New book available November 21: Modern Art in Detail - 75 Masterpieces, by Susie Hodge. Great works of art cannot be fully understood in a single encounter. This is perhaps even truer for modern artworks that may not immediately make sense to, or even appeal to, the casual observer. The book includes relevant external influences on the artist—everything from global political events to groundbreaking movements such as Cubism and even scientific and mathematical theories.

From the New Yorker: Let's not destroy New York's brutalist masterpieces. Hat tip to Leilani Carter.

This Thursday, 3-8pm, NC State hosts the Eduardo Catalano Symposium in honor of what would have been his 100th birthday. More on Catalano's work.

The National Museum of African American History and Culture in Washington DC already has its own US postage stamp, a record for a new building. Hat tip to one of the architects, NC's own Phil Freelon.

Architect William Paul Braswell died last week in Charlotte.

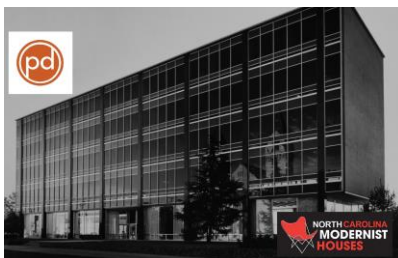

An Engineer's Eye: The Architectural Photographs of Gordon Schenck is now on view at NC State's DH Library Exhibit Gallery in Raleigh NC through March 5. Schenck, an engineer, took a turn to the arts in 1963, when he bought a Linhof camera and discovered Julius Shulman's recently published Photographing Architecture and Interiors (1962) and founded a photography practice. In 1973, the AIANC honored Schenck with its Collaboration Award citing "his personal involvement in each project and his efforts to capture, through photography, the spirit and soul of the designing architect's creativity."
