of weather, and can be mounted permanently for year-round protection.
Since a northern exposure receives little or no sun, fabric awnings can be used over these windows decoratively, to brighten a room or block out a poor view. For example, designers Robert Denning and Vincent Fourcade hung yellow and white striped canvas awnings over northern windows to give a feeling of sunshine in any weather, and lit them with outdoor spotlights mounted below the window sill for a pleasant nighttime glow (see April, 1978, House & Garden, page 118). Alternatively, awnings may be lined to match curtains or painted to match walls, to create a visual extension of the room.

How to install awnings
Awnings are available for even unusual windows. Swing-out windows require casement awnings, which extend straight out, then down. Bay windows can be fitted with fabric awnings on curved tubular frames.

Awnings care
Many fabric awning manufacturers offer a seasonal service to remove, clean, store, and remount your awnings every year. If you want to maintain them yourself, here are some guidelines.

Cleaning: To prevent dirt build-up, fabric awnings can be washed as often as seems necessary. Either spread them out on a flat surface or clean them on their frames. Brush off any loose dirt, then hose them down with mild soapy water and a soft scrub brush or broom. Rinse well and let dry. Fabric awnings should not be dry-cleaned, as this will remove their built-in protection against water and mildew.

Metal awnings are easily cleaned with warm soapy water and a long-handled car-washing brush.

Painting: To prolong the life of faded or thinning canvas or vinyl-coated awnings for one more season, you can paint them inside and out to match a room, or white to reflect light. Spray or brush 2 or 3 light, even coats of exterior acrylic paint into the fibers of the awning. Let dry thoroughly between coats. Keep awning stretched until the last coat is completely dry.

Metal awnings may need to be repainted after a season or two exposed to the elements. Scrape off flaking paint and prepare the surface with a wire brush, steel wool, or fine sandpaper. Prime bare metal surfaces with metal primer. When dry, apply any suitable oil-base or latex exterior paint.

Patching: Fabric awnings that are weakened or damaged may be patched quite easily. Lay the awning on a hard surface, and patch the damage with fabric patching materials.

"As a builder, my husband knows all about WHIRLPOOL Heating and Cooling Products. I only know they keep our family comfortable year-round."

"As a professional interior decorator, I'm concerned about quality too. That's why I recommend only the best carpeting, drapes and wallpaper in the homes I'm commissioned to do."

"We're both just as particular about our own home too, as John is about those he builds. When it comes to central heating and air conditioning, we're both sold on Whirlpool products. And I know that's why he builds homes that are climate controlled by WHIRLPOOL Heating and Cooling Products."

"Whirlpool also has been a trusted name in my kitchen and laundry room for years. No wonder we're sold, both personally and professionally, on Whirlpool products. But don't take my word for it. Ask a friend who has a Whirlpool central air conditioner."

A high utility bill is one of your best reasons to check out today's new, energy-efficient gas appliances. They use up to 50% less gas than the ones offered just five years ago, saving you money...and precious energy. Gas has always been the most efficient energy for the big household jobs of home heating, cooking, heating water and drying clothes. And, with utility bills going higher, gas and new gas appliances are a better choice today than ever before.

Does the cost of staying warm give you chills?
A new, energy-efficient gas heating system can heat the same amount of space as older systems with up to 20% less gas...enough, in fact, to take care of your total energy needs for cooking and drying clothes. They're quiet, clean, compact, long-lasting and have pilotless ignition.

Now there's really something to sing about in the shower.
Did you know the average family uses 26,000 gallons of hot water a year? That's a lot of water...also, a lot of money and energy. You can save both with a new, energy-efficient gas water heater. Compared to older models, these new heaters heat the same amount of water with up to a third less gas.

Only sunshine is more efficient.
Today's new energy-efficient gas dryers can cut your use of gas for drying clothes by 25%. They have pilotless ignition, automatic shut-off when clothes are dry, and multiple temperature settings for all types of fabrics.

The pilot light went out...for good!
Pilotless ignition is just one reason many new gas ranges use up to one-half less gas than older models and cost on average far less to operate. They also feature instant on and off, super fast heat control, multiple temperature settings, ovens that clean themselves and smokeless closed-door broiling.

Conserving energy is a national concern...saving money, a personal one. New gas appliances do both, and that's why we say:

New Gas Appliances are good for your economy!

American families have been warming up to Singer furnaces for 78 years...

And Singer air conditioning has been cooling them down for 24 years... Singer's expertise in producing climate control products goes back to the turn of the century when it was known as the American Furnace Company. Today, the Singer name can be found on everything from heat pumps, to furnaces, to central air conditioning systems. We call them our Comfortmaker line. As you might expect, we direct the same amount of care and attention to developing and making these heating and cooling units as we do to our sewing machines. We've earned a reputation for innovation and quality in our field. For example, as far as we know, Singer is the only company that pretests each and every unit before it leaves the factory. And when you're looking for an air conditioning system, remember Singer quality. Singer's high efficiency models assure you of lower, year-round operating costs at a price your family can afford. For the Singer dealer nearest you, check the Yellow Pages under "air conditioning" or "furnaces". Because, as 78 years of climate control experience has proved...

It's the Honeywell thermostat designed specifically to help heat pumps hold a comfortable, even temperature. Second by second. Season after season. From Maine to California, Miami to Seattle. It senses the subtlest temperature variations in a home. While they're at a minimum. And long before you can feel them. It tells the heat pump to respond with the heating or cooling needed to hold the temperature you've selected. So you're kept comfortable. Constantly. Automatically. All year round.

This thermostat is recommended by more heat pump manufacturers and installed with more heat pumps than any other thermostat. Because it works so well. And works with the carefree reliability Honeywell is famous for.

If you plan to add a heat pump when you build or remodel, make sure it will deliver the constant comfort and efficiency you expect. Put it under the proven control of the Honeywell heat pump thermostat.
Merit Taste Winning High Tar Holdouts.

'Enriched Flavor' cigarette reversing prejudice against low tar smoking.

Good taste meant smoking higher tar cigarettes. That's what the skeptics of low tar cigarettes thought. Though. But proved wrong by MERIT, the low tar cigarette with 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco. Tobacco that delivers extra flavor. Extraordinary flavor.

MERIT, and MERIT alone, is packed with 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco.

In extensive testing against a number of higher tar brands, smokers, overall, reported they liked the taste of both MERIT and MERIT 100's as much as the taste of the higher tar cigarettes tested. Cigarettes having up to 60% more tar!

That's why 75% of all MERIT smokers today have come directly from higher tar brands.

"MERIT absolutely delivers more taste with extraordinarily rich flavor." — Mr. Kris Eugene Holt
Carbondale, Illinois

This kind of smoker response is typical of how smokers react to the taste of MERIT.

"I love their taste—better than the much higher tar cigarettes I used to smoke!" — Ms. Nancy K. Harrison Cambridge, Massachusetts

"At last a low tar cigarette that really tastes good!" — Mr. John Saunders
Minneapolis, Minnesota

Only one cigarette has 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco. And you can taste it.

Getting it all together—surroundings that nourish and stimulate you, people you want to be with, activities that truly give you satisfaction—is a continuing and creative process. It doesn’t just happen, it requires making choices and taking risks. This issue is devoted to people who are doing just that. Below and on the following pages, you will find ideas that may inspire you to make some new choices of your own.

There’s only one way to get the life you really want: It’s to set your priorities, according to time and management specialist Alan Lakein, author of How to Get Control of Your Time and Your Life (Signet paperback). Ask yourself, what are your most important lifetime goals, and look at your activities in terms of them. If you’re confused by the options, here’s a 4-point program for judging which projects are the stepping stones to the life you want. For any project, consider:

What is the long term value, based on your long term goals?

How urgent is it?

Who benefits most? If it’s your project, it ought to be you. If for the family, you should weigh the benefits for all members of the group.

What is your intuition about it? How do you feel when you think about the project? What is your mood? If you have a down feeling, reconsider.

Deciding whether or not the project counts is the first step. The second is making a sensible action plan. Your level of achievement, says Lakein, will rise by 20 percent, if you have a written to-do list every day.

Review your goals regularly. You may find they are not what they were six months ago. Write down your revised list, set your priorities, and go into action with renewed enthusiasm. Above all, don’t feel guilty about the things you don’t get done. If you’ve worked out your priorities properly, you can feel proud. You have neglected insignificant details and concentrated on the things that bring you nearer to the life you want.

“You are your projects, you are your future”

Martin Heidegger
Your lifestyle

How to create the one you really want

Left: Sandi Hills at her loom; yarn in a dough box.
Right: In the Nantucket kitchen; old pie, fresh flowers, and vegetables.
Living your way: It means being willing to work for what really counts. For one young couple, what counts are crafts, nature, and antiques, in a life they're working on, and living, now.
Here's how a family with a vision is planning and working toward the future, and discovering that the preparations are the most fun

A lifestyle of crafts, nature, antiques

On rainy summer days on Nantucket, a popular sport is house hunting. The lure of the search is irresistible, street after street of architectural gems, 18th- and 19th-century houses at every turn. And if you can't actually buy one, dream a little, browse in the past. On this small island you get big ideas.

It was raining when Mr. and Mrs. Hudson Holland Jr., a young couple from Michigan, found their house on Fair Street, and they did have a big idea. They didn't want a house alone, they wanted an antique shop, too. "We had been looking for two years, and had almost given up," admits Sandi Holland. "We wanted to be in town, we wanted to be in business.

"We couldn't find anything in the commercial part of town, but we knew we needed to be near the center of activity. Our expectations were great, we knew that. We were interested in the historic aspect of a house, its preservation, a convenient location for our sons, and the house had to have the right character for our shop. We had already decided on 18th- and 19th-century English country antiques of pine and oak, all of which we thought were missing on Nantucket.

"It was a rainy day and after a good lunch we called our real-estate agent Dick Denby to ask if he had anything new. The minute we saw the house on Fair Street we knew this was it!" Built in 1790, the house is across from the Friends' Meeting House, and down the corner on Main Street is the shop where young R.H. Macy started merchandising—and failed.

The "Nantucket House" antique shop is prospering in the hands of three partners, the Hollands and decorator Gary Knight, also from Michigan. (For some of Mr. Knight's ideas on buying and decorating with antiques, see page 54.) "Gary helped us with our house back home, and he has been coming to Nantucket on holidays for years, just as we have," explains Hud Holland, who is a department-store executive. "It got to a point where he wanted to live on island, and claims he would have even washed dishes to do so.

"So we discovered this terrific bond: the love of Nantucket—anyone who loves Nantucket will understand—and a mutual interest in country antiques and good design. Most important, though, we wanted this shop, so Sandi could be involved directly, and not vicariously as she has been through my years of retailing. With Gary wanting to live on the island all year-round, and our coming as Crafts and antiques capture the spirit of New England for the Hollands in Michigan.

Below: For a centerpiece on the dining room table, a carved-driftwood duck on an English brass trivet. Brass collection.

Top left and above: The brand-new brick-paved kitchen-sitting room paneled with old barn siding. Designed by Phillip Meathe and Hal Mesacar. Below: Greetings from the Holland family turkey farm.
A lifestyle of crafts, antiques, nature

Nantucket means living outdoors for the Hollands' two young sons, Hud, 11 and John, 8.

Right: The boys' corner on summer fun, a rainbow of practical gear and pleasures galore—slickers lined up like soldiers, boots, beach towels, rods, and kites all ready for the next adventure. All are in a small entry off the back porch.

Below, left to right: First: The original front door with its glass transom, now the entrance to the first-floor antique shop. Stripped to the natural wood as it was in the 18th century, the pine door is protected with polyurethane and bright with brass. The large Norfolk basket, made in England to hold herring, is here heaped with geraniums, lantana, and ivy.
Second: The family kitchen, over the shop in the back. At one end a pegboard palette of mugs and copper behind the loom, which is always at the ready for off-hours relaxation. The country table with breadboard ends is set for lunch.
Third: The other end of the kitchen, refrigerator, dishwasher, sink, and stove in a line, a counter divider for service and snacks. Once just a room with a sink, the kitchen was designed by Hud Holland's brother, Christopher, an on-island architect. The contemporary rug is from Afghanistan.
Fourth: Next to the kitchen on the second floor, the compact family dining room. When the Hollands have more than six guests, the upstairs can go downstairs, and they have the party in one of the shop rooms. The 17th-century Polpis table is from Nantucket, as are the zinnias bought on Main Street from open trucks that come to town daily. The American birds around the flowers are painted cement. The needlepoint chart of Nantucket on the wall is Sandi Holland's handiwork.
Fifth: An antique Kentucky rifle hangs high over the fireplace in a bedroom painted pumpkin in high-gloss enamel to give a look of lacquer. The quilt and the iron and brass bed are from Michigan.

Living over the shop can give you new insights. You grow closer as a family; the children seem to become more aware, more responsive to other people.
Juggling between two different ways of living, while sometimes inconvenient, can be very rewarding. You begin to appreciate each one, and let each enrich the other.
Living over the store means more time to be with his family for Hud Holland.

Left: He plays hookey from shopkeeping and joins his two young anglers at the beach.

Far left: One of the five shop rooms downstairs at "Nantucket House." Although the fine English clock says 5 o'clock, the room's treasures are timeless, and centuries—17th, 18th, and 19th—very much at home with each other. The sturdy Welsh country table holds a large steel trivet, an assortment of china and copper. And American quilts, an Afghanistan rug add color and pattern. An English cylinder cupboard rounds one corner. Next to it a folk-art carrousel mask, and in the hall, a wooden flag shield celebrating America's centennial.

First: A Nantucket whale weathervane on the back of the house.

Second: A glorious gathering of baskets, all from Norfolk and each with its own role—one for peas, others for asparagus, raspberries, or herring.

Third: A front room painted a rich tomato to show off a pride of pine furniture, floors, and paneling, once wallpapered. On an Irish country table, a ship's lap desk inlaid with ivory.

Fourth: For a new twist, tie rabbit ears at the corners to hang you quilt. These quilts, sober in color, were sewn by the Amish long ago, while the Shaker-inspired furniture by Thomas Moser of Maine is new. On the sidechest, a basket by neighbor Gretchen Anderson. The slender standing wool winder is an authentic Shaker piece. There may be visitors in this room at night, as this is also the guest room. They all know they must be neat and out by 10 when the shop opens.

Fifth: Another pine-paneled shop-scene—sometimes the stage for a special dinner party—with a generous collection of blue and white porcelain.

A summer to enjoy all year
Good ideas from a pair of gardeners who freeze, dry, preserve, and share the goodness of all they grow

"We really do eat out of our garden all year. It's surprising how productive a little bit of land can be," say two gardeners who delight in harvesting a 30-by-50-foot vegetable patch plus grapes, raspberries, wild elderberries, and a few apple and peach trees. "We love to garden, but we use as many labor-saving ideas as possible," the Arthur D. Pinkham Jrs. say. "Our hay mulch keeps down weeds, and a spray we make of garlic, onions, and cayenne pepper in the kitchen blender discourages almost everything from aphids to rabbits." The Pinkhams are thrifty recyclers. For fruit juice (processed in a Mehu-Maija juice extractor), saved bottles are sealed with reusable rubber caps. Plastic bags, jars, and crocks are kept handy for pickles, sauerkraut, applesauce, jams, jellies, and frozen vegetables.

Tips: For successful freezing "slice, blanch, dip in ice water, then dry thoroughly with a salad spinner and dishtowel before popping into a plastic bag or box." For easy removal of paraffin from jars, "apply wax in two layers and seal a short piece of string between them."

Why you should pepper your corn tassels, and other ideas for gardeners who like to eat

This garden starts each spring in peat pots near a sunny window. After the last frost, the Pinkhams set out their seedling cantaloupes, eggplants, tomatoes, and peppers in the freshly tilled garden and sow the rest of their crops. Chicken wire, tacked from the top of the fence to 8 inches below ground, keeps out woodchucks, while helpful birds and home-made organic spray keep most insects away. "But we were always cleaned out of corn," the Pinkhams say, "until we learned two tricks. Before planting, we now coat the kernels with a crow repellant (Stanley's or Crow-Chex). When the raccoons know the ears are ready, we sprinkle the tassels with cayenne pepper." They grow one kind of corn, Illini Xtra-Sweet, but 6 kinds of tomatoes, cucumbers, squash, including vegetable spaghetti. More, page 240, recipes, page 200.

11 real-life solutions using space you love
When you want a year-round family room—think about the porch

Expand and enclose it with three glass wings, for living, dining, and games in a terrific new indoor-outdoor space

"A sitting room outdoors"—that was the dream; so the old porch was extended with seven walls of glass, and a pair of skylights was set over each of the three wings to let the sun stream in. With the help of architect Darcy Gibson, owners Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Goodman also added a freestanding fireplace, left, with a mirror-wrapped chimney that hovers at the edge of the original porch. With lots of wicker furniture, leafy green plants and fabrics, even a pair of chirping finches, indoors feels like out. Blinds on windows and skylights keep light soft. Beyond the glass, three small gardens by Leonore Baronio. Interior designer: Jan Moran. Building facts, page 244.

How can you incorporate a breezeway and garage into more living space indoors?

Turn the garage into a new kitchen-dining room with a greenhouse wall; annex the breezeway into a big new room for living a change of space? Why not range what you already have? t’s what the owners of this se did—and they got just t they needed, and more. De- er Robert K. Lewis devised ngenious plan that preserved charming country-cottage outside while creating the ng of wide-openness inside. First he made the house 10 feet wider by extending it across the back, carefully matching the new brick to the original clinker brick, and painting all the trim—old and new—a rich taupe. Then he played musical rooms indoors (see plan, next page): The new living room was created by enclosing the breezeway with glass and combining it with the utility room plus the old kitchen and dining room. The old garage became the new kitchen-dining area, now opened to its full peak-roofed height, its old wood gable replaced with glass. The original living room became the new master bedroom with a large window overlooking the back lawn.

Opposite page: The back of the house with a brand new triple-level redwood deck. On the far left, the new garage.
Below: Near the front entrance, flooded with light from the clerestory window, a French pine daybed covered in summery canvas, batik pillows.
Above, top: The dining room with its lean-to greenhouse built into what used to be the garage door. Its metal frame was anodized the color of the house's exterior taupe-colored trim. Italian oak chairs with rush seats and cane backs surround an antique French burl parquet-topped table. For a centerpiece, two glass cake stands riding piggyback, laden with summer fruit and garnished with orange zest ribbons. Near it, a little black vase bearing newly cut mint gives the whole room a fresh-from-the-garden scent. On antique French table found in old convent, day lilies. Above it, a Chinese rug.

Left: The remodeling plan showing the 10-foot-wide addition to the back of the house; the conversion of the garage into kitchen-dining room; the old kitchen-dining room plus utility room and breezeway into a living room-family room; and the old living room into a new master bedroom and bath.
Big new room for living

Below: The living room dressed for summer in crisp blue and white slipcovers—graphic pattern for the sofa; dotted one for the chairs; plain blue sailcloth for the front hall’s daybed and some of the pillows. (The rest of the pillows are covered in an assortment of light-hearted blue and white prints.) On the stone-cast coffee table, porcelain.

Right: Slipcovers off, rug down, fire ablaze—and the living room is ready for winter. Sofas wear natural wool and are piled with pastel-colored silk pillows; the chairs sport a rich brown natural suede. On the table, a marble ashtray, an antique crock with a spray of crabapple branches, and tea for two. Only the panels of canvas curtains remain all year long.

Though the high ceilings, glass walls, and the interesting flow make the interior of the house seem roomy, it actually consists of a single living space. Except for the stucco fireplace partition, which separates the living room from the kitchen, designer Robert K. Lewis dispensed with interior walls altogether, letting living room, family room, dining room, and kitchen become one. There’s even a bar and a barbecue between the kitchen and family room. “It’s a wonderful space for entertaining,” Mr. Lewis says. “But even when there are only two people home they can still find a sense of intimacy by the fire.” He kept the decorating simple for easy care—the floors throughout are Mexican tile and, except for the cozy seating group in front of the fireplace, furniture is spare. The rest of the large living area has a piano and built-in storage for music; the only seating in the family room is a clean-lined L-shaped banquette. What makes the decorating interesting is that the whole space was provided with two complete decorating plans—one for each season—that change the room’s character from top to bottom: For spring and summer, cheerful printed slipcovers give the room a cool perspective; natural woolens and suedes warm it in fall and winter. “Slipcovers let you change so much of a room’s personality with so little effort, you essentially get two rooms for the price of one,” says Mr. Lewis.
If you need more storage space and a good place to work at home

Use your imagination: You can find room to work and out-of-sight storage right before your eyes.

SEAT WITH A SECRET Right: An ingenious storage solution for small-apartment living or for any place where space is at a premium. A carpet-covered chair that opens to store out-of-season clothes, extra napkins and blankets, reference materials—anything you want out of sight but close at hand. And it’s a chair that can, on its casters, move to meet the needs of the moment. For instance, closed and topped with canvas cushions, far right, it rolls up to a table to provide extra seating. Designed by Patino/Wolf Associates.
UDY HALL  Opposite  page,  top:  Because  in  an  apartment  one  thing  not  to  ste  is  space,  an  over-  ed,  underused  hallway  is  transformed  into  a  func-  nal  family  center  with  the  addition  of  a  desk,  book-  selves,  coat  closet,  and  telephone  table  built  into  a  single  compact  unit.  Indi-  t  lighting  is  built  in,  too  much  to  light  the  whole  room.  Architect  Robert  Rhodes  built  the  new  furniture  of  wood  and  plexiglass;  vinyl  Mylar  covers  desk  and  counter-  s  to  hold  up  to  long-term  daily  wear.  Inside  the  dy,  opposite  page  far  right,  there's  a  place  for  everything  and  something  for  everyone  in  the  family,  each  working  on  individual  projects.  Painting  by  Jack  Youngerman  from  the  Tru-  man  Gallery.

WORKROOM  FOR  TWO  Right:  Here's  a  workable  space  created  by  a  couple  who  wanted  to  write  together  at  home  but  didn't  want  to  devote  a  whole  room  to  it  or  spend  a  lot  of  money.  Dove  gray  walls  and  painted  white  floor  provide  a  serene  environment  for  concentration.  Side-by-side  desks  and  an  ample  supply  of  storage  are  formed  by  three  white  file  cabinets  topped  with  butcher  block  and  lit  by  lamps  on  a  clamp.  At  left,  wicker  shelves  hold  books  and  reference  materials.

POP-UP  TV  Left:  A  television  that  rises  to  the  right  height  for  viewing  from  bed,  then  discreetly  disappears  into  its  plexiglass  cabinet  beneath  a  cover  with  a  sturdy  handle  made  from  a  grab  bar.  Its  secret,  a  clever  pul-  ley  system  you  can  operate  with  the  touch  of  a  finger.  Designed  by  architect  Rob-  ert  Rhodes.

DISAPPEARING  TABLE  Be-  low:  Table  for  two—rooms,  that  is.  Formica-finished  wood  table  on  casters  slides  from  the  kitchen,  through  a  table-sized  slit  in  the  wall,  to  the  living  room  in  a  Lon-  don  mews  house  remodeled  by  Barney  Broadbent.  In  the  kitchen,  it's  used  for  break-  fast  or  as  an  extra  work  sur-  face.  Just  above  the  table,  a  pass-through  with  stain-  less  steel  tiled  sliding  doors  makes  it  easy  to  serve  meals,  when  the  table  is  leading  its  double  life  on  the  other  side  of  the  wall,  below  left,  where  it  transforms  the  living  room  for  dining.  Here,  three  sofas  on  casters  glide  up  to  the  table  and  curve  convenient-  ly  around  it.  "The  system  works  just  fine,"  Mr.  Broad-  bent  says,  "as  long  as  you  remember  to  clear  the  table  before  it  makes  its  return  trip  to  the  kitchen."
When your windows really need special treatment

Give them a new point of view—even a challenging window can have a pleasant outlook

PRIVACY PLUS A VIEW
Wanted: a glass-enclosed porch with the airy privacy of a summerhouse and the fresh-air feeling of the outdoors. To create both, shadecloth vertical blinds, pale blue like the walls, rotate 180 degrees for complete sun control on the three window sides. More summerhouse touches: wicker piled with flower-colored pillows, Mexican chairs, baskets brimming with needlework, plenty of plants. Here—just right for ribbons of sunlight through the blinds—ficus trees rimmed with wax begonias, schefflera, and white caladiums. Interior design by Camille Lehman.

AWKWARD WINDOWS
UNITED This country bedroom, opposite page, top, was a hodgepodge of windows and doors. The solution? Straightforward white paint plus simple curtains with a whisper of pattern. Curtains of Hinson cotton frame half-curtains of eyelet batiste from Henry Cassen. Marighan chintzes on bed, chairs. Interior by John Rieck. Shopping, page 210.
CORNERING THE PROBLEM
To turn an upstairs laundry, bottom, into a topflight den, vertical blinds as sleek as minimal sculpture are angled across a corner to screen out pipes and a fuse box. Now you see them (blinds open, below), now you don't (closed, left). The pipe around the skylight becomes a perch for theatre spotlights, focused on a Sam Francis canvas. Sinks serve as bar and beverage cooler. For floor, spatter painting plus polyurethane. Interior by Chuck Winslow for the Kips Bay Boys' Club Showhouse.
How can you turn a barn into a place for parties and guests?

Transform it into a country living room with French doors, beams, and terra-cotta floors

It’s still shaped like a barn, with little shuttered windows and wide wooden beams, but now it has the warmth and charm of a French country house. Photographers Carmen Schiavone and Gerard Rebouillat gave their 35-by-25-foot barn its new personality with French doors, handsome antique furniture, Renaissance art, and the natural textures of suede, leather, and linen from Lee/Jofa. Underfoot, they installed earthy hexagonal tiles from Country Floors. Overhead, half the ceiling was removed to reveal beams and create an upstairs sleeping loft (see plan at right). At the far end of the room, above and right, a new fireplace was cut into the old chimney. Even the outside now looks like a French pavilion, left, with statues overlooking pool, and tall French doors where old barn doors hung.
The personal house

Anthropologist Ashley Montagu tells why you and your house flourish when you get involved. An interview

BY NANCY RICHARDS

No one seems to realize fully that the environment is part of our existence, no matter how simple. The indelible impression from our home environment, no matter how simple. The important thing about a house is not its physical elements but the sense of comfort it offers—both physical and spiritual. House that's physically uncomfortable still manages to be spiritually satisfying.

The striving to make yourself comfortable is what the word culture in the anthropological sense is all about. Our lives are driven by a desire to make ourselves comfortable. This is not an inferior desire—it's not just a matter of creature comforts to the extension of spiritual development. It's a need in the largest sense. Spiritual development in the most profound sense leads us to think about what everyone is related to and responsible for everyone and everything else. The ideal, which by definition is not real, but striving in that direction makes a difference between a clod and a humane being.

“When you are consistent and compelled to make lots of changes, remember that having a house that has everything in it is no substitute for a house with the right atmosphere.”

This question of seeking comfort is one of the most important in a place like Oxford or Princeton. Even the teachers are part of the environment. They are very good teachers, and since they're often eccentric they're more than good, they're original. The beauty of the physical setting is an equally strong influence: the buildings, the quadrangles where the grass is so green and carefully kept, the chapels which are attractive in a deeply religious sense even if you're an atheist. What one takes away from places like this is a sense of the importance of the environment, a sensitivity toward surroundings, a sense of what you can tolerate and what you ought not to tolerate.

The private party

One man’s reaction to the convention of sociability

BY JOHN LEONARD

Small is better if, in the company of human beings, you want to hear what anybody says. Small permits pauses, little spaces in which intelligence is shaped, time to comb the thoughts and a chance to let the emotions walk around on a leash. I am thinking small these days, having been trapped in noisy bigness, having gone to too many parties as though to war, and having given too many parties that resembled bomb scares.

Once upon a time in Texas, I went to a party that was intended in some way or other to honor the arts. Our host, according to rumor, had inherited the patent on an anti-poverty program, and with immigrant labor groups in the apple orchards of New Hampshire. He and his wife Sue and her daughter Jennifer live in a brownstone in New York City, where they entertain small groups of friends in the cozy, second-floor kitchen.

In 1963, before the world went wrong, I had a late-night radio program in Berkeley, California. We did things like play records at the wrong speed and tell jokes: “did you see Last Year at Marienbad?” (Long pause.) “Perhaps.”

Anyway, in June of that year I decided it was time to go into the woods and write a novel, like everybody else who was a graduate student of himself and felt bad about sex and history. So the radio program had to come to an end, and I would give a farewell party for all the gentle folk who had helped to keep us on the air in spite of the Federal Communications Commission. Nothing fancy, a vacuum cleaner bag full of used pretzel nuggets and an aluminum keg of draft beer with the sort of spigot that makes sure no one gets anything in his or her plastic cup but a pile of foam.

That night, during a musical interlude, a puckish member of our cast announced to the listening audience that I was giving a party. He also announced my address, in surprising Oakland.

I got home at quarter to two in the morning to find every freak in the Bay Area clogging my block: poets, grandmothers, moonmen, vampires, motorcycle hoodlets, omophagous lizards. This was our audience, the very bottom of the libidinal pool. They knocked down my wife, pushing through the portals. They abused the piano and the phonograph. They pulled pots and pans from the kitchen cabinets and tried them out as bongo drums.

When, at 4 A.M., the police arrived, I greeted them gratefully with a quote from Yeats: “And there is none so fit to keep a watch and keep unwearied eyes upon those horrible green birds.” The rough beasts were routed. At the curb outside my living-room window, until the bloodshot dawn, a patrol car dozed warily to spare me any more party.

