New on USModernist

Radio: Many Americans think the last World's Fair was in New York in 1964. Nope, the fairs have been going on around the world ever since - typically without America's participation.

Recording at the NY

Architecture and Design Film Festival, host George Smart's first guest is Mina Chow, producer and star of Face of a Nation: What Happened to the World's Fair, and later on, he talks with Bruce Inglis, director of photography for the documentary Glenn Morcutt: A Spirit of Place. USModernist

A national AIA jury met recently to choose their esteemed 25-year awards for excellence in buildings that have withstood the test of time. They chose no buildings whatsoever. This has never happened in the 60-year history of the award. 25 years ago, pomo (postmodern) design was popular and widely disliked by the more Modernist-leaning architectural profession. Looks like that's still true!

Architect Gil Slack died last week in Raleigh. He was 94. NCMH interviewed him just a few months ago about the early days of Raleigh and NC State University.

SUN RENOVATION+ PRESERVATION

Sunday, February 18

Seminar: 10 – 11:30 a.m. | Tour: 12 – 2 p.m.

You've got your dream home, but it needs a little work—what's next? We've got the answers as we discuss when to renovate and when to restore, how to bring a period home into the modern age and what kind of hurdles you might encounter in every space from the kitchen to the bathroom.
