Richard L. Dorman: An Audacious Modernism

SAH/SCC Zoom Presentation
Saturday, July 17, 2021, 1-2:30 PM Pacific Time

Join SAH/SCC and its President, Sian Winship, as she talks about the work and legacy of Richard L. Dorman, FAIA, an important midcentury modern architect. Dorman has largely been forgotten to history because he left no architectural archive. For more than a decade, Winship has been collecting photographs, plans, and drawings of his residential, commercial, and institutional projects. She is now ready to share never-before-seen images with a broader audience.

Dorman’s love of the seven-foot module in plan was perfectly matched with the views and climate of Southern California. A graduate of the USC School of Architecture, he was featured on the cover of Time magazine as one of the “Take Over Generation”—postwar professionals dedicated to remaking the world. He was published extensively in Arts + Architecture and Esther McCoy spied his talent when she featured him in a 1961 article “Young Architects in the United States.” In 1968, Dorman was elevated to Fellowship in the AIA for his contribution to design. His risk-taking approach to life and architecture are evident in more than 300 projects throughout Southern California.

In addition to being a board member of SAH/SCC for the past 25 years, Winship earned a Masters in Historic Preservation from USC in 2011 where she wrote her thesis, in part, on Dorman. Since graduating, Winship has worked as a preservation professional researching and writing National Register nominations and historic context statements. Among them is the award-winning Japanese American Historic Context and Women’s Rights Context Statement for SurveyLA. Winship is currently working on a book, An Audacious Modernism: The Legacy of Richard L. Dorman.

SAH/SCC President’s Letter

In May, SAH/SCC sent out a brief member survey to find out how people were feeling about resuming group activities in a waning pandemic world. We received 100 replies! Thanks to all of you who took the time to complete the survey. Your voices have been heard.

Clearly, our Zoom programs have been a huge success. Two-thirds of you have attended one or more of them and 93% of those who did rated them favorably, with 62% rating them as “excellent.” Ninety-one percent of you think we should continue these virtual programs in the future.

We couldn’t agree more. If there was a silver lining from the pandemic (that’s debatable, by the way), it was that Zoom programs allowed us to bring some of the best and brightest from around the country right into your living rooms. Additionally, we’ve been able to showcase some of our favorite members and authors to an increasingly international audience. At the very least, these programs offer local members the opportunity to learn without having to face Los Angeles traffic or spend a Saturday afternoon looking for parking in Santa Monica.

Still, the desire to engage in visiting and experiencing architecture came through loudly and clearly. Generally, people were equally divided about how soon they would feel comfortable with in-person events—from immediately to six months from now. Residential and public building visits topped the list of activities you would be most interested in. And the vast majority of you (around 70%) expect that we would follow masking and social distancing protocols. (We will.)

This feedback is invaluable as the SAH/SCC Board starts to make plans for future events for late summer and fall. We all miss seeing you and we all miss being in architectural spaces. We all hope it will happen soon.

Most of the members who completed the survey said they have been members for more than five years. And while we love meeting new people, we truly appreciate those of you who have been dedicated members of the organization throughout the years—through recessions, natural disasters, and now a pandemic.

Thanks again for weighing in. We will see you soon!

—Sian Winship

Authors on Architecture: Parsons on Colcord

SAH/SCC Zoom Presentation  Saturday, July 24, 2021, 1-2:30 PM Pacific Time

Some of you may remember SAH/SCC Member Bret Parsons from the recent Paul R. Williams, FAIA, event. If you do, you won’t want to miss a chance to hear Bret talk about his book Colcord—Home (Angel City Press, 2008).

In the 1920s, Southern California exploded as the greatest home-building region in the world. Beaux-Arts trained architect Gerard Colcord (1900-1984) flourished here, creating 400 estates between 1924 and 1984. Real estate expert Parsons culled through 10,000 original documents and interviewed 300 past and present Colcord homeowners to complete this intimate portrait of the man and his homes.

As one reviewer described the book, “Colcord is a refreshing book that reveals the work of an architect in California who was able to pursue his version of traditional American architecture under the radar of Modernist critics.”

Master of the Midcentury: Bill Cody
SAH/SCC Zoom Presentation | Saturday, September 11, 2021, 1-2:30PM Pacific Time

Join SAH/SCC as we explore one of the architects who made Palm Springs a crucible of midcentury modernism. One of the most prolific, diverse, and iconic was William F. Cody, FAIA (1916-1978). Presenting this legacy is the architect’s daughter Catherine Cody, design historian Jo Lauria, and architectural historian Don Choi. They are the curators of the acclaimed exhibition “Fast Forward: The Architecture of William F. Cody” at the Architecture and Design Museum in Los Angeles, and authors of Master of the Midcentury: The Architecture of William F. Cody (The Monacelli Press, 2021), the first monograph devoted to Cody. Replete with photographs of extant and now-lost structures, as well as masterful color renderings and drawings for architectural commissions and plans for vanguard building systems, the book will be available this fall.

Directing a practice ranging from residences to commercial centers and industrial complexes to master plans, Cody designed projects so recognizable that they provide visual shorthand for what is widely hailed as “Desert Modern.” While his architecture was disciplined and technically innovative, Cody did not practice an austere modernism; he imbued in his projects a love for social spaces, rich with pattern, texture, color, and art.