“I am thinking small these days, having been trapped in noisy bigness, having gone to too many parties as though to war, and having given too many parties that resembled bomb scares”

We are in New Hampshire, on a summer Saturday, next to a pond. I should be surrounded by refugees from the local artists’ colony. They are, after all, my guests. I am staring into a pit of coals. Above the coals, on a spit, spins a suckling pig. His ears wear brown-paper envelopes, so as not to singe. His hooves have been elaborately wired to the spooky music of the spirits. Puckish member of our cast announced to the spirits, so that he won’t flop. The paper burns. So do the ears. The wire yanks the hooves off his legs, and he flops. The fat dribbles. Pigskin is for footballs.

I am, in fact, alone. I have been alone since early this morning, when I went to get the freshly slaughtered sucking pig and everybody in the grocery store avoided my eyes as I collected my meat. They had wrapped the pig in wax paper and laid him in a box. On the passenger seat of my Volkswagen, with the windows open, the wind rustled the wax paper and I stole glances at what looked like a beardless, murdered child.

My own children, when I returned to the cottage with the pig, had come running to see. They saw. They went off into the apple trees to work on their Oedipus complex. I went to the pond to light the fire for the pig that nobody will look at and so a couple of dozen creative types, paraphrasts, guilt-junkies, not to mention my own children, are pretending to drown in the pond while I

When you have tables full of tropical colors, try cooling them down with pure white plates.
It's a basket full of summer—potpourri, a mixture of dried herbs, fruit, flowers, and spices. With the biggest bloom of summer roses just a few weeks away, now is the time to learn how to make your own. It's easy to stir up a big spicy bowlful, and Maida Silverman, author of A City Herbal, has created three special recipes, all shown across the page. Part of the fun is drying your own herbs and flowers—any flower will do, even a scentless one will add color. Pick them early in the morning, after the dew has dried, and when they're just freshly opened. Remove flower heads from stems and dry them on flat trays in a cool, dark place, until the petals are crisp. When you've assembled all ingredients for your chosen recipe (see page 70), crush whole herbs and spices with mortar and pestle and mix everything together in a large glass or pottery bowl.

Gently squeeze handfuls of the mixture to release aromas, then spoon into plastic bags, seal, place in paper bags, store for two weeks. Take the bags out, shake gently, pour into baskets and bowls. By now the fragrances will have blended, and you can adjust the intensity of the spices until you find the combination you like best. Experiment—"Just add what you like, it's hard to ruin a potpourri." Each day stir the mixture, leave the cover off bowl or box for a few hours to let the scent float into the room. A well-made potpourri will last months, even years.

Patterns for change

How to update an old apartment with color, fabric, and imagination.

When you use color, don't be afraid of a little adventure. In this apartment, a pastel palette and a few soft-spoken patterns are used traditionally in the living room, but just down the hall, the bedroom is full of bright colors in a big bold pattern. The living room, above and right, began with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Chorlton's collection of friendly furniture. To update it, walls were painted melon, trimmed with a triple-border cornice molding, and a brand-new dining alcove was created by enclosing its L, adding a wall with doors rescued from basement. For a coffee table, three see-through cubes let Tibetan design of Stark carpet show through.
Patterns for change
"We put everything we had in the living room, so we could start from scratch in the bedroom," say Mr. and Mrs. Robert Chorlton, who have always wanted a contemporary living space. "And the pattern makes this room so different from the living room that it sometimes seems like two apartments instead of one." Since they liked the idea of a bed-sitting room, they divided the space in two and built a sleeping loft: When you walk in, you're in the sitting area, above insert, where a lively patterned sheet has been quilted for the sofa and used again for floor pillows. Up four steps on either side of the partition and you're in the new sleeping loft, above, built almost at window level so "we could see the park from the bed." MEAL IN MINUTES

MENU

Chicken in white wine
Rice and peas
Green salad
Strawberries with fresh orange juice

Italian cooks are geniuses at turning out quick meals, so delicious they work equally well for family dinners and for casual parties with friends. The menu and recipes here are from Nika Hazleton's newest cookbook, The Regional Italian Kitchen (Evans).

A meal from scratch in less than an hour: Begin by heating chicken bouillon for the rice. Next, stem berries and toss with fresh orange juice. Wash salad greens and scallions for the chicken. You could also do these ahead, wrap in paper towel, pop in plastic bags. Make salad dressing directly in the salad bowl, or make it ahead and store in the refrigerator. Skin and bone chicken breasts—you will gain a quarter of an hour if you have this done ahead by your butcher! Chop, grate, and assemble all ingredients for the chicken and rice. Dust the chicken pieces with flour. You are now ready to begin both dishes, which cook simultaneously but separately on top of the stove. Start the rice first, then work on both in turns. Your meal will be ready to serve in about 25 minutes.

If this is gazpacho, we must be in Ireland

“Friendly, farm-fresh dishes seem to please people of all ages, and I never mind repeating the same dish on a friend’s next visit,” says Heather Cohane, who leans heavily on her own chickens, eggs, vegetables, and herbs. “Even the white gazpacho is a home-grown product invented during a rare heat wave, and now it fills in as a first course at lunch any fine day. In the milky mixture, the bright vegetable bits glow like jewels.” Jack and Heather Cohane and their three children, Alexander, Candida, and Ondine, spend parcels of the year in London and in Italy, but home for all of them is Holly Park, the white Gothic marvel set in the greenness of the Irish countryside. Here they find that playing host to an assortment of visitors from every part of the world is a large part of their fun. “So much time is spent just talking or walking in the fields or showing off our local wonders that food is of necessity of an honest and untemperamental sort. Adventure in cooking for me is finding or concocting dishes that please and work time after time. Two of our favorite desserts, Mary Moore’s chocolate brandy cake and the orange syllabub, are actually just assembly jobs. But they have cared-for and comforting qualities of their own.” Heather Cohane often plots a weekend of food ideas that can be programmed for indoors or out depending on Irish weather. Jack Cohane, a respected writer, whose latest book is a discourse on the extraterrestrial origins of man, says “I have the traditional cooking role here, and that’s at the outdoor grill where I am fearless at inventing pungent new sauces.” Kedgeree, in the sunny-looking kitchen, is an adventurous alternative to bacon and eggs for brunch or breakfast and can be made in twenty-five minutes from start to finish. “Heather was right to paint the kitchen positive-thinking yellow,” says Jack. “No chance of gloom here even on the grayest days.” The canaries, named Love and Kisses, and their offspring, Kissinger, agree. “The garden produces a sea of lettuces for much of the year and that’s lucky for braised-lettuce lovers such as we. I use whole, young lettuce, blanch them, then cook on top of the stove in a covered casserole with stock, butter, and seasonings for about 25 minutes. If too liquid, reduce before serving.” Recipes, page 196.

How to cook for a famous French chef

By Naomi Barry

The well-run house of the past cherished its Household Book, a collection in the Mistress's own hand of the family's prized dishes and menus plus a few directives for economy and extravagances.

Denise Vergé's Household Book is different. It is really the book of her husband, one of the most inventive chefs of France. He dictated the recipes of the dishes he likes to eat when at home alone with his wife or in the company of one or two good friends, and included his sure-fire instructions on how to realize them...even for a novice at the stove like Denise.

At his own table, Vergé likes to eat simple, natural foods. However, because he has traveled and worked all over the world, the combinations and the flavorings may indicate a nostalgia for the tastes of Africa, the Caribbean, the Far East, or nearby Italy.

Roger Vergé is a handsome sportsman (big-game hunter and deep-sea fisherman) and owner-chef of the Moulin de Mougins, a 3-star restaurant 8 kilometers up in the hills behind Cannes. Certain guests have been known to reserve a year in advance to be sure of a table in the exquisitely flowered Moulin and the chance to feast on such Vergé attractions—based on superb local fish—as Bisquit de Loup aux Asperges Sauvages, Sauce Légère; Daurade Royale du Pays Rôtie au Laurier avec la Fondue d'Orange et de Citron; Terrine de Rascasse au Citrons avec Concombres...

When it comes to food, Californians like theirs the same way they like most things in life—healthful and simple. Native Los Angeleno, Huli Citrin takes Mexican food—"soul food to many Californians who grow up on Mexican fruits, vegetables, and enchiladas"—and gives it a low-calorie slant. Her de- licious party for 12 can be put together in 3 hours, either ahead of time or amid the bustle of a convivial gathering. "Most of the preparation time goes into vegetable chopping and slicing, and it goes faster if you give your knives a light sharpening before you begin." At work on a low-calorie cookbook, California style, Mrs. Citrin has also just launched "Cooking Experience," an approach to teaching emphasizing cooking as a creative process. In this menu, the salsa, a Mexican classic, should be made first to allow the flavors of the vegetables to blend; "but be careful not to touch your eyes until all the chili juice has been washed from your hands. Cilantro, if you can't find it in Indian or Chinese groceries, is worth growing in a pot on the windowsill just to make this sauce." Shrimp and scallops cut into bite-size pieces marinate in lime juice for at least 2 hours before serv- ing. The only cooked dish, the Mexican pancake, can be partially prepared ahead, with only the batter mixed at the last minute, to be poured over the vegetables and baked. "If children are to be present, make up a small casserole omitting the chilies," says Mrs. Citrin, who bakes the pancake until it is puffy and golden and serves it with warmed tortillas—"If they're dry, sprinkle with a little water before warming." Guava paste and Monterey Jack cheese are layered for an easily assembled dessert. Reci- pes, page 194.

Wines to buy for more taste than money

Most wine buffs pay as much attention to finding a good budget bottle as they do to choosing the bottles destined for a spell in the cellar. In these days of zooming prices in everything we eat and drink, the best bargain wines around are a matter of interest to serious wine drinkers and novice sippers alike. At my house, the find of the moment is a Rioja called Rivarey at $2.49 a bottle and a Fetzer Vineyard claret from California at $2.10, both good day-to-day reds. Here are some of the inexpensive wines voted good value by some of the country's top wine experts. They come from America, Italy, Spain, France, and Romania, and of the best buys crop up more than once.

James Beard picks Robert Mondavi's Table Red and Table White which come in both fifths and magnums for $2.49 and $4.59. "I like it because it is an honest wine that I can use for cooking and serving by the glass, Côtes du Rhône from Bob Haas, $2.59 is also an extraordinarily good everyday wine."

"Inglenook Navalle Burgundy at $3.89 a magnum is a good wine to offer by the glass," says Maurice Moore-Batty. "I also like Père Patriarche, which comes in both white and red from the Côte de Beaune." $2.99.

"A good all-purpose wine to keep in the refrigerator—especially good for summer poolside drinking since there is no glass bottle to worry about—is Summit Chablis from Geyser Peak Winery," suggests Harriet Lembeck, who has revisied the new edition of Grossman's Guide to Wines, Beers, and Spirits (Scribner's). "It comes in a box with a vinyl bag inside that collapses as you use the wine, so no air ever gets in to oxidize it and change its flavor." $6.99 per 128-ounce box.

"Paul Masson makes a good Petite Sirah for $3.29," says Terry Robards, an editor and wine writer. "I comparison shop constantly and buy whatever seems to be a bargain at the moment. There are good buys in Muscadets 1975 and 1976 and Pinot Chardonnay Macons 1976."

"I've always had a rule of thumb that you can't go wrong with any wine of Verona or its vicinity," says playwright and wine buff, Samuel Taylor, who stocks his Maine cellar with Bianco Di Verona and Rosso Di Verona from Sherry Lehmann in New York at $2.49 a liter, together with Folinari Soave and Valpolicella. "Other perennially good values are the Côtes du Rhônes, like La Vieille Ferme at $2.99 a bottle, and wines from the Muscadet region—a Cartier blanc de blanc at $1.99 is a good value in comparison with Muscadets, which are hard to find under $3."

"Vary your wine selection to put variety in your life. We switch from Italian to French to American and back, and every so often get a very good bottle out of the cellar for a treat."

For an aperitif Mr. Taylor concocts a petit vin gris for his wife, Suzanne, by adding 4 ounces of a Grenache Rosé to a bottle of Gallo Chablis to produce a beautiful, smoky-colored wine reminiscent of the Alsatian wine of that name, and he quotes one of the defendants in the Bordeaux wine blending trials, "It may be against the law, but it tastes awfully good."

For the Four Seasons restaurant in New York, Paul Kovi picks Beaujolais Villages Jadot and Macon Lugny "Les Charmes", $3.25.

"A popular wine, seen around town at a lot of large parties is a Gouriot Vin de Table," says Michael Aaron, who buys wine as vice president of Sherry Lehmann. "It is a typical, good, honest wine that's fresh and crackling; it is a blend of Macons, Loires, and Burgundies, and at $3.29, it is a fraction of the price of most Macon blancs. It was tracked down by George Lang to serve in his restaurants throughout the world, and is reminiscent of the good wines found at any French inn after the war."

"Romania produces some of the best [cheap wine]," says Nika Hazelton, whose new book, The Regional Italian Kitchen (Evans), is just out. "Premiat, a Romanian Pinot Noir or Cabernet Sauvignon imported by Monsieur Henri for about $1.99 plus tax is super value. Sometimes the Pinot Noir is better, sometimes the Cabernet, but we drink them all the time."

"A Los Hermanos Gamay Beaujolais at $3.89 a magnum makes a good wine to serve chilled as an aperitif or with a casual Sunday dinner," says wine writer Doris Tobias. When serving wine aperitifs, Mrs. Tobias likes to offer a variety.

Offer a variety of glasses from flutes to balloon Burgundies for wine aperitifs.

"The Cabernet is flavorful and nicely balanced with a pleasing finish. The Pinot Noir is fully bodied and gutsier, and at $1.99 a bottle, both are good buys." For fish, chicken, and veal dishes and a pleasant and not too acidic aperitif, Folinari Soave, available in a 67-ounce corked bottle at $3.99 is another good bet.

"Côtes du Rhônes are the best buys around," says writer B. J. Cutler from Washington, D.C. "It's just a matter of getting them young, as they don't last very well. To find one you like, just ask your wine merchant for a 1976 Côtes du Rhône, try it, and if you like it, buy a case. No one brand has national distri-

"My interest is always in little-known wines and wines that come from places trying to break into the American market," says wine writer William Massee. "People should not be afraid to buy wines they don't know anything about, provided that their retailer knows about them. Good wines come from Romania— a Cabernet for $2, Algeria (much better wines than just decent), Yugoslavia, Israel—Pinot Chardonnays and Cabernets. Good at the moment are the Côtes du Rhônes and Riojas. Wente, Christian Brothers, and Martini all make a real effort to make good wines for reasonable prices. Also a newer winery, M. LaMont of Bear Mountain Winery, makes good ones."

If you are setting up housekeeping, buy your equipment from a professional supplier. "It won't necessarily be cheaper, but it is certain to work."

Use pots and pans of the proper size. A roast chicken should be cradled in its caserole. If the pot is too big, there is too much exposed surface and the butter tends to burn.

The green leaves of a salad have more taste than the white.

Rub the surface of a salad bowl or bread crust with the cut end of an unpeeled clove. The fingers are in contact only with the papery coating and are protected from the odor of garlic.

When frying, smash an unpeeled clove of garlic and drop it into the hot oil or butter. Remove it quickly, as soon as it has given off its perfume, because garlic burns easily.

To hollow an orange or a grapefruit, cut an incision through the peel around the middle of the fruit. Using the back of a shoehorn, gently work your way under the peel until the whole fruit has been completely loosened.

- In a saucepan bring the milk and water. Drain and reserve.
- In a large bowl, add yolks and V2 cup sugar and beat together until pale yellow. Add remaining sugar and continue to beat until they become very firm.
- Heat butter and sugar in a heavy pot over low heat, stirring constantly with a wooden spoon, until mixture turns a dark caramel color. - Set the asparagus, heads down, into an empty can that just holds them comfortably. Tie into a bundle and trim off ends so they are of uniform length.
- Lower can into a large amount of boiling water so water level is above the can and cook, uncovered, about 4-5 minutes. They should be al dente.

Finally, here's a big, powerful food processor without a big price tag.

I love to cook — whenever I can spare the time. But those recipes that call for half a day's worth of chopping, pureeing and slicing really used to intimidate me! Now, with my Le Chef, I can do those jobs in seconds. Really! And not just for entertaining, but for everyday dishes too.

What's so special about the Le Chef Food Processor? The motor is surprisingly quiet and powerful. Sunbeam calls it direct drive. I call it incredible. Le Chef easily kneads stiff yeast dough without stalling. And its super capacity container lets me prepare enough for a crowd, all at once. The Touch On/Off pulse control makes for instantly regulated action, so I'm less likely to over-process foods by mistake. The Le Chef Food Processor comes with 4 processing blades and discs, for handling each job just right. The multi-purpose blade for minced onions or homemade hamburger, the shredding disc for cheddar cheese or cole slaw. The slicing disc turns out perfect, even slices of vegetables or sausage. I use the mixing blade for cake batter and desserts.

There's even a handy spatula and a complete 64-page recipe book included.

Le Chef, the amazing, indispensable food processor for everything from apple pancakes to zucchini. From my favorite appliance company. Who else but Sunbeam.

In a large bowl place flour, salt and water and make a paste. Wrap paste around chicken, sealing it completely. Keep hands wet while molding paste on chicken.

Bake for 1 1/4 hours in a preheated 475° oven on a cookie sheet.

Place chicken on a large platter and break open with handle of a large knife or the back of a large, heavy spoon. (Chicken can wait for 10 minutes outside of oven before serving.)

Don't be alarmed if crust becomes blackened, since it is to be discarded. Serves 4-6.

Presenting the GE toaster that broils and bakes.

Versatility is what makes the GE Toast 'N Broil Toast-R-Oven toaster so great.

It's a great broiler.

This GE toaster has a separate broil setting that lets you broil steaks, hamburgers and hot dogs. You can position the broil pan high or low to suit your needs. Its high walls help protect the interior from spatters... and the pan pops right into the dishwasher for easy cleaning.

It's a great oven.

The GE Toast-R-Oven handles dozens of small cooking jobs you'd hate to heat up your big oven for.

Like making hot snacks, warming leftovers, baking casseroles, cooking frozen dinners and appetizers. And used together with your big oven, it lets you cook different dishes at different temperatures. Its thermostat controls the temperature from 200° to 500° F.

It's an automatic toaster.

This toaster replaces old-fashioned vertical toasters. It toasts up to 1 slice of regular bread, both sides at once, then shuts off and rings a bell, automatically. It lets you top-brown or toast odd-size breads and rolls, corn muffins or English muffins.

GE gives you broil and non-broil models.

The model featured here is the T26. Other broil models are the T114 and (two-slice) T23. The T104 and (two-slice) T93B are GE's non-broil models.

Whichever model you choose, once you own a Toast-R-Oven toaster from GE, you'll wonder how you ever managed without it.

Other items made by General Electric use Du Pont Teflon® non-stick coatings.

When you sell millions of microwave ovens around the world, you know what people want in a microwave oven.

Our parent company has sold over 2.5 million microwave ovens. And everything we learned from them went into the design of Panasonic's microwave oven, the NE-7900. That's why we think it has everything you could want in a microwave oven:

Feather-Touch Control. Easy to use. Just a touch of a finger, and this control panel lets you set power, time and temperature controls. It sets oven from defrost to cook...or from cook to warm...or from one power to another...all automatically.

Variable Power Levels. From 70 to 700 watts. Which means you select the same kind of setting you're used to in conventional ovens.

Digital Readout. It's a digital clock that turns into a timer when you set the controls. If you cook by temperature...it tells you the temperature.

Food Temperature Probe. Cook automatically by temperature just by inserting our stainless steel probe into meats, vegetables, casseroles...even liquids.

Large Capacity. The 7900 has a 1.25 cu. ft. capacity. Which means room for a 22-lb. turkey or a 23-lb. ham—or a lot of whatever you want to cook.

5-Year Limited Warranty. Compare our warranty to our competitors'. We spell it out so you can.

Different Models, Sizes and Styles. All made by our parent company. And all sold to people who like good food all over the world. So see the Panasonic microwave ovens. And find out why they're made by one of the largest manufacturers of microwave ovens in the world.

When you look for a fine white wine, here’s what to look for.

White wine is most delicate. And most difficult to make. So first, look for a dedicated and knowledgeable winery. One with years of experience. And one that believes in making the finest traditional wines.

To judge a fine white wine—Pinot Chardonnay, for example—start by checking its color. It should be clear and bright with a light straw to pale gold tint. Its fragrance should be fresh and assertive. And its taste—full, crisp and complex.

Above all, remember that a fine Pinot Chardonnay wine always begins with the finest Pinot Chardonnay grapes. So look for a wine produced in one of the world’s great wine growing regions—such as Almadén’s California vineyards.

Here we care for our grapes as if they were our children. And we think you will taste this tradition of quality in all our wines.

To learn more about wine, send a postcard for a free copy of "The grapes and wines of Almadén" to: Almadén, P. O. Box 24249 HG, San Jose, CA 95154.
I suppose it could have been hamburger and potato chips, but a blend of two rices with different herbs and seasonings made it a meal.

What a success.

Strawberry honey

INGREDIENTS
- 3-4 quarts fully ripe strawberries
- 1/4 cup plus 2 tablespoons lemon juice, freshly squeezed
- 4 1/2 pounds sugar
- 1 full bottle Certo

METHOD
- Crush the berries, or pop them in food processor for a quick off/on turn. Sieve or strain to remove seeds and measure. You must have just under 6 cups. Add the lemon juice—1 tablespoon juice to each cup strawberry pulp to make fruit and lemon equal 6 cups.
- Put fruit mixture in a large nonaluminum pot, add the sugar, and bring to a boil over high heat. Boil hard 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and stir in Certo. Skim foam off top, pour into jelly jars, and seal with paraffin right away. Do it in 2 layers—1 thin coat, let harden. Lay piece of string across jar so it’s touching first coat. Add second coat and roll glass at a tilt to get a good seal. The string makes it easier to lift off the paraffin seal. Makes about 12-18 jelly jars.

Fresh mint jelly

- 2 1/4 cups water or apple juice

ternal values. A value is something that satisfies us. What interests us is a value and what we value we are likely to need. And one of our needs is to make ourselves as comfortable in the world as we possibly can. The reason so many of us go to live in a warm climate is to make ourselves physically comfortable. Then we sometimes find ourselves spiritually uncomfortable because their needs or values are not satisfied.

It’s interesting to see how many people are doing more and more to enlarge or remodel their houses. The average American spends a lot of time doing this, in this own-it-yourself age. Men, especially, derive pleasure in doing a house over themselves. I’ve seen some very elaborate workshops tat almost look like factories because of the complicated tools. It’s taken for granted that women take pride in their houses, but ten also take great pride in improving their houses. And I know a great many intellectual men who rejoice in this. It’s a better form of relaxation for them than playing oil or tennis. Don’t forget children who, since they are capable of getting around, enjoy doing the work their fathers are doing and as they grow older, boys particularly, assist their fathers in a very real way and thereby contribute to the bonding that takes place between fathers and sons.

A husband and wife involved together in the making of a house come much closer together. And it’s not a new thing, though recent history perhaps there’s been more of a tendency to move on rather than to stay, but there seems to be a trend now to stay put when possible. What is new is that women are now freer to do things in the house that were normally considered masculine activities and men are freer to do the things that were considered feminine. The significance of having both men and women active in their houses is that they are involved together socially rather than going off from one another in isolated directions. What they’re doing affords an important means of social interaction which is the only way we can really be in touch with other people. That’s the source of happiness and satisfaction that we get from improving our houses. We are certainly happier when we have an extra room that we wanted and needed, but the participation required to achieve the new room is what really makes us happy.

My wife and I have had so many opportunities to see this happen. To this day when we drive past an old farm which is falling to pieces, we say “Well there’s a house for us. We should buy it and fix it up.” We have done that to large houses and small houses. Our present house, which I bought without even coming inside because of some bookshelves that I saw through the window, has small rooms which we have come to prefer because there is the feeling that small rooms fondle you. It’s what the Germans mean by Gemütlich. In some other houses we literally had to hack our way to the front door with a machete. We always took houses that we thought attractive in no matter what state of demolition we found them and tried to put them together again without doing violence either to the original or the existing structure. We made a game of having things cost as little as possible. I used a minimum of tools: a saw, hammer, nails. We got emotionally involved in all our houses and didn’t want to leave them as we had to do from time to time when I went to another university. It is very rewarding to work on a house and see the results. It can also be frustrating. But the process of being involved makes everything worthwhile. And it is certainly true that a house that has been made over, added onto, or adapted is more unique than any all-new house might be. Houses are always more original as they are changed and adapted.

But you can carry things too far. There is a side of the need for change or newness that is understandable. Sometimes we do need a change of scene. So we move or change the curtains even though they weren’t worn out. That’s harmless. But when you are consistently compelled to make lots of changes in your house you should remember that having a wonderful house that has everything in it, is no substitute for a house with the right atmosphere. All human beings are born to be loved and to love; it is our central purpose and need in life. In 1599, George Chapman, a friend of Shakespeare’s, wrote a play All Fools in which a character is made to say: “I tell thee love is nature’s second sun causing a spring of virtues where it shines.” That line is a most beautiful exposition of what love is. ■

Now you can have the most stylish new pattern. Woodland.
It’s Corelle livingware in white with earth-brown tracery. It has the translucence and ring of china, yet it can take all the abuse of everyday use. Corelle livingware is made to go in microwave, too. And it coordinates perfectly with the Woodland Pyrex ware on the opposite page.

It's easy to get back "Natural" Regularity in 2 to 5 days with this gentle "stool softener."

Even people who've relied on laxatives for years get back "natural" regularity in 2 to 5 days. Thousands of doctors are recommending the effective stool softener (dioctyl sodium sulfosuccinate) in Regutol Tablets.

Regutol is different from irritant laxatives. It's a "stool softener." It helps your colon's natural moisture soften hard, dry waste to prevent constipation and maintain regularity. much as possible, we knew it could work. I provide the basic business know-how, Sandi and Gary the creative talent.

"And we're also planning ahead. My brother Christopher, an architect, and his wife already live on Nantucket, and Sandi's sister Pamela recently married a lawyer and they are moving to Nantucket from New York City. When we retire to the island some day we want an established business, which can keep us involved. And from my retailing experience I feel strongly that there is an increased awareness of home furnishings, what you live with, what you have around you."

Raised in an 1800 house in Belchertown, Mass., and educated as a history major at Williams College, Hud Holland went to work after graduation for J.L. Hudson in Detroit, "Sandi and I were married in 1963, and I brought her from Long Island to Michigan. The house we moved into was the only one we found resembling a New England house. We always had Nantucket in mind," he says. "We later bought a summer cottage, 'Willow Harp,' at Sconset on Nantucket and lived there five years before moving into town. It was a big step, but we've never regretted it."

Their present house in town, a fine Nantucket design with the rooms around a central fireplace, has the shop on the first floor, and over the shop the Hollands live with their two sons, Hud, 11, and John, 8. All the rooms have a flow. And occasionally the customers flow, too. Sometimes into the master bedroom. "They usually leave immediately," laughs Sandi Holland, "or I give them a tour."

"What we really have, I guess, is a public house with a private life," says Sandi. "I thought about this when we looked at houses. I knew we would want to stretch ourselves once in awhile. We have adequate living space, but when there are special occasions and we want to reach wider, there is the shop. We had a lovely dinner party for my parents there. Great big Flemish bouquets on the pine table, local lobsters. Very convenient, as there is a small first-floor kitchen. During shop time we use this kitchen to display brass and copper. And our guest room is on the first floor too. Having the beds there is a wonderful way to show our collection of quilts."

Sandi Holland and the boys come to Nantucket in early June and stay as long as possible. Hud Holland commutes and takes his holiday there. And all through the year, there are long weekends on island. Gray Knight lives on island year-round and runs the shop, except for six winter weeks of antique buying in Britain.

"It's a breath of fresh air for me, coming to Nantucket," says 33-year-old Sandi Holland. "Married so young—was just 19—I reached a point where I was tired of volunteer work. I still do some, but I wanted something else, something to get my creative juices going. I constantly enjoy this shop. I work three or four days a week, but still have time to take the boys to the beach, be with friends. I'm always meeting new people learning. It's a different kind of challenge for Hud. He has to scale down his thinking to a different size-level."

"Yes, the concept of a small shop quite a change for me," adds Hud Holland, who is 38. "I enjoy the dialogues with designers like Billy Baldwin, students who come in to see what we do architecturally, and some very knowledgeable customers. They are teaching us so much. What I had learned before was from a dealer in Michigan and growing up with antiques."

"Living over the shop is terrific," says emphatically. "You develop identity and feeling for the shop and clients that you just don't get by locking the door and walking out at the end of the day. It helps you keep your pulse on the business. I'm proud of it, not embarrassed. More people should do it if they can. It's certainly more economical, a lot simpler." Son Hud likes the range, too. "It's nice," he says. "Normally my Dad has to go downtown, but on Nantucket he just goes down stairs."

"And we still have our privacy," continues Mr. Holland. "We limit the shop hours, from 10 to 5, and as we have several entrances, you can go direct to the house or the shop as you wish. When I'm there, I sell, polish furniture, do paper work, repair broken door hinges. It has given us all new insights. We're closer as a family, the boys seem to be more aware, more sensitive to other people."

"We didn't do anything structural to the house. We didn't change, add, or subtract a wall. We did open up all the fireplaces, and spent most of the money stripping down beams, paneling, floors. John Elwell, a craftsman on island, did the work, my brother designed our kitchen, and the garden, design with the help of Russell Pope, is Sandi's domain. We finally bought the house in October, 1974, and it took us nine months to open in July, 1975."

