News This Week:

We have 5 seats left November 2-3 for Frank Lloyd Wright's Auldbrass Plantation in South Carolina, a house and grounds never open to the public except once every two years. We are going down in style, in a luxury, internet-equipped, air-conditioned, restroom-equipped bus. Hotel is included, as are four meals, snacks, admissions, and refreshments. Plus, we'll be having a reception and presentation with Wright authority Dr. Anthony Alofsin AIA that evening. These 5 seats will sell fast, so check your fall calendars and sign up now! Details and registration here.

Erin Sterling Lewis and Matt Griffith of Raleigh's in situ studio (bookended by Charlotte architect Toby Witte on the left and organizer Elayne DeLeo on the right) were on a panel discussion on Southern Architecture at Design Within Reach in Charlotte, sponsored by MA.

The George Matsumoto Prize is open for submissions through June 30. The Prize encourages architects and designers to continue the Modernist movement and take it to new levels. There are $6,000 in cash awards determined by our stellar jury of internationally known architects and public voting. Prize rules and dates. Deadline June 30, with an easy submission process, all online. Coverage in Durham Magazine.

This Friday, June 7, from 5-9pm, TRIG Modern will feature the artwork of Gerry Lynch as part of the First Friday Art Walk. The showroom will also be open to shoppers. Gerry will be on hand to speak with visitors about her work, which will remain on display through July 18. TRIG will show a selection of Lynch's recent drawings and mixed media works on paper. Her main artistic influences are Asian calligraphy, haute couture and contemporary architecture. Her favored color palette of black, white, and grays; sometimes punctuated with a burst of red or orange; is very complementary to urban environments. "Gerry's striking work caught my eye the first time I saw it," says Lee Tripi, co-owner of TRIG.

Unless there's huge news, there will be no newsletter June 10 as the editor takes a few days off!
