News This Week

- NCMH's #1 endangered house is the 1953 Hilda Cannady Crumpler House, 1009 West Cobb Street, Durham. Designed by John Latimer. About one acre. 1200 sq ft on the first floor and another 800 in the finished basement. Sold in 2001 to Stanley McCauley who is willing to sell. Has been vacant for at least 7 years. Read the appraisal, the structural engineer's report, and other documents researched by and/or commissioned by NCMH. This house deserves to be saved!

- Thanks to Matt McConnell and McConnell Studios for a fantastic Thirst4Architecture (T4A) last week. About 130 people attended.

Next T4A: Thursday, September 19, 530-730pm, a joint T4A with Preservation Durham at Straw Valley Cafe, a magical Modern oasis that's been restored as a coffee bar, wine bar, courtyard, retail, and event hall. 5420 Durham-Chapel Hill Boulevard, Durham. Details.

The NCSU College of Design Design/Build Studio has completed the HUB farm near Eno Valley Elementary and Carrington Middle Schools. It is a floating outdoor classroom where students can do environmental experiments like water quality testing. Architects Ellen Cassilly, Randy Lanou, and Erik Van Mehlman taught the studio along with others. Thanks to your donations through Kickstarter, the project is fully paid for!

The iconic Delta terminal at JFK is being torn down this month. Formerly known as the PanAm Worldport, it was designed by Ives, Turano & Gardner Associated Architects and Walther Prokosch of Tippetts-Abbett-McCarthy-Stratton as a showcase for international jet travel and is particularly famous for its 4-acre "flying saucer" roof suspended far from the outside columns of the terminal by 32 sets of prestressed steel posts and cables. The terminal was designed to allow for aircraft to be parked under the partial overhang; marketing brochures promoted that the jet-age terminal brought the plane to the passenger.