Juggling lifestyles seems to agree thoroughly with the Hollands. "I think we learn something from each, to give to the other," says Sandi Holland. "It's more demanding, has more requirements for all of us. Nantucket is far easier, more relaxed pace. I can walking every day to Main Street to open farm trucks, so crowded with colorful flowers and vegetables that they look like mosaics, and in the early evening wandering around looking at the houses. It's endless pleasure, there are many of them."

drink hard cider and spin my spit, and, on the whole, would prefer to be in South Texas. They will, of course, devour the pig, and paddle the canoe, and frighten the frogs. But they won't talk to me, because I have murdered the pig. They will, instead, write poems about how bad they feel about pigs and history. I quote Yeats: "Magical unicorns bear ladies on their backs." Or: "Nothing but grip of claw, and the eye's complacency, / The innumerable clinging wings that have put out the moon." They glide on ego; their oar is an affront.

I would have been forgiven for tacos.

Once upon a time I went to a Happy-Birthday-Shakespeare party. We were obliged to come costumed as one of the characters in one of the plays. I wore leaves of lettuce, fixed to my sleeve with a rubber band. "I am a Caesar salad," I explained, "the noblest romaine of them all." I was, as usual, dismayed.

In Southern California, they put gin in a spit bucket—having whispered vermouth at it so as not to bruise—and leave it in the deep freeze. Thus one will fall upon his Martini like a sword, and, standing knee-deep in oleander bushes, watching patties of ground meat being charred on a tripodally supported steel pyx, in a colored apron sciven with hortatory insignia, muttering around the burning bowl an anamnesis unintelligible to anyone but pigs and mariachi bands, one will fail to understand any language talked at one, will menace the freeways afterwards, and might as well have been licking a lollipop of ethyl alcohol. "Yet would be now, could I but have my wish," said Yeats, "Colder and dumber and dearer than a fish."

I live now in Manhattan. This is the way we tend to party: One is called, and goes at the appointed hour, expecting an unlacing of the mind among loose friends. Off with the boots of duty! Let us talk small, gnaw of the mind among loose friends. Off with chicken, and risk a giggle. One arrives, to be greeted by a servant rented for the evening or bionic gardening.

There are too many celebrities and enough sycophants. Such a discrepancy be hard on the husbands and wives of the illuminati. Somebody has to grovel a bit. Somebody has to be shored up, and then the others want to be shored up so that oak my huddle before they fell. This is more than serious. This is power, baby. This is the sort of party which you have to decide whether you are important enough to wait for the other fellows to say hello to you, or whether you have to say hello to the other fellow first. What a trial.

What a trial, too, to be one of those intimidating personalities, to be expected always to perform: a Norman Mailer, an inflation of cunning, a blimp of ego, extended, goitered, on call—to have to invent yourself while they're eating anchovies. The beast of the wilderness, bird of the air, thebard. "Must I endure your amorous cries?" Swollen, you bruise easily. You are a machine for producing punch lines. Then no wisdom; there are only mariachi bars.

Listen: We wage now guerrilla war against the conventions of sociability. You strike by telephone. Six friends, at the most, are summoned to our cave on the bash no principle other than a suspicion that would enjoy their company. One friend will, of course, do nicely. Let us loll in anec-

Carol's illness prevented her from climbing these stairs like she used to. She could move to a one-story house, but she loves this house. A Cheney Wecolator solved Carol's problem by letting her ride from floor to floor quickly and comfortably. As the first stairway elevator to be UL listed, it's virtually maintenance-free, and can be installed in just a matter of hours. HOTEL/ROOMS

Frighten off any intruder. Set Porta-D-Tect anywhere you want protection for yourself or prized possessions: audio equipment, jewelry, valuable documents.

Stands guard until you disarm the system like that of larger, more costly systems into a self-contained unit the size of a postage stamp. No installation. Just position unit facing a door, windows, even in a desk drawer or purse and activate. Ultra-sonic scanning signal detects any movement in the guarded area, and within seconds sets off an ear shattering warning alarm that makes intruder flee. Shuts off 2 to 3 minutes after prowler leaves, reacts automatically.

Thoughts for the Merry Month

Proper tree surgery, how to grow vegetable spaghetti, chives as flowers, and book that tells you how to listen to plants.

Space for plants

One of the first lessons a beginning gardener learns is that plants need space to develop properly. Roots need underground room to gather water and nutrients, leaves and branches need above-ground room for the air and sunlight they need. All of this has been graphically illustrated in a photograph recently published by the American Forest Institute. The picture shows a cross-section of a 176-year-old hemlock trunk. The tree’s growth rings make it very clear that in the last 20 years of its life the tree grew almost twice as much as it had during the first 156 years. The reason for this is that trees surrounding this one were cut when it had reached the age of 156. Part of a managed woodlot, it was too small to be harvested when trees around it were being cut. This dramatic illustration of the truth of an old gardening principle also shows the awareness of our modern foresters. Trees are recognized as our most important renewable resource. Instead of being “mined” and left as wasteland, forests are managed according to sound agricultural principles. Cut-over areas are replanted and the seedlings thinned as they grow, so the trees have the best possible chance of growing into marketable timber. The American Forest Institute has been set up by the lumber industry to develop ever-improving ways to keep our timberlands productive. A free brochure describing its work is available from the Institute headquarters, P.O. Box 873, Springfield, Va. 22150.

Starchless spaghetti

Vegetable spaghetti, like that grown in Mr. and Mrs. Arthur D. Pinkham J. (page 142) has been around a long time, but has only recently begun to win the popularity it deserves. Avoiders of starch have little to fear from the vegetable, which is actually a squash, with all the squash’s nutritive values. The name comes from the fact that the flesh separates into spaghetti-like strands when it is cooked, and that’s as far as the resemblance goes. Like all of its kind,

Tina has never had a Teddy Bear.

A mother’s love. A doll to cuddle. Tina knows nothing of these things. But she does know fear, rejection, and hunger.

For just $15 a month, you can help save a child like Tina. Through our “adoption” program you can help provide a child with a better diet, clothes, medical attention, school. And even a toy or two. But don’t wait. There are so many. And somewhere, right now, a child is dying from starvation and neglect.

The chimney effect in design

An important component of a natural ventilation system is the chimney effect, which makes use of warm air rising. Even in an older, two-story house in a densely built neighborhood, you can encourage air to enter the basement (which will cool it) or the first floor on the shady side (west in the morning) and flow upstairs and out through the attic.

Keep all the windows toward the sun and those on the second floor closed. By keeping the curtains closed, you are preventing air flow upstairs and out through the attic. Louvers in the triangular gable ends need cross-ventilation to work and are best oriented to summer windows.

Based on the Venturi Effect, it is better to have the large opening to the west or southwest, with the smaller one on the opposite side. If you use auxiliary fans which makes use of warm air rising, you can encourage air to enter the basement (which will cool it) or the first floor on the shady side (west in the morning) and flow upstairs and out through the attic.

The great lyre pendulum disk is suspended from alternating bars of chrome and brass. The moving pendulum—and the gleaming brass weights—are reflected in a mirror. All, including the ivory porcelain dial with its brass bezel, are enclosed in glass.

Contrast is provided by the rich ebony case and polished chrome door frame. The cable wound eight-day movement strikes on the half hour and counts on the hour.

Mint condition

Mint is one of America's favorite flavors, from jelly to chewing gum to juleps. But there's mint, and then there's mint: peppermint, orange mint, apple mint, spearmint, pennyroyal, and Corsican mint, the snappiest of the bunch. Not the most ornamental plant, with its unkempt creeping growth, mint is nonetheless something that should be in everyone's windowsill herb garden. Once you've tasted it, you won't be happy without it. And you'll be constantly finding new dishes in which to stick a sprig or two. A few leaves tossed in with peas, for instance, will add a sprightly flavor you won't know how you ever lived without.

Which mints to grow? Apple mint (Mentha suaveolens) has a sweeter aroma than the others, even if it's rather indefinite about the apple half. The same cannot be said for orange (M. citrata), which is distinctly citrus in its fragrance. Peppermint (M. x piperita) and spearmint (M. spicata) you're surely familiar with. But if you're looking for really minty mint, try Corsican mint (M. requienii.)

Caring for potted mints is easy if you remember to provide two things: a rich soil and plenty of water. Mints grow naturally in moist ground, so it's almost impossible to overwater them. As to soil, any rich potting soil high in organic matter will do. So will almost any fertilizer, though I find that my plants prefer a periodic dose of deodorized fish emulsion.

Congress saves the SHIP

Good news for those interested in preserving older houses in older neighborhoods: The Carter administration has broadened the SHIP/312 program—Small Homeowners Improvement Program—to include "areas of concentrated community activity" such as the rehabilitation of declining neighborhoods. Congress has appropriated a total of $80 million for fiscal 1978 with $67 million designated for homes. Successful applicants, who must live in and own their own home, can borrow rehabilitation money up to $27,000 per living unit, not to exceed four apartments or a store and apartments at a once-in-a-lifetime rate of 3 percent! If monthly charges exceed 20 percent of the owner's income, the program permits refinancing of the existing mortgage. Monthly carrying charges for a 20-year, one-unit loan of $27,000 are about $150, $300 for a 2-unit, $54,000 loan. The key phrase is "areas of concentrated community development activity." You'll have a better chance if you can get other homeowners in the neighborhood to participate, too. Contact your city housing department or the regional office of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. WRIGHT JOHNSON

A question of care

You can learn how to preserve and restore valuable old fabrics—interesting to anyone involved in historical restoration or setting up a costume exhibit—from Philippa Lawrence, a Churchill Fellow of 1977 and a specialist in the care and handling of precious fabrics. Miss Lawrence is Director of the Textile Conservation Rooms at Knole, the stately home in Kent, England, once the family seat of the Sackvilles, built in 1603. She has 140 volunteers in her workshop where she maintains hangings, carpets, and other fabrics in the house. Safety news

When you buy a microwave oven, it’s a good idea right then and there to make arrangements for a representative of the manufacturer to check it after the oven has been installed. Thereafter, a yearly checkup for microwave oven leakage around the insulating door will keep you up-to-date on the oven’s safety. If, however, you can’t easily get a professional to evaluate your oven, here’s help. "Guard-Rod" is a compact, handheld device you can use at home to check radiation insulation. The Bureau of Radiological Health, which regulates the permissible amount of leakage for microwave ovens, allows a rate of 5 milliwatts per square centimeter when the oven is being used. The rod will be able to tell you if your oven is registering more or less. The rod costs $19.95. Write Tanray Associates, Box 99, Elberon, N.J. 07740.

The shape of 20/20

According to the National Eye Research Foundation, more than 100 million Americans wear glasses or contact lenses. Still in its experimental stages, "orthokeratology" may help eliminate the dependency on glasses or lenses for many people. It involves changing the cornea shape, the watch-like crystal that protects the iris. The cornea is reshaped with specially designed contact lenses over 1 to 2 years.

Dr. Donald H. Harris, chairman of the Ortho-K section of the National Eye Research Foundation describes the treatment as "changing the eye in much the same way as an orthodontist realigns teeth." The most commonly treated condition is nearsightedness. Changing cornea curvature lets light enter it at a new, different angle, which helps improve vision. Dr. Thomas Tredici, Chief of Ophthalmology at the U.S.A.F. School of Aerospace Medicine in San Antonio has been involved in research to determine the potential of Ortho-K. "The orthokeratology fitting procedures deserve continuing scientific evaluation so as to better predict in which cases it will be worth the time and expense of the treatment." Write the National Eye Research Foundation, 18 S. Michigan, Chicago, Ill. 60603.

...and the Aegean, too!

Hollyhocks grow wild and the watermelon is sweet. This is Crete in July. Ours was a family vacation. Everyone, we were told, stays at The Minos Beach, but we couldn’t get in. This is what we found —Ikaros Village in Malia, an hour’s drive east from the port of Heraklion. Built recently as an old Cretan village, the houses are of stone in shapes of squares and turrets, sitting in wreathes of flowers, waist-high in daisies and carnations. And the second floor, our son said, “was right next to the sunset.” The native woven fabrics and rugs are bright and gay, the furniture similar to Shaker architecture; royal rooms painted a deep red, pottery jars tall enough to stand in to the south, a narrow road winds around Mount Lasithi and descends to the Plateau of Lasithi, where hundred of windmills harness the wind for irrigation. Drive east to Aghios Nikolaos for superb seafood and visit the cottage complex of Minos Beach. Then drive west to Agonia, the weaving center. Rent Ikaros Village in Malia, Crete, Greece.

Bedside accessories can be the most luxurious—a lacquer tray, a tummytele, a sachet tucked into a lace-eyelet pillow. Here's a simple, practical "vest pocket" for your bed to hold all the niceties as well as necessities.

Material: 1/3 of a yard of a washable fabric 45 inches wide. Double the amount you'd like your pouch quilted.

Instructions: Cut three pieces of fabric, 15 by 23 inches; 15 by 11 inches; 15 by 7 inches. Using seam binding, bind the 15-inch length of each of the two smaller pieces. Place the two unbound 15-inch edges together, right sides up and pin. To form pocket, starting at the raw edge of the top piece of fabric, two rows of stitching, one inch from one side, the other 8 inches from the same side. Place these two pieces, sewn together, on top of the third piece of fabric, all raw sides facing up and bound around the edges. Bind all way around with binding. This design and instructions are by Frances Phillips, assistant fabrics editor, House & Garden. She suggests that you tuck the pocket between the mattress and box spring at the end of your bed, about a foot's weight of the mattress will keep it secure.

"Cats require more protein than dogs," says Dr. Quinton Rogers, Professor of Physiological Chemistry at the University of California, Davis. "We're studying amino acid requirements to try to find out why. It is essential that your cat gets a high protein diet."

"There are two assurances to look for on a cat food label," says Dr. Mark L. Morris Jr., president of Theracon, an animal-diet-research consultant firm in Topeka, Kans. "One is a claim on the label that says 'complete and balanced,' 'meets or exceeds the nutrient requirements as stated by the National Research Council of the National Academy of Science,' or 'nutritionally adequate.' Another is that the product has been tested according to the standard of the AAFCO, an organization of feed control experts from the fifty states."

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

ANTQuES

BY LOUISE ADE BOGER

Eastlake style chair

We are told our rocker is an Eastlake. Can you clarify this for us? Who was Eastlake? N.H.S.—Havertown, Pa.

Your platform rocking chair, dating around 1880, is in the Eastlake style, which derives its name from Charles Locke Eastlake, English architect, artist, and author, whose book, Hints on Household Taste in Furniture, Upholstery and Other Details (1868) had considerable success in America. A so-called Eastlake style appeared, which the author disowned in his preface to the fourth edition. “I find American tradesmen continually advertising what they are pleased to call ‘Eastlake’ furniture, with the production of which I have had nothing to do, and for the taste of which I should be very sorry to be considered responsible.”

American butter dish

Can you tell me who made my butter dish and whether it is very old? F.C.C.—Raleigh, N.C.

The Victor Silver Company mark was used on a less expensive line by the International Silver Company on its Derby Silver Plate Company division of Derby, Conn. This trademark was first used in 1904, discontinued perhaps about 1925.

Ku ceremonial cup

These vessels were bought in China in the early 1900s. Can you tell me anything about them? T.L.—Vashon, Wash.

Your bronze vessels are late 19th-century reproductions. The casting is markedly inferior to that of the original vessels dating from the Shang Dynasty (c. 1500-1200 B.C.). The form is a Ku ceremonial cup; the original ones were actually round rather than square and are often described as “beaker” shaped.

Speaking Dog bank

Do you know who made my coin bank? When the girl deposits the coin, which is placed on a plate in her hand, the dog wags its tail and opens his mouth as if speaking.” L.A.—Seattle, Wash.

This mechanical bank, patented July 14, 1885, was designed by Peter Adams Jr. and Charles G. Shepard and manufactured by the Shepard Co. of Buffalo, N.Y. In 1892, Shepard sold its line of banks to J. & E. Stevens of Cromwell, Conn., who started to manufacture this model sometime in the same year. Most collectors think this was one of a limited number of banks appealing to girls. Others are Girl Skipping Rope, Girl in Victorian Chair, and probably Red Riding Hood.

BE CHOOSEY
I understand my early 18th-century Dutch Delft dish is faience. What is the difference between faience and majolica? M.G.— Chestnut Hill, Pa.

Both faience and majolica are tin-glazed pottery—characterized by the use of a lead-glaze made opaque and white by the addition of ashes of tin. Tin-glazed pottery is confusingly known by different names in various countries—majolica in Italy, faience in France, etc.—but is essentially the same everywhere. After an article was shaped, it was fired without glaze and dipped in the tin glaze. It was then ready for the painter; the glaze and painted decoration were fired at the same time, thus colors were limited to those which would stand the relatively high temperature of the glaze-firing—cobalts for blue, manganese for purple, copper for green, antimony for yellow, and iron for brick red.

Can you tell me the name of the pattern of my glass bowl and how old the bowl might be? C.N.—W. Canaan, N.H.

The name of the pattern of your covered glass bowl is Ashburton, one of the earliest American patterns of pressed glass tablewares. It was introduced in the early 1840s, and its massive oval and arch motifs exerted great appeal. Ashburton and other early patterns are currently called Colonial by collectors. Your bowl, in the Colonial Revival mode, was probably made in the Edwardian era, 1901-1910.

I have an old clock marked John Fessler. Who was he and can you tell me about how old the clock is? S.W.—St. Michaels, Md.

John Fessler Sr. (1757-1820), clock and watchmaker working at Frederick, Md. about 1785-1820, is said to have been a native of Switzerland and to have settled at Lancaster, Pa., before the Revolution. His son of the same name was a clock and watchmaker working at Frederick at the opening of the 19th century and continued his father's business. (The name John Fessler & Son appears on an early 19th-century tall case clock.) Your clock dates about 1790-1800. It is unusual for an American clock to have so much "going on"—for example, so many hands—a second hand, sweep hand, and calendar hand, plus the phases of the moon in the arched portion of the dial.

Your thistle cup was a favor at a gala held on December 9, 1907, at the Engineers' Club in honor of Andrew Carnegie, whose generous gift made possible the new and present clubhouse in New York City, opened to members on April 25, 1907. The thistle is the national flower of Scotland.

HOW TO STRETCH YOUR VACATION DOLLARS

Take advantage of the airlines price war. Here's a rundown of the bargain fares this summer

BY PAUL GROSS

If ever there was a time to take off to an unknown, exotic place for a vacation, it is now. Thanks to the air-fare war between the airlines, getting there is not only half the fun but also half the price it used to cost. What's more, despite the dollar weakness in some countries, there are other places where it is still strong. So, play the world as it turns. Head to a new place that you might not have thought of before.

For example, our greenbacks still go a long way in Canada, Mexico, Central America, and almost all of South America. (Rio de Janeiro, and Caracas, Venezuela are somewhat more expensive than other parts of South America.) If you're intent on a European visit, you'll find that your money will go the farthest in Portugal, Spain, England, and Scottland.

If you are considering a trip to the Orient or the Pacific, investigate Australia. You'll find that your money will go the farthest in Fiji. Your money will still go a long way in Asia, say New York, Chicago, Miami, Atlanta, Dallas, or Los Angeles, with direct flights abroad, look for the cheapest way to get to your departure point. Super Savers, which are available on most routes between the East and West Coast, offer as much as a 45 percent discount from the regular round-trip fare. You have to make your reservations and purchase your tickets at least 30 days before departing. You also have to return between 7 and 45 days after departing. Note, however, that only a limited number of seats are set aside for Super Saver fares. This limitation on seat availability also applies to similar air-fare deals such as the Super Coach fare.

Super Coach, which are available from the Midwest to the East and West Coasts, are up to 30 percent cheaper than the regular fare. Note however that this fare is only available on nonstop flights between select cities. There are no advance reservation and purchase requirements. Buying a round-trip isn't necessary, either.

Simple Saver, offered by most airlines that aren't allowed to fly nonstop between certain cities, are 30 percent less expensive than what other airlines would charge you for a nonstop flight between those cities. There are no reservation, purchase, or round-trip requirements.

Unlimited Travel fares let you fly to anywhere on an airline's system and back for a flat $323. As you might expect, there are some restrictions. You have to go with another adult or two children, buy tickets at least 14 days in advance, and return within 7 and 21 days after departing. Note also that you have to make at least 3 stopovers. Despite the restrictions, it's still an incredible deal, because you could fly from, say, a city in the Northeast to an island in the Caribbean, on to Florida, then to Southern California or even Mexico, on to Washington state and then home again—providing the airline served all those places.

Peanuts, available on routes in the South and Midwest, offer as much as a 20 percent discount from regular fares. The only restriction is that you must return within 30 days.

On the international legs of your trip, you'll probably want to take advantage of one of the new fares that have been designed to be competitive with charter packages. Here's a rundown:

1. A 14-to-21-Day Excursion fare is some 10 to 20 percent cheaper than a regular economy fare to Europe. The only requirements are that you buy a round-trip ticket and return 14 to 21 days after departing.

2. A 22-to-45-Day Excursion fare will give you as much as a 30 percent discount from an economy fare to Europe. You must buy a round-trip ticket and return between 22 and 45 days after you start your trip.

3. A 14-to-28-Day Excursion fare is some 15 to 20 percent cheaper than an economy fare to South America. You must return between 14 and 28 days after departing.

4. A 29-to-45-Day Excursion fare is some 25 to 30 percent lower than a regular economy fare to South America. You have to return between 29 and 45 days.

after leaving.

If you're thinking of vacationing in Canada, consider Air Canada's Super Budget fare, which offers a discount of as much as 42 percent from the regular fare. The only restriction is that you buy your ticket 30 days in advance.

While a number of airlines have proposed discount fares to the Far East, many of them have not been approved by the governments involved. Hence you would be well-advised to ask your travel agent for advice. That's a wise idea regardless of where you want to fly. The airlines are literally waging a fare war and fares can change overnight.

Charters are probably the cheapest way to vacation abroad. However, many sophisticated travelers tend to shun charters because of all the strings that are attached to the low cost. For one thing, you have to make your itinerary fit that of the charter. Departures are often delayed and, in fact, the trip itself could be cancelled if enough seats aren't sold. With some charters, you have to book well in advance. And if you have to change your travel plans, only a portion of your ticket may be refunded—unless you have a valid medical excuse.

Advance Booking Charters are the newest and simplest deals around. Anyone can take them; you don't have to belong to a group. You need pay only 15 days in advance. You are restricted, however, in terms of charters available.

Travel Group Charters are slightly more complicated. You have to buy your ticket 60 days in advance and cannot return before 7 days if you travel within the U.S., 10 days if you go abroad. If you cancel out, you'll have to pay a penalty. How much depends on how late you cancel out. However, if you can get someone else to take your place, the penalty may amount to only $50 or so.

Do note that you and the other charter passengers may have to pick up some of the cost of seats left vacant by people who cancel out. The cost of your ticket cannot rise by more than 20 percent of what you were charged originally.

One Stop Charters include ground arrangements. How much you'll have to pay depends on the destination and the type of ground arrangements you choose. You would be wise to get the travel agent to specify which hotel you'll be staying at. Then look up the hotel in one of the better travel guides to make sure it's a place you will be comfortable with. You must buy your ticket at least 15 days in advance if it's a domestic charter, 30 days if you're going abroad. There's a 4-day minimum stay required for domestic charters, 7 days for foreign.

Inclusive Tour Charters are like One Stop Charters except that you must spend at least one night in three different cities if it's a domestic charter, three different countries if it's international.

Your BEST LOOK and how to find it

Who says "beauty is skin deep?" Pablo Manzoni talks about the inner sources and the private pleasures of making yourself look great. By Paula Rice Jackson Finding the look that's wholly, naturally you," says Pablo Manzoni, "is a matter of honesty bolstered with discipline...a word we haven't heard in quite some time." He gives a wide, delighted smile and continues to talk, using his very expressive forehead to help him emphasize his thoughts. "Just how do you go about it? Well, I imagine it happening something like this... Take a woman and wrap her in a fresh towel and sit her down in front of a mirror with a lamp on each side. Her face should be freshly cleansed and her hair brushed back and away from her face. Remove every material vestige from the mirror's reflection—no bottles or tubes lying on the tabletop, no jewelry or accessories to distract her attention, nothing to remind her of the image she projects every day. After all, we're interested in Discovery in this exercise. Now, what a woman looks at is her reflection in the mirror. What I would like her to do is look to her fantasy of herself as well. I believe that every woman has a dream of herself that differs from the image she associates with the here-and-now. Successful makeup requires focusing both—the dream of beauty and the reality of the face she sees.

How to draw an EYE

"Eyes are the focus of the face. Think of making them up in such a way as to increase their distance from the nose, and to emphasize the serenity of a clear forehead.

Pablo's work kit is a tool chest three-drawers-deep, filled with brushes, compact cases and small bottles of color

Pablo’s tips for Summer

1. Lavish fragrance on your body as if it were water.
2. Apply a sun block on your first day in the sun. Then mix the block with a lotion with a less protective sun factor for overall protection. Decrease the amount of block as your skin can take it and always follow through with a moisturizer when you come in out of the sun.
3. Soak your feet in Epsom salts, dry them, and give them a good rubbing with cologne.
4. Wear your summer fragrance around your ankles so that the scent can rise to where your nose will love it.
5. Once a week give yourself a complete body treatment with Arden's Eight Hour Cream. The smell is pure flowers and by the time your skin has absorbed the cream usually overnight, the texture will have turned to silk.

Use lots and lots and lots of mascara. It is probably the most feminine makeup tool to produce flirty eyes!"

Once a week is not enough.

If you have dry skin,

you probably think the ultimate treatment for it is a long soak in a tub with bath oil. But your busy schedule may only permit that luxury once a week. And that’s not enough.

Dry skin needs help every day. Every time you bathe or shower. Or it gets itchier, scaller, harder to live with. And that’s why Neutrogena® Body Oil was developed.

Neutrogena Body Oil is a new concept in dry skin treatment, for women who don’t have time to soak in a tub. It’s a pure, light, natural sesame oil formula that gives you the “soaking-in” benefits of bath oil, but in a non-greasy form, so it can be put directly on your skin.

Doesn’t it feel greasy? No. Unlike ordinary bath oils which are made from mineral oil, the unusual sesame oil formula of Neutrogena Body Oil is quickly absorbed by your wet skin. You apply it right after you shower or bathe. No waste. No staining your clothes.

Safe and mild. Medical tests have shown that no other oil tested is less irritating. That’s why dermatologists can recommend it.

It’s more expensive to put sesame oil in our formula, but the results are well worth it to your dry skin. Try it today. And tomorrow. You’ll want to use it every day. Because nothing will make your dry skin feel better.

now yourself, accept yourself

With her fingers she should carefully examine her bone structure. It's the foundation of everything. It determines whether her face is round or sharply angled; it will be a new sense of modeling. Second, she should check for the condition of her skin. Is it in a condition appropriate to her age? Slight crow's-feet at 30, slightly pronounced laugh-lines at 40, changes of muscle elasticity at 50, lined at 60? Life is change and aging is natural. One's attitudes determine so much of what not only shows up on one's face, but what shows up the eyes, in the voice, by the gait, through the whole woman. The most beautiful woman is beautiful because she is mulated by her life and takes an interest what's around her. This is my personal opinion. The next question for the woman in the mirror should be, 'what do I like about my face?' Does she like the size of her eyes, does she dislike the shape of her nose? Does she approve the shape of her mouth? Is she pleased with the condition of her skin? She should just look at the things she likes first. Then she looks at the things she doesn't like. What's important is how she reacts to things we dislike and beauty is very much an attitude of being pleased. A face will show which side has won.

Now, after she has examined her facial structure, her skin, her assets and flaws, I think it is important that she focus on her eyes. They are so effective for communicating feelings and they reveal a great deal about a woman. Even if she uses little makeup, she should remember that the eyes command and she should pay a great deal of attention to them.

Finally, with a lesson in makeup, a woman can learn the latest techniques which will emphasize her best features.'

Cut your heating costs up to 24%!
Have your builder install STYROFOAM* brand insulation from roofline to frostline.

TYROFOAM brand insulation is easy for your builder to install and adds little to the cost of your new home.

On frame walls, it replaces ordinary sheathing. Tests show it can cut heat loss by 14%.

The tests, conducted by Ohio State University under a grant from Dow Chemical U.S.A., compared energy costs of homes identical except for insulation systems. (Write for test procedures and results.)

Outside the foundation, sheets of STYROFOAM brand insulation are applied down to or below the frostline. Applied in this way, real life energy calculations indicate that STYROFOAM brand insulation will cut heat loss an additional 10%.

STYROFOAM brand insulation improves insulation performance three ways:

Cuts conduction heat loss
STYROFOAM brand insulation insulates the entire wall, not just the space between studs—significantly cutting conduction heat loss.

Reduces air infiltration
Because of its snug-fitting tongue and groove design, STYROFOAM brand insulation can greatly reduce air infiltration. Summer and winter.

Helps batts work better
STYROFOAM brand insulation can minimize "convectivelooping." By keeping the wall cavity warmer, it actually makes batt insulation more effective.

So have the builder of your new home install STYROFOAM brand insulating sheathing in place of ordinary sheathing. Depending on where you build, it can pay for itself in as little as one to three years—and keep on paying dividends for the life of your home.

For more information on how STYROFOAM brand insulation can cut your energy costs, mail our coupon today.

†Some homes will perform better than these test homes. Others not as well. Your energy savings will depend on many factors, such as climate, fuel type, workmanship, house design and living habits of the occupants.