Though the majority of Cody’s built work was concentrated in California and Arizona, he had commissions in other western states, Hawaii, Mexico, Honduras, and Cuba. From the iconic Del Marcos Hotel (1947), to the inventive Eldorado Country Club (1958), to celebrity homes (Frank Sinatra, Bing Crosby, Walt Disney), Cody’s projects defined the emerging West Coast lifestyle.

Master of the Midcentury—Saturday, September 11, 2021, 1-2:30 PM PST; $5; go to www.sahscc.org and pay via PayPal or mail in order form on Page 6 with check; Zoom connection information sent upon registration.

Los Angeles Today—City of Dreams: Architecture and Design photography and text by Tim Street-Porter; edited by Annie Kelly

The dean of Los Angeles architectural photography presents the city’s landmarks through the epic, naturally lit images that have become his trademark. The long horizontal format of the book (are I say, sprawling?) contains a splendid collection of LA’s greatest architectural hits, from San Gabriel Mission (1771) to the under-construction Academy Museum (Renzo Piano, 2021), and everything high (Disney Hall) and low (Bob’s Big Boy) in between. Organized geographically—with special chapters on Frank Lloyd Wright houses and movie studios—this photographic love letter will delight anyone who lives in and loves our city of dreams.

Rizzoli New York, 2021, 256 pages, hardcover, $70.

Études—The Poetry of Dreams + Other Fragments
by John Marx, AIA

Not your usual architecture book, Études is a collection of watercolors inspired by the built and natural environments coupled with poems by San Francisco architect Marx with creative typography by graphic artist Jeremy Mende. The paintings and poems are divided into eight distinct sections: moments in time, apertures, absent nature, objects in nature, without intention, approaching abstraction, deconstructing perception, and improvisations. Printing on actual watercolor paper gives the book a tactility that brings the viewer/reader closer to the work. Three guest essays look at the work in the context art history. Marx’s own essay explores the creative process. Intrinsically understanding gives the book a tactility that brings the viewer/reader closer to the work. He succeeds through the vibrancy of language and art.

Preserving Los Angeles: How Historic Places Can Transform America’s Cities
by Ken Bernstein, photography by Stephan Schafer

Bernstein begins the text debunking the myth that there is no history, therefore no preservation, in Los Angeles. Photos by Schafer—with occasional additions of those from Julius Shulman, LAPL Collections, and others—liberally accompany the text, divided into chapters touching on the meaning and process of historic designations, LA’s historic districts, SurveyLA, culturally diverse resources, DTLA adaptive reuse, future efforts, and a timely assessment of cities after Covid-19. A 90-page appendix illustrates some of the results of SurveyLA. Going neighborhood-by-neighborhood, it becomes a Gebhardt Guide for the preservation minded. Although obviously concentrating on LA, the book’s subtitle audaciously declares young Los Angeles as a model applicable to older cities.

Michele Saee: Philosophy and Process
by Michele Saee; introduction by Claude Parent

Saee approaches his work with a soulful, sensual, poetic, and artistic impulse, and does so with the same magnificent specimen of a book. It begins with an autobiographical architectural timeline from 1981 to 1996 of his early work and influences (including former employers Superstudio and Morphiisz). Two sketchbook interludes are so tangibly shown, starting with the cover of worn leather, after which page spreads unfold at a scale assuring the verisimilitude of holding them yourself. The second part delves into 34 projects represented by text, photos, sketches, drawings, renderings, and inspirational imagery that impart the spirit of each project. A bold line runs through the book—both physically printed on the pages and spiritually in its context—emphasizing Saee’s consistent vision that architecture must address the body and the soul.

ORO Editions, 2020, 584 pages, hardbound, $60.

Designing Hollywood Homes: Movie Houses
by Stephen Shadley with Patrick Pacheco; foreword by Diane Keaton

LA-raised former scenic artist, now New York interior designer, Shadley gathers 11 of the homes he’s designed for Hollywood notables, almost half of them for Keaton. The homes unfold in cinematic fashion through large, lush photos by brand-name shelter-magazine photographers (Scott Frances, David Glombre, Mary Nichols, Tim Street-Porter, etc.) and Shadley’s conversational stories. Most are in LA, with a couple New York homes, and an outlier in Arizona. Shadley also shares his life-long fascination with the movies, which culminated in designs he shares for Oscar green rooms.

Adobe Endangered

Among America’s 11 Most Endangered Historic Places for 2021, the National Trust for Historic Preservation has named one in Southern California—Trujillo Adobe, the oldest known building in Riverside. Constructed in 1862 by Lorenzo Trujillo, the building was built in what was then a part of Mexico. Trujillo led many expeditions as a scout across the Old Spanish Trail, enabling immigrants to settle inland California, and his home became the beating heart of a community known as La Placita de los Trujillos, Spanish Town, and Agua Mansa.

The Adobe is now deteriorated and fragile, protected only by a wooden structure (also in need of repair) that hides it from view. Local advocates hope to transform the Adobe into a cultural and educational site to recognize and take pride in the multiple cultures that shaped and continue to define the region.

The purpose of the annual list is to spur preservation efforts, a mission that has largely been successful; according to NTHP, more than 95 percent of the 374 places named in the course of 35 years have survived.
