New: The Frank Lloyd Wright/Fallingwater Tour, Thursday-Friday, September 14-15. Have you always wanted to see Fallingwater, Frank Lloyd Wright's masterpiece? It's the most famous Modernist house in America! Do the Wright thing and join NCMH on our annual trip this fall. What about flying, direct, to Pennsylvania? It's all included. Breakfast? Lunches? Wi-fi? Yes. Hotel? You betcha. Dinner Saturday night? Ground transportation? Of course. Wow, that's incredible! We think so, too. Did you know that just a few miles away, there's another remarkable Wright house, Kentuck Knob, and a world-class outdoor sculpture garden? We will go there. Want to visit the Host George Smart reports from February's Modernism Week in Palm Springs, the Mecca for all things Mid-Century Modernist! He spoke poolside from the Hotel Skylark with keynote speakers from the week. Annalisa Capurro, aka Ms. Modernism, is a interior designer, design educator, architectural historian, speaker, writer, preservationist, MCM photographer, and mid-century design aficionado who lives in the 1956 Russell Jack House in Sydney, Australia. At Modernism Week 2017, she starred in SEXY & CULTURE, six presentations on surprising topics related to sexual mores in the MCM world. Brooke Hodge is an architect, journalist, and blogger for the New York Times Style Magazine - and the Director of Architecture and Design at the Palm Springs

INVENTIVE CULTURE AND RALEIGH'S FUTURE

Wednesday, May 17 | @Noon
COR Museum, 220 Fayetteville St., Raleigh

Aly will discuss his dedication to inventive culture and his lessons in helping to catalyze the resurgence of downtown creative energy. Aly will draw from his experiences in co-founding Designbox, SPARKcon, Gamila, as well as many civic projects including facilitating the design of City Plaza. He hopes to inspire some thoughts about how Dix Park can become the very center of "the creative hub of the south."

CITY BUILDING: A RENEWED FOCUS ON THE PUBLIC REALM

Wednesday, May 17 | 6 p.m.
CAM Raleigh, 409 W. Martin St., Raleigh

We are living through one of the most remarkable transformations in urban history as 21st century cities worldwide are redefining themselves becoming, denser, more compact, sustainable, walkable, and diverse. With this renewed focus on urban life new dynamic models for city building are emerging that stress mix, overlap, shared space and flexibility, and integrating 'concepts' at the intersection of economy, community, and environment identified by Jane Jacobs and others. At the core of this transformation is a renewed focus on the concept of place and the quality of the public realm. The creation of new and revived public spaces addresses multiple needs including climate readiness, economic development, social equity, and the greater need by heterogeneous populations for shared common ground.

Principal of Greenberg Consultants and former Director of Urban Design