For rugged country and safer driving on the road, you can’t beat four-wheel drive

The “Off-Road Revolution” is Detroit’s name for the incredible boom in four-wheel drive vehicles that is going on this year. With millions of Americans camping, hiking, getting back to nature, vehicles which can drive virtually anywhere, over any sort of terrain are in tremendous demand. The most remarkable aspect of this automotive trend is that at least 90 percent of the mileage covered by the modern four-wheel drive vehicle is in normal everyday driving on the road. Ten years ago, this would have been impossible. Old-fashioned, four-wheel drive Jeeps could only be used at low speeds, in low-traction, off-road conditions. When you reached the highway, you had to stop and get out, then turn a lever on each front wheel in order to disconnect the four-wheel drive mechanism. For normal driving on roads, your four-wheel drive Jeep had power only in the rear wheels, just like any normal car.

Now things have changed, as a result of a clever and sturdy interaxle differential developed two years ago by the Borg-Warner company, which makes most of the transmissions for American cars. This differential bolts to the back of an automatic transmission and allows “full time” four-wheel drive at any speed, on any surface. It’s used now on AMC Jeeps. Chrysler Corporations’s New Process Division makes a similar four-wheel drive unit that’s used by Chrysler, Ford, and General Motors. There’s so much interest in four-wheel drive motoring today that Dana Corporation is working on a four-wheel drive unit which can be bolted to a standard sedan or station wagon, without raising it way up in the air like a Jeep. Once people started driving with full-time, four-wheel drive on the highway, they found it far superior to conventional two-wheel drive, especially under slippery conditions. Because each wheel is under power, a vehicle with full-time, four-wheel drive can safely cruise down rainy, snowy, or icy roads at a speed that wouldn’t be possible in a conventional car. Steep hills, tight corners, gravel or dirt roads, mud puddles, potholes, and patches are no problem.

During last winter’s snowstorm across the country, the only vehicles on the roads that could move at all were equipped with four-wheel drive. They turned out to be such lifesavers, that many police and fire departments are ordering their new transportation with this go-anywhere-under-any-conditions technology.

Full-time, four-wheel drive is available in a wide range of American vehicles, from the fun-loving Jeep CJ-5 that looks like something out of a World War II movie, to the luxurious Chevrolet Suburban that’s really an oversize, elaborate station wagon. By far the most popular models are the two-door station wagons with a removable hard top, called utility vehicles. Dodge, Plymouth, Ford, Chevrolet, Jeep, GMC, and International all make similar utility vehicles. They’re all able to seat five, Continued on page 35 though they're shorter in length than the average sub-compact sedan. As in a station wagon, the rear seat folds down, which opens up a cargo area that's 6.5 feet long and 5.5 feet wide—as big as the cargo section of a pickup truck. When the roof is quickly unbolted, you can carry anything from a motorcycle to a tree in the back. In addition, you can add a canvas convertible top, or even a specially designed camper unit that sleeps four.

Because they're available with the biggest V-8 engine, four-wheel drive vehicles also make superb tow cars, and since they're powerful and easy to handle, they are truly fun to drive. You can buy them with all the same options and conveniences that come on any luxury sedans. Bucket seats, power steering, AM/FM/8-track, digital clock, tinted glass, power disc brakes, power windows, automatic transmission, tilt steering wheel, and air conditioning are just some of the usual extras.

In addition to the domestic manufactured vehicles, there are two light, four-wheel drives from a Japanese manufacturer, Subaru, a pickup truck and a station wagon. These models account for 20 percent of the cars it sells here. All Subarus are driven from the front wheels, and they have a five-speed transmission available as an option. Japanese engineers added a drive shaft to the rear wheels that connects where the fifth speed used to be, creating a four-speed transmission with four-wheel drive. The Subaru system can be driven on the highway in either two-wheel or four-wheel drive, and to change from one to the other requires just a simple flick of a switch.

There are some drawbacks to four-wheel drive. Because there's more friction loss in the driving mechanism, your utility vehicle clips from 3 to 5 miles per gallon off the gas mileage expected from a V-8 engine. The added complication of four-wheel drive means higher repair bills if something goes wrong. On the other hand, since they're designed to take rough treatment in off-road trailbreaking, they last forever under comparatively mild street conditions. Over 500,000 four-wheel drive vehicles from American Motors, General Motors, International, Ford, and Chrysler will be sold this year. They're in such great demand that the manufacturers can't build them fast enough. You can actually buy one new and sell it in three years for more than you paid for it. While a new passenger car will depreciate about 50 percent in those three years, you can be driving with the safety of four-wheel drive confident that you have made literally a sound investment. No wonder there's an "Off-Road Revolution" going on.

HOW TO RIBBON A RUG

Here's what you need to know to make a rug like the one on pages 112-113

Materials: #7 canvas in the size you choose (this rug is 4 by 6 feet), 19-inch lengths of colored ribbon 1/4 inch wide, and a #20 tapestry needle.

Design: If you are designing your own canvas, sketch with pencil the directions in which you want your stitches to go: it's the alternation of bottom-to-top and left-to-right stitches that gives the shimmering texture. In the rose rug, for example, one rose petal is made of vertical stitches, the next horizontal. Bottom-to-top stitches will run up diagonal rows, and left-to-right stitches will run down on the diagonal.

Stitching: Some stitches cover one space in the canvas's weave at a time, but you can work a more substantial texture by covering several spaces at once. For a large project, one stitch might cover three.

For the basic Ribbonpoint stitch (used for blue background), thread the needle and fold the end of the ribbon back 1/4 inch. With sharp scissors cut a tiny slit at right angles to the fold. To make your first stitch in the top right corner of your design, bring your needle up from the wrong side of the canvas in one space, pass it over a space to the right, and back down through the third space (see illustration). Run the needle through the tiny slit, and pull tightly to secure the "knot" on the wrong side of the canvas. The second stitch falls in a straight line immediately below the first, but will cover a space from bottom-to-top. Skip the space immediately below stitch 1 and bring the needle up in the second space below it. Holding the ribbon to keep it flat, pass your needle into the space covered by stitch 1. You now have a bottom-to-top stitch directly under a left-to-right one.

Bring needle up in the space directly to the left of your second stitch. Cover the space, from bottom to top, immediately to the left of stitch 1. For the fourth stitch, skip a space to the left of the third and bring needle up in the next space. Pass the ribbon into the space covered by stitch 3. Bring needle up in the space directly below stitch 4, then cover the space from left to right below stitch 3. Bring up needle directly below stitch 5, and cover the space below stitch 2, going left-to-right. You now have two diagonal rows (see illustration); all stitches going up the diagonal will cover spaces from bottom to top, and all stitches going down will cover spaces from left to right. To finish off a ribbon, make two loop knots (ribbon is slick) and run ribbon under several stitches as you would in canvas embroidery. If you reach the right side of your design, bring needle up in the space just below and left of the last horizontal stitch, cover one space with ribbon, going bottom-to-top, and knot the ribbon. Bring needle up in the space just below and left of stitch 1; cover 2 spaces with ribbon, bottom-to-top. Bring needle up below and left of stitch 2, and cover 3 spaces with ribbon, bottom-to-top. From now on cover 3 spaces per stitch, until you reach the end of the row. The 2 rows will form an arrow-like diagonal across the canvas. Row 3 will be exactly like row 1, with left-to-right stitches, going down the diagonal. Row 4 will be like row 2, using bottom-to-top stitch up the diagonal.

In a large design, like a rug, you will probably need to make some "compensating" stitches—usually basic Ribbonpoint stitches to fill spaces between rows when colors change and the pattern is elaborate. Count these spaces so you can make an even number of bottom-to-top and left-to-right stitches to keep the texture of your rug consistent.

You can make fringes for the edge of a rug or pillow by threading single or double ribbons through the bordering stitches. Always knot ribbons using the slit method, to avoid slipping, and secure tightly.

Note: Ribbonpoint is a trademark, U.S. Patent number 4,075,962, and is copyrighted by Patricia Mabry.

Two easy ribbonpoint stitches: Top right, the basic stitch; bottom, the herringbone. ribbon twists, use a #13 needle to hold the ribbon flat on right side of canvas as you pull through to the other side. Should the ribbon fray, snip off a tiny end.

The herringbone stitch (used for flowers, leaves, and gold squares) is almost the same as the basic Ribbonpoint stitch. You will be covering three spaces at a time, beginning at the top left corner of the design. Bring needle up in the third space from the left edge of the design. Count three more spaces to the right and bring the needle down through the fourth space. Then slit-knot the ribbon on the wrong side of canvas as you would for the basic stitch. Bring needle up in the space directly below the first space covered by the stitch. Skip over three spaces to the right and pass needle into fourth hole. Repeat this left-to-right stitch until you reach the right side of your design. The next diagonal row will use bottom-to-top stitches, and lie to the left of your last row (see illustration). Start at the lower right corner of your design. Bring up the needle in the space just below and left of the last horizontal stitch, cover one space with ribbon, going bottom-to-top, and knot the ribbon. Bring needle up in the space just below and left of stitch 1; cover 2 spaces with ribbon, bottom-to-top. Bring needle up below and left of stitch 2, and cover 3 spaces with ribbon, bottom-to-top. From now on cover 3 spaces per stitch, until you reach the end of the row. The 2 rows will form an arrow-like diagonal across the canvas. Row 3 will be exactly like row 1, with left-to-right stitches, going down the diagonal. Row 4 will be like row 2, using bottom-to-top stitch up the diagonal.

"THE BEST REASON FOR BUYING A NEW GE REFRIGERATOR IS AN OLD GE REFRIGERATOR."

—The Steele Family.

Jane Steele
Verona, New Jersey
GE refrigerators are really built to last. And my old "Monitor" is lasting proof!
Talk about a great investment! I got it in 1957, when it was 23 years old. And it still works like a charm.
Of course, it doesn’t have all the improvements and innovations General Electric’s added over the years. But it shows how dependable GE refrigerators are. As I told my daughter Mary Ellen, they just can’t be beat!

Great Aunt Agnes Spina
West Orange, New Jersey
I’ve spent nearly half a century depending on GE refrigerators.
We bought one of these in the mid-fifties, after giving away the faithful “Monitor” Jane has now.
What a workhorse! Soda was always cold, ice cream was hard, and it never needed any service.
So naturally when we modernized again five years ago, we went right back to GE for a big, beautiful side-by-side.
General Electric refrigerators really hold up. We’ve had enough of them to know!

Mary Ellen Steele Burns
Totowa, New Jersey
General Electric is a name you grow up with. You know it’s dependable.
So we felt confident that our lower-priced GE refrigerator would give us the same quality and reliability as the most expensive model.
My mother told me GE refrigerators were the best kind, and of course we did a lot of shopping around.
No other brand had the features GE did for the same money. Or was as nice-looking, inside and out.

Suzanne Steele Walsh
Morristown, New Jersey
Having had GE refrigerators in the family for so long impressed me more than any brochure or sales talk.
So when we buy our new refrigerator, it won’t be a question of “whether GE,” but of “which GE.”
And I think I know which—this gorgeous dream of a side-by-side!
It has plenty of space, important with our five children. And adjustable glass shelves, great for cleaning up spills.
Separate temperature control for the meat pan. Automatic defrosting. And the GE dispenser that gives you chilled water, ice cubes, even crushed ice. I love the "New Naturals" colors, too—so soft!
The reliability General Electric’s been building into their refrigerators since Great Aunt Agnes bought hers makes me feel really confident.
Maybe some day my GE refrigerator will become a family heirloom too!

Tips for planning ahead, wrapping and carrying supplies, the best equipment, plus menus and recipes for good food while on a hike

For lovers of good food, out for a weekend of backpacking, the thought of adding water to dehydrated flakes at the end of the day sends shivers down the palate. To eat well on a hike, advance planning is a must. Remember, too, that everyone will be hungrier and thirstier than usual. Don’t worry about counting calories on the trail; you will need more than you normally eat and you can afford those extra carbohydrates for quick energy.

Plan ahead

Make a list of all the meals you will be eating on the trail, and work out a menu plan listing the ingredients for each dish and the equipment that’s needed.

After you’ve done the shopping, transfer as many items as possible into plastic bags; label everything.

Measure and mix dry ingredients ahead when possible.

A kitchen scale to weigh foods ready for the pack is helpful, especially for longer trips when weight is crucial.

Divide ingredients according to meals and put them together in large plastic bags. Food for the last meal goes in the bottom of your pack.

The heaviest things should be eaten the first day out.

Small plastic pill containers are useful for things like salt, pepper, or instant coffee.

Buy butter or margarine in plastic containers.

Wrap cheese in cheesecloth that has been soaked in vinegar to prevent mold from developing.

Save individual packets of sugar and jam from restaurants for backpacking trips.

Break eggs for the morning’s scrambled eggs and pour into a plastic bottle.

Bring along an old pillowcase for fire blackened pots and pans.

Soap bottom of pots and pans before you leave to facilitate cleaning later.

To try to find out if you will be hiking in an area with plentiful drinking water and check if there are any restrictions against building fires.

Food for the pack

Make-ahead stews that can be reheated over the campfire are excellent appetite quenchers.

Sturdy, dense, baked goods like date-nut bread, pumpernickel, fruit cake, or fig cookies hold up best in a pack.

Cheese is high in much-needed protein, but avoid the soft and semi-soft varieties. A well-aged Cheddar or a chunk of top quality Parmesan travels best.

Bring a good supply of tea bags, instant coffee, and cocoa powder.

A convenient measurement to remember: Add 1/3 cup powdered milk to 1 cup of water.

Lemon crystals, usually in the spice section of supermarkets are a nice addition to tea.

Create your own soups with bouillon cubes and a variety of dry ingredients such as pasta, Chinese noodles, dried herbs, Italian dry mushrooms. Pack your mixture in plastic bags, then mix with boiling water at the campsite.

A small delicacy can be a great morale booster. A cache of smoked oysters or a bar of Swiss chocolate can provide the incentive for that last uphill mile.

Your body loses a lot of salt on a strenuous hike, so plan to include some salty foods.

For between-meal snacks, most hikers would never travel without their own "gorp," usually a mixture of dried fruits and nuts.

Miniature bottles of brandy or Bourbon make excellent before-bed toddies. Remember that alcohol consumed at high altitudes has a much greater effect on the body.

Tips on equipment

An army surplus "mess kit" or a "Boy Scout kit" that is made of lightweight...
Decade's got your number. Only 5mg. of 'tar.'

Now you might be wondering why it took us ten years to reach 5mg. Well, if we were simply interested in lowering 'tar,' we could have done it in a lot less time. After all, others have.

But this wasn't just a numbers game to us. Our goal was to reduce 'tar' without removing taste. So we took our time.

Finally, after ten years, we were good and ready. We had developed our "Total System." A totally unique way of delivering truly satisfying taste in a 5mg. cigarette. That's why we say Decade is "The taste that took ten years to make."

Every part of a Decade cigarette is arranged in perfect balance with the others. The tobacco, the filter and even the paper. Only by concentrating on these parts are we able to perfect the whole.

So try Decade. We think you'll agree that 5mg. can be a very tasty little number.

Regular and Menthol.
aluminum is an inexpensive and practical solution to most campfire cooking needs. It usually consists of three pieces—a frying pan with a detachable handle, a pot, and a low-sided plate.

Beware of nonstick-treated cook sets. The coating tends to peel after exposure to the campfire.

The classic Sierra cup is excellent for soup and coffee. It can be attached to your belt or pack for easy access.

Don't forget a newly sharpened pocketknife with a can-opener attachment, candles, paper towels, a dishtowel, soap, and a scouring pad for dishwashing.

If you're planning to do your cooking on a campfire, a grill that expands to several sizes is very useful or a dime-store cake rack works fine.

Get a plastic canteen, stopper attached.

A collapsible, 1-gallon, plastic water container is essential.

The outdoor sink: Dig a hole and line it with a plastic bag then fill with hot water for washing dishes.

Dried pepper beef

(From Margaret Spader)

INGREDIENTS
- ½ cup dry sherry
- ½ cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons dark soy sauce
- 1 star anise or ½ teaspoon fennel seeds
- ½ teaspoon crushed red pepper
- 2 tablespoons peanut oil
- 2 scallions, cut into 1-inch pieces
- 1 pound boneless chuck or rump

METHOD
- Put beef into an ovenproof pan and add the oil, scallions, and ginger then stir over high heat until evenly browned.
- Stir in the sherry mixture and the cold water and bring to a boil. Adjust heat to medium, cover, and simmer 30 minutes.
- Take off the cover and turn the heat up to high. Cook until dry, stirring constantly.
- Put beef into an ovenproof pan and let cool, then place in the oven at the lowest setting for 30-60 minutes to allow meat to dry. It should be dry to the touch. Store in a covered jar. This should keep for 2 weeks. Serves 4.

Vegetable soup with pistou

INGREDIENTS
- 3 cloves, garlic, peeled
- Pinch salt
- ⅓ cup basil leaves, torn in half
- 1 6-ounce can tomato paste
- ⅛ cup Parmesan cheese, freshly grated
- 5 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 2½-ounce package instant dry minestrone or vegetable soup
- 1 medium potato, cooked until tender, skin left on
- 1 medium carrot, cooked until tender, unpeeled

METHOD
- Pour the garlic with the salt until mashed flat. Tear the basil leaves into small pieces with your fingers; if you are using parsley, chop it fine.
- Combine garlic, basil, and tomato paste in a mortar and blend with the pestle, grinding everything together into a smooth mass. You can also blend the mixture in a blender or food processor. Stir in the cheese, then slowly add the olive oil. Store in a small, covered, plastic container.
- At the campsite, follow the directions for preparing the dry soup. Peel the potato and the carrot, cut each into small pieces and add to the soup. Stir in 2 tablespoons of the pistou mixture and serve. Leftover pistou is delicious as a dip with miniature bread sticks or fresh vegetables. Serves 4-6.

Chinese walnuts

INGREDIENTS
- 4 cups walnuts, shelled
- 1½ quarts water
- ¼ cup sugar

- Toss the nuts with the sugar in a bowl and heat the oil in a wok or skillet to 350°F. Oil should come about 1 inch up the sides of the pan.
- Fry the nuts in 3 batches, stirring occasionally, for about 5 minutes each batch. Do not allow to darken too much. Remove from the oil with a slotted spoon and return to the colander to drain. Store in a tightly covered jar in the refrigerator until ready to use. Serves 8.

From the Shaker heritage—simple dishes to make ahead and carry to the picnic.

Shaker cooking emphasizes simplicity—ingredients fresh from the garden or home preserved and prepared to be eaten fairly shortly after coming from the oven, since there were no refrigerators.

Shaker Community, Inc., headed by Amy Bess Miller, author of The Best of Shaker Cooking with Persis Fuller, began restoration of Hancock Shaker Village in 1960. It now runs the village as a full-time museum including a Good Room—traditionally the part of the pantry reserved for the best pantry supplies—in which visitors can buy breads, preserves, and cookies, made from Shaker recipes like the ones below.

Broiled chicken with cream of tarragon sauce

(Hancock Shaker Village)

INGREDIENTS
- 3 4 pound broiler chicken, cut in serving pieces
- Salt, pepper
- Lard
- \( \frac{1}{2} \) cup water
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 3 tablespoons flour
- \( \frac{1}{2} \) cup chicken stock, strained
- 1 egg yolk
- \( \frac{1}{2} \) cup cream
- \( \frac{1}{2} \) cup fresh tarragon leaves, finely chopped or 2 teaspoons dried tarragon
- 1 tablespoon herb vinegar or lemon juice

METHOD

1. Rub each chicken piece all over with salt, pepper, and lard or clear drippings. Put \( \frac{1}{2} \) cup water in bottom of a broiler pan, arrange chicken on rack, and broil flesh side up about 10 minutes. Turn, check on dryness, rub skin with more lard or drippings. Continue to broil until chicken is a light brown, but do not let it burn—about 25 minutes total cooking time.
2. Make the sauce as the chicken cooks: Melt 3 tablespoons of the butter in a saucepan. Add the flour, stir well, and cook lightly 5 minutes. Add the stock, cook and stir until smooth. Add \( \frac{1}{4} \) teaspoon pepper, \( \frac{1}{2} \) teaspoon salt, and the sugar. Cut the remaining butter in small pieces and stir into sauce. Blend well.

Cold bacon and egg pie

2. Break 5 eggs on top of the bacon, keeping them whole. Beat the remaining 2 eggs with cream, nutmeg, flour, salt, and pepper in a small bowl and pour into shell over the whole eggs.
3. Bake in a preheated 400° oven 15 minutes. Reduce heat to 325° and bake 30 minutes longer until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Cut into wedges. Serves 5.

The E.P.T.™ In-Home Early Pregnancy Test is a private little revolution any woman can easily buy at her drugstore.

It is highly accurate. Millions of women today in 13 European countries use this testing method. Now its high accuracy rate has been verified here in America by doctors who clinically confirmed the results of tests performed by women themselves in their own homes.

That means you can confidently do this easy pregnancy test yourself — privately — right at home without waiting for appointments or delays. That simple difference is the result of many years of costly research. And it's worth every penny.

At last, early knowledge of pregnancy belongs easily and accurately to us all. It's simple. Fast. And there is no risk, no physical danger whatever, in doing it because a sample of your first morning urine is all that's needed for the test.

As soon as you become pregnant, your body starts to produce a special hormone — HCG. Starting on the 9th day after the date you expected your menstrual period to begin, there should be sufficient concentration of HCG in your urine to give an accurate reading of pregnancy. And that's all there is to it. Follow the test directions carefully to insure an accurate reading. E.P.T. Early Pregnancy Test gives women a new power, the power of time to help control the quality of their pregnancies.

The first 60 days are critical in fetal development. Improper nutrition, cigarettes, alcohol, even commonly used household medications can be harmful in these crucial first 60 days before most women even know for sure that they are pregnant. Now with E.P.T., you can know. Now, when you call your doctor, you have the results of your test to report. And time is on your side at last.

1. Put three drops of urine into the test tube.
2. Add contents of the plastic vial, shake and place test tube in holder. It must remain undisturbed for two hours.
3. After two hours if a dark brown ring is visible in the mirror, that indicates an active pregnancy.

At last, an accurate early pregnancy test that women can do at home quickly, safely and very easily.

Boiled cider

Boiled cider was a staple on grocery store shelves. It was bottled commercially to be used as a sweetener, but it was made by most cooks for their own use. Some condensed it more than others, depending on how sweet they wanted it.

Mary Whitcher's directions for making it are short and to the point: "Take 4 gallons of cider and boil it to 1 gallon." Thus condensed it was used principally to sweeten Shaker applesauce, the manufacture of which was a profitable industry—and was a great saving when used instead of sugar. It was also used in dessert puddings, jellies, and in beverages.

And appreciate it for a lifetime.

Even at first glance, it's obvious. American Olean ceramic tile is a beautiful material. With its rich, lustrous colors and textures, and its seemingly endless applications.

However, the beauty of this material goes way beyond the surface. It needs little care. And it holds up so incredibly well, you'll appreciate it for a lifetime.

In the picture you'll find design ideas that demonstrate the unusual versatility of ceramic tile. Renaissance Gold, a unique glazed tile (no two are alike), is used on the walls and vanity. Why the Metropolitan Museum reproductions make superb presents

These reproductions are the only copies of the Museum's collections made exclusively by and for the Metropolitan Museum itself.

Because they can be made directly from the original works of art under Museum supervision and because the craftsmanship is of the highest quality, every copy is remarkably faithful to the spirit of the original.

The selection is surprisingly wide: ancient jewelry in gold and silver; Oriental and European porcelain; early American glass in crystal and rare colors; bronze from Egypt, Greece, China, and the medieval world; silver, pewter, brass, and pottery from Colonial America.

The prices range from $7.50 for a Greek fourth-century B.C. gold dolphin to $520.00 for an eighteenth-century Chinese export porcelain tea service decorated in a bold floral design of twenty-seven colors.

New pieces are added constantly, and the Museum publishes special catalogues of these every few months; the 16-page full-color Christmas Catalogue will be issued September 1. In addition to the reproductions, this year's catalogue illustrates new Christmas cards, stained glass, art books of particular interest, prints of rare Chinese and Japanese paintings, snowflakes, stars, and bells in gold and silver, together with more than one hundred other unusual presents including the 1979 Calendar, Treasures from the Far East.

To put yourself on the mailing list (most of the reproductions can be bought only by mail or at the Museum itself), send the coupon below with $1.00 to cover mailing.

Above: Footed Bowl. The exact purpose of this five-thousand-year-old Egyptian “walking bowl” remains somewhat of a mystery, but perhaps it is significant that many centuries later, a bowl with feet was used as the hieroglyph “to bring.” The Museum’s copy, like the original, is unglazed terracotta burnedished by hand. 2 teaspoons salt
2 tablespoons sugar

INgredients
(Shaker daily loaf)

1 package active dry yeast or 1 cake compressed yeast
1 cup warm water
3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons salt
6 1/2 cups all-purpose flour, sifted

METHOD

□ Dissolve yeast in warm water in a large bowl. Scald milk; stir in butter, sugar, and salt. Cool to lukewarm; add to yeast.
□ Add 3 cups flour; beat until smooth. Add enough additional flour to make a soft dough. Turn out onto a lightly floured board. Knead until smooth and elastic: about 10 minutes.
□ Place in a greased bowl, grease top of dough, and let rise to double its bulk in a warm place, about 1-1/2 hours. Punch down and knead lightly this time and shape into loaves for two 9-by-5-by-3-inch pans. Brush the tops with butter and let the dough rise to twice its bulk in a warm place, about 1 hour. Bake in a preheated 400° oven about 30 minutes. Makes 2 loaves.

Shaker cold tea

(Sister Amelia's Shaker receipts)

INGREDIENTS
1 teaspoon good imported tea
8 ounces cold water
Sugar

METHOD

□ Use 1 teaspoon good imported tea to a large tumbler of cold water. Use only a glass or porcelain container, and let stand 12 hours. Strain and add ice. Sweeten to taste.
□ Tea made by this method will never "cloud," because the tannin is now drawn from the leaves. Made thus, it has a delightful bouquet and the same stimulating effect as hot tea.

Picnic lemonade

INGREDIENTS
12 lemons
1 1/4 cups sugar
3 quarts water
Mint sprigs

METHOD

□ Lemons should be at room temperature. Roll to soften. Squeeze and remove seeds, but do not drain. Pour juice into a pitcher. Add sugar and water. Stir well to dissolve. Taste and add more sugar if need be. Chill well.
□ Carry additional ice in blocks to the picnic. Pour lemonade from canteen, add mint sprigs. Stir well and ladle into little tin cups. Serves 16.

Herb cookies

(Shaker cold tea)

1/2 cup shortening (butter or chicken fat)
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup molasses
2 1/2 cups all-purpose flour, sifted
1 egg

1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
6 tablespoons hot water
2 tablespoons anise seed
1 tablespoon coriander seed, softened in 2 teaspoons hot water and crushed
Confectioners sugar icing (optional)

METHOD

□ Cream shortening, sugar and molasses in a bowl. Stir in the egg and beat well. Sift flour, ginger, cinnamon, salt, baking soda, and cloves together into a bowl and add to the creamed mixture alternately with the hot water. Cool.

House & Garden
No one ever told me I'd be mom and dad to my kids."

Two years ago, when I had to take charge of my life to take care of theirs, I learned how...fast. Believe me, the responsibility of being the only parent is sometimes scary. So two of the first things I did were get myself a job, and get myself a piece of the Rock—Prudential insurance.

It's tough enough thinking about someone else taking care of your children if something happens to you. But at least, now I know there'd be the money to do it the way I would. My piece of the Rock is important because...they need me.

The more they need you, the more you need Prudential.
Caring for houseplants doesn't exactly involve tilling the soil the way a large garden would, but there does come a time when digging one's hands into the heart of the earth becomes necessary. It's far from a painful task; it's a pleasure. In all probability, in fact, it's largely responsible for the popularity of indoor greenery. Too many of us have been too long removed from the land.

The fragrance of rich, moist potting soil evokes distant memories, setting the mind to wandering. Call it puttering, call it work—repotting and pruning up your plants can be among the most relaxing and tension-relieving tasks there are, both for you and for the plants.

Right by my desk there's a lovely Streptocarpus. Or, I should say, it was lovely until it more or less tumbled out over one side of the pot when a new young plant decided to grow out of the middle. Neither plant would have done well if I hadn't come to the rescue, for, unlike in the wilds, ground space is narrowly limited in a pot.

The first thing I do in any repotting venture is spread out some newspaper over the kitchen table (one of these days I'm going to get myself a real potting bench), and set out my bags of potting soil and spare pots. Then I pick up the plant I'm rescuing and turn the pot upside down, keeping my index finger on one side of the plant's stalk and my middle finger on the other side. I give the pot a sharp tap against the side of the table. This frees it from the soil and the pot can be lifted off readily. Watering the plant the day before unpotting it makes the task easier.

Knocking out your plants every six months or so to check the roots is a good idea in general. If you find a solid tangle of roots all around, that plant should be moved on to a larger pot. In the case of my Streptocarpus, not only were the roots jammed together, but those from the two plants were intertwined. Gently I pulled them apart as far as I could. Then I took some pruning shears and cut the remaining tangle out. Pruning off some roots will do your plants no harm. Quite to the contrary, the plants will develop stronger, more compact root systems for it. Just don't try to break the roots off. You want clear, clean cuts. Tears that strip off the root covering invite infection. Also, when you're repotting a plant, if the roots have grown into a tight ball, pull them out around the edges. This both gets rid of some of the spent soil and lets the roots grow straighter in their new, larger quarters. Were you simply to plop the root ball into a larger pot, the roots would keep growing in their old confines of packed soil rather than spreading out to take advantage of their more commodious abode.

Once I had separated the Streptocarpus plants, I picked up a fresh pot, put some shards of broken pottery pieces on hand to use as shards. How you fill a pot with soil can make quite a difference to your plants' growth, particularly if you're potting bare-root specimens from a mail-order firm. Basically, there are two types of root structure: the fine, matted fibrous type and the taproot variety. If your plant, like my Streptocarpus, has a fibrous root system, build up a small mound of soil in center of pot and spread roots out and on top of it. On the other hand, if the plant has a main taproot, make a funnel shape in the soil so this central root can grow as straight as possible.

