Open for Submissions: The 2013 George Matsumoto Prize!

George Matsumoto is one of the original faculty recruited in 1948 by Henry Kamphoefner, first Dean of the School of Design at North Carolina State University. Between 1948 and 1961, Matsumoto won more than thirty awards for his residential work and designed a Modernist addition to the NCSU School of Design itself. In recognition of his residential mastery, in 2012 Triangle Modernist Houses established the Matsumoto Prize which honors recent achievement for North Carolina residential Modernist architecture. The Prize encourages young architects to continue the Modernist movement and take it to new levels; the Prize powerfully engages the greater community to be involved with the architecture they love and publicly showcases the new generation of Modernist architects and houses in North Carolina. There are cash awards determined by our stellar jury of internationally known architects and the public totaling $6,000. There are also three People's Choice awards. House architects and designers can be from anywhere but any from-the-ground-up house must be located in North Carolina and completed since 1/1/2007. Prize rules and dates. The public starts voting around July 5, and we have a great awards party July 25! Stay tuned for North Carolina's best.

Auction: On May 6, AuctionFirst will begin to accept online bids on the LightWall Pavilion, the Grand Prize winner of the inaugural ReSpace Design Competition sponsored by Habitat Wake County, AIA Triangle, and Architecture For Humanity's Raleigh chapter. All proceeds will benefit Habitat Wake. Bids will be accepted at <http://habitatonlineauction.com>. On Saturday, June 1, from 9-11 a.m., AuctionFirst will let people tour the LightWall Pavilion in the parking lot of Habitat Wake County's ReStore's parking lot at 2420 N. Raleigh Boulevard, Raleigh. NCSU students Scott Hefner and Abe Drechsler designed the pavilion. Joel Lubell of Habitat conceived of and organized the ReSpace Competition "to raise awareness of reuse materials while showcasing creative and successful small space designs inspired by their use." The contest's jury included architect Ellen Weinstein, AIA, who admired the LightWall's minimalism. "I just found it to be a simple and Former NCSU School of Design Deans Henry Kamphoefner and Claude McKinney were chosen for the Raleigh Hall of Fame. The official ceremonies are in October.

From AIA North Carolina: One of North Carolina's great leaders in the architectural community, Jeffrey A. Huberman, FAIA, died after almost a year-long battle with cancer. Jeff's influence touched many lives in the Charlotte community through his civic engagement in the arts, at the state level with his leadership in AIA North Carolina and the Board of Architecture, and nationally through service with NCARB and the AIA. In 1994, he became a Fellow of the American Institute of Architects, and in 2002 he received the F. Carter Williams Gold Medal from the AIA North Carolina in recognition of a distinguished career and extraordinary accomplishments as an architect. Services will be held Friday, May 31, 11:00 am, Temple Beth El, 5101 Providence Road, Charlotte, NC 28226.

Charlotte Architect Chuck Kibler died on April 5. Born in Portsmouth VA, he spent his childhood in Richmond, where he discovered the joy of playing the trumpet, an avocation that continued throughout his life. With his high school band he marched in H.S. Truman's inauguration parade, and four years later, participated in D.D. Eisenhower's. During his years at Virginia Tech he was a member of the Highty-Tighties Regimental Band. After receiving an M.S. in Architecture, Chuck and his bride Carolyn moved to Charlotte. In 1958 he joined the firm of M.R. Marsh, Architect, which ultimately
