Saturday-Sunday, October 1-2. Have you always wanted to see Fallingwater, Frank Lloyd Wright's masterpiece? It's the most famous Modernist house in America! Do the Wright thing and join NCMH this fall. Plus you'll see Wright's Kentuck Knob, Wright's Duncan House, and two more Usonian homes inspired by Wright, all in the company of architecture fans just like you. Details and tickets.

NCMH's Taylor House tour last weekend attracted over 900 people from all over Triangle and quite a few from around the state and the east coast. Thanks to all our intrepid volunteers who ran registration and managed hundreds of cars into the makeshift parking lot.

The "updated" Complete Zaha Hadid will be available next week. With the surge in publicity after her tragic death earlier this year, there's never been more excitement about her work past, present, and future. Zaha Hadid is the first female recipient of the prestigious Pritzker architecture Prize. This book covers her early projects and her well-known achievements including the Aquatics Centre for the London 2012 Olympic Games, the Guangzhou Opera House in China, and the Eli & Eythe Broad Art Museum in Michigan, plus her furniture, product and exhibition designs. Unfortunately, the book stops a few years back and has no mention of her death, so "update" is a bit of a stretch.

Thursday, June 16, 6-8pm. NCMH's monthly Thirst4Architecture design networking party/happy hour is at the super-green, uber-sustainable HQ of design/build firm BuildSense, 502 Riggsbee Avenue #201, Durham. Come meet Erik, Leon, and Randy plus the rest of the award-winning BuildSense team. T4A design networking events are sponsored during 2016 by Emilie Huin, specializing in the sale of Modernist homes throughout the Triangle. Free, open to the public. And we'll be auctioning off a Wassily chair, with a starting bid of $10. This may be your chance to finally own one! Directions and details.