Fill soil in and around the roots completely. Then tap the bottom of the pot on the table top to settle the soil down. When you're done, there should be at least ⅜ of an inch of pot showing above the soil level so there's somewhere to pour the water when you tend the plant. I've always found it best, as a last step, to submerge the whole pot for a few minutes in tepid water after replanting. This not only settles the roots in well, but in the case of clay pots introduces plenty of water in the pot itself. If you skip this step and use a dry pot, it will quite often draw the moisture out from the soil like a blotter, leaving your plant to become quite dry overnight. That's something it definitely does not need immediately after the shock, however slight, of being transplanted.

Since some roots are usually lost in transplanting, this is a good time to cut off also any damaged or overage leaves. Cutting back the greenery not only improves the plant esthetically, but also compensates for root loss. Your plant is a balanced system. It's used to so many roots bringing up water and nutrients from the soil. With fewer roots, it will not dine as well as normally. Removing a few leaves compensates for this supply cutback.

When it comes to fertilizing, there are a few things to remember. First, don't fertilize a plant for at least a month after it's been repotted. Probably nothing would go wrong if you did. But there's always the chance that some of the freshly cut roots might get fertilizer burns, so why risk it?

Secondly, less, more often, is better. Plants prefer eating continuously to gorging once a month. A little fertilizer once a week during their growing season works wonders. If this is too much trouble to remember, try some of the new time-release encapsulated fertilizers; they spread out the dining period for you and seem to work very well.

Thirdly, though doing it right is best, your plants will survive underfertilization more readily than they will overfertilization. Choose a fertilizer on the basis of what's needed by a particular plant, and follow the instructions given with it. The three numbers, for instance 10-10-10, on the package will indicate what the fertilizer's particular benefits are. The first number represents the percentage of nitrogen, which is what helps the plant's green growth and photosynthesis. The second number gives the percentage of phosphorus, for root development and flowering. The third number represents the percentage of potassium, which, like the trace minerals and iron, is just healthy for your plant in general.

Use a balanced formula such as 10-10-10 for most of your houseplants, and pick 10-10-10 for your outdoor plants.
I trust the cleaning of my cherished French heirloom carpeting only to Duraclean

"I turned my home over to the Duraclean craftsmen and am now surrounded by a sweet freshness everywhere. The furniture and rugs have never looked brighter or more true of color."

Betsy Palmer, Television, stage and screen star, knows that the Duraclean absorbent foam takes the soil OUT . . . doesn't simply wash it deeper as do-it-yourself and other methods do. That's why Duraclean is recommended by so many carpet and furniture manufacturers.

Fabrics, when Duracleaned, stay clean longer. They require fewer cleanings and last longer. That saves you money. Call your Duraclean craftsman. If he is not in the local yellow pages, mail the coupon.

UNCLUTTER THE GARAGE

Seven steps to a mess-free space

By DeAnne Raffel

For some reason, fall and winter seem to make a catchall out of the garage—everything that does not have “a place” is deposited there. It is almost summer again and a perfect time to clean out and improve the structure. Choose a warm sunny day to start working.

Step 1: Many homeowners consider the unattached garage itself to be just an addition to the property and let the structure fall into disrepair. The garage, like the house, has an exterior as well as an interior, and requires continual maintenance. Check the roof for holes and aging shingles, clean out gutters (if there are none, install some), rebank soil so that rain does not flow toward the walls (the earth below the cement floor will wash away), inspect the area where the walls meet the foundation (usually made of cinder block or brick) for small holes. If rodents are evident, patch to make the structure rodent-proof.

Step 2: Begin interior work by discarding any materials that have collected. Box wood scraps to be used for kindling. Clear the floor area of tools, bicycles, boxes, etc.—remove to the outside.

Step 3: Open all windows and doors to get rid of dampness. Install screens in the windows so that the sashes can remain raised as long as the weather permits. (Open windows without screens are an invitation for birds, squirrels, and other animals to enter.) Lubricate the sash tracks by using a candle.

Step 4: Use sweeping compound to help pick up the accumulated dirt on the floor; then hose down the cement. Is there a big oil stain on the floor beneath where the car is parked? Cover the greasy area with powdered cement or use a remover made to help lift the oil from the porous concrete.

Step 5: If the door is opened by sliding on an overhead track, lubricate the pulleys, springs, tracks, etc. with silicone spray. The door should then open and close easily. A door that swings on hinges also needs work—silicone the hinge pins, tighten loose screws and replace missing ones. Replace broken windows in the door with acrylic sheet as the panes break. Loose sections of the doors should be secured by using mending plates. (purchase at hardware store).

Step 6: Return everything to the garage. Be sure there is plenty of room to maneuver the car in and out. Keep bicycles and lawn equipment out of the way of the door on the driver’s side.

Step 7: Keep as many tools, materials, and lawn equipment as possible off the floor. (A) Drill holes in the wood of long-handled tools. Attach a length of 2-by-3 or 2-by-4 board horizontally spanning several studs. Drive long nails into the board and slip the handles onto the nails. (B) Hang the ladder, too. If it does not fit into the space between the studs (in an unfinished garage only), suspend it from the studs by using nails or large hooks. (C) Shelves are most important for storage. They can be supported on brackets made from 2 by 3’s or 2 by 4’s or by using inexpensive metal angles manufactured for this purpose. A deep shelf that clears the front of the studs is an ideal material for use when organizing small hand tools. A multitude of hook designs is available to hold practically any tool. Use screws to attach the board to the studs. If the studs are covered with sheetrock, add small neoprene spacers before the board is secured.

A little-known fact about nonprescription methods of birth control:

None are proven safer or more effective than Emko Contraceptive Foam

Can you protect yourself against pregnancy and avoid serious health risks at the same time?

Many women today are questioning the value of round-the-clock contraceptive protection, especially if it means losing a feeling of health and well-being. Reliable birth control simply doesn't require so serious a sacrifice.

The Emko Company strives to provide the most sensible balance of contraceptive safety, effectiveness, and convenience. Emko Contraceptive Foam was developed to meet the needs of modern well-informed women seeking those benefits.

Simple birth control confirmed by modern science.

Emko Contraceptive Foam contains no hormones and requires no objects residing permanently in your body. There is no risk of the complications which concern people about the Pill or IUD. When used as directed, Emko Contraceptive Foam is a highly effective means of preventing unplanned pregnancy. In fact, during the fifteen years women have been using it, no nonprescription method has been proved more reliable.

One application provides immediate protection in two ways: the foam forms a self-fitting barrier to block movement of sperm. The active ingredient—one of the most potent—then acts to immobilize sperm on contact. Emko Contraceptive Foam is simple and fast-acting. It's been tested and proved effective by the most sophisticated scientific research techniques available.

NOTE: The U.S. Government Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has classified EMKO CONTRACEPTIVE FOAM as a highly effective method of birth control.

Why most women who use Emko Contraceptive Foam have found other methods unacceptable.

Most users have already tried Pills, IUD's, or diaphragms. Fear of long-term health risks, actual discomfort, and inconvenience are the usual reasons for switching from these methods to Emko Contraceptive Foam.

It's often considered a more "natural" alternative because it works the instant you need it, without affecting you 24 hours daily. Emko Contraceptive Foam is birth control you control. And there is nothing to fit or remove afterward, as with a diaphragm.

Unlike any new vaginal suppository, Emko Contraceptive Foam is effective immediately.

There's no waiting for material to melt before protection can be relied upon. Emko Contraceptive Foam is a pleasingly delicate substance that need not interrupt nor interfere.

Three forms of application with advantages over other brands.

The Emko Company was the first to invent and develop contraceptive foam, and none of its imitators has been tested as extensively in published medically supervised research trials.

Only The Emko Company offers two additional application methods: Pre-fil® Contraceptive Foam and Because®. Pre-fil requires no shaking and includes a unique applicator that eliminates the delay of filling during use, since it may be filled in advance. The Because Contraceptor® is today's ultimate in contraceptive foam convenience. Six applications are supplied in a single patented tampon-sized unit.

All the Emko brands of contraceptive foam deliver more of the active spermicidal ingredient per application than any other brand. None contain potentially irritating perfumes.

Look for Emko Contraceptive Foam at drugstores everywhere. No prescription is necessary. To receive additional information, write to the address below for a free booklet, A Well-Balanced Approach to Birth Control.

To reduce summer air-conditioning costs, Ford Sunglas can be used for house windows or glass doors. The new glass absorbs, re-radiates, and reflects sun rays the way automobile tinted glass does or the bronze or gray reflective glass in commercial buildings. It keeps out 24 percent of the sun's heat but lets in 23 percent more daylight than bronze or gray glass, it is claimed. Installation can be as a single sheet or as double glazing in insulating glass windows and in storm windows. Double glass windows help keep heat indoors in winter as well as keep out sun heat in summer. Ford Glass Division, 30 Renaissance Center, Suite 2300, Detroit, Mich. 48243.

Mini greenhouse

For remodeling or a new house, a ready-made greenhouse window unit, the Sun Garden Window, is for indoor plants. Nine sizes range from 3-foot wide by 3-foot high ($175) to 6-foot wide by 4-foot high ($369). Projecting about 12 inches from the wall, the slanted top opens for ventilation. Single glass or insulating glass is available; the metal frame may be anodized white or bronze; there are 2, 3, or 4 shelves depending on the unit's size. Installation cost additional. General Aluminum Corp., P.O. Box 34221, Dallas, Tex. 75234.

Key collector

Hunting for misplaced household key can be avoided with this Mini-Wall cabinet. Wall hung, it has hooks for 20 key (or 10 if desired) with tags to name or number your keys. An index list for recording key numbers or names is also supplied. Of welded steel in a gray enamel finish, it weighs 3 pounds, is 8 inches wide, 10 inches high, 1 1/2 inches deep and is equipped with a lock and two keys. $35, including shipping. Lund Equipment Co., Inc., P.O. Box 152, Breckville, Ohio 44141.

Safety first

A safety ladder for quick escape from fire attaches permanently to house walls. Housed in a 2-inch-wide pole, it swings open automatically when a latch at the top is released. Burglar-proof, the latch can't be opened at ground level unless an optional device is added. In two 6-foot aluminum sections to form a 12-foot ladder with grooved rungs, it fastens to wall brackets on the right when opened. FIREscape, $69.95. Depend on paint-up products
At Whirlpool, we begin with a promise. A promise that the Whirlpool appliance you buy will be built to a standard of quality that meets your expectations as well as ours.

Of course, promises of quality are easy to make. Proof of that quality takes a little more time. Our dishwasher, for example. We designed it to clean dishes, of course. But we wanted it to do even more.

So we included a top rack that tilts easily to accommodate unusual loads.

We built the silverware and cutlery baskets in the door. It makes loading easy and helps keep sharp cutlery out of your way.

We included sound insulation so our dishwasher runs quietly. And we installed an energy saving switch that allows you to air dry your dishes.

We also designed a Super Scour cycle that will handle the drudgery of pots, pans and casseroles for you.

Then of course, we developed several programs and services to help our customers long after the sale is made.

We do this because at Whirlpool, we believe a promise is only a beginning.

TWO WEEKS IN KENYA
A week in tents, a week on Lamu—a resort island off the east coast
By Nadine Bertin

Kenya is justifiably famous for its wildlife. From the tiny, delicate dik-dik, a deerlike creature of chihuahua proportions, to the proud, noble elephant, who steps as softly and silently through the bush as a velvet-slipped monk, there still remains to be seen an extraordinary array of nature on the move. How long some of the animals will still roam is anyone’s guess...seasons of drought and inexterable poaching have decimated not only the elephant herds, but many other species of animals as well. Some day, we may well see the end of the Game, but until then, for anyone who really wants to see the African plains game live (Continued on page 70)

SUPER SUMMER DAYS at a Colorado guest ranch plus where to write to find out about other ranch vacations
By Nancy Richardson

Trail riding at the Vista Verde Ranch
In the northern Colorado highlands between a national forest and a wilderness area is a guest ranch that rejoices in its 35-guest-at-a-time limit. Vista Verde, nestled in high meadows of wild flowers, is owned by Frank and Winton Brophy. In the summer and early fall, the ranch offers an ideal outdoor life that ranges from all-day rides, overnight backpacking, lake sailing at 8,000 feet, to leisurely afternoons wild raspberry picking (to be made into a pie for supper) or bear watching from a hill overlooking the beaver pond. (The bears are always messing up the ranch’s irrigation system by damming and irrigation projects of their own that start in the beaver pond up behind the main lodge.) A long and lazy day could involve a wild flower expedition. Bird walks can be particularly rewarding since recently the ranch has had a pair of nearly extinct Greater Sand Hill Cranes, which nest there each summer. Black bear (friendly, shy relative of the notorious grizzly) sometimes make an appearance and do quantities of elk and mule deer.

The Brophys are set up to have families at Vista Verde with their seven old-fashioned, native-spruce-log cabins, a restaurant that have (Continued on page 70)

HAVE A LARK ON THE FOURTH and other summer trip tips

Join a parade or make your own, July 4. Bring on the big Fourth of July parade this year. Not one where you listen to what’s going on in the next-door toy store. Fun to watch, more fun to be in: families, dogs, ponies, block association summer camps, church groups will come, so are boy scouts, girl scouts, blocks. Call your local Chamber of Commerce to find out how to enter, or organize a parade down your own street. Here’s a short list of July fun across the country:

Bath, Maine: Five towns parade down Bath’s Main Street with barn horses, scout troops. Afterwards in square: a carnival with games, rides, ferris wheel: also a crafts fair with home-baked things for sale. Car races on Kennebec River.

Santa Fe, New Mexico: Start early with the Los Compadres street breakfast. $2 buys buttermilk pancakes, sausage, eggs any way you like. 10 A.M. parade with (Continued on page 1) freely. We are on a photographic safari—the only type the Kenya government still allows. We land at Keekorok, a small airfield in the Masai. A lion lies across the airstrip as we come in, and as we taxi toward the lodge, elephant and buffalo appear to the left of the plane. Myles Burton, our guide and director of the Fig Tree Camps, says we've already seen three of the big five animals that everyone comes to see. Toyotas meet us at the plane (they seem to have replaced Land Rovers) and we drive 45 minutes along trails, dirt roads until we get to Fig Tree Camp. It consists of lots of individual tents plus a kitchen tent and dining tent. It's a pretty setting—inaccessible on three sides—on a promontory at the bend of the Talak River. The trees are full of birds and other things that make interesting noises. Baboons yell at each other, bats squeal. It's not irritating, but everything is chattering, squeaking, thrashing, hooting around us. For some reason nothing ever lands on my lap.

For the next five days, this is my life:

The latest I wake up is 6:30 A.M., having been zipped into my tent as though into a cocoon the night before. The front door of the tent is a big industrial zipper and the windows also zipper open and closed. "Janbo, mensab" says an African boy, as he unzips my tent, leaves me some tea, and disappears. As I drink my tea, I hear the sighing of hot water into a large plastic basin sitting on a tripod outside my tent. Soon I wash my face, brush teeth, and since it is still chilly in the early morning, will wait to have a shower at lunch time. (The shower—a bucket rigged up high with a handle that releases the water in a steady stream. Black plastic curtains the shower.) Trying not to trip over the tent pegs, I go across camp to the dining tent. There I fall into a sensational breakfast: scrambled eggs any way, slices of camp and spotter. Most comfortable seat is then get cameras ready. Morning game oven is a closed pan propped up over an

There I fall into a sensational breakfast: fresh papayas, pineapples, hot and cold drinks and cakes and out again into the Toyotas for the evening game run. By 7:00 P.M. in camp again because it's dark. There aren't the long summer evenings in this part of Africa. Change for dinner: wool knit pants, turtleneck. Special treat at dinner: angel cake baked over the fire with hot fruit conserve poured over it. Afterwards, a big fire is lit, tales told, game runs rehashed. Some people play backgammon. I'm in bed by 9:30. Night noises: sneezing and chattering of little animals. Deep cough in the background is a lion, sounds far away and low, like a fog horn. I think back over the day—the elephant pretending to charge, a lion sauntering, cheetahs doing all sorts of things. Last time I came to Africa I'd seen no cheetah at all. Incredible peace as I fall asleep. This is one way to spend a week in Kenya.

LAMU

But there are many other fascinating aspects to Kenya besides its wildlife. One of these is its beautiful coastline, along the Indian Ocean. There are several resort towns along the coast, namely Mombasa and Malindi, but for a special trip, there is Lamu. Lamu is a Moslem community, inhabited by Africans and Indians. As a result it is a fascinating compendium of architectural influences (for centuries traders stopped here on their travels). Wood carving is one of the chief talents of the people of Lamu, and you see examples of this work in the museum, along with re-created actual rooms (including a sublime nuptial bedroom) and displays of the clothes worn by the people of Lamu who have a Swahili cultural background. Most of these displays were put together by Linda Donley, a young American girl, who is assistant curator at the museum. (She is working under the direction of Mr. Ali Abubakar Mohammed, the museum’s director. Linda and another American girl, an artist, have recently bought a house in the town of Lamu, and are busy restoring it to its original 18th-century design, with the help of local craftsmen.) Should you go to the Lamu Museum, the director would be able to arrange for you to see Linda Donley's house.

The bouncing and jouncing of the plane (they seem to have attached an enormous motor-driven dhow, the local form of sea transport. The Peponi Hotel is a dream, perched on a point of the island, with deserted white sand beaches stretching out on either side.

The rooms are individual white stucco houses, from which you step out onto a green lawn, wildly colored bougainvillea growing on either side, and the beach and sea at your feet. The food is delicious, the service constant. From the hotel it's a 20-minute walk inland along the beach to the town of Lamu, with its many little shops, wonderful local museum, part of the National Museums of Kenya, bank and post office.

Linda and another American girl, an artist, have recently bought a house in the town of Lamu, and are busy restoring it to its original 18th-century design, with the help of local craftsmen.) Should you go to the Lamu Museum, the director would be able to arrange for you to see Linda Donley’s house.

If you’re not in the mood to walk back to the Peponi Hotel, across from the museum’s entrance there is a long dock where you can usually find a native with a dhow, who will motor or sail you the 10 minutes along the coastline back to the hotel. There are no cars, not even bicycles, which is another reason one can so easily “let go” on Lamu Island.

What you will need on safari

Everything should be washable. There are no dry-cleaning facilities in the bush, so forget about the divine gabardine pants—and jackets, even if they did tell you it was a “safari jacket.” Real safari jackets are made of heavy beige cotton—often with short sleeves, and the older they are and the more they have been washed and ironed, the softer they become and the more you love them. Buy these in Nairobi along with khaki shirts and shorts, desert boots, film.

Don’t worry about your luggage. It stays locked up in the storage room of your hotel. When you go on safari, you are issued a smallish suitcase or metal footlocker, like the one kids use in camp, often with short sleeves, and the older they are and the more they have been washed and ironed, the softer they become and the more you love them. Buy these in Nairobi along with khaki shirts and shorts, desert boots, film.

What to do in Nairobi

Shopping in Nairobi is great fun. Starting off from the center of town, which is the front door of the New Stanley Hotel, you will find good shops for safari clothes, cotton batik fabrics, carved wooden figurines and other African art, including paintings, jewelry, mats, Masai crafts. Along wide Kenyatta Boulevard, and on almost every street, you'll find stalls full of these local crafts. Recently, the Government of Kenya shut down all curio shops selling ivory or other items made of animal skins, horns, etc. Even if these things are offered to you, do not buy them. Everyone must help in the effort to save these animals from destruction.

Nairobi has several very good hotels:
1. The New Stanley Hotel: the hub of the city, an old-fashioned and fascinating place. Just standing in its lobby watching the comings and goings is worth it. Better yet, find yourself a curbside table at the outside café, the Thorn Tree, and watch the world go by.
2. The Norfolk Hotel: One of the prettiest hotels anywhere. The rooms are in different sets of low buildings that surround a beautiful inner garden which is full of large cages that hold exotic birds. There's a wonderful breakfast and lunch buffet that will quickly acquaint you with East African food, which is varied and delicious.
3. The Nairobi Hilton: Ultra-modern, and up to the standards of this fine group of hotels. Good shops.

There are very adequate hairdressers at all hotels. Electrical hair appliances can be used in Nairobi but not in a tent. The ideal thing is to have your hair cut short or permed so it can wash-and-dry or have it long enough to twist up into a knot.

The headquarters of the National Museums of Kenya is in Nairobi. Do not miss the new wing: The Louis B. Leakey Center for Prehistory. In it, see mind-stretching displays of human and animal bones and fossils that date back millions of years.

Have a lark on the Fourth

San Idlefonso and Tesuque Indians riding horseback, girl scouts in uniform, and others dressed as pioneers. Mariachi play on the plaza during a picnic lunch. Later, country and western square dance groups take over. At night: fireworks at the Santa Fe High School.

Williamsburg, Virginia: 10 A.M.: militia muster and review of the Virginia State Garrison Regiment Fifes and Drums. Then troop ing of the color: 13 flags from the 13 original states; every body marches to the Bruton Parish Church.

It's time we stopped filling up every square inch of space in our cities with new construction and start preserving space. Space to walk. Room to be.

Protect the human and environmental quality of your community by joining the National Trust for Historic Preservation. Historic preservation means more than saving old houses. Write: National Trust for Historic Preservation, Department 0606, 740 Jackson Place, NW, Washington, DC 20006.
Corkscrew Sanctuary has a mile-long boardwalk that leads visitors through swampland. There see 700-year-old bald cypress trees, wood storks, exotic vines and plants. Greenwich, Connecticut: 400 acres of woods, open fields, ponds, streams, and marshland. Adult ecology workshops available. Admission $3 for adults, $1 for students, under 12 free. For complete information, write National Audubon Society, 950 Third Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022.

Two of Venice's best hotels—the Cipriani and the Gritti—have the same idea this summer: a hotel-based cooking course for their clients who know how to love to cook, and who want to learn more. The Gritti Palace (Cigahotels), is offering three- and five-day cooking courses from June 26 to August 18. [Tie Siding, Wyo.] The Cipriani, Natale Rusconi (a man whose talent for living and especially cooking was recognized by the three-day course, $373 double occupancy.]

General manager of the Gritti until last fall, and now general manager of the Cipriani, Natale Rusconi (a man whose talent for living and especially cooking had sparked the Gritti's superb-chef fest in the past) has devised a famous-cook vacation at the Cipriani from June 20 to June 30 with Simone Beck. Mrs. Beck's ten-day French cooking course can be taken in a three-day section for $238; five days at $357.90; or ten days, $644.22. The fee includes breakfast and cooking classes. Write or telephone the Cipriani (Tel: 85068) for additional information. (Mrs. Beck has a schedule that shows what will be cooked each day. You can reserve in the United States through H.R.I.: (800) 223-6800.)

SUMMER MEANS ENERGY—

Time to wake up, limber your limbs, try something you’ve never done before. You could cook a new dish, start a new project, plan an exciting trip, work the kind of easy decorating miracle that makes the house look suddenly fresh, reborn. This issue is full of ideas that start summer right here

Miniature vegetables are big and getting bigger, especially among gardeners with less space than they know what to do with. You can grow 3-inch carrots, cantaloupes, portable watermelons, and one-serving heads of lettuce. Tiny vegetables mature early, too, and were tailor-made for pot gardening. You can get seeds from the Park Seed Company, or check your local garden center. Shopping information, page 148.

If you've gone fishin', the newsy way to cook your catch is in newspapers, outdoors on an open fire. Wrap a cleaned, salted fish in waxed paper, then in layers of newspapers to make a neat packet four times thicker than the fish. Dampen thoroughly, set in the fire. If packet catches, just douse with water. Writer and cooking teacher Beatrice Ojakangas says a 2- or 3-pound fish cooks in an hour.

How about an evening at the drive-in—just for old times’ sake? The film to see this season will be Grease, John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John’s new flick about a high-school romance in the duck-tailed, pedal-pusher 1950s. A boop-she-boop, high-school romance in the duck-tailed, Olivia Newton-John’s new flick about a Soft-as-a-cloud fabrics are the ones to use this summer: handwoven cottons in light bright colors, wafting over from India and the Far East. Airy gauzes to gather into a tent for a bed or a porch; the blurry hand-painted look of ikat; and today’s madras—large-scale stripes and plaids for summer slipcovers, tablecovers, or a roomy caftan.

Put on a happy face—one that looks tan even if it’s never been exposed to the sun’s drying rays. New tinted moisturizers, just on the market, are washed with healthy color, some touched with gold for a subtle sun-shiny look at night. Colour Rub by Clinique; Sportcream by Borghese; Shine Control Lotion by Estée Lauder; Tinted Moisturizer by Moon Drops.

The freshest way to set a summer table: White on white—romantic, graphic, very young. Try a white damask tablecloth, architectural white plates, traditional oversize knives and forks in the whitest silver, and goblets of clear glass—as they do at Le Relais restaurant in New York, where two yellow or apricot tulips nod in frosted white flutes at each place... Or, spread a white cloth over a glass-topped table as Lella Vignelli does, use clear glass plates and goblets, glass bowls of airy white flowers and white grapes, and glass decanters—one to hold wine, the other a candle. The frosted look comes from diffused white light glowing up from beneath the table.

A different kind of stenciling—THE new summer refresher for your rooms. Water-colory, transparent, brushed on with airy strokes instead of the traditional pounce method, the new technique lets you cover your walls with vines, flowers, and other summery motifs at a clip of 30 seconds per square foot. Everything you need comes in Adele Bishop’s new kit (about $30 to $40 depending on the design). Shopping information, page 148.

Try an island meal: Bahamian “peas ‘n’ rice,” an old native dish made with gandules (pigeon peas), long-grain or brown rice, and the freshest fish you can find. In a large saucepan, sauté an onion until transparent. Add a mashed garlic clove, two peeled, cut-up tomatoes, a cup of soaked pigeon peas, a sprinkling of oregano, and a bay leaf. Let the flavors mingle in a communal simmer, then add water and rice according to rice directions. While rice cooks, steam fish, slope fish filets (islanders use grouper, kingfish, or other firm muscly fish) in a covered frying pan with nothing but a little oil, a little water, maybe an educated dash of white wine. Serve over the rice mixture, accompanied by a glass of crisp chilled muscadet.

Take a needlecraft tour with a famous needlewoman. For two weeks in August, you can travel to castles, museums, and manor houses in Scotland and England to see some of the most beautiful needlework in the world. You’ll meet personal friends of Erica Wilson as well as other needlework enthusiasts, get some needlework instruction, and have a chance to do some traditional stitching yourself. For details, write to Erica Wilson Needle Works, 717 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10021
Dancers circle the maypole and feast from a fragrant picnic buffet, on the day of the summer solstice—a time to enjoy the longest day of the year out of doors.

A midsummer party is a tradition of Swedish-born Maletta Pfeiffer and her husband, Werner, who gather with family and friends at their New England house to dance in traditional costumes and enjoy an outdoor buffet of grandmother's herring, dilled potatoes, homemade breads, and fruits and cheeses. For recipes, see page 139.

SUSAN WOOD
A day of gaiety, music, and wonderful food prepared the Swedish way.
The longest day of the year is always cause for celebration. And the Pfeiffers celebrate here just as their ancestors did in Sweden. The day begins like a storybook tale: In the morning, the young girls pick daisies, Queen Anne's lace, and clover for crowns, and dress in authentic Swedish folk costumes. Inside and out, the house is adorned with wild flowers and leaves; birch branches decorate the maypole around which dancing to the music of a violin goes on until bedtime, when flowers are tucked under pillows to ensure romantic dreams.

Painter Werner Pfeiffer, above, drives his guests by tractor to the Swedish summer feast. Left: His daughter, Michaela, in the arms of her friend, Ingela Nilson. Both of them wear the flowery crowns they have just made from wild flowers and show off their pristine, colorful folk costumes.
A picnic! Is there a friendlier way to get together on Independence Day (or any summer's day)? Here, an old-fashioned picnic in the Shaker tradition.

A picnic at Hancock Shaker Village in Hancock, Mass., with delicious homemade dishes from the past: Stone crocks hold lemonade and cold tea; wooden baskets protect Concord grape and rhubarb-lemon pies; sandwiches and meat pies are piled on gingham. Recipes, page 48. Inset, right: Shaker loaves sliced the old-fashioned way.
Shakers, who observe strict religious customs and are famous for their beautiful furniture and food, have always loved picnics—and would pack one at the slightest provocation. There was a great deal of coming and going in their villages and the food for each trip was chosen with care: It had to keep well and be delicious. In the voluminous letters the Shakers exchanged, they described in detail how they took children for a day of picnicking, games, brook wading, and fishing. At this picnic, photographed at the Hancock Shaker Village in Hancock, Massachusetts, is some of their delicious food re-created from recipes from The Best of Shaker Cooking by Amy Bess Miller and Persis Fuller (Collier). The authors evoke the charms of these outings, quoting from the Shakers themselves: "Some aged sisters... placed great hampers of food in the wagon drawn by old Bailey. They spread their humble feast under a blooming red bud tree." The Hancock Shaker Village's 21 buildings are open June 1 to Nov. 1, 9:30 to 5. Its special events include dinners for visitors, a crafts festival, a farmer's market, and, of course, a picnic.

Above: Gingham-covered baskets ready to be loaded onto the horse-and-buggy.
Right, from top: In the Hancock Shaker Village kitchen: green bean and lettuce salad in preparation; broiled chicken with cream of tarragon sauce; hand pies—4-inch crusts filled with pork, sage, apples; cream layer cake, herb cookies, and fresh fruit for dessert.
Opposite page: All the makings for sweet cherry sandwiches—a mixture of crushed pitted cherries, chopped almonds, lemon juice, and sugar.

