NSYNC's Lance Bass lost a hot and heavy bidding war with cable channel HGTV for the famous Brady Bunch house - which ultimately sold for about twice the $1.9M asking price!

From Curbed: Meet Edgar and Margaret Hunter, Vermont's Modernist Pioneers, by Alexandra

Lange. And read on to see their unique connection to North Carolina.

The world's largest 3D structure opens in Tennessee.

From Archdaily: an abandoned Japanese tunnel becomes an amazing art installation.

Is your business (food, art, architecture, construction, furniture, fixtures) looking for customers who love good design? Up to 200 people each love coming to our monthly design parties. The next one could be at your place - or at a client location showing off your work. T4A events are generally the third Thursday of each month. Dates available starting in December.

September 1, 10am-2pm: Visit the 1959 Williams House, aka Blue Haven, the family home of famed Raleigh architect Carter Williams. One of the most remarkable Modernist houses in Raleigh ever built, it was nicknamed for its distinctive Carolina blue stone. Dick Bell was the landscape architect. This very special Modernist house has not been open to the public in almost a decade! Details and tickets.

Recommended: Silver Lake Chronicles: Exploring an Urban Oasis in Los Angeles + Silver Lake Bohemia: A History, by Michael Locke and Vincent Brook. Although these two books aren't brand new (2014 and 2016) they remain one of the best and most interesting profiles of neighborhood architecture and history. The Silver Lake area of Los Angeles contains some of the most important and spectacular Modernist houses in the world. Inside the houses in this neighborhood live a buffet of creative personalities, many associated with the film and TV industry of LA.

USModernist Radio welcomes guest co-host Kate Wagner of McMansion Hell along with two preservationists working to keep Modernism alive and well.

Chris Grimley is a partner at the firm over/under, designing not just buildings but full experiences in architecture, graphic design, and interior design. His book Heroic: Concrete Architecture and the New Boston has been awarded honors by DoCoMomo and the Boston Preservation Alliance. In addition, he curates the pinkcomma gallery, is a co-founder of Design Biennial Boston, and recently released the Boston Brutalist Map, published by Blue Crow Media. Natascha Drabbe is an architectural historian and founder of the Iconic Houses Network, connecting important 20th century houses from Frank Lloyd Wright's Fallingwater to Mies van der Rohe's Villa Tugendhat. She also runs Cultural Connections, a PR agency for architecture and design based in Amsterdam.