Herbal delights

For an herbal bath, hang a cheesecloth bag of camomile, pennyroyal, mint, lavender, sage, or thyme under running water, then let it steep. Nasturtiums pep up summer salads and sandwiches. Freeze lemon balm or mint in ice cubes, add to iced tea. To extend the basil season, layer leaves with olive oil or kosher salt. Refrigerate in a covered jar. A little rosemary thrown on the coals adds flavor and fragrance to your barbecues.

CELEBRATE SUMMER Plant a garden around your swimming pool, grow succulents on a sunny terrace, keep canteens full of fresh fruit juices, decorate dining rooms to look and feel like blooming summer gardens.

Pretty food: peach leaves around a peach cobbler, white cake with a circlet of roses, nasturtiums on lemon or orange sherbet.

Glasses of nasturtiums accent a table set with country china. Wooden chairs are painted white, and padded to match the curtains. Underfoot, a multicolored rag rug. Interior design, Parish-Hadley.
 Meals in the woods can be fresh, tasty, and totable. Cooking teacher Van Mabon shares her recipes for exciting backpacking food (page 42).

For only $550, you can replace your tent in the woods with a weekend cabin that's easy to build.

Above: An old-fashioned sleeping porch inspired this low-cost weekend cabin, more comfortable than a tent, and still close to nature. The 7-by-12-foot dwelling rests on wooden posts set in concrete, with a corrugated fiberglass roof and clear acrylic windows at either end. A drop-down tarp shelters sliding screen panels along one wall. Architect Tom McHugh assembled the shelter in 3 days, after prefabricating the pieces in his city apartment. Total cost, about $550. Fruity breakfasts: frozen yogurt and orange juice whirled in the blender, or a bowl of pineapple, melon, and peaches with cream.

Food, fragrance, flowers

Two exuberant gardens — one of vegetables, one of herbs — both planted so thickly there’s no room for weeds.

It’s hard to imagine this garden as it once was — rocky land claimed by weeds and brambles around a neglected 1800s house. First the house was set to rights, then an herb garden was planted — such a delight it proved too small; and a vegetable and fruit garden — so plentiful it seemed too big. “With this expanse of lawn, the gardens had to be big or look out of scale,” says fashion illustrator Richard Holiman, who restored the Connecticut property with Jacques Alschech, “but there wasn’t enough time for weeding or putting by all that food we were growing.” The solution: Set plants so closely there’s no vacancy for weeds, and cut the productivity of the vegetable rows in half by corralling the crops in wood-framed beds surrounded by wide wood-chip paths. Silver King artemisia banks a corner of the fence near the herb garden, and care-free wild flowers in a hay-mulched border make an easy transition between vegetable beds and field. Now “the only real chore is lawn-mowing,” and the owners still produce baskets of fresh vegetables and herbs to share in season.
Give some time to the herb garden, and it will give you soft-spoken color that looks beautiful all year.

With an herb garden you don’t despair in spring. Most herbs are perennials, so the garden looks good even when you’re just planting the vegetables and other annuals,” says Dick Holiman. Herb foliage not only looks nice from mud-time to mid-winter, it provides fragrance, flavor for food, even wreaths for Christmas. Herbal flowers are a joy in themselves: soft-spoken pastel pinks, lavenders, blues, yellows. Because most hardy herbs can be easily divided and moved about to fill out a garden, an herb garden need not be expensive. Mr. Holiman started with a row of santolinas, a few boxwoods, and about two dozen prolific lamb’s-ears—the backbone of many a beginner’s herb garden. “Santolina may the biggest expense,” he says, “because you can’t divide it. But that silver color and crisp texture are worth it.” To start their garden, Mr. Holiman and Mr. Alschech cut a rectangle in the weedy grass, outlined it with gray stones that surfaced in the digging, laid out brick-edged beds and pebble paths, and planted herbs they hoped would multiply. That year they learned three principles of garden-making. “If you’re gardening in a grassy area, till three times, rake three times, then wait three weeks—and maybe the weeds and rocks will come up before you plant.” Then, “If you’re going to have a garden in a field, you’ll need some sort of backdrop—that’s the reason for the back fence and tall cutting border.” And last, “Symmetry is not essential. Visual balance is more important than measurements.” Many herbs came from author/herbalist Adelma Simmons’s Caprilands Herb Farm. More about it, page 178.

How creating a room of your own can help you discover yourself
By Colette Dowling

Editor's note: Colette Dowling is a freelance writer and author of two books: The Skin Game (Lippincott, 1971) and a memoir called How to Love a Member of the Opposite Sex (Coward. McCann & Geoghegan, 1976). At present she is writing a book on neurotic conflicts in women. Born in Washington, D.C., she majored in English at Trinity College. She came to New York City as a Mademoiselle Guest Editor and later joined the staff. She did not start to write until after her second child was born. Together with her three children and Lowell Miller, also a writer, she lives in an old farmhouse in Rhinebeck, N.Y.

Lately I've been thinking a lot about space. I have more of it—both on the outside and on the inside—than ever before, which may be the reason it's suddenly become a problem. I look out my window at vast, rolling hills and, in the distance, a line of trees planted by the farmer in the early part of the century to keep this house safe from north winds, and I think how fortunate we are. The breeze from the river is soft as spring, the geraniums bloom, and all is apparent well. But I'm disturbed. In this snug, three-story farmhouse, I feel there's no place where I can be totally alone—alone in the morning, alone at night, alone whenever I want to be alone. The very fact that I want the option of solitude is what disturbs. It goes against the grain of what I've been taught a woman is supposed to need. (The farmer's wife, she didn't want this, did she? Wasn't she content, summers, to put by her Mason jars on the canning shelves in the basement, and later, in winter, to haul the pickles and preserves up to the kitchen on the dumbwaiter? With all this land, three barns, and a stable, her husband must have been prosperous. In the midst of it all, did she yearn for a place of her own?)

The problem is this: I want something I feel I don't have the right to, and so I have allowed all the spaces in our new home to be filled up by the others—Lowell, the children. Now, with the melancholy fragrance of lilac filling the house, I feel not that something has been taken from me, but worse: I have not taken myself seriously enough to see to it that my needs got met. Wondering why this is, I think back to places where I lived earlier, and it occurs to me that my attitudes toward my environment and toward myself, have changed.

For years I lived in New York and made my spaces the way urban dwellers do, pressing back the walls only with the strength of my inner dreams. We lived on top of one another, five of us crowded into five small rooms, a condition that, in retrospect, would seem impossible for anyone who wanted to write. Maybe I needed that start, those tight, narrow halls and closed-in rooms, to make my inner self bloom.

I wrote, first, in a tiny, sunlit dining room while the babies slept in the early afternoon. That space was changed by the addition of some glass shelves and small plants in the south window. The plants softened the hard edges of the tar-covered roofs outside. The plants both brought the world in closer and kept it out.

We moved to the Upper West Side to a larger apartment with a study. We fit the room out with two big desks, two lamps, two typewriters, and occasionally my husband and I worked in there at the same time. Still, when both of us needed isolation for our work, he was the one who got it. In those days, the arrangement struck me as little other than inconvenient, even fitting, somehow, for didn't I have another space in the apartment to call my own? It was the kitchen.

There the arrangement of things was left entirely to me. Plates, saucers, wire whisks—all mine. In exchange for being the first to enter the kitchen in the morning and the last to leave it at night, I reigned supreme.

The children were older by then. The girls had carpeting in their bedroom which helped to absorb the noise. Often I wrote at 2 o'clock in the morning while the apartment buildings on West End Avenue fitfully slept.

Now, some years later, I am in a more egalitarian relationship, and with the greater equality I find I want more. Not just a room of my own (I have that), but a special, remote place, a place located somewhere between the hubbub of the family and the farthest distant star. It's a strange fix to be a woman, to be a mother and a writer all at once. I need my connection with my family just as urgently as I need my inner freedom. The way I arrange the space about me reflects this double need.

Finding out that owning a house means owning everything—including the dirt

By Diana Loercher

Editor's Note: Diana Loercher is feature writer and art critic in the Eastern News Bureau of The Christian Science Monitor. Born in Rhode Island, she received her B.A. from Wellesley College and her M.A. from the University of Chicago, and subsequently studied at the University of Frankfurt on an exchange fellowship. In 1973, she won the New York State Bar Association Award for the best legal story in a national publication (on trial by jury). She is married to Edward Pazicky, an executive of Conrail.

□ When my husband and I left our New York apartment and moved to our first house in the suburbs, we left many things behind, one of the most precious I was soon to discover—our cleaning woman. I had always had a cleaning woman in New York even when single and living in a studio apartment because I considered myself "too busy" with my job and my social life to take care of it myself.

Given my lack of domestic proclivities, the prospect of moving into an eight-room house without a cleaning woman filled me with profound anxiety. Not only did I have the same demanding job but a lengthy commute to New York, and my friends. I had never been married less than a year and had barely gotten settled in our apartment, a floor-through in a town house with brick walls and a fireplace, which I lovingly and uncharacteristically referred to as "our little nest." We also used to congratulate ourselves with, "It's just like living in the country!" and I secretly wondered if perhaps we didn't prefer the illusion to the reality.

It quickly became apparent that there wasn't "good" reason not to go, other than that we didn't feel like it at the time. But having both been raised in the carpe-diem — opportunity-only-knocks- once, nothing-ventured-nothing-gained tradition, we concluded that maybe we wouldn't rather be dead than be in Philadelphia after all.

At that time we hadn't decided whether to buy a town house in Philadelphia or a house in the suburbs. (It was definitely to be a house for investment purposes.) Although I was the instigator of urban flight in the first place, I was beginning to feel apprehensive about leaving New York, the city, with its culture and endless if exhausting stimulation. Then, too, there were my friends. I had visions of turning into a vegetable, visions of bridge, supermarkets, shopping malls, television, hair curlers, etc.

To give ourselves time to decide, we temporarily rented a furnished apartment in Philadelphia's "Center City," in a high-rise on a heavily trafficked street next to a fire station and one block from the "porno" district. Outside it was like a war zone, inside it was like the Holiday Inn in atmosphere and decor. In short, we needed a home fast.

After about two months of searching our souls and the surrounding areas, we decided to buy a house near Trenton close to the railroad station, which would mean a 45-minute commute for my husband and an hour for me. What tipped the balance finally was that I was finding the Philadelphia commute more arduous than I anticipated and my husband really didn't want to live in a city any more. So we bought a house just over the border from Trenton in Pennsylvania, the one state we never thought to look in before—another lesson in the futility of long-range planning.

My husband and I are very fussy people. We have very definite tastes, which fortunately tend to coincide and are the type that could and would spend months looking for "our dream house." We had no such luxury under these circumstances and after falling in love with a 1715 farmhouse that was as impractical as it was enchanting, we decided to be "sensible" and buy a house that suited our needs if not our fancy. My one stipulation was that I would not buy a house in a development. I wanted an older house in a neighborhood with "character." My husband agreed to forgo the advantages of a new house with low maintenance.

We finally found a house in a cozy Colonial suburb, wooded but not rural. The house was the right price and right size with three bedrooms, one which I could use as a "room of my own" for way of light

A new way of light

While serenity is the living room's great appeal, down-to-earth practicality makes the rest of the house inviting. "The owners wanted a second entertaining area where they could have very informal get-togethers," says designer John Saladino, who, with project designer Ramon Sanchez, came up with a unique plan that turned the original den, dining room, and kitchen into one large room for everything—a sweep of space he calls "multi-zoned." Conversation, bar, and dining zones fill the house from front to back; along one side and serving all three areas is the cooking zone with a breakfast nook and a 5-foot Thermopaned greenhouse.

A 15-foot-long wall of tongue-in-groove pine siding that stretches all the way from the refrigerator, past the ovens, to the greenhouse on the other end slides open to make the cooking zone part of the one-room living. The red chopping-block-topped ovens are back-to-back against the same size and color storage cabinet in the adjoining dining zone "so the whole thing looks like a big red cube." Closed, the wall becomes part of the overall design: The same porch siding was used for other walls and as a ceiling in the kitchen and over the bar.

In a house that's a tower, a big glass living-dining room with a lofty point of view.

Virtually airborne, with three glass walls at treetop level, the light-filled living-dining room, above, commands glorious views of the Pacific seacoast below, and is sheltered by a soaring canopy of a roof. Architect John Lautner, who designed the hillside house for William and Johanna Jordan, calls the room "an island in the sky." Stairs in the glass entrance tower, left, top, spiral up to the terrazzo-paved room. Center stage, a circular, brass-hooded fireplace is a focal point at night. Banquettes line two walls; twin tables at the dining end, right, may be arranged for meals or desk work.
The William Jordans' house is really two houses in one. Living-dining room and kitchen form the glass-sheathed half that seems to float airily in the sky. The other is the solidly enclosed wing that houses sculptor Johanna Jordan's two-story studio, a garage, study, and guest room. The two parts are linked structurally by concrete beams, and the circular stair tower serves both as the house entrance. To fit the house on the small, steep site, architect Lautner placed the 33-foot-long, 12-foot-high main room on massive concrete piers. This not only made it possible to gain the view, but left ground below for a courtyard garden for Mrs. Jordan and a large master bedroom and bath. "The house is a joy—like living in sculpture," Mrs. Jordan says, appreciating the beauty of the structure, the finesse of details. Glare from the ocean is no problem: Glass walls on three sides of the big room balance the light and roof overhangs shade it. Late afternoon west sun is blocked by sail-like shades raised or lowered by a magnetized pole. For storage, there are pull-out cabinets for records, turntable, tuner, and two speakers under the glass wall. Wall cabinets for china and glass are backed by a ceiling-high circular kitchen pantry. Interior walls and ceilings of matched Philippine mahogany glow, rubbed with oil in a marine finish.

Secluded and snug, the master bedroom is at ground level beneath living-dining room. Concrete beams are exposed, floor carpeted, wood lines wall, ceiling. Glass sliding doors open to terrace, partly...

Texture on texture, natural and pale, in a room where color is alive and growing

The strong rhythms in this living room come from the colors and textures of trees and natural fibers—the contrast of nubby wicker against smooth leather, coarse cotton against shiny ceramic tile. "We created a simple environment as a foil for the owner's art collection," explains decorator Michael Taylor. Except for the yucca trees, left, everything—walls, ceiling, fabric—pares down to a soft white so the eye focuses naturally on paintings. Special lighting designed by Michael Taylor and Russell MacMasters to spotlight art and a fossilized stone coffee table. Painting above fireplace by Morris Louis; above banquette, paintings by Darby Bannard, and, to the right, by Richard Diebenkorn.
The watercolor look of hand-painted fabrics brings the sky and sea indoors.

Hand-painted raw silk sweeps desert sunset all through this city apartment. "The fabric floats into the mirrors," says designer Whitney Chase, "and gives the impression of infinity in a small space." In the bedroom, right, sky and city are reflected on walls and ceiling, and the platform bed helps to double the room size. The soft rainbow colors of the bedroom shift to sand tones in the living room, above. Miss Chase brought the outdoors in with natural fibers—the cactus wood mantel, wool carpets, raw silk, and desert plants. The "boomerang"-topped coffee table stands on interchangeable chunks of Lucite; the dining table has fluorescent lights concealed in its base.

Rugs from ribbons
An easy new needlecraft that lets you quick-stitch rugs and pillows with a satiny finish

It's called "Ribbonpoint," and with this inventive new craft you can make fabric mosaic pillows, rugs, evening bags, and belts with the sheen of silk. Patricia Mabry created the technique "to bring out the artist in everyone." A needlepoint-lover herself, she wanted to give the craft a patina that mixes well with the antique ribbon-and-lace look of some of today's fabrics. In the rose rug here, two simple stitches give the effect of silk, but "because the ribbon is nylon," Mrs. Mabry says, "the rug won't fuzz and wears as well as wool." Ribbon covers spaces rather than filling holes, so the stitches—slightly different from those of needlepoint—run in diagonals and cover a canvas quickly. Kits include designed canvas, needles, ribbons, and complete instructions (a rug costs about $350; pillows start at $20). You may order a canvas with your own design by sending a drawing. To see a catalogue of other designs, write to: Patricia Mabry Enterprises, Inc., P.O. Box 523, Fairfield, Ala. 35064. To learn how to do the stitches used in this rug, see page 40.

Foot news

Down-to-earth advice from doctors, for walkers, runners, joggers, or anyone interested in foot comfort

By Catherine Ettlinger

Consider your feet. You stand on them, walk on them — up to 70,000 miles in an average 70-year lifetime at the rate of 18,000 steps a day — you jog on them, run on them, even ski, ice skate, and dance on them. Yet, how much do you really know about your feet? Do you care for them as well as you care for the rest of your body? If not, here are some facts to help you get started, from the sole up!

Each foot is a precision-built network of 28 bones held together by 120 ligaments and activated by at least 20 muscles. Feet usually start life trouble-free, but an estimated 90 percent of all American feet develop minor foot problems by the time they reach adulthood. "The only real hope of eliminating foot problems is to spend your whole life walking barefoot on grass," says Dr. John Waller, consultant to the Institute of Sports Medicine and Athletic Trauma at Lenox Hill Hospital in New York. He is an orthopedic surgeon specializing in foot and ankle problems. "Since that solution is out of the question, the best thing is for everyone to find a pair of shoes that fit." (See opposite page for what to look for when buying street shoes and ones for running.)

The most common foot problems are caused by wearing improperly fitting shoes and walking in them day after day. "What happens is that layers of hard skin — known as corns and calluses — form to protect the foot from abnormal pressure," says Dr. Waller. Calluses are caused by diffuse pressure; corns from a focal point of pressure. Dr. Waller says that by massaging a pumice stone on either a corn or a callus after a bath or shower when the skin has been softened, you can help relieve much of your discomfort. "Pain is caused when the soft tissue around the corn or callus is squeezed against the hardened skin," explains Dr. Waller. You can help relieve pain with precut moleskin pads (available in drugstores) to fit around corns — or small sheets of moleskin that you can cut yourself to fit around calluses. "These help to distribute the pressure," says Dr. Waller. Or....he suggests that you try a change of shoes. Find a pair that doesn't aggravate the sensitive areas. As long as the cause of the pressure remains, the corn or callus will return. If, however, x-rays show that the pressure is caused internally by a bone, surgical steps may be necessary, though these instances are rare.

An abnormality in the foot may show up in discomfort you feel in the knees or back. Feet with fallen arches or feet that arch too much are examples. The best way to deal with flat or highly arched feet is to make them as comfortable as possible, according to Dr. Waller. "A healthy foot is essentially a comfortable foot," he says. For flat feet, he recommends firm leather shoes or clogs that will provide support to hold the feet firmly in place. Overly arched feet benefit from a very flexible shoe, like the popular Wallabys. You may even want to consider a specially molded shoe — commonly known as an orthopedic shoe — if you have bunions (which are now thought to be hereditary), hammer toes, or overlapping toes. Shoes do not cause these conditions but they certainly can aggravate them. Dr. Waller sends many of his patients to buy orthopedic shoes at Eneslow-Apex in New York.
How to choose a good street shoe

From Dr. Bernard Rosenstein:
- Measure the shoe to your foot: Fit your heel into the heel of the shoe, then put the ball of your foot on top of the front of the shoe. When flattened there should be a little bit of shoe showing around your forefoot. Most shoe stores will be happy to let you bring a pair of shoes to your foot doctor for approval, if you ask them in advance.
- Women's shoes should have no more than a 1-inch heel (the heel is measured on its breast side or inside). Men's shoes should have no more than a 1'/2-inch heel.
- Soles should be substantial and solid. Wedged soles are best.
- The shoe shanks should be solid (the shank or medial center is the area between the heel and the ball of the foot that helps support the arch). You can check for solidity by pressing with two fingers—a solid shank shouldn't collapse.
- Before you buy a pair of shoes, put both shoes on and walk to make sure they're comfortable.

How to choose a good running shoe

From Dr. John Waller:
- The heel should be about 1/4 inch higher than the sole. When running you come down hard on the back of the heel and the lift compensates for the shortness of the calf muscles and also provides adequate shock absorption.
- The widest part of the heel should be 3 inches.
- Hold the heel with one hand, the toe with the other and bend the shoe. A good shock absorber will flex easily.
- Measure the width of the metatarsal area to make sure it's wide enough to accommodate your foot plus a pair of cotton socks.
- Put the shoes on a table with heels facing you.

When your feet hurt, who can you run to?

A podiatrist, formerly called a chiropodist, is a D.P.M., Doctor of Podiatric Medicine. He specializes in foot problems and is licensed to treat the foot with surgery and with drugs.

An orthopedic surgeon is an M.D., who has studied the interaction of muscles, bones, and joints in the whole body. There are orthopedists who concentrate on the foot and ankle.

Ask your family doctor to refer you to a podiatrist or an orthopedic surgeon. It's important that the doctor you choose be affiliated with a hospital you know, in case you have to have surgery.

Don't be surprised if your podiatrist or orthopedist refers you to another specialist for specific problems—like a vascular surgeon for conditions that involve circulation or a dermatologist for skin conditions like eczema or extreme dryness.

For good orthopedic shoes, look for a pedorthist. There are approximately 500 pedorthists in America who are licensed to prescribe footwear and related appliances.

Greenhouse living in a cliffside house where entertaining is an indoor-outdoor pleasure

Here's a house that's a real cliff-hanger—it juts straight out of a mountainside overlooking Angel's Island and San Francisco Bay from Sausalito. To get to it, you climb 100 or so steps from the road below—a delightful hike because the steps are gradual and are interspersed at several intervals with beautiful gardens put in by one of the owners, plantscape designer Bob Bell (his San Francisco shop is The Greenery, transplanted from New York City). You enter the house through a brand new greenhouse-dining room (see it, next page), forgetting for a moment that the outdoor gardens have become indoor ones. "It couldn't be more of an outdoor living space if it tried," says Mr. Bell. He and co-owner Lou Walker built the greenhouse themselves, sandwiching it between the hillside and the living room, which opens through sliding glass doors onto a private deck. "We think of the whole space as one," says Mr. Bell, who loves to have dinners in the greenhouse—they frequently cook for as many as 16 people—and afterwards move to the living area for a night of disco dancing. Good-looking white stereo speakers (above) become pedestals for a lamp on one side of the room and a silver rooster ice bucket on the other. The pull-down canvas awning has built-in electric heaters.

Mountain greenery
The greenhouse-dining room with plants everywhere and a veritable garden for a table: tulips in a Mexican twig basket on a mirror base that multiplies their pleasure; a jungle-printed tablecloth; and, just for fun, carved-wood ducks for candleholders and a terra-cotta mouse cautiously surveying the scene. Through the back door, a potting shed that also has an entrance to the kitchen—a shortcut to make serving and clearing dinner easier. Windows to the right of the doorway open to a counter above the kitchen sink.

Above, left: The greenhouse, flush against the hillside. Above: Co-owner and chef Lou Walker. Above, right: What used to be the exterior chimney now serves as the interior wall of the greenhouse—a natural backdrop for the metal-skirted buffet and white terra-cotta plant pot lamp (both by John Dickinson). On the chimney breast, two big baskets, one shaped like a crab.

Right: In the kitchen, two kinds of Mexican tile, for the floor and back-splashes. Above the sink, a bay leaf wreath that's plucked often for cooking.
With the coming of summer, the appetite turns to lighter, crisper foods that luckily, often take less time to cook. This menu is from Summer Food (Atheneum) by Judith Olney, who runs a cooking school in Durham, North Carolina.

From start to finish, it should not take more than 30-45 minutes: Most of the work is assembly—stemming mushrooms, squeezing lemon juice, shelling and deveining shrimp (jumbo ones, so they take less time), about 20 minutes. The cooking of the brochettes and their sauce should take another 15 minutes total. The brochettes could also be assembled ahead of time and refrigerated, if you had 15 minutes earlier in the day.

Begin by making the vinaigrette and tossing it with sliced avocados. Once the brochettes are assembled, reduce shallots and lemon juice for the sauce, then cook the shrimp. Continue with the sauce. While the raspberry pâté does have to be made a day ahead, it is simply too good to resist, as well as being easy to prepare (another 15-minute assembly job), and could be done while cooking dinner the day before.

Great new ideas for cooking on barbecues and open grills: marinades and sauces, recipes and tips for setting and keeping a good fire

By Jane Ellis

BEEF MARINADE
From Doris Tobias, food and wine writer
To me a proper barbecue requires a angry marinade. I like to steep about 6 pounds of top sirloin steak for at least 4 hours in the following mixture: 1 bottle of good, dry red wine, 1 cup peach brandy, juice of 1 lemon, 8-9 shallots lightly bruised with the back of a knife, 2 teaspoons fresh, chopped ginger (or ½ teaspoon powdered ginger), 6 sprigs each Italian parsley and fresh coriander, and plenty of freshly ground black pepper. Drain, and grill until desired doneness. Serve the meat in ¼-inch-thick slices on crusty French bread. The marinade makes a delectable sauce: Strain the honey and add an equal amount of whiskey.

SAUCE FOR CHICKEN
From Edna Lewis, cookbook author
Mix ¼ cup cider vinegar, 2 tablespoons honey, 2 tablespoons soy sauce, 1 clove garlic, minced, pinch cayenne to taste, and ¼ cup butter in a small saucepan and heat just a touch. Spoon over a chicken, cut in serving pieces and grilled over very hot coals to sear meat quickly, turning often. Do not overcook. Serve with an assortment of raw vegetables, such as tomatoes, sliced mushrooms, and green pepper rings.

CHINESE BARBECUES
From May Wong Trent, New Jersey cooking-school teacher and cookbook author
Combine to taste, hoisin sauce, grated fresh ginger, dry sherry, dark soy sauce, and honey. Marinate chicken, ribs, or chops in the mixture for 2-6 hours. Broil or grill over low heat since the high sugar content of the hoisin sauce and honey might cause meat to burn. Brush with the remaining marinade just during the last few minutes of cooking. Gives a delicious flavor and deep, rich color.

For a clearer color and lighter taste, mix lime juice, grated ginger, finely chopped scallions, and vegetable oil. Marinate shrimp, chicken, or Cornish game hens in the mixture for 2-6 hours then grill, brushing with more marinade during the last few minutes.

Or roast Szechuan peppercorns until they become aromatic, blend in food processor to a powder. Rub on duck, steak, chops, or chicken with salt and grill.

YOGURT SAUCE FOR CHICKEN
From John Sanders, production manager
Mix together ¼ cup plain yogurt, 2 tablespoons safflower oil, ¼ cup water, and 2 tablespoons Tandoori spice (available at Indian import or specialty food stores). Marinate a quartered chicken in the mixture for at least ½ hour, then grill.

MADEIRA LAMB KEBABS
From Malvina Kinard of Cook's Corner, Westport, Conn.
Cut a small leg of spring lamb into 1½-inch cubes. Cut away all fat. Combine 1 cup Madeira, ½ cup olive oil, ½ cup soy sauce, and the grated zest of 2 lemons, and pour over lamb, turning to coat all sides well. Allow to stand 2-3 hours. String cubes on long skewers. Cook over very hot coals to sear meat quickly, turning often. Do not overcook. Serve with a salad of lettuce and tomatoes, both lightly bruised with the back of a knife, and a salad of lettuce and tomatoes, both cut in small pieces, and dressed with the juice of 1 lemon, 2 mashed cloves of garlic, salt, and 2 tablespoons salad oil, or to taste. Eat, not with a fork and knife, but by breaking off pieces of bread and scooping up the salad and meat together so all the juices intermingle.

SHISH KEBAB
From Bernice Yazbek, New York cooking-school teacher
Toss 2 pounds lean lamb from the leg, cut into 1-inch cubes, with as many quartered, medium onions and chunked green peppers as you like. Mix in 1½ tablespoons Mixed Alleppian Spices (available in Middle Eastern food shops and at Sahadi at 187 Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y. 11201), or substitute 2 teaspoons allspice, 2 teaspoons coriander, ½ teaspoon cloves and ½ teaspoon nutmeg. Let stand a few hours and toss again. Thread on skewers and grill until meat is done but still pink on the inside. Be sure to oil the rack so meat won’t stick to it. Serve with fresh pita bread and a salad of lettuce and tomatoes, both cut in small pieces, and dressed with the juice of 1 lemon, 2 mashed cloves of garlic, salt, and 2 tablespoons salad oil, or to taste. Eat, not with a fork and knife, but by breaking off pieces of bread and scooping up the salad and meat together so all the juices intermingle.

TO LIGHT A CONVENTIONAL CHARCOAL-FIRED BARBECUE
From Beatrice Ojakangas, food writer and cooking-school teacher
“I like to use two things—marinated charcoal and a chimney.” To marinate charcoal, fill wide-mouthed jar with briquettes, squirt lighter fluid on until they will absorb no more. If jar holds a dozen briquettes, use 1-½ cups fluid. Put cover on to store; briquettes are instant fire lighters. Place a couple in bottom of a pile of briquettes to light.

Make a chimney from a 2-pound coffee can, top and bottom removed, punch continuous row of holes around with a punch can opener. Put chimney on firebed, place a couple marinated coals in bottom, or 2 crumpled newspaper sheets, fill with charcoal; ignite from bottom. Coals will be ready in about 20 minutes.

Use a large pastry bag and a star tip. Choose which side will be the front and start piping the back, building confidence and rhythm toward the front. Stick the ornament on with dabs of icing. Pipe shells to hide seams of layers. Push down hard and the icing fans out, then quickly release pressure on the bag and draw it down and away to form the shells.
ow a garden wedding was planned with y from start to finish by the bride and her friends. Here the bride tells the story.

Once the marriage proposal was accepted, the parents told, the first euphoria over—George Linck, the all-important groom, and I discovered we wanted a traditional wedding that reflected our values in every detail.

The first thing I did was to listen to some advice from other new brides in the office: Plan well so you can remember and enjoy your own reception. Usually brides have worked themselves into such a state, the wedding and party slide by in an eclipse of nervous tension. Second, another piece of advice well taken, I bought Barbara Lee Follett's Check List for a Perfect Wedding, (Dolphin, $1.50). Chapters are organized by schedule—"Two Months Before," all the way to, "1 Week Ahead," and "1 Day Ahead." Each chapter consists of a list of things to do during that time period.

In the early stages of planning, everything must be done at once. After three weeks, you believe it impossible to live through it all. But suddenly, you know when and where you'll get married and by whom (in my parents' garden by the Reverend Doctor C. Michael Thornburg of the local Episcopal church at 6 p.m. so everyone could get in a full round of golf); you have a caterer (Bruce Bolton of New York), a menu; you've made a rough guess at the number of invitations needed and ordered them as well as the announcements (125 each, which left room to spare); (Continued on page 134)
Summerfood to enjoy outdoors

Food that refreshes

An expandable lunch party of vegetable surprises and fruit desserts.

Photographer David Massey tells how to do it

“One day, a party for six grew like Topsy until there had to be enough food for twenty, and though we couldn’t manage a miracle on the level of the loaves and fishes, loaves there were aplenty to soak up the good local wine of all colors.” Parties have a habit of multiplying at David Massey’s Tunisian house, but, as he explains, “no panic button need be pushed if you keep your vegetable baskets full. On the brightest hot day or after dark on a muggy evening, a profusion of salads is like eating your salad and having it, too. Each platter or bowl cooly shines, thanks to the contrast of ingredients—cucumber and potato, carrot and chick peas, tapenade-stuffed vegetables, some cooked, some raw—and the total spectrum of color and texture. This spread was put together so that we had a banquet with only a fork—in some cases, fingers. A really nice picnic, the same as a nice buffet, demands the prettiest plates and napkins. After all, they only need to be washed and put away. The variety of things which went into the salads was possible, because it was the end of spring and the beginning of summer. Some winter vegetables were still with us, while summer ones were abundantly on the way. Grains and olives are always on the shelf and fruit on the vine or in the tree. It is doubtful there will be any, but all these dishes make excellent leftovers. So much for what goes on in an antique country where the seasons still give the orders. This is Tunisia, but could be Anywhere in summertime. This menu has been repeated with variations many times. Back home, the greengrocer or supermarket, north, south, east, or west, will have almost no trouble tilling the shopping list any time of year.” For recipes, turn to page 138.

Light red wines, often called the "little reds," have a pleasing, nonassertive character, are fresh-tasting and have a moderate fruitiness. They fit in well with casual and everyday dining and, in warmer weather, are especially agreeable when served chilled, or even on the rocks. They also lend themselves beautifully to the long mixed drinks so refreshing in summer.

These attractive wines are mostly meant to be drunk young. They are ready for drinking, without the prolonged aging that more weighty, eminent wines generally require. This readiness for on-the-spot drinking is a boon for the host without a cellar containing a roster of wines of various years from which those that are ready for uncorking can be plucked.

Delightful little reds are made in many countries, and usually come from vineyard areas which are not suitable for the noble grapes, such as cabernet sauvignon, pinot noir, and others that give us the more prestigious red wines.

Beaujolais, probably the most popular of France's fruity light reds, is a lovely summer wine and one that always benefits from chilling. For light summer drinking and mixing stay with a young Beaujolais, preferably of '77 vintage, and no older than '76. Beaujolais Superieur and Beaujolais-Villages, which have more strength and character than a simple Beaujolais, are deliciously refreshing served chilled, but should not be diluted with ice cubes. The best cru, or growth, from any of the nine areas of Beaujolais that give their names to the wines, have depth, complexity, and elegance that lift them from the light red designation. These include Brouilly, Côte des Brouilly, Morgon, Moulin-à-Vent, Fleurie, Juliénas, St.-Amour, and Chénas. They range from light and fruity to lusciously grapey, and they do take to bottle age and should be enjoyed lightly chilled—and poured from the bottle.

In California, the Gamay Beaujolais grape makes a charming wine in the style of the French Beaujolais, but with its own charm and youthful fruity qualities. California Gamay Beaujolais is produced by a number of major wineries there, and its attractive qualities are enhanced by a budget price. California Gamay Beaujolais is delightful served well chilled, or on the rocks, and mixes well to make summer drinks.

From New York State, Baco Noir, one of the French hybrid grapes that have been specially developed to suit the more rigorous climate there, makes a most satisfying light-bodied wine. It has a distinctive varietal character that makes it relatively easy to spot—even by nonexperts—in blind tastings. It's delightful when drunk young. And Baco Noir is often blended with other New York State wines. If so, the label will often specify the percentages. Bonmarre Vineyards produces a fine Baco Noir as do Taylor and Great Western.

A California hybrid, Ruby Cabernet, is the result of crossing cabernet sauvignon, one of the noblest of red grapes, with carignane, one of the most prolific of California-grown grapes. The hybrid combines the good qualities of both these varietals. Ruby Cabernet is, as its name implies, ruby in color, and is light in body with a delicate fruitiness in the bouquet and to the palate. Some exemplary Ruby Cabernets are produced by Inglenook, Gallo, Bear Mountain Winery, and others.

Among the favorite light red wines of France are the so-called "country wines," such as Corbières, Minervois, and Fitou from the Languedoc in the Midi, west of the Rhône River, said to be France's most productive and least distinguished wine region. To the north, in the eastern sector of Bordeaux, Bourg and Blaye produce inexpensive, drinkable light reds under the appellation Côtes de Bourg and Premières Côtes de Blaye. These have a pleasing lightness of body, fruity taste, and a slightly crisp finish.

From Italy, an appealing red wine is Lambrusco, a grapy wine from the Po Valley in the north, and probably the fastest-selling imported red wine in America. Its popularity is due—in approximately equal parts—to its sweet finish and its low price—about $2 a bottle. It also has a slight petillance, or light bubbling, which is especially felicitous in warm weather. The tiny red beads of carbonation simultaneously quench the thirst and lift the spirits. Pour Lambrusco into a pretty stemmed wineglass, add ice cubes if you like, and, for color and zest, a curl of orange peel.

For those who find Lambrusco too sweet, try mixing it with club soda or other sparkling waters, and a little fresh lemon juice.

Other light and fruity Italian reds are the Veronese Bardolino from the hillsides along Lake Garda, and the fragrantly fruity and velvety Valpolicella. James Beard, the doyen of American food and drink, especially fancies Valpolicella, which he maintains "is the kind of red wine that comes into its own in the summer. Served cool, it is the ideal accompaniment to hamburgers, lamb chops, and steaks, as they come sizzling off the grill. Its fruity, light, refreshing thirst-quenching qualities are ideal for the warm weather repast."

Additional options are available for all the little reds by "blending" them with sparkling water, fruit juices, and fruits to create innovative and satisfying summer drinks. One perennial favorite is the red wine cooler. An easy version mixes 4 ounces of light red wine with club soda and plenty of ice cubes in a tall collins glass. Another formula heightens the flavors by adding a few ounces of fresh orange juice.

The ubiquitously popular Sangria is based on a light red wine, traditionally a young Spanish Rioja (although any light red can be used with good results) macerated for several hours with fresh citrus and other summer fruits. A bit of brandy fortifies, and club soda and ice cubes temper and further blend the flavors. The punch is generally poured from a lovely large pitcher into chilled wine glasses or punch mugs. How delightful to sip on a languid summer afternoon, with its foil of coolness against the balmy air.

In Nice, people are fond of a red-wine version of the famous Kir of Burgundy.

Meal in minutes

METHOD FOR BROCHETTES
- Lightly oil 6 skewers, and thread alternately with mushrooms and shrimp. Melt butter and lemon juice together in a saucepan and brush over the brochettes. Sprinkle with bread crumbs and salt. Broil under a flame or over a grill until done, about 5 minutes, turning frequently and brushing on the remaining lemon butter ⅔ way through the grilling. Grind over some pepper.

METHOD FOR SAUCE
- Put lemon juice, shallots, and salt in a small, heavy saucepan. Reduce slowly until the shallots appear dry on the bottom of the pan. Remove from heat. Start whisking 2-3 lumps of butter at a time into the reduced shallots. Keep adding butter and whisking continuously. Put the pan back on a very low flame from time to time, but do not let the butter melt. Instead, it should mount into a thick, pale, creamy sauce, held in suspension by the acidity of the lemon. When all butter is incorporated, stir in the whipped cream. Add dill and pepper to taste.

Place brochettes on watercress plates. Sauce and serve immediately. Serves 6.
- For convenience: The brochettes may be made several hours in advance, wrapped in foil and refrigerated. The lemon juice and shallots can be reduced ahead of time, but the rest of the sauce is basically last minute. Warm shallots gently before adding butter.

Raspberry pâté

INGREDIENTS
- ⅛ pound good quality Scotch shortbread
- About 3 tablespoons heavy cream
- 3 cups raspberries
- Pinch cinnamon
- Whipped cream

METHOD
- Crush the shortbread to a fine crumb in a blender or food processor. Put aside 1 cup. Bind the rest of the crumbs lightly with cream until the mixture is just moist enough to pack.
- Sprinkle the bottom of a small terrine or loaf pan, about ⅞ by 7 inches, with 2 tablespoons granulated sugar. Pat a thin layer of “dough” onto the bottom and up the sides to the height of ⅓ inch.
- Mix raspberries with cinnamon, the reserved cup of crumbs, and enough sugar so they taste distinctly sweet. Spoon berries into the crust and cover with remaining moist crumbs. Put a layer of aluminum foil on top of the pâté and weight it with small cans or jars. Refrigerate at least overnight.
- To serve, run a knife around the edge and dip the mold bottom briefly into hot water. Reverse the mold sharply down onto a towel-covered counter. Slide the pâté onto a serving dish and slice off one crusted end.
- Cut pâté into ⅓-inch slices, dipping knife in hot water between cuts. Garnish each slice with a small rosette of sweetened whipped cream. Serves 8-10.

Bride bakes the cake

you’ve come away from the party rental place with a great, long list including ten 60-inch-round tables, 100 white wooden chairs, one 60-by-80-foot pink-and-white-striped tent, two galvanized wash-tubs, a giant coffee machine, plates, forks, tulip-shaped wineglasses for the champagne, short, fat bar glasses, and finally 100 pink napkins—all of the tablecloths were quite right.

There are endless details not mentioned here, all of which need you to make decisions. Keep a small notebook going and write everything down as it occurs to you. Lists will eventually threaten to drive you mad, but they will also save you. Check off things as you solve the problems, and have faith in your good judgment.

Making these big decisions gives an outline of the event—there will be much telephoning back and forth as details are worked out. Now you settle down to the fun part—filling in the blanks: What will you wear? (A handmade Mexican cotton dress.) What will the men wear? (Navy blue blazers, white shirts and pants, navy ties with tiny white polka dots.) Sisters and mothers refuse to be regimented and look like a beautiful rainbow when all assembled.

To receive or not to receive. (Not, but then there were people I missed seeing.) Formal photographs? Who to photograph? The wedding? A band? Flowers—yours, family’s, the men’s, the tent’s, the tables’ (Apricot roses shading from the palest salmon to brilliant tangerine—for my hair the pale, for the bouquet all the colors, the women, none, the father’s, white rose boutonnières, the groom, the lemon, the tent sported a ring of geraniums around the dance floor and ropes of springer 10 feet up the center tent poles dotted with snowdrift mums: the tables, none, Easy.) Tablecloths? Angelo Don-glia’s “China Garden” sheet pattern for J. P. Stevens coordinated with a solid pink sheet for an underskirt. What about the cake? Begin with James Beard’s pound cake and add, and add! What about wedding gifts? Buffet plates by Mottahedah, a certain wine rack, a KitchenAid mixer, which would play a starring role in making the cake. And through it all you plead for complete addresses including zip codes!

Everyone had an opinion as to whether the tablecloths should fall to the ground or not. They would, I decided. With a chalk and string I made a circle on the floor to measure the height of the tables plus half their diameter. Two double sheets for each round cloth—one cut in half and pieced on each side of the second, then the whole cloth with pinning shears so the hem was left plainly pinked. The solid sheets came with a charming tucked border which we removed, saved for no apparent purpose until the tent went up. Then it all came clear—we tied big pink bows around the ropes on the tent poles. Cutting out the kerchief tops from “China Garden” made two visiting kittens deliriously happy as they chased scissors, measuring tape, and flying fabric.

The biggest surprise was the cake ornament; Mother brought it out one day—41 years old, slightly broken and yellowed. But the bride and groom still looked very dashing. A trip to a ribbon shop for white ribbon and two rolls of pink in case we might need them. The little bride got a new coat of white paint for her dress and a bouquet of forget-me-nots from the stream and the white ribbon wound around and around the bridge framing them with a bow on top.

Saving the best for last, the bride took off from the office two days before the wedding. Mrs. Frederick Pickering came to do the flowers for the buffet table in one of Mother’s antique baskets. I watched her build it with flowers from a local gardener’s personal garden. “At least one-and-a-half times as high as the container,” she said as she worked tucking in snow-on-the-mountain, delphinium, yellow day lilies (an experiment), and so many more to make an English garden arrangement and the most beautiful thing any of us had ever seen. Without skipping a beat, she and another neighbor, Nancy Nicholson, sat under the tent and wove a garland of cuttings from our bushes to hang in swags over the dining room doors to the garden. The minister would stand under it. For all the arranging of food and flowers we used greens from the grounds—grape leaves, ferns, myrtle. The center of each table had a single candle protected by a hurricane lamp—a few sprigs of evergreen went in each of these. Myrtle garnished the bottom of the cake, ferns and grape leaves lined serving trays, and forget-me-nots filled out the tiny bouquets punctuating the garland. The pink ribbon came in handy—we wound it around the supporting tent ropes. My mother shook her head at the effort, but it gave the whole a carrousel effect. Rhododendron greens and blooms were wired around the tent stakes to hide them, and watered copiously in the heat.

After two months of planning and work and shared love, my new husband and I had such a wonderful time we were the last to leave the party. Though cleaning up, luckily, is not part of a bride’s duty, I was told that by 11 a.m. the next
Here's a gas range from Tappan with a revolutionary oven/broiler. High-speed hot-air currents start to cook food immediately. You don't even have to preheat. We tested the Convectionaire against two leading conventional gas ranges—it cooked much faster. Examples are chicken, hamburgers, and meat loaf, done in a third less time. (Meats brown beautifully, yet retain flavor and juices.)

Potatoes and biscuits baked twice as fast in the Convectionaire as they did in the regular gas ranges.

The Convectionaire saves you gas, too. Thanks to the high-speed oven/broiler and to automatic pilotless ignition, the Convectionaire range uses about half as much gas as the standard pilot-type gas range you probably have now.

There's a pyrolytic self-cleaning oven, automatic oven controls, waist-high broiling. Replacement time? See the Convectionaire at your Tappan dealer. A product of gas industry research and one more way to use gas wisely.

morning the tent was gone and it hardly looked as if a wedding had happened. Only telltale champagne bottles turned up under bushes all summer.

THE CAKE
Two months ahead: Start research, gather equipment—pans; cooling racks; mammoth bowls; pastry bags; large, round, and star tips. If you don't have a stand mixer like a KitchenAid, make arrangements to borrow one.

Six weeks ahead: Begin zestig the citrus using a very sharp vegetable peeler and several assistants, if you can round them up. Store in a glass jar until needed—up to 1 week.

One week ahead: Make a batch of icing and give cake its very fine. Store in plastic in the refrigerator.

Five weeks ahead: Buy eggs and set aside 4-5 hours for baking. Only make as many layers as will fit in the oven at one time, or arrange with a neighbor to bake a layer in her oven.

When layers are cool, wrap well, and store either in the freezer or in the refrigerator until the day before the wedding.

The schedule can be varied to suit you: The cake can be made earlier—since you should doze it with more Grand Marnier every 2 weeks or so, it will only develop a more pronounced flavor. Or you can make it later, and it will have a fresher, more buttery taste.

You can also divide the baking up and bake 2-3 layers one day, the remaining layer another.

One week ahead: Make a batch of icing and practice piping shells on cookie sheets.

Two days before: Separate eggs, and keep whites in batches of 4 or 8. Hopefully, you have thought of what to do with the yolks or have been saving whites in the freezer for the past few months.

Day before: Make icing and give cake its flat, white "underskirt." Let set a few hours. Make more icing and pipe on the yolks one at a time while mixer is running, and beat each into the mixture completely.

Brittany the orange juice, 1/4 cup Grand Marnier, and vanilla. Sift the flour several times with the salt.

Transfer the butter-egg mixture to a huge bowl and stir in the flour and nuts. Beat the egg whites in another huge bowl with the heavy-duty mixer. Add the zest and sugar and continue to beat until fluffy. Add the egg yolks one at a time while mixer is running, and beat each into the mixture completely.

Beat in the orange juice, 1/4 cup Grand Marnier, and vanilla. Sift the flour several times with the salt.

Grease and flour the pans well and pour in the batter to within 1 inch of the top. Bake in a preheated 300° oven 1½-2 hours or until a cake tester inserted in the center of the cake comes out clean.

Cakes cool on racks 15 minutes and then unmold onto racks to cool further. Mix equal parts corn syrup and Grand Marnier in a measuring cup and brush liberally all over the cake—top, sides, and bottom—while it is still warm so the cake will absorb more. Let cool completely.

Cut large pieces of cheesecloth and soak them with Grand Marnier. Wring out a bit and wrap around cake layers so they are completely encased. Wrap in foil then plastic bags (garbage bags for the largest layers). You can refrigerate or freeze the layers as you wish or as space dictates.

Cut circles of stiff cardboard the same size as the layers and cover with foil. Use these not only when assembling the cake to ice it, but to protect the cake in the refrigerator. The cake is very dense, so short of dropping it, you don't have to worry about it.

Once a month, or more often as you wish, open the layers and pour on a bit more Grand Marnier. Cake can be made just before needed, but is better when allowed to mature a month or more.

Boiled icing

The icing is based on the Wilton boiled icing in The Wilton Way of Cake Decorating, which also has the directions and tips for all the piping work.

INGREDIENTS

2 cups sugar
1/2 cup water
4 egg whites, room temperature
1/2 cup Grand Marnier
Salt
Confectioners' sugar

METHOD

- Put the sugar and water in a heavy saucepan and bring to a boil over moderately high heat. Wash crystals off the sides of the pan with a pastry brush dipped into water.
- While sugar syrup is boiling beat the egg whites in a large bowl with a dash of salt until very stiff.
- When the syrup is boiling all over its surface and begins to look like boiling jam with the bubbles getting very small, and when it spins a very heavy thread, take off heat immediately so it doesn't caramelize. Stop the cooking by quickly dipping the pot in cold water—just in and out—or spraying the bottom of the pot with cold water with the sink spray attachment.
- Pour the syrup in a thin stream into the egg whites while beating and continue to beat until mixture is very stiff, about 5 minutes. Beat in a splash of Grand Marnier.
- Sift the confectioners' sugar and add it, bit by bit, to the icing while beating until icing is very stiff and smooth. Since it must be hot out, you don't want the icing to melt and run, but you want it soft enough to work with. Cover with a damp paper towel until ready to use, but do not wait more than a few minutes.
- Makes about 4 cups icing. It can be doubled easily or made in successive batches so it won't dry out before being used.

Assembling and icing cake

- Pile the layers one on top of the other, placing the foil-covered cardboard circles in between. Place the cake on a lazy Susan or a large platter on a cardboard mat in the middle of the room so you can work from all sides. This is the time to have plenty of help.
- Spread the icing on the cake with thin, flexible, metal spatulas piling the icing on fairly thickly then taking it off in long, even sweeps to get a really smooth surface. Your cake will look, however, charmingly handmade. You could also pipe the icing on vertically with a fat, round tip.

Grand Marnier wedding cake

The cake is a variation on the pound cake found in James Beard's American Cookery (Little, Brown). Double the recipe and make it twice to make enough for a 4-tier cake plus a little for a small cake to sample. A good tip is to measure how much each of the layer pans will hold—14 by 3 inches, about 20 cups; 10 by 3 1/2 cups; 8, 4 cups; and 4 1/3 cups. Since the cake is a focal point, think about height—thus four 3-inch layers, and where it should be placed during the reception where it can be easily seen but not knocked into!

INGREDIENTS

Zest of 10 lemons
Zest of 10 oranges
1 pound sugar
1 pound butter
10 extra-large eggs, separated
1/4 cup orange juice, freshly squeezed
1 large bottle Grand Marnier
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 1/2 cups Hecker's unbleached all-purpose flour
1/4 teaspoon sea salt
1 1/4 pounds almonds, blanched and ground
1 bottle light corn syrup
White icing

METHOD

- Peel zest of oranges and lemons with a vegetable peeler. You can do them a few at a time and keep in a tightly sealed glass jar in the refrigerator. Make sure your vegetable peeler is sharp! Squeeze the juice and freeze in ice-cube trays for summer punches.
- Pulverize the zest with the sugar in a food processor. Cream the butter until very light and fluffy with the heavy-duty mixer. Add the zest and sugar and continue to beat until fluffy. Add the egg yolks one at a time while mixer is running, and beat each into the mixture completely.
- Beat in the orange juice, 1/4 cup Grand Marnier, and vanilla. Sift the flour several times with the salt.
- Grease and flour the pans well and pour in the batter to within 1 inch of the top. Bake in a preheated 300° oven 1½-2 hours or until a cake tester inserted in the center of the cake comes out clean.
- Let cakes cool on racks 15 minutes and then unmold onto racks to cool further. Mix equal parts corn syrup and Grand Marnier in a measuring cup and brush liberally all over the cake—top, sides, and bottom—while it is still warm so the cake will absorb more. Let cool completely.
- Cut large pieces of cheesecloth and soak them with Grand Marnier. Wring out a bit and wrap around cake layers so they are completely encased. Wrap in foil then plastic bags (garbage bags for the largest layers). You can refrigerate or freeze the layers as you wish or as space dictates.
- Cut circles of stiff cardboard the same size as the layers and cover with foil. Use these not only when assembling the cake to ice it, but to protect the cake in the refrigerator. The cake is very dense, so short of dropping it, you don't have to worry about it.
- Once a month, or more often as you wish, open the layers and pour on a bit more Grand Marnier. Cake can be made just before needed, but is better when allowed to mature a month or more.
- If made just to eat, the cake will not need icing, but for a wedding, a real white icing is pretty. The 4-tier cake will easily serve 120-150 people.
Pipe icing around the top ornament to secure it to the cake. If you plan lots of piping, make sure you have help with it.

Cutting the cake

I searched and searched for an answer that made me happy. How to cut the cake without destroying its looks—can't be done.

Begin by lifting off the small top layer to freeze, first removing all the icing. Put it to the side and cut the entire second layer across and then across again in squares. When it is gone, do the same to the third layer, and so on down to the last layer.

Middlemarch's day celebration

METHOD
☐ Melt the butter in a saucepan, remove from heat, and stir in the flour. Add the milk and cream and bring to a boil over high heat, beating constantly with a whisk until the sauce is smooth and thick. Let it simmer for a minute, then set aside to cool.
☐ Cut the liver into chunks. Roughly chop the pork fat and mix both with the onion and anchovies in a bowl. Divide the mixtures into thirds. Purée each batch in an electric blender set at high speed, adding enough sauce to keep the blender from clogging. Transfer each completed batch to a large bowl and beat in remaining cream sauce.
☐ To make by hand, put the liver, pork fat, onion, and anchovies twice through the finest blade of a meat grinder, then combine with the cream sauce, beating them together thoroughly. The blender mixture will be considerably more fluid than the one made by hand.
☐ Beat the eggs well with the salt, pepper, allspice, cloves, ginger, and vermouth in a small bowl and mix thoroughly into the liver mixture.
☐ Butter a 9½-by-5¼-by-2¾-inch loaf pan and spoon in liver mixture. Cover with buttered waxed paper or aluminum foil; tie on with string. Put loaf pan in a preheated 325° oven for 1 hour and 15 minutes or until a tester should. Mix them together thoroughly but carefully with the fish—they should not be mashed.
☐ Combine vinegar, water, sugar, pepper in a bowl and blend well. Gently stir into fish mixture. Place in a bowl and refrigerate. Before serving, fold in sour cream.

Eye of the sun
(Sologa)

INGREDIENTS
2 raw egg yolks
5 Swedish anchovy fillets, chopped
1 tablespoon onion, chopped
1 tablespoon capers
2 tablespoons pickled beets, diced

METHOD
☐ The amounts can easily be doubled for a larger party. Place yolks in the center of a small serving plate and arrange anchovy fillets, onion, capers, and beets in a ring around the eggs.
☐ The first person to help himself to the dish stirs all ingredients together, blending well with a fork.
☐ If the dish is prepared ahead of time, cover with aluminum foil and keep in refrigerator until serving time. Serves 2.

Grandmother’s herring
(Matjes herring “à la Mormor”)

INGREDIENTS
2-3 Matjes fillets
1 red onion

METHOD
☐ If Matjes fillets are used, they need no preparation except to be minced finely. If salt herring is used, clean fish, removing head. Soak fish 10-12 hours, changing water a few times so fish will not be too salty. If you wish, start soaking fish 3-4 hours before you go to bed, change water a few times, and soak overnight. Bone and fillet the fish.
☐ Finely mince all the diced ingredients and onion so the flavors will blend as they set. Unmold onto a serving platter. Garnish with dill sprigs and serve with sour cream sauce. Serves 4.

Sour cream sauce à la Mormor

INGREDIENTS
1 cup sour cream
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
1 tablespoon capers
1 small yellow onion, chopped
¼ teaspoon salt
White pepper to taste

METHOD
☐ Mix all ingredients well in a bowl to make a sauce. Refrigerate until needed. Makes 1¼ cups sauce.

Herring salad
(Sillsalhul)

INGREDIENTS
1 salt herring or 2 Matjes herring fillets
1¼ cups boiled potatoes, diced
1½ cups pickled beets, diced
⅔ cup dill pickles, diced
1 cup cucumber, minced
⅓ cup radishes
⅓ cup from pickled beets
⅔ cup onion, finely chopped
1 tablespoon sugar
1 tablespoon dry bread crumbs

METHOD
☐ If the dish is prepared ahead of time, cover and keep in refrigerator. Unmold onto a plate and garnish with greens. Serves 8-10. Keeps well stored in refrigerator.

Tiger cake
(Tigerkaka)

INGREDIENTS
1 cup butter or margarine
2 cups sugar
4 eggs
1 tablespoon lemon juice
3 cups all-purpose flour, sifted
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
1 cup milk
1¼ teaspoons cocoa
1 tablespoon dry bread crumbs

METHOD
☐ Cream butter or margarine with sugar until very fluffy in a large bowl. Beat in eggs, one at a time; beat at medium speed of an electric mixer until well mixed and add lemon juice.
☐ Sift dry ingredients together into a bowl, and add to egg mixture alternately with the milk. Beat until smooth on low speed. Separate ⅔ of the batter and mix it with the cocoa.
☐ Butter a 10-by-4-inch round bundt pan or a 9-by-3-by-3-inch loaf pan. Sprinkle inside of pan with bread crumbs, shake out excess crumbs. Spoon in ⅔ of the light-colored batter, then all the dark one, and finish with the remaining light batter.
☐ Bake cake in a preheated 325° oven for 1 hour and 15 minutes or until a tester comes out dry when inserted in the middle of the cake. Cool before serving.

Do-it yourself pedicure

Tips from pro Mimi Glaser, pedicurist at Kenneth Salon.
1. Wash your feet and remove old polish.
2. Ground-in dirt can be removed by applying a paste-like solution of baking soda and water, rubbing with a washcloth or brush, then washing.

2. Soak feet in a solution of warm water and mild soap (shampoo or mild dish soap) for 5-10 minutes. For tired feet add Epsom salt or massage briefly beforehand with cider vinegar. Splash with cold water.
4. Massage cuticle cream or Vaseline into cuticles. Then push back with an orangewood stick. Trim loose ends with a nail nippers.
5. Put your feet back in the soaking solution and rub rough spots with a pumice stone (don’t forget to wet the stone first).
6. Dry feet and massage with cream upwards from toes to knees.
7. Rewash making sure you remove all the cream. Use a nailbrush.
8. Now you’re ready to polish your toes. Separate toes with wads of tissue, not cotton. Use an undercoat, two coats of polish, and finish with a topcoat that’ll keep nails shiny. Let dry completely.

FOR EXTRA-SPECIAL CARE:
• To protect your toes, particularly if you run or play a lot of tennis, wrap them in lamb’s wool: It’ll prevent bruised toes, split or ridged nails.
• After creaming your feet, put them in a large plastic bag. Sit with feet elevated (to separate toes with wads of tissue, not cotton) for ½ hour letting the warmth of your body heat the cream and soften the skin. Pumice.

A quick foot refresher
If you’re on your feet all day long, Dr. Gary Sherman, Director of Podiatry at the New York Infirmary, suggests you take extra time to refresh them by soaking them morning and evening in a mild solution of warm water and rock salt; then thoroughly creaming them. Or, try a quick rubdown with alcohol at the end of the day: It can work wonders too.

Room of your own

Or, you could say that the way I ignored the space about me when we first bought this house in the country reflected my ambivalence. It seems so old-fashioned to still be veering back and forth between my books and my omelets for confirmation of my worth as a person, but veer I do. I did not recognize how deep this rift between personhood and womanhood continues to be until I stepped back a bit and took a look at my attempts to bring meaning and order to our new house.

The first thing we decided to do was turn the third-floor attic into a magnificent, private place to use as our bedroom and our escape. Lowell is a writer, too, and since both of us work at home it seemed glorious to have a place to get away to when we needed it. We asked the contractor to knock a hole in one of the end walls and install a big glass slider. (We were to become quite fond of these, before the renovation was over, discovering, as we did, that sliders are the cheapest way to let in a lot of light and view.)

In this case the view was a small patch of mountains across the Hudson and a large patch of hilly farmland leading to the woods along the northern boundary of our property. We live only half a mile from the center of the village, so it seems quite exotic to us that these woods belong equally to deer and a nefarious outfit called the Neighbors’ Rod and Gun Club. (We have yet to see one of the Neighbors but we have seen deer. On Christmas Eve, my 13-year-old son was on his way out to the barn when he looked up on the hill and saw, like a sign in the East, the biggest, most antlered buck he’d ever laid eyes on. “Maa!” he exclaimed, breathlessly, as he pounded back into the house. “It was just like the Mutual of Omaha commercial!”)

We began calling the renovated attic our “loft,” because that’s what it looks like more than anything—an artist’s loft. It is 35 feet long and 26 feet wide. Instead of the more conventional knee walls we chose to leave the huge visual space created by the natural slope of the roof. It meant we wouldn’t be able to use much in the way of furniture, but we rather liked that idea. This would be our own special place, markedly different from reality as a spaceship. There would be no closets, or chests of drawers, or couches to mar the sweep of pure line. We would have dressing rooms on the floor below.

Our bed, covered with an afghan, was tucked flat on the floor under the dormer, which forms a monumental, wood-lined canopy over our heads. The floor itself (in our opinion) is a work of art. Wide boards of the cheapest grade yellow pine, installed without a finish in about 1910, turned so rich and mapley when polyurethaned, they cast a rosy glow on the ceiling above when hit by the late afternoon sun.

The only other furnishings up there are a few Oriental rugs given us by Lowell’s mother, some large cushions, two telephone jacks (his and hers), and a single red phone. We had a plumber pull up a water line and we plan to install a huge old ball-and-claw-style bathtub as soon as we can find one. It will sit smack in the middle of everything, so that we can have the view while bathing and also because we like the idea of treating the tub as an object of contemplation. Some books, some music, and our loft was finished. We flung an antique parlor stove into the chimney for heat and feel like prince and princess of the mountain up there.

At KRAFT, we've got a different low calorie dressing for every day of the week.
Smoke rises from a small chimney of it. I can look out of any window of the season was falling. We moved in the snow, all slipping and laughing, and red and monolithic against the blue sky. behind the peak of its roof. It reminds then Christmas came, and then I had a book due at my publisher's, so that it was well into February before I began the 8th of December and the first snow looking out the window at Lowell's barn with a certain wistfulness.

In my mind, it's Lowell's barn, even though he occupies only a small quarter of it. I can look out of any window in the house and the barn is always there, red and monolithic against the blue sky. Smoke rises from a small chimney pipe behind the peak of its roof. It reminds me of his industry, that smoke always pelting out against the sky from his wood stove. I think of his neat work table and lamp, the serious black telephone, the stock charts tacked up on the horse stall behind his desk. That space is very much Lowell's. He wanted it, he took it, he made it work for him. He ripped up the rotted, 2-inch-thick floorboards and replaced them with the boards from an old tack closet. Not knowing how much insulation he might need to hold tight against the howling night winds, he chose to make do this first winter. He stapled plastic up against the north and south walls of the stable. He piled hay a couple of feet deep on the second floor of the barn, directly over his ceiling. "Hay has a high R-value," he told me. "It's also exothermic and produces heat."

Well, it produced enough heat—the hay and the woodstove combined—to allow him to revise the galleys for two books, write several articles, and work on a novel this winter. Occasionally, after a late night, he'd end up sleeping on the bed he'd constructed over the feed trough. Occasionally I'd spend the night out there with him. We'd stoke up the stove to get us through the night and drink cognac while mice scampered across the ceiling beams. In the morning, one of us would tiptoe across the cold floorboards to throw fresh wood on the coals. The snow would be drifted 4 feet high against the glass slider door and the blueness of the sky above would make us feel giddy and free.

Secretly, I envied Lowell his space. I gave him a patchwork quilt for stable-warming present, but inside railed against myself because I had no vision of the sense of purpose to take and make such a space for myself. After the initial chaos of moving, after the first phase of spackling and painting and stripping the old varnish from the chestnut woodwork, oh yes, long after I'd gotten used to the way the sun flooded the living room in the morning and the moon flooded the loft at night, it occurred to me, one dismal day, that I hated the room I'd picked as a workroom. It had brown-painted floors and quaint of wallpaper—grayish dogwood blossom on a sickly yellow ground. Probably had been the master bedroom once. To it it had a door leading to the only bathroom in the house. I was privy to every bath, every ringing flush of the toilet. Two children had their rooms on the same floor, and they cluttered up and down the stairs with the animals in his pursuit. In addition to all its other inadequacies, there wasn't even a view. Every other room in the house had view! You might think, by this carefree choice of a room for my work, that I only dabble at it in between meal preparations. On the contrary, I've been writing, a prospect that thrilled me: the second a guest room and perhaps a nursery someday; and the third, of course, a master bedroom. The family room was an ideal den for my husband, paneled in dark wood, and although the kitchen needed modernizing, I loved the picture window that overlooked the trees and garden in back.

The house had its imperfections, certainly. It was somewhat rundown from the neglect of its previous owners; its shape was dumpy; and its color pea green, but we felt we could correct most of its faults or live with those we couldn't. The net impression was rather like one's maiden aunt, dowdy but dependable.

So we came, we saw, we bought, and whether or not we conquered, we are not yet sure. There have been major adjustments because of the commute, for example. We decided to manage with one car, our sturdy Volvo that had survived 10 years of outdoor parking in New York, and rolled into the garage of our new home with an almost perceptible shudder of relief. It is in that Volvo, whose health has become as important as our own, that we hurled 8 minutes to the Trenton station each morning to catch our respective 7:40's in opposite directions. At night we try to coordinate our trains so that we arrive about the same time and can drive home together. These complications compound the changes in our living habits: getting up early, getting home late, eating late, going to bed early. On the plus side there is the quiet, the garden, the walks we take together, the birds, the space, the freedom as well as the responsibility of ownership.

One of my biggest surprises was how seriously I took the responsibility. The turmoil of moving in and getting settled had pushed the priority of getting a cleaning woman out of my mind. Besides, I didn't really know anyone to ask, so I vaguely resolved to take care of the house myself for the time being. I also noted that some atavistic animal instinct actually made me want to clean my own house, like the bird its nest or the lion its lair, or perhaps it is pride of ownership that carries with it the imperative to clean one's own house, because no one else would care enough to do it as well.

Feeling sanctimonious in my newfound maturity, I sternly reminded myself that gone forever are the carefree days of apartment living, where the mess you make may be yours today but some...

This O'Keefe & Merritt gas range has a revolutionary oven that bakes and broils with forced hot air. It starts to cook foods immediately—you don't even have to preheat.

In a test against two leading conventional gas ranges, the Convectionaire cooked much faster. For instance, hamburgers, meatloaf, chicken, cooked in a third less time—brown on the outside with flavor and juices locked in. Potatoes and biscuits baked twice as fast as in a regular gas range.

The Convectionaire range uses about half as much gas as a standard pilot type—thanks to the high-speed oven/broiler and automatic pilotless ignition. You also get a pyrolytic self-cleaning oven, automatic oven controls, waist-high broiling.

In 5 colors, including new Almond.

If it's time to replace your old gas range, see the Convectionaire at your O'Keefe & Merritt dealer. It's a product of gas industry research and one more way to use gas wisely.

Build an Energy Saving Refrigerator today—that customers can afford to operate tomorrow

How Amana Established Leadership in Energy Saving Refrigerators

It was a project that began from the ground up. Revamping of existing models was not good enough for Amana. The result: a line of Energy Saving Refrigerators you can buy today and afford to operate tomorrow. Energy Saving Refrigerators that have already met the notorious 1979 California state efficiency standards. The Amana 2 PLUS 2½!

2 PLUS 2½ Energy Saving Factors:

Use 2½ inches of foam wall insulation around freezer section to seal out the heat. (Typical refrigerators have 1½")

Use 2' of foam wall insulation around refrigerator section—about 3½ times the conventional foam insulated refrigerators.

INTEGRATE THESE PROVEN ENERGY SAVERS:

1. Seamless, one-piece Insuliner™ to further reduce heat leakage.
2. Combination of superior foam and fiberglass door insulation.
3. Magna-Seal door gaskets to seal heat out and cold in.

PLUS FEATURE:

Amana 3-Position Energy Saver Control

An auxiliary heater strip that is turned "on" and "off" by the Energy Saver Control minimizes condensation between the freezer and refrigerator sections during periods of high humidity. Under most conditions, you would set the Energy Saver Control on "lo" position—which shuts the heater completely off to provide maximum savings. The "hi" setting is for high humidity, and uses less electricity than "ex. hi." which is for extremely hot, steamy conditions.

WHY "2 PLUS 2½" insulation pays off.

NOTE: With the new technology of R21, a 2½" thickness will provide the 4°F freezer section 14% more insulation than freezing sections of similar size of typical refrigerator; 4°F. 2½" foam insulation will provide the 32°F refrigerator section 35% more insulation than freezing sections of typical refrigerators. The Amana 2 PLUS 2½ is 15% more efficient than typical的好 models.

How much money will an Amana 2 PLUS 2½ save?

For example, the Amana ESR-14B uses 52 KWH per month with Energy Saver Control set on "lo" position. Other refrigerators of similar size and type use from 80 to 109 KWH per month. This represents a savings of 29 to 58 KWH per month. In New York City, where electric rates are highest, it means a savings of $36 to $72 per year—enough to pay for the refrigerator for its useful life of 15 years, or more. In other parts of the country, it can save the entire purchase price of the refrigerator. Ask your Amana Dealer for full installation details.

one with a high middle number such as 10-15-10 for those in flower, and 99 percent of your fertilizing problems will vanish.

Good for potting—oven-baked soil
Sterilized potting soil is a key to healthy house plants. Normally, however, the sterilizing is a process I'd recommend leaving to others. Presterilized potting soil is inexpensive enough to make home sterilization a poor competitor. It's possible to bake soil in the oven—set the temperature to 180° and bake for an hour—but the project leaves your kitchen with a rather lingering earthy aroma. And the more basic problem arises over the accuracy of the temperature and duration of baking. Commercial opera- tions use a quick-steam sterilization process. Home-oven sterilization, b cause it takes longer, often kills many of the good soil qualities along with the harmful pathogens.

Home-oven baked coffee grounds are something else again. The grounds add organic matter and are in general health for your potted plants as long as they are sterilized before being mixed with the soil. Place a thin layer of coffee grounds on a cookie sheet and heat at 200° for about half-an-hour or until they are bor- dry, in fact almost burnt. You can use a much as ¼ part grounds in your potted soil mixes; don't exceed that proportion however, except for very acid-loving plants, or you'll unbalance the pH.

one else's tomorrow. Houses, unlike apartments, contain connotations of per- manence even if you plan to move out eventually, and in the same sense that you own the house and the trees around it, you own the dirt as well. For the first time and with a certain alarm, I began to understand the meaning of the word "upkeep."

I also began to look at dirt in an en- tirely new way, with an insidious paranoia. It was not just that I began to notice dirt, but I began to look for it. Seek and ye shall find, as they say. I searched the rooms of the house like a detective looking for perpetrators. My eye fell upon such hitherto unrecognized offenders as moldings, window frames, heating ducts, etc., all of which had an apparently limitless potential for collect- ing and generating dirt.

If someone had remarked to me in the old days that moldings collect dirt, my response would have been a polite, "Oh really?" I was oblivious to such matters because my cleaning woman appeared like the good fairy every two weeks to work her magic spell, and poof, the dirt was gone. In retrospect I think she redistributed the dirt as much as she eliminated it, but at that time it mat- tered less to me that the cleaning was done well than that it was done at all. Symbolically at least, the apartment was clean.

But now the chickens had come home to roost and the dirt to settle. Now I could no longer ignore everything that in an apartment you could blithely leave behind, like the floors, the walls, the win- dows, the kitchen sink. All these things and the proliferating dirt on them or in them were incontrovertibly mine. If I

The Fastest Weight-Loss Method
Known to Medical Science!
NOT A DRUG!
Lose as much as 6 pounds after your first 3 glassfuls . . . lose up to 14 pounds after just 7 glassfuls more!

BURNS AWAY MORE FAT EACH 24 HOURS
THAN IF YOU RAN 14 MILES A DAY!
Incredible "Crash-Loss" Breakthrough reported in Leading American Magazinesl Works so fast you can actually measure the difference in your waistline in just 24 to 48 hours. Yes, LOSE op to 6 POUNDS the first 48 HOURS — LOSE up to 12 POUNDS the first 7 days — LOSE up to 4, 5, even 7 POUNDS MORE the next 7 days — and continue to burn away as much as 7 to 9 pounds more fat every 2 weeks thereafter, (if you still need it) . . . until you've finally lost 60 — 70 — 100 pounds OR MORE . without fasting, without constant willpower, without constant pangs of hunger or a single moment of body-racking exercise!
Recommended by the U.S. Government's very own doctors to members of Congress who want to lose weight fast . . . Hailed as the weight-loss "breakthrough of the century" by leading medical journals . . here at last is the most effective NO-DRUG program for FAST — INSTANT — PERMANENT LIFETIME WEIGHT-LOSS ever made available to the public without a prescription!
WORKS SO FAST THE FIRST WEEK ALONE YOU LOSE AS MUCH AS 1 V2 TO 2 POUNDS OF BOTH FLUID AND FAT
EVERY 24 HOURS!
Direct from the pages of medical journals and leading American magazines come reports of an incredible "fat burning" breakthrough by medical researchers at one of Boston's foremost medical schools! Reports of a new "crash-loss" program (featuring a remarkable natural substance) that safely yet surely steps up FAT-BURNING METABOLISM . . . forces your system to ATTACK bulging pockets of fat .
and starts to shrink and burn that fat
in just a matter of hours!
Yes, from one of New England's leading medical centers comes the new SUPER FAT-BURNER way to turn up your "inner furnace"
. . unlock those clinging pockets of fat
. . . break them .down
SO FAST
you burn off excess bulge at the unbelievable rate of up to 6 POUNDS of both fluid and fat GONE the very first weekend alone!
Think of it! You actually burn away more fat each 24 hours than if you ran 12 to 14 miles a day! Lose more inches each week than if you did 300 sit-ups each morning and 300 push-ups each night! Actually LOSE as much as A FULL SIZE THE FIRST 7 DAYS and from 3 to 5 inches off your waistline the very first month!
That's right! Weight-loss results and inches-off wonders that absolutely stagger the imagination
Just look:
U.S. ARMY OFFICERS LOSE WEIGHT 3 TIMES FASTER THAN EVER BEFORE!
Case History #1: When medical researchers in Boston,
New York, Philadelphia and Los Angeles first tested this new hi-amino concept on a scientific weiqht-loss program
. . . they reported astonishing results of as much as 12 POUNDS LOST IN JUST THE FIRST 7 DAYS! — 16 to 18 pounds gone by the end of week number two — and most mind-boggling of all — U.S. Army Officers actually losing weight 3 times faster than ever before! As much as 50 POUNDS GONE, like that!
WAISTLINES SHRINK UP TO 3 INCHES IN 7 DAYS — A FULL 5 INCHES SMALLER IN A SINGLE MONTH!
Case History #2: When first rumors of this medical breakthrough leaked out to professional actors, actresses and celebrities . . . they immediately rushed to the offices of America's leading weight-loss specialists to get their hands on this "magic compound"; and no wonder! Because the first week alone they carved away as much as 2 pounds a day ... 13 pounds a week . . . were forced to take in their belts 3 notches smaller in just 10 days!

DOCTORS REPORT: AVERAGE LOSS — 57 POUNDS!
Case History #3: But most significant of all . . . when universities, hospitals and medical schools, (such as New York's Leading Medical School and Cleveland's largest hospital) tested this newly discovered "crash-loss" program on patients who all their lives had been hopelessly overweight . . . they reported astonishing los-ses of as much as 2 pounds a day at the start ... 20 to 30 pounds a month ... as much as 70 pounds lost over a single summer season! — by simply stepping up their fat-burning metabolism and burning, melting, oxidizing 50, 70, 100 pounds of hard-set fat . . . FASTER, SURER than they had ever dreamed possible!
WORKS LIKE "POWDERED HEAT" — MAKES YOUR INNER FURNACE BREAK DOWN BODY FAT!
What is this wondrous new development that helps safely stimulate fat-burning metabolism and shrink your body's fat cells the moment it starts working in your system' It is a totally new concept in the war against fat. An ANTIFAT WEAPON unlike anything you've ever seen, or tried in your life. A FAT-BURNING aid that helps yoj convert body fat to body fuel AUTOMATICALLY ..and EVAPORATE excess pounds and inches starting the very first day!
Think of it! A medically proven formula that is such an effective reducing aid .
that when combined with the food you eat on this "crash-loss" program . . . burns off as much fat each 24 hours as if you jogged up to 14 miles a day ... or played 3 hours of tennis in the most brutal heat!
The name of this wondrous amino formula is "THERASLIM-100" and here is precisely how you use it to win the body and figure of your dreams as you:
LOSE UP TO 4 TO 6 INCHES OFF YOUR WAISTLINE
LOSE UP TO 2 TO 5 INCHES OFF YOUR HIPS LOSE UP TO 3 INCHES OFF YOUR THIGHS
LOSE UP TO 4 INCHES OFF YOUR BUTTOCKS

Since genetic male pattern baldness occurs in males, most women don't worry about preventing hair loss until it is too late. But hair loss, thinning and even balding are problems that occur in women very frequently, and many of these problems can be attributed to poor nutrition. As a nation we are eating more poorly each year, and along with that statistic comes increasing numbers of men and women with thinning hair.

Along with this poor nutrition come many nutritional hazards. Stress, smoking, pollution and even birth control pills deplete your hair of essential nutrients. And since hair grows seven times faster than other body cells, general nutrition is probably not adequate for your hair. And hair can't grow quickly without an ample supply of the right vitamins and minerals. That's why you need Head Start Vitamins for Your Hair. Head Start contains the eight vitamins and six minerals essential for healthy hair.

Head Start is not a magical baldness preventative. It simply feeds your hair the proper nutrients from the inside so that it will be beautiful on the outside.

As a woman you should be concerned about the nutrition of your hair. Make sure your hair gets the proper nutrients it needs to prevent this nutritional and beauty hazard with Head Start Vitamins for Your Hair.

Are you getting enough vitamins for your hair?

HOW TO FIND SOMEONE TO LOVE

Starting today, you can meet and date dozens of attractive, interesting new people.

You know how much fun it is to have someone special in your life. Someone you really love being with and someone who loves you back. Someone you know you're attracted to them without appearing weak or desperate.

The only problem is, where do you find a person like this? Up until now most of us have had to put up with the dehumanization of computer dating. But not anymore. Now there's a far better way to meet someone to love. And you can learn all about it in the mind-opening new book GETTING TOGETHER.

GETTING TOGETHER will teach you a whole new way of getting people to open up to you warmly, spontaneously, lovingly. It'll even show you how to attract people who at first seem disinterested or cold to your advances. You'll learn an absolutely foolproof technique for keeping, someone infatuated with you after date after date ... and how anyone can project a healthy, natural sex appeal. Here are just a few of the ingenious techniques waiting for you in this revolutionary new book:

• How to feel really good about yourself even less than what you'd spend on a new outfit of clothes. Yet so much more of a help when it comes to getting people to open up to you warmly, spontaneously, lovingly.

• How to get invited to more parties and how anyone can project a healthy, natural sex appeal.

• How to attract people who at first seem disinterested or cold to your advances.

• How to meet scores of fascinating, attractive new people in places you'd least expect to meet them.

• A brilliant technique for making someone who you like feel "special" when they're in your company.

• How to learn how to feel good about yourself even when you usually think of yourself as dull or unattractive.

• A simple, upfront way of letting someone know you're attracted to them without appearing weak or desperate.

• A completely reliable way of instantly telling if someone likes you (the author shows us how we often wrongly assume people aren't interested in us and thereby miss out on many potentially warm, loving relationships.)

Cellulite is not ordinary fat!

If you have fat that just won’t go away, no matter how much you diet or exercise, you probably have Cellulite. 8 out of 10 women have it.

At some time between childhood and womanhood, 8 out of 10 women are bothered by Cellulite — those unattractive lumps, bumps, and bulges that keep you from looking your best.

What causes it?

Cellulite forms when your body’s circulatory and waste systems don’t function at top efficiency. Wastes and toxins are trapped inside your body. Your daily intake of food additives, preservatives, cigarette smoke, the pill, and other chemicals makes the problem worse.

You can help correct it with Au Naturel™.

You can help rid yourself of this annoying figure problem with Au Naturel — a 100% natural formula of vitamins, minerals, and herbs, specially formulated to help eliminate Cellulite. Au Naturel effectively helps break down and free trapped wastes and toxins, removing them from your body. So you’ll look better, and feel better.

A 24-page book included

Remember you can’t lose Cellulite through ordinary dieting or exercise. So rush your order for Au Naturel now. We’ll include a free 24-page book that tells how to get rid of Cellulite, and keep it from coming back.

No-risk money-back guarantee

If you are not satisfied in every way with Au Naturel, we will immediately refund your full purchase price. Au Naturel is not available in stores. If you want to start looking better and feeling better, mail the coupon now.

Rule-breaker gardens, a flowering shrub, greenhouse vines

Despise me not

In developing their herb garden (pages 94-97), Richard Holiman and Jacques Alschech had the invaluable assistance of Adelma Simmons, of the well-known Caprilands Herb Farm near Hartford, Conn.

Visitors to Caprilands can see 30 display gardens that are small and full of ideas for the home gardener. There is a silver garden (House & Garden, December, 1975), two gray gardens, blue, gold, and white gardens, a Colonial garden, a Shakespeare garden, a saints garden (herbs having religious associations), a butterfly-shaped garden of culinary and fragrant herbs, a dye-plant garden, a strawberry garden, a sundial garden (for pondering time and 20 varieties of creeping thyme). One of Adelma Simmons's most amusing gardens is the rule-breaker, or out-of-fashion Victorian garden. "I decided to do a garden with plants people say they hate, and make them like it. I'm just ornery enough. What other's can't abide, abides with me." She points out that people can be "very high hat about out-of-style can- nas, cockscomb, amaranthus, bedded-out begonias, funkia, coleus, and such plants as variegated goutweed, weigela, and dogwood. You hear these funny comments as the garden clubs go through, and then everyone starts reminiscing and laughing." She also notes that though people may say magenta is a horrid color, "nature likes mauve and magenta." These shades, of course, are often the backbone of our native population of wild flowers—lythrum, bouncing bet, and Joe Pye weed, for instance. That means they are often troublefree, ready to flower, and multiply with no attention at all. And when it comes to color, who has the temerity to say that Botticelli and Monet were wrong in using their mauves and magentas?

Caprilands, on Silver Street, Coventry, Conn. 06238 is open to visitors every day from mid-April through December; reservations are needed for the daily lunch and lecture. Its list of herbs for ordering by mail is free for the asking.

Incredible plant list

Would you believe 60 different hoyas? Most house plant fanciers don't realize there are more than two or three kinds of this favorite greenhouse vine, but Hermine Stover grows 60 by name, and a few others for good measure. She really specializes in ferns, though, and her collection of these—mostly tropicals—is literally too numerous to mention. Calling her operation Endangered Species, Miss Stover produces hoyas, ferns, and a few other kinds of indoor plants for sale, growing them all in soilless mixes that make for easy, disease-free, easy-to-ship plants. Her price list is a mine of information. It may be had by sending a 13-cent stamp to Endangered Species, 6 Upland Ave., Dorchester, Mass. 02124. Also, anyone who happens to be looking for some special, hard-to-find plant should send the request, with a stamped, self-addressed envelope, to the same address. Chances are Miss Stover knows how to get it. did not take care of them and we moved, the reckoning would come when we tried to sell the house. If I did not take care of them and we stayed, they would exact their own revenge.

Mindful of these perils I began to clean with an ardor of which I would not have believed myself capable. But the more vigorously I waged war on the dirt the quicker I realized that the only victories are Pyrrhic, so I gradually resorted to trying to anticipate the dirt before it ever appeared—rather like preventive medicine. I contritely remembered that in my arrogant youth, I once mocked my mother as "a cleaning fanatic," an insult she never forgot or forgave, and I was sure she would appreciate the justice of my paying for the epitaph by inheriting it.

Where was my husband during all this? In the basement, where he had turned into a mole, or perhaps a beaver. He had inherited from the previous owner a leak in the basement, and like little Hans with his finger in the dike, my husband clearly was not available for vacuuming.

The subject of a cleaning woman inevitably came up and the quest began in earnest. I made inquiries, but soon discovered that most of the women in the area were mothers who stayed at home and cleaned their own houses. Of the two working women I asked, one used a nursing student with no phone number, and my husband rarely saw her. When it came to knickknacks, which he horrified, and removing spots. In the kitchen they also wash the floor, clean countertops and the outside of appliances, and dust the cabinets. They sanitize the bathrooms and wash the tiles and mirrors.

There was an extra charge for such extras as cleaning the oven ($6 and up depending on how dirty it is), washing windows ($4 each with storms), and washing the carpet (13¢ a square foot). I mentioned that I also wanted them to wash the muddy basement floor, and she said that special projects of that nature cost $24 an hour for two men. (All these prices vary slightly according to the franchise and the region.)

I did some quick figuring and the total came out to considerably more than I had planned, but for the basics not much more than what I would pay one person half-a-day a week as I had originally anticipated. I decided to try it and if I was satisfied have them come once a month.

On the appointed day (having cleaned up beforehand just like old times), I greeted at the door Larry and Steve, who barly looked old enough to clean the own rooms never mind my house, but proved surprisingly efficient. They began by hauling their miscellaneous vacuums, mops, and bottles out of the van. Then I showed them around and Larry, who was in charge, decided how they would split up the labor.

Steve made a beeline for the bedroom while Larry headed for the basement. I decided the bedroom would be more interesting, so I followed Steve and watched him as he dusted with a treated cloth which contained a polishing agent. I could tell he was experienced but not enthusiastic about dusting, particularly when it came to knickknacks, which he told me would be extra. So I dusted them myself and shook out the dresser doily where he was dusting my cupboards, decided how they would split up the labor.

Steve made a beeline for the bedroom while Larry headed for the basement. I decided the bedroom would be more interesting, so I followed Steve and watched him as he dusted with a treated cloth which contained a polishing agent. I could tell he was experienced but not enthusiastic about dusting, particularly when it came to knickknacks, which he told me would be extra. So I dusted them myself and shook out the dresser doily so he could dust underneath, cleaning along, you might say, which I dimly acknowledged in the back of my mind was not the point at all. But I noted with approval that he meticulously dusted the window frames and moldings and vacuumed behind and underneath the furniture as promised. And he really came to life in the bathroom, scrubbing the tiles, polishing the chrome, and drenching everything in Lysol.

Larry and I met again in the kitchen where he was dusting my cupboards, having swabbed the basement floor for an hour ($12) as requested. I asked Larry who his customers were and he explained that they cleaned once or twice a month primarily "for upper middle-income women with a lot of small children who can't keep up with the house. Some of the kid's rooms are unbeliev- able. Toys all over. You don't even know where the kid sleeps. We have quite a few working women, too."

Not surprisingly he felt there were definite advantages to contracting with a cleaning service as opposed to employing an individual. "We're more dependable and our prices are fair," he claimed. "We get the spots an ordinary cleaning woman wouldn't. And we dust everything—doors, windows, picture frames."

There is basically nothing they won't clean for a price, and as Steve cheerfully remarked, "Sometimes we'll clean something for free, just because we're nice." Larry hastened to add that they don't make beds or wash the dishes, but I got the impression that these tasks, too, would be subject to negotiation.

Four hours and $60 later (plus tip) I was much poorer, but my house was much cleaner. TV commercial clean, to the point that it didn't seem fit for human habitation. My only specific complaints were the disdain of my knick- knacks, the overlooking of the toothbrush holder in the bathroom, and a general aversion to fussy cleaning of surfaces. They appear to thrive on heavy cleaning, especially if there is a lot of dirt. As Larry philosophically observed, "It's more fun to clean a dirty house than a clean one, because it looks so much better after."

Thus the service is ideal, I think, for the woman with a lot of kids and a lot of money or a couple of kids and a job, who needs to be dug out of a disaster regularly. But for a smaller family, more frequent lower-grade maintenance makes the most sense.

So I decided to engage the nursing student without a phone, who eventually got a phone. She comes once a week for a half-day and cleans energetically for only $3.50 an hour. She's no match for Steve and Larry, of course, but while the house may never get really clean, it never gets really dirty either.

I've become more philosophical about taking care of the house and, as a result, about where I live. I see my city-suburbs conflict now as artificial, as I am privy to the advantages of both. I have to pay a price, commutation, but that railroad track is also the cord connecting my two disparate and desired worlds.

The fear of change, or the fear of moving, is the fear of losing control of one's life. The dirt represented in my mind all the house's imagined needs and demands that I could not possibly satisfy, all the impositions that encroached upon my time, as surely as the water that once encroached upon the basement floor and my husband's time. The trick is not only learning to hold back the real chaos in the house but the imaginary chaos we impose upon it in our minds.
